The Martyrdom of ten faithful and blessed Martyrs, five Men and five Women burnt at Colchester, five in the forenoon, and five in the afternoon, for the testimony and witness of Christ Jesus and his glorious Gospel.

August 2. The Martyrdom of ten Godly Martyrs, five Men and five Women at Colchester.

AS it is no new thing in those whom we call Prelates and Priests of the Church, to be raisers up of Persecution against Christ and his poor Flock: so it is much to be marvelled or rather lamented, that Noble Persons, and Men of Honour and Worship, would be made such Ministers, to serve the affections of these tyrants, as commonly, as well in all the sorrowful days of the late Queen Mary, as namely in this present Story is to be marked.

And first thou remembrest (gentle Reader) how mention was made a little before of xxii. which were sent up Prisoners together from Colchester to London by the Earl of Oxford, the Lord Darcy, Master Tyrrel of Saint Osithes, and other Commissioners and Justices, &c. The which xxii. (as is aforesaid) through a gentle submission put unto them, were afterward released and delivered.

In the number of these foresaid 22. was one William Munt of Muchbentley in Essex, Husbandman, with Alice his Wife, and Rose Allen Maid, the daughter of the said Alice Munt; which coming home again to their House at Muchbentley aforesaid, refrained themselves from the unsavory Service of the Popish Church, and frequented the company of good Men and Women which gave themselves diligently to reading, invocating, and calling upon the Name of God through Christ: whereby they so fretted the wicked Priest of the Town, called Sir Thomas Tye, and other like unto him, that casting their heads together, they made a pestilent Supplication to the Lord Darcy, in the Name of the whole Parish: the tenor whereof hereafter followeth.

W. Munt, Alice his Wife, Rose Allen her daughter.

Tho. Tye Priest a wicked Promoter.

The manner of a Supplication to the Lord Darcy, and by him delivered to Sir John Kingston Priest and Commissary.

A Supplication of the Persecutors to the Lord Darcy.

PLeaseth in your Honourable Lordship to be advertised that we confess, whilst your good Lordship lay here in the Countrey, the people were stayed in good order, to our great comfort: but since your Lordships departure, they have made digression from good order in some places, and namely in the Parish of Muchbentley, by reason of three Seditious persons, William Munt and his Wife, and Rose her daughter, who by their colourable submission (as it doth appear) were dismist and sent down from the Bishop of London, and since their coming home they have not only in their own persons shewed manifest signs and tokens of disobedience, in not coming to the Church, nor yet observing other good orders, but also most maliciously and seditiously have seduced many from coming to the Church, and from obeying all other good orders; mocking also those that frequent the Church, and calling them Church Owls, and Blasphemously calling the Blessed Sacrament of the Altar a blind God, with divers such like Blasphemies. In consideration whereof, whereof, may it pleaſe your Honour, (for the love of God, and for the tender zeal your good Lordſhip beareth to Juſtice, and the common Peace and quietneſs of of the King and Queens Majeſties loving Subjects) to award out your warrant for the ſaid VVilliam Munt, his Wife, and Roſe her Daughter, that they being attached and brought before your good Lordſhip, we truſt the reſt will fear to offend (their Ring-Leaders of Sedition being apprehended) to the quietneſs of their Obedient Subjects.

Cruel Perſecutors.

Mr. Tye a Father, and a Bloody Perſecutor.

Your daily Orators, the Pariſhioners of Muchbently, Thomas Tye Prieſt, John Carter, Thomas Candler, John Barker, Richard Mere, J. Painter, Will. Harris John Richard, with other.

This being done, the ſaid Sir Thomas Tye bethought with himſelf, where the perſecuted did reſort. For in the beginning of Queen Maries Reign, for a Twelvemonth and more he came not to the Church, but frequented the Company of godly men and women, which abſtained from the ſame, and as they thought, he laboured to keep a good Conſcience, but the ſequel ſhewed him to be a falſe Brother.

Now (as I ſaid) he partly knowing the places of refuge for honeſt men, did further inquire of other men about the ſame: and being thereof ſufficiently (as he thought) inſtructed to his purpoſe, immediately about the time the Supplication above ſpecified was exhibited to the ſaid Lord Darcy, wrote ſecretly a Letter to Boner Biſhop of London, wherein he maketh his account how he had beſtowed his time, and complained of divers honeſt men, among which was the ſaid William Munt and his Company: The tenor of which Letter hereafter followeth.

A Letter ſent to Boner Biſhop of London, from Sir Thomas Tye, Prieſt.

Right honourable Lord, after my bounden duty done in moſt humble wiſe, theſe ſhall be to ſignifie unto your Lordſhip the ſtate of our parts concerning Religion. And firſt ſince the coming down of the twenty two rank Hereticks diſmiſſed from you, the deteſtable ſort of Schiſmaticks were never ſo bold ſince the King and Queens Majeſties Reign, as they are now at this preſent. In Muchbently where your Lordſhip is Patron of the Church, ſince William Munt, and Alice his Wife, with Roſe Allin her Daughter came home, they do not only abſent themſelves from the Church, and ſervice of God, but do daily allure many other away from the ſame, which before did outwardly ſhew ſigns and tokens of Obedience.

Tyes Letter to B. Boner

They aſſemble together upon the Sabbath day in the time of Divine Service, ſometimes in one houſe, ſometime in another, and there keep their Privy Conventicles and Schools of Hereſie. The Jurates ſay, the Lords Commiſſion is out, and they are diſcharged of their Oath. The Queſt-men in your Archdeacons Viſitation alledged, that foraſmuch as they were once preſented and now ſent home, they have no more to do with them nor any other. Your Officers ſay, namely Mr. Boſwel, that the Council ſent them not home without a great conſideration. I pray God ſome of your Officers prove not favourers of Hereticks. The Rebels are ſtout in the Town of Colcheſter.

The Miniſters of the Church are hemd at in the open ſtreets, and called Knaves. The bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar is blaſphemed and rayled upon in every Houſe and Tavern. Prayer and Faſting is not regarded. Seditious talks and news are rife, both in Town and Country, in as ample and large manner, as though there had no honourable Lords and Commiſſioners been ſent for reformation thereof. The occaſion riſeth partly by reaſon of John Love of Colcheſter Hieth (a perverſe place;) which John Love was twice indicted of Hereſie, and thereupon fled with his Wife and houſhold, and his goods ſeiſed within the Town of Colcheſter, to the King and Queens Majeſties uſe. Nevertheleſs the ſaid John is come home again, and nothing ſaid or done to him. Whereupon the Hereticks are wonderfully encouraged, to the no little diſcomfort of good and Catholick People, which daily pray to God for the proſit, unity, and reſtauration of his Church again: which thing ſhall come the ſooner to paſs, through the Travel and pains of ſuch honourable Lords and Reverend Fathers as your Lordſhip is, unto whom I wiſh long life and continuance, with encreaſe of much honour. From Colcheſter the 18. of December.

Your humble Bedeſman,
Thomas Tye, Prieſt.

When Judaſly this wicked Prieſt had thus wrought his malice againſt the People of God, within a while after the ſtorms began to ariſe againſt thoſe poor perſecuted, William Munt and his Company, whereby they were enforced to hide themſelves from the heat thereof. And continuing ſo a little ſpace, at laſt, the ſeventh day of March, Anno 1557. being the firſt Sunday in Lent, and by two of the Clock in the Morning, one Mr. Edmund Tyrrel (who came of the houſe of thoſe Tyrrels which murdered King Edward the fifth and his Brother) took with him the Bayliff of the hundred called William Simuel, dwelling in Colcheſter, and the two Conſtables of Muchbently aforeſaid, named John Baker and VVilliam Harris, with divers other a great number; and beſetting the houſe of the ſaid VVilliam Munt round about, called to them at length to open the Door: which being done, Mr. Tyrrel with certain of his Company went into the Chamber where the ſaid Father Munt and his Wife lay, willing them to riſe: for (ſaid he) you muſt go with us to Colcheſter-Caſtle. Mother Munt hearing that, being very ſick, deſired that her Daughter might firſt fetch her ſome Drink; for ſhe was (ſhe ſaid) very ill at eaſe.

W. Simuel, J. Baker W. Harris Perſecutors.

The taking of W. Munt, his Wife, and R. Allin their Daughter.

Then he gave her leave and bade her go. So her Daughter the forenamed Roſe Allin, Maid, took a ſtone Pot in one hand, and a Candle in the other, and went to draw drink for her Mother: and as ſhe came back again thorow the houſe, Tyrrel met her, and willed her to give her Father and Mother good counſel, and adverтiſe them to be better Catholick People.

Roſe. Sir, they have a better Inſtructer then I. For the Holy Ghoſt doth teach them, I hope, which I truſt will not ſuffer them to err.

Tyr. Why, ſaid Maſter Tyrrel, art thou ſtill in that mind, thou naughty Huſwife? Marry it is time to look upon ſuch Hereticks indeed.

Roſe. Sir, with which you call Hereſie, do I worſhip my Lord God, I tell you troth.

Tyr. Then I perceive you will burn, Goſſip, with the reſt, for Companies ſake.

Talk between Tyrrel and Roſe Allin.

Roſe. No Sir, not for Companies ſake, but for my Chriſts ſake, if ſo I be compelled, and I hope in his mercies if he call me to it, he will enable me to bear it.

Tyr. So he turning to his Company, ſaid, Sirs, this Goſſip will burn: do you not think it? Marry Sir, quoth one, prove her, and you ſhall ſee what ſhe will do by and by.

Tyrrel burneth R. Allins hand.

Then that cruel Tyrrel, taking the Candle from her, held her Wreſt, and the burning Candle under her hand, burning croſſ-wiſe over the back thereof, ſo long, till the very Sinews crackt aſunder. Witneſs hereof VVillam Chandler then dwelling in Muchbently, who was there preſent and ſaw it. Alſo Mrs. Bright of Romford, with Ann Starkey her Maid, to whom Roſe Allin alſo both declared the ſame, and the ſaid Mrs. Bright alſo miniſtred ſalve for the curing thereof, as ſhe lay in her houſe at Romford going up towards London with other Priſoners.

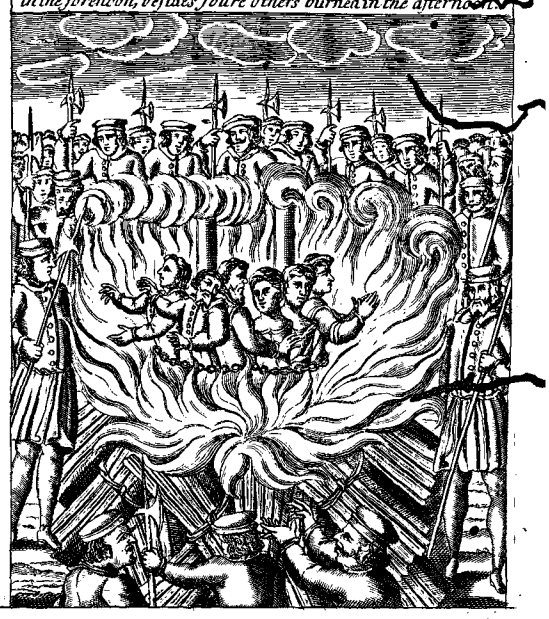
In which time of his tyranny, he ſaid often to her; Why Whore, wilt thou not cry? Thou young Whore, wilt thou not cry? Unto which always ſhe anſwered that ſhe had no cauſe, ſhe thanked God, but rather to rejoyce. He had (ſhe ſaid) more cauſe to weep, then ſhe if he conſidered the matter well. In the end, when the Sinews (as I ſaid) brake that all the houſe heard them, he then thruſt her from him violently, and ſaid, A ſtrong Whore, thou ſhameleſs beaſt, thou beaſtly Whore, &c. with ſuch like vile words. But ſhe quietly ſuffering his rage for the time, at the laſt ſaid, Sir, have ye done what ye will do? And he ſaid, yea, and if thou think it be not well, then mend it.

The patience of the Faithful.

The burning of Roſe Allins hand, by Edmund Tyrell, as ſhe was going to fetch drink for her Mother, lying ſick in her bed.

The Martyrdome of three men and three women at Colcheſter, burned in the forenoon, beſides foure others burned in the afternoon. 1557.



The Devil payeth the Perſecutors their wages.

Roſe. Mend it? nay, the Lord mend you, and give you repentance, if it be his will. And now if you think it good, begin at the Feet, and burn the Head alſo. For he that ſet you awork, ſhall pay you your wages one day, I warrant you: and ſo ſhe went and carried her Mother drink as ſhe was commanded. Furthermore after the ſearching of the houſe for more Company, at the laſt they found one John Thurſton and Margaret his Wife there alſo, whom they carried with the reſt to Colcheſter-Caſtle immediately.

She revengeth not evil for evil.

And this ſaid Roſe Allin being Priſoner, told a Friend of hers this cruel act of the ſaid Tyrrel; and ſhewing him the manner thereof, ſhe ſaid while my own hand (quoth ſhe) was a burning, I having a Pot in my other hand, might have laid him on the Face with it, if I had would: for no man held my hand to let me therein. But I thank God (quoth ſhe) with all my heart, I did it not.

Alſo being asked of another, how ſhe could abide the painful burning of her hand, ſhe ſaid, at firſt it was ſome grief to her, but afterward, the longer ſhe burned, the leſs ſhe felt, or well near none at all.

And becauſe Mr. Tyrrel ſhall not go alone in this kind of Cruelty, you ſhall hear another like example of a blind Harpers hand burnt by Biſhop Boner, as is teſtified by the relation of Valentine Dingley, ſometime Gentleman to the ſaid Biſhop, who declared before credible witneſs, as followeth: How the ſaid B. Boner, having this blind Harper before him, ſpake thus unto him, That ſuch blind abjects which follow a ſort of Heretical preachers, when they come to the feeling of the Fire, will be the firſt that will fly from it.

To whom the blind man ſaid, that if every joynt of him were burnt, yet he truſted in the Lord not to fly. Then Boner ſignifying privily to certain of his men about him what they ſhould do, they brought to him a burning Coal. Which Coal being put into the poor mans hand, they cloſed it faſt again, and ſo was his hand pitiouſly burned. Amongſt the doers whereof was the ſaid Mr. Valentine Dingley, witneſs and reporter hereof, as is declared.

We read in the Story of Titus Livius of King Porſenna, who after the burning of the right hand of Marcus Scævola, which came purpoſely to kill him, being only contented therewith, ſent him home to Rome again. But thus to burn the hand of poor Men and Women which never meant any harm unto them, and not yet contented with that, but alſo to conſume their whole Bodies without any juſt cauſe, we find no example of ſuch barbarous Tyranny, neither in Titus Livius neither in any other ſtory amongſt the Heathen.

But to return to our Colcheſter Martyrs again, as touching William Munt and his Wife, and burning of their Daughter Roſe Allins hand, ſufficient hath been declared. With the ſaid William Munt and his Family, was joyned alſo in the ſame Priſon at Colcheſter another Faithful Brother, named John Johnſon, alias Aliker, of Thorp in the County of Eſſex Labourer, of the age of four and thirty years, having no Wife alive, but three young Children, who alſo was with them indicted of Hereſie, and ſo all theſe four lay together in Colcheſter Caſtle.

The other ſix Priſoners lay in Mote-Hall in the ſaid Town of Colcheſter, whoſe names were:

Firſt, William Bongeor, of the Pariſh of S. Nicholas in Colcheſter, Glaſier, of the age of ſixty years.

2. Thomas Benold of Colcheſter, Tallow Chandler.

3. W. Purcas of Bocking in the County of Eſſex Fuller, a young man, of the age of twenty years.

4. Agnes Silverſide, alias Smith, dwelling in Colcheſter, Widow, of the age of forty years.

Helene Ewring apprehended the ſecond time.

5. Helen Ewring, the Wife of John Ewring Miller, dwelling in Colcheſter, of the age of 45. years or thereabouts, who was one of the 22. Priſoners mentioned before, ſent up in bands from Colcheſter to London, and after being delivered with the reſt, repaired home to Colcheſter again to her Husband, where notwithſtanding ſhe enjoyed her liberty not very long: for ſhortly after her return, met with her one Robert Maynard then Bayliff of Colcheſter, a ſpecial enemy to Gods Goſpel, who ſpying her, came to her, and kiſſed her, and bade her welcom home form London. Unto whom ſhe conſiderately anſwered again, and ſaid, that it was but a Judas kiſs. For in the end, quoth ſhe, I know you will betray me, as indeed it came to paſs: for immediately after that talk ſhe was apprehended by him again, and there lodged withe the reſt in the Town Priſon (as is aforeſaid) called the Mote-Hall.

Rob. Maynard a great Enemy to the Goſpel.

6. The ſixth of this Company was Elizabeth Folks, a young Maid, and Servant in Colcheſter, of the age of twenty years. Theſe ſix were imprioned in the Town Priſon of Colcheſter, called Mote-Hall, as the other four, above ſpecified, were in the Caſtle.

Divers

Anno 1557. Divers Examinations theſe good men had at ſundry times before divers Juſtices, Prieſts, and Officers, as Mr. Roper, John Kingſton, Commiſſary, John Boſwel Prieſt and Boners Scribe, and others more, whereof the ſaid Boſwel made relation to Biſhop Boner, certifying him of their depoſitions, as is to be read in our firſt Book of Acts and Monuments. Laſt of all they were examined again in Mote-Hall the twenty fourth day of June, by Mr. Chadſey, John Kingſton Commiſſary, with other Prieſts, and Boſwel the Scribe, in the preſence of the two Bayliffs of Colcheſter, Robert Brown and Robert Maynard, with divers other Juſtices both of the Town and Country, and other Gentlemen a great ſort: at which time and place, and before the ſaid perſons, they had Sentence of Condemnation read againſt them, chiefly for not affirming the Real preſence of the Sacrament in their Altar. The effect of their words therein, was this, or ſuch like, as here followeth.

Firſt the Lords faithful Priſoners in Mote-Hall.

William Bongeor of the Pariſh of St. Nicholas in Colcheſter Glaſier, ſaid, that the Sacrament of the Altar was Bread, is Bread, and ſo remaineth Bread, and for the Conſecration it is not the holier, but rather the worſe. To this he did ſtand, as alſo againſt all the reſt of their Papiſtical Doctrine: and ſo had Sentence read againſt him.

T. Benolt. Tho. Benold of Colcheſter, Tallow Chandler, affirmed the like in effect that the ſaid William Bongeor did: and ſo had Sentence alſo read againſt him.

W. Purcas condemned. W. Purcas of Bocking ſaid, that when he received the Sacrament, he received Bread in an holy uſe, that preacheth the remembrance that Chriſt died for him. To this he ſtood, and againſt other their Popiſh matters: and ſo alſo had Sentence read againſt him.

Ag. Silverſide condemned. Agnes Silverſide, alias Smith, ſaid, that ſhe loved no Conſecration. For the Bread and Wine is rather worſe then better thereby, ſhe ſaid. This good old Woman anſwered them with ſuch ſound judgment and boldneſs, to every thing they asked her, that it rejoyced the hearts of many, and eſpecially to ſee the patience of ſuch a reverend old age, againſt the taunts and checks of her Enemies. To this ſhe alſo ſtood, and had Sentence read againſt her in like manner.

Helene Ewring condemned. Helene Ewring anſwered the like in effect as the other did, clearly denying all the Laws ſet forth by the Pope, with her whole heart. This good Woman was ſomewhat thick of hearing, but yet quick in underſtanding the Lords matters, his name therefore be praiſed. Againſt her alſo there was Sentence read.

Eliz. Folks condemned Elizabeth Folks the young Maiden, being Examined whether ſhe believed the preſence of Chriſts Body to be in the Sacrament ſubſtantially and really, or no; anſwered that ſhe believed that it was a ſubſtantial Lie, and a real Lie. At which words the Prieſts and others chafed very much, and asked her again, whether after the Conſecration there remained not the Body of Chriſt in the Sacrament. And ſhe anſwered, that before Conſecration and after, it is but bread, and that man bleſſeth without Gods Word, is curſed and abominable by the Word, &c. Then they examined her of Confeſſion to the Prieſt, of going to Church to hear Maſs, of the Authority of the Biſhop of Rome, &c. Unto all which ſhe anſwered, that ſhe would neither uſe nor frequent any of them all, by the grace of God, bnt utterly deteſt and abhor them from the bottom of her heart, and all ſuch trumpery.

A ſubſtantial lie, A real lie.

D. Chadſey wept. Then read they the Sentence of Condemnation againſt her. In which time Doctor Chadſey wept, that the tears trickled down his Cheeks. So the Sentence being read, ſhe kneeled down on both her knees, lifting up her hands and eyes unto Heaven, with fervent prayer in audible voyce praiſing God that ever ſhe was born, to ſee that moſt bleſſed and happy day, that the Lord would count her worthy to ſuffer for the Teſtimony of Chriſt: and Lord, ſaid ſhe (if it be thy will) forgive them that this have done againſt me, for they know not what they do. Then riſing up, ſhe exhorted all thoſe on the Bench to repentance, eſpecially thoſe who brought her to Priſon, as Robert Maynard the Bayliff, and ſuch like; which Maynard commonly, when he ſate in judgment upon life and death, would ſit ſleeping on the Bench many times, ſo careful was his mind on his Office.

Eliz. Folks praiſeth God at her own Condemnation.

Eliz. Folks prayeth for her enemies.

Further ſhe willed halting Goſpellers to beware of Blood, for that would crie for vengeance, &c. And in the end ſhe told them all, laying her hand upon the Barr, if they did not repent their wicked doings therein, that undoubtedly the very Barr would be a witneſs againſt them at the day of judgment, that they had that day ſhed innocent Blood.

Sleeping Maynard. This Elizabeth Folks, the day before ſhe was condemned, was examined only upon this Article, Whether ſhe believed that there was a Catholick Church of Chriſt or no. Unto which ſhe anſwered, Yea. Then was ſhe immediately (by Boſwels means the Scribe) delivered unto her Uncle Holt of the ſame Town of Colcheſter to keep, who carried her home unto his houſe: and ſhe being there, might have departed thence many times, if ſhe had would: for there were means offered to convey her away. But ſhe hearing that ſome doubted that ſhe had yielded to the Pope (although it was moſt untrue) would in no wiſe content her ſelf, but wept, and was in ſuch anguiſh of mind and terror of Conſcience, that (no remedy) ſhe would to the Papiſts again, for any perſwaſions that could be. And coming before them at Coſins Houſe at the White-Hart in Colcheſter, ſhe was at utter defiance with them and their Doctrine: and ſo had, as you have heard, in the end a Papiſtical reward, as the reſt of her Brethren had.

Eliz. Folks might have eſcaped, and would not.

The Lords faithful Priſoners in Colcheſter Caſtle.

W. Munt condemned. William Munt of Muchbently in Eſſex of the age of ſixty one years, ſaid, that the Sacrament of the Altar was an abominable Idol, and that if he ſhould obſerve any part of their Popiſh proceedings, he ſhould diſpleaſe God, and bring his Curſe upon him, and therefore for fear of his vengeance he durſt not do it. This good Father was examined of many things: but God be thanked, he ſtood to the Truth, and in the end therefore had Sentence of Condemnation read againſt him.

J. Johnſon condemned. John Johnſon of Thorp in Eſſex, Widower, of the age of thirty four years, was examined as the reſt, and made anſwer in ſuch ſort, as the Papiſts counted him none of theirs, and therefore condemned him with their Bloody Sentence, as they had done the reſt before. This John Johnſon affirmed, that in the receiving of the Sacrament, according to Chriſts inſtitution, he receiveth the Body of Chriſt ſpiritually, &c.

Alice Munt condemned. Alice Munt, the Wife of the ſaid William Munt, of the age of one and fourty years, being alſo examined as the reſt, ſaid and confirmed the ſame in effect as her Huſband did, and was therefore alſo condemned by their Bloody Sentence in like manner.

Roſe Allin condemned. Roſe Allin Maid the Daughter of the ſaid Alice Munt, of the age of twenty years, being examined of auricular Confeſſion, going to the Church to hear Maſs, of the Popiſh ſeven Sacraments, &c. anſwered ſtoutly, that they ſtank in the face of God, and ſhe durſt not have to do with them for her life, neither was ſhe (ſhe ſaid) any member of theirs: for they were the members of Antichriſt, and ſo ſhould have (if they repented not) the reward of Antichriſt. Being asked further, what ſhe could ſay of the See of the Biſhop of Rome, whether ſhe would obey his Authority or no: ſhe anſwered boldly, that ſhe was none of his. As for his See (quoth ſhe) it is for Crows, Kites, Owls, and Ravens to ſwim in, ſuch as you be: for by the grace of God I ſhall not ſwim in that See, while I live, neither will I have any thing to do therewith. Then read they the Sentence of Condemnation againſt her, and ſo ſent her unto Priſon again unto the reſt, where ſhe ſung with great joy, to the wonder of many.

Roſe Allin anſwers.

Thus theſe poor condemned Lambs, being delivered into the hands of the Secular power, were committed again every one unto the Priſon from whence they came, where they remained with much joy and great comfort (in continual reading, and invocating the name of God) ever looking and expecting the happy day of their diſſolution. In which time the cruel Papiſts left not their miſchievous attempts againſt them (although they would ſeem now to have no more to do with them:) For Bloody Boner, whoſe Throat never cried ho, ſhortly after got a Writ for the burning of the foreſaid then good Creatures; and to ſhew the more diligence in the cauſe, he ſent his own truſty man down with it, named Edward Coſin, and with him alſo his Letter for the furtherance of the matter, the 30. day of July, the next month after the Condemnation.

The Writ being thus received of the ſaid Bayliffs, and they having then no leaſure thereabouts, appointed the day of the execution thereof, to be the ſecond day of Auguſt next following. And becauſe the faithful Souls were in two ſeveral Priſons, as the Caſtle, was for the Country, and Mote-Hall for the Town: therefore it was agreed among them, that they in Mote-Hall ſhould be burnt in the forenoon, and thoſe at the Caſtle, by the Sheriff of the Shire, in the afternoon, as here thou mayſt ſee it more plain how it come to paſs accordingly.

The ſecond day of Auguſt, 1557. betwixt ſix and ſeven of the Clock in the morning, was brought from Mote-Hall unto a plat of ground, hard by the Town-wall of Colcheſter on the outward-ſide, William Bongeor, William Purcas, Thomas Benold, Agnes Silverſide, Alias Smith, Helene Ewring and Elizabeth Folks, aforenamed; which being there, and all things prepared for for their Martyrdom, at the laſt theſe ſaid conſtant Martyrs kneeled down, and made their humble prayers to God, but not in ſuch ſort as they would, for the cruel Tyrants would not ſuffer them: eſpecially one Maſter Clere among the reſt (who ſometime had been a Goſpeler ſhewed himſelf very extream unto them; the Lord give him repentance (if it be his good will) and grace to be a better man. When they had made their prayers, they roſe, and made them ready to the fire. And Elizabeth Folks, when ſhe had plucked off her Petticoat, would have given it to her Mother (which came and kiſt her at the Stake, and exhorted her to be ſtrong in the Lord) but the wicked there attending, would not ſuffer her to give it. Therefore taking the ſaid Petticoat in her hand, ſhe threw it away from her, ſaying, Farewel all the world, farewel Faith, farewel Hope, and ſo taking the Stake in her hand, ſaid, Welcom Love, &c. Now ſhe being at the Stake, and one of the Officers nailing the Chain about her, in the ſtriking of the Staple, he miſt the place, and ſtrake her with a great ſtroke of the hammer on the ſhoulder Bone: whereat ſhe ſuddenly turned her head, lifting up her eyes to the Lord, and prayed ſmilingly, and gave her ſelf to exhorting the People again.

The Martyrdom of W. Bongeor, W. Purcas, Tho. Benold, Agnes Silverſide, alias Smith, Helene Ewring, Eliz. Folks, at Colcheſter in the Forenoon. Anno 1557. Auguſt 2.

When all the ſix were alſo nailed likewiſe at their ſtakes, and the Fire about them, they clapped their hands for joy in the Fire, that the ſtanders by (which were by eſtimation thouſands) cried generally almoſt; The Lord ſtrengthen them, the Lord comfort them, the Lord pour his mercies upon them, with ſuch like words, as was wonderful to hear.

Thus yielded they up their Souls and Bodies into the Lords hands, for the true teſtimony of his Truth. The Lord grant we may imitate the ſame in the like quarrel (if he ſo vouch us worthy) for his mercies ſake, Amen.

W. Munt, Alice his Wife, Roſe Allin their Daughter, J. Johnſon, burnt the ſame day at afternoon, Aug. 2.

In like manner the ſaid day in the Afternoon, was brought forth into the Caſtle-Yard, to a place appointed for the ſame, William Munt, John Johnſon, Alice Munt and Roſe Allin aforeſaid: which godly Conſtant perſons, after they had made their prayers, and were joyfully tied to the Stakes, calling upon the name of God, and exhorting the People earneſtly to flee from Idolatry, ſuffered their Martyrdom with ſuch triumph and joy, that the People did no leſs ſhout thereat to ſee it, then at the other that were burnt the ſame day in the Morning.

The age of theſe Ten made the ſum of 406. years.

Thus ended all theſe glorious ten Souls that day, their happy lives unto the Lord, whoſe ages all did grow to the ſum of four hundred and ſix years, or thereabouts. The Lord grant we may well ſpend our years and days likewiſe to his glory, Amen.

J. Thurſton a Confeſſor of Chriſt.

John Thurſton died in Colcheſter Caſtle.

BEfore you have heard of the taking of John Thurſton at Muchbentley, in the houſe of one William Munt of the ſame Town; which ſaid John Thurſton afterward about the month of May, in the year aforeſaid, died in Colcheſter-Caſtle, a conſtant Confeſſor of Jeſus Chriſt.

Anno 1557.

The ſtory and Death of George Eagles, otherwiſe termed Trudgeover, a moſt painful Traveller in Chriſts Goſpel, who for the ſame Goſpel moſt cruelly was Martyred by the Cruel Papiſts.

G. Eagles

AMong other Martyrs of ſingular vertue and conſtancy, one George Eagles deſerveth not the leaſt admiration, but is ſo much the more to be commended, for that he, having little learning or none, moſt manfully ſerved and fought under the banner of Chriſts Church. For oftentimes the will and pleaſure of God is, to beautifie and adorn his Kingdom with the weak and ſimple Inſtruments of this world; ſuch as in the old Teſtament Amos was, who with many other of obſcure and unknown names, were called from the heards and folds to the honor of Prophets; as likewiſe we read of the Apoſtles that were called from Fiſhermens craft, and put into Churches. Wherefore this George Eagles is not to be neglected for his baſe occupation, whom Chriſt called thence to ſet forth and declared abroad his Goſpel. Rather we ought to glorifie God the more thereby in his holineſs, which in ſo blind a time inſpired him with the gift of preaching, and conſtancy of ſuffering: who after a certain time he had uſed the occupation of a Taylour, being eloquent and of good utterance, gave and applied himſelf to the Profit of Chriſts Church.

Which man, as before in thoſe moſt bright and clear days of King Edward the ſixth, he had not unfruitfully ſhewed and preached the power and force of the Lord, ſo afterward in the tempeſtuous time and fall of the Church (at what time the Confeſſors of Chriſt and his Goſpel were turmoiled, divers of them murdered, part baniſhed, and otherſome conſtrained for fear not to ſhew their heads) he expreſſed and uttered his manly ſtomack. For he, wandring abroad into divers and far Countries where he could find any of his Brethren, did there moſt earneſtly encourage and comfort them, now tarrying in this Town, and ſometime abiding in that certain months together, as occaſion ſerved, lodging ſometime in the Country, and ſometime for fear living in Fields and Woods, who, for his immoderate and unreaſonable going abroad, was called Trudgeover. Oftentimes he did lie abroad in the night without covert, ſpending the moſt part in devout and earneſt prayer.

The painful travel of G. Eagles.

His diet was ſo above meaſure ſpare and ſlender, that for the ſpace of three years, he uſed for the moſt part, to drink nothing but very Water, whereunto he was compelled through neceſſity of the time of perſecution: and after when he perceived that his Body by Gods providence proved well enough with this diet, he thought beſt to inure himſelf therewithal againſt all neceſſities.

Now when he had profited Chriſts Church in this ſort, by going about and preaching the Goſpel a year or two, and eſpecially in Colcheſter, and the quarters thereabout; that privy Enemy which envieth always the ſalvation and bleſſed eſtate of the good, lurked and laid wait by all means poſſible for him, ſo that there were divers Spies ſent out, who had in commandment, whereſoever they found him, to bring him either quick or dead.

But when this their attempt could not prevail, but all was in vain (the ſaid Eagles with his Brethren keeping in cloſe, and hiding themſelves in out and dark places, as in Barns, Thickets, Holes, and privy Cloſets) his Adverſaries went about another way to compaſs this their enterpriſe of taking him.

For in the Queens name a grievous Edict was proclaimed thorowout four Shires, Eſſex, Suffolk, Kent, and Norfolk, promiſing the party that took him, twenty pounds for his pains; doubtleſs a worthy hire to entice any Jew to treachery. For being inflamed with greedy deſire of the mony, they deviſed and invented all ways and reaſons they could poſſible to be enriched with the hurt and deſtruction of this ſilly man.

At length it came to paſs, that this George being ſeen by chance at Colcheſter upon Mary Magdalens day, at which time they kept a Fair in the Town, ſhould have forthwith been delivered to his Adverſaries, if he perceiving the ſame (as God would have it) had not conveighed himſelf away as faſt as he could, a great multitude purſuing after, and ſeeking diligently for him.

Who

Ann. 1557. Who firſt hid himſelf in a grove, and then from thence he ſtole into a Corn-field thereby, and ſo lay ſecretly couched from the violence of his enemies, inſomuch as they were all, ſaving one, paſt hope of taking him, and therefore ready to depart their way.

This one, having more ſubtilty and wicked craft in his head then the reſt, would not depart thence with his fellows, but climed up into a high tree, there to view and eſpy if he might ſee Eagles any where ſtir or move.

Quid non mortalia pectora cogis,
Auri ſacra fames?

The poor man thinking all ſure enough, by reaſon that he heard no noiſe abroad, roſe up on his knees, and lifting up his hands, prayed unto God. And whether it were for that his head was above the Corn, or becauſe his voyce was heard, the lurker perceiving his deſired prey that he hunted after, forthwith came down, and ſuddenly laying hands on him, brought him as Priſoner to Colcheſter. Notwithſtanding the greedy and Judas Knave, which had ſomuch promiſed him, was fain to be contented with a very ſmall reward, and glad to take that too, leſt he ſhould have had nothing at all.

This George, not without great lamentation of divers good men, and great lack unto the Church of God (of which to his power he was a worthy Inſtrument) was committed to Priſon there, and from thence within four days after conveyed to Chelmsford, where he abode all that night in devout Prayer, and would not ſleep, neither would eat or drink but Bread and Water. The next day he was carried to London to the Biſhop or the Counſel, and there remained a certain time, and then was brought down to Chelmsford to the Seſſions, and there was indicted and accuſed of Treaſon, becauſe he had aſſembled Companies together, contrary to the Laws and Statutes of the Realm in that caſe provided. For ſo it was ordained a little before, to avoid ſedition, that if men ſhould flock ſecretly together, above the number of ſix, they ſhould be attached of Treaſon: which ſtrait Law was the caſting away of the good Duke of Somerſet before mentioned.

And albeit it was well known, that poor Eagles did never any thing ſeditiouſly againſt the Queen, yet to cloak an honeſt matter withal, and to cauſe him to be the more hated of the People, they turned Religion into a Civil offence and crime, and though he defended his cauſe ſtoutly and boldly, making a full declaration of his Religion, or Faith before the Judges: yet could he not bring it to paſs by any means, but that he muſt needs be indicted (as is ſaid) of Treaſon; whoſe indictment did run much after this faſhion.

George Eagles indictment.

George Eagles, thou art indicted by the name of George Eagles, otherwiſe Trudgeover the Word, for that thou didſt ſuch a day make thy prayer, that God ſhould turn Queen Maries heart, or elſe take her away.

He denied that he prayed that God ſhould take her away, but he confeſſed, he prayed that God would turn her heart in his prayer. Well, notwithſtanding he was condemned for a Traitor, although the meaning thereof was for Religion.

This thing done, he was carried to the New-Inn, called the ſign of the Crown in Chelmsford, by the beaſtly Bayliffs which ſome of them were they that before did their beſt to take him; and being in the Inn, one Richard Potto the Elder, an Inn-holder, dwelling at the ſign of the Cock in the ſame Town, did much trouble him, in perſwading him to confeſs he had offended the Queen in his prayer, which he was condemned for, and to ask her forgiveneſs.

R. Potto Inholder at the Cock in Chelmsford.

To whom he ſaid, he had not offended her Grace in that behalf. So in proceſs of time, he was laid upon a Sled, with an hurdle on it, and drawn to the place of execution, being faſt bound, having in his hand a Pſalm-Book, of the which he read very devoutly all the way with a loud voyce, till he came there: and being on the Ladder this foreſaid Potto did much trouble him with the matter aforeſaid, when he would have uttered other things, till ſuch time as the Sheriff commanded Potto to hold his peace, and trouble him no more.

So he made his confeſſion, and ſtood very conſtant ſtill; then he was, turned off the Ladder. With him were caſt certain Thieves alſo, and the next day, when they were brought out to be executed with him, there happened a thing that did much ſet forth and declare the innocency and godlyneſs of this man. For being led between two Thieves to the place where he ſhould ſuffer, when as he exhorted both them and all other to ſtand ſtedfaſtly to the Truth, one of theſe turned the counſel he gave, into a jeſting matter, and made but a flout at it.

Why ſhould we doubt to obtain Heaven, ſaith he, for aſmuch as this holy man ſhall go before us, as Captain and leader unto us in the way. We ſhall flee thither ſtraight as ſoon he hath once made us the entry.

In this George Eagles and that other did greatly reprove him, who on the other ſide gave good heed to Georges exhortation, earneſtly bewailing his own wickedneſs, and calling to Chriſt for mercy. But the more that the firſt was bid to be ſtill, and to leave off his ſcoffing the more perverſe he did continue in his fooliſhneſs, and his wicked behaviour. At length he came to the Gallows, where they ſhould be hanged, but George was carried to another place thereby to ſuffer. Between the two it was the godliers chance to go the foremoſt, who being upon the Ladder, after he had exhorted the People to beware and to take heed to themſelves, how they did tranſgreſs the Commandments of God, and then had committed his Soul into Gods hands, he ended his life after a godly and quiet manner.

An example to be noted of a Thief rejecting and deriding wholſome and godly preaching.

The mockers turn cometh next, which would have ſaid likewiſe ſomewhat, but his Tongue did fumble and faulter in his head, that he was not able to ſpeak a word. Fain would he have uttered his mind, but he could not bring it out. Then did the Under-ſheriff bid him ſay the Lords Prayer, which he could not ſay neither but ſtutteringly, as a man would ſay, one word to day and another to morrow. Then one did begin to ſay it, and ſo bade him ſay after.

Such as were there, and ſaw it, were very much aſtonied, eſpecially thoſe that did behold the juſt puniſhment of God againſt him that had mocked ſo earneſt a matter. George Eagles in the mean time, after he had hanged a ſmall time, having a great check with the halter, immediately one of the Bayliffs cut the halter aſunder, and he fell to the ground being ſtill alive, although much amazed with the check he had off the Ladder.

W. Swallow tormentor of George Eagles.

Then one William Swallow of Chelmsford a Bayliff, did draw him to the Sled that he was drawn thither on, and laid his neck thereon, and with a Cleaver, ſuch as is occupied in many mens Kitchins, and blunt, did hackle off his head, and ſometime hit his neck, and ſometime his Chin, and did fowly mangle him, and ſo opened him. Notwithſtanding this bleſſed Martyr of Chriſt abode ſtedfaſt and conſtant in the very midſt of his torments, till ſuch time as this tormentor William Swallow did pluck the heart out of his Body. The Body being divided in four parts, and his Bowels burnt, was brought to the foreſaid Swallows door, and there laid upon the Fiſh-ſtals before his door, till they had made ready a horſe to carry his quarters, one to Colcheſter, and the reſt to Harwich, Chelmsford, and S. Rouſes.

His Head was ſet up at Chelmsford on the Market-Croſs on a long Pole, and there ſtood, till the Wind did blow it down, and lying certain days in the ſtreet tumbled about, one cauſed it to be buried in the Church yard in the night. Alſo a wonderful work of God was it that he ſhewed on this wicked Bayliff Swallow, who within ſhort ſpace after this was ſo puniſhed, that all the hair went well near off his head, his eyes were as it were cloſed up, and could ſcantly ſee, the nails of his fingers and toes went clean off. He was in ſuch caſe of his Body as though he had been a Leper, and now in his laſt age almoſt a very beggar, and his Wife, which he a little after married, God hath puniſhed with the Falling-ſickneſs, or a diſeaſe like unto that: which may be a warning or glaſs for all men and women to look in, that be enemies to Gods true Servants.

Gods juſt judgment upon a cruel Perſecutor.

W. Swallows Wife puniſhed with the Falling-ſickneſs.

No leſs token of his marvellous judgment did God ſhew upon the foreſaid Richard Potto, which did ſo much trouble this George Eagles in the Inn, and at the place of execution, as is above ſpecified. He lived till the beginning of Q. Elizabeths Reign, all which time he little joyed, and being on a time in a great chafe with two or three of his neighbours in his own houſe, feeling himſelf not well, he ſaid to one of his Servants, Go with me in to the Chamber, and when he came there, he fell down on a low Bed, as heavy as in had been Lead, and lay there foming at the mouth, and could never ſpeak after, neither yet underſtand what was ſaid to him, as by all means was tryed by his neighbours with ſigns to him made, but lay as ſenſe-leſs as if had bin a very dumb Beaſt, and within three or four days dyed. God grant that this token ſent of God, with many more like, may be a warning to us ever hereafter, while we ſhall live unto the worlds end.

Beſides this, God hath wonderfully ſhewed his work. For at a time when they laid great wait for this George Eagles, ſo that it was thought that it was unpoſſible, but that he ſhould be taken being ſo beſet; his Friends did put him into Apprentice apparel, viz. Watchet-hoſe as there manner is, and an old Cloak, and ſet him on a Pack of Wool, as though he had ridden to carry Wool to the Spinners, ſo he rode amongſt the midſt of his Adverſaries, and eſcaped them all for that time. Another troubler of the ſaid George Eagles, was alſo Juſtice Brown who enjoyed not his cruelty many years after, &c.

Alſo when he was at the Seſſions at Chelmsford, there was a rumor raiſed, that he had accuſed divers honeſt men that did keep him in their houſes, and was converſant with him, and all to diſcredit him; which rumor was very falſe and utterly untrue. Witneſs one Raynold, with divers other dwelling in Chelmsford.

Auguſt 5. ABout this time ſuffered at Norwich, a godly man and a conſtant Martyr of Chriſt, called Richard Craſhfield, whoſe Examinations before the Chancellor, named Dunning, as he penned them with his own hand, ſo have we faithfully recorded the ſame.

The Examination of R. Craſhfield, before Dunning, Chancellor of Norwich.

How ſay you Sirrah, ſaid the Chancellor, to the Ceremonies of the Church?

Then ſaid I, What Ceremonies?

He ſaid unto me, do you not believe that all the Ceremonies of the Church were good and godly?

My anſwer was, I do believe ſo many as are grounded in the Teſtament of Jeſus Chriſt.

Sacrament of the Altar.

Tuſh, ſaid he, Do you believe in the Sacrament of the Altar?

I ſaid, I knew not what it was,

Then ſaid he, Do you not believe that Chriſt took Bread, gave thanks, brake it, and ſaid, Take, eat, this is my Body?

Yes verily, ſaid I, and even as Chriſt did ſpeak, ſo did he perform the work.

Tuſh, ſaid he, Do you not believe this, that after the words be ſpoken by the Prieſt, there is the ſubſtance of Chriſts Body, Fleſh and Blood? How ſay you, do you not believe this? ſpeak man.

I do believe that Chriſts Body was broken for me upon the Croſs, and his Blood ſhed for my redemption, whereof the Bread and the Wine is a perpetual memory, the pledge of his mercy, the Ring and Seal of his promiſe, and a perpetual memory for the Faithful unto the end of the world. So then I was commanded into Priſon until the next day.

Another Examination of Richard Crashfield

Another Examination of Craſhfield.

THe day following I was brought forth. Then the Chancellor ſaid unto me, Richard, how ſay you? Are you otherwiſe minded than you were yeſterday? He rehearſing all the words that we had afore ſaid, Are not theſe your words? Whereunto I anſwered, Yes.

Worſhipping of Images.

Then ſaid he, How ſay you, can you not find in your heart, when you come to the Church, to kneel down before the Rood, and make your Prayer?

I anſwered and ſaid, No; rehearſing the Commandment of God forbidding the ſame.

He ſaid, Have you not read or heard, that God commanded an Image to be made?

I anſwered, What Image? Anno

He ſaid, The brazen Serpent. 1557.

I ſaid, Yes, I have heard it read, how that God did command it to be made, and likewiſe to be broken down.

Then Doctor Bridges ſaid, Wherefore did God command the Seraphins and Cherubins to be made?

I ſaid, I could not tell; I would fain learn.

Then ſaid the Chancellor, But how ſay you to this? can you find in your heart to fall down before the Picture of CHRIST, which is the Rood?

I ſaid, no, I fear the curſe of God: for it is written, that God curſeth the hands that make them, yea and the hands that make the tools wherewith they are carved.

Then Dr. Bridges raged and ſaid, Liſt now what a piece of Scripture he hath here gotten to ſerve his purpoſe, for he will not allow but where he liſteth.

Confeſſion to the Prieſt

Then ſaid the Chancellor, How ſay you to Confeſſion to the Prieſt? when were you confeſſed?

I ſaid, I confeſs my ſelf daily unto the eternal God, whom I moſt grievouſly offend.

Then the Chancellor ſaid. Do you not then take Confeſſion to the Prieſt to be good?

I anſwered, No, but rather wicked.

Playing on the Organs.

Then the Chancellor ſaid, How ſay you by yonder gear, yonder ſinging and yonder playing on the Organs? is it not good and godly?

I ſaid, I could perceive no godlineſs in it.

Then he ſaid, Why, is it not written in the Pſalms, That we ſhould praiſe God with hymns and Spiritual Songs?

I ſaid, Yes ſpiritual Songs muſt be had: but yonder is of the Fleſh, and of the Spirit of error. For to you it is pleaſant and glorious, but to the Lord it is bitter and odious.

Then ſaid the Chancellor, Why, is it not written, My houſe is an houſe of Prayer?

Eſay. 56. Luke 19.

I ſaid, Yes. It is written alſo, That you have made my houſe of prayer a Den of Thieves.

With that, the Chancellor looked and ſaid have we? I anſwered and ſaid, Chriſt ſaid ſo. Then was I commanded to ward.

Another Examination of R. Craſhfield.

Then Thurſday next following, was Dr. Bridges ſent to mee to examine mee of my Faith. And he ſaid, Country-man, my Lord Biſhop (for love hee would have you ſaved,) hath ſent me unto you, becauſe to morrow is your day appointed: therefore my Lord hath thought it meet, that you ſhould declare unto me your Faith. For to morrow my Lord will not have much ado with you.

I anſwered and ſaid, Hath my Lord ſent you? It is not you, to whom I am diſpoſed to ſhew my mind.

Then he ſaid to me, I pray you ſhew me your mind concerning the Sacrament of the Altar.

I anſwered, Are you ignorant what I have ſaid?

He ſaid, No for it was well written, Except you believe, ſaith he, as the Church hath taught you are damned both Body and Soul.

I anſwered, and ſaid, Judge not, leſt you be judged: condemn not, leſt you be condemned.

And he ſaid, Lo, we ſhall have a traytor as well as an Heretick: for he will diſallow the Kings Judgment.

I ſaid, No, I do not diſallow the Kings Judgment, but yours I do diſallow. For I pray you tell me, how came you by this Judgment?

He anſwered and ſaid, by the Church: for the Church hath power to ſave and condemn: for if you be condemned by the Church, be ye ſure, that you be damned both Body and Soul.

The Popes Church takes Chriſts Office out of his hand.

Then I anſwered, if you have this power, I am ſore deceived. For I believe that Chriſt ſhall be our judge. But now I perceive that you will do much for him, that you will not put him to the pain.

Then he ſaid, ſtand nearer Country-man: why ſtand ye ſo far off?

I ſaid, I am near enough, and a little too near.

Then he ſaid, Did not Chriſt ſay, Is not my Fleſh meat, and my Blood Drink indeed?

I ſaid, To whom ſpake Chriſt thoſe words?

He ſaid, To his Diſciples.

I (intending to rehearſe the Text) ſaid, whereat did Chriſts Diſciples murmure inwardly?

He

Anno 1557.

He said, No, they did not murmure, but they were the Infidels (saith he) for the Disciples were satisfied with these words.

I said, did not Christ say thus, as he taught at Capernaum? whereas his Disciples murmured, saying, This is an hard saying. Who can abide the hearing of it? Jesus perceiving their thoughts, said, doth this offend you?

Note here the ignorance of the Catholick men in the Scriptures.

Then he raged and said, Oh, thou wrestest the Text for thine own purpose. For the Disciples did never murmure, but the unbelievers, as thou art.

I said, Yes, but I perceive you know not the Text.

Then said he, with much raging, I will lay my head thereon, it is not so.

Then said I, I have done with you.

Then said he, What shall I tell my Lord of you?

If you have nothing to tell him, your errand shall be sooner done said I. And so he departed.

Another examination of R. Crasfield.

Then on Friday I was brought forth to receive judgment. Then the Chancellor said unto me, Are you a new Man, or are you not?

I answered and said, I trust I am a new Man Born of God.

God give Grace you be so, said he. So he rehearsed all my examination, and said, How say you, are not these your words?

I said, Yes, I will not deny them.

Then he said to Dr. Pore, standing by, I pray you talk with him. Then he alledging to me many fair flattering words, said, Take, eat, this is my Body. How say you to this? Do you not believe that it is Christs Body? speak.

I said, Have you not my mind? Why do you trouble me?

He said, What did Christ give you? was it Bread, or was it not?

I said, Christ took Bread, and gave thanks, and gave it, and they took Bread, and did Eat. And St. Paul maketh it more manifest, where he saith, So oft as ye shall Eat of this Bread, and Drink of this Cup, ye shall shew forth the Lords Death until he come. St. Paul saith not here as you say: for he saith, So oft as ye shall Eat of this Bread. He doth not say, Body. So they intending that I should go no further in the Text, said, Tush, you go about the bush. Answer me to the first question. Let us make an end of that.

1 Cor. 10.

What say you to the Bread that Christ gave? Let me have your mind in that.

I answered, I have said my mind in it.

Then the Chancellor said, No, we will have your mind in that.

I answered, I have said my mind in it.

Then said the Chancellor, No, we will have your mind more plainly. For we intend not to have many words with you.

I said, my Faith is fully grounded and stablished, that Christ Jesus the Easter Lamb hath offered his blessed Body a Sacrifice to God the Father, the price of my redemption. For by that onely sacrifice are all the faithful sanctified, and he is our only Advocate and Mediator, and he hath made perfect our redemption. This hath he done alone, without any of your daily oblations.

Then Dr. Bridges start up, and said, Truth, your Words are true indeed. You take well the literal sense: but this you must understand, that like as you said that Christ offered his Body upon the Cross, which was a bloody sacrifice, and a visible sacrifice: so likewise we daily offer the self same Body that was offered upon the Cross, but not bloody and visible, but invisible, unto God the Father.

Unbloody Sacrifice of the Mass.

Do you offer Christs Body, I said? Why then Christs Sacrifice was not perfect. But Christ is True, when all Men shall be Lyars.

Then he said, Thou shalt not fear him that hath power to kill the Body: but thou shall fear him that hath power to kill both Body and Soul.

I answered and said, It is not so. But the Text is thus, Thou shall not fear them that have power to kill the Body, and then have done what they can. But thou shalt fear him that hath power to kill both Body and Soul, and cast them both into Hel-fire, and not them.

He answered and said, Yes: for it is the Church.

I answered and said, Why, Christ saith, I give my life for the redemption of the world. No man taketh my life from me (saith he) but I give it of my own power, and so I have power to take it again. Therefore Christ the Son of God did offer his Body once for all. And if you will presume to offer his Body daily, then your power is above Christs power. With that he chafed and said, What, shall we have Doctrine? Ye are not hereto appointed.

Then the Chancellor stood up, and said, Wil ye turn from this wicked error, and be an example of goodness, as you have been an example of evil (for by your wicked reading, you have perswaded simple Women to be in this error) and ye shall have mercy.

And I said, it is of God that I do crave mercy, whom I have offended, and not you.

Then said the Chancellor, When were you at your Parish Church? These two years and more have you stood Excommunicate. Wherefore you are condemned. And so I was condemned.

Thus hast thou (gentle Reader) the Examinations of this godly young Man, set forth and written with his own hand, who, not long after his condemnation, was by the Sheriffs and Officers there, brought to the stake, where with much patience and constancy he entred his blessed Martyrdom. At the burning of which Christian Martyr, one Thomas Carman the same time was apprehended, by what occasion, it is not yet to us fully certain, whether it was for words, or for praying with him, or for pledging him at his burning, concerning which Thomas Carman, his story hereafter followeth in his order and place, further to be seen.

The Martyrdom of Rich. Crashfield. Anno 1557. Aug. 5.

One Fryer, and a certain godly Woman burned at Rochester, who was the Sister of George Eagles.

ABout the same time and Month, one named Fryer, with a Woman accompanying him, who was the Sister of George Eagles, in the like cause of righteousness, suffered the like Martyrdom by the unrighteous Papists, whose Tyranny the Lord of his mercy abate and cut short, turning that wicked generation, if it be his will, to a better mind.

The apprehension and Death of Mistress Joyce Lewes, the Wife of Thomas Lewes, of Manceter, most constantly suffering for Gods Word at Lichfield.

MIstress Joyce Lewes, a Gentlewoman born, was delicately brought up in the pleasures of the world, having delight in gay apparel, and such like foolishness with the which follies the most part of the Gentlefolks of England were then, and are yet infected, who was married first to one called Appleby, and afterward to Thomas Lewes of Manceter. In the beginning of Queen Mary's time she went to the Church and heard Mass as others did, but when she heard of the burning of that most godly and learned Martyr, Laurence Sanders, who suffered in Coventry, she began to take more heed to the matter, and enquired earnestly of such as she knew feared God, the cause of his Death: and when she perceived it was because he refused to receive the Mass, she began to be troubled in Conscience, and waxed very unquiet. And because her house was even hard by Mr. John Glovers house, of whom mention was made before, a Man of Blessed Memory, and a singular example of his unfained godliness and manifold troubles which he suffered for the Gospel, she did oftentimes resort to him, and desired him to tell her the faults that were in the Mass, and other things that at that time were urged as necessary to salvation.

The story of Mistress Joyce Lewes, Martyr.

Now he perceiving both her unquiet mind, and also the desire she had to know the truth, did most diligently instruct her in the ways of the Lord, approving unto her out of Gods Holy Word, that the Mass, with all other papistical inventions, was odious in Gods sight; and besides this, reproved her, for that she delighted in the vanities of this world so much. By the which godly counsel given by him, it happened that she began to wax weary of the world, throughly sorrowful for her sins, being inflamed with with the Love of God, deſirous to ſerve him according to his word, purpoſing alſo to flee from thoſe things the which did diſpleaſe the Lord her God. And becauſe ſhe had learned the Maſs to be evil and abominable, ſhe began to hate it. And when at a time ſhe was compelled by the furiouſneſs of her Husband to come to the Church, at the ſame time when the Holy Water was caſt, ſhe turned her Back towards it, and ſhewed her ſelf to be diſpleaſed with their Blaſphemous Holy Water, injurious to the Blood of Chriſt. Whereupon ſhe was accuſed before the Biſhop for the deſpiſing of their Sacramentals.

Immediately, a Citation was ſent for her to her Husbands Houſe, to appear before the Biſhop incontinently. The Sumner that brought the Citation delivered it to her Husband, who looking upon it, and perceiving that it was moved with anger, willing the Sumner to take the Citation with him again, or elſe he would make him to eat it. The Sumner refuſed to take it again, for he thought no Man durſt have been ſo bold to trouble him. But in the end Lewes compelled the ſaid Sumner to eat the Citation indeed, by ſetting a Dagger to his Heart; and when he had eaten it, he cauſed him to drink to it, and ſo ſent him away. But immediately after, the ſaid Lewes with his Wife were commanded to appear before the Biſhop, where the ſaid Lewes by and by ſubmitted himſelf, and deſiring the Biſhop to be good to him, excuſing himſelf after the beſt Faſhion he could. Whereupon the Biſhop was content to receive his ſubmiſſion, with condition that his Wife ſhould ſubmit her ſelf alſo. But ſhe ſtoutly told the Biſhop, that by refuſing of the Holy Water ſhe had neither offended God, nor any part of his Laws. At the which words the Biſhop being grievouſly offended, yet becauſe ſhe was a Gentle Woman, he would not take her at the worſt (as he ſaid) he gave her one Months reſpite, binding her Husband in an hundred pound to bring her again unto him at the Months end, and ſo they were both let go.

When they came to their own Houſe, the ſaid Miſtreſs Joyce Lewes gave her ſelf to moſt diligent prayer, and invocating of the name of God, reſorting continually to the abovenamed Man of God, Maſter John Glover, who did moſt diligently inſtruct her with Gods Word, willing her in any caſe not to meddle with that matter in reſpect of vaine glory, or to get her ſelf a name, ſhewing her the great dangers ſhe was like to caſt her ſelf in, if ſhe ſhould meddle in Gods matter otherwiſe than Chriſt doth teach.

Miſtreſs Lewes inſtructed by Mr. John Glover.

When the Month was now almoſt expired, and the time at hand that ſhee ſhould be brought before the ſaid Biſhop her Husband being advertiſed by the ſaid Mr. John Glover and others, not to carry her to the Biſhop, but to ſeek ſome ways to ſave her, or if the worſt ſhould come, to be content to forfeit ſo much Money, rather than to caſt his own Wife into the fire: He anſwered, he would not looſe or forfeit any thing for her ſake: and ſo, like a murtherer of his own Wife, he carried her to the bloody Bp. where ſhee was examined, and found more ſtout, than ſhe was before Death was threatned. And to begin withal, ſhe was ſent to ſuch a ſtinking priſon, that a certain maid, which was appointed to keep her company, did ſwoon in the ſame priſon.

Miſtreſs Lewes impriſoned.

Being thus kept in priſon, and oftentimes examined, and ever found ſtout, at the length ſhe was brought in judgment, and pronounced an Heretick worthy to be burned. When the Biſhop reaſoned with her, why ſhe could not come to the Maſs, and receive the Sacraments and Sacramentals of the Holy Ghoſt: ſhe anſwered, Becauſe I find not theſe things in Gods Word, which you ſo urge and magnifie, as things moſt needful for mens Salvation. If theſe things were in the ſame Word of God commanded, I would with all my Heart, receive, eſteem, and believe them. The Biſhop anſwered, If thou wilt believe no more than is in the Scripture, concerning matters of Religion, thou art in a Damnable caſe. At which words ſhe was wonderfully amazed, and being moved by the Spirit of God, told the Biſhop, that his words were ungodly and wicked.

After her condemnation, ſhe continued a whole twelf Month in priſon, becauſe ſhe was committed to the Sheriff that was of late choſen, who could not be compelled to put her to Death in his time, as he affirmed: for the which things, after her Death, he was ſore troubled and in danger of his Life. All that time ſhe was in priſon, her behaviour was ſuch both in words and deeds, that all they, that had any ſpark of godlineſs or honeſty, did greatly lament her caſe, that ſhe ſhould be put to Death.

Miſtreſs Lewes a Year in priſon after her condemnation.

Anno 1557.

Now when the time did draw near the which God had appointed for her Deliverance, the Writ De comburendo (as they term it) being brought down from London, ſhe deſired certain of her Friends, to come to her with whom when they came, ſhe conſulted how ſhe might behave her ſelf, that her Death might be more glorious to the Name of God, Comfortable to his People, and alſo moſt Diſcomfortable unto the Enemies of God. As for Death (ſaid ſhe) I do not greatly paſs: when I behold the amiable Countenance of Chriſt my dear Saviour the Ougleſome Face of Death doth not greatly trouble mee. In the which time alſo ſhe reaſoned moſt comfortably out of Gods Word, of Gods election and reprobation.

In the evening, before the day of her ſuffering, two of the Prieſts of the cloſe of Lichfield, came to the under Sheriffs Houſe where ſhe lay, and ſent word to her by the Sheriff, that they were come to hear her Confeſſion: for they would be ſorry ſhe ſhould die without. She ſent them word again, ſhe had made her Confeſſion to Chriſt her Saviour, at whoſe hands ſhe was ſure to have forgiveneſs of her ſins. As concerning the cauſe for the which ſhe ſhould die, ſhe had no cauſe to confeſs that, but rather to give unto God moſt humble praiſe, that he did make her worthy to ſuffer Death for his Word: And as concerning that Abſolution that they were able to give unto her, being authorized by the Pope, ſhe did defie the ſame, even from the bottom of her Heart. The which thing when the Prieſts heard they ſaid to the Sheriff, Well, to morrow her ſtoutneſs will be proved and tryed. For although perhaps ſhe hath now ſome Friends that whiſper her in her ears, to morrow we will ſee who dare be ſo hardy as to come near her: and ſo they went their ways with anger, that their confeſſion and abſolution was nought ſet by.

Miſtreſs Lewes refuſeth to be confeſſed of the Prieſts.

All that night ſhe was wonderfully cheerful and merry, with a certain gravity, in ſo much that the Majeſty of the Spirit of God did manifeſtly appear in her, who did expel the fear of Death out of her Heart, ſpending the time in prayer, reading, and talking with them that were purpoſely come unto her, to comfort her with the Word of God.

About three of the clock in the morning, Satan (who never ſleepeth, eſpecially when Death is at hand) began to ſtirr himſelf buſily, ſhooting at her that fiery dart the which he is wont to do againſt all that are at defiance with him, queſtioning with her, how ſhe could tell that ſhee was choſen to eternal Life, and that Chriſt dyed for her. I grant that he dyed, but that he dyed for thee how canſt thou tell; with this ſuggeſtion when ſhe was troubled, they that were about her did counſel her to follow the example of Paul, Galathians 2. where he ſaith, Which hath loved me, and given himſelf for me. Alſo, that her vocation and calling to the knowledge of Gods Word, was a manifeſt token of Gods love towards her, eſpecially that ſame Holy Spirit of God working in her Heart, that love and deſire towards God to pleaſe him, and to be juſtified by him through Chriſt, &c. By theſe and like perſwaſions, and eſpecially by the comfortable promiſes of Chriſt, brought out of the Scripture, Satan was put to flight, and ſhee comforted in Chriſt.

Temptations of Miſtreſs Lewes before her death and Martyrdom.

Joyce Lewes comforted in her temptations

About eight of the clock, Mr. Sheriff came to her into her Chamber, ſaying theſe words, Miſtreſs Lewes, I am come to bring you tidings of the Queens pleaſure, the which is, that you ſhall live no longer but one hour in this world: therefore pepare your ſelf thereunto, it ſtandeth you in hand. At which words, being ſo groſſly uttered, and ſo ſuddenly by ſuch an officer as he was ſhee was ſomwhat abaſhed. Wherefore one of her Friends and acquaintance ſtanding by, ſaid theſe words, Miſtreſs Lewes, you have great cauſe to praiſe God, who will vouchſafe ſo ſpeedily to take you out of this world, and make you worthy to be a witneſs of his truth, and to bear record unto Chriſt, that he is the onely Saviour.

After the which words ſpoken thus, ſhee ſaid, Maſter Sheriff your meſſage is welcome to me, and I thank my God

Anno 1557.

God that he will make me worthy to Adventure my Life in his quarrel. And thus Mr. Sheriff departed: and within the ſpace of one hour he came again, cum gladis & fuſtibus; and when he came up into the Chamber, one of her Friends deſired him to give him leave to go with her to the ſtake, and to comfort her, the which the Sheriff granted at that time, but afterwards he was ſore troubled for the ſame, when ſhe was dead.

Joyce Lewes brought to the place of Martyrdom.

Now when ſhe was brought through the Town with a number of Bill-men, a great multitude of People being preſent, ſhe being led by two of her Friends (which were Mr. Michael Reniger, and Mr. Auguſtine Bernher) ſhe was brought to the place of execution: and becauſe the place was far off, and the throng of the People great, and ſhe not acquainted with the fleſh ayre (being ſo long in priſon) one of her Friends ſent a meſſenger to the Sheriffs Houſe for ſome drink; and after ſhe had prayed three ſeveral times, in the which prayer ſhe deſired God moſt inſtantly to aboliſh the Idolatrous Maſs, and to deliver this Realm from Papiſtry (at the end of the which prayers the moſt part of the people cryed Amen, yea, even the Sheriff that ſtood hard by her, ready to caſt her in the fire for not allowing the Maſs, at this her prayer ſaid with the reſt of the the people, Amen;) when ſhe had thus prayed, ſhe took the Cup into her Hands, ſaying; I drinke to all them that unfainedly love the Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt, and with for the aboliſhment of Papiſtry. When ſhe had drunk, they that were her Friends drank alſo. After that a great number, ſpecially the Women of the Town did drink with her; which afterward were put to open penance in the Church by the cruel Papiſts, for drinking with her.

Women put to penance for pledging Joyce Lewes.

When ſhe was tied to the ſtake with the Chain ſhe ſhewed ſuch a chearfulneſs, that it paſſed mans reaſon, being ſo well coloured in her face, and being ſo patient, that the moſt part of them that had honeſt hearts did lament, and even with tears bewayl the Tyranny of the Papiſts. When the fire was ſet upon her, ſhe neither ſtruggled nor ſtirred, but onely lifted up her hands towards Heaven, being dead very ſpeedily: for the Under-Sheriff at the requeſt of her Friends had provided ſuch ſtuff, by the which ſhe was ſuddenly diſpatched out of this miſerable world.

The Martyrdom of Miſtreſs Joyce Lewes.

This amongſt other things may not be fogotten, that the Papiſts had appointed ſome to rail upon her openly, and to revile her, both as ſhe went to the place of execution, and alſo when ſhe came at the ſtake. Amongſt others there was an old Prieſt, which had a pair of writing Tables to note both the names of the Women that drank of her Cup (as before you heard,) and alſo deſcribed her Friends by their apparel, for preſently he could not learn their names, and afterwards enquired for their names: and ſo immediately after Proceſs was ſent out for them, both to Coventry and other places: but God whoſe providence ſleeps not, did defend them from the hands of theſe cruel tyrants. Unto the which God, with the Son and the Holy Ghoſt, be honour and glory for ever, Amen.

Septemb. 17. The ſtory of Ralph Allerton.

IN ſearching out the certain number of the faithful Martyrs of God that ſuffered within the time and Raign of Queen Mary; I find, that about the ſeventeenth day of Septemb. were burned at Iſlington, nigh unto London, theſe four conſtant Profeſſors of Chriſt, Ralph Allerton, James Auſtoo, Margery Auſtoo, his Wife, and Richard Roth. Among the which, it firſt appeareth that this Ralph Allerton was, more then a year before his condemnation, apprehended and brought before the Lord Darcy of Chich. and was there accuſed, as wel for that he would not conſent and come unto the Idolatry and Superſtition which then was uſed, as alſo that he had by preaching enticed others to do the like.

Being then hereupon examined, hee confeſſed that he coming into his Pariſh of Bentley, and ſeeing the People ſitting there, either gazing about, or elſe talking together, he exhorted them that they would fall unto prayer, and meditation of Gods moſt Holy Word, and not ſit ſtill idlely. Whereunto they willingly conſented. Then after prayer ended, he read unto them a Chapter of the New Teſtament, and ſo departed.

In the which exerciſe he continued until Candlemas, and then being informed that he might not ſo do by the Law (for that he was no Prieſt or Miniſter) he left off, and kept himſelf cloſe in his houſe until Eaſter then next after. At what time, certain Sworn Men for the inquiry of ſuch matters came unto his houſe, and attached him for reading in the Pariſh of Welley.

Ralph Allerton attached.

But when they underſtood that he had read but once, and that it was of obedience (whereunto he earneſtly moved the People) they let him for that time depart. Notwithſtanding for fear of their cruelty, he was not long after conſtrained to forſake his own houſe, and keep himſelf in Woods, Barns, and other ſolitary places, until the time of his Apprehenſion.

After this examination, the Lord Darcy ſent him up to the Councel; but they (not minding to trouble themſelves with him unto Boner who by threatnings and other ſubtle means, ſo abuſed the ſimple and fearful heart of this Man (as yet not throughly ſtayd upon the ayd and help of God) that within ſhort time he won him to his moſt wicked will, and made him openly at Pauls Croſs to revoke and recant his former profeſſion, and thereupon ſet him at liberty of Body. Which yet brought ſuch a bondage and Terrour of Soul and Conſcience, and ſo caſt him down, that except the Lord (whoſe mercies are immeaſurable) had ſupported and lift him up again; he had periſhed for ever.

But the Lord, who never ſuffereth his elect Children utterly to fall, caſting his pitiful eyes upon his loſt ſheep, with his merciful and Fatherly Chaſtiſements, did (with Peter) raiſe him up again, giving unto him not onely hearty and unfained repentance, but alſo a moſt conſtant boldneſs to profeſs again (even unto the Death) his moſt holy name and glorious Goſpel, Wherefore at the procurement of one Thomas Tye Prieſt, ſometime an earneſt profeſſor of Chriſt, but now a fierce Perſecutor of the ſame (as appeareth more at large before in the hiſtory of William Munt and his wife) he was again apprehended, and ſet up again unto Boner, before whom he was the eighth day of April, and ſundry other times elſe examined. The report of which examination, written by his own hand with Blood for lack of other ink, hereafter followeth.

Tho. Tye. Prieſt, perſecutor and promoter.

The Examination of Ralph Allerton at his ſecond apprehenſion, appearing before the Biſhop of London at Fulham, the eighth day of April, Anno 1557. written by himſelf, with his own Blood,

The examination of Ralph Allerton.

BOner. Ah ſirrah, how chanceth it that you are come hither again on this faſhion? I dare ſay thou art accuſed wrongfully.

Ralph. Yea my Lord ſo I am. For if I were guilty of ſuch things as I am accuſed of, then I would be very ſorry.

Boner. By Saint Mary that is not well done. But let me hear, Art thou an honeſt Man? for if I can prove no Hereſie by thee, then ſhall thine Accuſers do thee no harm at all. Go to, let me hear thee: for I did not believe the tale to be true.

Ralph. My Lord, who did accuſe me? I pray you let me know, and what is mine accuſation, that I may anſwer thereunto.

Boner. Ah, wilt thou ſo? Before God if thou haſt not diſſembled, then thou needeſt not be afraid, nor aſhamed to anſwer for thy ſelf. But tell me in Faith, haſt thou not diſſembled.

Ralph. If I cannot have mine accuſers to accuſe me before you, my Conſcience doth conſtrain me to accuſe my ſelf before you: For I confeſs that I have grievouſly offended God in my diſſimulation at my laſt being before your Lordſhip, for the which I am right ſorry, as God knoweth.

Boner. Wherein I pray thee, didſt thou diſſemble, when thou waſt before me?

Ralph. Forſooth my Lord, if your Lordſhip remember, I did ſet my hand upon a certain writing, the contents whereof (as I remember) were, That I did believe in all things as the Catholick Church teacheth, &c. In the which I did not diſcloſe my mind, but ſhamefully diſſembled, becauſe I made no difference between the True Church and the untrue Church.

Boner,

Boner. Nay, but I pray thee let me hear more of this gear. For I fear me thou wilt ſmell of an Heretick anon. Which is the True Church, as thou ſayeſt? Doſt thou not call the Hereticks Church the True Church, or the Catholick Church of Chriſt? Now which of theſe two are the True Church, ſayſt thou? Go to, for in Faith I will know of thee ere I leave thee.

Ralph. As concerning the Church of Hereticks, I utterly abhor the ſame, as deteſtable and abominable before God, with all their enormities and Hereſies: and the Church Catholick is it that I onely embrace whoſe Doctrine is ſincere, pure and true.

Boner. By S. Auguſtine, but that is well ſaid of thee. For by God Almighty, if thou hadſt allowed the Church of Hereticks, I would have burned thee with fire for thy labour.

Morton. Then ſaid one Morton a Prieſt, My Lord, you know not yet what Church it is that he calleth Catholick. I warrant you he meaneth naughtily enough.

Boner. Think you ſo? Now by our bleſſed Lady, if it be ſo, he might have deceived me. How ſay you, ſirrah, which is the Catholick Church?

Ralph. Even that which hath received the wholſome ſound, ſpoken of Eſay, David, Malachy, and Paul, with many other more. The which ſound, as it is written, hath gone throughout all the Earth in every place, and unto the ends of the world.

Boner. Yea, thou ſaieſt true before God. For this is the ſound that hath gone throughout all Chriſtendom, and he that believeth not the ſound of the Holy Church, as St. Cyprian ſaith, doth err. For he ſaith, that whoſoever is out of the Church, is like unto them that were out of Noahs ſhip when the flood came upon all the whole world; ſo that the Ark of Noah is likened unto the Church: and therefore thou haſt well ſaid in thy confeſſion. For the Church is not alone in Germany, nor was here in England in the time of the late Schiſms, as the Hereticks do affirm. For if the Church ſhould be there alone, then were Chriſt a lyar. For he promiſed that the Holy Ghoſt ſhould come to us, lead us unto all truth, yea, and remain with us unto the end of the world. So now if we will take Chriſt for a true ſayer, then muſt we needs affirm, that the way which is taught in France, Spain, Italy, Flanders, Denmark, Scotland, and all Chriſtendom over, muſt needs be the True Catholick Church.

Ralph. My Lord, if you remember, I ſpake of all the world, as it is written, and not of all Chriſtendom only, as me thinks your Lordſhip taketh it, the which kind of ſpeaking you do not find in all the Bible. For ſure I am, that the Goſpel hath been both preached and perſecuted in all Lands: Firſt, in Jewry by the Scribes and Phariſees, and ſince that time by Nero, Diocleſian, and ſuch like, and now here in theſe our days by your Lordſhip knoweth whom. For truth it is that the Church which you call Catholick, is none otherwiſe Catholick then was figured in Cain, obſerved of Jeroboam, Ahab, Jezabel, Nabuchodonoſor, Antiochus, Herod, with innumerable more of the like: and as both Daniel and Eſdras make mention of theſe laſt days by a plain prophecy, and now fulfilled, as appeareth, and affirmed by our Saviour Chriſt and his Apoſtles, ſaying; There ſhall come grievous Wolves to devour the flock.

He meaneth belike Boner and his fellows.

Boner. Now, by the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar, Mr. Morton, he is the rankeſt Heretick that ever came before me. How ſay you? have you heard the like?

Morton. I thought what he was my Lord at the firſt, I.

Boner. Now by all Hallowes thou ſhalt be burnt with fire for thy lying, thou whoreſon varlet and prick-louſe thou. Doſt thou find a prophecy in Daniel of us? Nay, you knave, it is of you that he ſpeaketh of, and of your falſe pretenſed holineſs. Go to, let me hear what is the ſaying of Eſdras, and take heed ye make not a lie, I adviſe you.

Ralph. The ſaying of Eſdras is this; The heat of a great multitude is kindled over you, and they ſhall take away certain of you, & feed the Idols with you, and he that conſenteth unto them, ſhall be had in deriſion, laughed to ſcorn, and troden under foot: yea they ſhall be like Mad Men, for they ſhall ſpare no Man; they ſhall ſpoil and waſte ſuch as fear the Lord, &c.

4. Eſdras 16.

Boner. And have you taken this thing to make your Market good? Ah ſirrah, wilt thou ſo? by my Faith a pretty inſtruction, and a neceſſary thing to be taught among the People. By my troth I think there be more of this opinion. I pray thee tell me: Is there any that underſtandeth this Scripture on this faſhion? Before God, I think there be none in all England, but thou.

Anno 1557.

Ralph. Yes, my Lord, there are in England three Religions.

Three ſorts of Religion in England.

Boner. Sayeſt thou ſo? which be thoſe three?

Ralph. The firſt is that which you hold, the ſecond is clean contrary to the ſame; and the third is a Neuter, being indifferent: that is to ſay, obſerving all things that are commanded outwardly, as though he were of your part, his heart being ſet wholly againſt the ſame.

Boner. And of theſe three which art thou? for now thou muſt needs be one of them.

Ralph. Yea, my Lord, I am of one of them; and that which I am of, is even that which is contrary to that which you teach to be believed under pain of Death.

Boner. Ah ſir, you were here with me at Fulham, and had good chear, yea and mony in your purſe when you went away, and by my Faith I had a favour unto thee, but now I ſee thou wilt be a naughty knave. Why, wilt thou take upon thee to read the Scripture, and canſt underſtand never a word? For thou haſt brought a text of Scripture, the which maketh clean againſt thee. For Eſdras ſpeaketh of the multitude of you Hereticks, declaring your hate againſt the Catholick Church, making the ſimple or idle people believe, that all is Idolatry that we do, and ſo entice them away until you have overcom them.

Ralph. Nay, not ſo my Lord. For he maketh it more plain, and ſaith on this wiſe; They ſhall take away their goods, and put them out of their houſes, and then ſhall it be known who are my choſen (ſaith the Lord) for they ſhall be tried, as the ſilver or gold in the fire. And we ſee it ſo come to paſs, even as he hath ſaid. For who is not now driven from houſe and home, yea and his goods taken up for other Men that never ſweat for them, if he do not obſerve as you command and ſet forth? Or elſe, if he be taken, then muſt he either deny the truth, as I did, in diſſembling, or elſe he ſhall be ſure to be tried, as Eſdras ſaith, even as the gold is tried in the fire. Whereby all the world may know, that you are the bloody Church, figured in Cain the Tyrant, neither yet are ye able to avoid it.

The place of Eſdras explained.

Morton. I promiſe you my Lord, I like him better now than ever I did, when he was here before you the other time. For then he did but diſſemble, as I perceived well enough; but now me think he ſpeaketh plainly.

Boner. Marry, ſir, as you ſay indeed, he is plain. For he is a plain Heretick, and ſhall be burned. Have the knave away. Let him be carried to Little-eaſe at London until I come.

Ralph. And ſo was I carried to London unto Little-eaſe, and there remained that night, and on the next morrow I appeared before him again, the Dean of Pauls and the Chancellor of London being preſent. Then were brought forth certain writings that I had ſet my hand unto.

Boner. Come on your ways, ſirrah. Is not this your hand, and this, and this?

Allerton charged with his own hand writing.

Ralph. Yea, they are my hand all of them; I confeſs the ſame, neither yet will I deny any thing that I have ſet my hand unto. But if I have ſet my hand to any thing that is not lawful, therefore am I ſorry. Nevertheleſs, my hand I will not deny to be my doing.

Boner. Well ſaid, Now ye muſt tell me, Were you never at the Church ſince you went from me, at Maſs Mattens? &c.

Ralph. No; my Lord, not at Maſs, Mattens, nor any other ſtrange worſhipping of God.

Boner. Yea, ſayeſt thou ſo? Waſt thou neither at thine own Pariſh Church, nor at any other? And doſt thou alſo ſay, that it is a ſtrange worſhipping? Why, I pray thee, wilt thou not believe the Scripture to be true?

Ralph.

Ann. 1557.

Ralph. Yea, my Lord, I believe the Scripture to be true, and in the defence of the ſame I intend to give my life, rather then I will deny any part thereof, God willing.

Bun. My Lord, this fellow will be an honeſt man, I hear by him. He will not ſtand in his opinion; for he ſhewеth himſelf gentle and patient in his talk.

Boner, Oh, he is a glorious knave. His painted terms ſhall no more deceive me. Ah whoreſon Prick-louſe, doth not Chriſt ſay, This is my Body? And how dareſt thou deny theſe words, for to ſay, as I have a writing to ſhew, and thine own hand at the ſame? Let me ſee, wilt thou deny thus? Is not this thine own hand?

Ralph. Yes, my Lord, it is my own hand, neither am I aſhamed thereof, becauſe my confeſſion therein is a agreeable to Gods Word. And whereas you do lay unto my charge, that I ſhould deny the Words of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt; Oh, good Lord! from whence cometh this raſh, haſty, and untrue judgment? Forſooth not from the Spirit of Truth; for he leadeth Men into all Truth, and is not the Father of lyars. Wherupon ſhould your Lordſhip gather or ſay of me ſo diffamouſly? Wherefore, I beſeech you, if I deny the Scriptures Canonical, or any part thereof, then let me die.

Sir Thomas Tyr, lately turned to his vomit, thirſteth for Blood.

Tye the Prieſt. My Lord, he is a very ſeditious fellow, and perſwadeth other men to do as he himſelf doth, contrary to the order appointed by the Queens Highneſs and the Clergy of this Realm. For a great ſort of the Pariſh will be gathered one day to one place, and another day to another place to hear him; ſo that very few come to the Church to hear divine Service: and this was not only before that he was taken and brought unto the Council, but alſo ſince his return home again, he hath done much harm. For where both Men and Women were honeſtly diſpoſed before, by Saint Anne now are they as ill as he almoſt. And furthermore, he was not aſhamed to withſtand me before all the Pariſh, ſaying, that we were of the malignant Church of Antichriſt, and not of the True Church of Chriſt, alledging a great many of Scriptures to ſerve for his purpoſe, ſaying; Good People, take heed, and beware of theſe Blood-thirſty Dogs, &c. And then I commanded the Conſtable to apprehend him, and ſo he did. Nevertheleſs, after this apprehenſion, the Conſtable let him go about his buſineſs all the next day, ſo that without putting in of Sureties, he let him go into Suffolk and other places, for no goodneſs, I warrant you my Lord: it were Alms to teach ſuch Officers their duty, how they ſhould let ſuch Rebels go at their own liberty, after that they be apprehended and taken, but to keep them faſt in the Stocks until they bring them before a Juſtice.

Allerton apprehended, contrary to the Laws of the Realm.

Ralph. As I ſaid before, ſo ſay I now again; thou art not of the Church of Chriſt, and that will I prove, if I may be ſuffered. And where you ſaid, that you commanded the Conſtable to apprehend me, you did ſo indeed, contrary to the Laws of this Realm, having neither to lay unto my charge, Treaſon, Felony, nor Murther: No, neither had you Precept, Proceſs, nor Warrant to ſerve on me; and therefore I ſay, without a Law was I apprehended. And whereas you ſeek to trouble the Conſtable, becauſe he kept me not in the Stocks three days and three nights, it doth ſhew in part what you are. And my going into Suffolk was not for any evil, but only to buy half a Buſhel of Corn for Bread for my poor Wife and Children, knowing that I had no long time to tarry with them. But if I had run away, then you would ſurely have laid ſomewhat to his charge.

Boner. Go to, thou art a Merchant indeed. Ah ſirrah, before God thou ſhalt be burnt with fire. Thou knoweſt Richard Roth, doeſt thou not? Is he of the ſame mind that thou art of, or no? canſt thou tell?

Ralph. He is of age to anſwer, let him ſpeak for himſelf; for I hear ſay that he is in your houſe.

Bun. Loe what a knave here is. Go Cluny, fetch me Roth hither. By my troth he is a falſe knave; but yet thou art worſe then he. Ah ſirrah, did you not ſet your hand to a writing, the tenor whereof was, that if thou ſhould at any time ſay or do Heretically, then it ſhould be lawfull for me to take thee with a relapſe, and to proceed in ſentence againſt thee?

Allerton charged with relapſe.

Ralph. Yea, that is ſo. But here is to be asked, whether it be ſufficient, that my hand or name in writing be able to give Authority to you or to any other to kill me? For if I by writing can do ſo much, then muſt my Authority be greater then yours. Nevertheleſs, I have neither ſaid nor done heretically, but like a True Chriſtian man have I behaved my ſelf. And ſo I was committed unto priſon again, and the 24. day of the ſame Month, I was brought before the Biſhop, the Lord North, Dr. Story, and others, and after a long talk in Latine amongſt themſelves (unto the which I gave no anſwer, becauſe they ſpake not to me, although they ſpake of me) at the laſt the Biſhop ſaid:

Boner. How ſay you ſirrah? tell me briefly at one word, wilt thou be contented to go to Fulham with me, and there to kneel thee down at Maſs, ſhewing thy ſelf outwardly as though thou didſt it with a good will? Go to, ſpeak.

Ralph. I will not ſay ſo.

Boner. Away with him, away with him.

Allerton brought again before Boner and certain Lords

The ſecond day of May I was brought before the Biſhop, and three Noble Men of the Council, whoſe names I do not remember.

Boner. Lo my Lords, this ſame is the fellow that was ſent unto me from the Council, and did ſubmit himſelf, ſo that I had half a hope of him: but by St. Anne I was always in doubt of him. Nevertheleſs, he was with me, and fared well, and when I delivered him, I gave him money in his purſe. How ſaieſt thou? was it not ſo as I tell my Lords here?

Ralph. Indeed my Lord I had meat and drink enough; but I never came in bed all the while. And at my departing you gave me twelve pence, howbeit I asked none, nor would have done.

A Lord. Be good to him my Lord. He will be an honeſt Man.

Boner. Before God, how ſhould I truſt him? He hath once deceived me already. But ye ſhall hear what he will ſay to the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar. How ſay you ſirrah? after the words of Conſecration be ſpoken by the Prieſt, there remaineth no bread, but the very Body of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, God and Man, and none other ſubſtance, under the form of Bread.

Ralph. Where find you that, my Lord, written?

Boner. Lo Sir. Why? Doth not Chriſt ſay, This is my Body? How ſaieſt thou? Wilt thou deny theſe words of our Saviour Chriſt? Or elſe was he a diſſembler, ſpeaking one thing, and meaning another? Go to, now I have taken you.

Tranſubſtantiation.

Ralph. Yea, my Lord, you have taken me indeed, and will keep me untill you kill me. Howbeit, my Lord, I marvel why you leave out the beginning of the inſtitution of the ſupper of our Lord? For Chriſt ſaid; Take ye, and Eat ye, this is my Body. And if it will pleaſe you to joyn the former words to the latter, then ſhall I make you an anſwer. For ſure I am, that Chriſt was no diſſembler, neither did he ſay one thing, and mean another, Boner. Why? Then muſt thou needs ſay, that it is his Body; for he ſaith it himſelf, and thou confeſſeſt that he will not lie.

Ralph. No, my Lord; he is true, and all men are lyars. Notwithſtanding, I utterly refuſe to take the Words of our Saviour ſo fantaſtically as you teach us to take them: for then ſhould we conſpire with certain Hereticks called the Neſtorians; for they deny that Chriſt had a true natural Body, and ſo me think you do, my Lord. If you will affirm his Body to be there, as you ſay he is, then muſt you needs alſo affirm, that it is a fantaſtical Body; and therefore look to it for Gods ſake, and let theſe words go before; Take ye and Eat ye, without which words the reſt are not ſufficient; but when the worthy receivers do take and Eat, even then are fulfilled the words of our Saviour unto him, or every of them that ſo receiveth.

Bp. Boners Parable.

Boner. Ah, I feel well thou canſt not underſtand theſe words; I will ſhew thee a Parable. If I ſhould ſet a piece of Beef before thee, and ſay; Eat, it is Beef: And then take part of it away, and ſend it to my Cook, and he ſhall change the faſhion thereof, and make it look like Bread: What, wouldſt thou ſay that it were no Beef, becauſe it hath not the faſhion of Beef?

Ralph. Let me underſtand a little further, my Lord; ſhall the Cook add nothing thereunto, nor take any thing therefrom?

Boner. What is that to the matter, whether he do or no, ſo long as the ſhape is changed into another likeneſs?

Eſay 59. Amos 5. Ralph. Ah, will you ſo my Lord? your Sophiſtry will not ſerve; the truth will have the victory nevertheleſs, as Eſay ſaith; He that reſtraineth himſelf from evil, muſt be ſpoiled. And Amos hath ſuch like words alſo: For the Wiſe muſt be fain to hold their peace; ſo wicked a time it is, ſaith he: Nevertheleſs, he that can ſpeak the truth, and will not, ſhall give a ſtrait account for the ſame.

A Doctor. By my Lords leave, here me thinks thou ſpeakeſt like a fool. Wilt thou be a Judge of the Scripture? Nay, thou muſt ſtand to learn, and not to teach; for the whole Congregation hath determined the matter long ago.

A Prieſt. No, by your leave, we have a Church, and not a Congregation. You miſtake that word, Mr Dr.

Ralph. Then ſaid I to my fellow priſoners ſtanding by; My Brethren, do ye not hear how theſe Men help one another? Let us do ſo alſo. But we never came all in together. Then was I carried away for that time. The 19. day of May I was brought before the Biſhop of Rocheſter, and Chicheſter, with others.

B. Rocheſt. Were you a companion of George Eagles, otherwiſe called Trudgeover? My Lord of London telleth me that you were his fellow companion.

Ralph. I know him very well, my Lord.

Rocheſt. By my Faith, I had him once, and then he was as drunk as an Ape, for he ſtank ſo of drink, that I could not abide him; and ſo ſent him away.

Ralph. My Lord, I dare ſay you took your mark amiſs. It was either your ſelf, or ſome of your own company, for he did neither drink Wine, Ale, nor Beer, in a quarter of a year before that time; and therefore it was not he forſooth.

The reſt of mine Examinations you ſhall have when I am condemned, if I can have any time after my coming into Newgate, the which I truſt ſhall touch the matter a great deal more plainly; for the pithy matters are yet unwritten. Thus fare you well good Friends all. Yea, I ſay, farewel for ever in this preſent world. Greet ye one another, and be joyful in the Lord. Salute the good widows among you, with all the reſt of the Congregation in Barfold, and Dedham, and Colcheſter.

This promiſe of his, being either not performed, for that he might not thereto be permitted, or elſe if he did write, the ſame not coming to my hands. I am fain in the reſt of his examinations to follow the only report of the Regiſter; who witneſſeth, that the 15. day of May, Anno 1557. in the Biſhops Palace at London, he was examined upon certain Interrogatories, the contents whereof be theſe.

Articles miniſtred againſt Ralph Allerton.

FIrſt, that he was of the Pariſh of Muchbentley, and ſo of the Dioceſs of London.

Secondly, that the 10. day of January then laſt paſt, Mr. John Morant preaching at Pauls, the ſaid Ralph Allerton did there openly ſubmit himſelf unto the Church of Rome, with the Rites and Ceremonies thereof.

Thirdly, that he did conſent and ſubſcribe as well unto the ſame ſubmiſſion, as alſo to one other bill, in the which he granted, that if he ſhould at any time turn again unto his former opinions, it ſhould be then lawful for the Biſhop immediately to denounce and adjudge him as an Heretick.

Fourthly, that he had ſubſcribed to a bill, wherein he affirmed, that in the Sacrament after the words of Conſecration be ſpoken by the Prieſt there remaineth ſtill material Bread and material Wine; and that he believeth that the Bread is the Bread of thankſgiving, and the memorial of Chriſts Death; and that when he receiveth it, he receiveth the Body of Chriſt ſpiritually in his Soul, but material Bread in ſubſtance.

Fifthly, that he had openly affirmed, and alſo adviſedly ſpoken that which is contained in the ſaid former fourth Article laſt before ſpecified.

Sixthly, that he had ſpoken againſt the Biſhop of Rome, with the Church and See of the ſame, and alſo againſt the 7. Sacraments and other ceremonies and ordinances of the ſame Church, uſed then within this Realm. Anno 1557.

Seventhly, that he had allowed and commended the opinion and faith of Mr. Cranmer, Ridley, and Latimer, and others of late burned within this Realm, and believed that their opinions were good and godly.

Eighthly, that he had divers times affirmed, that the Religion uſed within this Realm, at the time of his apprehenſion, was neither good, nor agreeable to Gods Word, and that he could not conform himſelf thereunto.

Ninthly, that he had affirmed, that the Book of Common Prayer ſet forth in the Reign of King Edward the ſixth, was in all parts good and godly; and that the ſaid Ralph and his company priſoners, did daily uſe amongſt themſelves in priſon ſome part of the Book.

Tenthly, that he had affirmed, that if he were out of priſon, he would not come to Maſs, Mattins, nor Evenſong, nor bear Taper, Candle, or Palm, nor go in Proceſſion, nor would receive Holy Water, Holy Bread, Aſhes, or Pax, or any other ceremony of the Church then uſed within this Realm.

Eleventhly, that he had affirmed, that if he were at liberty he would not confeſs his ſins to any Prieſt, nor receive abſolution of him; nor yet would receive the Sacrament of the Altar, as it was then uſed.

Twelfthly, that he had affirmed, that praying to Saints and prayers for the Dead, were neither good nor profitable, and that a man is not bound to faſt and pray, but at his own will and pleaſure; neither that it is lawful to reſerve the Sacrament, or to worſhip it.

Thirteenthly, that the ſaid Allerton hath, according to theſe his affirmations, abſtained and refuſed to come unto his Pariſh Church ever ſince the 10. day of January laſt, or to uſe, receive, or allow any ceremonies, Sacraments, or other rites then uſed in the Church.

To all the Articles he anſwered affirmatively, denying preciſely none of them; ſaving to this clauſe contained in the twelfth Article, that a Man is not bound to faſt and pray but at his own will and pleaſure, he ſaid that he had affirmed no ſuch thing, but he confeſſed that he had not faſted nor prayed ſo oft as he was bound to do. And unto this anſwer he alſo ſubſcribed in this ſort.

Except it be proved otherwiſe by the Holy Scripture, I do affirm theſe Articles to be true. By me Ralph Allerton.

The next Examination was the fourth day of July; The Acts whereof, becauſe they do appear more amply in his other examination, had the 10. day of September, I do here omit, giving you farther to underſtand, that upon the ſeventh day of the ſame month of July, he was brought before Dr. Darbiſhire in the Biſhops Palace, who examined him again upon the former Articles, and after perſwaded him to recant, threatning him that otherwiſe he ſhould be burned. To whom he boldly anſwered, I would I might be condemned even to morrow; for I perceive my Lord (meaning Boner) doth nothing but ſeek Mens Blood. Upon which ſaying Darbiſhire committed him again to priſon, and the 10. day of September the Biſhop cauſed him (with the other three abovenamed) to be brought unto Fulham, and there in his private Chappel within his houſe, he judicially propounded unto him certain other new Articles; of the which, the Tenors of the firſt, fifth, ſixth, and ſeventh are already mentioned in the ſecond, third, and fourth former objections: As for the reſt, the contents thereof here follow,

Thou Ralph Allerton canſt not deny, but that the Information given againſt thee, and remaining now in the Acts of this Court of thine Ordinary, Edmund Biſhop of London, was and is a True Information.

Perſecutors. Information given againſt Ralph Allerton, by Sir Thomas Tye Prieſt, a wicked Promoter.

This Information was given by Thomas Tye, Curate of Bentley (of whom you have already heard) and certain other of the ſame Pariſh and affinity: as namely,

John

Anno 1557.

John Painter, William Harris, John Barker, John Carter, Thomas Candeler, Jeffry Beſtwood, John Richard, Richard Meer.

The effect whereof was, that one Lawrence Edwards of Benfey aforeſaid, had a Child that was unchriſtened, and being demanded by the ſaid Tye, why his Child was not baptized, he made anſwer it ſhould be when he could find one of his Religion (meaning a true profeſſor of Chriſts Goſpel.) Whereat the Curate ſaid, Ah, ye have had ſome Inſtructer that hath ſchooled you of late. Yea (quoth the ſaid Edwards) that I have, and if your Doctrine be better then his, then I will believe you; and therewithal fondly offered to fetch him.

Whereupon the Conſtable going with him, they brought before the ſaid Curate the ſaid Ralph Allerton; of whom in this Information they make this report that he was a Seditious perſon who ſince his coming down from the Biſhop, had ſet upon the Conſtables door certain Seditious Letters, moving and perſwading thereby the People to follow his malicious diſobedience; and that theſe his perſwaſions had taken effect in many: And farther, that the ſaid Ralph Allerton (the Curate asking him whether he had inſtructed this Lawrence Edwards, that it was againſt Gods Commandment to enter into the Church) caſting abroad his hands, ſhould ſay; Oh good People, now is fulfilled the ſaying of the godly Prieſt and Prophet Eſdras, who ſaith, 4. Eſd. 16. The fire of a multitude is kindled againſt a few: they have taken away their honſes, and ſpoiled their goods, &c. Which of you all have not ſeen this day? who is he here amongſt you, that ſeeth not all theſe things done upon us this day? The Church which they call us unto, is the Church of Antichriſt, a perſecuting Church, and the Church malignant. With theſe and many more words (ſaid they, moſt maliciouſly and falſly alledged out of the Scriptures) he thus perſwaded a great multitude there preſent (as much as in him lay) unto diſobedience. For the which cauſe the Conſtables did then apprehend him.

3. Item, thou Ralph Allerton canſt not deny, but that the Letter ſent unto me by my Lord Darcy, beginning with theſe words (Pleaſeth it your Lordſhip, &c.) was thine one Letter, and was ſubſcribed by thine own hand.

The contents of the Letter mentioned in this Article, and written by Allerton unto the Lord Darcy, was a Confeſſion of his demeanour before his firſt apprehenſion, the effect and purport whereof, becauſe it appeareth in the beginning of his Hiſtory, I do here omit.

4. Item, thou Ralph Allerton canſt not deny, but that the other Letter, ſent alſo to me from my ſaid Lord Darcy, beginning thus (Pleaſeth it your Lordſhip, &c.) and ending with thoſe words (whenſoever it be) is thine own very Letter, and ſubſcribed with thine own hand.

This was alſo another Letter written by him unto the Lord Darcy, the Contents whereof were, that where the ſaid Lord had commanded him to declare where he had been ever ſince Whitſontide laſt before his firſt apprehenſion, this was to certifie his Lordſhip, that he was not able ſo to do, otherwiſe then as he had already ſhewed him by his former Letters. And moreover, whereas he charged him to have read unto the People abroad in the Woods, he certified him that he did never read any thing abroad, ſaving once when he was in the Company of George Eagles and others, Richard Roth took a writing out of his boſom, and deſired the ſaid Ralph to read it, which requeſt he then accompliſhed; and demanding of him whoſe doing the ſame was, the ſaid Roth told that it was Maſter Crammers, late Archbiſhop of Canterbury; and farther he could not ſhew him. Nevertheleſs, he was ready and willing to ſuffer ſuch puniſhment as his Lordſhip ſhould think meet, deſiring yet that the ſame might be with favour and mercy, although he feared neither puniſhment nor death, praying the Lord, that it might be in his fear, whenſoever it ſhould be.

8. Item, thou Ralph Allerton canſt not deny, but that the Letters written with Blood, beginning with theſe words (Grace, mercy, and peace, &c. and ending thus, (Farewel in God) remaining now regiſtred in the Acts of this Court, were written voluntarily with thine own hand.

HE wrote this Letter in the Priſon with Blood for lack of other Ink, and did mean to ſend the ſame unto Agnes Smith alias Silverſide, at that time impriſoned, and afterward burned at Colcheſter for the teſtimony of the Goſpel of Chriſt, as before is mentioned. The Copy of which Letter here enſueth.

A Letter written by Ralph Allerton, unto Agnes Smith Widow.

A Letter of Ralph Allerton.

GRace, mercy and peace from God the Father, and from our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, with the aſſiſtance of Gods holy Spirit, and the abundant health both of Soul and Body, I wiſh unto you, as to my own Soul, as God knoweth, who is the Searcher of all ſecrets.

Foraſmuch as it hath pleaſed Almighty God of his infinite mercy to call me to the ſtate of grace, to ſuffer Martyrdom for Jeſus Chriſts ſake, although heretofore I have moſt negligently dallied therewith; and therefore far unworthy I am of ſuch an high benefit, to be crowned with the moſt joyful Crown of Martyrdom: Nevertheleſs, it hath pleaſed God not ſo to leave me, but hath raiſed me up again according to his promiſe, which ſaith; Although he fall, yet ſhall he not be hurt: For the Lord upholdeth him with his hand, Pſal. 37. Whereby we perceive Gods election to be moſt ſure, for undoubtedly he will preſerve all thoſe that are appointed to die. And as he hath begun this work in me, even ſo do I believe that he will finiſh the ſame, to his great glory, and to my wealth, through Jeſus Chriſt, So be it.

Dearly beloved Siſter (I am conſtrained ſo to call you, becauſe of your conſtant Faith and love unfained) conſider, that if we be the true Servants of Chriſt, then may not we in any wiſe make agreement with his enemy Antichriſt. For there is no concord and agreement between them, ſaith the Scriptures, and a man cannot ſerve two Maſters, ſaith Chriſt. And alſo it is prefigured unto us in the old Law, whereas the People of God were moſt ſtraitly commanded that they ſhould not mingle themſelves with the ungodly Heathen, and were alſo forbidden to eat, drink, or to marry with them. For as often as they did either marry unto their Sons, or take their Daughters unto them, or to their Sons, even ſo oft came the great and heavy wrath of God upon his own People, to overthrow both them and all their Cities, with the holy Sanctuary of God; and brought in ſtrange Princes to raign over them, and wicked Rulers to govern them, ſo that they were ſure of Hunger, Sword, Peſtilence, and wild Beaſts to devour them. Which plagues never ceaſed, until the good People of God were clean ſeparated from the wicked Idolatrous People.

Oh dearly beloved, this was written for our learning that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope. And is it not in like caſe hapned now in this Realm of England? For now are the People of God had in deriſion, and troden under foot, and the Cities, Towns, and Houſes where they dwelt, are inhabited with them that have no right thereunto, and the true owners are ſpoiled of their labours: yea, and the holy Sanctuary of Gods moſt bleſſed Word is laid deſolate and waſt, ſo that the very Foxes run over it, &c. yet is it the food of our Souls, the Lantern of our feet, and the Light unto our paths; and where it is not preached, the People periſh. But the Prophet ſaith, Eſay 59. He that refraineth himſelf from evil, muſt be ſpoiled. Why ſhould men then be abaſhed to be ſpoiled, ſeeing that it is told us before, that it muſt ſo happen unto them that refrain from evil? And thus I bid you farewel in God.

R. A.

Item, thou Ralph Allerton, canſt not deny, but that the Letters written with Blood, beginning with theſe words in the over part thereof: (The Angel of God, &c.) and ended thus (Be with you, Amen.) and having alſo this Poſtſcript (Do ye ſuppoſe that our Brethren &c.) remaining now regiſtred in the Acts of this Court, are thine own hand-writing.

9. For the better underſtanding of this Article, I have alſo here inſerted the Copy of the Letter mentioned in the ſame; which Letter he wrote (by his own Confeſſion) unto Richard Roth, then in danger of the ſubtle ſnares of that bloody Wolf Boner,

A Letter of Ralph Allerton.

THe Angel of God pitch his Tent about us, and defend us in all our ways, Amen, Amen.

O dear Brother, I pray for you; for I hear ſay, that you have been divers times before my Lord in Examination. Wherefore take heed for Gods ſake what the wiſe man teacheth you, and ſhrink not away when you are enticed to confeſs an untruth, for hope of life, but be ready always to give an anſwer of the hope that is in you. For whoſoever confeſſeth Chriſt before men, him will Chriſt alſo confeſs before his Father. But he that is aſhamed to confeſs him before men, ſhall have his reward with them that do deny him. And therefore, dear Brother, go forward: ye have a ready way, ſo fair as ever had any of the Prophets or Apoſtles, or the reſt of our Brethren, the holy Martyrs of God. Therefore covet to go hence with the multitude while the way is full. Alſo (dear Brother) underſtand that I have ſeen your Letter, and although I cannot read it perfectly, yet I partly perceive your meaning therein, and very gladly I would copy it out, with certain comfortable additions thereunto annexed. The which as yet will not be brought to paſs for lack of Paper, until my Lord be gone from hence, and then your requeſt ſhall be accompliſhed, God willing, without delay. Thus fare ye well in God. Our dear Brother and Fellow in tribulation, Robert Allin, ſaluteth you, and the fellowſhip of the Holy Ghoſt be with you, Amen.

Ralph Allerton.

Poſtſcriptum.

Do ye ſuppoſe that our Brethren and Siſters are not yet diſpatched out of this world? I think that either they are dead, or ſhall be within theſe two days.

And for the other Objection yet remaining, and not ſpecified, if it were not more ſomewhat to ſhew the folly of theſe bloody Tyrants (which of ſo ſmall trifles take occaſions to quarrel with the Saints of God) than for any weighty thing therein contained; I would neither trouble you with the reading thereof, nor yet my ſelf with writing. But that ye may judge of them as their doings do give occaſion, I will now proceed in the matter.

Item, thou Ralph Allerton canſt not deny, but confeſſeſt, that the writing of Letters in a little piece of Paper on both ſides of it, with this Sentence following on the one ſide (look at the foot of the Stocks for a Knife) and with this Sentence following upon the other ſide (look between the Poſt and the Wall for two Books and two Epiſtles, leave them here when ye go) remaining now in the Regiſter and Acts of this Court, is voluntarily written by thee Ralph Allerton with thine own hand.

Item, thou Ralph Allerton canſt not deny, but that thou art privy to a certain Writing remaining now in the Regiſter and Acts of this Court, the beginning whereof is with theſe words (I would have men wiſe, &c.) and ending thus (from houſe to houſe.

Item, thou Ralph Allerton canſt not deny, but that thou art privy, and of conſent and maintenance of a certain great Woodknife, a long Sword, a Hook, a Stone and of a Trencher written upon with Chalk, having this Sentence (All is gone and loſt, becauſe of your folly:) of two Boords written upon with Chalk, the one having this Sentence (under the Stone look) and the other having this Sentence (whereas you bid me take heed, I thank you, I truſt in God that I ſhall be at peace with him ſhortly) remaining now Regiſtred in the Acts of this Court.

Anſwers to the Articles. Ex Regiſt.

For anſwer unto all theſe Articles, he granted that the firſt Nine were true, as the Regiſter recordeth. Howbeit, I find noted in the backſide of the Information, ſpecified in the ſecond Article (although croſſed out again) that he denyed ſuch things as were there in the ſame informed againſt him. Wherefore it is not likely that he did ſimply grant unto the contents of the ſecond Article; but rather that he only affirmed, that ſuch an Information was given againſt him, and not that the ſame was true. Anno 1557.

Thus much I thought to warn the Reader of, leſt that in miſtaking his anſwers, it might ſeem, that he granted himſelf to be a ſeditious and a Rebellious Perſon; of which fact he was moſt clear and innocent. And being farther demanded upon the contents of the eighth Article, where he had the Blood he wrote that Letter withal; he ſaid, that Richard Roth, ſometime his Priſon-fellow, did make his Noſe bleed, and thereby he got the Blood wherewith he did then write. The Biſhop again asked him, to whom he would have ſent the ſame. He anſwered unto one Agnes Smith alias Silverſide, of Colcheſter. Why (quoth the Biſhop) Agnes Smith was an Heretick, and is burned for Hereſie. Nay, ſaid Allerton, ſhe is in better caſe, than either I my ſelf, or any of us all. Then being again demanded (upon the ninth Objection) to whom he would have ſent the Letter mentioned in the ſame; he anſwered, that he meant to have ſent it unto Richard Roth, at that preſent ſeparated from him. Whereupon the Biſhop farther inquired, what he meant by theſe words Brethren and Siſters) ſpecified in the ſaid Letter? He anſwered, that he meant thereby, ſuch as were lately condemned at Colcheſter, and were like (at the writing thereof) ſhortly to be burned. Now as for the contents of the tenth and the eleventh Articles he utterly denied them. But to the twelfth he confeſſed, that he writ upon the ſaid Trencher and other Boords, the words mentioned in the ſaid Article, and that he did leave the ſame in the Priſon-houſe, to the intent that Richard Roth ſhould read them. Boner alſo bringing out the Wooden Sword,, mentioned in the ſaid Article, asked him who made it, and for what purpoſe. Whereunto he anſwered, that he was the maker thereof, howbeit for no evil purpoſe. But being idle in the Priſon, and finding there an old Boord, he thought the time better ſpent in making thereof, then to ſit ſtill, and do nothing at all.

The fore-noon being now ſpent, the reſt of this tragedy was deferred until the afternoon. Wherein was miniſtred unto him yet certain other Objections, the tenor whereof was.

Other Objections miſtred to Ralph Allerton.

FIrſt, that he had miſliked the Maſs, calling upon Saints, and carrying the Croſs in Proceſſion, with other their Ceremonies, calling them Idolatry, and alſo had diſſwaded them there-from.

2. Item, that he was much deſirous to have the People believe as he did; and therefore being in Priſon with his Fellows, did ſing Pſalms and other Songs againſt the Sacrament of the Altar, and other Ordinances of the Church, ſo loud that the People abroad might hear them and delight in them.

3. Item, that he had divers times conſpired againſt his Keeper, and had provided things to kill him, and ſo to break the Priſon, and eſcape away.

4. Item, that he had railed againſt the Biſhop, being his Ordinary, calling him a bloody Butcher, Tyrant, and ravening Wolf, and alſo againſt his Officers, eſpecially Cluny his Sumner, calling him Butchers Cur, with other ſuch names.

5. Item, that he had murmured, grudged, diſdained and miſliked, that the Biſhop had proceeded againſt certain of his Dioceſs, and had condemned them as Hereticks, or that he ſhould proceed now againſt him and others yet remaining in errors, notwithſtanding that he and his Chaplains had charitably admoniſhed and exhorted them from the ſame.

6. Item, that he ought faithfully to believe, that there is one Catholick Church, without the which there is no ſalvation; of the which Church Jeſus Chriſt is the very Prieſt and Sacrifice, whoſe Body and Blood is really and truly contained in the Sacrament of the Altar, under the forms of Bread and Wine; the Bread and Wine being by the divine power tranſubſtantiated into his Body and Blood.

7. Item, that he had kept himſelf, and alſo diſtributed to others certain heretical and corrupt Books, condemned and reproved by the Laws of this Realm.

8. Item,

Anno 1557.

8. Item. that he had contrary to the orders and Statutes of this Realm kept Company with that ſeditious Heretick and Traytor, George Eagles, commonly called Trudgeover, and had heard him read in Woods and other places, yet not accuſing but allowing and praiſing him.

Unto which Articles, becauſe they were for the moſt part ſo fooliſh and full of lies, he would in a manner make no anſwer, ſaving he granted that he did miſlike their Maſs and other Ceremonies, becauſe they were wicked and naught. And moreover, he told the Biſhop, that he and his complices did nothing but ſeek how to kill Innocents.

The Biſhop then asked him, whether he would believe in all points touching the Sacrament of the Altar, as is contained in the General Council holden and kept under Innocentius the Third, and therewithal he did read the Decree of the ſaid Council touching the Sacrament.

Whereunto Allerton again made anſwer and ſaid; I believe nothing contained in the ſame Council, neither have I any thing to do therewith; and it were alſo very neceſſary, that no man elſe ſhould have to do therewith.

Then (quoth Boner) thou art of the Opinion that the Hereticks lately burnt at Colcheſter were of.

Yea, ſaid he, I am of their Opinion, and I believe that they be Saints in Heaven.

This done, the Biſhop perceiving that he would not recant, demanded what he had to ſay, why he ſhould not pronounce the Sentence of Condemnation againſt him. To whom he anſwered, Ye ought not to condemn me as an Heretick, for I am a good Chriſtian. But now go to, do as you have already determined: For I ſee right well, that Right and Truth be ſuppreſſed, and cannot appear upon the Earth.

Theſe words ended, the Biſhop pronounced the Sentence of Condemnation, and ſo delivered him unto the temporal Officers: Who reſerved him in their cuſtody untill the 17. day of September, at which time, both he and the other three before mentioned, were all burned, as ye have already heard. Of which other three, becauſe as yet little is ſaid, I will therefore now proceed to declare ſuch cauſe of their cruel deaths, as in the Regiſter is recorded.

James Auſtoo, and Margery his Wife

Examination of James Auſtoo and Margery his Wife.

TOuching the firſt Apprehenſion of theſe two perſons, I find neither occaſion why, neither time, nor manner how: Howbeit, as the days then ſerved, it was no hard or ſtrange matter to fall into the hands of ſuch, as with cruelty perſecuted the true Profeſſors of Gods Goſpel, eſpecially having ſo many Promoters, and unneighbourly neighbours to help them forwards. By which kind of People, it is not unlike theſe two godly yoke-fellows were accuſed and taken; and being once delivered into the pitileſs handling of Boner, their Examinations (ye may be ſure) were not long deferred. For the 16. day of July 1557. they were brought before him into his place at London. Where firſt he demanded of the ſaid James Auſtoo (amongſt other queſtions) where he had been confeſſed in Lent, and whether he received the Sacrament of the Altar at Eaſter, or not?

To whom he anſwered, That indeed he had been confeſſed of the Curate of Alhallows Barking, nigh to the Tower of London, but that he had not received the Sacrament of the Altar; for he defied it from the bottom of his heart.

Why (quoth the Biſhop) doſt thou not believe, that in the Sacrament of the Altar there is the true Body and Blood of Chriſt?

No, ſaid Auſtoo, not in the Sacrament of the Altar, but in the Supper of the Lord, to the Faithful Receiver is the very Body and Blood of Chriſt by Faith.

Boner not well pleaſed with this talk, asked then the Wife, how ſhe did like the Religion then uſed in this Church of England?

She anſwered, that ſhe believed, that the ſame was not according to Gods Word, but falſe and corrupted, and that they which did go thereunto, did it more for fear of the Law, than otherwiſe.

Then he again asked her, if ſhe would go to the Church and hear Maſs, and pray for the Proſperous eſtate of the King, being then abroad in his Affairs.

Whereunto ſhe ſaid, that ſhe defied the Maſs with all her heart, and that ſhe would not come into any Church wherein were Idols.

After this the Biſhop objected unto them certain Articles, to the number of eighteen. The Tenor whereof (becauſe they touch only ſuch common and trifling matters as are already mentioned in divers and ſundry places before) I do here for brevities ſake omit and paſs over; giving you yet this much to underſtand, that in the matters of Faith they were as ſound, and anſwered as truly (God be therefore praiſed) as ever any did, eſpecially the Woman, to whom the Lord had given the greater knowledge, and more ferventneſs of Spirit. Notwithſtanding according to the meaſure of grace that God gave them, they both ſtood moſt firmly unto the truth. And therefore to conclude, the tenth day of September they were (with Ralph Allerton, of whom ye have heard) brought again before the Biſhop within his Chappel at Fulham, where he ſpeaking unto them, ſaid firſt on this wiſe; Auſtoo, doſt thou know where thou art now, and in what place, and before whom, and what thou haſt to do?

Yea (quoth Auſtoo) I know where I am: For I am in an Idols Temple.

After which words, their Articles being again read, and their Conſtancy in Faith perceived, Boner pronounced againſt either of them ſeverally the Sentence of Condemnation, and delivering them unto the Sheriff there preſent, did rid his hands (as he thought) of them; but the Lord in the end will judge that: to whom I refer his cauſe.

Mar. Auſtoo terrified in Priſon.

It ſo happened upon a night, that as this Margery Auſtoo was in the Biſhops Priſon (which Priſon I ſuppoſe was his Dog-Kennel; for it was, as is reported, under a pair of Stairs,) by the Biſhops procurement there was ſent a ſtout Champion (as appeared) about twelve of the Clock at night, who ſuddenly opened the door, and with a Knife drawn, or ready prepared, fell upon her, to the intent to have cut her Throat. Which ſhe by reaſon of the clearneſs of the Moon perceiving, and calling unto God for help, he (but who it was ſhe knew not) giving a grunt, and fearing belike to commit ſo cruel a deed, departed his ways without any more hurt doing.

The next night following, they cauſed a great rumbling to be made over her head, which ſeemed to her to have been ſome great Thunder, which they did to have feared her out of her wits, but yet, thanks be to God, they miſſed of their purpoſe.

Richard Roth.

Examination of R. Roth.

IN the godly fellowſhip of the forenamed three Martyrs, was alſo this Richard Roth, as is already ſpecified. Who being apprehended, and brought up unto the Biſhop of London, was by him examined the fourth day of July; at what time the Biſhop did earneſtly travel to induce him to believe that there were ſeven Sacraments in Chriſts Church, and that in the Sacrament of the Altar (after the words of Conſecration duly ſpoken) there remained the very ſubſtance of Chriſts Body and Blood, and none other. Whereunto (at that preſent) he made only this anſwer; that if the Scripture did ſo teach him, and that he might be by the ſame ſo perſwaded, he would ſo believe, otherwiſe not. But at another Examination (which was the 9. day of September) he declared plainly, that in the ſaid Sacrament of the Altar as it was then uſed there was not the very Body and Blood of Chriſt, but that it was a dead God, and that the Maſs was deteſtable, and contrary to Gods holy word and will, from the which Faith and Opinion he would not go or decline.

The next day, being the tenth day of the ſame month of September, the Biſhop at his houſe at Fulham (by way of an Article) laid and objected againſt him; that he was a comforter and boldner of Hereticks: and therefore had written a Letter to that effect unto certain that were burned at Colcheſter; the Copy whereof enſueth.

LIBRARY OF THE ASIATIC SOCIETY

A Letter written by Richard Roth, unto certain Brethren and Siſters in Chriſt, condemned at Colcheſter, and ready to be burned for the Teſtimony of the Truth.

A Letter of R. Roth.

O Dear Brethren and Siſters, how much have you to rejoyce in God, that he hath given you ſuch Faith to overcome this Blood-thirſty Tyrant thus farr? and no doubt he that hath begun that good work in you, will fulfil it unto the end. O dear hearts in Chriſt, what a Crown of glory ſhall ye receive with Chriſt in the Kingdom of God? Oh that it had been the good will of God that I had been ready to have gone with you. For I lie in my Lords Little-eaſe in the day, and in the night I lie in the Cole-houſe, from Ralph Allerton or any other: and we look every day when we ſhall be condemned. For he ſaid, that I ſhould be burned within ten days before Eaſter; but I lie ſtill at the Pools brink, and every man goeth in before me: but we abide patiently the Lords leiſure, with many bonds, in fetters and ſtocks; by the which we have received great joy in God. And now fare you well dear Brethren and Siſters, in this world, but I truſt to ſee you in the Heavens face to face.

Oh Brother Munt, with your Wife and my dear Siſter Roſe, how bleſſed are you in the Lord, that God hath found you worthy to ſuffer for his ſake? with all the reſt of my dear Brethren and Siſters known and unknown. O be joyful even unto death. Fear it not, ſaith Chriſt; for I have overcome death, ſaith he. Oh dear hearts! ſeeing that Jeſus Chriſt will be our help, Oh tarry you the Lords leiſure. Be ſtrong, let your hearts be of good comfort, and wait you ſtill for the Lord. He is at hand. Yea, the Angel of the Lord pitcheth his Tent round about them that fear him, and delivereth them which way he ſeeth beſt. For our lives are in the Lords hands; and they can do nothing unto us before God ſuffer them. Therefore give all thanks to God.

Oh dear hearts! you ſhall be clothed with long whit garments upon the mount Sion, with the multitude of Saints, and with Jeſus Chriſt our Saviour, which will never forſake us. Oh bleſſed Virgins! ye have played the wiſe Virgins part, in that you have taken Oyl in your Lamps, that ye may go in with the Bridegroom, when he cometh, into the everlaſting joy with him. But as for the fooliſh, they ſhall be ſhut out, becauſe they made not themſelves ready to ſuffer with Chriſt, neither go about to take up his Croſs. Oh dear hearts, how precious ſhall your death be in the ſight of the Lord? for dear is the death of his Saints. O fare you well, and pray. The grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with you all, Amen, Amen. Pray, pray, pray.

By me Richard Roth, written with my own Blood.

This Letter he confeſſed indeed (upon the ſaid Examination) that he had written with his Blood, and that he meant to have ſent the ſame unto ſuch as were condemned at Colcheſter for the Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt, and were afterwards burned there, as ye have already heard.

The Biſhop then farther asked him, what he thought his Priſon-fellow Ralph Allerton to be.

The Teſtimony of R. Roth of Ral, Allerton.

He anſwered, that he thought him to be one of the elect Children of God; and that if at any time hereafter he happened to be put to death for his Faith and Religion, he thought he ſhould die a true Martyr. And moreover, finding himſelf agrieved with the Biſhops privy and ſecret condemning of Gods People, he ſaid unto him in this ſort; My Lord, becauſe the People ſhould not ſee and behold your doings, ye cauſe me and others to be brought to our Examinations by night, being afraid (belike) to do it by day.

The Biſhop not greatly caring for his talk, proceeded to examine him of other matters, amongſt which this high and weighty thing was one, videlicet, how he did like the Order and Rites of the Church then uſed here in England.

To whom he ſaid, that he ever had, and yet then did abhor the ſame with all his heart.

The Condemnation of R. Roth.

Then divers of the Biſhops Complices intreated and perſwaded him to recant, and ask mercy of the Biſhop.

No (quoth Roth) I will not ask mercy of him that cannot give it. Whereupon he was (as the reſt before mentioned) condemned and delivered unto the Sheriff, and the 17. day of September they all moſt joyfully ended their lives in one fire at Iſlington, for the Teſtimony of Chriſt, as before is declared.

Agnes

Anno 1557.

Agnes Bongeor, and Margaret Thurſton, two godly Chriſtian Women, burnt at Colcheſter for the ſincere profeſſion of Chriſts Goſpel.

Septemb. 17. Margaret Thurſton, Agnes Bongeor, Martyrs.

ALittle before (gentle Reader) was mention made of ten that ſuffered Martyrdom at Colcheſter, at which time there were two other Women alſo, one called Margaret Thurſton, and the other Agnes Bongeor, that ſhould have ſuffered with them, and were likewiſe condemned at the ſame time and place that the other above named ten were, for the like cauſe, and anſwered alſo in their examinations the like in effect as the other did. But the one, namely Margaret Thurſton, that morning ſhe ſhould ſuffer with thoſe that went from the Caſtle, was for that time deferred. What the cauſe was, the Teſtimony of Joan Cook, ſhall declare unto us. Which Joan Cook, the Wife now of John Spark; being then in the Caſtle of Colcheſter for Religion, did demand of this Widow Thurſton, whoſe Husband died in the Priſon, being impriſoned for Religion, wherefore the ſaid Margaret, being a condemned Woman, ſhould be reſerved when the other ſuffered in the Caſtle Baily: ſhe anſwered, that it was not for any fear of Death, but being prepared as the reſt were that ſuffered the ſame day, ſhe felt in her ſelf a great ſhivering and trembling of the fleſh. Whereupon forſaking the company, ſhe went aſide to pray. And whileſt ſhe was a praying, ſhe thought that ſhe was lifted up with a mighty wind that came round about her. Even at that inſtant came in the Gaoler and company with him, and whilſt ſhe turned her ſelf to fetch her Pſalter, they took the other priſoners and left her alone. Shortly after ſhe was removed out of the Caſtle, and put into the Town-priſon, where ſhe continued until Friday ſevennight after her company were burnt. That day, not two hours before her death, ſhe was brought to the Caſtle again, where ſhe declared thus much to the foreſaid Joan Cook.

A note of Margaret Thurſton.

The Martyrdom of Margaret Thurſton, & Agnes Bongeor deferred for what cauſes.

The other, named Agnes Bongeor, who ſhould have ſuffered in like manner with the ſix that went out of Motehall, was alſo kept back at that time, but not in like ſort, becauſe her name was wrong written within the Writ, as in the Bayliffs Letter of Colcheſter, ſent to Boner about the ſame more plainly doth appear in the Book of our firſt edition, pag. 1632.

The ſame morning, the ſecond of Auguſt, that the ſaid ſix in Motehall were called out to go to their Martyrdom, was Agnes Bongeor alſo called with them, by the name of Agnes Bower. Wherefore the Bayliffs underſtanding her (as I ſaid) to be wrong named within the Writ, commanded the ſaid Agnes Bongeor to Priſon again as ye have heard in the Letter before named, and ſo from Motehall that day ſent her to the Caſtle, where ſhe remained until her Death.

The name of Agnes Bongeor miſtaken.

But when ſhe ſaw her ſelf ſo ſeparated from her ſaid Priſon-fellows in that ſort, Oh good Lord! what pitious mone that good Woman made, how bitterly ſhe wept, what ſtrange thoughts came into her mind, how naked and deſolate ſhe eſteemed her ſelf, and into what plunge of deſpair and care her poor Soul was brought, it was pitious and wonderful to ſee: which all came becauſe ſhe went not with them to give her life in the defence of her Chriſt; for of all things in the world, life was leaſt looked for at her hands. For that morning in which ſhe was kept back from burning, had ſhe put on a ſmock that ſhe had prepared only for that purpoſe. And alſo having a Child, a little young Infant ſucking on her, whom ſhe kept with her tenderly all the time that ſhe was in Priſon, againſt that day likewiſe did ſhe ſend away to another Nurſe, and prepared her ſelf preſently to give her ſelf for the teſtimony of the glorious Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt. So little did ſhe look for life, and ſo greatly did Gods gifts work in her above nature, that death ſeemed a great deal better welcom than life. But this took not effect at that time as ſhe thought it would, and therefore (as I ſaid) was ſhe not a little troubled.

Agnes Bongeor troubled for not ſuffering with her company

Being in this great perplexity of mind, a friend of hers came to her, and required to know whether Abrahams Obedience was accepted before God, for that he did Sacrifice his Son Iſaac, or in that he would have offered him? Unto which ſhe anſwered thus:

I know (quoth ſhe) that Abrahams will before God was allowed for the deed, in that he would have done it, if the Angel of the Lord had not ſtaied him: but I (ſaid ſhe) am unhappy, the Lord thinketh me not worthy of this dignity, and therefore Abrahams caſe and mine is not alike.

Why (quoth her friend) would ye not willingly have gone with your company, if God ſhould ſo have ſuffered it?

Yes (ſaid ſhe) with all my heart, and becauſe I did not, it is now my chief and greateſt grief.

Then ſaid her Friend; My dear Siſter, I pray thee conſider Abraham and thy ſelf well, and thou ſhalt ſee thou doeſt nothing differ with him in will at all.

Alas (quoth ſhe) there is a farr greater matter in Abraham than in me; for Abraham was tried with the offering of his own Child, but ſo am not I; and therefore our caſes are not alike.

Good Siſter (quoth her Friend) weigh the matter but indifferently. Abraham I grant (ſaid he) would have offered his Son: and have not you done the like in your little ſucking Babe? But conſider further than this, my good Siſter (ſaid he) where Abraham was commanded but to offer his Son, you are heavy and grieved becauſe you offer not your ſelf, which goeth ſomewhat more near you than Abrahams Obedience did; and therefore before God, aſſuredly, is no leſs accepted and allowed in his holy preſence; which further the preparing of your ſhroud alſo doth argue full well, &c. After which talk between them, ſhe began a little to ſtay her ſelf, and gave her whole exerciſe to reading and prayer, wherein ſhe found no little comfort.

Agnes Bongeor receiveth comfort.

In the time that theſe foreſaid two good Women were priſoners, one in the Caſtle, and the other in Motehall, God by a ſecret mean called the ſaid Margaret Thurſton unto his truth again; who, having her eyes opened by the working of his Spirit, did greatly ſorrow and lament her backſliding before, and promiſed faithfully to the Lord in hope of his mercies, never more while ſhe lived to do the like again, but that ſhe would conſtantly ſtand to the confeſſion of the ſame, againſt all the Adverſaries of the Croſs of Chriſt. After which promiſe made, came in a ſhort time a Writ from London for the burning of them, which according to the effect thereof was executed the 17. day of September, in the year afore-ſaid.

Now when theſe foreſaid good Women were brought to the place in Colcheſter where they ſhould ſuffer the 17. day of September, in the year afore ſaid, they fell down upon both their knees, and made their humble prayers unto the Lord: which thing being done, they roſe and went to the ſtake joyfully and were immediatly thereto chained, and after the fire had compaſſed them about, they with great joy and glorious triumph gave up their Souls, Spirits, and Lives, into the hands of the Lord, under whoſe Government and protection, For Chriſts ſake we beſeech him to grant us his holy defence and help for ever more, Amen.

Thus (gentle Reader) God chooſeth the weak things of the world, to confound mighty things.

John Kurde, Martyr.

Septemb. 21. John Kurde, Martyr.

IN the ſtory before, was ſomething touched of a certain Shoomaker ſuffering at Northampton, being unnamed, whom becauſe we underſtand by a Letter ſent from the ſayd parties, that he ſuffered in this year. 1557. and in the Month of September, therefore we thought there to place him. His name was John Kurde, a Shoomaker, late of the Pariſh of Syrſam in Northamton ſhire, who was impriſoned in Northampton Caſtle for denying the Popiſh Tranſubſtantiation, for the which cauſe William Binſley Bachellor of Law, and Chancellor unto the Biſhop of Peterborough, and now Archdeacon of Northampton, did Pronounce Sentence of Death againſt the ſaid Kurde, in the Church of all Saints in Northampton, in Auguſt, Anno 1557. And in September following, at the commandment of Sir Thomas Treſham, Sheriff then of the Shire he was led by his

Wil. Binſley Chancellor to the Biſhop of Peterborough, and now Archdeacon of Northampton, condemned John Kurde.

Officers without the Northgate of Northhampton, and in the ſtone pits was burned. A Popiſh Prieſt ſtanding by, whoſe name was John Rote, Vicar of Saint Giles in Northhampton, did declare unto him, that if hee would recant, he was authoriſed to give him his pardon. His anſwer was, that he had his Pardon by Jeſus Chriſt, &c.

A True Certificate of the taking of one John Noyes of Laxefield, in the County of Suffolk, Shoomaker, who was taken the nineteenth day of April, in the year of our Lord God, 1557. as hereafter followeth.

Septemb. 12. IN the the Month of September this preſent year, or (as ſome report) in the year paſt, ſuffered the bleſſed Martyr Jo. Noyes, whoſe ſtory here followeth.

First, Maſter Thomas Lovel being then chief Conſtable of Hoxton Hundred, in the County aforeſaid, and one John Jacob, and William Stannard then being under-Conſtables of the foreſaid Town of Laxefield, and Wolfren Dowſing, and Nicholas Stannard of the ſame Town, being then accounted faithful and Chatholick Chriſtians, though undoubtedly they proved moſt cruel hinderers of the True Profeſſours of Chriſt and his Goſpel, with others, were commanded to be that preſent day before the Juſtices whoſe names were Maſter Thurſton, Sir John Tyrrel, and Maſter Kene, and Sir Jo. Silliard being High Sheriff.

These ſitting at Hoxton in the County of Suffolk aforeſaid, and there the ſaid Townesmen aforeſaid having commandment of the ſaid Juſtices to inquire in their Town if there were any that would neglect to come to their Service and Maſs, further to examine the cauſe why they would not come, and thereupon to bring the true certificate to the ſaid Juſtices within foureteen days then next enſuing; they then coming homeward, being full of hatred againſt the truth, and deſirous to get promotion, without any ſuch commandment of the Juſtices (as far as we can learn) took Counſel one with another how to attach the ſaid John Noyes without any more delay.

Counſel taken for attaching John Noyes.

This divelliſh enterpriſe agreed upon, chiefly through the Counſel of Maſter Thomas Lovell, Wolfren Dowſing, and Nicholas Stannard aforeſaid with expedition his houſe was beſet on both ſides. This done, they found the ſaid John Noyes on the backſide of the ſaid houſe going outward, and Nicholas Stannard called to the ſaid John, and ſaid, Whither goeſt thou? And he ſaid, to my neighbours. And the ſaid Nicholas Stannard ſaid, your Maſter hath deceived you; you muſt go with us now. But the ſaid John Noyes anſwered, No, but take you heed your Maſter deceive not you. And ſo they took him and carried him to the Juſtices the next day. After his appearance and ſundry cauſes alledged, the Juſtices and the Sheriff together caſt him into Eye-dungeon, and there he lay a certain time. And then was carried from thence to Norwich, and ſo came before the Biſhop, where were miniſtred unto him theſe poſitions following:

John Noyes taken by Nicholas Stannard, Perſecutor.

John Noyes caſt into Eye-dungeon.

1 Whether he believed that the Ceremonies uſed in the Church were good and godly, to ſtirr up Mens minds to Devotion.

Ex Regiſt. Articles againſt John Noyes.

2 Item, whether he believed the Pope to be Supreme Head of the Church here in Earth.

3 Item, whether he believed the Body of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt to be in the Sacrament of the Altar under the Forms of Bread and Wine, after the Words of Conſecration.

Whereunto he anſwered, that he thought the natural Body of Chriſt to be only in Heaven, and not in the Sacrament, &c.

Real preſence denied.

For the which, Sentence at laſt was read by the Biſhop againſt him, in the preſence of theſe there ſitting the ſame time, Dr. Dunning Chancellor, Sir W. Woodhouſe, Sir Thomas Woodhouſe, Mr. George Heyden, Mr. Spenſer, W. Farrar Alderman of Norwich, Mr. Thurſton, Wineſden with divers other.

Sentence read againſt John Noyes.

More of his Examination than this came not to our hands.

In the mean time his Brother-in-law, one Nicholas Fisk of Dinnington going to comfort him at ſuch time as he remained priſoner in the Guild hall of Norwich, after Chriſtian Exhortation, asked him if he did fear Death when the Biſhop gave judgment againſt him, conſidering the terrour of the ſame; And the ſaid Noyes anſwered, he thanked God he feared death no more at that time, than he or any other did, being at liberty. Then the ſaid Nicholas required him to ſhew the cauſe of his Condemnation. Upon which requeſt the ſaid John Noyes writ with his own hand as followeth:

John Noyes houſe beſet about.

Anno 1557.

The cause of J. Noyes Condemnation.

I ſaid (quoth he) that I could not believe, that in the Sacrament of the Altar there is the natural Body of Chriſt that ſame Body that was born of the Virgin Mary. But I ſaid, that the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Chriſt is received of Chriſtian People in the remembrance of Chriſts death, as a ſpiritual food, if it be miniſtred according to Chriſts Inſtitution.

But they ſaid, I could not tell what ſpiritual meant.

The Biſhop ſaid, that the Sacrament was God, and muſt be worſhipped as God. So ſaid the Chancellor alſo.

Then anſwered I, my Lord, I cannot ſo believe.

Then (quoth the Biſhop) why? Then ſay thou doſt believe. Notwithſtanting theſe colluſions could not prevail.

J. Noyes brought to the place of Martyrdom.

Now being condemned, he was ſent again from Norwich to Eye-Priſon, and upon the 21. day of September in the year aforeſaid, about midnight, he was brought from Eye to Laxefield to be burned, and on the next day morning was brought to the Stake, where was ready againſt his coming the foreſaid Juſtice, Maſter Thurſton, one Mr. Waller then being under Seriff, and Mr. Thomas Lovel being High Conſtable, as is before expreſſed, the which commanded men to make ready all things meet for that ſinful purpoſe. Now the fire in moſt places of the Street was put out, ſaving a ſmoak was eſpied by the ſaid Thomas Lovel proceeding out from the top of a Chimney, to which houſe the Sheriff and Grannow his Man went, and brake open the door, and thereby got fire, and brought the ſame to the place of execution. When John Noyes came to the place where he ſhould be burned, he kneeled down and ſaid the 50. Pſalm, with other Prayers, and then they making haſt bound him to the Stake, and being bound, the ſaid John Noyes ſaid, Fear not them that can kill the Body, but fear him that can kill both Body and Soul, and caſt it into everlaſting fire.

Fire put out in the Town where John Noyes ſhould be burned.

The words of J. Noyes to his Siſter.

When he ſaw his Siſter weeping and making moan for him, he bade her, that ſhe ſhould not weep for him, but weep for her ſins.

Then one Nicholas Cadman being Haſtler, a valiant Champion in the Popes affairs, brought a Fagot and ſet againſt him; and the ſaid John Noyes took up the Fagot and kiſſed it and ſaid; Bleſſed be the time that ever I was born to come to this.

Then he delivered his Pſalter to the under Sheriff, deſiring him to be good to his Wife and Children, and to deliver to her that ſame Book; and the Sheriff promiſed him that he would, notwithſtanding he never as yet performed his promiſe. Then the ſaid John Noyes ſaid to the People, they ſay they can make God of a piece of Bread, believe them not.

The words of J. Noyes to the People.

Then ſaid he; Good People, bear witneſs that I do believe to be ſaved by the merits and paſſion of Jeſus Chriſt, and not by mine own deeds; and ſo the fire was kindled, and burned about him, then he ſaid; Lord have mercy upon me. Chriſt have mercy upon me. Son of David have mercy upon me.

And ſo he yielded up his life, and when his Body was burned, they made a pit to bury the Coals and Aſhes, and amongſt the ſame they found one of his feet that was unburned, whole up to the Ankel, with the hoſe on, and that they buried with the reſt.

John Jarvis wrongfully troubled for words ſpoken at the burning of Noyes.

Now while he was a burning, there ſtood one John Jarvis by, a mans Servant of the ſame Town, a plain Fellow, which ſaid; Good Lord, how the Sinews of his Arms ſhrink up. And there ſtood behind him one Grannow and Bener, being the Sheriffs men, and they ſaid to their Maſter, that John Jarvis ſaid, What villain wretches are theſe? And their Maſter bid lay hand on him, and they took him and pinioned him, and carried him before the Juſtice that ſame day, and the Juſtice did examine him of the words aforeſaid, but he denied them, and anſwered that he ſaid nothing but this? Good Lord, how the Sinews of his Arms ſhrink up. But for all this the Juſtice did bind his Father and his Maſter in 5 l. a piece, that he ſhould be forth coming at all times. And on the Wedneſday next he was brought again before the Juſtices, Mr. Thurſton and Mr. Kene, they ſitting at Freſingfield in Hoxton Hundred, and there they did appoint and command, that the ſaid John Jarvis ſhould be ſet in the ſtocks the next market day, and whipt about the market naked. But his Maſter, one William Jarvis, did after crave friendſhip of the Conſtables, and they did not ſet him in the Stocks till Sunday Morning, and in the Afternoon they did whip him about the Market with a Dog-whip, having three Cords, and ſo they let him go.

Some do give out, that John Jarvis was whipped for ſaying that Nicholas Cadman was Noyes Haſtler, that is, ſuch a one as maketh and kindleth the fire.

The Copy of a certain Letter that he ſent to comfort his Wife at ſuch time as he lay in Priſon.

A Letter of J. Noyes to his Wife.

WIfe, you deſired me that I would ſend you ſome tokens that you might remember me. As I did read in the New Teſtament, I thought it good to write unto you certain places of the Scripture for a remembrance. St. Peter ſaith, 1 Pet. 4. Dearly Beloved be not troubled with this heat that is now come among you to try you, as though ſome ſtrange thing had happened unto you, but rejoyce, inſo much as ye are partakers of Chriſts ſufferings, that when his glory appeareth ye may be merry and glad. If ye be raiſed on for the name of Chriſt, happy are ye, for the ſpirit of glory, and the ſpirit of God reſteth upon you.

It is better, if the will of God be ſo, that ye ſuffer for well doing than for evil doing 1 Pet. 3.

So 1 Pet. 4. See that none of you ſuffer as a murtherer, or as a Thief, or an evil doer, or as a buſie-body in other mens matters; but if any man ſuffer as a Chriſtian man, let him not be aſhamed, but let him glorifie God in this behalf; for the time is come that Judgment muſt begin at the houſe of God. If it firſt begin at us, what ſhall the end of them be, that believe not the Goſpel of God? Wherefore let them that ſuffer according to the will of God, commit their Souls to him in well doing.

St. Paul ſaith, 2 Tim 3. All that will live godly in Chriſt Jeſus, muſt ſuffer perſecution.

St. John ſaith, 1 John 2. See that ye love not the world, neither the things that are in the world.

If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, as the luſt of the Fleſh, the luſt of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world, which vaniſheth away and the luſt thereof, but he that fulfilleth the will of God abideth for ever.

St. Paul ſaith Coloſ. 3. If ye be riſen again with Chriſt, ſeek thoſe things which are above, where Chriſt ſitteth on the right hand of God. Set your affection on things that are above, and not on things which are on earth.

Our Saviour Chriſt ſaith, Mat 18. Whoſoever ſhall offend one of theſe little ones that believe in me, it were better for him that a Mil-ſtone were hanged about his neck, and that he were caſt into the Sea.

The Prophet David ſaith, Pſal. 34. Great are the troubles of the righteous, but the Lord delivereth them out of all.

Fear the Lord, ye his Saints: for they that fear him lack nothing.

When the Righteous cry, the Lord heareth them and delivereth them out of all their troubles: But miſfortune ſhall ſlay the ungodly, and they that hate the righteous ſhall periſh.

Hear, O my People. I aſſure thee O Iſrael, if thou wilt hearken unto me, there ſhall no ſtrange God be in thee, neither ſhalt thou worſhip any other God. Oh that my People would obey me: for if Iſrael would walk in my ways, I ſhould ſoon put down their Enemies, and turn my hand againſt their Adverſaries.

Our Saviour Chriſt ſaith; The Diſciple is not above his Maſter, nor yet the Servant above his Lord. It is enough for the Diſciple to be as his Maſter is, and that the Servant be as his Lord is. If they have called the Maſter of the houſe Belzebub, how much more ſhall they call them of his houſhold ſo? fear not them therefore.

St. Paul

St. Paul ſaith, 2 Cor. 4. ſet your ſelves therefore at large, and bear not a ſtrangers yoke with the unbelievers: for what fellowſhip hath righteouſneſs with unrighteouſneſs? what Company hath light with darkneſs? either what part hath the believer with the Infidel &c.? Wherefore come out from among them, and ſeparate your ſelves now (ſaith the Lord) and touch none unclean thing; ſo will I receive you, and I will be a Father unto you, and ye ſhall be my Sons and Daughters, ſaith the Lord Almighty.

For neither eye hath ſeen, nor the ear hath heard, neither can it enter into the heart of man, what good things the Lord hath prepared for them that love him, 1 Cor. 2.

Ye are bought neither with Silver nor Gold, but with the precious Blood of Chriſt, 1 Pet. 1.

There is none other Name given to men wherein we must be ſaved, Acts 4. Anno 1557.

So fare ye well Wife and Children; and leave worldly care, and ſee that ye be diligent to pray.

Take no thought (ſaith Chriſt, Mat. 6.) ſaying, what ſhall we eat, or what ſhall we drink, or wherewith ſhall we be Clothed? (for after all theſe things ſeek the Gentiles) for your Heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all theſe things, but ſeek ye firſt the Kingdom of Heaven, and the righteouſneſs thereof, and all theſe things ſhall be miniſtred unto you.

The Martyrdom and ſuffering of Cicely Ormes, burnt at Norwich for the Teſtimony and witneſs of Chriſts Goſpel.

Sep. 23. Cicely Orms, Martyr.

ABout the 23. day of the ſaid month of September, next after the other above mentioned, ſuffered at Norwich Cicely Ormes Wife of Edmund Ormes Worſtead-weaver, dwelling in St. Laurence Pariſh in Norwich: ſhe being of the age of 32. years or more, was taken at the death of Simon Miller and Elizabeth Cooper above mentioned, in a place called Lollards-pit without Biſhops-Gate, at the ſaid Norwich, for that ſhe ſaid ſhe would pledge them of the ſame Cup that they drank on. For ſo ſaying, one Maſter Corbet of Sprowſon by Norwich, took her and ſent her to the Chancellor. When ſhe came before him, he asked her what ſhe ſaid unto the Sacrament of Chriſts Body. And ſhe ſaid, ſhe did believe that it was the Sacrament of the Body of Chriſt. Yea, ſaid the Chancellor, but what is that that the Prieſt holdeth over his head? She anſwered him and ſaid, it is Bread: and if you make it any better, it is worſe. At which words the Chancellor ſent her to the Biſhops Priſon to the Keeper called Fellow, with many threatning and hot words, as a man being in a great chafe.

Mr. Corbet of Sprowſon, Perſecutor.

The Chancellors name was Dunning.

Bridges a Popiſh perſecutor.

The 23. day of July ſhe was called before the Chancellor again, who ſate in Judgment with Maſter Bridges and others. The Chancellor offered her, if ſhe would go to the Church and keep her Tongue, ſhe ſhould be at liberty, and believe as ſhe would. But ſhe told him ſhe would not conſent to his wicked deſire therein, do with her what he would; for if ſhe ſhould, ſhe ſaid, God would ſurely plague her. Then, the Chancellor told her, he had ſhewed more favour to her, than ever he did to any, and that he was loth to condemn her, conſidering that ſhe was an ignorant, unlearned, and fooliſh Woman. But ſhe, not weighing his words, told him if he did, he ſhould not be ſo deſirous of her ſinful fleſh, as ſhe would (by Gods grace) be content to give it in ſo good a quarrel. Then roſe he and read the bloody Sentence of Condemnation againſt her, and ſo delivered her to the Secular Power of the Sheriffs of the City, Mr. Thomas Sutherton, and Mr. Leonard Sutherton Brethren, who immediately carried her to the Guild-hall in Norwich, where ſhe remained until her death.

This Cicely Ormes was a very ſimple Woman, but yet zealous in the Lords cauſe, being born in Eaſt-Deram, and was there the Daughter of one Thomas Haund Taylor. She was taken the fifth day of July, and did for a twelve month before ſhe was taken, recant, but never after was ſhe quiet in Conſcience, until ſhe was utterly driven from all their Popery. Between the time that ſhe recanted, and that ſhe was taken, ſhe had gotten a Letter made to give to the Chancellor, to let him know that ſhe repented her recantation from the bottom of her heart, and would never do the like again while ſhe lieved. But before ſhe exhibited her Bill, ſhe was taken and ſent to Priſon as is before-ſaid. She was burnt the 23. day of September, between ſeven and eight of the Clock in the the morning, the ſaid two Sheriffs being there, and of people to the number of 200. When ſhe came to the ſtake, ſhe kneeled down, and made her prayers to God: that being done, ſhe roſe up and ſaid, Good People, I believe in God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghoſt, three perſons and one God.

This do I not, nor will I recant; but I recant utterly from the bottom of my heart the doings of the Pope of Rome, and all his Popiſh Prieſts and ſhavelings. I utterly refuſe and never will have to do with them again by Gods Grace. And good people, I would you ſhould not think of me that I believe to be ſaved in that I offer my ſelf here unto the Death for the Lords cauſe, but I believe to be ſaved by the Death and paſſion of Chriſt; and this my Death is and ſhall be a witneſs of my Faith unto you all here preſent. Good People, as many of you as believe as I believe, pray for me. Then ſhe came to the ſtake, and laid her hand on it, and ſaid, Welcom the Croſs of Chriſt. Which being done, ſhe looking on her hand, and ſeeing it blacked with the ſtake, ſhe wiped it upon her ſmock, for ſhe was burnt at the ſame ſtake that Simon Miller and Elizabeth Cooper was burned at. Then after ſhe had touched it with her hand, ſhe came and kiſſed it, and ſaid, Welcome the ſweet Croſs of Chriſt, and ſo gave her ſelf to be bound thereto. After the Tormentors had kindled the fire to her, ſhe ſaid, My Soul doth magnifie the Lord, and my Spirit rejoyceth in God my Saviour: and in ſo ſaying ſhe ſet her hands together right againſt her breaſt, caſting her eyes and head upward, and ſo ſtood, heaving up her hands by little and little, till the very ſinewes of her Arms did break aſunder, and then they fell; but ſhe yielded her Life unto the Lord, as quietly as if ſhe had been in a ſlumber, or as one feeling no pain; So wonderfully did the Lord work with her; his Name therefore be praiſed for evermore. Amen.

The laſt words of Cice. Ownes at the ſtake.

The trouble and diſturbance among good Men and Women at Lichfield.

AFter the Death and Martyrdom of Miſtreſs Joyce Lewys, a little above ſpecified, diverſe good Men and Women in the ſame Town of Lichfield were vexed and in trouble before the Biſhop and his Chancellor, for kiſſing the ſaid Joyce Lewys, and drinking with her about the time of her Death; the names of which perſons were theſe: Joane Love, Elizabeth Smith, Margaret Biddel, Helene Bouring, Margaret Cootesfote, Nicholas Bird, John Hariſtone and his Wife, Agnes Glyn, Agnes Glover, Agnes Penifather, &c. Theſe with other were produced to their examination before the Biſhop and his Chancellor for the cauſe abovenamed, and therefore adjudged for Hereticks, for that they did pray and drink with the ſaid Miſtreſs Lewys, but eſpecially Agnes Penifather ſuſtained the moſt trouble, for that ſhe accompanied the ſaid Joyce Lewys going to her Death. Which Agnes being examined further of the ſaid Biſhop, what words ſhe had ſpoken to two Prieſts of the Church of Lichfield, called John Ady and James Foxe, concerning the ſaid Joyce Lewys after her burning, ſaid, as followeth, That ſhe being asked by the ſaid two Prieſts being at her Fathers Houſe in the City of Lichfield, at ſuch time as ſhe came from the burning of the ſayd Joice Lewys, wherefore ſhe the ſaid Agnes did weep for ſuch an Heretick, meaning Joice Lewys, whoſe Soul they they ſaid was in Hell; the ſaid Agnes Penifather to their demand made this anſwer, that ſhe thought the ſaid bleſſed Martyr to be in better caſe that the ſaid two Prieſts were.

Agnes Penifather accuſed of two Prieſts for words.

With the which words being charged and willed to ſubmit her ſelf as the other had done above rehearſed to ſuch penance as they ſhould enjoyn unto her, ſhe refuſed ſo to do, and therefore was commanded to cloſe priſon, the Sheriffs being charged with her under pain of 100. pounds, that none ſhould have any acceſs unto her. At length, at the perſwaſion of her Friends ſhe was compelled to do as the other had done before. And thus much concerning things done at Lichfield.

The perſecution and cruelty exerciſed by the Papiſts in the Dioceſs of Chicheſter.

ANd now from Lichfield to come to Chicheſter, although we have but little to report thereof, for lack of certain relation and records of that Countrey, yet it ſeemeth no little trouble and perſecution there alſo to have raged, as in other Countries. For what place was there almoſt in all the Realm, where the Popes Miniſters did not beſtir them, murthering ſome or other, as in the Acts of this Eccleſiaſtical hiſtory may ſufficiently appear? Wherefore as this plague of the Popes Tyranny was general to all other People and Countries of England, ſo likewiſe in the Dioceſs of Chicheſter, divers and many there were condemned and Martyrd for the true Teſtimony of righteouſneſs within the compaſs of Queen Maries Reign. In the number of whom were theſe:

Perſecution among the godly men at Chicheſter.

John Foreman of Eſtgreneſted.
John Warner of Berne.
Chriſtian Grover of the Archdeaconry of Lewys.
Thomas Athoth, Prieſt.
Thomas Avington of Erdingly.
Dennis Burgis of Buxſted.
Thomas Ravenſdale of Rie.
John Milles of Hellinglegh.
Nicholas Holden of Withiam.
John Hart of Withiam.
Margery Morice of Hethfield.
Anne Try of Eſtgreneſted.
John Oſeward of Woodmancote.
Thomas Harland of Woodmancote.
James Morice of Hethfield.
Thomas Dougate of Eſtgreneſted.
John Aſhedon of Katherfield.

} Martyrs.

The greateſt doer againſt theſe godly and true faithful Martyrs, and ſetters upon their condemnation, were theſe: Chriſtopherſon the Biſhop after Day, Richard Briefly Dr. of Law, and Chancellor of Chicheſter, Robert Tailor Bachelor of the Law his Deputy, Thomas Paccard Civilian, Anth. Clarke, Albane Longdale Bachelor of Divinity, &c.

Perſecutors.

The Examination of Thomas Spurdance one of Queen Maries Servants, before the Chancellour of Norwich.

THe Biſhops Chancellor did ask me if I had been with the Prieſt, and confeſſed my ſins unto him.

The examination of Tho Spurdance.

And I ſaid, No, I had confeſſed my ſins to God, and God ſaith, In what hour ſoever a ſinner doth repent and be ſorry for his ſins, and ask him forgiveneſs, willing no more ſo to do, he will no more reckon his ſin unto him, and that is ſufficient for me.

Then ſaid the Chancellor, Thou denieſt the Sacrament of penance.

I ſaid, I deny not penance, but I deny that I ſhould ſhew my ſins unto the Prieſt.

Then ſaid the Chancellor, that is a denying of the Sacrament of penance.

Write this Article.

Have you received the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar (ſaid he) at this time of Eaſter?

And I ſaid, No.

And why have you not ſaith he?

I ſaid, I dare not meddle with you in it, as you uſe it.

Why, do we not uſe it truely, ſaid he?

I ſaid, No: for the Holy Supper of the Lord ſerveth for the Chriſtian Congregation, and you are none of Chriſts Members: and therefore I dare not meddle with you, leſt I be like unto you.

Why are we none of Chriſts Members, ſaid the Chancellor?

I ſaid, Becauſe you teach Laws contrary to Gods Laws.

What Laws are thoſe, ſaid he?

I ſaid, Theſe three Articles that you ſwear the people unto here, be falſe and untrue, and you do evil to ſwear the people unto them.

Then

Then ſaid he, good people take no heed unto his words: for he is an Heretick, and teacheth you diſobedience: and ſo he would no more ſpeak of that matter.

Then ſaid he, How believeſt thou in the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar: doſt thou not believe that after it is conſecrated, it is the very ſame Body that was born of the Virgin Mary?

I ſaid, No, not the ſame Body in ſubſtance: for the ſame Body hath a ſubſtance in Fleſh, Blood and Bones, and was a bloody Sacrifice, and this is a dry Sacrifice.

And I ſaid, Is the Maſs a Sacrifice?

Unto which a Doctor anſwered that ſate by him, It is a Sacrifice both for the Quick and the Dead.

Then ſaid I, No, it is no Sacrifice: for St. Paul ſaith, that Chriſt made one Sacrifice once for all: and I do believe in none other Sacrifice, but only in that one Sacrifice that our Lord Jeſus Chriſt made once for all.

Then ſaid the Doctor, That Sacrifice that Chriſt made, was a wet Sacrifice, and the Maſs is a dry Sacrifice.

Then ſaid I, that ſame dry Sacrifice is a Sacrifice of your own making, and it is your Sacrifice, it is none of mine.

Spurdance examined upon the Sacrament of the Altar.

Then ſaid the Chancellor, He is an Heretick, he denieth the Sacrament of the Altar.

Then ſaid I, Will ye know how I believe in the Holy Supper of our Lord?

And he ſaid, Yea.

Then ſaid I, I believe that if I come rightly and worthily as God hath commanded me, to the Holy Supper of the Lord, I receive him by Faith, by beleeving in him. Put the Bread being received is not God, nor the Bread that is yonder in the Pixe is not God. God dwelleth not in Temples made with hands, neither will be worſhipped with the works of Mens hands. And therefore you do very evil to cauſe the People to kneel down and worſhip the Bread: for God did never bid you hold it above your heads, neither had the Apoſtles ſuch uſe.

Then ſaid the Chancellor, He denieth the preſence in the Sacrament. Write this Article alſo. He is a very Heretick.

Then ſaid I, The Servant is not greater than his Mr. For your Predeceſſors killed my Maſter Chriſt, the Prophets and Apoſtles, and Holy Vertuous Men, and now you alſo kill the Servants of Chriſt, ſo that all the righteous Blood that hath been ſhed, even from righteous Abel, until this day, ſhall be required at your hands.

Well ſaid the Chancellor, have him away.

Another Examination of Spurdance, before the Biſhop in his houſe.

THe Biſhop ſaid, ſirrah, doſt thou not believe in the Catholick Faith of Holy Church?

Another examination of The Spurdance before the Biſh.

And I ſaid, I believe Chriſts Catholick Church.

Yea ſaid he, in Chriſts Church, of the which the Pope is the Head? doeſt thou not believe that the Pope is ſupream Head of the Catholick Church?

And I ſaid, No. I believe not that he ſhould be above the Apoſtles, if he take them to be his Predeceſſors. For when there came a thought among the Apoſtles, who ſhould be the greateſt when their Maſter was gon, Chriſt anſwered them unto their thoughts, The Kings of the Earth bear domination above other, but ye ſhall not ſo do, for he that will be greateſt among you ſhall become ſervant unto you all. How is it then (ſaid I) that he will climb ſo high above his fellows? And alſo we were ſworn in my Maſter King Henry's time, that we ſhould to the uttermoſt of our power, never conſent to him again. And therefore as he hath nothing to do here in England, ſo neither in his own countrey more, then a Biſhop hath in his Dioceſs.

Yea, ſaid the Biſhop, what of that? We were then in error and ſin, now we are in the right way again and therefore thou muſt come home again with us, and knowledge thy fault, and become a Chriſtian man, and be ſworn unto the Pope as our Supream Head. Wilt thou be ſworn unto the Pope? How ſaieſt thou?

The Popes Supremacy.

Then I ſaid, No, I warrant you, by the grace of God not as long as I live. For you cannot prove by the Scripture that the Pope is Head of the Church, and may do therein what him liſteth. Anno 1557.

No ſaid he? Yes I trow: for as the Belweather which weareth the Bell, is head of the Flock of Sheep, even ſo is the Pope the Head of the Church of Chriſt. And as the Bees in the Hive have a Maſter Bee, when they are gone out, to bring them home again to the Hive: even ſo the Pope when we be gone aſtray and wandred from the Fold, from the Hive, &c. then is ordained our Head by ſucceſſion of Peter, to bring us home again to the true Church; as thou now, my good fellow, haſt wandred long out of the way like a ſcattered ſheep, &c. Hear therefore that Belweather, the Maſter Bell, &c. and come home with us to thy mother the Church again.

Unto whom I anſwered, My Lord, all this is but natural reaſon, and no Scripture: but ſince yee cannot prove the Pope to be Authorized by Scripture, ye anſwer not me as I thought yee would.

Ha, ſaid he, I ſee well ye be ſtout, and will not be anſwered: therefore ye ſhall be compelled by Law whether ye will or no.

My Lord, ſaid I, ſo did your Forefathers intreat Chriſt and his Apoſtles. They had a Law, and by their Law they put him to Death; and ſo likewiſe, you have a law which is Tyranny, and by that would ye enforce me to believe as you do: but the Lord I truſt will aſſiſt me againſt all your beggarly Ceremonies, and make your fooliſhneſs known to all the world one day.

The Phariſees Law.

Then ſaid he, when were ye at Church and went in Proceſſion, and did the Ceremonies of the Church?

And I ſaid, Never ſince I was born.

No ſaid he? how old are you?

And I ſaid, I think about xl.

Why, ſaid he, How did yon uſe your ſelf at Church twenty years ago?

I ſaid, As you do now.

And even now, ſaid he, you ſaid you did not uſe the Ceremonies ſince you were born.

No more I did, ſaid I, ſince I was born anew; as Chriſt ſaid unto Nichodemus, Except ye be born anew, ye cannot enter into the Kingdom of Heaven.

Then ſaid a Doctor that ſate by, he is a very Anabaptiſt: for that is their opinion plain.

No Sir, you ſay falſly, ſaid I: for I am no Anabaptiſt: for they deny Children to be Baptiſed, and ſo do not I.

Well, ſaid the Biſhop, why doſt thou not go to the Church, and do the Ceremonies?

And I ſaid, Becauſe they be contrary to Gods Word and Laws, as you your ſelf have taught: but now you ſay it is good again: and I think if there were a return to morrow, you would ſay that falſe again which you hold now. Therefore, I may well ſay, there is no Truth in you.

Then ſaid the Biſhop, thou art a ſtubborn fellow, and an Heretick, and a Traytor.

No, ſaid I, I am no Traytor, for I have done, I think, better Service to the Crown imperial of England, than you.

If you had done ſo good ſervice (ſaid he) you would be obedient to the Laws of the Realm.

So I am, ſaid I. There is no Man alive (I thank God) that can accuſe me juſtly that ever I was diſobedient to any Civil Laws. But you muſt conſider my Lord, that I have a Soul and a Body, and my Soul is none of the Queens, but my Body and my goods are the Queens. And I muſt give God my Soul, and all that belongeth unto it, that is I muſt do the Laws and Commandments of God; and whoſoever Commandeth Laws contrary to Gods Laws, I may not do them for loſing of my Soul, but muſt rather obey God than Man.

Obedience to Princes, how farr.

And hee ſaid, Why doſt thou not theſe Laws then? are they not agreeable to Gods Law?

And I ſaid, No, you cannot prove them to be Gods Laws.

Yes, ſaith he, that I can.

Then ſaid I, if you can prove by the Word of God that you ſhould have any Graven Images made to ſet in your Churches for lay Mens Books, or to worſhip

Ima-

God

Anno 1557.

God by them, or that you ſhould have any Ceremonies in your Church as you have, prove them by the Word of God, and I will do them.

Then, ſaid he, it is a good and decent order to furniſh the Church: as when you ſhall go to dinner, you have a cloth upon the Table to furniſh the Table before the meat ſhall come upon it; ſo are theſe Ceremonies a comely, decent order to be in the Church among Chriſtian people.

Theſe, ſaid I, are inventions and imaginations out of your own brain, without any Word of God to prove them. For God ſaith, Look what you think good in your own eyes, if I command the contrary, it is abominable in my ſight. And theſe Ceremonies are againſt Gods Laws. For, Saint Paul ſaith, they be weak and beggarly, and rebuketh the Galathians for doing them.

Well, ſaid he, if you will not do them, ſeeing they be the Laws of the Realm, you are an Heretick and diſobedient: and therefore come home again and confeſs your faults with us, that you have been in errour, &c. Will you do ſo?

And I ſaid, No, I have been in no errour: for the ſpiritual Laws were never trulier ſet forth then in my Maſter King Edwards time, and I truſt unto God I ſhall never forſake them whiles I live.

Then came a Gentleman to me and ſaid, Are ye wiſer than all Men? and have ye more knowledge than all Men will ye caſt away your Soul willingly? My Lord and other Men alſo, would fain you would ſave your ſelf: therefore chooſe ſome Man where you will, either ſpiritual or temporal, and take a day, my Lord will give it you.

Then ſaid I, if I ſave my life, I ſhall loſe it; and if I loſe my life for Chriſts ſake, I ſhall find it in life everlaſting. And if I take a day, when the day cometh, I muſt ſay then even as I do now, except I will lie, and therefore that needeth not.

Well, then have him away, ſaid the Biſhop.

The. Spurdance by whom he was apprehended.

This above named Thomas Spurdance was one of Queen Maries Servants, and was taken by two of his fellowes, the ſaid Queens Servants, named John Haman otherwiſe called Barker, and George Looſon, both dwelling in Codman in the County of Suffolk, who carried him to one Mr. Goſnal, dwelling in the ſaid Codman, and by him he was ſent to Bury, where he remained in priſon, and afterwards burned in the Month of November.

The Story and Martyrdom of three conſtant witneſſes of Chriſt.

November 18. The ſtory and Martyrdom of John Hallingdale, William Sparrow, Richard Gibſon.

NOt long after the Martyrdom of the two good Women at Clocheſter, above named, were three faithful witneſſes of the Lords Teſtament, tormented and put to death in Smith-field at London, the eighteenth of November, in the year aforeſaid, whoſe names hereafter follow:

John Hallingdale.
William Sparrow.
Richard Gibſon.

Which three were produced before Boner Bp. of London, the fifth day of November, 1557. and had by him and his officers certain Articles miniſtred unto them: the ſum whereof hereafter followeth.

Articles miniſtred by Boner unto John Hallingdale.

Articles againſt John Hallingdale.

FIrſt, that the ſaid John Hallingdale is of the Dioceſs of London, and ſo ſubject to the juriſdiction of the Biſhop of London.

Secondly, that the ſaid John before the time of the Reign of K. Edward the ſixth, late King of England, was of the ſame Faith and Religion that was then obſerved, believed, taught, and ſet forth in the Realm of England.

Thirdly, that during the Reign of the ſaid K. Edward the ſixth, the ſaid John Hallingdale, upon occaſion of the preaching of certain Miniſters in that time, did not abide in his former Faith and Religion, but did depart from it, and ſo did and doth continue till this preſent day, and ſo determineth to do (as he ſaith) till his lifes end.

Fourthly, that the ſaid John Hallingdale hath thought, believed, and ſpoken divers times, that the Faith, Religion, and Eccleſiaſtical Service received, obſerved, and uſed now in this Realm of England, is not good and laudable, but againſt Gods Commandment and Word, eſpecially concerning the Maſs and the ſeven Sacraments; and that he the ſaid John will not in any wiſe conform himſelf to the ſame, but ſpeak and think againſt it during his natural life.

Fifthly, that the ſaid John abſenteth himſelf continually from his own Pariſh Church of St. Leonards, neither hearing Mattins, Maſs, nor Evenſong, nor yet confeſſing his ſins to the Prieſt, or receiving the Sacrament of the Altar at his hands; or uſing other Ceremonies as they are now uſed in this Church and Realm of England; and as he remembreth, he never came but once in the Pariſh Church of St. Leonard, and careth not (as he ſaith) if he never come there any more, the Service being as it is there, and ſo many abuſes being there, as he ſaith there are, eſpecially the Maſs, the Sacraments, and the Ceremonies and Service ſet forth in Latine.

Sixthly, that the ſaid John, when his Wife, called Alice, was brought in bed of a Man Child, cauſed the ſaid Child to be Chriſtned in Engliſh, after the ſame manner and form in all points, as it was uſed in the time of the Reign of K. Edward the ſixth aforeſaid, and cauſed it to be called Joſue, and would not have the ſaid Child Chriſtned in Latine after the form and manner as it is now uſed in the Church and Realm of England, nor will have it by his will (as he ſaith) to be confirmed by the Biſhop.

His anſwers to the Articles.

Unto all which Articles the ſaid John Hallingdale made anſwer, confeſſing them all, and every part of them to be true, and ſaying, that he would not revoke his ſaid Anſwers, but ſtand unto them according as it was in every Article above written.

The real preſence denied.

Furthermore, the ſaid John Hallingdale, being demanded by the ſaid Boner, whether he did firmly believe that in the Sacrament, commonly called the Sacrament of the Altar, there is really and truly the very Body and Blood of our Saviour Chriſt, or no; made anſwer, that he neither in the time of the ſaid K. Edward the ſixth, nor at that preſent did believe, that in the ſaid Sacrament there is really the very Body and Blood of Chriſt. For he ſaid, that if he had ſo believed, he would (as others had done) have received the ſame, which he did not, becauſe he had and then did believe, that the very Body of Chriſt is only in Heaven, and no where elſe. And furthermore the ſaid John Hallingdale ſaid, that Cranmer, Latimer, Ridley, Hooper, and generally all that of late have been burned for Hereticks, were no Hereticks at all, becauſe they did preach truly the Goſpel: upon whoſe preaching he grounded his Faith and Conſcience, as he ſaid, according to the ſaying of S. John, in the 18. Chapter of his Revelation, where he ſaith, That the Blood of the Prophets, and of the Saints, and of all that were ſlain upon Earth, was found in the Babylonical Church, by the which, he ſaid, is underſtood the Church where the Pope is the head.

John Hallingdale again brought before the Biſhop.

After which Examination, the ſaid John was ſent unto Priſon again. And the next day, being the ſixth day of the ſaid Month, he was called before the Biſhop again, who perſwading him with ſome wreſted ſentences of the Scripture, the ſaid John Hallingdale anſwered, Becauſe I will not (ſaith he) come to your Babylonical Church, therefore (ſpeaking unto Boner) you go about to condemn me. And being of Boner further demanded, whether he would perſevere and ſtand in his Opinions or no: he made anſwer, that he would continue and perſiſt in them unto the Death. Then Boner read the bloody Sentence of Condemnation. At which time the ſaid John affirmed openly, that (thanking God) he never came into the Church ſince the Abomination came into it: and ſo he was ſent to Priſon again.

Sentence read againſt John Hallingdale by B. Boner.

Upon the ſame 6. day alſo, in the forenoon, was produced before the Biſhop the forenamed William Sparrow and had laid unto him certain Articles, which hereafter follow:

Articles

Articles miniſtred by Boner unto William Sparrow.

Articles againſt Will. Sparrow.

FIrſt, that thou William Sparrow waſt in times paſt detected and preſented lawfully unto thy Ordinary the Biſhop of London, called Edmund, who alſo is now thine Ordinary of the ſaid Dioceſs, and thou waſt preſented and detected unto him for Hereſie, Errors, aud unlawful Opinions, which thou didſt believe, ſet forth, and hold.

2 Secondly, that thou before the ſaid Ordinary didſt openly and judicially confeſs the ſaid Hereſies, Errors, and unlawful Opinions, as appeareth plainly in the Acts of the Court, had and made before the ſaid Ordinary.

3 Thirdly, that thou after the premiſſes, didſt make thy Submiſſion in writing, and didſt exhibit and deliver the ſame as thy deed, to thy ſaid Ordinary; openly confeſſing and recogniſing thy Hereſies, Errours, unlawful Opinions, and thine offences and tranſgreſſions in that behalf.

4 Fourthly, that thou after the premiſſes, didſt promiſe unto thy ſaid Ordinary voluntarily and of thine own mind, that alwayes after the ſaid Submiſſion, thou wouldeſt in all points conform thy ſelf unto the common order of the Catholick Church obſerved and kept here in this Realm of England, and in no wiſe fall again to Hereſies, Errors, or unlawful Opinions.

5 Fifthly, that thou ſince thy ſaid Submiſſion, haſt willingly fallen into certain Hereſies and Errours, and haſt holden and ſet forth diverſe unlawful Opinions, to the right great hurt of thine own Soul, and alſo to the great hinderance and loſs of diverſe others, eſpecially againſt the Sacrament of the Altar, againſt Confeſſion auricular, with other the Sacraments of the Catholick Church.

6 Sixthly, that thou ſince the ſaid Commiſſion, haſt willingly gone about divers places within the Dioceſs of London, and ſold diverſe Heretical, Erroneous and Blaſphemous Ballets about, and waſt apprehended and taken with the ſaid Ballets about thee, and committed to priſon.

Unto all which Articles the ſaid William Sparrow anſwered in effect, as hereafter followeth.

His anſwers to the Articles.

TO the firſt, ſecond, third, and fourth Articles he anſwered affirmatively, as thus: That he was preſented and detected to Boner, unto whom he made his Submiſſion, &c. as in the Articles.

To the fifth Article he anſwered, That if he had ſpoken againſt them, he had ſpoken but the truth: for they be naught, meaning the Contents of the ſaid Article.

To the ſixth, he granted to the Article, adding, that he hid ſell the ſaid Ballets then ſhewed and read before him, and that the ſame did contain Gods Word.

After which Anſwers, the ſaid William Sparrow was ſent unto priſon. And the ſame day in the afternoon, being produced before the Biſhop again, and there charged with his ſaid Submiſſion, made the year before unto the Biſhop, he anſwered thus; I am ſorry (ſaid he) that ever I made it, and it was the worſt deed that ever I did: adding further unto them, Hold up your Abomination ſo long as you can. Alſo being laid unto him, and charged by the Biſhop that he went to Church, and there was confeſſed and heard Maſs: the ſaid William Sparrow made anſwer and confeſſed, that he did ſo, but with a troubled Conſcience he ſaid, God knoweth. And ſpeaking further to the Biſhop, he ſaid, That which you call truth, I do believe (ſaid he) to be Hereſie. And alſo the Biſhop charging him again with the Contents of the fifth Article above named, he anſwered, that he had ſo done, as is coutained in the ſame Article, and ſo will do again if he were at liberty. And being further demanded of Boner, whether he would perſiſt and continue in the ſame, or no: he made anſwer, that he would not go from his Opinions: And adding thereunto, he ſaid, That which you call Hereſie (ſpeaking to the Biſhop) is good and godly., and if every hair of my head were a Man (ſaid he) I would burn them all, rather than go from the truth.

Then being demanded what ground of learning he had to cleave to his Opinions: he made anſwer and ſaid, That all the Laws now uſed (meaning the Eccleſiaſtical Laws) are naught and abominable. And further, thereunto he ſaid, That the Maſs is naught and abominable, &c. Which words being ſpoken, the Biſhop immediately read the Sentence of Condemnation upon him, and ſo delivered him to the Secular Power, by whom he was ſent to Priſon again. Anno 1557.

Sentence read againſt Will. Sparrow.

Richard Gibſon, Martyr.

WIth the other two above named, ſuffered alſo in the ſame fire Richard Gibſon, who firſt was caſt into the Counter in the Poultry (where he had been priſoner by the ſpace of two years for Suretiſhip in a matter of debt, and then ſtood upon his deliverance) then upon ſuſpicion and evil will was accuſed to Boner, for that in the Priſon he was never confeſſed, nor received at the Popiſh Altar: by reaſon whereof he was called for, and ſuſtained divers and ſundry conflicts and examinations in the cauſe of his Faith and Religion. But firſt he ſeemed to make a certain Submiſſion which alſo he exhibited with the other 28. above mentioned: but becauſe it ſeemed ſomething to differ in words from the other; it appeareth not to be received: or whether it was received or no, it is not fullly certain. This is certain, that although his Submiſſion was in the Biſhops Regiſter recorded; yet he was not delivered out from impriſonment till the day of his burning. The Articles firſt objected and miniſtred unto him by the Biſhop, were theſe:

Richard Gibſon, Martyr.

Articles objected and miniſtred to Richard Gibſon by Boner Biſhop of London.

Articles againſt Richard Gibſon.

FIrſt, that the ſaid Richard Gibſon, priſoner in the Counter in the Poultry in the Dioceſs of London, hath otherwiſe than became a faithful Chriſtian Man and a good Subject of this Realm of England behaved himſelf in words and deeds in divers conditions and points, contrary to the Order, Religion, and Faith of Chriſts Catholik Church, and contrary to the Order of this Realm, to the pernicious and evil example of the Inhabitants of the City of London, and the Priſoners of the Priſon of the ſaid Counter in the Poultry, and greatly to the hurt and dammage of his own Soul, offending eſpecially in the Articles following: By reaſon whereof the ſaid Rich. Gibſon was and is of the juriſdiction of the ſaid Biſhop of London, and ſubject to the ſaid juriſdiction, to make anſwer to his offences and tranſgreſſions under written, according to the order of the Law.

2 Secondly, that the ſaid Richard Gibſon hath unreverently ſpoken againſt the Pope, and See and Church of Rome, and likewiſe againſt the whole Church of this Realm of England, and againſt the ſeven Sacraments of the Catholick and whole Church of Chriſtendom, and againſt the Articles of the Chriſtian Faith here obſerved in this Realm of England, and againſt the commendable and laudable Ceremonies of the Catholick Church.

3 Thirdly, that the ſaid Richard Gibſon hath commended, allowed, defended, and liked, both Crammer, Latimer, Ridley, and alſo all other Hereticks here in this Realm of England, according to the Eccleſiaſtical Laws condemned for Hereticks, and alſo liked all their Heretical and Erroneous, Damnable and Wicked Opinions eſpecially againſt the Sacrament of the Altar, and the Authority of the Pope and See of Rome, with the whole Religion thereof.

3 Fourthly, that the ſaid Richard Gibſon hath comforted, ayded, aſſiſted and maintained both by words, and otherwiſe, Hereticks and Erroneous perſons, or at the leaſt ſuſpected and infamed of Hereſie and Errors condemned by the Catholick Church, to continue in their Heretical and Erroneous Opinions aforeſaid, favouring and counſelling the ſame unto his power.

5 Fifthly, that the ſaid Gibſon hath affirmed and ſaid, that the Religion and Faith commonly obſerved, kept, and uſed now here in this Realm of England, is not good and laudable, nor in any wiſe agreeable unto Gods Word and Commandment.

Q. Maries Religion diſproved.

6 Sixthly

Anno 1557.

6. Sixthly, That the ſaid Gibſon hath affirmed, that the Engliſh Service, and the Books, commonly called the Books of Communion, or Common Prayer, here ſet forth in this Realm of England in the time of K. Edward the ſixth, were in all parts and points good and godly; and that the ſame only, and no other, ought to be obſerved and kept in this Realm of England.

The Book of Engliſh Service.

7. Seventhly, That the ſaid Gibſon hath affirmed, that if he may once be out of Priſon and at Liberty, he will not come to any Pariſh Church, or Eccleſiaſtical Place, to hear Mattins, Maſs, Evenſong, or any Divine Service now uſed in this Realm of England, nor come to Proceſſion upon times and days accuſtomed, nor bear at any time any Taper or Candle, nor receive at any time Aſhes, nor bear at any time Palm, nor receive Pax at Maſs time, nor receive holy Water, nor holy Bread, nor obſerve the Ceremonies or Uſages of the Catholick Church, here obſerved or kept commonly in this Realm of England.

Mattins, Maſs, Evenſong refuſed

8. Eighthly, That the ſaid Gibſon hath affirmed, that he is not bound at any time, though he have liberty, and the preſence of a Prieſt convenient and meet, to confeſs his ſins to the ſaid Prieſt, nor to receive the Abſolution of his ſins at his hands, nor to receive of him the Sacrament, commonly called the Sacrament of the Altar, after ſuch form as is now uſed within this Realm of England.

Auricular confeſſion.

9. Ninthly, That the ſaid Gibſon hath affirmed, that prayer unto Saints, or prayers for the dead, are not laudable, available, or profitable; and that no man is bound at any time or in any place to faſt or pray, but only at his own will and pleaſure, and that it is not lawful to reſerve or keep the ſaid Sacrament of the Altar, nor in any wiſe to adore and worſhip it.

Popiſh Faſt and Prayer.

The greateſt matter which he was charged withal, was for not coming to Confeſſion, being thereunto required, for not receiving of the Sacraments of the Popiſh making, and for that he would not ſwear to anſwer unto their interrogatories laid againſt him.

Notwithſtanding, after theſe his firſt Examinations he continued in the foreſaid Priſon of the Compter a good ſpace, from the Month of May unto November, at what time he was again produced againſt the final Examination Judiciary. Where is to be noted, that Mr. Gibſon being a very big and tall man, of a perſonable and Heroical Stature, was ſent for of Boner by a little and ſhort perſon, a Promoter, like Robin Papiſt, called Robin Caley, if it were not he himſelf.

Richard Gibſon a tall and big man

This Robin Caley, having the conducting of the ſaid Gentleman from the Poultry, would needs hale him thorow Cheapſide, the Gentleman deſiring him to turn ſome other way. But the more the Gentleman intreated, the more fierce was the ſilly Jack upon him; and drawing and holding him by the Arm, would needs hale him thorow the High-ſtreet, that all the World might ſee what he could do in his Office. Mr. Gibſon, deſirous to be led without holding, willed and intreated him to let his Arm looſe, he would go quietly of his own accord with him whether he would, only craving that he might go by him freely without noting of the People.

Intolerable bragging of a vile Promoter.

The ſaucy and impotent Miſer the Promoter hearing this, who was ſcarce able to reach to his ſhoulders: Nay (ſaith he) thou ſhalt not eſcape me ſo, come on thy ways. Thou ſhalt not chooſe but come; and ſo reaching at his Arm, would needs drag him unto the Biſhop. The Gentleman content to go, yet loth to be notified in the Streets, gently requeſted again and again; that refraining his hold, he would ſuffer him to go of his own free and voluntary will; he ſhould not need to fear him, for he would not ſtart from him. To whom the Caitiff, looking up to his face, Come on thy way (ſaith he) I will hold thee faſt, ſpite of thy Beard, and whether thou wilt or no.

Mr. Gibſon ſeeing and beholding the intolerable bragging of the wretched Miſer, and moved therewith not a little, could bear no longer; but ſaid, Wilt thou, ſaid he? and added moreover, bitterly looking down towards him, that if he did not incontinently pluck away his hand (and ſo ſtayed withal) he would immediately wring his neck from his Body. Whereupon Robin Papiſt the Promoter was fain to pluck away his hold, and ſo proceeded they unto the Biſhop there to be examined again before him.

Another appearing of Rich. Gibſon.

After this, another day being aſſigned him to appear again, much talk paſſed between him and Darbyſhire ſ then Chancellor. But in fine, being required to ſwear that he ſhould anſwer unto all they would demand, he denied to anſwer unto all things the Biſhop ſhould command him as Ordinary: for he is not (ſaith he) mine Ordinary, and ſo bade him go tell the Biſhop. Before the which Biſhop he being then commanded to appear the Friday next following, was brought unto the Juſtice-Hall without Newgate, where he had the like Conflicts with the foreſaid Biſhop and divers other Juſtices. At length he was aſſigned the Saturday following, to be preſent in the Biſhops Conſiſtory Court, to hear his final Sentence. At which day and place, the ſaid Examinate appearing as he was commanded, the Biſhop after other matter of communication, asked him if he knew any cauſe why the Sentence ſhould not be read againſt him. To whom the ſaid Mr. Gibſon anſwered, That the Biſhop had nothing wherefore juſtly to condemn him. The Biſhops reaſon was again objected to him, That men ſaid he was an evil man. To whom Gibſon replying again; Yea, ſaith he, and ſo may I ſay of you alſo. To be ſhort, after this and ſuch other talk, the Biſhop haſted unto the Sentence. Which being read, Gibſon yet again admoniſhed him to remember himſelf, and to ſave his Soul, ſaid, That he would not hear the Biſhops babling; and ſaid moreover, boldly proteſting and affirming that he was contrary, and an Enemy to them all in his mind and opinion, although he had afore time kept it ſecret in mind, for fear of the Law. And ſpeaking to the Biſhop, Bleſſed, ſaid he, am I, that am curſed at your hands. We have nothing now, but thus will I: For as the Biſhop ſaith ſo muſt it be. And no Hereſie it is to turn the truth of Gods Word into lies, and that do you, meaning the Biſhop and his Fellows.

Sentence read againſt Rich. Gibſon.

Thus this valiant Souldier, fighting for the Goſpel and ſincere Doctrine of Chriſts Truth and Religion, againſt Falſhood and Error, was committed, with his Fellows, to the Secular Power.

And ſo theſe three godly men, John Hallingdale, William Sparrow, and Mr. Gibſon, being thus appointed to the ſlaughter, were the twelfth day after their Condemnation (which was the 18*th* day of the ſaid Month of November) burnt in Smithfield in London. And being brought thither to the ſtake, after their prayer made, they were bound thereunto with Chains, and Wood ſet unto them, and after Wood, fire, in the which being compaſſed about, and the fiery flames conſuming their fleſh, at the laſt they yielded glorioufly and joyfully their Souls and Lives into the holy hands of the Lord, to whoſe tuition and government I commend thee, good Reader. Amen.

The martyrdom of John Hallingdale, W. Sparrow, Rich. Gibſon, Anno 1557. Novemb. 18.

It is a little above declared in this ſtory of Richard Gibſon, how Boner miniſtred unto the ſaid Gibſon certain Articles, to the number of nine. Now let us ſee likewiſe the Articles which the ſaid Gibſon miniſtred again to Boner, according to the ſame number of nine, for him to anſwer unto, as by the ſame hereunder written may appear.

Articles proponed by Richard Gibſon unto Edmund Boner Biſhop of London, by him to be anſwered, by yea or nay, or elſe to ſay he cannot tell.

Gibſons queſtions or demands put to B. Boner.

1. WHether the Scriptures of God, written by Moſes and other holy Prophets of God, through Faith that is in Chriſt Jeſus, be available Doctrine, to make all men in all things unto Salvation learned, without the help of any other Doctrine, or no?

2. What is Authority, and from whence it cometh, and to whom it appertaineth, and to what end it tendeth?

3. Whether the holy Word of God, as it is written, doth ſufficiently teach all men, of what dignity, eſtate, or calling by office ſoever he or they be, their full, true, and lawful duty in their Office; and whether every man, of what dignity, eſtate, or calling by office ſoever he or they be, are bound upon the pain of eternal damnation, in all things to do as they are hereby taught and commanded, and in no wiſe to leave undone any thing that is to be done, being taught and commanded by the ſame?

4. Whether any Man, the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, God and Man only except, by the Holy Ordinance of God ever was, is, or ſhall be Lord over Faith, and by what lawful authority of any Man, of what dignity, eſtate, or calling by office ſoever he or they be, may uſe Lordſhip or Power over any Man for Faiths ſake, or for the ſervice of his Conſcience?

5. By what lawful authority or power any Man, of what dignity, eſtate, or calling ſoever he or they be, may be ſo bold as to alter or change the holy Ordinances of God, or any of them, or any part of them?

6. By what evident tokens Antichriſt in his Miniſters may be known; ſeeing it is written, that Sathan can change himſelf into the ſimilitude of an Angel of light, and his Miniſters faſhion themſelves as though they were the Miniſters of righteouſneſs; and how it may be known to him that is deſirous thereof, when he is one of that number, or in the danger thereof, or when he is otherwiſe?

7. What the Beaſt is, the which maketh war with the Saints of God, and doth not only kill them, but alſo will ſuffer none to buy nor ſell, but ſuch as worſhip his Image, or receive his mark in their right hands, or in their foreheads, his Name, or the number of his Name, or do worſhip his Image, which by the juſt and terrible Sentence of God already decreed, ſhall be periſhed in Fire and Brimſtone, before the Holy Angels, and before the Lamb; and they ſhall have no reſt day nor night, but the ſmoke of their torment ſhall aſcend up for evermore? Alſo what the gorgeous and glittering Whore is, the which ſitteth upon the Beaſt, with a Cup of Gold in her hand full of abominations; with whom the Kings of the Earth have committed fornication, and the Inhabitants of the Earth, and ſhe her ſelf alſo is drunken with the Blood of the Saints, which is the Wine of her Fornication; whoſe Fleſh the horns of the Beaſt, ſhall tear in pieces, and burn her with Fire. For God hath put in their hearts to do his will?

8. Whether a King over all thoſe people which are born and inhabit within his own Dominions, Regions, and Countries, or any part of them, of what dignity, eſtate, or calling by Office ſoever they be, here upon this earth immediately under Chriſt, by the Holy Ordinance of God, is lawful, ſupream, and chief Governor, or no? And whether a King over all thoſe people within his Dominions, Regions, and Countries and every part of them, by holy Ordinance of God, lawfully may, and ought not otherwiſe to do, nor ſuffer otherwiſe to be done, than in his own name, power, and authority (the Name of God only except) as lawful, ſupream, and chief Head in all things that belongeth to rule, without exception, to govern and rule? And whether all thoſe people, of what dignity, eſtate, or calling ſoever they be, are bound by the holy Ordinance of God, to owe their whole obedience and ſervice in all things without exception (their duty to God only excepted) to their King only, as to the ſupream and chief Governor upon Earth immediately under Chriſt. And whether a King without offence againſt God and his people, may give away, and not himſelf uſe that his Authority and Power given him of God; or lawfully may, without offence to God and his people (after knowledge thereof had) ſuffer himſelf by fraud or guile, or by any other unlawful mean, to be beguiled, defrauded, and ſpoyled thereof? And whether any Subject, of what dignity, eſtate, or calling ſoever he or they be, without offence to God and to his King, to the miniſhing or derogation of the Supream Prerogative Royal of his King, or of any part thereof, may do ought, or after knowledge thereof had, without offence to God and to his King, may conceive the ſame?

He meaneth the Canon Law.

9. Whether the holy written Law of God be given of God unto all Men, of what dignity, eſtate, or calling by Office ſoever they be, as well thereby to govern all their Dominions, Regions, and Countries, and their people therein inhabiting, as themſelves: and whether any Law or Laws (the holy Law of God only excepted) not being made within any Dominion, Region, or Country whereas it or they be uſed, may be lawfully uſed before it or they be, as the lawful Law or Laws of the ſame Dominion, Region, or Country, by publick and common order of the ſame Dominion, Region, or Country lawfully allowed: and whether any Subject without offence againſt God and his King, within the Dominion of his King, may lawfully uſe any ſuch Law or Laws not ſo allowed? The Death and Martyrdom of John Rough Miniſter, and Margaret Mearing, burned at London the xxii. of December.

IN this furious time of perſecution, were alſo burned theſe two conſtant and faithful Martyrs of Chriſt, John Rough a Miniſter, and Margaret Mearing. Decemb. 22. John Rough, Mar. Mearing Martyrs.

This Rough was born in Scotland, who (as himſelf confeſſeth in his anſwers to Boner's Articles) becauſe ſome of his kinsfolk would have kept him from his right of inheritance which he had to certain Lands, did at the age of xvii. years, in deſpight (and the rather to diſpleaſe his friends) profeſs himſelf into the order of the black Friers at Sterling in Scotland; where he remained the ſpace of 16. years, until ſuch time as the Lord Hamilton, Earl of Arran, and Governour of the Realm of Scotland aforeſaid (caſting a favour unto him) did uſe unto the Archbiſhop of S. Andrews, to have him out of his profeſſed order, that as a ſecular Prieſt he might ſerve him for his Chaplain. At which requeſt the Archbiſhop cauſed the Provincial of that Houſe, having thereto Authority, to diſpence with him for his habit and order. A zealous occaſion of a friarly profeſſion.

This ſuit being thus by the Earl obtained, the ſaid Rough remained in his ſervice, one whole year: during which time it pleaſed God to open his eyes, and to give him ſome knowledge of his truth, and thereupon was by the ſaid Governor ſent to Preach in the freedom of Ayre, where he continued four years, and then after the death of the Cardinal of Scotland, he was appointed to abide at Saint Andrews, and there had aſſigned unto him a yearly penſion of twenty pound from King Henry the eighth, King of England. Howbeit, at laſt weighing with himſelf his own danger, and alſo abhorring the Idolatry and Superſtition of the Country, and hearing of the freedom of the Goſpel within this Realm of England, he determined with himſelf not to tarry any longer there: And therefore, ſoon after the Battel of Muſcleborough, he came firſt unto Carliſle, and from thence unto the Duke of Somerſet, then Lord Protector of England, and by his aſſignment had appointed unto him out of the Kings Treaſury twenty pounds of yearly ſtipend, and was ſent (as a preacher) to ſerve at Carliſle, Barwick, and Newcaſtle. From whence (after he had there, according to the Laws of God and alſo of this Realm, taken a Countrey Woman of his to Wife) he was called by the Archbiſhop of York that then was, unto a Benefice nigh in the Town of Hull, where he continued until the death of that Bleſſed and good King Edward the ſixth. John Rough firſt called to the truth. John Rough firſt coming to England in K. Edw. time.

But in the beginning of the Reign of Queen Mary (perceiving the alteration of Religion, and the perſecution that would thereupon ariſe, and feeling his own weakneſs) he fled with his wife into Frizeland, and dwelt there at a place called Norden, labouring truly for his living, in knitting of Caps, Hoſe, and ſuch like things, till about the end of the Month of October laſt before his death. At which time, lacking yarn, and other ſuch neceſſary proviſion for the maintenance of his occupation, he came over again into England, here to provide for the ſame, and the tenth day of November arrived at London. Where, hearing of the ſecret ſociety, and holy Congregation of Gods Children there aſſembled, he joyned himſelf John Rough with his Wife flieth into Friz-land.

unto them, and afterwards being elected their Minister and Preacher, did continue most vertuously exercised in that Godly fellowship, teaching and confirming them in the truth of the Gospel of Christ. But in the end (such was the providence of God, who disposeth all things to the best) the twelfth day of December, he with Cuthert Symson and others, through the crafty and trayterous suggestion of a false Hypocrite and dissembling Brother, called Roger Sergeant a Taylor, were apprehended by the Vicechamberlain of the Queens House, at the Saracens Head in Islington; where the Congregation had then purposed to assemble themselves to their Godly and accustomable exercises of Prayer, and hearing the Word of God: which pretence, for the safegard of all the rest, they yet at their examinations covered and excused, by hearing of a play that was then appointed to be at that place. The Vicechamberlain, after he had apprehended them, carried Rough and Simson unto the Council, who charged them to have assembled together to celebrate the Communion or Supper of the Lord, and therefore after sundry examinations, they sent the said Rough unto Newgate; but his examinations they sent unto the Bishop of London, with a Letter signed with their hands: the copy whereof followeth.

John Rough apprehended, and by whom.

A Letter sent from the Queens Council unto Boner Bishop of London, touching the examination of John Rough, Minister.

A Letter sent from the Council to B. Boner.

After our hearty commendations to your good Lordship, we send you here inclosed the examination of a Scotish Man named John Rough, who by the Queens Majesties commandment is presently sent to Newgate, being of the chief of them that upon Sunday last, under the colour of coming to see a play at the Saracens Head in Islington, had prepared a Communion to be celebrated and received there among certain other Seditious and Heretical Persons. And forasmuch as by the said Roughs examination, containing the Story and progress of his former life, it well appeareth of what sort he is; the Queens Highness hath willed us to remit him unto your Lordship, to the end that being called before you out of Prison, as oft as your Lordship shall think good, ye may proceed, both to his further examination, and otherwise ordering of him according to the Laws, as the case shall require. And thus we bid your Lordship heartily well to fare. From Saint James the 15. day of December, 1557.

Your Lordships loving friends.

Edward Hastings.

Henry Iernegam.

Boner, now minding to make quick dispatch, did within theee days after the receit of the Letter (the 18. day of December) send for this Rough out of Newgate, and in his Palace at London ministred unto him 12. Articles: Many whereof because they contain only questions of the Profession and Religion of that age; wherein both he and his Parents were Christened (which in sundry places are already mentioned) I do here for brevity omit; minding to touch such only, as pertain to matters of Faith now in controversie, and then chiefly objected against the Martyrs and Saints of God, which in effect are these.

Articles against John Rough. Sacrament of the Altar. Confession.

First, that thou John Rough didst directly speak against the 7. Sacraments, used commonly and reverently, as things of estimation and great worthiness in the Catholick Church: and also didst reprove and condemn the substance of the said Sacraments, but especially the Sacrament of the Altar, affirming that in that same is not really and truly the very Body and Blood of Christ: and that confession to the Priest, and absolution given by him (as the Minister of Christ) for sins is not necessary or available in any wise.

Latin Service.

2. Item, thou hast misliked and reproved the Religion and Ecclesiastical Service, as it is now used in this Realm, and hast allowed the Religion and Service used in the later years of King Edward the sixth, and so much as in thee hath layn, hast by word, writing, and deed, set forwards, taught, and preached the same openly, and in sundry places affirmed, that the said English Service and Doctrine therein contained, is agreeable in all points to Gods Word, and unto the truth, condemning utterly the Latin Service now used in the Queens Reign, and inducing others by thine example to do the like.

3. Item, thou hast in sundry places within this Realm commended and approved the Opinion and Doctrine of Tho. Cranmer, late Archbishop of Canterbury; Nicholas Ridley and Hugh Latimer; concerning the Sacrament of the Altar, affirming that in the Sacrament there remaineth, after the words of Consecration, material Bread, and material Wine, without any Transubstantiation.

4. Item, that hast in sundry places of this Realm, since the Queens Reign, ministred and received the Communion as it was used in the late days of King Edward the 6. and thou knowest, or credibly hast heard of divers, that yet do keep Books of the said Communion, and used the same in private Houses out of the Church and are of Opinion against the Sacrament of the Altar.

Books of Communion

Against the Supremacy of the Pope.

5. Item, that thou in sundry places of this Realm hast spoken against the Pope of Rome, and his Apostolick See, and hast plainly contemned and despised the Authority of the same, misliking and not allowing the Faith and Doctrine thereof, but directly speaking against it; and by thine example hast induced other the Subjects of this Realm, to speak and do the like.

6. Item; thou dost know, and hast been conversant with all, or a great part of such English Men as have fled out of this Realm for Religion, and hast consented and agreed with them in their Opinions, and hast succoured, maintained, and holpen them, and hast been a conveyer of their Seditious Letters, and Books into this Realm.

7. Item, that hast thou said, that thou hast been at Rome, and tarried there about thirty days or more, and that thou hast seen little good or none there, but very much evil. Amongst the which thou sawest one great Abomination, that is to say, a Man (or the Pope) that should go on the ground, to be carried upon the Shoulders of four Men, as though he had been God and no Man: Also a Cardinal to have his Harlot riding openly behind him: And thirdly, a Popes Bull, that gave expres licence to have and use the Stews, and to keep open Bawdry by the Popes approbation and authority.

Abominable sights at Rome.

8. Item, that thou, sithence thy last coming into England out of the parts beyond the Sea, hast perniciously allured, and comforted divers of the Subjects of this Realm, both young men, old men and women, to have and use the Book of Communion, set forth in this Realm, in the later days of King Edward the sixth, and hast also thy self read and set forth the same, causing others to do the like, and to leave their coming to the Parish Churches to hear the Latin Service now used.

9. Item, that thou on the third Sunday of Advent the 12. day of this December 1557. wast apprehended at the Saracens Head at Islington, in the County of Middlesex and Dioces of London, by the Queens Vicechamberlain, with one Cuthert a Taylor, Hugh a Hosier, and divers other there assembled, under the colour of hearing a play, to have read the Communion Book, and to have used the accustomed fashion, as was in the latter days of King Edward the sixth.

Cuthert Symson, Hugh Foxe.

The Answer of John Rough, to the foresaid Articles.

His Answers to the Articles.

To the first he said and confessed, that he had spoken against the number of the said Sacraments, being fully perswaded that there be but only two Sacraments, to wit, Baptism, and the Supper of the Lord; and as for the other five, he denied them to be Sacraments, and therefore hath spoken against them. And as concerning the Sacrament of the Altar (which he then called the Supper of the Lord) he confessed that he had spoken and taught, that in the said Sacrament there is not really and substantially the very Body & Blood of Christ, but that the substance of Bread and Wine doth remain in the ſaid Sacrament, without any Tranſubſtantiation at all. Farther as touching Confeſſion of ſins to the Prieſt, he anſwered, That he thought it neceſſary, if the offence were done unto the Prieſt: but if the offence were done to another, then Confeſſion made to the Prieſt is not neceſſary, but Reconciliation only to be made to the Party ſo offended.

2. To the ſecond he anſwered, That he then did and had before miſliked the Order of Latin Service then uſed; and alſo did allow the Service uſed in the later time of K. Edwards Reign, for that the holy Scripture doth the ſame, and therefore he granted that he did teach and ſet forth the ſaid Engliſh Service, as in the ſame Article is objected.

3. To the third, he granted That he had approved the Doctrine of the Parties articulate as agreeable to Gods Word, and that they were godly learned men, and ſuch as had perfect underſtanding in the Contents of the ſame Article.

4. To the fourth he anſwered, That he did well like the Communion uſed in King Edwards days, but he ſaid, that he had not miniſtred or received the ſame here in England ſince the Queens Reign, neither yet knew any that had the Books thereof. But on the other ſide, he knew many that had thoſe Books, and that there alſo he had received the Communion in ſundry places.

5. The Contents of the fifth he granted to be true.

6. To the ſixth he confeſſed, That he had been familiar with divers Engliſh men and women, being in Frizeland, and agreed with them in Opinion, as Mr. Scory, Thomas Young, George Roe, and others, to the number of one hundred Perſons, which fled thither for Religion, uſing there the Order ſet forth in the Reign of King Edward, and otherwiſe he denieth the Contents of this Article.

7. The Contents of the ſeventh he granted in every point to be true.

8. To the eighth he anſwered and confeſſed, That ſince his laſt coming into England (which was about the tenth day of November) he had in ſundry places in the Suburbs of London prayed and read ſuch Prayers and Service, as is appointed in the Book of the Communion, and willed others to do the like, both men and women, which he did know by ſight, but not by name. Howbeit he did never cauſe any to withdraw themſelves from the Latin Service, but he ſaid it were better to pray in a Tongue that they did underſtand, than in an unknown Tongue.

9. To the ninth he confeſſed, at the time and place articulate he was preſent to hear and ſee a Play, and there was apprehended by the Queens Majeſties Vice-Chamberlain, with one Cutbert a Taylor, and one Hugh a Hoſier, and divers other both men and women, whoſe names he knew not, and by him was brought before the Council, who ſent him unto Newgate, and from thence he was brought to the Biſhop. And otherwiſe he denieth the Contents of this Article.

Another appearance of John Rough before the Biſhop.

Upon theſe Anſwers he was diſmiſſed, and the next day being the nineteenth of December, he was again brought before the ſaid Biſhop and others. Who, when they perceived his conſtantneſs, determined the next day after to bring him openly into the Conſiſtory, there to adjudge, and condemn him as an Heretick. Which purpoſe they accompliſhed: For the twentieth day at Afternoon, in the preſence of the Biſhop of London, and S. Davids, with Fecknam Abbat of Weſtminſter, and others, he was there produced. Where after much and many fair perſwaſions, Boner read unto him the Articles and Anſwers, before mentioned, in the which they charged him to have received the Orders of the Church, and therefore might not marry; and that he had refuſed to conſent unto the Latin Service then uſed in the Church. Whereunto he then anſwered and ſaid, That their Orders were nothing at all, and that he being a Prieſt, might lawfully marry, and that his Children which he had by his Wife were lawful. And touching the Service then uſed, he utterly deteſted it, ſaying, That if he ſhould live as long as did Methuſalach, yet he would never come to the Church to hear the abominable Maſs and other Service being as it was then. Upon which words the Biſhop proceeded to the actual degradation of the ſaid Rough, exempting him from all the benefits and priviledges of their Church, and after condemning him as an Heretick, committed his Body to the Secular Power, who taking him into their charge and cuſtody, carried him unto Newgate.

John Rough condemned and degraded by Boner.

Anno 1557.

A note of Mr. Rough.

Moreover, as touching the ſaid Mr. Rough, this is further to be noted, that he being in the North Country in the days of K. Edward the ſixth, was the mean to ſave Dr. Watſon's life (who in Q. Maries time was Biſhop of Lincoln) for a Sermon that he had made there. The ſaid Watſon after that, in the ſaid days of Q. Mary, being with Boner at the Examination of the ſaid Mr. Rough, to requite the good turn in ſaving his life, detected him there to be a pernicious Heretick, who did more hurt in the North parts than an hundred beſides of his Opinion. Unto whom Mr. Rough ſaid again, Why Sir, is this the reward I have for ſaving your life, when you preached erroneous Doctrine in the days of King Edward the ſixth? This Mr. Rough ſaid, he had lived thirty years, and yet had never bowed his knee to Baal; and being before Boner, among other talk, he affirmed that he had been twice at Rome, and there had ſeen plainly with his eyes, which he had many times heard of before, namely, that the Pope was the very Antichriſt: for there he ſaw him carried on mens ſhoulders, and the falſe-named Sacrament born before him. Yet was there more reverence given to him, than to that which they counted to be their god. When Boner heard this, riſing up, and making as though he would have torn his Garments, Haſt thou, ſaid he, been at Rome, and ſeen our holy Father the Pope, and doſt thou blaſpheme him after this ſort; and with that flying upon him, he plucked off a piece of his Beard, and after making ſpeedy haſte to his death, he burnt him half an hour before ſix of the clock in the morning, becauſe the day (belike) ſhould not be far ſpent, before he had done a miſchievous deed.

Bp. Boner plucked of half the Beard of John Rough.

Another note of John Rough.

Furthermore, Note that this Mr. Rough being at the burning of Auſtoo in Smithfield, and returning homeward again, met with one Mr. Farrar, a Merchant of Hallifax, who asked him, where he had been. Unto whom he anſwered, I have been (ſaith he) where I would not for one of mine eyes but I had been. Where have you been, ſaid Mr. Farrar? Forſooth (ſaith he) to learn the way. And ſo he told him he had been at the burning of Auſtoo, where ſhortly after he was burned himſelf.

A Letter written by John Rough, unto certain of his godly Friends, confirming and ſtrengthening them in the truth, which he had before taught.

A Letter of John Rough.

THe comfort of the Holy Ghoſt make you able to give conſolation to others in theſe dangerous days, when Satan is let looſe, but to the trial only of the choſen, when it pleaſeth our God to ſift his Wheat from the Chaff. I have not leiſure and time to write the great temptations I have been under. I ſpeak to Gods glory; my care was to have the ſenſes of my Soul open, to perceive the voice of God, ſaying, Whoſoever denieth me before men, him will I deny before my Father and his Angels. And to ſave the life corporal, is to loſe the life eternal. And he that will not ſuffer with Chriſt, ſhall not reign with him. Therefore moſt tender ones, I have by Gods Spirit given over the fleſh, with the fight of my ſoul, and the Spirit hath the victory. The fleſh ſhall now e're it be long, leave off to ſin, the Spirit ſhall reign eternally. I have choſen the death, to confirm the truth by me taught. What can I do more? Conſider with your ſelves, that I have done it for the confirmation of Gods Truth. Pray that I may continue unto the end. The greateſt part of the aſſault is paſt, I praiſe my God. I have in all my aſſaults felt the preſent aid of my God, I give him moſt hearty thanks therefore. Look not back, nor be ye aſhamed of Chriſts Goſpel, nor of the Bonds I have ſuffered for the ſame, thereby ye may be aſſured it is the true Word of God. The holy ones have been ſealed with the ſame mark. It is no time for the loſs of one man in the Battel, for the Camp to turn back. Up with mens hearts; blow down the dawbed walls of Hereſie. Let one take the Banner, and the other the Trumpet; I mean not to make corporal reſiſtance, but pray, and ye ſhall have Elias his defence, and Elizeus's company to fight for you. The cauſe is the Lords. Now my Brethren, I can write no more,

Another Letter of John Rough written unto the Congregation two days before he ſuffered.

THe Spirit of all Conſolation be with you, aid you, and make you ſtrong to run to the fight that is laid before you, wherein that God in all Ages hath tried his Elect, and hath found them worthy of himſelf, by coupling to their Head Jeſus Chriſt: in whom, whoſo deſireth to live godly, the ſame muſt needs ſuffer perſecution. For it is given unto them, not only to believe, but alſo to ſuffer. And the Servant or Scholar cannot be greater than his Lord or Maſter: but by the ſame way the Head is entered, the Members muſt follow: no life is in the Members which are cut from the Body: likewiſe we have no life, but in Chriſt: for by him we live, move, and have our being. My dear Son, now departing this life to my great advantage, I make change of mortality with immortality, of corruption to put on incorruption, to make my Body like to the Corn caſt into the ground, which except it dye firſt, it can bring forth no good fruit. Wherefore death is to me great advantage; for thereby the Body ceaſeth from ſin, and after turneth into the firſt Original; but after ſhall be changed, and made brighter than the Sun or Moon. What ſhall I write of this corporal death, ſeeing it is decreed of God, that all men ſhall once dye? Happy are they that dye in the Lord, which is to dye in the faith of Chriſt, profeſſing and confeſſing the ſame before many witneſſes. I praiſe my God I have paſſed the ſame journey by many temptations, the Devil is very buſie to perſwade, the world to entice with promiſes and fair words: which I omit to write leſt ſome might think I did hunt after vain glory, which is fartheſt from my heart. Laſtly, the danger of ſome falſe Brethren, who before the Biſhop of London purpoſed to confeſs an untruth to my face; yet the God that ruled Balaam, moved their hearts: where they thought to ſpeak to my Accuſation, he made them ſpeak to my Purgation: What a journey (by Gods power) I have made theſe eight days before this day, it is above fleſh and blood to bear: but as Paul ſaith, I may do all things in him which worketh in me, Jeſus Chriſt. My courſe, Brethren, have I run, I have fought a good fight; the Crown of Righteouſneſs is laid up for me, my day to receive it is not long to. Pray Brethren, for the Enemy doth yet aſſault. Stand conſtant unto the end, then ſhall you poſſeſs your Souls. Walk worthily in that Vocation wherein you are called. Comfort the Brethren. Salute one another in my name. Be not aſhamed of the Goſpel of the Croſs, by me preached, nor yet of my ſuffering: for with my blood I affirm the ſame. I go before, I ſuffer firſt the baiting of the Butchers dogs; yet I have not done what I ſhould have done: but my weakneſs, I doubt not, is ſupplied in the Strength of Jeſus Chriſt; and your wiſdoms and learning will accept the ſmall Talent, which I have diſtributed unto you (as I truſt) as a faithful Steward: and what was undone, impute that to frailty and ignorance, and with your love cover that which is and was naked in me. God knoweth ye are all tender unto me, my heart burſteth for the love of you. Ye are not without your great Paſtor of your ſoul, who ſo loveth you, that if men were not to be ſought out (as God be praiſed, there is no want of men) he would cauſe ſtones to miniſter unto you. Caſt your care on that Rock, the wind of temptation ſhall not prevail: faſt and pray, for the days are evil. Look up with your eyes of hope, for the redemption is not far off (but my wickedneſs hath deſerved that I ſhall not ſee it.) And alſo that which is behind of the blood of our Brethren, which ſhall alſo be laid under the Altar, ſhall cry for your relief. Time will not now ſuffer me to write longer Letters. The Spirit of God guide you in and out, riſing and ſitting, cover you with the ſhadow of his wings, defend you againſt the tyranny of the wicked, and bring you happily unto the Port of Eternal Felicity, where all tears ſhall be wiped from your eyes, and you ſhall always abide with the Lamb.

John Rough.

Margaret Mearing, Martyr.

The ſtory and examination of Margaret Mearing, Martyr.

IT is declared, that in the company of John Rough, was burned one Margaret Mearing, who, as the Regiſter maketh mention, was at one time and day brought with the ſaid Rough forth to Examination: where the Biſhop having no private matters to charge her withal, did the eighteenth day of December object againſt her thoſe common and accuſtomable Articles mentioned before. To which ſhe anſwered as followeth.

Her Anſwers to the Articles.

FIrſt, That there is here in Earth a Catholick Church, and that there is the true Faith of Chriſt obſerved and kept in the ſame Church.

2. Item, That there were only two Sacraments in the Church, namely, the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, and the Sacrament of Baptiſm.

3. Item, That ſhe was baptized in the Faith, and Belief of the ſaid Church, renouncing there, by her Godfathers and Godmothers, the Devil and all his works, &c.

4. Item, That when ſhe came to the age of fourteen years, ſhe did not know what her true belief was, becauſe ſhe was not then of diſcretion to underſtand the ſame, neither yet was taught it.

5. Item, That ſhe had not gone from the Catholick Faith at any time: but ſhe ſaid that the Maſs was abominable before the ſight of God, and before the ſight of all true Chriſtian People, and that it is the plain Cup of Fornication, and the Whore of Babylon. And as concerning the Sacrament of the Altar, ſhe ſaid, ſhe believed there was no ſuch Sacrament in the Catholick Church. Alſo ſhe ſaid, That ſhe utterly abhorred the Authority of the Biſhop of Rome, with all the Religion obſerved in the ſame Antichriſts Church.

6. Item, She anſwered to the ſixth Article, as to the firſt, before ſpecified.

7. Item, That ſhe hath refuſed to come to her Pariſh Church, becauſe the true Religion of Chriſt was not then uſed in the ſame: and further ſaid, That ſhe had not come unto the Church by the ſpace of one year and three quarters then laſt paſt, neither yet did mean any more to come unto the ſame in theſe Idolatrous days.

Margaret Mearing apprehended by Cluney.

8. Item, As touching the manner of her Apprehenſion, ſhe ſaid, That Cluney the Biſhops Sumner did fetch her to the Biſhop.

Theſe Anſwers being then regiſtred, they were again (with the ſaid Articles) propounded againſt her the twentieth day of December, and there being demanded if ſhe would ſtand unto thoſe her Anſwers, ſhe ſaid, I will ſtand to them unto the death; for the very Angels of Heaven do laugh you to ſcorn, to ſee your Abomination that you uſe in the Church. After the which words, the Biſhop pronounced the Sentence of Condemnation againſt her; and then delivering her unto the Sheriffs, ſhe was with the fore-named John Rough carried unto Newgate. From whence they were both together led unto Smithfield, the 22*th* day of the ſame Month of December, and there moſt joyfully gave their lives for the Profeſſion of Chriſts Goſpel.

The Martyrdom of John Rough and Margaret Mearing in Smithfield, Anno 1557. December.

When the later end of this Hiſtory of Mr. Rough and Margaret Mearing was in finiſhing, there came to our hands one neceſſary thing of the ſaid Margaret Mearing, which we thought not good to omit. The matter is this: Mr. Rough being chief Paſtor to the Congregation in the ſaid time of Queen Mary; as before you have heard (of which Company this Margaret Mearing was one) did not well like the ſaid Margaret, but greatly ſuſpected her, as many other of them did beſides, becauſe ſhe would oftentimes bring in ſtrangers among them, and in her talk ſeemed (as they thought) ſomewhat too buſie, &c. Now, what they ſaw or underſtood further in her, we know not, but this followed the evil ſuſpicion conceived of her. Mr. Rough, the Friday before he was taken, in the open face of the Congregation, did excommunicate her out of the ſame Company: and ſo ſeemed with the reſt to exclude and cut her off from their Fellowſhip and Society. Whereat ſhe being moved, did not well take it, nor in good part; but thought her ſelf not indif-ferently handled among them. Whereupon to one of her Friends in a heat, ſhe threatned to remove them all. But the Providence of God was otherwiſe. For the Sunday after, Mr. Rough being taken by the Information of one Roger Sergeant to the Biſhop of London (as hereafter thou ſhalt hear) was laid Priſoner in the Gatehouſe at Weſtminſter, where none of his Friends could come to viſit him. Then this ſaid Margaret, hearing thereof, got her a Basket, and a clean Shirt in it, and went to Weſtminſter, where ſhe, feigning her ſelf to be his Siſter, got into the Priſon to him, and did there to her power not a little comfort him.

Margaret Mearing relieveth Mr. Rough in Priſon.

Then coming abroad again, ſhe underſtanding that the Congregation ſuſpected the ſaid Sergeant to be his Promoter, went to his Houſe, and asked whether Judas dwelt not there. Unto whom anſwer was made, there dwelt no ſuch. No, ſaid ſhe? Dwelleth not Judas here that betrayed Chriſt? his name is Sergeant. When ſhe ſaw ſhe could not ſpeak with him, ſhe went her way. So the Friday after, ſhe ſtanding at Mark-lane end in London, with another Woman, a Friend of hers, ſaw Cluney, Boners Sumner, coming in the Street towards her Houſe. Whom when ſhe ſaw, ſhe ſaid to the other Woman ſtanding with her, Whither goeth yonder fine Fellow, ſaid ſhe? I think ſurely he goeth to my Houſe; and in viewing him ſtill, at the laſt ſhe ſaw him enter in at her door. So immediately ſhe went home, and asked him whom he ſought. Whereunto Cluney made anſwer and ſaid, for you; you muſt go with me. Marry (quoth ſhe) here I am; I will go with you: and coming to the Biſhop, ſhe was laid in Priſon, and the Wedneſday after burnt with Mr. Rough in Smithfield, as ye have heard.

Anno 1558.

Anno 1558.

The ſuffering and cruel Torments of Cutbert Symſon, Deacon of the Chriſtian Congregation in London, in Queen Maries days, moſt patiently abiding the cruel rage of the Papiſts for Chriſts ſake.

NExt after the Martyrdom of Mr. Rough Miniſter of the Congregation above mentioned, ſucceeded in like Martyrdom the Deacon alſo of that ſaid godly Company or Congregation in London, named Cutbert Symſon, being committed to the fire, the Year of our Lord 1558. the 28. day of March.

Anno 1558. The ſtory and cruel handling of Cutbert Symſon Deacon and Martyr.

This Cutbert Symſon was a man of a faithful and zealous heart to Chriſt and his true Flock, inſomuch that he never ceaſed labouring, and ſtudying moſt earneſtly, not only how to preſerve them without corruption of the Popiſh Religion, but alſo his care was very vigilant, how to keep them together without peril or danger of perſecution. The pains, travel, zeal, patience, and fidelity of this man, in caring and providing for this Congregation, as it is not lightly to be expreſſed; ſo is it wonderful to behold the Providence of the Lord by viſion, concerning the troubles of this faithful Miniſter and godly Deacon, as in this here following may appear.

The viſions ſent to Gods Saints concerning their Afflictions.

The Friday at night before Mr. Rough Miniſter of the Congregation (of whom mention is made before) was taken, being in his Bed he dreamed, that he ſaw two of the Guard leading Cutbert Symſon Deacon of the ſaid Congregation, and that he had the Book about him, wherein were written the names of all them which were of the Congregation. Whereupon being ſore troubled, he awaked, and called his Wife, ſaying, Kate, ſtrike a light, for I am much troubled with my Brother Cutbert this night. When ſhe had ſo done, he gave himſelf to read in his Book a while, and there feeling ſleep to come upon him, he put out the Candle, and ſo gave himſelf again to reſt. Being aſleep, he dreamed the like dream again; and, awaked therewith, he ſaid, Oh Kate, my Brother Cutbert is gone. So they lighted a Candle again, and roſe. And as the ſaid Mr. Rough was making him ready to go to Cutbert to ſee how he did, in the mean time the ſaid Cutbert came in with the Book containing the names and accounts of the Congregation. Whom when Mr. Rough had ſeen, he ſaid, Brother Cutbert, ye are welcome: for I have been ſore troubled with you this night, and ſo told him his dream. After he had ſo done, he willed him to lay the Book away from him, and to carry it no more about him. Unto which Cutbert anſwered, he would not ſo do: for dreams, he ſaid, were but phantaſies, and not to be credited. Then Mr. Rough ſtraitly charged him in the name of the Lord to do it. Whereupon the ſaid Cutbert took ſuch Notes out of the Book, as he had willed him to do, and immediately left the Book with Mr. Rough's Wife.

The next day following, in the night, the ſaid Mr. Rough had another dream in his ſleep concerning his own trouble. The matter whereof was this. He thought in his dream that he was carried himſelf forcibly to the Biſhop, and that the Biſhop pluckt off his Beard, and caſt it into the fire, ſaying theſe words, Now I may ſay I have had a piece of an Heretick burned in my Houſe, and ſo accordingly it came to paſs.

Now to return to Cutbert again; as we have touched ſomething concerning theſe viſions, ſo now remaineth to ſtory alſo of his pains and ſufferings upon the Rack, and otherwiſe, like a good Laurence for the Congregations ſake, as he wrote it with his own hand.

A true Report how he was uſed in the Tower of London, being ſent thither by the Council, the thirteenth day of December.

A Letter of Cutbert Symſon to certain of his friends.

ON the Thurſday after, I was called into the Warehouſe, before the Conſtable of the Tower, and the Recorder of London Mr. Cholmley; they commanded me to tell, whom I did will to come to the Engliſh Service. I anſwered, I would declare nothing. Whereupon I was ſet in a Rack of Iron, the ſpace of three hours as I judged.

Then they asked me if I would tell them. I anſwered as before. Then was I looſed, and carried to my lodging again. On the Sunday after I was brought into the ſame place again before the Lieutenant and the Recorder of London, and they examined me. As before I had ſaid, I anſwered. Then the Lieutenant did ſwear by God I ſhould tell. Then did they bind my two fore-fingers together, and put a ſmall Arrow betwixt them, and drew it through ſo faſt that the blood followed, and the Arrow brake.

Then they racked me twice. Then was I carried to my Lodging again, and ten days after the Lieutenant asked me if I would not confeſs that which before they had asked me. I ſaid, I had ſaid as much as I would. Then five weeks after he ſent me unto the High Prieſt, where I was greatly aſſaulted, and at whoſe hand I received the Popes Curſe, for bearing witneſs of the Reſurrection of Jeſus Chriſt. And thus I commend you unto God, and to the Word of his Grace, with all them that unfeignedly call upon the Name of Jeſus, deſiring God of his endleſs mercy, through the Merits of his dear Son Jeſus Chriſt, to bring us all to his everlaſting Kingdom; Amen. I praiſe God for his great mercy ſhewed upon us. Sing Oſanna unto the Higheſt with me Cutbert Symſon. God forgive me my ſins. I ask all the World forgiveneſs, and I do forgive all the World, and thus I leave this World, in hope of a joyful Reſurrection.

A note of Cutbert Symſons patience.

A note of Cutbert Symſon.

NOw as touching this Cutbert Symſon, this further is to be noted, that Boner in his Conſiſtory ſpeaking of Cutbert Symſon, gave this teſtimony of him there to the People, ſaying, Ye ſee this man, ſaith he, what a perſonable man he is; and after he had thus commended his perſon, added moreover; And furthermore concerning his patience, I ſay unto you, that if he were not an Heretick, he is a man of the greateſt patience that yet ever came before me: For I tell you, he hath been thrice racked upon one day in the Tower. Alſo in my Houſe he hath felt ſome ſorrow, and yet I never ſaw his patience broken, &c.

The patience of Cutbert Symſon.

It is thought and ſaid of ſome, that that Arrow which was grated betwixt his fingers, being tied together, was not in the Tower, but in the Biſhops houſe.

A viſion of Cutbert Symſon.

The day before the bleſſed Deacon and Martyr of God, Cutbert Symſon, after his painful racking, ſhould go to his Condemnation before Boner, to be burned, being in the Biſhops Colehouſe there in the Stocks, he had a certain Viſion or Apparition very ſtrange, which he himſelf with his own mouth declared to the godly learned man Mr. Auſten, to his own Wife, and Thomas Symſon, and to others beſides, in the Priſon of Newgate a little before his death. The relation whereof I ſtand in no little doubt whether to report abroad or not, conſidering with my ſelf the great diverſity of mens judgments by the reading of Hiſtories, and variety of Affections. Some I ſee will not believe it, ſome will deride the ſame, ſome alſo will be offended with ſetting forth things of that ſort incertain, eſteeming all things to be incertain and incredible, whatſoever is ſtrange from the common order of Nature.

Others will be perchance agrieved, thinking with themſelves; or elſe thus reaſoning with me, that although the matter were as is reported, yet forſomuch as the common errour of believing raſh Miracles, Phantaſies, Viſions, Dreams and Apparitions thereby may be confirmed, more expedient it were the ſame to be un-ſet forth.

Theſe, and ſuch like, will be, I know, the ſayings of many. Whereunto briefly I anſwer, granting firſt, and admitting with the words of Baſil, ὁ πᾶν ὄνειρον εἶναι προφητείαν. That is, not every Dream is ſtreightway a Prophecy. Again, neither am I ignorant that the Papiſts in their Books and Legends of Saints have their prodigious Viſions and Apparitions of Angels, of our Lady, of Chriſt, and other Saints: which as I will not admit to be believed for true; ſo will they ask me again why ſhould I then more require theſe to be credited of them, than theirs of us.

Firſt, I write not this, binding any man preciſely to believe the ſame, ſo as they do theirs, but only report it as it hath been heard of perſons known, naming alſo the Parties who were the hearers thereof, leaving the judgment thereof notwithſtanding free unto the arbitrement of the Reader. Albeit, it is no good Argument, proceeding from the ſingular or particular, to the univerſal, to ſay that Viſions be not true in ſome: Ergo, they be true in none. And if any ſhall muſe, or object again, Why ſhould ſuch Viſions be given to him, or a few other ſingular perſons, more than to all the reſt, ſeeing the other were in the ſame cauſe and quarrel, and died alſo Martyrs as well as he? To this, I ſay, concerning the Lords times and doings I have not to meddle nor make, who may work where and when it pleaſeth him. And what if the Lord thought chiefly above the other with ſingular conſolation to reſpect him, who chiefly above the other, and ſingularly did ſuffer moſt exquiſite Torments for his ſake? What great marvel herein? But, as I ſaid, of the Lords ſecret times I have not to reaſon. This only which hath out of the mans own mouth been received, ſo as I received it of the Parties, I thought here to communicate to the Reader, for him to judge thereof as God ſhall rule his mind. The matter is this.

What credit is to be given to viſions, and how far.

The day before this Symſon was condemned, he being in the Stocks, Cluney his Keeper cometh in with the Keys about nine of the Clock at night (after his uſual manner) to view his Priſon, and ſee whether all were preſent, who when he eſpied the ſaid Cutbert to be there, departed again, locking the doors after him. Within two hours after, about eleven of the Clock toward midnight, the ſaid Cutbert (whether being in a ſlumber, or being awake I cannot ſay) heard one coming in, firſt opening the outward door, then the ſecond, after the third door, and ſo looking in to the ſaid Cutbert, having no Candle or Torch that he could ſee, but giving a brightneſs and light moſt comfortable and joyful to his heart, ſaying, Ha, unto him, and departed again. Who it was he could not tell, neither I dare define. This that he ſaw, he himſelf declared four or five times to the ſaid Mr. Auſten, and to others. At the ſight whereof he received ſuch joyful comfort, that he alſo expreſſed no little ſolace in telling and declaring the ſame.

His anſwer to the Articles. UNto all which Articles the ſaid Cutbert Symſon anſwered thus, or the like in effect.

To the firſt, ſecond, third, fourth, fifth, and ſixth Article, he confeſſed them to be true in every part thereof.

To the ſeventh Article he ſaid, That he was not bound to anſwer unto it, as he believeth.

A Letter of Cutbert Symſon, written to his Wife out of the Colehouſe.

A Letter of Cutbert Symſon to his wife. DEarly beloved in the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, I cannot write as I do wiſh unto you.

I beſeech you with my Soul, commit your ſelf under the mighty hand of our God, truſting in his mercy, and he will ſurely help us, as ſhall be moſt unto his glory and our everlaſting comfort, being ſure of this, that he will ſuffer nothing to come unto us, but that which ſhall be moſt profitable for us.

For it is either a Correction for our ſins, or a trial of our Faith, or to ſet forth his glory, or for all together, and therefore muſt needs be well done. For there is nothing that cometh unto us by Fortune or Chance, but by our Heavenly Fathers Providence. And therefore pray unto our Heavenly Father, that he will ever give us his Grace to conſider it. Let us give him moſt hearty thanks for theſe his fatherly Corrections; for as many as he loveth, he correcteth. And I beſeech you now be of good chear, and count the Croſs of Chriſt greater riches, than all the vain pleaſures of England, I do not doubt (I praiſe God for it) but that you have ſupped with Chriſt at his Maundy, I mean, believe in him: for that is the effect, and then muſt you drink of his Cup, I mean his Croſs (for that doth the Cup ſignifie unto us.) Take the Cup with a good ſtomach, in the Name of God, and then ſhall you be ſure to have the good Wine, Chriſts Blood, to thy poor thirſty Soul. And when you have the Wine, you muſt drink it out of this Cup. Learn this when you come to the Lords Supper. Pray continually. In all things give thanks. Anno 1558.

In the Name of Jeſus ſhall every knee bow, Cutbert Symſon.

Hugh Foxe.
John Deveniſh.

Hugh Foxe, & Deveniſh, Martyrs. WIth Cutbert likewiſe was apprehended and alſo ſuffered (as is before mentioned) Hugh Foxe and John Deveniſh. Who being brought unto their Examinations with the ſaid Cutbert, before Bonner Biſhop of London, the Nineteenth day of March, had Articles and Interrogatories to them miniſtred by the ſaid Officer, albeit not all at one time. For firſt to the ſaid Cutbert ſeveral Articles were propounded, then other Articles in general were miniſtred to them altogether. The order and manner of which Articles, now joyntly to them miniſtred here follow, with their Anſwers alſo to the ſame annexed to be ſeen.

Articles generally miniſtred to them all three together, the ſaid 19th day of March, with their Anſwers to the ſame annexed.

General Articles objected to them all three together. AFter theſe Articles thus miniſtred and laid to Cutbert Symſon, with his Anſwers likewiſe unto the ſame, the Biſhop calling them all together, objected to them other Poſitions and Articles, the ſame which before are mentioned in the ſtory of Bartlet Green, only the eighth Article out of the ſame omitted and excepted: which Articles, becauſe they are expreſſed in the place above mentioned, we need not here make any new report thereof, but only refer the Reader to the place aſſigned.

The Anſwers general of Cutbert Symſon, Hugh Foxe, and John Deveniſh, to the Articles by the Biſhop to them generally propoſed.

Their Anſwers general to the Articles. TO the firſt Article they all anſwered affirmatively; but John Deveniſh added, That that Church is grounded upon the Prophets and Apoſtles, Chriſt being the Head corner-ſtone, and how in that Church there is the true Faith and Religion of Chriſt.

To the ſecond Article they all confeſſed and believed, That in Chriſts Catholick Church there are but two Sacraments, that is to wit, Baptiſm and the Supper of the Lord; otherwiſe they do not believe the Contents of this Article to be true in any part thereof.

To the third Article they all anſwered affirmatively.

To the fourth Article they all anſwered affirmatively.

To the fifth Article they all anſwered affirmatively, That they do believe, and have, and will ſpeak againſt the Sacrifice of the Maſs, the Sacrament of the Altar, and likewiſe againſt the Authority of the See of Rome, and are nothing ſorry for the ſame, but will do it ſtill while they live.

To the ſixth Article they all anſwered, and denied to acknowledge the Authority of the See of Rome to be lawful and good, either yet his Religion.

To the ſeventh Article they all anſwered affirmatively, that they have and will do ſtill while they live; and John Deveniſh adding thereto, ſaid that the Sacrament of the Altar, as it is now uſed, is no Sacrament at all.

To the eighth Article they all confeſſed, and believed all things, above by them acknowledged and declared, to be true, and that they be of the Dioceſs of London, and Juriſdiction of the ſame.

Theſe three above named Perſons, and bleſſed Witneſſes of Jeſus Chriſt, Cutbert, Foxe, and Deveniſh, as they they were altogether apprehended at Iſlington, as is above declared, ſo the ſame all three together ſuffered in Smithfield about the 28*th* day of March, in whoſe perfect conſtancy the ſame Lord (in whoſe cauſe and quarrel they ſuffered) giver of all Grace, and Governour of all things, be exalted for ever, Amen.

The ſuffering and martyrdom of William Nichol, put to death by the wicked hands of the Papiſts at Hereford-Weſt in Wales.

April 9. Wil. Nichol, Martyr.

WE find in all Ages from the beginning, that Satan hath not ceaſed at all times to moleſt the Church of Chriſt with one Affliction or other, to the trial of their Faith, but yet never ſo apparently at any time to all the World, as when the Lord hath permitted him power over the Bodies of his Saints, to the ſhedding of their Blood, and perverting of their Religion; for then ſleepeth he not, I warrant you, from the murdering of the ſame, unleſs they will fall down with Achab and Jezabel to worſhip him, and ſo kill and poyſon their own Souls eternally; as in theſe miſerable latter days of Queen Mary we have felt, heard, and ſeen practiſed upon Gods People. Among whom we find recorded an honeſt good ſimple poor man, one William Nichol, who was apprehended by the Champions of the Pope, for ſpeaking certain words againſt the cruel Kingdom of Antichriſt, and the ninth day of April, Anno 1558. was butcherly burnt and tormented at Hereford-Weſt in Wales, where he ended his life in a moſt happy and bleſſed ſtate, and glorioufly gave his Soul into the hands of the Lord, whoſe goodneſs be praiſed for ever, Amen.

Wil. Nichol a ſimple Soul.

This William Nichol (as we are informed) was ſo ſimple a good Soul, that many eſteemed him half fooliſh. But what he was we know not, but this we are ſure, he died a good man, and in a good cauſe, whatſoever they judge of him. And the more ſimplicity and feebleneſs of wit appeared in him, the more beaſtly and wretched doth it declare their cruel and tyrannical act therein. The Lord give them Repentance therefore, if it be his bleſſed will, Amen, Amen.

The Martyrdom of William Seaman, Thomas Carman, and Thomas Hudſon, put to death by the perſecuting Papiſts at Norwich in the County of Norfolk.

May 19: The ſtory and martyrdom of Wil. Seaman, Tho. Carman, and Tho. Hudſon.

IMmediately after William Nichol, ſucceeded in that honourable and glorious Vocation of Martyrdom three conſtant godly men at Norwich in Norfolk, who were cruelly and tyrannically put to death for the true teſtimony of Jeſus Chriſt, the nineteenth of May, Anno 1558. whoſe names be theſe:

William Seaman.
Thomas Carman.
Thomas Hudſon.

Wil. Seaman. The ſaid William Seaman was an Husbandman, of the Age of twenty ſix years, dwelling in Mendleſham, in the County of Suffolk, who was ſundry times ſought for by the commandment of Sir John Tyrrel Knight, Sir John Tyrrel Kt. and at laſt he himſelf in the night ſearched his Houſe and other places for him; notwithſtanding he ſomewhat miſt of his purpoſe, God be thanked. Then he gave charge to his Servants, Robert Baulding and James Clarke, with others to ſeek for him. Who, having no Rob. Bauldin, James Clark, Perſecutors. Officer, went in the Evening to his Houſe; where he being at home, they took him and carried him to their Maſter Sir John Tyrrel. This Baulding being Seamans nigh Neighbour, and whom the ſaid Seaman greatly truſted as a ſpecial Friend, notwithſtanding to do his Maſter a pleaſure, now became Enemy to his chief Friend, and was one of the buſieſt in the taking of him. Now as they were going to carry him to their A Light out of the Element. Maſter Sir John Tyrrel in the night, it is credibly reported that there fell a Light between them out of the Element, and parted them, this Baulding being in company with the reſt when the Light fell; and albeit he was then in his beſt Age, yet after that time never Gods puniſhment upon a Perſecutor. enjoyed good day, but pined away even unto death.

Well, for all that ſtrange ſight; (as I ſaid) they carried him to their Maſter. Who, when he came, asked him why he would not go to Maſs; and receive the Sacrament, and ſo to worſhip it? Unto which William Seaman anſwered, denying it to be a Sacrament, but ſaid it was an Idol, and therefore would not receive it. After which words ſpoken, Sir John Tyrrel ſhortly ſent Seaman brought to Bp. Hopton, and by him Condemned. him to Norwich to Hopton then Biſhop, and there after Conference and Examination had with him, the Biſhop read his bloody Sentence of Condemnation againſt him; and afterward delivered him to the Secular Power, who kept him unto the day of Martyrdom.

This

Seamans Wife and his 3 young Children were perſecuted alſo by Sir J. Tyrrel.

This ſaid William Seaman left behind him when he died, a Wife and three Children very young: and with the ſaid young Children his Wife was perſecuted out of the ſaid Town alſo of Mendleſham, becauſe that ſhe would not go to hear Maſs, and all her Corn and Goods ſeiſed and taken away by Maſter Chriſtopher Coles Officers, he being Lord of the ſaid Town.

Thomas Carman Martyr.

Thomas Carman (who, as is ſaid, pledged Richard Craſhfield at his burning, and thereupon was apprehended) being Priſoner in Norwich, was about one time with the reſt examined and brought before the ſaid Biſhop, who anſwered no leſs in his Maſters cauſe than the other; and therefore had the like reward that the other had, which was the Biſhops Bloody bleſſing of Condemnation, and delivered alſo to the Secular Power, who kept him with the other until the day of ſlaughter, which haſted on, and was not long after.

Carman condemned.

Tho. Hudſon Martyr.

Thomas Hudſon was of Aileſham in Norfolk, by his occupation a Glover, a very honeſt poor Man, having a Wife, and three Children, labouring always truly and diligently in his vocation, being of thirthy years of age, and bearing ſo good a will to the Goſpel, that he in the days of King Edward the ſixth, two years before Queen Maries Reign, learned to read Engliſh of Anthony and Thomas Norgate of the ſame Town, wherein he greatly profited about the time of alteration of Religion. For when Queen Mary came to Reign, and had changed the Service in the Church, putting in for Wheat, draff and darnel, and for good Preaching, Blaſphemous crying out againſt Truth and Godlineſs; he then avoiding all their Ceremonies of Superſtition, abſented himſelf from his houſe, and went into Suffolk a long time, and there remained travelling from one place to another, as occaſion was offered. At the laſt he returned back again to Norfolk to his Houſe at Aileſham, to comfort his Wife and Children, being heavy, and troubleſom with his abſence.

Anno 1558.

Hudſon learneth to read Engliſh.

Hudſon fleeth from Papiſtry.

Now when he came home, and perceived his continuance there would be dangerous, he and his Wife deviſed to make him a place among his fagots to hide himſelf in, where he remained all the day (inſtead of his chamber) reading and praying continually, for the ſpace of half a year, and his Wife like an honeſt Woman being careful for him, uſed her ſelf faithfully and diligently towards him.

Berry the Commiſſary, a perſecutor.

In the mean time came the Vicar of the Town, named Berry (who was one of the Biſhops Commiſſaries, a very evil Man) and inquired of this ſaid Thomas Hudſons Wife for her Husband. Unto whom ſhe anſwered, as not knowing where he was. Then the ſaid Berry rated her, and threatned to burn her, for that ſhe would not bewray her Husband where he was. After that when Hudſon underſtood it, he waxed every day more zealous than other, and continually read and ſang Pſalms to the wonder of many, the people openly reſorting to him, to hear his exhortations and vehement Prayers.

Hudſon waxeth bold in the truth.

At the laſt he walked abroad for certain days openly in the Town, crying out continually againſt the Maſs and all their trumpery, and in the end coming home in his Houſe he ſate him down upon his Knees, having his Book by him, reading and ſinging Pſalms continually without ceaſing for three days and three nights together, refuſing meat and other talk, to the great wonder of many.

J. Crouch bewrayeth Tho. Hudſon to the Conſtables.

Then one John Crouch his next neighbour went to the Conſtables, Robert Marſham and Robert Lawes in the night, to certifie them thereof: for Berry commanded openly to watch for him, and the Conſtables underſtanding the ſame, went cruelly to catch him in the break of the day, the two and twentieth of the Month of April, Anno 1558.

The taking of T. Hudſon.

Now when Hudſon ſaw them come in, he ſaid; Now mine hour is come. Welcom friends, welcom. You be they that ſhall lead me to life in Chriſt. I thank God therefore, and the Lord enable me thereto for his mercies ſake. For his deſire was, and ever he prayed (if it were the Lords will) that he might ſuffer for the Goſpel of Chriſt. Then they took him, and lead him to Berry the Commiſſary, which was Vicar of the Town, and the ſaid Berry asked him firſt, where he kept his Church for four years before. To the which the ſaid Hudſon anſwered thus, whereſoever he was, there was the Church.

Talk between Berry and Hudſon.

Doſt thou not believe, ſaid Berry, in the Sacrament of the Altar? What is it?

Sacrament of the Altar.

Hudſon. It is worms meat; my belief (ſaith he) is in Chriſt Crucified.

Berry. Doſt thou not believe the Maſs to put away Sins?

The Maſs.

Hudſon. No, God forbid; it is a patched Monſter, and a diſguiſed Puppet, more longer a piecing than ever was Salomons Temple. At which word Berry ſtamped, fumed, and ſhewed himſelf as a madman, and ſaid, Well, thou villain, thou: I will write to the Biſhop my good Lord, and truſt unto it, thou ſhalt be handled according ding to thy deserts. Oh Sir, said Hudson, there is no Lord but God, though there be many Lords and many Gods. With that Berry thrust him back with his hand. And one Richard Cliffar standing by, said I pray you Sir, be good to the poor Man. At which words Berry was more mad than before, and would have had Cliffar bound in a recognisance of forty pounds for his good abearing, both in word and deed; which his desire took no effect. Then he asked the said Hudson whether he would recant, or no. Unto the which words Hudson said, the Lord forbid; I had rather dye many deaths than to do so.

Rich. Cliffar.

Seaman, Carman, and Hudson condemned at Norwich.

Then after long talk, the said Berry, seeing it booted not to perswade with him, took his pen and ink, and wrote Letters to the Bishop thereof, and sent this Hudson to Norwich bound like a theef to him, which was eight miles from thence, who with joy and singing chear went thither, as merry as ever he was at any time before. In Prison he was a Month, where he did continually read, and invocate the Name of God.

These three Christians and constant Martyrs, William Seaman, Thomas Carman, and Thomas Hudson, after they were (as ye have heard) condemned the 19. day of May. Anno 1558. were carried out of Prison to the place where they should suffer, which was without Bishopsgate at Norwich, called Lollards Pit. And being all there, they made their humble Petitions unto the Lord. That being done, they rose and went to the Stake, and standing all there with their Chains about them, immediately this said Thomas Hudson cometh forth from them under the Chain, to the great wonder of many; whereby divers feared and greatly doubted of him. For some thought he would have recanted; other judged rather that he went to ask further day, and to desire conference; and some thought he came forth to ask some of his Parents Blessing. So some thought one thing, and some another: but his two companions at the Stake cried out to comfort him what they could, exhorting him in the Bowels of Christ to be of good chear, &c. But this sweet Hudson felt more in his Heart and Conscience than they could conceive in him. For alas good Soul, he was compassed (God knoweth) with great dolour and grief of mind, not for his death, but for lack of feeling of his Christ: and therefore being very careful he humbly fell down upon his Knees, and Prayed vehemently and earnestly unto the Lord, who at the last (according to his old mercies) sent him comfort, and then rose he with great joy, as a Man new changed even from death to life, and said:

Tho. Hudson cometh forth from under the Chain to pray.

Hudson careful to have the feeling of Christ.

Hudson satisfied of his desire.

Now I thank God I am strong; and pass not what Man can do unto me. So going to the Stake to his fellows again, in the end they all suffered most joyfully, constantly, and manfully, the death together, and were consumed in Fire, to the terror of the wicked, the comfort of Gods Children, and the magnifying of the Lords Name, who be praised therefore for ever, Amen.

After this, the foresaid Commissary Berry made great stir about other which were suspected within the said Town of Ailesham, and caused two hundred to creep to the Cross at Pentecost, besides other punishments which they sustained.

Berry striketh a poor Man, whereupon he dyed.

On a time this Berry gave a poor Man of his Parish of Marsham a blow with the swingel of a flail, for a word speaking, that presently thereon he died, and the said Berry, as is said, held up his hand at the Bar therefore.

Berry striketh a poor Woman, whereupon she dyed.

Then after that in his Parish of Ailesham also, An. 1557. there was one Alice Oxes came to his House, and going into the Hall he meeting her, being before moved, smote her with his fist, whereby she was fain to be carried home, & the next day was found dead in her Chamber.

To write how many Concubines and Whores he had, none would believe it, but such as knew him in the Country where he dwelt. He was rich, and of great Authority, a great swearer, altogether given to Women, and persecuting the Gospel, and compelling Men to Idolatry.

John Norgate a Confessor.

One John Norgate, a Man learned, Godly, and zealous, who would not go to their trash, but rather dye, being sore hunted by the said Berry prayed heartily to God, and the Lord shortly after in a consumption delivered him. Notwithstanding the rage of this wicked Man waxed fiercer and fiercer. He troubled sundry Men, burnt all good Books that he could get, and divorced many Men and Women for Religion.

The rage of Berry.

When he heard say that Queen Mary was dead, and the glory of their triumph quailed, the Sunday after, being the nineteenth of November Anno 1558. he made a great feast, and had one of his Concubines there, with whom he was in his Chamber after dinner, until Even song. Then went he to Church, where he had ministred Baptism, and in going from Church homeward after Even-song, between the Church-yard and his House, being but a little space (as it were a Church-yard breadth asunder) he fell down suddenly to the ground with a heavy groan, and never stirred after, neither shewed any one token of repentance.

Gods punishment and terrible end of Berry.

This hapned his neighbours being by, to the example of all other. The Lord grant we may observe his judgments. And those that had his great riches, since his death have so consumed with them, that they be poorer now than they were before they had his goods: such judgment hath the Lord executed to the eyes of all Men.

Berries goods consumed as wax against the Fire.

At that time one Dunning Chancellor of Lincoln (which in some part of Queen Maries days was Chancellor of Norwich, and a very merciless Tyrant as lived) died in Lincolnshire of as sudden a warning as the said Berry died.

Gods punishment upon Dunning Chancellor of Norwich.

Thus have I shewed thee (good Reader) the constancy, boldness, and glorious victory of these happy Martyrs, as also the tyrannical cruelty of that unfortunate Commissary, and his terrible end. The Lord grant we may all effectually honour the Judgments of God, and fear to displease his holy Majesty. Amen.

¶ The Persecution of Mother Seaman.

Joan Seaman also persecuted by Sir John Tyrrel.

ABout this time, or somwhat before, was one Joan Seaman, Mother to the aforesaid William Seaman, being of the Age of threescore and six years, persecuted of the said Sir John Tyrrel also, out of the Town of Mendlesham aforesaid, because she would not go to Mass and receive against her Conscience. Which good old Woman being from her House, was glad sometime to lye in Bushes, Groves, and Fields, and sometime in her Neighbours House, when she could. And her Husband being at home, about the age of eighty years, fell sick; and she hearing thereof, with speed returned home to her House again, not regarding her life, but considering her duty, and shewed her diligence to her Husband most faithfully, until God took him away by death. Then by Gods providence she fell sick also, and departed this life within her own House shortly after.

The duty of a good Wife.

Symonds the Commissary would not let Mother Seaman be buried in the Church-yard.

And when one Master Symonds the Commissary heard of it, dwelling thereby in a Town called Thorndon, he commanded straightly that she should be buried in no Christian burial (as they call it) where through her friends were compelled to lay her in a pit under a Motes side. Her Husband and she kept a good House, and had a good report amongst their neighbours, willing always to receive strangers, and to comfort the poor and sick, and lived together in the Holy estate of Matrimony very honestly above 40. years, and she departed this Life willingly and joyfully, with a stedfast Faith and a good remembrance of Gods promise in Christ Jesus.

The persecution of Mother Benet.

Mother Benet, a Confessor.

IN the said time of Queen Mary, there dwelt in the Town of Wetherset by Mendlesham aforesaid, a very honest Woman called Mother Benet, a Widow, which was persecuted out of the same Town, because she would not go to Mass, and other their beggarly Ceremonies; but at the last she returned home again secretly to her House, and there departed this Life joyfully. But Sir John Tyrrel and Master Symonds the Commissary would not let her be buried in the Church-yard. So was she laid in a grave by the high-way side.

Sir John Tyrrel and M. Symonds would not suffer mother Benet to be buried in the Church-yard.

The same good old Woman Mother Benet, in the time of persecution, met one of the said Mother Seamans Neighbours, and asked her how the said Mother Seaman did; and she answered, that she did very well, God be thanked. Oh, said she, Mother Seaman hath stept a great step before me; for she was never covetous that I could perceive.

Her Husband in his mirth would say unto her; O Woman, if thou wert sparing, thou mightest have saved me an hundred Marks more than thou haſt. To the which ſhe would anſwer again gently, and ſay; O man, be content, and let us be thankful; for God hath given us enough, if we can ſee it. Alas, good husband, would ſhe ſay, I tell you truth, I cannot ſirken up my butter, and keep my cheeſe in the Chamber and wait a great price, and let the poor want, and ſo diſpleaſe God. But, husband, let us be rich in good works, and ſo ſhall we pleaſe the Lord, and have all good things given us, &c. This good Woman, of that vice of covetouſneſs, of all that knew her, was adjudged leaſt to be ſpotted, of any infirmity ſhe had. The Lord root it out of the hearts of them that be infected therewith, Amen.

The order and occaſion of taking certain Godly Men and Women praying together in the fields about Iſlington, of whom thirteen were condemned by Boner, and after ſuffered in the Fire for the truths ſake, as in the Story here following may appear.

June 27. 22 Men taken. 13. Martyrs burned.

SEcretly in a back cloſe in the Field by the Town of Iſlington, were collected and aſſembled together a certain company of Godly and Innocent perſons, to the number of 40. Men and Women. Who there ſitting together at prayer, and vertuouſly occupied in the meditation of Gods holy Word, firſt cometh a certain Man to them unknown; who looking over unto them, ſo ſtayed and ſaluted them, ſaying, that they looked like Men that meant no hurt. Then one of the ſaid company asked the Man, if he could tell whoſe cloſe that was, and whether they might be ſo bold there to ſit. Yea, ſaid he, for that ye ſeem unto me ſuch perſons as intend no harm; and ſo departed. Within a quarter of an hour after, cometh the Conſtable of Iſlington, named King, warded with ſix or ſeven other, accompanying him in the ſame buſineſs, one with a Bow, another with a Bill, and other with their Weapons likewiſe. The which ſix or ſeven perſons the ſaid Conſtable left a little behind him in a cloſe place, there to be ready if need ſhould be, while he with one with him ſhould go view them before. Who ſo doing, came through them, looking and viewing what they were doing, and what Books they had; and ſo going a little forward, and returning back again, bade them deliver their Books. They underſtanding that he was Conſtable, refuſed not ſo to do. With that cometh forth the reſidue of his fellows above touched, who bade them ſtand, and not depart. They anſwered again, they would be obedient and ready to go whitherſoever they would have them, and ſo were they firſt carried to a Brewhouſe but a little way off, while that ſome of the ſaid Souldiers ran to the Juſtice next at hand. But the Juſtice was not at home; whereupon they were had to Sir Roger Cholmley. In the mean time ſome of the Women, being of the ſame number of the foreſaid forty perſons, eſcaped away from them, ſome in the cloſe, ſome before they came to the Brewhouſe. For ſo they were carried, ten with one Man, eight with another, and with ſome more, with ſome leſs, in ſuch ſort as it was not hard for them to eſcape that would. In fine, they that were carried to Sir Roger Cholmley, were twenty ſeven, which Sir Roger Cholmley and the Recorder taking their Names in a Bill, and calling them one by one, ſo many as anſwered to their Names, he ſent to Newgate. In the which number of them that anſwered, and that were ſent to Newgate, were twenty and two.

King Conſtable of Iſlington.

Sir Roger Cholmley, and the Recorder of London, perſecutors.

Theſe two and twenty were in the ſaid Priſon of Newgate ſeven weeks before they were examined, to whom word was ſent by Alexander the Keeper, that if they would hear a Maſs, they ſhould all be delivered. Of theſe foreſaid two and twenty were burned thirteen: In Smithfield ſeven, at Brainford ſix.

22. Sent to Newgate.

IN Priſon two dyed in Whitſon-week, the Names of whom were Matthew Wythers, T. Taylor. Confeſſors.

Seven of them which remained eſcaped with their lives hardly, although not without much trouble, yet (as God would) without burning. Whoſe Names were theſe:

John Willes.	Hudleys.
Thomas Hinſhaw.	T. Coaſt, Haberdaſher.
R. Baily, Woolpacker.	Roger Sandy.
Robert Willes.

Perſecuted Chriſtians.

The firſt ſeven were brought forth to examination before Boner, and ſo having their condemnation, were burnt (as is ſaid) in Smithfield. The other ſix followed not long after, and ſuffered at Brainford, whereof ſpecially here followeth now in order of Story to be ſeen.

The

Anno 1558.

The Examination and Condemnation of Seven godly and faithful Martyrs of Christ, burnt in Smithfield.

June 27. Seven Martyrs burned in Smithfield.

CONcerning the Examination and Condemnation of these aboveſaid, which were apprehended and taken at Iſlington, ſeven firſt were produced before Boner the 14*th* of June, to make Anſwer to ſuch Articles and Interrogatories, as by the ſaid Biſhop ſhould be miniſtred unto them. The names of theſe ſeven were:

Martyrs.

Henry Pond.	John Floyd.
Robert Southam.	Roger Holland.
Matthew Ricarby.

To theſe ſeven conſtant and godly Martyrs, produced before Boner, certain Articles were miniſtred in this effect as followeth.

Articles.

Articles by Bp. Boner miniſtred to the ſeven Martyrs.

FIrſt, That ye being within the City and Dioceſs of London have not, according to the common cuſtom of the Catholick Church of this Realm of England, come to your own Pariſh Church, nor yet to the Cathedral Church of this City and Dioceſs of London, to hear devoutly and chriſtianly the Mattins, the Maſs, the Evenſong, ſung or ſaid there in the Latin Tongue, after the common uſage and manner of the Church of this Realm.

2. Secondly, That ye have not come to any of the ſaid Churches to pray, to go in Proceſſion, or to exerciſe your ſelves there in godly and laudable exerciſes.

3. Thirdly, That you have not conformed your ſelves duly to all the laudable Cuſtoms, Rites, and Ceremonies of any the ſaid Churches.

4. Fourthly, Ye have not been confeſſed at due times and places to your own Curate, of your ſins.

5. Fifthly, Ye have not received at your ſaid Curates hands (as of the Miniſter of Chriſt) abſolution of your ſins.

6. Sixthly, You have not at due times and places of your Curate received reverently and duly the Sacrament of the Altar.

7. Seventhly, Ye have not faithfully and truly believed, that in the ſaid Sacrament of the Altar, there is really and truly the very Body and Blood of Chriſt.

8. Eighthly, Ye have not by your mouth, nor otherwiſe by your deed expreſſed or declared in any wiſe, that ye without wavering or doubting do think and believe, that the Faith and Religion now obſerved in the Church of England, is a true Faith and Religion in all points.

9. Ninthly, Ye have not made any ſignification that you do in deed approve, or allow in any wiſe the common Service in Latin, here obſerved and kept in the Church of this Realm of England.

10. Tenthly, Ye have not believed, nor do believe at this preſent, that the Service in Latin, commonly uſed and obſerved in the Church of this Realm, is good and lawful, and not againſt the Word of God.

11. Eleventhly, Ye have in times paſt liked, allowed, and approved as good and godly, and ſo do like, allow, and approve at this preſent, the Service in Engliſh, the Books of Common Prayer, the Books of Communion, the Religion ſet forth and uſed in the time of King Edward the ſixth, eſpecially as it was ſet forth and uſed in the latter days of the ſaid King Edward.

12. Twelfthly, Ye have in times paſt been very deſirous, and ſo are at this preſent, that the ſaid Engliſh Service, the ſaid Book of Common Prayer, the ſaid Book of Communion, and the ſaid Religion and Faith ſo ſet forth and uſed in King Edwards time, might now again be reſtored, ſet forth and uſed, and your ſelf freely at your liberty, without any reſtraint or lets to uſe it, and alſo in all points and things to do therein, as ye did, eſpecially in the latter days of the ſaid Edward the ſixth.

13. Thirteenthly, Ye have of late been charitably ſent to from me the Biſhop of London, and alſo by mouth exhorted, that where of late you did leave your Churches, and went in the time of Divine Service into the fields and prophane places, to read Engliſh Pſalms, and certain Engliſh Books, ye would leave off that, and being out of Priſon, and at your liberty, come into your own Pariſh Churches, there to hear Mattins, Maſs, and Evenſong, after the common order of the Churches of this Realm, and to make due confeſſion of your ſins to your own Curate, and receive at his hands (as of the Miniſter of Chriſt, having therein ſufficient Authority) abſolution of your ſins, hear Maſs, receive the Sacrament of the Altar with a true Faith, according to the Belief of the Catholick Church, and obſerve all other the Rites and Cuſtoms of the ſaid Catholick Church uſed in this Realm of England, as well in going in Proceſſion after the Croſs, as alſo otherwiſe generally.

14. Fourteenthly, Ye being ſo required, have refuſed, and do refuſe ſo to do, ſaying, amongſt other vain and light words, that forſomuch as ye were impriſoned by the ſpace of ſix weeks, not knowing wherewith ye were charged, your Petition ſhould be and was, that ye might firſt anſwer to your former cauſe, and then ye would be ready to anſwer me the ſaid Biſhop to all that by me ſhould be laid to our charge.

Unto the which Articles all the forenamed ſeven (only Reinold Eaſtland excepted) made anſwer in effect as hereafter followeth.

The Anſwers of the forenamed perſons to the Articles aforeſaid.

Their Anſwers to the Articles aforeſaid.

TO the firſt Article they anſwered affirmatively, Roger Holland adding, that he came not to their Latin Service theſe two years before.

Matthew Ricarby added, That he came not to Church ſince Latin Service was renewed, becauſe it is againſt the Word of God, and Idolatry is committed in creeping to the Croſs.

Henry Pond added, if he had licence then to go to Church, he would not.

2. To the ſecond Article they all anſwered affirmatively; Henry Pond adding as in the firſt Article. John Floyd added, That the Latin ſervice then uſed, was ſet up by man, and not by God, and this he learned (he ſaid) in King Edwards days, which he believed to be true. Robert Southam added, That he refuſed to come to Church, becauſe it is furniſhed with Idols; and becauſe the Sacrament of the Altar he believed to be an Idol.

3. To the third Article they all anſwered affirmatively: For they ſaid, That the Cuſtoms, Rites, and Ceremonies of the Church then uſed, are not agreeable to Gods Word.

4, 5. To the fourth and fifth Articles, they all anſwered affirmatively, adding, that they believed no Prieſt hath Power to remit ſin.

6. To the ſixth Article John Holiday, Henry Pond, and Robert Southam anſwered, That ſince the Queens Majeſties reign; but Robert Southam added, not for ten years before, he had received the Sacrament of the Altar, either at their Curates hands, or any other Prieſt. John Floyd, Matthew Ricarby and Roger Holland anſwered affirmatively, adding in effect that the Sacrament of the Altar is no Sacrament approved by the Word of God, &c.

7. To the ſeventh Article they all confeſſed the Contents thereof to be true in every part; Henry Pond adding, That he knoweth not nor believeth any ſuch Sacrament, called the Sacrament of the Altar, but confeſſeth the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, and believeth that to be approved. John Floyd added, That thoſe that kneel to and worſhip the Sacrament of the Altar, commit Idolatry, &c.

8, 9, 10. To the eighth, ninth, and tenth Articles, they all confeſſed the contents of thoſe Articles to be true. But John Holiday, Henry Pond, and John Floyd added, That they do allow the Latin Service for them that underſtand the ſame, ſo far as it agreeth with Gods Word. For ſome part thereof is not agreeable to Gods Word (they ſaid:) but to ſuch as do not underſtand the ſaid Service in Latin, they do not allow it, for it doth not profit them. Robert Southam added and ſaid, That it was a fond queſtion to ask a ſimple man, whether the Latin Service be good and lawful. Matthew Ricarby and Roger Holland denied the Service in Latin to be good.

11. To the eleventh Article, they all confeſſed the ſame to be true in every part; ſaving Henry Pond, and Matthew Ricarby, who anſwered in effect that they could not judge thereof, but leave them to be tried by the Word of God.

12. To the twelfth Article, they granted and confeſſed the ſame to be true, and deſired of God that the Service were in the Engliſh again.

13. To the thirteenth Article they all granted and confeſſed the ſame to be true.

14. To the fourteenth Article they all granted and confeſſed the ſame to be true in every part.

An Oath to end a ſtrife lawful, but to begin a ſtrife it is unlawful.

Thus have ye the Anſwers of theſe men to the foreſaid Articles, ſave that Reinald Eaſtland required to anſwer thereunto, refuſed ſo to do, alledging that he knoweth that to end a ſtrife an Oath is lawful; but to begin a ſtrife an Oath is not lawful; and therefore he now refuſeth to take his Oath in the beginning of this matter againſt him. Whereupon being charged by the Biſhop, he ſaid for his not anſwering to the Articles, he was content to ſtand unto the order of the Law for his puniſhment, whatſoever it ſhould be.

The Condemnation of Reinold Eaſtland.

The 17*th* day after of the ſaid Month of June, the ſaid Eaſtland appeared again before the Biſhop, who ſtanding firm in that he had ſaid before, denied to make any Anſwer in that caſe, &c. whereupon the ſaid Eaſtland, with the other ſix his his fellow Priſoners, were aſſigned by the Biſhop to repair again to the ſame place at After-noon, who being there preſent in the foreſaid Conſiſtory as they were commanded, and ſtanding all together before the ſaid Biſhop, he beginning thus with them, asked them, if he had committed them to Priſon: They ſaid, No; but Mr. Cholmley and the Recorder of London committed them to Newgate.

Anno 1558.

Then being demanded further by the Biſhop, if he had done any thing or act to keep them in Priſon, or to hinder their Liberty from Priſon; to this they anſwered they could not tell. Then the foreſaid Articles being again recited to them, all they anſwered and knowledged them to be the Articles, and that they would ſtand to their Anſwers made to the ſame. Whereupon the Biſhop diſſevering them apart one from another, proceeded with them ſeverally, firſt beginning with Reinald Eaſtland, who there declared that he had been uncharitably handled and talked withal ſince his firſt impriſonment in that behalf. Then being required to reconcile himſelf again to the Catholick Faith, and go from his Opinions; he ſaid, that he knew nothing why he ſhould recant; and therefore would not conform himſelf in that behalf, &c. and ſo the Sentence was read againſt him, and he given to the Secular Power, &c.

The words of Eaſtland to the Biſhop at his Condemnation.

After him was called in John Holiday, who likewiſe being advertiſed to renounce his Hereſies (as they called them) and to return to the Unity of their Church, ſaid, That he was no Heretick, nor did hold any Hereſie, neither any Opinion contrary to the Catholick Faith, and ſo would offer himſelf to be judged therein. Whereupon he likewiſe perſiſting in the ſame, the Sentence was pronounced againſt him, condemning him to be burnt.

The words of J. Holiday.

The Condemnation of J. Holiday.

Next to him was condemned, with the like Sentence,

The Condemnation of Hen. Pond.

Henry Pond, becauſe he would not ſubmit himſelf to the Romiſh Church, ſaying to Boner, That he had done or ſpoken nothing whereof he was or would be ſorry, but that he did hold the Truth of God, and no Hereſie, &c.

After whom next followed John Floyd, who likewiſe denied to be of the Popes Church, and ſaid his mind of the Latin Service, that the Prayers made to Saints is Idolatry, and that the Service in Latin is profitable to none, but only to ſuch as underſtand the Latin. Moreover, being charged by Boner of Hereſie, and ſaying, that whatſoever he and ſuch other now-a-days do, all is Hereſie; for this he was condemned with the ſame butcherly Sentence, and ſo by the Secular Power was ſent away.

The Condemnation of J. Floyd, R. Southam, Mat. Ricarby and Roger Holland.

Then Robert Southam, after him Matthew Ricarby, and laſt of all Roger Holland were ſeverally produced.

Thus Roger Holland with his Fellows (as ye heard) ſtanding to their Anſwers, and refuſing to acknowledge the Doctrine of the Romiſh Church, were altogether condemned, the Sentence being read againſt them, and ſo all ſeven by Secular Magiſtrates being ſent away to Newgate the ſeventeenth of June, not long after, about the ſeven and twentieth day of the ſaid Month were had to Smithfield, and there ended their lives in the glorious cauſe of Chriſts Goſpel. Whoſe particular Examinations came not to our hands; ſaving only the Examinations of R. Holland, which here follow in order and manner as we received them by the Information of certain, who were preſent at the ſame.

The

Anno 1558.

The Examination and Condemnation of Roger Holland.

The first examination of Roger Holland.

THis Roger Holland, a Merchant-Taylor of London, was first an Apprentice with one Mr. Kempton at at the Black Boy in Watling-street, where he served his Apprenticeship with much trouble unto his Master in breaking him from his licentious liberty which he had before been trained and brought up in, giving himself to riot, as dancing, fencing, gaming, banqueting, and wanton company; and besides all this, being a stubborn and an obstinate Papist, far unlike to come to any such end as God called him unto; the which was as followeth:

His Master, notwithstanding this his lewdness, putting him in trust with his Accompts, he had received for him certain mony, to the sum of thirty pounds, and falling into ill Company, lost the said mony every Groat at Dice, being past all hope which way to answer it, and therefore he purposed to conveigh himself away beyond the Seas, either into France or into Flanders.

Now having determined with himself thus to do, he called betimes in the Morning to a Servant in the House, an ancient and discreet Maid, whose name was Elizabeth, which professed the Gospel, with a life agreeing unto the same, and at all times much rebuking the wilful and obstinate Papistry, as also the licentious living of this Roger Holland. To whom he said, Elizabeth, I would I had followed thy gentle perswasions and friendly rebukes; which if I had done, I had never come to this shame and misery which I am now faln into; for this Night have I lost thirty pounds of my Masters mony, which to pay him, and to make up mine Accompts, I am not able. But this much I pray you desire my Mistress, that she would intreat my Master to take this Bill of my hand, that I am thus much indebted unto him; and if I be ever able, I will see him paid, desiring him that the matter may pass with silence, and that none of my Kindred nor Friends may ever understand this my lewd part: For if it should come unto my Fathers ears, it would bring his grey hairs over-soon unto his Grave; and so was he departing.

A godly example of a Maid, setting more by the Soul of a Christian brother, than by her mony.

The Maid considering that it might be his utter undoing, Stay, said she; and having a piece of mony lying by her, given unto her by the death of a Kinsman of hers, who (as it was thought, was Dr. Redman) she brought unto him thirty pounds, saying, Roger, here is thus much mony; I will let thee have it, and I will keep this Bill. But since I do thus much for thee, to help thee, and to save thy honesty, thou shalt promise me to refuse all lewd and wild Company, all swearing and ribaldry talk; and if ever I know thee to play one Twelve-pence at either Dice or Cards, then will I shew this thy Bill unto my Master. And furthermore, thou shalt promise me to resort every day to the Lecture at Alhallows, and the Sermon at Pauls every Sunday, and to cast away all thy Books of Papistry and vain Ballads, and get thee the Testament and Book of Service, and read the Scriptures with reverence and fear, calling unto God still for his Grace to direct thee in his Truth. And pray unto God fervently, desiring him to pardon thy former offences, and not to remember the sins of thy youth; and ever be afraid to break his Laws, or offend his Majesty. Then shall God keep thee, and send thee thy hearts desire.

Reg. Holland brought to the love of the Gospel.

After this time, within one half year God had wrought such a change in this man, that he was become an earnest Professor of the Truth, and detested all Papistry and evil Company; so that he was in admiration to all them that had known him and seen his former life and wickedness.

Reg. Holland converteth his Parents to the Gospel.

Then he repaired into Lancashire unto his Father, and brought divers good Books with him, and bestowed them upon his Friends, so that his Father and others began to taste of the Gospel, and to detest the Mass, Idolatry, and Superstition; and in the end his Father gave him a stock of mony to begin the world withal, to the sum of fifty pounds.

Reg. Holland repayeth the Maid her mony again, and marrieth her.

Then he repaired to London again, and came to the Maid that lent him the mony to pay his Master withal, and said unto her, Elizabeth, here is thy mony I borrowed of thee, and for the friendship, good will, and the good counsel I have received at thy hands, to recompence thee I am not able; otherwise than to make thee my wife; and soon after they were married, which was in the first year of Queen Mary. And having a Child by her, he caused Mr. Rose to baptize his said Child in his own House. Notwithstanding he was bewrayed unto the Enemies, and he being gone into the Country to convey the Child away, that the Papists should not have it in their anointing hands, Boner caused his Goods to be seized upon, and most cruelly used his wife.

Holland's Child christened in his house.

Reg. Holland brought to Newgate.

After this he remained closely in the City, and in the Country in the Congregations of the Faithful, until the last year of Queen Mary. Then he with the six other aforesaid, were taken in, or not far from S. Johns Wood, and so brought to Newgate upon May-day in the Morning, Anno 1558.

Then being called before the Bishop, Dr. Chadsey, both the Harpsfields, and certain others, after many other fair and crafty perswasions of Dr. Chadsey, to allure him to their Babylonical Church; thus the Bishop began with him.

Holland. I for my part do wish well unto thee, and the more for thy Friends sake. And as Dr. Standish telleth me, you and he were both born in one Parish, and he knoweth your Father to be a very honest Catholick Gentleman. And Mr. Doctor told me that he talked with you a year ago; and found you very wilfully addict to your own conceit. Divers of the City also have shewed me of you, that you have been a great Procurer of mens Servants to be of your Religion, and to come to your Congregations; but since you be now in the danger of the Law, I would wish you to play a wise mans part: So shall you not want any favour I can do or procure for you, both for our own sake, and also for your Friends, which be men of worship and credit, and wish you well, and by my troth, Roger, so do I.

Then said Mr. Egleſtone, a Gentleman of Lancashire, and near Kinsman to Roger, being there present; I thank your good Lordship; your Honour meaneth good unto my Cosin, I beseech God he have the Grace to follow your counsel.

Holland. Sir, you crave of God you know not what: I beseech God to open your eyes to see the light of his Word.

Egleſtone. Roger, hold your peace, lest you fare the worse at my Lords hands.

Holland. No, I shall fare as it pleaseth God; for man can do no more than God doth permit him.

Reg. Holland willed to submit himself to the Bishop.

Then the Bishop and the Doctors, with Johnson the Register, casting their Heads together, in the end saith Johnson; Roger, how saist thou? wilt thou submit thy self unto my Lord, before thou be entered into the Book of Contempt?

Holland. I never meant but to submit my self unto the Magistrate, as I learn of S. Paul to the Romans, Chap. 13. and so he recited the Text.

Chadsey. Then I see you are no Anabaptist.

Holland. I mean not yet to be a Papist; for they and the Anabaptists agree in this point, not to submit themselves to any other Prince or Magistrate, than those that must first be sworn to maintain them and their doings.

Chadsey. Roger, remember what I have said, and also what my Lord hath promised he will perform with further friendship. Take heed, Roger, for your ripeness of Wit hath brought you into these Errors.

Holland. Mr. Doctor, I have yet your words in memory, though they are of no such force to prevail with me. Then they whispered together again, and at the last said Boner, Roger, I perceive thou wilt be ruled by no good counsel, for any thing that either I, or your Friends or any other can say.

Reg. Holland first a great Papist.

Holland. I may say to you, my Lord, as Paul said to Felix and unto the Jews, as doth appear in the two and twentieth of the Acts, and in the fifteenth of the first Epistle to the Corinthians. It is not unknown unto my Master whom I was Apprentice withal, that I was of this your blind Religion that now is taught, and therein did obstinately and wilfully remain, until the later end of King Edward in manner, having that liberty under your Auricular Confession, that I made no conscience of sin, but trusted in the Priests Absolution, he for mony doing some penance also for me: which after I had given, I cared no further what offences I did, no more than he passed after he had my mony, whether he tasted Bread and Water for me, or no: so that letchery, swearing, and all other vices I accompted no offence of danger, so long as I could for mony have them absolved. So straitly did I observe your rules of Religion, that I would have Ashes upon Ashwednesday, though I had used never so much wickedness at night. And albeit I could not of Conscience eat flesh upon the Friday, yet in swearing, drinking, or dicing all the night long, I made no conscience at all. And thus was I brought up, and herein have I continued till now of late, that God hath opened the light of his Word, and called me by his Grace to repentance of my former Idolatry and wicked Life: for in Lancashire their blindness and whoredom is overmuch more than may with chast ears be heard. Yet these my Friends, which are not clear in these notable Crimes, think the Priest with his Mass can save them, though they blaspheme God, and keep Concubines besides their Wives, as long as they live. Yea, I know some Priests, very devout, my Lord, yet such as have six or seven children by four or five sundry women.

The wickedness of Rog. Holland before he was called to the Gospel.

At these Examinations, divers of Rog. Hollands friends and kinsfolks, being men of worship, were present, both of Lancashire and Cheshire.

Mr. Doctor, now to your Antiquity, Unity, and Universality (for these Dr. Chadsey alledged as notes and tokens of their Religion) I am unlearned. I have no sophistry to shift my Reasons withal; but the truth I trust I have, which needeth no painted colours to set her forth. The Antiquity of our Church is not from Pope Nicholas, or Pope Joan, but our Church is from the beginning, even from the time that God said unto Adam, that the Seed of the Woman should break the Serpents head; and so to faithful Noah; to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to whom it was promised, that their Seed should multiply as the Stars in the Sky; and so to Moses, David, and all the holy Fathers that were from the beginning, unto the birth of our Saviour Christ. All they that believed these promises were of the Church, though the number were oftentimes but few and small, as in Helias's days, when he thought there was none but he that had not bowed their knees to Baal, when God had reserved seven thousand that never had bowed their knees to that Idol: as I trust there be seven hundred thousand more than I know of, that have not bowed their knees to the Idol your Mass, and your God Maozim: the upholding whereof is your bloody cruelty, whiles you daily persecute Helias and the Servants of God, forcing them (as Daniel was in his Chamber) closely to serve the Lord their God; and even as we by this your cruelty are forced in the fields to pray unto God, that his holy Word may be once again truly preached amongst us, and that he would mitigate and shorten these idolatrous and bloody days, wherein all cruelty reigneth. Moreover, our Church have been the Apostles and Evangelists, the Martyrs and Confessors of Christ, that have at all times and in all ages been persecuted for the testimony of the Word of God. But for the upholding of your Church and Religion, what Antiquity can you shew? Yea, the Mass, that Idol and chief Pillar of your Religion, is not yet four hundred years old, and some of your Masses are younger, as that Mass of S. Thomas Becket the Traitor, wherein you pray, That you may be saved by the blood of S. Thomas. And as for your Latin Service, what are we of the Laity the better for it? I think he that should hear your Priests mumble up their Service, although he did well understand Latin, yet should he understand few words thereof; the Priests do so champ them and chaw them, and post so fast, that neither they understand what they say, nor they that hear them; and in the mean time the People, when they should pray with the Priest, are set to their Beads to pray our Ladies Psalter. So crafty is Satan to devise these his Dreams (which you defend with Fagot and Fire) to quench the light of the Word of God; which (as David saith) should be a Lanthorn to our feet. And again, wherein shall a young man direct his ways, but by the Word of God? And yet you will hide it from us in a Tongue unknown. S. Paul had rather in the Church to have five words spoken with understanding, than ten thousand in an unknown Tongue; and yet will you have your Latin Service and praying in a strange Tongue, whereof the People are utterly ignorant to be of such Antiquity?

The Mass, how old it is.

Latin Service.

Anno 1558.

The Greek Church differing from the Latin.

The Greek Church, and a good part of Christendom besides, never received your Service in an unknown Tongue, but in their own natural Language, which all the People understand, neither yet your Transubstantiation, your receiving all alone, your Purgatory, your Images, &c.

As for the Unity which is in your Church, what is it else but Treason, Murther, Poysoning one another, Idolatry, Superstition, Wickedness? What Unity was in your Church, when there were three Popes at once? Where was your Head of Unity when you had a woman Pope? Here he was interrupted, and could not be suffered to proceed; but, saith the Bishop, Roger, these thy words are very blasphemy, and by the means of thy Friends thou hast been suffered to speak, and art over malapert to teach any here. Therefore Keeper take him away.

The second Examination of Roger Holland.

The second Examination of Roger Holland.

THE day that Henry Pond and the rest were brought forth to be again examined, Dr. Chadsey said, Roger, I trust you have now better considered of the Church than you did before.

Holland. I consider thus much: That out of the Church there is no Salvation, as divers ancient Doctors say.

Boner. That is well said. Mr. Egleston, I trust your Kinsman will be a good Catholick man. But Roger, you mean, I trust, the Church of Rome.

Holland. I mean that Church which hath Christ for her Head; which also hath his Word, and his Sacraments according to his Word and Institution.

Chadsey. Then Chadsey interrupted him, and said, is that a Testament you have in your hand?

Holland. Yea, Mr. Doctor, it is the New Testament. You will find no fault with the Translation (I think.) It is of your own Translation; it is according to the great Bible.

Boner. How say you? How do you know it is the Testament of Christ, but only by the Church? For the Church of Rome hath and doth preserve it, and out of the same hath made Decrees, Ordinances, and true Expositions.

No (saith Roger) the Church of Rome hath and doth suppress the reading of the Testament. And what a true Exposition (I pray you) did the Pope make thereof, when he set his foot on the Emperor's neck, and said, Thou shalt walk upon the Lion and the Asp: the young Lion and the Dragon shalt thou tread under thy foot? Psal. 91.

Then said the Bishop; Such unlearned wild heads as thou and other, would be Expositors of the Scripture. Would you then the ancient Learned (as there be some here as well as I) should be taught of you?

Holland. Youth delighteth in vanity. My wildness hath been somewhat the more by your Doctrine, than ever I learned out of this Book of God. But (my Lord) I suppose some of the old Doctors say; If a poor Lay-man bring his Reason and Argument out of the Word of God, he is to be credited afore the Learned, though they be never so great Doctors. For the gift of Knowledge was taken from the Learned Doctors, and given to poor Fishermen. Notwithstanding I am ready to be instructed by the Church.

Boner. That is very well said, Roger. But you must understand that the Church of Rome is the Catholick Church. Roger, for thy Friends sake (I promise thee) I wish thee well, and I mean to do thee good. Keeper, see he want nothing. Roger, if thou lack any mony to pleasure thee, I will see thou shalt not want. This he spake unto him alone, his Fellows being apart, with many other fair Promises, and so he was sent to Prison again.

The

Anno 1558.

The laſt Examination of Roger Holland.

The laſt Examination of Roger Holland.

THe laſt Examination of Roger Holland was, when he with his fellow Priſoners were brought into the Conſiſtory, and there excommunicated all, ſaving Roger, and ready to have their Sentence of Judgment given, with many threatning words to fear them withal: the L. Strange, Sir Tho. Jarret, M. Egleſton Eſquire, and divers other of worſhip, both of Cheſhire and Lancaſhire; that were Roger Hollands Kinſmen and Friends, being there preſent, which had been earneſt Suters to the Biſhop in his favour, hoping of his ſafety of life. Now the Biſhop hoping yet to win him with his fair and flattering words, began after this manner.

Boner. Roger, I have divers times called thee before home to my Houſe, and have conferred with thee, and being not learned in the Latin Tongue, it doth appear unto me thou art of a good memory, and of a very ſenſible talk, but ſomething overhaſty, which is a natural Diſeaſe to ſome men. And ſurely they are not the worſt natured men. For I my ſelf ſhall now and then be haſty, but mine anger is ſoon paſt. So, Roger, ſurely I have a good opinion of you, that you will not with theſe lewd Fellows caſt your ſelf headlong from the Church of your Parents and your Friends that are here, very good Catholicks (as it is reported unto me.) And as I mean thee good, ſo, Roger, play the wiſe mans part, and come home with the loſt Son, and ſay, I have run into the Church of Schiſmaticks and Hereticks, from the Catholick Church of Rome; and you ſhall, I warrant you, not only find favour at Gods hands, but the Church that hath Authority, ſhall abſolve you, and put new Garments upon you, and kill the Fatling to make thee good chear withal, that is, in ſo doing, as meat doth refreſh and cheriſh the mind, ſo ſhalt thou find as much quietneſs of Conſcience in coming home to the Church, as did the hungry Son that had been fed afore with the Hogs, as you have done with theſe Hereticks that ſever themſelves from the Church. I give them a homely name, but they be worſe (putting his hand to his Cap for Reverence ſake) than Hogs: For they know the Church, and will not follow it. If I ſhould ſay thus much to a Turk, he would (I think) believe me. But, Roger, if I did not bear thee and thy Friends good will, I would not have ſaid ſo much as I have done, but I would have let mine Ordinary alone with you.

The Rhetorical perſwaſions of Bp. Boner.

At theſe words his Friends that were there, gave the Biſhop thanks for his good will and pains that he had taken in his and their behalf.

Boner. Well, Roger, how ſay you? Do you not believe, that after the Prieſt hath ſpoken the words of Conſecration, there remaineth the Body of Chriſt really and corporally under the forms of Bread and Wine? I mean the ſelf ſame Body that was born of the Virgin Mary, that was crucified upon the Croſs, that roſe again the third day.

The Papiſts how they take one piece of Scripture, and leave out another.

Holland. Your Lordſhip ſaith, the ſame Body which was born of the Virgin Mary, which was crucified upon the Croſs, which roſe again the third day: but you leave out which aſcended into Heaven; and the Scripture ſaith, he ſhall there remain until he come to judge the quick and the dead. Then he is not contained under the forms of Bread and Wine, by Hoc eſt Corpus meum, &c.

Boner. Roger, I perceive my pains and good will will not prevail, and if I ſhould argue with thee, thou art ſo wilful (as all thy Fellows be, ſtanding in thine own ſingularity and fooliſh conceit) that thou wouldſt ſtill talk to no purpoſe this ſeven years, if thou mighteſt be ſuffered. Anſwer whether thou wilt confeſs the Real and Corporal Preſence of Chriſts Body in the Sacrament, or wilt not.

Holland. My Lord, although God by his ſufferance hath here placed you, to ſet forth his truth and glory in us his faithful Servants; notwithſtanding your meaning is far from the zeal of Chriſt: and for all your words, you have the ſame zeal that Annas and Caiphas had, truſting to their Authority, Traditions and Ceremonies, more than to the Word of God.

Boner. If I ſhould ſuffer him, he would fall from reaſoning to raving, as a frantick Heretick.

L. Strange. Roger (ſaith the Lord Strange) I perceive my Lord would have you tell him whether you will ſubmit your ſelf to him, or no?

Boner. Yea, ſaith Boner, and confeſs this Preſence that I have ſpoken of.

With this, Roger turning him to the Lord Strange and the reſt of his Kinſmen and Friends, very chearfully kneeled down upon his knees, and ſaid, God by the mouth of his Servant S. Paul hath ſaid, Let every Soul ſubmit himſelf unto the higher Powers, and he that reſiſteth receiveth his own Damnation: and as you are a Magiſtrate appointed by the will of God, ſo do I ſubmit my ſelf unto you, and to all ſuch as are appointed for Magiſtrates.

Boner. That is well ſaid, I ſee you are no Anabaptiſt. How ſay you then to the Preſence of Chriſts Body and Blood in the Sacrament of the Altar?

The Preſence of the Sacrament.

Holland. I ſay, and beſeech you all to mark and bear witneſs with me (for ſo you ſhall do before the Judgment Seat of God) what I ſpeak; for here is the Concluſion: And ye my dear Friends (turning him to his Kinſmen) I pray you ſhew my Father what I do ſay, that he may underſtand I am a Chriſtian man. I ſay and believe, and am therein fully perſwaded by the Scriptures, that the Sacrament of the Supper of our Lord, miniſtred in the holy Communion according to Chriſts inſtitution, I being penitent and ſorry for my ſins, and minding to amend and lead a new life, and ſo coming worthily unto Gods Boord in perfect Love and Charity, do there receive by faith the Body and Blood of Chriſt. And though Chriſt in his Human Nature ſit at the right hand of his Father, yet (by faith I ſay) his Death, his Paſſion, his Merits are mine, and by faith I dwell in him, and he in me. And as for the Maſs, Tranſubſtantiation, and the worſhipping of the Sacrament, they are meer Impiety and horrible Idolatry.

Sentence read againſt Rog. Holland.

Boner. I thought ſo much, ſaid Boner, (ſuffering him to ſpeak no more) how he would prove a very blaſphemous Heretick as ever I heard. How unreverently doth he ſpeak of the bleſſed Maſs? and ſo read his bloody Sentence of Condemnation, adjudging him to be burned.

All this while Roger was very patient and quiet, and when he ſhould depart, he ſaid, My Lord, I beſeech you ſuffer me to ſpeak two words. The Biſhop would not hear him, but bade him away. Notwithſtanding, being requeſted by one of his Friends, he ſaid, Speak, what haſt thou to ſay?

Rog. Holland propheſieth of ſhortning the time of Bp. Bonner cruelty.

Holland. Even now I told you that your Authority was from God, and by his ſufferance: and now I tell you, God hath heard the Prayer of his Servants, which hath been poured forth with tears for his afflicted Saints, which daily you perſecute, as now you do us. But this I dare be bold in God to ſpeak (which by his Spirit I am moved to ſay) that God will ſhorten your hand of Cruelty, that for a time you ſhall not moleſt his Church. And this ſhall you in ſhort time well perceive, my dear Brethren, to be moſt true. For after this day, in this place ſhall there not be any by him put to the trial of Fire and Fagot: And after this day there was none that ſuffered in Smithfield for the teſtimony of the Goſpel, God be thanked.

After theſe words ſpoken, ſaid Boner, Roger, thou art, I perceive, as mad in theſe thy Hereſies as ever was Joan Butcher. In anger and fume thou wouldſt become a railing Prophet. Though thou and all the ſort of you would ſee me hanged, yet I ſhall live to burn, yea, I will burn all the ſort of you that come in my hands, that will not worſhip the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar, for all thy pratling, and ſo he went his way.

The cruel days ſhortned for the Elects ſake.

Then Roger Holland began to exhort his Friends to Repentance, and to think well of them that ſuffered for the teſtimony of the Goſpel, and with that the Biſhop came back, charging the Keeper that no man ſhould ſpeak to them without his licence, and if they did, they would be committed to Priſon. In the mean ſeaſon H. Pond and Roger ſpake ſtill unto the People, exhorting them to ſtand in the Truth: adding moreover, that God would ſhorten theſe cruel and evil days for his Elects ſake.

Anno 1558

The martyrdom of Roger Hland with six other in Smithfield.

The day they ſuffered, a Proclamation was made, That none ſhould be ſo hard to ſpeak or talk any word unto them, or receive any thing of them, or to touch them upon pain of Impriſonment, without either Bail or Mainprize; with divers other cruel threatning words, contained in the ſame Proclamation. Notwithſtanding the People cried out, deſiring God to ſtrengthen them: and they likewiſe ſtill prayed for the People, and the reſtoring of his Word. At length Roger embracing the ſtake, and the Reeds, ſaid theſe words:

Lord I moſt humbly thank thy Majeſty, that thou haſt called me from the ſtate of death, unto the light of thy heavenly Word, and now unto the fellowſhip of thy Saints, that I may ſing and ſay, Holy, holy, holy, Lord God of Hoſts. And Lord into thy hands I commit my Spirit. Lord bleſs theſe thy people, and ſave them from Idolatry. And ſo he ended his life, looking up into Heaven, praying and praiſing God, with the reſt of his Fellow Saints. For whoſe joyful conſtancy the Lord be praiſed.

July 14. Six Martyrs burnt at Brainford.

NOt long after the death of the forenamed ſeven godly Martyrs that ſuffered in Smithfield, were ſix other faithful Witneſſes of the Lords true Teſtament, martyred at Brainford ſeven miles from London, the 14*th* day of July, 1558. which ſaid ſix were of that Company that were apprehended in a Cloſe hard by Iſlington (as is above ſpecified) and ſent to Priſon. Whoſe Names and Articles propoſed to them, with their Anſwers unto the ſame, hereafter follow.

Robert Mills,
Stephen Cotton,
Robert Dynes,
Stephen Wight,
John Slade,
William Pikes, or Pikes a Tanner.
} Martyrs.

Theſe ſix forenamed Martyrs (gentle Reader) had their Articles miniſtred to them by Thomas Darbyſhire, Boners Chancellor, at ſundry times; as Robert Willes the 20*th* day of June, Stephen Wight the 21*th* day of the ſaid Month. Stephen Cotton and John Slade the 22*th* day, and Robert Dynes and William Pikes the 23*th* day. At which ſaid times, though they were ſeverally examined, yet had they all one manner of Articles miniſtred to them, yea and the ſelf ſame Articles that were miniſtred to John Holiday, Henry Pond, and their Company aforeſaid. Which ſaid Articles I leave the Reader to look for above in their ſtory, and think it not neceſſary any more to rehearſe them, but only to proceed with their Anſwers to the ſame, which briefly and in ſum hereafter followeth.

The Anſwers of the forenamed Perſons to the Articles aforeſaid.

The anſwers of the ſix former Martyrs to the Articles.

TO the firſt Article they all granted the ſame; and added thereto for going to Church, that R. Mills and Stephen Wight came not there for three quarters of a year before, and John Slade and William Pikes not ſince the Queens Reign, Stephen Cotton not for a Twelvemonth before, and Robert Dynes not for two years before.

The ſecond, third, fourth, fifth, and ſixth Articles they all anſwered in effect, as the forenamed John Holiday, Henry Pond, and their Company did, ſaving they added, that as their Rites, Cuſtoms, and Ceremonies are againſt the Word of God, ſo will they obſerve and keep no part of the ſame. Stephen Wight added further, That he received not their Sacrament of the Altar for two years before, nor John Slade and William Pikes ſince Queen Maries Reign, nor Stephen Cotton for a Twelve-month before, nor Robert Dynes for three years before.

To the ſeventh Article, They all granted the ſame in every part like unto the aforenamed Henry Pond and his Company; ſaving that Robert Dynes added, that it was no part of his Belief.

To the eighth Article they all granted the ſame in every part, as the forenamed William Hilday and his Company: but Robert Mills added thereto, that he will not come to Church, nor allow their Religion, ſo long as the Croſs is crept to, and worſhipped, and Images are in the Church. John Slade affirmed in effect as Robert Mills did, adding further, that there be not ſeven Sacraments, but two Sacraments, which is Baptiſm and the Supper of the Lord. Stephen Cotton would no further allow the Popiſh Religion, than it agreeth with Gods Word: and Robert Dynes affirmed in effect the like to Stephen Cotton alſo.

To the ninth and tenth Articles, Robert Mills, John Slade, and Stephen Cotton anſwered, that they do not allow the Popiſh Service then ſet forth, becauſe it is againſt the Truth, and in a ſtrange Language which the Common People underſtand not. Robert Dynes and William Pikes will neither allow nor diſallow the Latin Service, becauſe they underſtand it not. And Stephen Wight would make no direct Anſwer to the Articles at all, and to the eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth, and fourteenth Articles we find no Anſwers recorded of the ſaid Steph. Wight. but of the reſt of his fellow Priſoners we find anſwers to thoſe Articles which hereafter follow.

To the eleventh Article, Robert Mills, John Slade, and Stephen Cotton anſwered, That concerning the Books, Faith, and Religion ſpecified in this Article, they do allow them ſo far forth, as they agree with Gods Word, &c. Robert Dynes would make no Anſwer thereto, becauſe he thought himſelf unmeet to judge thereof: and William Pikes doth not remember that he hath miſliked the Service, and the Faith, and Religion ſet forth in K. Edward the ſixths time.

To the twelfth they grant, That if they might receive the Sacrament as they did in King Edward the ſixths days, they would with all their heart ſo do.

To the thirteenth and fourteenth Articles, they confeſs and grant the Contents of them to be true in every part.

The ſix Martyrs brought again before Darbyſhire.

When at the days before ſpecified, theſe good men were produced before Boner's Chancellor, Thomas Darbyſhire, and had the foreſaid Articles miniſtred unto them, and they (as ye have heard) had made anſwer unto the ſame; in the end the Chancellor commanded them to appear before him again the eleventh day of July after in the ſaid place at Pauls. Where when they came, he required of them, whether they would turn from their Opinions to the Mother holy Church; and if not; that then, whether there were any cauſe to the contrary, but that he might proceed with the Sentence of Condemnation. Whereunto they all anſwered, That they would not go from the Truth, nor relent from any part of the ſame while they lived. Then he charged them to appear before him again the next day in the Afternoon, between one and two of the Clock, to hear the definitive Sentence read againſt them, according to the Eccleſiaſtical Laws then in force. At which time, he ſitting in Judgment, talking with theſe godly and vertuous men, at laſt came into the ſaid place Sir Edwards Haſtings and Sir Thomas Cornwallis, Knights, two of Queen Maries Officers of her Houſe, and being there, they ſate them down over againſt the Chancellor, in whoſe preſence the ſaid Chancellor condemned thoſe good poor Lambs, and delivered them over to the Secular Power, who received and carried them to Priſon immediately, and there kept them in ſafety, till the day of their death.

Sir Edward Haſtings and Sir Thomas Cornwallis at the Condemnation of theſe Martyrs.

In the mean time this naughty Chancellor ſlept not, I warrant you, but that day in which they were condemned, he made certificate into the Lord Chancellors Office, from whence the next day after was ſent a Writ to burn them at Brainford aforeſaid, which accordingly was accompliſhed in the ſame place, the ſaid fourteenth day of July: Whereunto they being brought, made their humble Prayers unto the Lord Jeſus, undreſſed themſelves, went joyfully to the ſtake, whereunto they were bound, and the fire flaming about them, they yielded their Souls, Bodies, and Lives into the hands of the Omnipotent Lord, for whoſe cauſe they did ſuffer, and to whoſe protection I commend the gentle Reader, Amen.

Among

Anno 1557.

Among theſe ſix was one William Pikes (as ye have heard) who ſometime dwelt in Ipſwich in Suffolk, by his occupation a Tanner a very honeſt Godly Man, and of a vertuous diſpoſition, a good Keeper of Hoſpitality, and beneficial to the perſecuted in Queen Maries days. This ſaid William Pikes, in the third year of Queen Maries Reign, a little after Midſummer, being then at liberty, went into his Garden, and took with him a Bible of Rogers tranſlation, where he, ſitting with his face towards the South, reading on the ſaid Bible, ſuddenly fell down upon his book, between eleven and twelve a clock of the day, four drops of freſh Blood, and he knew not from whence it came. Then he ſeeing the ſame, was ſore aſtoniſhed, and could by no means learn (as I ſaid) from whence it ſhould fall: and wiping out one of the drops with his finger, he called his Wife, and ſaid, In the vertue of God Wife, what meaneth this? Will the Lord have four Sacrifices? I ſee well enough the Lord will have Blood: his will be done, and give me Grace to abide the trial. Wife, let us pray (ſaid he) for I fear the day draweth nigh. Afterward he daily looked to be apprehended of the Papiſts, and it came to paſs accordingly, as ye have heard. Thus much thought I good to write thereof, to ſtir up our dull ſenſes in conſidering the Lords works, and reverently to honour the ſame. His name therefore be praiſed for evermore, Amen.

Moreover, concerning the ſaid William Pikes, as he was in Newgate ſore ſick, and at the point of death, ſo that no Man looked he ſhould live ſix hours, he declared to them that ſtood by, that he had been twice in perſecution before, and that now he deſired the Lord, if it were his will, that he might glorifie his Name at the Stake, and ſo as he prayed it came to paſs at Brainford.

Ye heard before, that of thoſe two and twenty taken at Iſlington, thirteen were burned, and ſix eſcaped, albeit very hardly, and ſome of them not without ſcourging by the hands of the Biſhop. In the which number was Thomas Hinſhaw and John Willes, according to the expreſs picture hereafter purported.

MUſe not ſo much that natures work
Is thus deformed now:
With belly blown, and head ſo ſwoln,
For I ſhall tell you how:
This Cannibal in three years ſpace
Two hundred Martyrs ſlew:
They were his food, he lov'd ſo Blood,
He ſpared none he knew.

It ſhould appear that Blood feeds fat,
If Men lye well and ſoft:
For Boners Belly waxt with Blood,
Though he ſeem'd to faſt oft.
O Bloody Beaſt, bewail the death
Of thoſe that thou haſt ſlain:
In time repent, ſince thou canſt not
Their lives reſtore again.

The ſcourging of Tho. Hinſhaw.

IN the Godly number above mentioned, which were apprehended at Iſlington, there congregated together, for their exerciſe of prayer and reading, was this Thomas Hinſhaw above mamed, a young Man of the age of 19. or 20. years, prentiſe in Pauls Churchyard with one M. Pugſon, Who with the reſt was carried to the Conſtables of Iſlington, and there every one of them ſearched, and led forthwith to the chief Juſtice Maſter Cholmley, dwelling in the old Baily in London, and by him then the ſaid Thomas Hinſhaw was ſent to Newgate: and there remaining priſoner without conference with any, about eight weeks, at the laſt was ſent for to Boner Biſhop of London, and by him, Harpsfield, and Cole, examined. After which examination he was ſent to Newgate again, where he remained three weeks following. Which time being overpaſſed, he was ſent for again before the ſaid Biſhop, the day being Saturday, and with him had much talk to little purpoſe. The next day after alſo, which was Sunday, they perſwaded with him very much in like manner, and perceiving they could not bend him unto their bow, in the afternoon the Biſhop going unto Fulham, took him with him, where immediately after his coming, he was ſet in the Stocks remaining there all the firſt night with Bread and Water.

The Story of Tho. Hinſhaw

Wil. Cholmley Juſtice.

Boner, Harpsfield, & Cole.

Hinſhaw carried to Fulham, and there ſet in the Stocks with Bread and Water.

The next morning the Biſhop came and examined him himſelf, and perceiving no yielding to his mind, he ſent M. Harpsfield to talk with him; who, after long talk, in the end fell to raging words, calling the ſaid Thomas Hinſhaw peeviſh boy, and asked him whether he thought he went about to damn his Soul, or no, &c. Unto which the ſaid Thomas anſweree, that he was perſwaded that they laboured to maintain their dark and deviliſh Kingdom, and not for any love to truth. Then Harpsfield, being in a mighty rage, told the Biſhop thereof. Whereat the Biſhop fumed and fretted, that ſcant for anger being able to ſpeak, he ſaid, Doſt thou anſwer my Archdeacon ſo, thou naughty boy? I ſhall handle thee well enough, be aſſured: ſo he ſent for a couple of Rods, and cauſed him to kneel againſt a long Bench in an Arbor in his Garden, where the ſaid Thomas without any inforcement of his part, offered himſelf to the beating, and did abide the fury of the ſaid Boner, ſo long as the fat panched Biſhop could endure with breath, and till for wearineſs he was fain to ceaſe, and give place to his ſhameful act. He had two willow Rods, but he waſted but one, and ſo left off.

Hinſhaw beaten with Rods. The Boy was beholding to B. Boners grand paunch.

Now after this ſcourging, the ſaid Thomas Hinſhaw notwithſtanding did ſuſtain divers conflicts, and examinations ſundry times. At laſt being brought before the ſaid Biſhop in his Chappel at Fulham, there he had procured witneſſes, and gathered Articles againſt him, which the young Man denied, and would not affirm, or conſent to any interrogatory there and then miniſtred, do what they could.

The Articles were theſe.

Articles objected.

COncerning Palms, Aſhes, holy Bread, holy Water, Auricular confeſſion, receiving the Sacrament at Eaſter, hearing divine ſervice then ſet forth, &c.

Whether he had received all theſe, or whether he would receive them or no.

Item, what he thought of the Service ſet forth in King Edwards time, in his latter days, and in eſpecial, what he thought of the verity of Chriſts Body in the Sacrament.

The right Picture and true counterfeit of Boner, and his cruelty, in ſcourging of Gods Saints, in his Orchard at Fulham.

In all which his anſwers, the ſaid Thomas Hinſhaw kept an upright Conſcience, and entangled himſelf with none of their Ceremonies: ſo merciful was the Lord unto him.

Tho. Hinſhaw delivered to M. Pugſon his Maſter.

Not long after this his examination, about a fortnight or ſuch a thing, the foreſaid Examinate fell ſick of a burning Ague, whereby he was delivered upon entreaty unto his Maſter Martin Pugſon in Pauls Church-yard aforeſaid: for the Biſhop thought verily he was more like to dye than to live. The which his ſickneſs endured a twelve-month or more, ſo that in the mean time Queen Mary died. Then he ſhortly after recovered health, and eſcaped death, being at the writing of this yet alive, both witneſs and reporter of the ſame, the Lord therefore be praiſed, Amen.

The ſcourging of John Willes by Biſhop Boner.

The Story of John Willes a capper.

BEſides the above named, was ſcourged alſo by the hands of the ſaid Biſhop, one John Willes a Capper, a right faithful and true honeſt Man in all his dealings and conditions. Who was Brother to the foreſaid R. Willes burned before at Brainford, as is above ſignified. Who alſo was apprehended in the ſame number with them at Iſlington, as is mentioned alſo before: and being brought before Boner, and there examined, was commanded to the Colehouſe, with the foreſaid Tho. Hinſhaw, where they remained one night in the Stocks. From thence he was ſent to Fulham, where he, with the ſaid Hinſhaw, remained 8. or 10. days in the Stocks; during which time he ſuſtained divers conflicts with the ſaid Boner, who had him oft times in Examination, urging him, and with a Stick which he had in his hand, oft-times rapping him on the head, and flirting him under the chin, and on the ears, ſaying he looked down like a thief. Moreover, after he had aſſayed all manner of ways to cauſe him to recant, and could not, at length having him to his Orchard, there within a little arbor, with his own hands beat him firſt with a willow rod, and that being worn well nigh to the ſtumps, he called for a birchin rod, which a lad brought out of his Chamber. The cauſe why he ſo beat him, was this; Boner asked him when he had crept to the Croſs. He anſwered, Not ſince he came to the years of diſcretion, neither would, though he ſhould be torn with wild horſes. Then Boner bade him make a Croſs in his forehead, which he refuſed to do. Whereupon he had him incontinently to his Orchard, and there calling for rods, ſhewed his cruelty upon him, as he did upon Thomas Hinſhaw, as is above declared.

Hinſhaw & Willes beaten of Boner.

This done, he had him immediately to the Pariſh Church of Fulham with the ſaid Tho. Hinſhaw, and Rob. Willes, to whom there being ſeverally called before him, he miniſtred certain Articles, asking if he would ſubſcribe to the ſame. To the which the ſaid John Willes made his Anſwer according to his Conſcience, denying them all, except one Article which was concerning K. Edwards Service in Engliſh. Shortly after this beating, Boner ſent to him in Priſon a certain old Prieſt lately come from Rome, to conjure out the evil Spirit from him, who laying his hand upon his head, began with certain words pronounced over him, to conjure as he had been wont before to do. Willes marvelling what the Prieſt was about to do, ſaid, He truſted no evil Spirit to be within him, and laughed him to ſcorn, &c.

John Willes denieth to ſubſcribe to B. Boners Articles.

A old conjuring Prieſt.

As this John Willes was divers times and oft called before Boner, ſo much communication and talk paſſed between them; which to recite all, it were too long. And if it were not unpleaſant for the Reader that luſteth to laugh, to ſee the blind and unſavoury reaſons of that Biſhop, which he uſed to perſwade the ignorant withal. As in the proceſs of his other talk with this Willes, Boner going about to perſwade him not to meddle with matters of the Scripture, but rather to believe other Mens teaching, which had more skill in the ſame; firſt asked if he did believe the Scripture? Yea, ſaid he, that I do. Then the Biſhop, why (quoth he) Saint Paul ſaith, If the man ſleep, the Woman is at liberty to go to another Man. If thou wert aſleep having a Wife, wouldeſt thou be content thy Wife to take another Man? And yet this is the Scripture.

The unſavoury reaſons or talk of B. Boner going about to perſwade John Willes.

Item, if thou wilt believe Luther, Zuinglius, and ſuch, then thou canſt not go right. But if thou wilt believe me, &c. thou canſt not err. And if thou ſhouldſt err, yet thou art in no peril, thy Blood ſhould be required at our hands. As if thou ſhouldſt go to a far Country, and meet with a fatherly Man as I am (for theſe were his terms) and ask the way to the Head City, and he ſhould ſay, this way, and thou wilt not believe him, but follow Luther, and other Hereticks of late days, and go a contrary way; how wilt thou come to the place thou askeſt for? ſo if thou wilt not believe me, but follow the leading of other Hereticks, ſo ſhalt thou be brought to deſtruction, and burn both Body and Soul.

Boners judgment, that we ſhould truſt more to Men, than to the Scriptures of God.

This ſimplitude holdeth, κατὰ τὴν ἐναντίωσιν.

As

truly as thou seest the Bodies of them in Smithfield burnt, so truly their Souls do burn in Hell, because they err from the true Church.

Rash & presumptuous Judgment of Boner.

• Oft times speaking to the said John Willes, he would say, They call me Bloody Boner. A vengeance on you all. I would fain be rid of you, but you have a delight in burning. But if I might have my will, I would sow your Mouths, and put you in sacks and drown you.

B. Boners wish in punishing Gods Saints.

Now somwhat to say concerning the deliverance of the said John Willes. The same day that he was delivered, Boner came unto the Stocks where he lay, and asked him how he liked his lodging, and his fare.

The occasion and manner of delivering John Willes.

Well, said Willes, if it would please God I might have a little straw to lye or sit upon.

Then said Boner, Thou wilt shew no token of a Christian Man. And upon this his Wife came in unknowing unto him, being very great with Child, and looking every hour for her lying down, entreating the Bishop for her husband, and saying, that she would not go out of the House, but there would lay her belly in the Bishops House, unless she had her Husband with her. How sayest thou (quoth Boner) thou Heretick? If thy wife miscarry, or thy Child, or Children, if she be with one or two, should perish, the Blood of them would he require at thy hands. Then to this agreement he came, that he should hire a Bed in the Town of Fulham, and her husband should go home with her the morrow after, upon this condition, that his kinsman there present (one Robert Rouse) should bring the said Willes unto his House at Pauls the next day.

Willes Wife intreateth for her husband.

Rob. Rouse kinsman to Jo. Willes.

Whereunto the said Willes said, he would not agree, except he might go home by and by. At length his Wife being importunate for her Husband; and seeing that she would go no further, but there remain, unless she had her Husband with her, the Bishop fearing belike the rumour which might come upon his House thereby, bade the said Willes make a Cross, and say, In nomine Patris, & Filii, & Spiritus Sancti, Amen.

The condition put to J. Willes to say, In nomine Patris, &c.

Then the said Willes began to say, In the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the holy Ghost Amen. No, no, saith Boner, say it me in Latin, In nomine Patris, & Filii, & Spiritus sancti, Amen. Willes understanding the matter of that Latin to be but good, said the same, and so went home with his Wife, his foresaid kinsman being charged to bring him the next day unto Pauls: else, said Boner, if thou dost not bring him, thou art an Heretick as well as he. Notwithstanding, the charge being no greater, his kinsman did not bring him, but he of his own voluntary accord came to the said Bishop within a few days after, where the Bishop put unto him a certain writing in Latin to subscribe unto; containing as it seemed to him no great matter, that he needed greatly to stick at, albeit, what the bill was, he could not certainly tell: so subscribed he to the bill, and returned home. And thus much concerning the 22. taken at Islington.

John Willes sent home with his Wife.

The History and cruel handling of Richard Yeoman, Doctor Taylors Curate at Hadley, constantly suffering for the Gospels sake.

July 10. The Story & Martyrdom of R. Yeoman Minister.

After the Story of these 22. taken at Islington, proceeding now (the Lord willing) we will prosecute likewise the taking and cruel handling of Richard Yeoman Minist. Which Yeoman had been before Doctor Taylors Curate, a godly devout old Man of 70. years which had many years dwelt in Hadley, well seen in the Scriptures, and giving Godly Exhortations to the people. With him D. Taylor left his cure at his departure. But as soon as M. Newall had gotten the Benefice, he drave away good Yeoman as is before said, and set in a Popish Curate to maintain and continue their Romish Religion which now they thought fully stablished. Then wandred he long time from place to place, moving and exhorting all Men to stand faithfully to Gods Word, earnestly to give themselves unto prayer, with patience to bear the Cross now laid upon them for their tryal, with boldness to confess the truth before the adversaries, and with an undoubted hope to wait for the Crown and reward of eternal felicity. But when he perceived his adversaries to lye in wait for him, he went into Kent, and with a little packet of laces, pins, and points, and such like things, he travelled from village to village, selling such things; and by that poor shift gate himself somwhat to the sustaining of himself, his poor Wife and Children.

R. Yeoman flieth into Kent.

At the last a Justice of Kent, called Master Moyle, took poor Yeoman and set him in the Stocks a day and a night, but having no evident matter to charge him with, he let him go again. So came he secretly again to Hadley, and tarried with his poor Wife, who kept him secretly in a Chamber of the Town House, commonly called the Guildhall, more than a year. All the which time, the good old Father abode in a Chamber locked up all the day, and spent his time in devout prayer, and reading the Scriptures, and in carding of wool which his Wife did spin. His Wife also did go and beg Bread and meat for her self and her Children, and by such poor means sustained they themselves. Thus the Saints of God sustained hunger and misery; while the Prophets of Baal lived in jollity, and were costly pampered at Jesabels Table.

Rich. Yeoman set in the Stocks by M. Moile of Kent. Rich. Yeoman returneth again to Hadley.

At the last, Parson Newal (I know not by what means) perceived that Richard Yeoman was so kept by his poor Wife, and, taking with him the Bailiffs Deputies and Servants, came in the night time and brake up five doors upon Yeoman, whom he found in a bed with his poor Wife and Children. Whom when he had so found, he irefully cried, saying, I thought I should find an harlot and an whore together. And he would have plucked the clothes off from them. But Yeoman held fast the clothes, and said unto his Wife, Wife, arise, and put on thy clothes. And unto the Parson he said, Nay Parson, no harlot, nor whore, but a married Man and his Wife, according unto Gods Ordinance, and blessed be God for lawful Matrimony. I thank God for this great Grace, and I defie the Pope and all his Popery. Then led they Richard Yeoman unto the Cage, and set him in the Stocks until it was day.

Parson Newall a wicked persecutor. Yeoman taken by Parson Newall.

There was then also in the Cage an old Man named John Dale, who had sitten there three or four days, because when the said Parson Newal with his Curate executed the Romish Service in the Church, he spake openly unto him, and said, O miserable and blind guides, will ye ever be blind leaders of the blind? will ye never amend? will ye never see the truth of Gods Word? Will neither Gods threats nor promises enter into your hearts? will the Blood of Martyrs nothing mollifie your Stony Stomack? O indurate hard hearted, perverse, and crooked Generation. O damnable sort, whom nothing can do good unto.

The words of J. Dale to Parson Newall. and his Curate.

These and like words he spake in ferventness of Spirit against the Superstitious Religion of Rome. Wherefore Parson Newall caused him forthwith to be attached, and set in the Stocks in the Cage. So was he there kept till Sir Henry Doile, a Justice, came to Hadley.

John Dale set in the Cage by Parson Newall. Sir Henry Doile intreated for Gods Saints, but could not be heard.

Now when poor Yeoman was taken, the Parson called earnestly upon Sir Henry Doile to send them both to Prison. Sir Henry Doile earnestly laboured and entreated the Parson, to consider the Age of the Men, and their poor estate; they were persons of no reputation nor Preachers; wherefore he would desire him to let them be punished a day or two, and so to let them go, at the least John Dale who was no Priest: and therefore seeing he had so long sitten in the Cage, he thought it punishment enough for this time. When the Parson heard this, he was exceeding mad, and in a great rage called them pestilent Hereticks, unfit to live in the Common Wealth of Christians. Wherefore I beseech you Sir, quoth he, according to your Office, defend holy Church, and help to suppress these Sects of Heresies, &c. which are false to God, and thus boldly set themselves, to the evil example of other, against the Queens gracious proceedings. Sir Henry Doile seeing he could do no good in the matter, and fearing also his peril if he should too much meddle in this matter, made out the Writ, and caused the Constables to carry them forth to Bury Gaol. For now were all the Justices, were they never so mighty, affraid of every shaven crown, and stood in as much awe of them, as Pilate did stand in fear of Annas and Caiphas, and of the Pharisaical Brood, which cried, Crucifie him, Crucifie him. If thou let him go, thou art not Cæsars friend.

The kingdom of Locusts.

Wherefore

Yeoman and John Dale ſent to Bury Goal.

Wherefore whatſoever their conſciences were, yet (if they would eſcape danger) they muſt needs be the Popiſh Biſhops ſlaves and vaſſals. So they took Richard Yeoman and John Dale, pinioned, and bound them like Thieves, ſet them on Horſback, and bound their Legs under the Horſes Bellies, and ſo carried them to the Goal at Bury, where they were tyed in Irons; and for that they continually rebuked Popery, they were thrown into the loweſt Dungeon, where Jo. Dale through ſickneſs of the Priſon, and evil keeping, dyed in Priſon, whoſe Body, when he was dead, was thrown out and buried in the Fields. He was a Man of 46. years of Age, a Weaver by his occupation, well learned in the holy Scriptures, faithful and honeſt in all his converſation, ſtedfaſt in confeſſion of the true Doctrine of Chriſt ſet forth in King Edwards time; for the which he joyfully ſuffered Priſon and Chains, and from this Worldly Dungeon he departed in Chriſt to eternal Glory, and the Bleſſed Paradiſe of everlaſting felicity.

Commendation of John Dale.

After that John Dale was dead, Richard Yeoman was removed to Norwich Priſon, where after ſtrait and evil keeping, he was examined of his Faith and Religion. Then he boldly and conſtantly confeſſed himſelf to be of the Faith and Confeſſion that was ſet forth by the late King of Bleſſed Memory, holy King Edward the ſixth, and from that he would in no wiſe vary. Being required to ſubmit himſelf to the holy Father the Pope: I defie him (quoth he) and all his deteſtable Abominations: I will in no wiſe have to do with him, nor any thing that appertaineth to him. The chief Articles objected to him, were his marriage, and the Maſs Sacrifice. Wherefore when he continued ſtedfaſt in confeſſion of the truth, he was condemned, degraded, and not only burnt, but moſt cruelly tormented in the Fire. So ended he his poor and miſerable life, and entred into the bleſſed Boſom of Abraham, enjoying with Lazarus the comfortable quietneſs that God hath prepared for his elect Saints.

The Story of John Alcock.

The Story of John Alcock.

THere was alſo in Hadley a young Man, named John Alcock, which came to Hadley ſeeking work, for he was a Shereman by his occupation. This young Man after the Martyrdom of Doctor Taylor, and taking of Richard Yeoman, uſed firſt in the Church of Hadley to read the Service in Engliſh, as partly is above touched. At length, after the coming of Parſon Newal, he being in Hadley Church upon a Sunday when the Parſon came by with proceſſion, would not once move his Cap, nor ſhew any ſign of reverence but ſtood behind the Font. Newall perceiving this, when he was almoſt out of the Church door, ran back again, and caught him, and called for the Conſtable.

Parſon Newall in a rage againſt John Alcock for not going on proceſſion.

Then came Rob. Rolfe, with whom this young Man wrought, and asked M. Parſon what hath he done, that ye are in ſuch a rage with him?

He is an Heretick and a Traitor (quoth the Parſon) and deſpiſeth the Queens proceedings. Wherefore I command you in the Queens Name, have him to the Stocks, and ſee he be forth coming.

Rob. Rolfe an honeſt Conſtable of Hadley.

Well, quoth Rolfe, he ſhall be forth coming, proceed you in your buſineſs, and be quiet. Have him to the Stocks, quoth the Parſon.

I am Conſtable, quoth Rolfe, and may bail him, and will bail him; he ſhall not come in the Stocks, but he ſhall be forth coming: So went the good Parſon forth with his holy proceſſion, and ſo to Maſs.

At afternoon Rolf ſaid to this young Man, I am ſorry for thee, for truly the Parſon will ſeek thy deſtruction, if thou take not good heed what thou anſwereſt him.

The young Man anſwered, Sir, I am ſorry that it is my hap to be a trouble to you. As for my ſelf, I am not ſorry, but I do commit my ſelf into Gods hands, and I truſt he will give me Mouth and Wiſdom to anſwer according to right.

Well, quoth Rolfe, yet beware of him. For he is malitious and a bloud-ſucker, and beareth an old hatred againſt me, and he will handle you the more cruelly, becauſe of diſpleaſure againſt me.

I fear not, quoth the young Man. He ſhall do no more to me, than God will give him leave; and happy ſhall I be if God will call me to dye for his truths ſake.

After this talk, they then went to the Parſon, who at the firſt asked him, Fellow, what ſaiſt thou to the Sacrament of the Altar?

Alcock brought to Parſon Newall.

I ſay, quoth he, as ye uſe the matter, ye make a ſhameful Idol of it, and ye are falſe Idolatrous Prieſts all the ſort of you.

I told you (quoth the Parſon) he was a ſtout Heretick.

So after long talk, the Parſon committed him to Ward, and the next day rode he up to London, and carried the young Man with him, and ſo came the young Man no more again to Hadley, but after long Imprisonment in Newgate, where after many Examinations and troubles, for that he would not submit himself to ask forgiveness of the Pope, and to be reconciled to the Romish Religion, he was cast into the lower Dungeon, where with evil keeping and sickness of the House, he dyed in Prison. Thus dyed he a Martyr for Christs verity, which he heartily loved and constantly confessed, and received the garland of a well foughten battel at the hand of the Lord. His Body was cast out, and buried in a dunghil, For the Papist would in all things be like themselves: Therefore would they not so much as suffer the dead Bodies to have honest and convenient sepulture.

John Alcock died in Newgate.

Thomas Benbridge Gentleman and Martyr, wrongfully condemned and put to death by the cruel Papists, for the defence of the Gospel of Christ Jesus.

July 29. The Story of Tho. Benbridge Martyr.

THomas Benbridge a Gentleman, single and unmarried in the Diocess of Winchester, although he might have lived a pleasant and a Gentlemans life in the wealthy possessions of this World; yet to follow Christ had rather enter into the strait gate of persecution, to the Heavenly possession of life in the Lords Kingdom, than here to injoy pleasures present with unquietness of Conscience. Wherefore, manfully standing against the Papists for the defence of the sincere Doctrine of Christs Gospel, he spared not himself to confirm the Doctrine of the Gospel. For the which cause he being apprehended for an adversary of the Romish Religion, was forthwith had to examination before Doctor White Bishop of Winchester, where he sustained sundry conflicts for the truth against the said Bishop and his Collegues. The Articles of the Bishop ministred to him, with his answers to the same annexed, be here following,

Tho. Benbridge examined before the B. of Winchester.

Articles ministred to M. Benbridge, with his answers following the same.

Articles opposed against Tho. Benbridge.

FIrst, we articulate against you, that the Church of God ministred rightly, according to the Rite Apostolical.

Answer.

To this he answered, That Baptism is not administred at this present, so as it was in the Apostles time, for that it is not ministred in the English Tongue.

The real presence.

2. Item, we articulate, that the Church of God doth believe, and hold, that in the Sacrament of thanksgiving, after the words of Consecration pronounced of the Priest, the true and natural Body of Christ is present really.

Answer.

He answered, that he believeth not that in the Sacrament is contained the Body and Blood of our Saviour Jesus Christ, saying; this is the mark that ye shoot at.

Confirmation.

3. Item, we articulate, that the Church holdeth and believeth, that confirmation is a Sacrament in the Church, and that by imposition of hands of a Bishop, cometh Grace.

Answer.

He answered, that he knoweth not whether that confirmation be a Sacrament or not, and whether the Bishop giveth Grace or not; he knoweth not the order and fashion of ministration.

4. Item we articulate, that Penance is a Sacrament in the Church, and that by Auricular Confession and Absolution, pronounced by the priest, sins be forgiven.

Answer. Penance no Sacrament.

He answered negatively, denying sins to be forgiven by absolution pronounced of a Priest, and that it is not necessary for a Man to recite all his sins to a Priest.

5. Item, we articulate against thee, that the Church doth believe and hold the same Authority to be now in the Church which Christ gave to his Apostles.

Answer.

He answered negatively, for that the Church hath not the same power and strength to work.

6. Item, we articulate, that the Church believeth and holdeth, that the Order of Ministers, now being in the Church of Christ, is instituted of Christ himself.

Answer.

He answered, he believed not the Bishops to be the Successors of the Apostles, for that they be not called as they were, nor have that Grace.

Head of the Church.

7. Item, we articulate that the Church believeth and holdeth, the Pope to be Supream Head in the Church, and the Vicar of Christ in Earth.

He answered, that it is not the Pope, but it is the Devil that is Supream Head of the Church which you speak of. Answer.

8. Item, we articulate, that the Church doth hold and believe that it is necessary to be Baptized. Answer

He denyed not the same.

9. Item, we articulate, that the Church doth hold and believe, that there is Purgatory, and that the Souls of the dead be relieved with the alms and Prayers of the living. Purgatory.

Answer.

He answered and saith, as touching Purgatory, he will not believe as their Church doth believe.

10. Item, we articulate, that the Church holdeth and believeth that Matrimony is a Sacrament of the Church.

Answer. Matrimony no Sacrament.

He answered, that he will not say that Matrimony is a Sacrament, but to be a sacred Order and sign of an holy thing, &c.

Martin Luther.

Moreover hapning into the mention of Martin Luther, he said, that the said Martin Luther died a good Christian Man, whose Doctrine and Life he did approve and allow.

Tho. Benbridge condemned.

Thus have ye the Articles ministred by the Bishop and also the Answers of the said M. Benbridge unto the same, for the which he was then condemned, and after brought to the place of Martyrdom by the Sheriff, called Sir Richard Peckſal. Where he standing at the Stake, began to untye his points, and to prepare himself; then he gave his Gown to the Keeper, being belike his fee. His Jerkin was laid on with Gold Lace fair and brave which he gave to Sir Rich. Peckſal the High Sheriff. His cap of Velvet he took off from his Head and threw it away. Then lifting his mind to the Lord, he made his Prayers.

Tho. Benbridge brought to the Stake.

D. Seaton forbiddeth to pray for him.

That done, being now fastened to the Stake, D. Seaton willed him to recant, and he should have his pardon: but when he saw it prevailed not to speak, the said dreaming and doltish Doctor willed the people not to pray for him unless he would recant, no more than they would pray for a dog.

M. Benbridge standing at the Stake with his hands together in such manner as the Priest holdeth his hands in his memento, the said D. Seaton came to him again, and exhorted him to recant: unto whom he said, Away Babylonian, away.

Then said one that stood by, Sir, cut out his Tongue, and another being a temporal Man, railed on him worse than D. Seaton did a great deal, who (as is thought) was set on by some other.

Master Benbridge recanted at the Stake.

Then when they saw he would not yield, they bade the tormentors to set to Fire, and yet he was nothing like covered with fagots. First, the Fire took away a piece of his Beard, whereat he nothing shrank at all. Then it came on the other side and took his Legs, and the neither Stockings of his Hose being Leather, made the Fire to pierce the sharper, so that the intolerable heat thereof made him to cry, I recant: and suddenly therewith he thrust the Fire from him. And having two or three of his friends by, that wished his life, they stept to the Fire, and holp to take it from him also; who for their labour were sent to Prison. The Sheriff also of his own Authority took him from the Stake, and sent him to Prison again, for the which he was sent unto the Fleet, and there lay a certain time. But before he was taken from the Stake, the said Seaton wrote Articles to have him to subscribe unto them as touching the Pope, the Sacrament, and such other trash. But the said M. Benbridge made much ado ere he would subscribe them, insomuch that Doctor Seaton willed them to set to Fire again. Then with much pain and grief of Heart he subscribed to them upon a Mans Back. That being done, he had his Gown given him again, and so was led to Prison. Being in Prison he wrote a Letter to Doctor Seaton, and recanted those words he spake at the Stake, unto which he had subscribed: for he was grieved that ever he did subscribe unto them. Whereupon expressing his Conscience, he was the same day seven night after burnt indeed, where the vile tormentors did rather broil him than burn him. The Lord give his enemies repentance.

Sir Richard Peckſal.

M. Benbridge repenteth his recantation.

The

The unjuſt Execution and Martyrdom of four burned at S. Edmunds Bury.

The ſtory of our Martyrs in Suffolk.

IN this year aforeſaid, which was the laſt of Queen Maries reign, Dr. Hopton being Biſhop of Norwich, and Dr. Spencer bearing the room of his Chancellor, about S. James tide, at S. Edmunds Bury, were wrongfully put to death four Chriſtian Martyrs, to wit:

Martyrs.
John Cooke, a Sawyer.
Robert Miles, alias Plummer, a Sheerman.
Alexander Lane, a Wheelright.
James Aſhley, Bachelor.

The Examination of theſe forenamed Perſons, being ſeverally called before the Biſhop of Norwich, and Sir Edward Walgrave, with others, was partly upon theſe Articles following. Anno 1558.

Firſt, Sir Edward Walgrave called John Cooke to him, and ſaid, How fortuneth it, that you go not to Church? Sir Edward Walgrave, Perſecutor.

John Cooke ſaid, I have been there.

Sir Edward ſaid, What is the cauſe that you go not thither now in theſe days? Examination of John Cooke.

John Cooke ſaid, Becauſe the Sacrament of the Altar is an abominable Idol, and (ſaith he) the vengeance of God will come upon all them that do maintain it.

Sir Edward ſaid, O thou rank Traytor, if I had as good Commiſſion to cut out thy Tongue, as I have to ſit here this day, thou ſhouldſt be ſure to have it cut out.

Examination of Robert Miles.

Then commanded he the Conſtable to have him away, ſaying, he was both a Traitor and a Rebel.

Then he called Robert Miles, and ſaid, how fortuneth it, that you go not to the Church?

Robert Miles anſwered, Becauſe I will follow no falſe Gods.

Then ſaid the Biſhop, who told thee that it is a God?

Then ſaid Miles, Even you, and ſuch as you are.

Then the Biſhop commanded him aſide, and to appear before him the next day.

Examination of Alexander Lane.

Then he called Alexander Lane before him, and asked him, how it chanced, that he would not go to the Church?

He ſaid, That his Conſcience would not ſerve him ſo to do.

Then Sir Edward ſaid, How doſt thou believe?

Then ſaid Lane, even as it is written in Gods Book.

Then Sir Edward commanded him to ſay his Belief.

Then the ſaid Lane being ſomewhat abaſhed, ſaid his Belief to theſe words, which he miſſed unawares, Born of the Virgin Mary.

Then Sir Edward ſaid, What? was he not born of the Virgin Mary?

Yes, ſaid Lane, I would have ſaid ſo.

Nay, ſaid Sir Edward, you are one of Cookes Scholars; and ſo commanded him away, and to come before him the next day.

After the like manner they paſſed alſo with James Aſhley, whom they warned the next day likewiſe to appear before them again. So in fine they appearing again, had their Condemnation. And thus theſe four bleſſed Martyrs and Servants of Chriſt, innocently ſuffered together at S. Edmunds Bury, as is aforeſaid, about the beginning of Auguſt, not long before the ſickneſs of Queen Mary. Examination of James Aſhley.

The Martyrdom of two godly perſons ſuffering at Ipſwich for the Goſpel of Chriſt, and his everlaſting Teſtament, named Alexander Gouch, and Alice Driver.

MAfter Noone, a Juſtice in Suffolk, dwelling in Martleſham, hunting after good men to apprehend them, (as he was a bloody Tyrant in the days of Trial) at the length had underſtanding of one Gouch of Woodbridge, and Drivers Wife of Grosborough, to be at Grosborough together, a little from his Houſe, and immediately took his men with him, and went thither, and made diligent ſearch for them, where the poor man and woman were compelled to ſtep into an Hay-golph to hide themſelves from their cruelty. At the laſt they came to ſearch the Hay for them, and by gaging thereof with Pitchforks, at the laſt found them: ſo they took them and led them to Melton Goal, where they remaining a time, at the length were carried to Bury againſt the Aſſiſe at S. James tide; and being there examined of matters of Faith, did boldly ſtand to confeſs Chriſt crucified, defying the Pope with all his Papiſtical Traſh. And among other things Drivers Wife likened Queen Mary in her Perſecution, to Jezabel; and ſo in that ſenſe calling her Jezabel, for that that Sir Clement Higham, being chief Judge there, adjudged her Ears immediately to be cut off, which was accomplished accordingly, and she joyfully yielded her self to the punishment, and thought her self happy that she was counted worthy to suffer any thing for the Name of Christ.

Alex. Gouch.

After the Assise at Bury, they were carried to Melton Gaol again, where they remained a time. This Alexander Gouch was a Man of the age of 36. years, or thereabouts, and by his occupation was a Weaver of Shredding Coverlets, dwelling at Woodbridge in Suffolk, and born at Uxford in the same County, Drivers Wife was a Woman about the age of 30. years, and dwelt at Grosborough where they were taken, in Suffolk. Her Husband did use Husbandry. These two were carried from Melton Gaol to Ipswich, where they remained and were examined. The which their examination, as it came to our hands, hereafter followeth.

Gouch and Alice Driver carryed to Ipswich.

The Examination of Drivers Wife, before Dr. Spenser the Chancellor of Norwich.

Dr. Spenser after the death of Dr. Dunning who dyed suddenly in Lincolnshire, was Chancellor under B. Hooper.

FIrst, she coming into the place where she should be examined, with a smiling Countenance, Dr Spenser said, Why Woman, dost thou laugh us to scorn?

Drivers Wife. Whether I do or no, I might well enough, to see what fools ye be.

Doct. Spenser. Then the Chancellor asked her wherefore she was brought before him, and why she was laid in Prison.

Dri. Wherefore? I think I need not tell you: for ye know it better than I.

Spens. No by my Troth, Woman, I know not why.

Dri. Then have ye done me much wrong (quoth she) thus to Imprison me, and know no cause why: for I know no evil that I have done, I thank God, and I hope there is no man that can accuse me of any Notorious Fact that I have done, justly.

Sacrament of the Altar.

Spens. Woman, Woman, what sayst thou to the blessed Sacrament of the Altar? Dost thou not believe that it is very Flesh and Blood, after the words be spoken of Consecration?

A fat Priest to silence

Drivers Wife at those words held her peace, and made no answer. Then a great chuff-headed Priest that stood by, spake, and asked her why she made not the Chancellor answer. With that, the said Drivers Wife looked upon him austerely, and said, Why Priest, I come not to talk with thee, but I come to talk with thy Master: but if thou wilt I shall talk with thee, command thy Master to hold his peace. And with that the Priest put his Nose in his cap, and spake never a word more. Then the Chancellor bid her make answer to that he demanded of her.

Dri. Sir (said she) pardon me though I make no answer, for I cannot tell what you mean thereby: for in all my life I never heard nor read of any such Sacrament in all the Scripture.

Spens. Why, what Scriptures have you read, I pray you?

Dri. I have (I thank God) read Gods Book.

Spens. Why, what manner of Book is that you call Gods Book?

Dri. It is the Old and New Testament, What call you it.

No Sacrament of the Altar to be found in Gods Book.

Spens. That is Gods Book indeed, I cannot deny.

Dri. That same Book have I read thorowout, but yet never could find any such Sacrament there: and for that cause I cannot make you answer to that thing I know not. Notwithstanding, for all that, I will grant you a Sacrament, called the Lords Supper: and therefore seing I have granted you a Sacrament, I pray you shew me what a Sacrament is.

Dr. Gascoine persecutor. What a Sacrament is.

Spens. It is a sign. And one Dr. Gascoine being by, confirmed the same, that it was the sign of a holy thing.

Dri. You have said the truth, Sir, said she. It is a sign indeed, I must needs grant it: and therefore seeing, it is a sign, it cannot be the thing signified also. Thus farr we do agree: for I have granted your own saying. Then stood up the said Gascoine, and made an Oration with many fair words, but little to purpose, both offensive and odious to the minds of the godly. In the end of which long tale, he asked her if she did not believe the Omnipotency of God, and that he was Almighty, and able to perform that he spake. She answered, Yes; and said, I do believe that God is Almighty, and able to perform that he spake and promised.

Dr. Gascoines Oration little to purpose.

Talk between Alice Driver and Dr. Gascoine.

Gasc. Very well. Then he said to his Disciples, Take, Eat, This is my Body: Ergo, it was his Body. For he was able to perform that he spake, and God useth not to lye.

Dri. I pray you did he ever make any such promise to his Disciples, that he would make the Bread his Body?

Gasc. Those be the words. Can you deny it.

Dri. No, they be the very words indeed, I cannot deny it, but I pray you, was it not Bread that he gave unto them?

Gasc. No, it was his Body.

Dri. Then was it is Body that they did Eat over night?

Gasc. Yea, it was his Body.

Dri. What Body was it then that was Crucified the next day?

Gasc. It was Christs Body.

If Christ had but one Body, and that Body was eaten up over night, what Body then was crucified the next day? Luke 22. 1 Cor. 11.

Dri. How could that be, when the Disciples had eaten him over night? except he had two Bodies, as by your Argument he had; one they did eat over night, and he was Crucified the next day. Such a Doctor, such Doctrine. Be you not ashamed to teach the People, that Christ had two Bodies,? In the 22. of Luke, He took Bread and brake it to his Disciples, saying; Take, &c. and do this in remembrance of me Saint Paul saith, 1 Cor. 11. Do this in remembrance of me: for as often as ye shall Eat this Bread, and Drink this Cup, ye shall shew the Lords Death till he come: and therefore I marvel you blush not before all this people, to lye so manifestly as ye do. With that Gascoine held his peace, and made her no answer: for, as it seemed, he was ashamed of his doings. Then the Chancellor lift up his head off from his cushion, and commanded the Gaoler to take her away.

Gascoines mouth stopped.

The Chancellor when he could not answer her with reason sendeth her to Prison.

Dri. Now (said she) ye be not able to resist the Truth, ye command me to Prison again. Well, the Lord in the end shall judge our cause, and to him I leave it. I wis, I wis, this gear will go for no payment then: So went she with the Gaoler away.

The second Examination of Alice Driver.

Another examination of Alice Driver before Dr. Spenser. and Gascoine. Spenser up with his Sacrament of the Altar again.

THe next day she came before them again, and the Chancellor then asked her, what she said to the blessed Sacrament of the Altar.

Dri. I will say nothing to it: for you will neither believe me nor your selves. For yesterday I asked you what a Sacrament was, and you said, it was a sign, and I agreed thereto, and said, it was the Truth, confirming it by the Scriptures, so that I went not from your own words; and now ye come and ask me again of such a Sacrament as I told you I never read of in the Scriptures.

Spens. Thou lyest, naughty Woman, she did not say that it was a sign.

Dri. Why Masters, be ye not the Men that you were yesterday? Will ye eat your own words? Are ye not ashamed to lye before all this multitude here present, who heard you speak the same?

Gascoine again the matter in hand. 3 Churches.

Then stood up Dr. Gascoine, and said, she was deceived: for there are three Churches, the Malignant Church, the Church Militant, and the Church triumphant. So he would fain have made matter, but he could not tell which way.

Dri. Sir, is there mention made of so many Churches in the Scripture.

Gasc. Yea.

Dri. I pray you where find you this word (Church) written in the Scripture?

Gasc. It is written in the New Testament.

Dri. I pray you, Sir, shew the place where it is written.

Gaſc. I cannot tell the place, but there it is. With that ſhe deſired him to look in his Teſtament, Then he fumbled and ſought about him for one: but at that time he had none, and that he knew well enough, though he ſeemed to ſearch for it. At the laſt the ſaid, Have ye none here Sir?

Gaſcoin little acquainted with the new Teſtament.

Gaſc. No.

Dri. I thought ſo much indeed, that ye were little acquainted withal. Surely, you be a good Doctor. You ſay you ſit here to Judge according to the Law, and how can you give Judgment, and have not the Book of the Law with you? At which words Gaſcoine was out of countenance, and asked her if ſhe had one.

Dri. No, ſaid ſhe.

Gaſc. Then ſaid he, I am as good a Doctor as you.

Dri. Well Sir, I had one, but you took it from me (as you would take me from Chriſt, if you could) and ſince would ye not ſuffer me to have any Book at all; ſo burning is your charity. But you may well know (I thank God) that I have exerciſed the ſame; elſe could I not have anſwered you (to Gods glory be it ſpoken) as I have. Thus ſhe put them all to ſilence, that one looked on another, and had not a word to ſpeak.

The Papiſts put to ſilence by a ſimple Woman.

Dri. Have you no more to ſay? God be honoured. You be not able to reſiſt the Spirit of God in me poor Woman. I was an honeſt poor Mans Daughter, never brought up in the Univerſity as you have been, but I have driven the Plough before my Father many a time (I thank God:) yet notwithſtanding in the defence of Gods Truth, and in the cauſe of My Maſter Chriſt, by his grace I will ſet my foot againſt the foot of any of you all, in the maintenance and defence of the ſame, and if I had a thouſand Lives, they ſhould go for paiment thereof. So the Chancellor roſe up, and read the Sentence in Latin of Condemnation, and committed her to the ſecular power, and ſo went ſhe to Priſon again as joyful as the bird of day, praiſing and glorifying the name of God.

Alice Driver brought up at her Fathers plough

Spincer readeth Sentence againſt Alice Driver.

Alexander Gouch, Martyr.

AT which time Alexander Gouch alſo was examined, who was taken with her, as before is ſaid, whoſe Examination hereafter followeth.

The Articles whereupon Gouch was condemned.

This Alexander Gouch was examined chiefly of the Sacrament and other Ceremonies of the Popiſh Church. And for that his belief was, that Chriſt was Aſcended into Heaven, and there remaineth, and that the Sacrament was the remembrance of his death and paſſion, and for refuſing the Maſs, and the Pope to be Supream Head of Chriſts Church, for theſe cauſes, was he condemned, and dyed with Alice Driver at Ipſwich, the 4. of November. which was the Monday after All-Saints 1558. Dr. Miles Spenſer being Chancellor, they both ending their Lives earneſt zeal, nothing fearing to ſpeak their Conſcience when they were commanded to the contrary.

The Marryrdom of Gouch and Alice Driver at Ipſwich. Anno 1558. Novem 4.

Gouch and Alice Driver brought to the ſtake.

Theſe two godly perſons being come to the place where the ſtake was ſet, by ſeven of the Clock in the morning, notwithſtanding they came the ſelf-ſame morning from Melton Gaol, which is Sx miles from Ipſwich, being in their prayers, and ſinging of Pſalms both of them together, Sir Henry Dowell, then being Sheriff, was very much offended with them, and willed the Bailiffs of Ipſwich to bid them make an end of prayers, they kneeling unpon a broom Fagot, one of the Bailiffs, whoſe name was Richard Smart, cammanded them to make an end, ſaying, On, on, have done; make an end, nail them to the ſtake; yet they continued in prayer.

Then Sir Henry ſent one of his Men, whoſe name was Richard Cove, that they ſhould make an end.

Then Gouch ſtood up and ſaid unto the Sheriff, I pray you Mr. Sheriff, let us pray a little while, for we have but a little time to live here.

Then ſaid the Bailiff, Come off, have them to the fire,

The Martyrs not ſuffered to pray.

Then the ſaid Gouch and Alice Driver ſaid, Why Maſter Sheriff, and Maſter Bailiff, will you not ſuffer us to pray?

Away, ſaid Sir Henry, to the ſtake with them.

Gouch anſwered, Take heed Mr. Sheriff. If you forbid prayer, the Vengeance of God hangeth over your Heads. Then they being tyed to the ſtake, and the Iron Chain being put about Alice Drivers neck, O (ſaid ſhe) here is a goodly Neckerchief, bleſſed be God for it. Anno 1558.

Then divers came and took them by the hands as they were bound ſtanding at the ſtake. The Sheriff cryed, Lay hands on them, lay hands on them. With that a great number ran to the ſtake. The Sheriff ſeeing that, let them all alone, ſo that there was not one taken.

Bate a railing perſecutor.

There was one Bate a Barber, a buſie doer about them, who having then a freez Gown upon him, ſold it immediately, ſaying, It ſtunk of Hereticks, with other foul words more. After this, within three or four weeks, Gods hand was upon him, and ſo he dyed very miſerably in Ipſwich.

Example of Gods judgment upon perſecutors.

The Martyrdom of three wich were burned at Bury, for the True Teſtimony of Jeſus Chriſt.

The Martyrdom of 3 good men at Bury.

ALthough our Hiſtory haſteth apace (the Lord be praiſed) to the happy Death of Queen Mary, yet ſhe dyed not ſo ſoon, but ſome there were burned before, and more ſhould have been burned ſoon after them, if Gods Proviſion had not prevented her with Death. In the number of them which ſuffered in the ſame Month when Queen Mary dyed, were three that were burned at Bury, whoſe names were theſe:

Philip Humfrey.
John David.
Henry David, his Brother.

Sir Clement Higham perſecutor.

Concerning the burning of theſe three, here is to be noted, that Sir Clement Higham, about a fortnight before the Queen dyed, did ſue out a Writ for the burning of theſe three aforeſaid godly and bleſſed Martyrs, notwithſtanding that the Queen was then known to be paſt remedy of her ſickneſs.

The Trouble and Martyrdom of a godly Poor Woman which ſuffered at Exeter.

The ſtory of a poor VVoman burned at Exeter in Qu. Maries time.

ALthough in ſuch an innumerable company of godly Martyrs, which in ſundry quarters of this Realm were put to torments of fire in Queen Maries time, it be hard ſo exactly to recite every particular perſon that ſuffered, but that ſome eſcape us either unknown, or omitted; yet I cannot paſs over a certain Poor Woman, and a ſilly Creature, burned under the ſaid Queens Reign, in the City of Exeter (whoſe name I have not yet learned:) who dwelling ſometime about Cornwal, having a Husband and Children there, much addicted to the ſuperſtitious ſect of Popery, was many times rebuked of them, and driven to go to the Church, to their Idols and Ceremonies, to ſhrift, to follow the Croſs in proceſſion, to give thanks to God for reſtoring Antichriſt again in this Realm, &c. Which when her Spirit could not abide to do, ſhe made her prayer unto God, calling for help and mercy, and ſo at length lying in her bed, about midnight, ſhe thought there came to her a certain motion and feeling of ſingular comfort. Whereupon in ſhort ſpace, ſhe began to grow in contempt of her Husband and Children, and ſo taking nothing from them, but even as ſhe went, departed from them, ſeeking her living by labour and ſpinning as well as ſhe could, here and there for a time. In which time notwithſtanding ſhe never ceaſed to utter her mind as well as ſhe durſt; howbeit ſhe at that time was brought home to her Husband again. Where at laſt ſhe was accuſed by her neighbors, and ſo brought up to Exeter, to be preſented to the Biſhop and his Clergy. The name of the Biſhop which had her in examination, was Dr. Troublevile. His Chancellor (as I gather) was Blackſtone. The chiefeſt matter whereupon ſhe was charged and condemned, was for the Sacrament (which they call of the Altar) and for ſpeaking againſt Idols, as by the declaration of thoſe which were preſent, I underſtand, which report the talk between her and the Biſhop on this wiſe.

Her departing from her Husband & returning again.

The poor VVoman ſent up to Exeter. Dr. Troublevile B. of Exeter, and Blackſtone, perſecutors.

Biſhop.

Anno 1558.

Biſhop. Thou fooliſh Woman, quoth the Biſhop, I hear ſay, that thou haſt ſpoken certain words againſt the moſt bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar, the Body of Chriſt. Fie for ſhame. Thou art an unlearned perſon, and a Woman: Wilt thou meddle with ſuch high matters, which all the Doctors of the world cannot define? Wilt thou talk of ſo high Myſteries? Keep thy work, and meddle with that thou haſt to do. It is no Womans matter, at Cards and Tow to be ſpoken of. And if it be as I am informed, thou art worthy to be burned.

Talk between the Woman and the Biſhop.

Woman. My Lord, ſaid ſhe, I truſt your Lordſhip will hear me ſpeak.

Biſh. Yea marry, quoth he, therefore I ſent for thee.

Woman. I am a poor Woman, and do live by my hands, getting a penny truly, and of that I get, I give part to the Poor.

Biſh. That is well done. Art thou not a mans Wife?

And here the Biſhop entered into talk of her Huſband.

To whom ſhe anſwered again, declaring that ſhe had a Husband and Children; and had them not. So long as ſhe was at liberty, ſhe refuſed neither Husband nor Children: But now ſtanding here as I do, ſaid ſhe, in the cauſe of Chriſt and his Truth, where I muſt either forſake Chriſt, or my Husband, I am contented to ſtick only to Chriſt my heavenly Spouſe, and renounce the other.

The Wife renouncing her Huſband for Chriſts ſake.

And here ſhe making mention of the words of Chriſt, He that leaveth not Father or Mother, Siſter or Brother, Husband, &c. The Biſhop inferred, that Chriſt ſpake that of the holy Martyrs, which dyed becauſe they would not do ſacrifice to the falſe gods.

Woman. Surely, Sir, and I will rather die than I will do any worſhip to that foul Idol, which with your Maſs you make a god.

Biſh. Yea, you Callet, will you ſay that the Sacrament of the Altar is a foul Idol?

Woman. Yea truly, quoth ſhe, there was never ſuch an Idol as your Sacrament is made of your Prieſts, and commanded to be worſhiped of all men, with many fond Phantaſies, where Chriſt did command it to be eaten and drunken in remembrance of his moſt bleſſed Paſſion for our redemption.

The Sacrament of the Altar made an Idol.

Biſh. See this pratling Woman. Doſt thou not hear, that Chriſt did ſay over the Bread, This is my Body, and over the Cup, This is my Blood?

Woman. Yes, forſooth he ſaid ſo, but he meant that it is his Body and blood, not carnally, but Sacramentally.

Biſh. Lo, ſhe hath heard prating among theſe new Preachers, or heard ſome pieviſh Book. Alas poor Woman, thou art deceived.

Woman No, my Lord, that I have learned was of godly Preachers, and of godly Books which I have heard read. And if you will give me leave, I will declare a reaſon why I will not worſhip the Sacrament.

Biſh. Marry ſay on, I am ſure it will be goodly gear.

Woman. Truly ſuch gear as I will loſe this poor life of mine for.

Biſh. Then you will be a Martyr good Wife.

Woman. Indeed, if the denying to worſhip that Bready God be my Martyrdom, I will ſuffer it with all my heart.

Biſh. Say thy mind.

Woman. You muſt bear with me a poor Woman, quoth ſhe.

Biſh. So I will, quoth he.

Reaſons ſhewing why the Sacrament of the Lords Body is not to be worſhipped.

Woman. I will demand of you, whether you can deny your Creed, which doth ſay, that Chriſt perpetually doth ſit at the right hand of his Father, both Body and Soul, until he come again, or whether he be there in Heaven our Advocate, and do make prayer for us unto God his Father? If it be ſo, he is not here in the earth in a piece of Bread. If he be not here, and if he do not dwell in Temples made with hands, but in Heaven, what, ſhall we ſeek him here? if he did offer his Body once for all, why make you a new offering? if with once offering he made all perfect, why do you with a falſe offering make all unperfect? If he be to be worſhipped in Spirit and Truth, why do you worſhip a piece of Bread? if he be eaten and drunken in Faith and Truth, if his fleſh be not profitable to be among us, why do you ſay, you make his Body and fleſh, and ſay it is profitable for Body and Soul? Alas, I am a poor Woman but rather then I would do as you do, I would live no longer. I have ſaid Sir.

Biſh. I promiſe you, you are a jolly Proteſtant. I pray you in what Schools have you been brought up?

Woman. I have upon the Sundays viſited the Sermons, and there have I learned ſuch things as are ſo fixed in my breaſt, that death ſhall not ſeparate them.

Biſh. O fooliſh Woman! who will waſt his breath upon thee or ſuch as thou art? But how chanceth it that thou wenteſt away from thy Husband? if thou wert an honeſt Woman, thou wouldeſt not have left thy Huſband and Children, and run about the Country like a Fugitive.

Woman. Sir, I laboured for my living; and as my Maſter Chriſt counſelleth me, when I was perſecuted in one City, I fled into another?

Biſh. Who perſecuted thee?

Woman. My Husband and my Children. For when I would have them to leave Idolatry, and to worſhip God in Heaven, he would not hear me, but he with his Children rebuked me, and troubled me. I fled not for Whoredom, nor for Theft, but becauſe I would be no partaker with him and his, of that foul Idol the Maſs. And whereſoever I was, as oft as I could upon Sundays and Holi-days, I made excuſes not to go to the Popiſh Church.

The Wife perſecuted by her Huſband and Children.

Biſh. Belike then you are a good Huſwife, to flie from your Husband and alſo from the Church.

Woman. My Huſwifery is but ſmall; but God give me grace to go to the true Church.

Biſh. The true Church, what doſt thou mean?

Woman. Not your Popiſh Church full of Idols and Abominations, but where two or three are gathered together in the name of God, to that Church will I go as long as I live.

Biſh. Belike then you have a Church of your own. Well, let this mad Woman be put down to Priſon, until we ſend for her Husband.

Woman. No, I have but one Husband, which is here already in this City and in Priſon with me (from whom I will never depart) and ſo their communication for that day brake off. Blackſtone and others perſwaded the Biſhop that ſhe was a mazed Creature, and not in her perfect wit, (which is no new thing, for the wiſdom of God to appear fooliſhneſs to carnal men of this world) and therefore they conſulted together, that ſhe ſhould have liberty, and go at large. So the Keeper of the Biſhops Priſon had her home to his houſe, where ſhe fell to ſpinning and carding, and did all other work as a Servant in the ſaid Keepers houſe, and went about the City, when and whither ſhe would, and divers had delight to talk with her. And ever ſhe continued talking of the Sacrament of the Altar, which of all things they could leaſt abide. Then was her Husband ſent for, but ſhe refuſed to go home with him, with the blemiſh of the Cauſe and Religion, in defence whereof ſhe there ſtood before the Biſhop and the Prieſts.

Then divers of the Prieſts had her in handling, perſwading her to leave her wicked Opinion about the Sacrament of the Altar, the natural Body and Blood of our Saviour Chriſt. But ſhe made them anſwer, that it was nothing but very Bread and Wine, and that they might be aſhamed to ſay, that a piece of Bread ſhould be turned by a man into the natural Body of Chriſt, which Bread doth vinow, and Mice oftentimes do eat it, and it doth mould, and is burned: And, ſaid ſhe, Gods own Body will not be ſo handled, nor kept in Priſon, or Boxes, or Aumbries. Let it be your god, it ſhall not be mine; for my Saviour ſitteth on the right hand of God, and doth pray for me. And to make that Sacramental or ſignificative Bread inſtituted for a remembrance, the very Body of Chriſt, and to worſhip it, it is very fooliſhneſs and Devilliſh deceit.

Talk between the Woman and the Prieſts about the Sacrament.

Now truly, ſaid they, the Devil hath deceived thee.

No ſaid ſhe, I truſt the living God hath opened mine eyes, and cauſed me to underſtand the right uſe of the bleſſed Sacrament, which the true Church doth uſe, but the falſe Church doth abuſe.

Then ſtept forth an old Frier, and asked her what ſhe ſaid of the holy Pope.

I (ſaid ſhe) ſay, that he is Antichriſt and the Devil.

Then they all laughed.

Talk between the Woman and a Frier.

Nay, ſaid ſhe, you have more need to weep than to laugh, and to be ſorry that ever you were born, to be the Chaplains of that Whore of Babylon, I deſie him and all his Falſhood; and get you away from me, you do but trouble my Conſcience. You would have me follow your doings; I will firſt loſe my life. I pray you depart.

Why, thou fooliſh Woman, ſaid they, we come to thee for thy profit and Souls health.

O Lord God, ſaid ſhe, what profit riſeth by you that teach nothing but Lies for Truth? how ſave you Souls, when you preach nothing but damnable Lies, and deſtroy Souls?

How proveſt thou that (ſaid they?)

False Doctrine of the Papiſts reproved.

Do you not damn Souls, ſaid ſhe, when you teach the People to worſhip Idols, Stocks and Stones, the works of mens hands? and to worſhip a falſe God of your own making of a piece of Bread, and teach that the Pope is Gods Vicar, and hath power to forgive ſins? and that there is a Purgatory, when Gods Son hath by his Paſſion purged all? and ſay, you make God, and ſacrifice him, when Chriſts Body was a Sacrifice once for all? Do you not teach the People to number there ſins in your ears, and ſay they be damned, if they confeſs not all: when Gods Word ſaith, Who can number his ſins? Do you not promiſe them Trentals and Diriges, and Maſſes for Souls, and ſell your Prayers for Money, and make them buy Pardons, and truſt to ſuch fooliſh inventions of your own Imaginations? Do you not altogether againſt God? Do ye not teach us to pray upon Beads, and to pray unto Saints, and ſay they can pray for us? Do you not make Holy-Water and Holy-Bread to fray Devils? Do you not a thouſand more Abominations? And yet you ſay, you come for my profit and to ſave my Soul. No, no, one hath ſaved me. Farewel you with your ſalvation. Much other talk there was between her and them, which here were too tedious to be expreſſed.

In the mean time during this her Months liberty granted to her by the Biſhop, which we ſpake of before it happened that ſhe entering into Saint Peters Church, beheld there a cunning Dutchman, how he made new Noſes to certain fine Images which were diſfigured in King Edwards time; What a mad man art thou (ſaid ſhe) to make them new Noſes, which within a few days ſhall all loſe their Heads? The Dutchman accuſed her, and laid it hard to her charge. And ſhe ſaid unto him, Thou art accurſed, and ſo are thy Images. He called her Whore. Nay, ſaid ſhe, thy Images are Whores, and thou art a Whore-hunter; for doth not God ſay, You go a whoring after ſtrange gods, figures of your own making? and thou art one of them. Then was ſhe ſent for and clapped faſt, and from that time ſhe had no more liberty.

The revolting of one Daniel a Miniſter. from the Goſpel to Popery in Q. Maries time.

During the time of her Impriſonment, divers reſorted to her to viſit her, ſome ſent of the Biſhop, ſome of their own voluntary will; amongſt whom was one Daniel a great doer and preacher ſometimes of the Goſpel, in the Days of King Edward, in thoſe parts of Cornwal and Devonſhire: whom after that ſhe perceived by his own confeſſion to have revolted from that which he preached before, through the grievous Impriſonments, as he ſaid, and fear of perſecution which he had partly ſuſtained by the cruel Juſtices in thoſe parts, earneſtly ſhe exhorted him to repent with Peter, and to be more conſtant in his Profeſſion.

Moreover, there reſorted to her a certain worthy Gentlewoman, the Wife of one Walter Rauly, a woman of noble wit, and of a good and godly Opinion; who coming to the Priſon, and talking with her, ſhe ſaid her Creed to the Gentlewoman, and when ſhe came to the Article, He aſcended, there ſhe ſtaid, and bade the Gentlewoman to ſeek his bleſſed Body in heaven, not in Earth, and told her plainly that God dwelleth not in Temples made with hands, and that Sacrament to be nothing elſe but a remembrance of his bleſſed Paſſion, and yet (ſaid ſhe) as they now uſe it, it is but an Idol, and far wide from any remembrance of Chriſts Body; which, ſaid ſhe, will not long continue, and ſo take it good Mrs. So that as ſoon as ſhe came home to her Husband, ſhe declared to him, that in her life ſhe never heard a Woman (of ſuch ſimplicity to ſee to) talk ſo godly, ſo perfectly, ſo ſincerely, and ſo earneſtly; inſomuch, that if God were not with her, ſhe could not ſpeak ſuch things, to the which I am not able to anſwer her, ſaid ſhe, who can read, and ſhe cannot. Anno 1558.

William and J. Kede, two godly Brethren.

Alſo there came to her one Wiliam Kede, and John his Brother, not only Brethren in the fleſh, but alſo in the Truth, and men in that Country of great credit, whoſe Father R. Kede all his life ſuffered nothing but trouble for the Goſpel. Theſe two good and faithful Brethren were preſent with her, both in the Hall, and alſo at the Priſon, and (as they reported) they never heard the like Woman, of ſo godly talk, ſo faithful or ſo conſtant; and as godly Exhortations ſhe gave them.

The conſtancy of this Woman many ways tryed.

Thus this good Matron, the very Servant and Handmaid of Chriſt, was by many ways tryed, both by hard Impriſonment, threatnings, taunts and ſcorns, called an Anabaptiſt, a mad Woman, a Dunkard, a Whore, a Runnagate. She was proved by liberty to go whither ſhe would; ſhe was tried by flattery, with many fair promiſes; ſhe was tryed with her Husband, her goods and Children; but nothing could prevail, her heart was fixed, ſhe had caſt her Anchor, utterly contemning this wicked world; a rare enſample of conſtancy to all Profeſſors of Chriſts Goſpel.

In the Bill of my Information, it is ſo reported to me, that albeit ſhe was of ſuch ſimplicity, and without learning, yet you could declare no place of Scripture, but ſhe would tell you the Chapter; yea, ſhe would recite you the names of all the Books of the Bible. For which cauſe one Gregory Baſſet, a rank Papiſt, ſaid ſhe was out of her wit, and talked of the Scripture, as a Dog rangeth far off from his Maſter when he walketh in the fields, or as a ſtoln Sheep ont of his Maſters hands, ſhe wiſt not whereat, as all Hereticks do; with many other ſuch taunts, which ſhe utterly deſied. Whereby as Almighty God is highly to be praiſed, working ſo mightily in ſuch a weak Veſſel, ſo men of ſtronger and ſtouter nature, have alſo to take example how to ſtand in like caſe; when as we ſee this poor Woman, how manfully ſhe went through with ſuch conſtancy and patience.

G. Baſſet a railing Papiſt.

The conſtant Patience of this Woman and Martyr to be noted.

At the laſt, when they perceived her to be paſt remedy, and had conſumed all their threatnings, that neither by priſonment nor liberty, by menaces nor flattery, they could bring her to ſing any other Song, nor win her to their vanities and ſuperſtitious doings, then they cried out, An Anabaptiſt, an Anabaptiſt. Then at a day they brought her from the Biſhops Priſon to the Guild-Hall, and after that delivered her to the Temporal Power, according to their cuſtom, where ſhe was by the Gentlemen of the Country exhorted yet to call for grace, and to leave her fond Opinions: and go home to thy Husband, ſaid they, thou art an unlearned Woman, thou art not able to anſwer to ſuch high matters. I am not, ſaid ſhe, yet with my death I am content to be a witneſs of Chriſts death: and I pray you make no longer delay with me; my heart is fixed, I will never otherwiſe ſay, nor turn to their ſuperſtitious doings.

The Woman brought from the Biſhops Priſon to the Guild-Hall: Exhortations to have her recant.

The conſtant ſtanding of this Woman.

Then the Biſhop ſaid, the Devil did lead her.

No, my Lord, ſaid ſhe, it is the Spirit of God which leadeth me, and which called me in my Bed, and at midnight opened his Truth to me. Then was there a great ſhout and laughing among the Prieſts and other.

Blaſphemy of the Biſhop.

How God revealed his Truth unto her.

During the time that this good poor Woman was thus under theſe Prieſts hands, amongſt many other baitings and ſore conflicts which ſhe ſuſtained by them, here is moreover not to be forgotten, how that Maſter Blaxton aforeſaid, being the Treaſurer of the Church, had a Concubine, which ſundry times reſorted to him, with other of his Goſſips; ſo that always when they came, this ſaid good Woman was called forth to his Houſe, there to make his Minion with the reſt of the Company ſome mirth, he examining her with ſuch mocking and girning, deriding the Truth, that it would have vexed any

Anno 1558.

Chriſtian heart to have ſeen it. Then when he had long uſed his fooliſhneſs in this ſort, and had ſported himſelf enough in deriding this Chriſtian Martyr; in the end he ſent her to Priſon again, and there kept her very miſerably, ſaving that ſometimes he would ſend for her, when his aforeſaid gueſt came to him, to uſe with her his accuſtomed folly aforeſaid. But in fine, theſe vile wretches (after many combats and ſcoffing perſwaſions) when they had played the part of the Cat with the Mouſe, at length condemned her, and delivered her over to the Secular Power.

Judgment given againſt this good Woman.

Then the Indictment being given and read, which was, that ſhe ſhould go to the place whence ſhe came, and from thence to be led to the place of execution, then and there to be burned with flames till ſhe ſhould be conſumed; ſhe lifted up her voice and thanked God, ſaying, I thank thee my Lord my God; this day have I found that which I have long ſought. But ſuch out-cries as there were again, and ſuch mockings were never ſeen upon a poor ſilly Woman: All which ſhe moſt patiently took. And yet this favour they pretended after her Judgment, that her life ſhould be ſpared, if ſhe would turn and recant. Nay, that will I not (ſaid ſhe:) God forbid that I ſhould loſe the life eternal for this carnal and ſhort life. I will never turn from my Heavenly Husband, to my Earthly Husband; from the fellowſhip of Angels, to mortal Children: And if my Husband and Children be faithful, then am I theirs; God is my Father, God is my Mother, God is my Siſter, my Brother, my Kinſman, God is my Friend moſt faithful.

She taketh God for her judgment given.

The patient Martyrdome of a poore woman at Exeter, being one Preſts wife.

Two godly Martyrs burned at Briſtoll Anno 1557.

The Woman delivered to the Sheriff, and led to the place of execution.

Then was ſhe delivered to the Sheriff, and inumerable People beholding her, ſhe was led by the Officers to the place of execution, without the Walls of Exceter, called Sothenhey, where again theſe ſuperſtitious Prieſts aſſaulted her; and ſhe prayed them to have no more talk with her, but cryed ſtill; God be merciful to me a ſinner, God be merciful to me a ſinner. And ſo whiles they were tying her to the ſtake, thus ſtill ſhe cryed, and would give no anſwer to them, but with much patience took her cruel death, and was with the flames and fire conſumed; and ſo ended this mortal life, as conſtant a Woman in the Faith of Chriſt, as ever was upon the Earth. Shee was as ſimple a Woman to ſee to as any Man might behold; of a very little and ſhort ſtature, ſomewhat thick, about 54. years of age. She had a chearful countenance, ſo lively, as though ſhe had been prepared for that day of her Marriage to meet the Lamb; moſt patient of her words and anſwers; ſober in apparel, meat and drink, and would never be idle; a great comfort to as many as would talk with her; good to the poor; and in her trouble, mony, ſhe ſaid, ſhe would take none; for ſhe ſaid, I am going to a City, where mony beareth no maſtry; whiles I am here God hath promiſed to feed me. Thus was her mortal life ended. For whoſe conſtancy God be everlaſtingly praiſed, Amen.

Touching the name of this Woman (as I have now learned) ſhe was the Wife of one called Preſt, dwelling in the Dioceſs of Exceter, not far from Launceſton.

The perſecution and Martyrdom of three godly men burnt at Briſtow, about the latter years of Qu. Mary's Reign.

The ſtory of 3 Martyrs which ſuffered at Briſtow.

IN writing of the bleſſed Saints which ſuffered in the Bloody days of Queen Mary, I had almoſt overpaſſed the names and ſtory of three godly Martyrs, which with their Blood gave Teſtimony likewiſe to the Goſpel of Chriſt, being condemned and burnt in the Town of Briſtow. The names of whom were theſe:

Richard Sharpe.
Thomas Benion. } Martyrs.
Thomas Hale.

Rich. Sharp Martyr.

First, Richard Sharp Weaver of Briſtow, was brought the ninth day of March, Anno 1556. before Maſter Dalby, Chancellor of the Town or City of Briſtow, and after examination concerning the Sacrament of the Altar, was perſwaded by the ſaid Dalby and others to recant, and the twenty nineth of the ſame Month was enjoyned to make his recantation before the Pariſhioners in his Pariſh Church. Which when he had done, he felt in his Conſcience ſuch a tormenting Hell, that he was not able quietly to work in his occupation, but decayed and changed both in colour and liking of his Body. Who ſhortly after upon Sunday came into his Pariſh Church, called Temple, and after high Maſs, came to the Quire Door, and ſaid with a loud voice; Neighbours, bear me record that yonder Idol (and pointed to the Altar) is the greateſt and moſt abominable that ever was; and I am ſory that ever I denyed my Lord God. Then the Conſtables were commanded to apprehend him, but none ſtepped forth, but ſuffered him to go out of the Church. After, by night he was apprehended and carried to Newgate, and ſhortly after he was brought before the Lord Chancellor, denying the Sacrament of the Altar to be the Body and Blood of Chriſt, and ſaid, it was an Idol, and therefore was condemned to be burned by the ſaid Dalby. He was burnt the ſeventh of May 1557. and died godly, patiently, and conſtantly, confeſſing the Articles of our Faith.

Mr. Dalby Chancellor of Briſtow, perſecutor.

Rich. Sharp condemned.

Thomas Hale, Martyr.

Tho. Hale Martyr.

THe Thurſday in the night before Eaſter, Anno 1557. came one Mr. David Herris Alderman, and John Stone, to the Houſe of one Thomas Hale, a Shoemaker of Briſtow, and cauſed him to riſe out of his Bed, and brought him forth of his door. To whom the ſaid Thomas Hale ſaid, You have ſought my Blood theſe two years, and now much good do you with it. Who being committed to the Watchmen, was carried to Newgate the twenty fourth of April, the year aforeſaid, was brought before Mr. Dalby the Chancellor, committed by him to Priſon, and after by him condemned to be burnt, for ſaying the Sacrament of the Altar to be an Idol. He was burned the ſeventh of May with the foreſaid Richard Sharp, and godly, patiently, and conſtantly imbraced the Fire with his arms.

Anno 1558.

Richard Sharp and Thomas Hale were burned both together in one fire, and bound back to back.

Thomas Benion.

Tho. Benion Martyr.

THomas Benion a Weaver, at the Commandment of the Commiſſioners, was brought by a Conſtable, the thirteenth day of Auguſt Anno, 1557. before Maſter Dalby Chancellor of Briſtow, who committed him to Priſon for ſaying there was nothing but Bread in the Sacrament, as they uſed it. Wherefore, the twentieth day of the ſaid Auguſt he was condemned to be burnt by the ſaid Dalby, for denying 5. of their Sacraments, and affirming two, that is, the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, and the Sacrament of Baptiſm. He was burnt the 27. of the ſaid month and year, and died godly, Conſtantly, and patiently, with confeſſing the Articles of our Chriſtian Faith.

Thomas Benion burnt at Briſtoll. Aug. 27. 1557.

The Martyrdome of five Godly Martyrs at Canterbury Anno 1558. November 10.

The Martyrdom of five conſtant Chriſtians, which ſuffered the laſt of all other in the time of Queen Mary.

November 10.

THe laſt that ſuffered in Queen Maries time, were five at Canterbury burned about ſix days before the death of Queen Mary, whoſe names Follow here under written.

Martyrs.

John Corneford, of Wortham.
Chriſtopher Brown, of Maidſtone.
John Herſt, of Aſhford.
Alice Snoth.
Katherine Knight, otherwiſe called Katherine Tynley, an aged Woman.

The five laſt that ſuffered.

Theſe five, to cloſe up the final Rage of Queen Maries Perſecution, for the teſtimony of that Word, for which ſo many had died before, gave up their lives meekly and patiently, ſuffering the violent malice of the Papiſts. Which Papiſts, although they then might have either well ſpared them, or elſe deferred their death, knowing of the ſickneſs of Queen Mary; yet ſuch was the implacable deſpight of that Generation, that ſome there be that ſay, the Archdeacon of Canterbury the ſame time being at London, and underſtanding the danger of the Queen, incontinently made all poſt-haſt home to diſpatch theſe, whom before he had then in his cruel cuſtody.

The matter why they were judged to the Fire, was for believing the Body not to be in the Sacrament of the Altar, unleſs it be received; ſaying moreover, that we receive another thing alſo beſides Chriſts Body, which we ſee, and is a temporal thing, according to St. Paul, The things that be ſeen, be temporal, &c.

Their Articles why they were condemned.

Item, for confeſſing that an evil man doth not receive Chriſts Body, Becauſe no man hath the Son, except it be given him of the Father.

Item, that it is Idolatry to creep to the Croſs, and St. John forbidding it, ſaith, Beware of Images.

Item, for confeſſing that we ſhould not pray to our Lady, and other Saints, becauſe they be not Omnipotent.

An example of Gods work to be noted.

For theſe and other ſuch Articles of Chriſtian Doctrine, were theſe five committed to the Fire. Againſt whom when the Sentence ſhould be read, and they excommunicate, after the manner of the Papiſts, one of them, John Corneford by Name, ſtirred with a vehement ſpirit of the Zeal of God, proceeding in a more true Excommunication againſt the Papiſts, in the name of them all, pronounced Sentence againſt them, in theſe words as follow:

In

Anno 1558.

Sentence of condemnation pronounced by J. Corneford against the Papists.

In the Name of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of the most mighty God, and by the power of his Holy Spirit, and the Authority of his Holy Catholick and Apostolick Church, we do here give into the Hands of Sathan to be destroyed, the Bodies of all those Blasphemers and Hereticks, that do maintain any error against his most holy Word, or do condemn his most holy Truth for Heresie, to the maintenance of any false Church or feigned Religion, so that by this thy just judgment, O most mighty God, against thy Adversaries, thy True Religion may be known to thy great glory and our comfort, and to the edifying of all our Nation. Good Lord so be it, Amen.

This Sentence of Excommunication being the same time openly pronounced and registred, proceeding so, as it seemeth, from an inward Faith and hearty zeal to Gods Truth and Religion, took such effect against the enemy, that within six days after Queen Mary dyed, and the Tyranny of all English Papists with her. Albeit, notwithstanding the Sickness and Death of that Queen, wherof they were not ignorant; yet the Archdeacon, with other of Canterbury, thought to dispatch the Martyrdom of these Men before.

In the which fact, the tyranny of this Archdeacon seemeth to exceed the cruelty of Boner; who notwithstanding he had certain the same time under his custody, yet he was not so importune in haling them to the fire, as appeareth by Father Lining and his Wife, and divers other, who being the same time under the custody and danger of Boner, were delivered by the death of Queen Mary, and remain yet some of them alive.

These godly Martyrs in their prayers which they made before their Martyrdom, desired God that their Blood might be the last that should be shed, and so it was.

This Katherine Tinley was the Mother of one Robert Tinley, now dwelling in Maidstone, which Robert was in trouble all Queen Maries time. To whom his Mother, coming to visit him, asked him how he took this place of Scripture which she had seen, not by reading of the Scripture (for she had yet in manner no taste of Religion) but had found it by chance in a Book of prayers, I will pour out my Spirit upon all Flesh, and your Sons and your Daughters shall prophesie: your Old Men shall dream dreams, and your Young Men shall see Visions. And also upon the Servants, and upon the Maids in those days will I pour my Spirit, &c. Which place after that he had expounded to her, she began to take hold on the Gospel, growing more and more in zeal and love thereof, and so continued unto her Martyrdom.

A note of Alice Snoth.

Among such young Women as were burned at Canterbury, it is recorded of a certain maid, and supposed to be this Alice Snoth here in this story mentioned, or else to be Agnes Snoth above storied, (for they were both burned) that when she was brought to be executed, she being at the Stake, called for her Godfather and Godmothers. The Justice, hearing her, sent for them, but they durst not come. Notwithstanding the Justices willed the messenger to go again, and to shew them that they should incur no danger thereof.

Hereby Bp. Boner may see that the Martyrs died in the same Faith, wherein they were Baptised by their Godfathers and Godmothers.

Then, they hearing that, came to know the matter of their sending for. When the maid saw them, she asked them what they had promised for her, and so she immediatly rehearsed her Faith, and the commandments of God, and required of them, if there were any more that they had promised in her behalf, and they said, No. Then, said she, I die a Christian Woman, bear witness of mee, and so cruelly in fire was she consumed, and gave joyfully her life up for the Testimony of Christs Gospel, to the terrour of the wicked, and comfort of the godly, and also to the stopping of the slanderous mouths of such, as falsly do quarrel against the faithful Martyrs, for going from that Religion wherein by their Godfathers and Godmothers they were first Baptised.

The Story and Condemnation of John Hunt, and Richard White, ready to be burnt, but by the Death of Q. Mary escaped the fire.

The story of Jo. Hunt, and Richard White.

BEsides these Martyrs above named, divers there were in divers other places of the Realm imprisoned, whereof some were but newly taken and not yet examined, some begun to be examined, but were not yet condemned, certain were both examined and condemned, but for lack of the Writ escaped.

Other there were also, both condemned, and the Writ also was brought down for their burning, and yet by the death of the Chancellor, the Bishop, and of Queen Mary happening together about one time, they most happily and marvellously were preserved, and lived many years after. In the number of whom was one John Hunt and Richard White, imprisoned at Salisbury. Touching which history something here is to be shewed.

First, these two good Men and faithful Servants of the Lord above named, to wit, John Hunt, and Richard White, had remained long time in Prison at Salisbury and other places thereabout, the space of two years and more. During which time, oft times they were called to examination, and manifold ways were impugned by the Bishops and the Priests. All whose examinations; as I thought not much needful here to prosecute or to search out, for the length of the Volume; so neither again did I think it good to leave no Memory at all of the same, but some part to express, namely of the Examination of Richard White before the B. of Salisbury, the B. of Gloucester, with the Chancellor and other Priests, not unworthy perchance to be rehearsed.

The Examination of Richard White, before the Bishop of Salisbury in his Chamber in Salisbury the 26. day of April, Anno 1557.

Examination of Richard White.

THe Bishop of Salisbury at that time was Doctor Capon. The Bishop of Gloucester was Doctor Brookes. These with Doctor Geffery the Chancellor of Salisbury, and a great number of Priests sitting in judgment, Richard White was brought before them. With whom first the Bishop of Gloucester, which had the examination of him, beginneth thus.

Bishop Brookes. Is this the prisoner?

The Chancellor. Yea, my Lord.

Brookes. Friend, wherefore camest thou hither?

White. My Lord, I trust to know the cause: for the Law saith; In the Mouth of two or three witnesses things must stand.

Doctor Capon. Did not I examine thee of thy Faith when thou camest hither?

White. No, my Lord, you did not examine me, but commanded me to the Lollards Tower, and that no man should speak with me. And now I do require mine accuser.

The Maior of Marlborough persecutor.

Then the Register said; The Maior of Marlborow did apprehend you for words that you spake there; and for that I commanded you to be conveighed hither to Prison.

White. You had the examination of me in Marlborow. Say what I have said. And I will answer you.

Geffery. Thou shalt confess thy Faith e're thou depart; and therefore say thy mind freely, and be not ashamed so to do.

White. I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ, because it is the power of God to Salvation unto all that believe: and S. Peter saith; If any man do ask thee a reason of the hope that is in thee, make him a direct answer and that with meekness. Who shall have the examination of me?

Chanc. My Lord of Gloucester shall have the examination of thee.

White. My Lord, will you take the pains to wet your coat in my Blood? be not guilty thereof; I warn you before hand.

Brookes. I will do nothing contrary to our Law.

White. My Lord, what is it that you do request at my hands?

The Sacrament of the Altar.

Brookes. I will appose thee upon certain Articles, and principally upon the Sacrament of the Altar: How doest thou believe of the blessed Sacrament of the Altar? Believest thou not the real, carnal, and corporal presence of Christ in the same, even the very same Christ that was born of the Virgin Mary, that was hanged on the Cross and that suffered for our sins? (and at these words they all put off their caps, and bowed their Bodies.)

White.

White. My Lord, what is a Sacrament?

Brooks. It is the thing it self the which it representeth.

White. My Lord, that cannot be; for he that representeth a Prince, cannot be the Prince himself.

Bro. How many Sacraments findest thou in the Scriptures called by the name of Sacraments?

White. I find two Sacraments in the Scriptures, but not called by the names of Sacraments. But I think St. Auguſtine gave them the firſt name of Sacraments:

The name Sacrament not found in the Scriptures.

Brooks, Then thou findeſt not that word Sacrament in the Scriptures.

White. No, my Lord.

How the Papiſts play with Scriptures, as the Devil did when he tempted Chriſt.

Brooks. Did not Chriſt ſay, This is my Body? and are not his words true?

White. I am ſure the words are true; but you play by me as the Devil did by Chriſt: for he ſaid, If thou be, Mat. 4. For, it is, &c. Pſal. 91. But the words that followed after be clean left out, which are theſe: Thou ſhalt walk upon the Lion and Aſp, &c. Theſe words the Devil left out, becauſe they were ſpoken againſt himſelf; and even ſo do you recite the Scriptures.

White's opinion of the Sacrament.

Brooks. Declare thy Faith upon the Sacrament.

White. Chriſt and his Sacraments are like, becauſe of the Natures; for in Chriſt are two Natures, a divine and an humane Nature; ſo likewiſe in the Sacraments of Chriſts Body and Blood there be two Natures, the which I divide into two parts, that is, external and internal. The external part is the Element of Bread and Wine, according to the ſaying of Saint Auguſtine. The internal part is the inviſible Grace, which by the ſame is repreſented. So is there an external receiving of the ſame Sacrament, and an internal. The external is with the hand, the eye, the mouth, and the ear. The internal is by the Holy Ghoſt in the heart, which worketh in me Faith. Whereby I apprehend all the merits of Chriſt, applying the ſame wholly unto my Salvation. If this be truth, believe it; and if it be not, reprove it.

Double receiving of the Sacrament, external, & internal.

Dr. Hoskins. This is Oecolampadius Doctrine, and Hooper taught it the people.

Brooks. Doſt thou not believe, that after the words of Conſecration there is the natural Preſence of Chriſts Body?

White. My Lord, I will anſwer you, if you will anſwer me to one queſtion. Is not this Article of our belief true; He ſitteth at the Right hand of God the Father Almighty: If he be come from thence to judgment, ſay ſo.

A popiſh Paradox; Chriſts Body both in Heaven and in Earth at one time.

Brook. No. But if thou wilt believe the Scriptures, I will prove to thee that Chriſt was both in Heaven and in earth at one time.

White. As he is God, he is in all places; but as for his manhood, he is but in one place.

Brooks. St. Paul ſaith, 1 Cor. 15. Laſt of all he was ſeen of me, &c. Here St. Paul ſaith he ſaw Chriſt, and St. Paul was not in Heaven.

White. St. Pauls chief purpoſe was by this place to prove the Reſurrection. But how do you prove that Chriſt, when hee appeared to St. Paul, was not ſtill in Heaven; like as he was ſeen of Stephen, ſitting at the Right Hand of God? St. Auguſtine ſaith, the Head that was in Heaven, did cry for the Body and members which were on the Earth, and ſaid; Saul, Saul, why perſecuteſt thou me? And was not Paul taken up into the third Heaven, where he might ſee Chriſt? as he witneſſeth, 1 Cor. 15. For there he doth but only ſay he ſaw Chriſt, but concerning the place he ſpeaketh nothing. Wherefore this place of Scripture proveth not that Chriſt was both in Heaven and Earth at one time.

How St. Paul ſaw Chriſt Supra. Pſal. 54.

B. Brook leaveth the Scripture, and proveth the Sacrament by other matter.

Brook. I told you before he would not believe. Here be three opinions, the Lutherans, the Oecolampadians, and we the Catholicks. If you the Oeccolampadians have the truth; then the Lutherans and we the Catholiks be out of the way. If the Lutherans have the truth, then you the Oecolampadians and we the Catholicks be out of the way. But if we the Catholicks have the truth, as we have indeed, then the Lutherans and you the Oecolampadians are out of the way, as you are indeed, for the Lutherans do call you Hereticks.

White. My Lord, ye have troubled me greatly with the Scriptures.

Brooks. Did I not tell you it was not poſſible to remove him from his errour? Away with him to the Lollards Tower, and diſpatch him as ſoon as ye can.

Anno 1558.

This was the effect of my firſt Examination. More Examinations I had after this, which I have no time now to write out.

Amongſt many other examinations of the foreſaid Richard White, at divers and ſundry times ſuſtained, it happened one time, that Doctor Blackſtone Chancellor of Exceter ſate upon him, with divers other; who alledging certain Doctors, as Chryſoſtome, Cyprian, Tertullian, againſt the ſaid Richard, and being, falſe patching of the Doctors, reproved by him for his fell in ſuch a quaking and ſhaking (his Conſcience belike remorſing him) that hee was fain, ſtooping down, to lay both his hands upon his knees to ſtay his Body from trembling.

The tremming and ſhaking of Blackſtone at the examination of Richard White.

Then the ſaid John Hunt and Richard White, after many examinations and long captivity, at length were called for, and brought before Doctor Geffery the Biſhops Chancellor, there to be condemned, and ſo they were. The high Sheriff at that preſent was one named Sir Anthony Hnugerford, who being then at the Seſſions, was there charged with theſe two comdemned perſons, with other malefactors there condemned likewiſe the ſame time, to ſee the execution of Death miniſtred unto them.

Condemnation of John Hunt and R. White.

In the mean time Maſter Clifford of Boſco in Wiltſhire, Son-in-law to the ſaid Sir Anthony Hungerford the Sheriff, cometh to his Father, exhorting him and counſelling him earneſtly in no caſe to meddle with the Death of theſe two innocent perſons; and if the Chancellor and Prieſts would needs be inſtant upon him, yet he ſhould firſt require the Writ to be ſent down De comburendo for his diſcharge.

The Chriſtian zeal of M. Clifford.

Sir Anthony Hungerford hearing this, and underſtanding Juſtice Brown to be in the Town the ſame time, went to him to ask his advice and Counſel in the matter: who told him that without the Writ ſent down from the Superiour Powers, he could not bee diſcharged, and if the Writ were ſent, then he muſt by the law do his charge.

The Sheriff underſtanding by Juſtice Brown how farr he might go by the Law, and having at that time no Writ for his warrant, let them alone, and the next day after taking his Horſe, departed.

Example of Chriſtian piety in the Sheriff to be noted.

The Chancellor all this while marvelling what the Sheriff meant, and yet diſdaining to go unto him, but looking rather the other ſhould have come firſt to him, at laſt hearing that hee was ridden away, taketh his Horſe and rideth after him; who, at length overtaking the ſaid Sheriff, declared unto him how he had committed certain condemned priſoners to his hand, whoſe duty had been to have ſeen execution done, the matter he ſaid was great, and therefore willed him to look well unto it how he would anſwer the matter. And thus began he fiercely to lay to his charge.

Wherein note (gentle Reader) by the way, the cloſe and covert hypocriſie of the Papiſts in their dealings. Who in the form and ſtile of their own Sentence Condemnatory, pretend a Petition unto the Secular Power, In viſceribus Jeſu Chriſti, ut iuris rigor mitigetur, atque ut parcatur vitæ. That is, that the rigour of the Law may be mitigated, and that their life may be ſpared. And how ſtandeth this now with their own doings and dealings, when this Chancellor (as ye ſee) is not onely contented to give Sentence againſt them, but alſo hunteth after the Officer, not ſuffering him to ſpare them, although he would? What diſſimulation is this of Men, going and doing contrary to their own words and profeſſion? But let us return to our matter again.

Note to be obſerved concerning the Papiſts dealings.

The Papiſts charged with manifeſt diſſimulation.

The Sheriff hearing the Chancellors words, and ſeeing him ſo urging upon him, told him again that hee was no Babe, which now was to be taught of him. If he had any Writ to warrant and diſcharge him in burning thoſe Men, then he knew what he had to do. Why, ſaith the Chancellor, did not I give you a Writ, with my hand and eight more of the Cloſe ſet unto the ſame? Well, quoth the Sheriff, that is no ſufficient diſcharge for me; and therefore as I told you, if ye have a ſufficient Writ and Warrant from the Superiour Powers, I know then what I have to do in my office: otherwiſe, if you have no

Anno 1558.

no other [illegible]t but that, I tell you, I wil neither burn them for you nor any of you all, &c.

Burning without a ſufficient Writ.

Where note again (good Reader) how by this it may be thought and ſuppoſed, that the other poor Saints and Martyrs of God, ſuch as had been burned at Saliſbury before, were burned belike without any authoriſed or ſufficient Writ from the Superiors, but only upon the information of the Chancellor and of the Cloſe, through the uncircumſpect negligence of the Sheriffs, which ſhould have looked more ſubſtantially upon the matter. But this I leave and referr unto the Magiſtrates. Let us return to the ſtory again.

Doctor Geffery the Chancellor thus ſent away from the Sheriff, went home, and there fell ſick upon the ſame (for anger belike) as they ſignified unto me, which were the parties themſelves, both godly and grave perſons, who were then condemned, the one of them, which is Richard White, being yet alive.

Rich. White now Vicar of Malbrough in Wiltſhire.

The under Sheriff to this Sir Anthony Hungerford above named, was one Maſter Michell, likewiſe a right and a perfect godly Man. So that not long after this came down the Writ to burn the above named Richard White, and John Hunt, but the under Sheriff receiving the ſaid Writ, ſaid; I will not be guilty (quoth he) of theſe Mens Blood, and immediately burnt the writing, and departed his way. Within four days after the Chancellor died. Concerning whoſe Death this cometh by the way to be noted, that theſe two foreſaid, John Hunt, and Rich. White, being the ſame time in a low and dark Dungeon, being Saturday, toward evening (according to their accuſtomed manner) fell to evening prayer. Who kneeling there together, as they ſhould begin their prayer: ſuddenly fell both to ſuch a ſtrange weeping and tenderneſs of heart (but how they could not tell) that they could not pray one word, but ſo continued a great ſpace, burſting out in tears. After that night was paſt, and the morning come, the firſt word they heard, was that the Chanchellor their great enemy was dead. The time of whoſe death they found to be the ſame hour, when as they fell in ſuch a ſudden weeping. The Lord in all his works be prayſed, Amen. Thus much concerning the death of that wicked Chancellor.

Mr. Michel underſheriff buſneth the Writ.

Gods workings to be noted concerning the death of Dr. Geffery Chancellor of Saliſbury.

This Rich. White and the ſaid John Hunt, after the death of the Chancellor, the Biſhop alſo being dead a little before, continued ſtill in Priſon till the happy coming in of Queen Elizabeth: and ſo were at liberty.

The Martyrdom of a young lad of eight years old, ſcourged to death in Biſhop Boners Houſe in London.

The Story of John Fetty, and martyrdom of his Child.

IF bloody Torments and cruel Death of a poor Innocent, ſuffering for no cauſe of his own, but in the Truth of Chriſt and his Religion, do make a Martyr, no leſs deſerveth the Child of one John Fetty to be reputed in the Catalogue of Holy Martyrs, who in the houſe of Bp. Boner unmercifully was ſcourged to death, as by the ſequel of this ſtory here following may appear.

Amongſt thoſe that were perſecuted and miſerably impriſoned for the profeſſion of Chriſts Goſpel, and yet mercifully delivered by the providence of God, there was one John Fetty, a ſimple and godly Poor Man, dwelling in the Pariſh of Clerkenwel, and was by vocation a Taylor, of the age of 24. years or thereabout, who was accuſed and complained of unto one Brokenbury a Prieſt and Parſon of the ſame Pariſh, by his own Wife, for that he would not come unto the Church, and be partaker of their Idolatry and Superſtition; and therefore, through the ſaid Prieſts procurement, he was apprehended by Richard Tanner and his fellow Conſtables there, and one Martin the Headborow. Howbeit immediately upon his apprehenſion, his Wife (by the juſt judgment of God) was ſtricken mad, and diſtract of her wits; which declared a marvellous example of the juſtice of God againſt ſuch unfaithful and moſt unatural treachery. And although this example perhaps for lack of knowledge and inſtruction in ſuch caſes little moved the Conſciences of thoſe ſimple Poor Men to ſurceaſe their perſecution; yet natural pity towards that ungrateful Woman wrought ſo in their hearts, that for the preſervation and ſuſtentation of her and her two Children (like otherwiſe to periſh) they for that preſent let her Husband alone, and would not carry him to Priſon, but yet ſuffered him to remain quietly in his own houſe. During which time, he as it were forgetting the wicked and unkind fact of his Wife, did yet ſo cheriſh and provide for her, that within the ſpace of three weeks (through Gods merciful providence) ſhe was well amended, and had recovered again ſome ſtay of her wits and ſenſes.

Gods dreadful hand upon a Wife ſeeking the deſtruction of her Husband.

But ſuch was the power of Sathan in the malicious heart of that wicked Woman, that notwithſtanding his gentle dealing with her, yet ſhe ſo ſoon as ſhe had recovered ſome health, did again accuſe her Husband; whereupon he was the ſecond time apprehended, and carried unto Sir John Mordant Knight, one of the Queens Commiſſioners, and he upon examination ſent him by Cluny the Biſhops Sumner, unto the Lollards Tower: where he was (even at the firſt) put into the painful Stocks, and had a diſh of water ſet by him, with a ſtone put into it. To what purpoſe God knoweth, except it were to ſhew that he ſhould look for little other ſuſtenance, Which is credible enough, if we conſider their like practices upon divers before mentioned in this hiſtory, as amongſt other, upon Richard Smith, who died through their cruel impriſonment; Touching whom, when a godly Woman came to Dr. Story, to have leave that ſhe might bury him, he asked her if he had any ſtraw or Blood in his Mouth; but what he meant thereby, I leave to the judgment of the godly Wiſe.

The Wife perſecuting her Husband.

John Fetty again apprehended.

The ſtrait handling of Jo. Fetty by Sir John Mordant.

Rich. Smith dead in priſon through cruel handling.

After the foreſaid Fetty had thus lain in the Priſon by the ſpace of 15. days, hanging in the ſtocks, ſometime by the one leg, and the one Arm; ſometime by the other, and otherwhiles by both, it hapned that one of his Children (a boy of the age of 8. or 9. years) came unto the Biſhops houſe to ſee if he could get leave to ſpeak with his Father. At his coming thither, one of the Biſhops Chaplains met with him, and asked him what he lacked and whom he would have. The Child anſwered, that he came to ſee his Father. The Chaplain asked again who was his Father. The boy then told him, and pointing towards Lollards Tower, ſhewed him that his Father was there in Priſon. Why (quoth the Prieſt) thy Father is an Heretick: The Child being of a bold and quick Spirit, and alſo godly brought up, and inſtructed by his Father in the knowledge of God, anſwered and ſaid; My Father is no Heretick: For you have Balaams Mark.

The cruel handling & ſcourging of Jo. Fetties Child.

With that the Prieſt took the Child by the hand, and carried him into the Biſhops houſe (whether to the Bp. or not, I know not, but like enough hee did) and there amongſt them they did moſt ſhamefully and without all pity ſo whip and ſcourge, being naked, this tender Child, that he was all in a gore Blood, and then in jolly bragg of their Catholick Tyranny, they cauſed Cluny, having his Coat upon his Arm to carry the Child in his ſhirt unto his Father being in Priſon, the Blood running down by his heels.

The miſerable tyranny of the Papiſts in ſcourging a Child.

At his coming unto his Father the Child fell down upon his knees, and asked him bleſſing. The Poo. Man then beholding his Child, and ſeeing him ſo cruelly arayed, cryed out for ſorrow, and ſaid; Alas Will, who hath done this to thee? The Boy anſwered, that as he ſeeking how to come to ſee his Father, a Prieſt with Balaams Mark took him into the Biſhops houſe, and there was he ſo handled. Cluny therewith violently plucked the Child away out of his Fathers Hands, and carried him back again into the Biſhops houſe, where they kept him three days after.

The Child all Bloody brought to his Father in priſon.

Cluny carrieth the boy again to the B. houſe.

And at the three days end, Boner (minding to make the matter whole, and ſomewhat to appeaſe the Poor Man, for this their horrible fact) determined to releaſe him; and therefore cauſed him early in a morning to be brought out of Lollards Tower into his bed-chamber, where he found the Biſhop bathing of himſelf againſt a great fire; and at his firſt entring into the chamber, Fetty ſaid, God be here and peace. God be here and peace (quoth Boner) that is neither God ſpeed, nor good morrow. If ye kick againſt this peace (ſaid Fetty) then this is not the place that I ſeek for.

Anno 1558.

A Chaplain of the Biſhops ſtanding by turned the Poor Man about, and thinking to deface him, ſaid in mocking wiſe; What have we here? A player? whileſt this Fetty was ſtanding in the Biſhops Chamber, he eſpied hanging about the Biſhops Bed a great pair of Black Beads: whereupon he ſaid; My Lord, I think the Hangman is not far off; for the Halter (pointing to the Beads) is here already. At which words the Biſhop was in a marvellous rage.

Bon. Beads.

Then immediately after he eſpied alſo ſtanding in the ſaid Biſhops Chamber in the Window a little Crucifix; (before which belike Boner uſed to kneel in the time of his hypocritical prayers.) Then he asked the Biſhop what it was; and he anſwered that it was Chriſt. Was he handled ſo cruelly as he is here pictured, quoth Fetty?

Boners Crucifix.

Yea, that he was, ſaid the Biſhop.

B. Boner compared to Caiphas.

And even ſo cruelly will you handle ſuch as come before you. For you are unto Gods People as Caiphas was unto Chriſt.

The Biſhop being in a great fury, ſaid; Thou art a vile Heretick, and I will burn thee, or elſe I will ſpend all that I have unto my gown.

Nay, my Lord, ſaid Fetty, ye were better to give it a Poor Body, that he may pray for you. But yet Boner bethinking in himſelf of the danger that the Child was in by their whipping, and what peril might enſue thereupon, thought better to diſcharge him; which thing was accompliſhed.

B. Boner for fear of the law in murdering a Child, delivered the Father out of Priſon.

The Martyrdom of a Child ſcourged to death in Boners houſe.

Whereupon, after this and ſuch like talk, the Biſhop at laſt diſcharged him, willing him to go home, and carry his Child with him; which he ſo did, and that with a heavy heart to ſee his Poor Boy in ſuch extreme pain and grief. But within fourteen days after the Child died, whether through his cruel ſcourging, or any other infirmity, I know not; and therefore I referr the truth thereof unto the Lord, who knoweth all ſecrets, and alſo to the diſcreet judgment of the wiſe Reader. But howſoever it was, the Lord yet uſed their cruel and deteſtable fact, as a means of his providence for the delivery of this good Poor Man and faithful Chriſtian, his name be ever prayſed therefore, Amen.

The cruel handling and burning of Nicholas Burton, Engliſhman and Merchant in Spain.

The ſtory of Nic. Burton Martyr in Spain.

FOraſmuch as in our former Book of Acts and Monuments mention was made of the Martyrdom of Nicholas Burton, I thought here alſo not to omit the ſame ſtory, being ſuch as is not unworthy to be known, as well for the profitable example of his ſingular conſtancy, as alſo for the noting of the extream dealing and cruel revenging of thoſe Catholick Inquiſitors of Spain, who under the pretenſed viſor of Religion, do nothing but ſeek their own private gain and commodity, with crafty rifling and ſpoyling of other Mens goods, as by the noting of this ſtory may appear.

Nic. Burton Londoner.

The fifth day of the Month of November, about the year of our Lord God, 1560, this Nicholas Burton, Citizen ſometime of London and Merchant, dwelling in the Pariſh of little Saint Bartholomew, peaceably and quietly following his traffique in the trade of Merchandiſe, and being in the City of Cadiz, in the party of Andoluzia in Spain, there came into his lodging a Judas (or as they term them) a Familiar of the Fathers of the Inquiſition. Who asking for the ſaid Nicholas Burton, fained that he had a letter to deliver to his own hands; by which means he ſpake with him immediately. And having no Letter to deliver to him, then the ſaid Promoter or Familiar, at the motion of the Divel his Maſter, whoſe meſſenger he was, invented another lie, and ſaid, that he would take lading for London in ſuch ſhips as the ſaid Nicholas Burton had fraited to lade, if he would let any; which was partly to know where he laded his goods, that they might attach them, and chiefly to detract the time until the Alguiſiel or Sergeant of the ſaid Inquiſition might come and apprehend the Body of the ſaid Nicholas Burton; which they did incontinently.

Who then, well perceiving that they were not able to burden nor charge him that he had written, ſpoken, or done any thing there in that Country againſt the Eccleſiaſtical or Temporal Laws of the ſame Realm; boldly asked them what they had to lay to his charge, that they did ſo arreſt him and bade them to declare the cauſe, and he would anſwer them. Notwithſtanding they anſwered nothing, but commanded him with cruel threatning words to hold his peace, and not to ſpeak one word to them.

Nic. Burton laid in priſon, they having no cauſe to charge him with.

And ſo they carried him to the cruel and filthy common Priſon of the Town of Cadiz, where he remained in Irons fourteen days amongſt thievs.

All which time he ſo inſtructed the poor Priſoners in the Word of God, according to the good talent which God had given him in that behalf, and alſo in the Spaniſh Tongue to utter the ſame, that in ſhort ſpace he had well reclaimed ſundry of thoſe Superſtitious and Ignorant Spaniards to imbrace the Word of God, and to reject their Popiſh Traditions.

Nic. Burton carried to Sivil.

Which being known unto the Officers of the Inquiſition, they conveighed him laden with Irons from thence to a City called Sivil, into a more cruel and ſtraiter Priſon called Triana, where the ſaid Fathers of the Inquiſition proceeded againſt him ſecretly according to their accuſtomable cruel tyranny, that never after he could be ſuffered to write or to ſpeak to any of his nation; ſo that to this day it is unknown who was his accuſer.

Nic. Burton brought to judgment after a diſguiſed manner.

Afterward, the 20. day of December, in the foreſaid year, they brought the ſaid Nicholas Burton, with a great number of other priſoners, for profeſſing the true Chriſtian Religion, into the City of Sivil, to a place where the ſaid Inquiſitors ſate in judgment, which they called Awto, with a Canvas Coat, whereupon in divers parts was painted the figure of a huge Divel, tormenting a Soul in a flame of fire, and on his head a copping tank of the ſame work.

His tongue was forced out of his mouth with a cloven ſtick faſtened upon it, that he ſhould not utter his Conſcience and Faith to the People, and ſo he was ſet with another Engliſh Man of Southhampton, and divers other condemned Men for Religion, as well French Men, as Spaniards, upon a Scaffold over againſt the ſaid Inquiſition, where their Sentences and Judgments were read and pronounced againſt them.

Nic. Burton with another Engliſhman of Southampton condemned.

And immediately after the ſaid Sentences given, they were carried from thence to the place of execution without the City, where they moſt cruelly burned him, for whoſe conſtant Faith, God be praiſed.

This Nicholas Burton by the way, and in the flames of the fire made ſo chearful a Countenance, embracing Death with all patience and gladneſs, that the tormentors and enemies which ſtood by, ſaid that the Divel had his Soul before he came to the fire; and therefore they ſaid his ſenſes of feeling were paſt him.

It hapned that after the arreſt of this Nicholas Burton aforeſaid, immediately all the goods and merchandiſe which he brought with him into Spain by the way of traffick, were (according to their common uſage) ſeiſed, and taken into the Sequeſter; among the which they alſo rolled up much that appertained to another Engliſh Merchant, wherewith he was credited as Factor. Whereof ſo ſoon as news was brought to the Merchant as well of the impriſonment of his Factor, as of the arreſt made upon his goods, he ſent his Attourney into Spain with Authority from him, to make claim to his goods, and to demand them; whoſe name was John Fronton, Citizen of Briſtow.

The trouble of Jo. Fronton, Citizen of Briſtow in Spaine.

When his Attourney was landed at Sivil, and had ſhewed all his Letters and writings to the Holy Houſe, requiring them that ſuch goods might be delivered into his poſſeſſion, anſwer was made him that he muſt ſue by Bill, and retain an Advocate (but all was doubtleſs to delay him) and they forſooth of courteſie aſſigned him one to frame his Supplication for him, and other ſuch Bils of petition, as he had to exhibit into their Holy Court, demanding for each Bill 8. Rials, albeit they ſtood him in no more ſtead, than if he had put up none at all. And for the ſpace of three or four Months this fellow miſſed not twice a day, attending every morning and after-noon at the Inquiſitors Palace, ſuing unto them upon his knees for his diſpatch, but eſpecially to the Biſhop of Tarracon, who was at that very time chief in the Inquiſition at Sivil, that he of his abſolute Authority would command reſtitution to be made thereof; but but the Booty was ſo good and ſo great, that it was very hard to come by it again.

At the length, after he had ſpent whole four Months in ſuits and requeſts, and alſo to no purpoſe, he received this Anſwer from them, that he muſt ſhew better evidence, and bring more ſufficient Certificates out of England for proof of this matter, than thoſe which he had already preſented to the Court. Whereupon the party forthwith poſted to London, and with all ſpeed returned to Sivil again with more ample and large Letters Teſtimonial and Certificates, according to their requeſts, and exhibited them to the Court.

Note the ravening extortion of theſe Inquiſitors.

Notwithſtanding the Inquiſitors ſtill ſhifted him off, excuſing themſelves by lack of leiſure, and for that they were occupied in greater and more weighty Affairs, and with ſuch Anſwers delayed him other four Months after.

The vile proceedings of the Inquiſitors of Spain.

At the laſt, when the party had well-nigh ſpent all his Mony, and therefore ſued the more earneſtly for his diſpatch, they referred the matter wholly to the Biſhop. Of whom, when he repaired unto him, he made this Anſwer, That for himſelf, he knew what he had to do; howbeit he was but one man, and the determination of the matter appertained unto the other Commiſſioners as well as unto him: and thus by poſting and paſſing it from one to another, the party could obtain no end of his Suit. Yet, for his importunity ſake, they were reſolved to diſpatch him, it was on this ſort: One of the Inquiſitors called Gaſco, a man very well experienced in theſe practices, willed the party to reſort unto him after Dinner.

J. Fronton impriſoned by the Spaniſh Inquiſitors for asking his own goods.

The Fellow being glad to hear theſe News, and ſuppoſing that his goods ſhould be reſtored unto him, and that he was called in for that purpoſe to talk with the other that was in Priſon, to confer with him about their Accounts, the rather through a little miſunderſtanding, hearing the Inquiſitors caſt out a word, that it ſhould be needful for him to talk with the Priſoner, and being thereupon more than half perſwaded, that at the length they meant good Faith, did ſo, and repaired thither about the Evening. Immediately upon his coming, the Gaoler was forthwith charged with him, to ſhut him up cloſe in ſuch a certain Priſon, where they appointed him.

The party hoping at the firſt that he had been called for about ſome other matter, and ſeeing himſelf contrary to his expectation caſt into a dark Dungeon, perceived at the length that the World went with him far otherwiſe than he ſuppoſed it would have done.

But within two or three days after, he was brought forth into the Court, where he began to demand his goods; and becauſe it was a device that well ſerved their turn, without any more circumſtance they bade him ſay his Ave Maria. The party began and ſaid it after this manner; Ave Maria gratia plena, Dominus tecum, benedicta tu in mulieribus, & benedictus fructus ventris tui Jeſus, Amen.

J. Fronton judged for an Heretick, for not adding to Ave Maria, more than the Scripture hath.

The ſame was written word by word as he ſpake it, and without any more talk of claiming his goods, becauſe it was bootleſs, they command him to Priſon again, and enter an Action againſt him as an Heretick, foraſmuch as he did not ſay his Ave Maria after the Romiſh faſhion, but ended it very ſuſpiciouſly, for he ſhould have added moreover; Sancta Maria mater Dei, ora pro nobis peccatoribus; by abbreviating whereof, it was evident enough (ſaid they) that he did not allow the mediation of Saints.

A quarrel picked againſt the Engliſh Merchant to ſpoil him of his goods.

Thus they picked a quarrel to detain him in Priſon a longer ſeaſon, and afterwards brought him forth into their Stage diſguiſed after their manner: where Sentence was given, that he ſhould loſe all the goods which he ſued for, though they were not his own, and beſides this ſuffer a years Impriſonment.

But of theſe and ſuch other acts and matters paſt in Spain, becauſe they fell not within the compaſs of Q. Maries Reign, but ſince her time, another place ſhall ſerve hereafter (the Lord willing) to intreat more at large of the ſame, when we come to the years and reign of the Queen that now is, where we have more conveniently to infer not only of theſe matters of the Martyrs (whereof ſomewhat alſo hath been touched before) but alſo of the whole Inquiſition of Spain and Plackarde of Flaunders, with the tragical tumults and troubles happening within the laſt memory of theſe our later days, according as it ſhall pleaſe the mercy of the Lord to enable our endeavour with grace and ſpace to the accompliſhment thereof.

A Chapter or Treatiſe concerning ſuch as were Scourged and Whipped by the Papiſts in the true Cauſe of Chriſts Goſpel.

A Chapter concerning ſuch as were Scourged for Religion.

AND thus through the merciful aſſiſtance and favourable aid of Chriſt our Saviour, thou haſt as in a general Regiſter (good Reader) the ſtory collected, if not of all, yet of the moſt part, or at leaſt, not many I truſt omitted of ſuch good Saints and Martyrs as have loſt their Lives, and given their Blood, or died in Priſon for the Teſtimony of Chriſts true Doctrine and Sacraments, from the time of the cruel Statute firſt given out by King Henry the fourth Ex officio, unto this preſent time, and eſpecially under the Reign of Q. Mary.

Of this Statute read before.

Now after this bloody ſlaughter of Gods good Saints and Servants thus ended and diſcurſed, let us proceed (by the good pleaſure of the Lord) ſomewhat likewiſe to intreat of ſuch as for the ſame cauſe of Religion have been, although not put to death, yet Whipped and Scourged by the Adverſaries of Gods Word, firſt beginning with Richard Wilmot and Thomas Fairfax, who about the time of Anne Askew, were pitifully rent and tormented with Scourges and Stripes for their faithful ſtanding to Chriſt, and of his Truth, as by the ſtory and examination both of the ſaid Richard Wilmot, and of Thomas Fairefax now following may appear.

The Scourging of Richard Wilmot and Thomas Fairefax.

The Scourging of Rich. Wilmot and T. Fairefax, Dr. Cromes Sermon.

AFter the firſt Recantation of Doctor Crome for his Sermon which he made the fifth Sunday in Lent at Saint Thomas Aeres, being the Mercers Chappel, his Sermon was on the Epiſtle of the ſame day, written in the Tenth Chapter to the Hebrews; wherein he proved very learnedly by the ſame place of Scripture and others, that Chriſt was the only and ſufficient Sacrifice unto God the Father for the ſins of the whole world, and that there was no more Sacrifice to be offered for ſin by the Prieſts, foraſmuch as Chriſt had offered his Body on the Croſs; and ſhed his Blood for the ſins of the People, and that once for all. For the which Sermon he was apprehended of Boner, and brought before Stephen Gardiner and other of the Council where he promiſed to recant his Doctrine at Pauls-Croſs, the ſecond Sunday after Eaſter. And accordingly he was there and preached, Boner with all his Doctors ſitting before him: but he ſo preached and handled his matter, that he rather verified his former ſaying, than denied any part of that which he before had preached. For the which the Proteſtants praiſed God, and heartily rejoyced.

D. Cromes Recantation.

But Biſhop Boner with his Champions were not therewith pleaſed, but yet notwithſtanding they had him home with them, and ſo handled him among the Wolfiſh generation, that they made him come to the Croſs again the next Sunday.

Dr. Crome cauſed to recant the ſecond time.

And becauſe the Magiſtrates ſhould now hear him, and be witneſs of this Recantation which was moſt blaſphemous, to deny Chriſts Sacrifice to be ſufficient for penitent ſinners, and to ſay that the Sacrifice of the Maſs was good, godly, and a holy Sacrifice, propitiatory and available both for the quick and the dead: Becauſe (I ſay) that they would have the Nobles to hear this blaſphemous Doctrine, the viperous generation procured all the chief of the Council to be there preſent. Anno 1558.

Now to come to our matter; at this time, the ſame week, between his firſt Sermon and the laſt, and while Doctor Crome was in durance, one Richard Wilmot being Apprentice in Bow-Lane, being of the age of 18 years, and ſitting at his work in his Maſters Shop, the Tueſday, in the month of July, one Lewes a Welchman, being one of the Guard, came into the Shop, having things to do for himſelf.

R. Wilmot Apprentice in Bow-Lane.

One asked him what News at the Court, and he anſwered, that the old Heretick Dr. Crome had recanted now indeed before the Council, and that he ſhould on Sunday next be at Pauls-Croſs again, and there declare it.

Lewes one of the Guard, a Welchman, a Popiſh perſecutor.

Then VVilmot ſitting at his Maſters Work, and hearing him ſpeak theſe words, and rejoycing in the ſame, began to ſpeak unto him, ſaying, that he was ſorry to hear theſe News. For (ſaid he) if Crome ſhould ſay otherwiſe than he had ſaid, then is it contrary to the Truth of Gods Word, and contrary to his own Conſcience, which ſhall before God accuſe him.

Wilmot defendeth Dr. Cromes Sermon.

Lewes anſwered and ſaid, that he had preached and taught Hereſie; and therefore it was meet that he ſhould in ſuch a place revoke it.

VVilmot told him that he would not ſo ſay, neither did he hear him preach any Doctrine contrary to Gods Word written, but that he proved his Doctrine, and that ſufficiently by the Scriptures.

Lewes then asked him how he knew that.

VVilmot anſwered, by the Scriptures of God, wherein he ſhall find Gods will and pleaſure, what he willeth all men to do, and what not to do; and alſo by them he ſhould prove and try all Doctrines, and the falſe Doctrine from the true.

Lewes ſaid, it was never merry ſince the Bible was in Engliſh: and that he was both an Heretick and a Traitor that cauſed it to be tranſlated into Engliſh (meaning Cromwel) and therefore was rewarded according to his deſerts.

The Lord Cromwel wrongfully accuſed.

VVilmot anſwered again, what his deſerts and offences were to his Prince a great many do not know, neither doth it force whether they do or no; Once, he was ſure that he loſt his life for offending his Prince, and the Law did put it in execution; Adding moreover concerning that man, that he thought it pleaſed God to raiſe him up from a low eſtate, and to place him in high Authority, partly unto this, that he ſhould do that which all the Biſhops in the Realm yet never did, in reſtoring again Gods holy Word, which being hid long before from the People in a ſtrange Tongue, and now coming abroad amongſt us, will bring our Biſhops and Prieſts, ſaid he, in leſs eſtimation among the People.

The deings of the Lord Cromwel defended.

Lewes asked why ſo?

Wilmot ſaid, becauſe their doctrine and living was not according to his Word.

Then ſaid Lewes, I never heard but that all men ſhould learn of the Biſhops and Prieſts, becauſe they are Learned men, and have been brought up in Learning all the days of their lives. Wherefore they muſt needs know the Truth, and our Fathers did believe their Doctrine and Learning, and I think they did well, for the world was far better then, than it is now.

The common reaſon of the Papiſts, why the Scriptures ſhould not be in Engliſh.

Wilmot anſwered, I will not ſay ſo: For we muſt not believe them becauſe they are Biſhops, neither becauſe they are Learned, neither becauſe our Fathers did follow their Doctrine. For I have read in Gods Book, how that Biſhops and Learned men have taught the People falſe Doctrine, and likewiſe the Prieſts from time to time and indeed thoſe People our Fore-fathers believed as they taught, and as they did think, ſo did the People think. But for all this, Chriſt calleth them falſe Prophets, Thieves, and Murtherers, blind leaders of the blind, willing the People to take heed of them, leſt they ſhould both fall into the Ditch.

Gods Truth goeth not always by title and fame of great learning.

Moreover we read, that the Biſhops, Prieſts, and Learned men have been commonly miniſters of the Truth from time to time, and have always perſecuted the Prophets in the old Law, as their ſucceſſors did perſecute our

Learned men how far they are to be credited.

our Saviour Chriſt and his Diſciples in the new Law. We muſt take heed therefore that we credit them no further than God will have us, neither follow them nor our Forefathers otherwiſe than he commandeth us. For Almighty God hath given to all People, as well to Kings and Princes, as Biſhops, Prieſts, learned and unlearned men, a Commandment and Law, unto the which he willeth all men to be obedient. Therefore if any Biſhop or Prieſt preach or teach, or Prince or Magiſtrate command any thing contrary to his commandment, we muſt take heed how we obey them. For it is better for us to obey God than man.

Marry Sir, quoth Lewes, you are an holy Doctor indeed. By Gods Blood if you were my man, I would ſet you about your buſineſs a little better, and not ſuffer you to look upon Books, and ſo would your Maſter if he were wiſe. And with that in came his Maſter, and a young man with him, which was Servant with Mr. Daubney in Watling-ſtreet.

His Maſter asked what the matter was.

Wilmot complained of to his Maſter.

Lewes ſaid, that he had a Knaviſh Boy here to his Servant, and how that if he were his, he would rather hang him, than keep him in his houſe.

Then his Maſter, being ſomewhat moved, asked his fellows what the matter was.

They ſaid, they began to talk about Dr. Crome,

Then his Maſter asked him what he had ſaid, ſwearing a great Oath, that he would make him to tell him.

He ſaid, that he truſted he had ſaid nothing, whereby either he or Maſter Lewes may juſtly be offended. I pray (quoth Wilmot) ask him what I ſaid.

Marry (ſaid Lewes) this he ſaid, that Dr. Crome did preach and teach nothing but the Truth, and how that if he recant on Sunday next, he would be ſorry to hear it, and that if he do, he is made to do it againſt his Conſcience. And more he ſaith, that we muſt not follow our Biſhops Doctrine and preaching: For, ſaith he, they be hinderers of Gods Word, and perſecutors of that; and how Cromewel did more good (that Traytor) in ſetting forth the Bible, than all our Biſhops have done theſe hundred years: thus reporting the matter worſe then he had ſaid,

Then ſaid Wilmot, that in many things he made his Tale worſe than it was. His Maſter hearing of this, was in a great fury, and rated him, ſaying, that either he would be hanged or burned, ſwearing that he would take away all his Books and burn them.

The young man (Mr. Daubnies Servant) ſtanding by hearing this, began to ſpeak on his part unto Lewes; and his talk confirmed all the ſayings of the other to be true.

M. Daubnies Servant called T. Fairfax taketh Wilmots part.

This young man was learned, his name was Thomas Fairefax. Lewes hearing this mans talk as well as the others went his way in a rage unto the Court.

Wilmot and T. Fairefax ſent for to the Lord Mayor.

On the morrow they heard news, ſo that the ſaid Wilmot and Thomas Fairefax were ſent for, to come to the Lord Mayor. The Meſſenger was Mr. Smart, Swordbearer of London. They came before dinner to the Mayors houſe, and were commanded to ſit down at dinner in the Hall, and when the dinner was done, they were both called into a Parlour, where the Mayor and Sir Roger Cholmley was, who examined them ſeverally, the one not hearing the other.

R. Wilmot and Thomas Fairefax examined before the Lord Mayor, and M. Cholmley.

The effect of their talk with them was this; Sir Roger Cholmley ſaid unto the foreſaid Wilmot, that my Lord Mayor and he had received a Commandment from the Council, to ſend for him and his Company, and to examine them of certain things which were laid unto their charge.

Then ſaid Maſter Cholmley to him, Sirra, what Countryman art thou? He anſwered, that he was born in Cambridgeſhire, and in ſuch a Town. Then he asked him, how long he had been in the City. He told him.

Then he asked what learning he had. He ſaid, little learning and ſmall knowledge. Then (deridingly) he asked how long he had known Doctor Crome. He ſaid, but a while, about two years. He ſaid that he was a lying Boy, and ſaid that he the ſaid Wilmot was his Son.

The other ſaid unto him, that was unlike, for that he never ſaw his Mother, nor the him. Cholmley ſaid he lied. Wilmot ſaid he could prove it to be true. Then he asked him how he liked his Sermon that he made at Saint Thomas Acres Cappel in Lent. He ſaid that indeed he heard him not. He ſaid, yes, and the other, nay. Then ſaid he, what ſay you to his Sermon made at the Croſs the laſt day, heard you not that?

Wilmot. Yes, and in that Sermon he deceived a great number of People.

Cholmley. How ſo?

Wil. For that they looked that he ſhould have recanted his Doctrine that he taught before, and did not, but rather confirmed it.

Cholm. Yea Sir, but how ſay you now to him? for he hath recanted before the council: and hath promiſed on Sunday next to be at the Croſs again, how think ye in that?

Wil. If he ſo did, I am the more ſorry to hear it; and ſaid, he thought he did it for fear and ſafeguard of his life.

Cholm. But what ſay you? was his firſt Sermon Hereſie or not?

S. Pauls Doctrine made Hereſie with the papiſts.

Wilmot. No, I ſuppoſe it was no Hereſie. For if it were, Saint Pauls Epiſtle to the Hebrews was Hereſie, and Paul an Heretick that preached ſuch Doctrine, but God forbid that any Chriſtian man ſhould ſo think of the holy Apoſtle; neither do I ſo think.

Cholm. Why, how knoweſt thou that Saint Paul wrote thoſe things that are in Engliſh now, to be true, whereas Paul never wrote Engliſh or Latin?

Wilmot. I am certified that Learned men of God, that did ſeek to advance his Word, did tranſlate the ſame out of the Greek and Hebrew into Latin and Engliſh, and that they durſt not preſume to alter the ſenſe of the Scripture of God, and laſt Will and Teſtament of Chriſt Jeſus.

Then the Lord Mayor, being in a great fury, asked him what he had to do to read ſuch Books, and ſaid, that it was pity that his Maſter did ſuffer him ſo to do, and that he was not ſet better to work; and in fine ſaid unto him, that he had ſpoken evil of my Lord of Winchester and Boner, thoſe Reverend and Learned Fathers and Counſellors of this Realm, for the which his fact he ſaw no other but he muſt ſuffer, as was due to the ſame. And Mr. Cholmley ſaid, yea my Lord, there are ſuch a ſort of Hereticks and traitorly Knaves taken now in Eſſex by my Lord Rich, that it is too wonderful to hear. They ſhall be ſent to the Biſhop ſhortly, and ſhall be hanged and burned all.

Wilm. I am ſorry to hear that of my Lord Rich, for that he was my Godfather, and gave me my name at my Baptiſm.

Cholm. asked him when he ſpake with him. He ſaid, not theſe 12. years.

Cholm. If he knew that he were ſuch a one, he would do the like by him, and in ſo doing he ſhould do God great Service.

Wilmot. I have read the ſame ſaying in the Goſpel, that Chriſt ſaid to his Diſciples, The time ſhall come (ſaith he) that whoſoever killeth you, ſhall think that he ſhall do God high Service.

Well Sir, ſaid Cholmley, becauſe you are ſo full of your Scripture, and ſo well learned, we conſider you lack a quiet place to ſtudy in. Therefore you ſhall go to a place where you ſhall be moſt quiet, and I would wiſh you to ſtudy how you will anſwer to the Council of thoſe things which they have to charge you with, for elſe it is like to coſt you your beſt joynt. I know my Lord of Wincheſter will handle you well enough, when he heareth thus much. Then was the Officer called in, to have him to the Counter in the Poultry, and the other to the other Counter, not one of them to ſee another; and thus remained they eight days. In the which time their Maſters made great labour unto the Lord Mayor, and to Sir Roger Cholmley, to know their Offences, and that they might be delivered.

Wilmot and Fairefax committed to Priſon.

Sute made by the company of Drapers for R. Wilmot and T. Fairefax.

At length they procured the Wardens of the Company of Drapers to labour with them in their ſuit to the Mayor. The Mayor went with them to the Council: but at that time they could find no grace at Wincheſters hand, and Sir Anthony Brownes, but that they had deſerved death, and that they ſhould have the Law.

At length through intreatance, he granted them thus much favour, that they ſhould not die as they had deſerved, but ſhould be tied to a Carts Tail, and be whipped three Market days thorow the City. Thus they came home that day, and went another day, and the Mayor and the Wardens of the Company kneeled before them to have this open puniſhment releaſed, foraſmuch as they were Servants of ſo worſhipful a Company, and that they might be puniſhed in their own Hall before the Wardens and certain of the Company. At length it was granted with condition, as ſome ſaid, as ſhall be hereafter declared.

Then were they ſent before the Maſters the next day to the Hall, both their Maſters being alſo preſent, and there were laid to their charge the hainous offences by them committed, how they were both Hereticks and Traytors, and have deſerved death for the ſame, and this was declared with a long proceſs by the Maſter of the Company, whoſe name was Maſter Brookes, declaring what great labour and ſuit the Mayor and the Wardens had made for them, to ſave them from death, which they (as he ſaid) had deſerved, and from open ſhame. which they ſhould have had, being judged by the Council to have been whipped three days through the City at a Carts Tail, and from theſe two dangers had they laboured to deliver them, but not without great ſuit and alſo charge. For (ſaith he) the Company hath promiſed unto the Council for this their mercy and favour ſhewed towards them, being of ſuch a worſhipful Company, a hundred pounds, notwithſtanding we muſt ſee them puniſhed in our Hall within our ſelves for thoſe their offences. After theſe and many other words he commanded them to addreſs themſelves to receive their puniſhment.

Mr. Brookes Maſter of the Company of Drapers.

Then were they put aſunder, and ſtripped from the Waſt upward one after another, and had into the Hall, and in the midſt of the Hall, where they uſe to make their fire, there was a great ring of Iron, to the which there was a rope tied faſt, and one of their Feet thereto faſt tyed.

R. Wilmot. and Thomas Fairefax ſcourged in Drapers-Hall.

Then came two men down, diſguiſed in Mummers Apparel, with Viſors on their Faces, and they beat them with great Rods until the Blood did follow in their Bodies. As concerning this Wilmot, he could not lye in his Bed ſix nights after, for Brookes played the Tyrant with them. So it was, that with the beating and fright and fear, they were never in health ſince, as the ſaid Wilmot with his own mouth hath credibly aſcertained us, and we can no leſs but teſtifie the ſame.

Brookes a cruel Tyrant.

Thus have we briefly rehearſed this little tragedy, wherein we may note the malice of the enemies at all times to thoſe which profeſs Chriſt, and take his part, of what eſtate or degree ſoever they be, according to the Apoſtles ſaying, It is given unto you not only to believe, but alſo to ſuffer with him. To whom be honour and glory, Amen.

Next after theſe two above ſpecified, followeth the beating of one Thomas Green; who, in the time of Queen Mary, was cauſed likewiſe to be ſcourged and beaten by Dr. Story. What the cauſe was, here followeth in Story and Examination to be ſeen, which he penned with his own hand, as the thing it ſelf will declare to the Reader. The Copy and words of the ſame, as he wrote them, here follow. Wherein as thou mayſt note (gentle Reader) the ſimplicity of the one, I pray thee, mark the cruelty of the other part.

The Scourging of Thomas Green.

The ſcourging of The. Green. The Maſter promoteth the Servant.

IN the Reign of Queen Mary, I Thomas Green being brought before Doctor Story by my Maſter, whoſe name is John Wayland a Printer, for a Book called Antichriſt, the which had been diſtributed to certain honeſt men; He asked me where I had the Book, and ſaid I was a Traytor. I told him I had the Book of a French Man. Then he asked me more queſtions, but I told him I would tell him no more, nor could not. Then he ſaid, It was no Hereſie, but Treaſon, and that I ſhould be hanged, drawn, and quartered, and ſo he called for Cluny, the Keeper of the Lollards-Tower, and bade him ſet me faſt in the Stocks. Anno 1558.

I was not in the Lollards-Tower two hours; but Cluny came and took me out, and carried me to the Cole-houſe, and there I found a French man lying in the Stocks, and he took him out, and put on my right leg a Bolt and a Fetter, and on my left hand another, and ſo he ſet me croſs fettered in the Stocks, and took the French man away with him, and there I lay a day and a night. On the morrow after, he came and ſaid, let us ſhift your hand and your leg, becauſe you ſhall not be lame; and he made as though he pitied me, and ſaid, tell me the Truth and I will be your Friend.

T. Green put in the Stocks.

And I ſaid, I had told the Truth, and would tell no other. Then he put no more but my leg in the Stocks, and ſo went his way, and there I remained ſix days, and could come to no anſwer.

Then Doctor Story ſent for me, and asked whether I would tell him the Truth, where I had the Book. I ſaid I had told him, of a French man. He asked me where I came acquainted with the French man, where he dwelt, aad where he delivered me the Book. I ſaid, I came acquainted with him in Newgate; I coming to my Friends which were put in for Gods Word and Truths ſake, and the French man coming to his Friends alſo, there we did talk together, and became acquainted one with another, and did eat and drink together there with our Friends in the fear of God.

T. Green examined before Doctor Story.

Then Story ſcoffed at me and ſaid, then there was, Brother in Chriſt, and Brother in Chriſt, and reviled me, and called me an Heretick, and asked me if I had the Book of him in Newgate. I ſaid no, and I told him, as I went on my buſineſs in the Street I met him, and he asked me how I did, and I him alſo; ſo falling in communication, he ſhewed me that Book, and I deſired him that he would let me have it.

Story ſcoffeth at Chriſts Servants.

In this Examination Story ſaid, it was a great Book, and asked me whether I bought it or had it given me. I told him I bought it. Then ſaid he, I was a Thief, and had ſtoln my Maſters mony. And I ſaid, a little mony ſerved, for I gave him but four pence, but I promiſed him, that at our next meeting I would give twelve pence more. And he ſaid, that was boldly done, for ſuch a Book as ſpake both Treaſon and Hereſie.

Then Story required me to bring him two Sureties, and watch for him that I had the Book of, and I ſhould have no harm. I made him anſwer, I would bring no Sureties, nor could I tell where to find them. Then ſaid he, this is but a lie, and ſo called for Cluny, and bade him lay me faſt in the Cole-houſe, ſaying, he would make me tell another Tale at my next coming: and ſo I lay in the Stocks day and night, but only when I eat my meat, and there remained ten days before I was called for again.

Then Dr. Story ſent for me again, and asked if I would yet tell him the Truth I ſaid, I could tell him no other Truth than I had, nor would. And while I was there ſtanding, there were two brought which I took to be Priſoners.

Another examination of T. Green before Dr. Story.

Mrs. Story ſheweth her Charitable heart.

Then Mrs. Story fell in a rage, and ſware a great Oath, that it were a good deed to put a hundred or two of theſe Heretick Knaves in an houſe, and I my ſelf (ſaid ſhe) would ſet in on fire. So I was committed to Priſon again, where I remained fourteen days, and came to no anſwer.

Then Story ſent for me again, and called me into the Garden, and there I found with him my Lord of Windſors Chaplain, and two Gentlemen more, and he told them all what they had ſaid and done. They ſaid, the Book was a wondrous evil Book, and had both Treaſon and Hereſie in it. Then they asked me what I ſaid by the Book. And I ſaid, I know no evil by it.

Green again Examined before Dr. Story.

At which words Story chafed, and ſaid he would hang me up by the hands with a rope, and ſaid alſo he would cut out my Tongue, and mine ears alſo from my head. After this they alledged two or three things unto me out of the Book. And I anſwered, I had not read the Book thorowout, and therefore I could give no judgment of the Book.

Then my Lord of Windſors Chaplain and the other two Gentlemen took me aſide, and intreated me very gently, ſaying, tell us where you had the Book, and of whom whom, and we will ſave you harmleſs. I made them anſwer, I had told all that I could to Doctor Story and began to tell it them again: but they ſaid, they knew that already; ſo they left that talk, and went again to Story with me.

Green examined of his Belief.

Then Story burdened me with my Faith, and ſaid I was an Heretick. Whereupon the Chaplain asked me how I did believe. Then I began to rehearſe the Articles of my Belief, but he bade me let that alone. Then he asked me how I believed in Chriſt. I made him anſwer, that I believed in Chriſt which died and roſe again the third day, and ſitteth on the right hand of God the Father.

Dr. Story's blaſphemous ſcoffing in matters of our Faith.

Whereupon Story asked me mockingly, what is the right hand of God? I made him anſwer, I thought it was his glory. Then ſaid he, ſo they ſay all. And he asked me when he would be weary of ſitting there. Then inferred my Lord of Windſors Chaplain, asking me what I ſaid by the Maſs. I ſaid, I never knew what it was, nor what it meant, for I underſtood it not, becauſe I never learned any Latin, and ſince the time that I had any knowledge, I had been brought up in nothing but in reading of Engliſh, and with ſuch men as have taught the ſame; with many more queſtions, which I cannot rehearſe.

The Maſs.

Moreover he asked me if there were not the very Body of Chriſt, Fleſh, Blood and Bone in the Maſs, after the Prieſt had conſecrated it. And I made him anſwer; as for the Maſs I cannot underſtand it; but in the New Teſtament I read, that as the Apoſtles ſtood looking after the Lord when he aſcended up into Heaven, an Angel ſaid to them, Even as you ſee him aſcend up, ſo ſhall he come again. And I told them another Sentence, where Chriſt ſaith, The poor ſhall you have always with you, but me ye ſhall not have always.

Then Mr. Chaplain put to me many queſtions more, to the which I could make him no anſwer. Among all other, he brought Chryſoſtom and Saint Hierome for his purpoſe. To whom I anſwered, that I neither minded nor was able to anſwer their Doctors, neither knew whether they alledged them right, or no, but to that which is written in the New Teſtament I would anſwer. Here they laughed me to ſcorn, and called me Fool, and ſaid, they would reaſon no more with me.

Green ſent again to the Cole-houſe.

Then Doctor Story called for Cluny, and bade him take me away, and ſet me faſt, and let no man ſpeak with me. So was I ſent to the Cole-houſe; where I had not been a week, but there came in 14. Priſoners: but I was kept ſtill alone without company, in a Priſon called Salt-houſe, having upon my Leg a Bolt and a Fetter, and my hands manacled together with Irons, and there continued ten days, having nothing to lye on, but bare ſtones or a Board.

The ſtrait handling of Green in Priſon.

On a time whiles I lay there in Priſon, the Biſhop of London coming down a pair of Stairs on the backſide untruſt, in his hoſe and Dublet, looked in at the Grate, and asked wherefore I was put in, and who put me in.

Talk between Tho. Green and B. Boner.

I made him anſwer, that I was put in for a Book called Antichriſt, by Dr. Story. And he ſaid, you are not aſhamed to declare wherefore you were put in, and ſaid it was a very wicked Book, and bade me confeſs the Truth to Story. I ſaid, I had told the Truth to him already, and deſired him to be good unto me, and help me out of Priſon, for they had kept me there long. And he ſaid, he could not meddle with it; Story hath begun it, and he muſt end it.

Two Priſoners brought to B. Boners Salt-houſe.

Then I was removed out of the Salt-houſe to give place to two women, and carried to the Lollards Tower, and put in the Stocks; and there I found two Priſoners, one called Lion a Frenchman, and another with him: and ſo I was kept in the Stocks more than a month both day and night, and no man to come to me, or to ſpeak with me, but only my Keeper which brought me meat.

Cruelty ſhewed upon Priſoners for ſinging Pſalms.

Thus we three being together, Lyon the Frenchman ſung a Pſalm in the French Tongue, and we ſang with him, ſo that we were heard down into the Street, and the Keeper coming up in a great rage, ſware that he would put us all in the Stocks, and ſo took the Frenchman and commanded him to kneel down upon his knees, and put both his hands in the Stocks, where he remained all that night till the next day.

After this, I being in the Lollards-Tower 7 days, at my laſt being with Story, he ſware a great Oath, that he would rack me, and make me tell the Truth. Then Story ſending for me, commanded me to be brought to Walbroke, where he and the Commiſſioners dined; and by the way my Keeper told me that I ſhould go to the Tower and be racked. So when they had dined, Story called for me in, and ſo there I ſtood before them, and ſome ſaid I was worthy to be hanged for having ſuch Heretical Books. After I had ſtaid a little while before them, Story called for the Keeper, and commanded him to carry me to the Lollards-Tower again, and ſaid; I have other matters of the Queens to do with the Commiſſioners, but I will find another time for him. Whilſt I lay yet in the Lollards-Tower, the Woman which brought the Books over, being taken, and her Books, was put in the Clink in Southwark by Huſſey, one of the Arches; and I Thomas Green teſtifie before God, now, that I neither deſcried the man nor the Woman, the which I had the Books of.

T. Green brought before D. Story and the Commiſſioners.

This Woman was one Young Wife.

Then I lying in the Lollards-Tower, being ſent for before Mr. Huſſey, he required of me, wherefore I was put into the Lollards-Tower, and by whom. To whom I made anſwer, that I was put there by Doctor Story for a Book called Antichriſt. Then he made as though he would be my Friend, and ſaid he knew my Friends, and my Father and Mother, and bade me tell him of whom I had the Book, and ſaid, Come on, tell me the Truth. I told him as I had told Dr. Story before.

T. Green examined before M. Huſſey.

Then he was very angry and ſaid, I love thee well, and therefore I ſent for thee, and looked for a further Truth: but I would tell him no other; whereupon he ſent me again to the Lollards-Tower. At my going away he called me back again, and ſaid that Dixon gave me the Books being an old man, dwelling in Birchin-Lane: and I ſaid he knew the matter better than I. So he ſent me away to the Lollards-Tower, where I remained ſeven days and more.

Then Mr. Huſſey ſent for me again, and required of me to tell him the Truth. I told him I could tell him no other Truth than I had told Dr. Story before.

Dixon in Birchin-lane.

Then he began to tell me of Dixon of whom I had the Books, the which had made the matter manifeſt afore; and he told me of all things touching Dixon and the Books, more then I could my ſelf, inſomuch that he told me how many I had, and that he had a ſack full of the Books in his houſe, and knew where the Woman lay, better then I my ſelf. Then I ſaw the matter ſo open and manifeſt before my face, that it profited not me to ſtand in the matter. He asked me where I had done the Books, and I told him I had but one, and that Dr. Story had. He ſaid I lied, for I had three at one time, and he required me to tell him of one.

J. Beane Prentice with Mr. Tottle.

Then I told him of one that John Beane had of me being Prentice with Mr. Tottle. So he promiſed me before and after, and as he ſhould be ſaved before God, that he ſhould have no harm. And I kneeling down upon my knees, deſired, him to take my Blood, and not to hurt the young man. Then he ſaid, becauſe you have been ſo ſtubborn, the matter being made manifeſt by other and not by you, being ſo long in Priſon, tell me if you will ſtand to my judgment. I ſaid, yea, take my Blood, and hurt not the young man.

Then he made me anſwer, I ſhould be whipped like a Thief and a Vagabond; and ſo I thanked him, and went my way with my Keeper to the Lollards-Tower, where I remained two or three days, and ſo was brought by the Keeper Cluny, by the commandment of the Commiſſioners, to Chriſts-Hoſpital, ſometime the Gray-Friers, and accordingly had there for the time the correction of Thieves and Vagabonds, and ſo was delivered to Trinian the Porter, and put into a ſtinking Dungeon.

T. Green adjudged to be whipped.

T. Green brought to the Gray-Friers.

And after a few days, I finding friendſhip, was let out of the Dungeon, and lay in a bed in the night, and walked in a yard by the Dungeon in the day time, and ſo remained Priſoner a month and more.

T. Green again appeareth before D. Story and two Gentlemen.

Whither at length Dr. Story came and two Gentlemen with him, and called for me, and ſo I was brought into a Counting-houſe before them. Then he ſaid to the Gentlemen, here cometh this Heretick, of whom I had the Book called Antichriſt, and began to tell them how many times I had been before him, and ſaid, I have entreated him very gently, and he would never tell me the Truth till that it was found out by other. Then ſaid he, it were a good deed to cut out thy Tongue, and thy ears off thy head, to make thee an example to all other Heretick Knaves. And the Gentlemen ſaid, nay, that were pitty. Then he asked if that I would not become an honeſt man: and I ſaid, yes, for I have offended God many ways. Whereupon he burdened me with my Faith. I told him that I had made him anſwer of my Faith before my Lord Windſors Chaplain as much as I could.

The Scourging of Tho. Green before D. Story.

So in the end he commanded me to be ſtripped, he ſtanding by me, and called for two of the Beadles and the Whips to whip me; and the two Beadles came with a Cord, and bound my hands together, and the one end of the Cord to a Stone Pillar. Then one of my Friends, called Nicholas Prieſtman, hearing them call for Whips, hurled in a bundel of Rods, which ſeemed ſomething to pacifie the mind of his cruelty; and ſo they Scourged me with Rods. But as they were whipping of me, Story asked me if I would go unto my Maſter again, and I ſaid nay. And he ſaid, I perceive now he will be worſe then ever he was before,: but let me alone (quoth he) I will find him out if he be in England. And ſo with many other things which I cannot rehearſe, when they had done whipping of me, they bade me pay my fees, and go my ways.

Doctor Story commanded that he ſhould have an hundred ſtripes, but the Gentlemen ſo intreated, that he had not ſo many, Story ſaying, if I might have my will, I would ſurely cut out his Tongue.

Of the Scourging of Mr. Bartlet Green, alſo of John Willes, and of Thomas Hinſhaw, ye heard before. In like manner was ordered Stephen Cotten, burned before at Brainford, who teſtifieth himſelf to be twice beaten by Boner, in a Letter of his written to his Brother, as by the ſame here following for the more evidence may appear.

The Copy of Stephen Cottens Letter, written to his Brother, declaring how he was beaten of Biſhop Boner.

St. Cottens Letter to his Brother.

BRother, in the Name of the Lord Jeſus I commend me unto you, and I do heartily thank you, for your godly exhortation and Counſel in your laſt Letter declared to me. And albeit I do perceive by your Letter, you are informed, that as we are divers perſons in number, ſo we are of contrary Sects, Conditions, and Opinions, contray to the good Opinion you had of us at your laſt being with usin Newgate; be you moſt aſſured, good Brother, in the Lord Jeſus, we are all of one Mind, one Faith, one aſſured Hope in the Lord Jeſus, whom I truſt we all together with one Spirit, one Brotherly love, do daily call upon for mercy and forgiveneſs of our ſins, with earneſt repentance of our former lives, and by whoſe precious Blood-ſhedding we truſt to be ſaved only, and by no other means. Wherefore, good Brother, in the name of the Lord, ſeeing theſe impudent People, whoſe minds are altogether bent to wickedneſs, envy, uncharitableneſs, evil ſpeaking, do go about to ſlander us with untruth, believe them not, neither let their wicked ſayings once enter into your mind. And I truſt one day to ſee you again, although now I am in Gods Priſon, which is a joyful School to them that love their Lord God, and to me being a ſimple Scholar, moſt joyful of all.

Good Brother, once again I do in the Name of our Lord Jeſus, exhort you to pray for me, that I may fight ſtrongly in the Lords Battle, to be a good Souldier to my Captain Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, and deſire my Siſter alſo to do the ſame, and do not ye mourn or lament for me, but be ye glad and joyful of this my trouble: For I truſt to be looſed out of this Dungeon ſhortly, and to go to everlaſting joy, which never ſhall have end. I heard how ye were with the Commiſſioners. I pray you ſue no more for me, good Brother. But one thing I ſhall deſire you, to be at my departing out of this life, that you may bear witneſs with me that I ſhall die, I truſt in God, a true Chriſtian, and (I hope) all my Companions in the Lord our God: and therefore believe not theſe evil diſpoſed People, who are the Authors of all untruths.

I pray you provide me a long ſhirt againſt the dry of our deliverance: for the ſhirt you gave me laſt, I have given to one of my Companions, who had more need than I; and as for the money and meat you ſent us, the Biſhops Servants delivered none to us, neither he whom you had ſo great truſt in. Brother, there is none of them to truſt to, for qualis Magiſter, talis Servus. I have been twice beaten, and threatned to be beaten again by the Biſhop himſelf. I ſuppoſe we ſhall go into the Country to Fulham, to the Biſhops houſe, and there be arraigned. I would have you to hearken as much as you can. For when we ſhall go, it ſhall be ſuddainly done. Thus fare you well. From the Cole-houſe this preſent Friday.

Anno 1558.

St. Cotten twice beaten by B. Boner.

Your Brother, Stephen Cotten,

The Scourging of James Harris.

IN this Society of the Scourged Profeſſors of Chriſt, was alſo one James Harris of Billerica in Eſſex, a ſtripling of the age of 17. years: who being apprehended and ſent up to Boner in the Company of Margaret Ellis, by Sir John Mordant Knight, and Edmund Tyrrel Juſtices of Peace (as appeareth by their own Letters before mentioned) was by Boner divers times ſtraightly examined. In the which Examinations he was charged not to have come to his Pariſh Church by the ſpace of one year or more. Whereunto he granted, confeſſing therewithal, that once, for fear, he had been at the Church, and there had received the Popiſh Sacrament of the Altar, for the which he was heartily ſorry, deteſting the ſame with all his heart.

J. Harris Scourged.

Jam. Harris repenteth his coming to the Popiſh Church.

After this and ſuch like anſwers, Boner (the better to trie him) perſwaded him to go to ſhrift. The Lad, ſomewhat to fulfil his requeſt, conſented to go, and did. But when he came to the Prieſt, he ſtood ſtill, and ſaid nothing. Why (quoth the Prieſt) ſayeſt thou nothing? what ſhall I ſay, ſaid Harris? Thou muſt confeſs thy ſins, ſaid the Prieſt. My ſins, ſaith he, be ſo many, that they cannot be numbered. With that the Prieſt told Boner what he had ſaid, and he of his accuſtomed devotion, took the poor Lad into his Garden, and there, with a Rod gathered out of a Chery-Tree, did moſt cruelly Whip him.

The cauſe of J. Harris Scourging.

The Scourging of Robert Williams, a Smith.

OVer and beſides theſe above mentioned, was one Robert Williams, who, being apprehended in the ſame Company, was ſo tormented after the like manner with Rods in his Arbour, who there ſubſcribing and yielding himſelf by promiſe to obey the Laws, after being let go, refuſed ſo to do: whereupon he was earneſtly ſought for, but could not be found, for that he kept himſelf cloſe, and went not abroad but by ſtealth: and now in the mean time of this perſecution, this Robert Williams departed this life, and ſo eſcaped the hands of his enemies. The Lord therefore be honoured for ever, Amen.

The Scourging of Rob. Williams.

And foraſmuch as I have begun to write of Boners Scourging, by the occaſion thereof cometh to mind to infer by the way, his beating of other Boys and Children, and drawing them naked through the Nettles, in his journy rowing toward Fulham. The ſtory although it touch no matter of Religion, yet becauſe it toucheth ſomething the nature and diſpoſition of that man, and may refreſh the Reader, wearied percaſe with other doleful Stories, I thought not to omit.

Boner cauſeth certain Boys to be beaten.

BOner paſſing from London to Fulham by Barge, having John Willes and Thomas Hinſhaw above mentioned with him, both Priſoners for Religion, by the way as he went by Water, was ſaying Evenſong with Harpsfield his Chaplain in the Barge, and being about the middle of their devout Oriſons, they eſpied a ſort of young Boys ſwimming and waſhing themſelves in the Thames over againſt Lambeth, or a little above: unto whom he went and gave very gentle language, and fair ſpeech, until he had ſet his men aland. That done, his men ran after the Boys to get them, as the Biſhop commanded them them before beating, ſome with Nettles, drawing ſome through buſhes of Nettles naked, and ſome they made leap into the Thames to ſave themſelves, that it was marvel they were not drowned.

Now as the Children for fear did cry, and as this skirmiſhing was between them, immediately came a greater Lad thither, to know what the matter meant that the Boys made ſuch a noiſe. Whom when the Biſhop eſpied, he asked him whether he would maintain them in their doings or no. Unto whom the young Fellow made anſwer ſtoutly, Yea. Then the Biſhop commanded him to be taken alſo; but he ran away with ſpeed, and there avoided the Biſhops bleſſing. Now when the Biſhop ſaw him to flee away, and another man ſitting upon a Rail in the way where he ran, he willed him likewiſe to ſtop the Boy: and becauſe he would not, he commanded his man to fetch that man to him alſo; but he hearing that, ran away as faſt as he could, and by leaping over the Ditch, eſcaped the Biſhop in like manner.

Then the Biſhop, ſeeing the ſucceſs of his battel to prove no better, cried to a couple of Ferry-Boys to run and hold him that laſt ran away. And for that they ſaid they could not (as indeed it was true) therefore he cauſed his men by and by to take and beat them. The Boys hearing that, lept into the Water to ſave themſelves; notwithſtanding they were caught, and in the Water by the Biſhops men holden and beaten.

Boners devout Oraiſons.

Now, after the end of this great skirmiſh, the Biſhops men returned to their Maſter again into the Barge, and he and Harpsfield his Chaplain went to their Evenſong afreſh where they left, and ſo forſooth the reſt of their Service, as clean without malice, as an egg without meat. The Lord give him repentance (if it be his will) and grace to become a new man, Amen.

The Whipping of a Beggar at Salisbury

A poor Beggar Whipt at Salisbury, for not receiving with the Papiſts at Eaſter.

UNto theſe above ſpecified, is alſo to be added the miſerable whipping of a certain poor ſtarved Beggar, who, becauſe he would not receive the Sacrament at Eaſter in the Town of Colingborow, was brought to Salisbury with Bills and glieves to the Chancellor Dr. Geffery, who caſt him into the Dungeon, and after cauſed him miſerably to be whipped of two Catch-poles. The ſight whereof made all godly hearts to rue it, to ſee ſuch tyranny to be ſhewed upon ſuch a ſimple and ſilly Wretch: for they which ſaw him have reported, that they never ſaw a more ſimple Creature, But what pity can move the hearts of mercileſs Papiſts?

Beſides theſe abovenamed, divers others alſo ſuffered the like Scourgings and Whippings in their bodies for their faithful ſtanding in the Truth. Of whom it may be ſaid, as it is written of the Apoſtles in the Acts. Which departed from the Council, rejoycing that they were counted worthy to ſuffer for the Name of Jeſus.

Another Treatiſe of ſuch as being purſued in Queen Maries time, were in great danger, and yet through the good Providence of God, mercifully were preſerved.

A Treatiſe of Gods mercy and providence in preſerving good men and Women, in the time of this Perſecution.

ALthough the ſecret purpoſe of Almighty God, which diſpoſeth all things, ſuffered a great number of his faithful Servants both Men and Women, and that of all ages and degrees, to fall into the enemies hands, and to abide the brunt of this perſecution, to be tried with Rods, with Whips, with Racks, with Fetters, Famine, with burning of Hands, with plucking off Beards, with burning alſo both Hand, Beard, and Body, &c.

Yet notwithſtanding ſome there were again, and that a great number, who miraculouſly by the merciful providence of God, againſt all mans expectation, in ſafety were delivered out of the fiery rage of this perſecution, either by voyding the Realm, or ſhifting of place, or the Lord ſo blinding the eyes of the Perſecutors, or diſpoſing the opportunity of time, or working ſome ſuch means or other for his Servants, as not only ought to ſtir them up to perpetual thanks, but alſo may move all men both to behold and magnifie the wondrous works of the Almighty.

About what time it began to be known that Queen Mary was ſick, divers good men were in hold in divers quarters of the Realm, ſome at Bury, ſome at Salisbury, as John Hunt, and Richard White, of whom we have ſtoried before, and ſome at London, amongſt whom was William Living with his Wife, and John Lithal, of whom ſomething remaineth now compendiouſly to be touched.

The deliverance of W. Living, his Wife, and of J. Lithal.

ABout the time of the latter end of Queen Mary, ſhe then being ſick, came one Cox a Promoter, to the houſe of William Living, about ſix of the Clock, accompanied with one John Launce of the Gray-Hound. They being not ready, they demanded for Buttons, ſaying, they ſhould be as well paid for them, as ever was any; and he would come about three hours after again for them.

Deane Conſtable, Geo. Hancock Beadle perſecutors

In the mean while he had gotten the Conſtable called Mr. Dean, and George Hancock the Beadle of that Ward, and ſearching his Books, found a Book of Aſtronomy, called the work of Joannes de Sacro Boſco de Sphæra, with figures ſome round, ſome triangle, ſome quadrate: which Book becauſe it was gilt, ſeemed to him the chiefeſt Book there, and that he carried open in the ſtreet, ſaying I have found him at length. It is no marvel the Queen be ſick, ſeeing there be ſuch Conjurers in privy corners; but now, I truſt he ſhall conjure no more, and ſo brought him and his Wife from Shoe-Lane thorow Fleet-ſtreet into Pauls Church-yard, with the Conſtable, the Beadle, and two other following them, till they were entred into Darbiſhires houſe, who was Biſhop Boners Chancellor: And after the Conſtable and they had talked with Darbiſhire, he came forth and walked in his Yard ſaying theſe words.

Talk between Darbiſhire and W. Living, Prieſt.

Darbiſhire. What is your Name?
Living. William Living.
Darb. What are you? a Prieſt?
Living. Yea.
Darb. Is this your Wife that is come with you?
Living. That ſhe is.
Darb. Where were you made Prieſt?
Living. At Oboürne.
Darb. In what Biſhops days?
Living. By the Biſhop of Lincoln, that was King Henries Ghoſtly Father in Cardinal Wolſies time.
Darb. You are a Schiſmatick and a Traitor.
Living. I would be ſorry that were true. I am certain I never was Traitor, but always have taught obedience according to the tenour of Gods Word; and when Tumults and Schiſms have been ſtirred, I have preached Gods Word, and ſwaged them as in the time of King Edward.
Darb. What, you are a Schiſmatick. You be not in the unity of the Catholick Church: for you pray not as the Church of Rome doth: you pray in Engliſh.
Living. We are certain we be in the true Church.
Darb. There be that doubt thereof, forſomuch as there is but one true Church.

Well, you will learn againſt I talk with you again, to know the Church of Rome, and to be a Member thereof.

Living. If the Church of Rome be of that Church whereof Chriſt is the Head, then am I a Member thereof: for I know no other Church but that.

Darb. Well, Cluny, take him with thee to the Cole-houſe.

Then called he Cluny again, and ſpake ſecretly to him, what I know not.

Cluny plaiſeth the Thief.

Then ſaid Cluny, wilt thou not come? and ſo pluckt me away violently, and brought me to his own Houſe in Pater-Noſter-Row, where he robbed me of my Purſe, my Girdle, and my Pſalter, and a New Teſtament of Geneva, and then brought me to the Cole-houſe to put me in the Stocks, ſaying, put in both your Legs and your Hands alſo, and except you fine with me, I will put a Collar about your Neck. What is the fine, quoth I? Forty ſhillings, quoth he: I am never able to pay it, ſaid I.

Note the covetous dealing of these Papists.

Then, said he, you have Friends that be able. I denied it; and so he put both my Legs into the Stocks till Supper time, which was six of the Clock, and then a Cousin of my Wifes brought me Meat, who seeing me to sit there, said, I will give you forty Pence, and let him go at liberty: and he took her mony, and presently let me forth in her sight, to eat my Supper. And at seven of the Clock, he put me into the Stocks again, and so I remained till two of the Clock the next day, and so he let me forth till Night. This Woman above-mentioned, was Griffins first Wife, a Brother dwelling then in Aldermanbury, and yet alive in Cheapside.

W. Living laid in the Lollards-Tower.

The Thursday following at Afternoon was I called to the Lollards-Tower, and there put in the Stocks, having the favour to put my Leg in that Hole that Mr. John Philpots Leg was in, and so lay all that Night, no Body coming to me either with Meat or Drink.

At 11. of the Clock on the Friday, Cluny came to me with Meat, and let me forth, and about one of the Clock he brought me to Darbyshires House, who drew forth a scroll of Names, and asked me if I knew none of them: I said, I know none of them but Foster. And so I kneeled down upon my knees, and prayed him that he would not enquire thereof any farther. And with that came forth two godly Women, which said, Mr. Darbyshire, it is enough, and so became Sureties for me, and paid to Cluny 15 s. for my Fees, and bade me go with them.

W. Living delivered.

And thus much concerning William Living. After this came his Wife to Examination, whose Answers to Darbyshire the Chancellor, here likewise followeth.

The Examination of Julian Living, Wife to William Living.

Talk between Darbyshire and Livings wife.

Darbyshire. Ah Sirrah; I see by your going you be one of the Sisters.

Julian. I wear not my Gown for Sisterhood, neither for Nunnery, but to keep me warm.

Darb. Nun? No, I dare say you be none: Is that Man your Husband?

Julian. Yea.

Darb. He is a Priest.

Julian. No, he saith no Mass.

Darb. What then? he is a Priest. How darest thou marry him?

Then he shewed me a Roll of certain Names of Citizens.

To whom I answered, I knew none of them.

Then said he, you shall be made to know them.

Then said I, Do no other but justice and right, for the day will come, that you shall answer for it.

Darb. Why Woman, thinkest thou not that I have a Soul?

Julian. Yes, I know you have a Soul: but whether it be to salvation or damnation, I cannot tell.

Livings wife commanded to the Lollards-Tower.

Darb. Ho Cluny, have her to the Lollards-Tower. And so he took me, and carried me to his house, where was one Dale a Promoter, which said to me, Alas good Woman, wherefore be you here?

Dale a Promoter.

What is that to you, said I.

You be not ashamed, quoth Dale, to tell wherefore you came hither.

No, quoth I, that I am not: for it is for Christs Testament.

Christs Testament, quoth he? it is the Devils Testament.

O Lord, quoth I, God forbid that any man should speak any such word.

Mark the hope of the Papists.

Well well, quoth he, you shall be ordered well enough. You care not for burning, quoth he. Gods blood, there must be some other means found for you.

What, quoth I, will you find any worse than you have found?

Well, quoth he, you hope, and you hope: but your hope shall be slope. For though the Queen fail, she that you hope for shall never come at it: For there is my Lord Cardinals Grace, and many more between her and it.

Then, quoth I, my hope is in none but God.

Then said Cluny, Come with me: and so went I to the Lollards-Tower. On the next day Darbyshire sent for me again, and enquired again of those Citizens that he enquired of before.

Anno 1558.

I answered, I knew them not.

Where were you, quoth he, at the Communion on Sunday was fortnight?

And I said, in no place.

Then the Constable of St. Brides being there, made suit for me.

And Darbyshire demanded of him, if he would be bound for me.

The Constable of St. Brides surety for Julian Living.

He answered, Yea. And so he was bound for my Appearance betwixt that and Christmas.

Then Darbyshire said, You be Constable, and should give her good counsel.

So do I, quoth he. For I bid her go to Mass, and to say as you say. For by the Mass, if you say the Crow is white, I will say so too.

Living and his Wife delivered by the Death of Q. Mary.

And thus much concerning the Examination of William Living and his Wife, whom although thou seest here delivered through the request of Women, his Sureties: yet it was no doubt, but that the deadly sickness of Queen Mary abated and bridled then the cruelty of those Papists, which otherwise would never have let them go.

The Trouble and Deliverance of John Lithall.

John Lithall brought to examination by Joh. Avales.

AT the taking of William Living, it hapned that certain of his Books were in the custody of one John Lithall; which known, the Constable of the Ward of Southwark, with other of the Queens Servants, were sent to his house, who breaking up his Doors and Chests, took away not only the Books of the said William Living, but also all his own Books, Writings, and Bills of Debts, which he never had again. All this while Lithall was not at home.

The next Saturday after, as he was returned, and known to be at home, John Avales and certain of the Queens Servants beset his house all the night, with such careful Watch, that as he in the Morning issued out of doors, thinking to escape their hands, John Avales bursting out upon him, cried, Stop the Traytor, Stop the Traytor. Whereat Lithall being amazed, looked back.

And so John Avales came running to him, with other that were with him, saying, Ah Sirrah, you are a pretty traytorly Fellow indeed, we have had somewhat to do to get you. To whom he answered, that he was a truer man to the Queens Majesty than he. For you (said he) are commanded by God to keep holy the Sabbath-day, and you seek to shed your Neighbours Blood on the Sabbath-day. Remember that you must answer therefore to God. But he said, Come on you Villain, you must go before the Council. So was Lithall brought into Pauls-Churchyard to the Bishops Chancellor, by John Avales, saying, that he had there caught the Captain of these Fellows, and so caused him to be called to Examination before Dr. Darbyshire, who entred talk with him in this wise:

Lithall brought before Dr. Darbyshire, Chancellor.

Talk between Lithall and the Chancellor.

Chan. What Countryman are you?

Lith. I am an Englishman, born in Staffordshire.

Chan. Where were you brought up?

Lith. In this our Country of England.

Chan. In what University?

Lith. In no University, but in a Free-School.

Chan. We had certain Books from your House, and Writings, wherein is both Treason and Heresie.

Lith. Sir, there is neither Treason nor Heresie in them.

Chan. Then he asked for certain other men that I knew.

Lith. If you have ought to lay to my charge, I will answer it: but I will have no other mans Blood upon my head.

Chan. Why come you not to the Church? Of what Church be you, that you come not to your own Parish Church?

Lith. I am of the Church of Christ, the Fountain of all goodness.

Chan. Have you no Ministers of your Church, but Christ?

Lith. We have other.

Chan. Where be they?

Lith.

Anno 1558.

Lith. In the whole world, diſperſed, preaching and profeſſing the Goſpel and Faith only in our Saviour Jeſus, as he commanded them.

• Chan. You boaſt much every one of you of your Faith and Belief: let me here therefore the effect how you believe.

Juſtification by Faith only.

Lith. I believe to be juſtified really by Chriſt Jeſus, according to the ſaying of St. Paul to the Epheſians, without either deeds or works, or any thing that may be invented by Man.

Chan. Faith cannot ſave without Works.

Lith. That is contrary to the Doctrine of the Apoſtles.

Chan. John Avales, you and the Keeper have this Fellow to Priſon.

Cluny and John Avales. Then John Avales and Cluny the Keeper had me into Pauls, and would have had me ſeen the Apoſtles Maſs.

Lith. I know none the Apoſtles had, and therefore I will ſee none.

Cluny and John Avales. Come and kneel down before the Rood, and ſay a Paternoſter, and an Ave in the worſhip of the five wounds.

Lithall denies to kneel before the Rood.

Lith. I am forbidden by Gods own mouth to kneel to any Idol or Image: therefore I will not.

Then they pulled me with great extremity, the one having me by one Arm, and the other by the other; but God gave me at that preſent time more ſtrength than both theſe, his Name be praiſed for it.

Then when they could not make me to kneel before the Rood, neither to ſee the Maſs, there gathered a great Company about us, and all againſt me. Some ſpit on me, and ſaid, Fie on thee Hereticke; and others ſaid, it was pity I was not burned already.

Then they carried me to Lollards-Tower, and hanged me in a great pair of Stocks, in which I lay three days and three nights, till I was ſo lame that I could neither ſtir nor move.

Then I offered the Keeper certain Mony and Gold that I had about me, to releaſe me out of the Stocks: and he ſaid, I would not be ruled by him, either to ſee Maſs, or to kneel before the Rood, and therefore I ſhould lye there ſtill. But I ſaid, I would never do the thing that ſhould be againſt my Conſcience: and though you have lamed my Body, yet my Conſcience is whole, I praiſe God for it. So ſhortly after he let me out of the Stocks, more for the love of my Mony (as it may be thought) than for any other affection, and within four or five days my Wife got leave of Mr. Chancellor to come to me, to bring me ſuch things as were needful for me, and there I lay five weeks and odd days. In the which time divers of my Neighbours and Friends made ſuit to the Chancellor for my deliverance: the Biſhop, as they ſaid, at that time being at Fulham ſick. So my Neighbours being there, about twenty of them, the Chancellor ſent for me out of the Lollards-Tower to his own houſe, and ſaid as followeth:

Lithall's Neighbours make ſute for him.

Chan. Lithall, here be of thy Neighbours which have been with me to intreat for thee, and they have informed me, that thou haſt been a very honeſt and quiet Neighbour among them, and I think it be Gods will that I ſhould deliver thee before my Lord come home. For if he come, and thou go home again, I will be burned for thee: for I know his mind already in that matter.

Lith. I give you hearty thanks for your gentleneſs, and my Neighbours for their good report.

Chan. Lithall, if thy Neighbours will be bound for thy forth-coming whenſoever thou ſhalt be called for; and alſo if thou wilt be an obedient Subject, I ſhall be content to deliver thee.

Neigh. If it pleaſe your Worſhip, we will be bound for him in Body and Goods.

Chan. I will require no ſuch Bond of you, but that two of you will be bound in twenty Pound a piece, that he ſhall come to anſwer when he ſhall be called.

Lith. Where find you, Mr. Chancellor, in all the Scriptures, that the Church of God did bind any man for the profeſſion of his Faith? which Profeſſion you have heard of me, that all our Juſtification, Righteouſneſs, and Salvation cometh only and freely by the merits of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, and all the inventions and works of men, be they never ſo glorious, be altogether vain, as the Wiſe man ſaith.

Chan. Lo, where he is now. I put no ſuch matter to you; for in that I believe as you do: but yet St. James ſaith, That a man is juſtified by works.

Lith. St. James ſpake to them that boaſted themſelves of Faith, and ſhewed no works of Faith: But O, Mr. Chancellor, remember I pray you, how all the Promiſes and Propheſies of the holy Scripture, even from the firſt Promiſe that God made to Adam, and ſo even to the latter end of the Revelation of St. John, do teſtifie that in the Name of Jeſus, and only by his Merits, all that believe ſhall be ſaved from all their ſins and offences. Eſay ſaith, Chap. 65. I am found of them that ſought me not, and am manifeſt to them that asked not after me: but againſt Iſrael he ſaith, All day long have I ſtretched out my hand to a People that believe not. And when the Jaylor asked St. Paul, what he ſhould do to be ſaved, the Apoſtle ſaid, Acts 16. Believe on the Lord Jeſus, and thou ſhalt be ſaved, and all thy houſhold.

St. James explained.

Again, St. John ſaith in the Revelation, that there was none, neither in Heaven nor in Earth, neither under the Earth, that was able to open the Book nor the Seals thereof, but only the Lamb Jeſus our only Saviour. And St. Paul ſaith, Hebr. 9. With one offering hath he made perfect for ever them that are ſanctified.

Chan. With vain glory you rehearſe much Scripture, as all the ſort of you do: but you have no more underſtanding than a many of Sheep. But to the purpoſe. Will you that your Neighbours ſhall enter into bonds for you, or not?

Lithall refuſeth to put in Bond.

Lith. By my mind they ſhall not. Wherefore I deſire you that you would not bind me, but let me ſerve God with my Conſcience freely. For it is written, Apoc. 13. They that lead into Captivity, ſhall go into Captivity, and they that ſtrike with the Sword ſhall periſh with the Sword.

Alſo it is written in the Goſpel of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, That whoſo doth offend one of theſe little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a Mill-ſtone were hanged about his neck, and that he were caſt into the depth of the Sea, Matth. 18. Of the which I am aſſured by his holy Spirit that I am one. Wherefore be you well aſſured that ſuch mercy as you ſhew, unto you ſhall be ſhewed the like.

Chan. You are a mad man. I would not bind you, but that I muſt needs have ſomewhat to ſhew for your deliverance. Then he called two of my Neighbours, Thomas Daniel and Saunders Maybe, which offered themſelves to be bound, and called me before them, and ſaid, I have a Letter of his own hand writing, with his Name and Seal at it, with a Book alſo againſt the Regiment of Women, for the which I could make him to be hanged, drawn and quartered; but no my Faith I will him no more hurt than I mean to my own Soul.

Lith. I deſire you that be my Neighbours and Friends, that you will not enter into bonds for me: for you know not the danger therof, neither I my ſelf: it goeth againſt my Conſcience that ye ſhould ſo do.

Chan. Why, I will not bind you to do any thing againſt your Conſcience.

His Neighbours enter into Bond for him.

Neigh. Then they made the Bond and ſealed to it, and willed me that I ſhould ſeal to it alſo; and I ſaid that I would not, neither could I obſerve the Bond, and therefore I would not ſet to my hand.

Chan. It is pity that thou haſt ſo much favour ſhewed thee: yet for theſe honeſt mens ſakes I will diſcharge thee.

Notwithſtanding all theſe diſſembling words of Mr. Darbyſhire, pretending for favour of his Sureties, to ſet him at liberty, it was no ſuch thing, nor any zeal of charity that moved him ſo do; but only fear of the time, underſtanding the dangerous and unrecoverable ſickneſs of Queen Mary, which then began ſomewhat to aſſwage the cruel proceeding of theſe Perſecutors, whereby they durſt not do that they would: for elſe Lithall was not like to have eſcaped ſo eaſily.

Edward

Edward Grew.

MOreover, there was one Edward Grew Prieſt, and Appline, his Wife, compelled to fly from their dwelling at a Town called Broke; and the man being very aged, travelled abroad to keep a good Conſcience.

At the laſt he was taken and laid in Colcheſter Caſtle, where he remained till Q. Elizabeth came to her Regal Seat, and by the alteration of Religion he was delivered. His Wife, good Woman, was in great care for him, and to her power did what ſhe could to ſuccour him.

William Browne.

Mr. Brown of Suffolk. WIlliam Browne, Parſon of little Stanham, in the County of Suffolk, made a Sermon in the ſaid Town, incontiently after the burial of our good King Edward, and in his Sermon he ſaid, There goeth a report that our good King is buried with a Maſs by the Biſhop of Wincheſter, he having a Mitre upon his head. But if it were ſo, ſaith he, they are all Traytors that ſo do, becauſe it is both againſt the Truth, and the Laws of this Realm, and it is great Idolatry and Blaſphemy, and againſt the glory of God; and they are no Friends either to God, the King, or yet unto the Realm, that ſo do. For this his preaching one Robert Blomefield, an Adverſary to the Truth, being then Conſtable of the Town, and Bayliff unto Sir John Jerningham Knight (the Chief Lord of the Town) immediately rode forth, and brought home with him one Edward Golding, which was then under-ſheriff, Sir Thomas Cornwallis being then high Sheriff.

Rob. Blomefield, Perſecutor.

Edw. Golding under Sheriff Cornwallis high Sheriff.

So the ſaid Golding and Blomefield ſent for certain men of the ſaid Town, and examined them for the Sermon. Whereunto they made but a ſmall anſwer. Then the Sheriff made a bill, and ſo feared the men, that two or three of them ſet to their hands, and one of them never joyed after but it was a grief to him till he died.

Mr. Browne perſecuted and taken.

Then did they take men with them unto the Parſons houſe, and in the night they took him and with Watchmen kept him until it was day. Then ſhould he have been carried the next day to the Councel; but the ſaid Robert Blomefield was taken ſo ſick, that he was like to die: ſo that he could not carry him for his life.

Then the ſaid Sheriff ſent him to Ipſwich again and there he was for a time. Then he was ſent to Bury Priſon, and from thence to the Councel, and then into the Fleet: and ſo he lay in Priſon from the beginning of harveſt till it was nigh Chriſtmaſs, and ſaid, God gave him ſuch anſwers to make when he was examined, that he was delivered with quietneſs of Conſcience. And having his liberty, he came again unto the fore-ſaid Town; and becauſe he would not go to Maſs, his living was taken away, and he and his Wife were conſtrained to fly here and there for his life and Conſcience. In the laſt year of Queen Maries Reign God did take him out of this life in peace.

Mr. Browne delivered.

Example of Gods puniſhment upon a Perſecutor.

Where moreover is to be noted, that this Robert Blomefield abovenamed, immediatly after he had apprehended the ſaid Brown, fell very ſick: And although at that time he was wealthy Man and of great ſubſtance (beſide his land which was better than twenty pound a year) after this time, God ſo plagued his houſhold, that his eldeſt Son died, and his Wife had a pining ſickneſs till ſhe departed this life alſo.

Then married he another, a Rich Widdow: but all would not help, and nothing would proſper: For he had a ſore pining ſickneſs, being full of Botches and Sores, whereby he waſted away both Body and Goods, till he died.

So when he died, he was above nineſcore pounds in debt, and it was never heard of any repentance he had. But a little before his death he bragged, and threatned a good Man, one Simon Harlſton, to put him forth to the officers, becauſe he did wear no Surplis when he ſaid Service.

Wherefore it is pity ſuch Baits of Popery are left to the enemies to take Chriſtians in. God take them away, or eaſe us from them: for God knoweth they be the cauſe of much blindneſs and ſtrife amongſt Men.

Furthermore, out of the ſaid Town were conſtrained to fly Robert Boela and John Trapne, becauſe they would not go to Maſs and receive their Sacrament of the Altar. Anno 1558.

Elizabeth Young.

YE heard before in the treatiſe of the ſcourging of Tho. Greene, how he was troubled and beaten by Dr. Story, for a certain Book called Antichriſt, which he received of a Woman, becauſe in no caſe he would detect her.

This Woman was one Elizabeth Young, who coming from Emden to England, brought with her divers Books, and ſparſed them abroad in London; for the which ſhe, being at length eſpyed and layd faſt, was brought to examination, 13. times before the Catholick Inquiſitors of Heretical pravity. Of the which her examinations, nine have come to our hands.

Wherein how fiercely ſhe was aſſaulted, how ſhamefully ſhe was reviled, how miſerably handled, and what anſwers ſhe made unto the Adverſaries in her own defence, and finally after all this, how ſhe eſcaped and paſſed through the Pikes, (being yet, as I hear ſay, alive) as I thought togive theReader here to ſee and underſtand.

The firſt Examination of Elizabeth Young, before Mr. Huſſy.

The 1. examination of Eliz. Young.

WHo examined her of many things: Firſt, where ſhe was born, and who was her Father and Mother.

Eliz. Young. Sir, all this is but vain talk, and very ſuperfluous. It is to fill my head with fantaſies, that I ſhould not be able to anſwer unto ſuch things as I came for. Ye have not (I think) put me in Priſon to know who is my Father and Mother. But I pray you go to the matter that I came hither for.

Mr. Huſſy. Wherefore wenteſt thou out of the Realm?

Eliz. To keep my Conſcience clean.

Huſ. When waſt thou at Maſs?

Eliz. Not theſe three years.

Huſ. Then waſt thou not there three years before that?

Eliz. No Sir, nor yet three years before that: for if I were I had evil luck.

Huſ. How old art thou?

Eliz. Forty and upwards.

Huſ. Twenty of thoſe years thou went to Maſs.

Eliz. Yea and twenty more I may, and yet come home as wiſe as I went thither firſt, for I underſtand it not.

Huſ. Why wilt thou not go to the Maſs?

Eliz. Young refuſeth to go to Maſs.

Eliz. Sir, my Conſcience will not ſuffer me: for I had rather all the world ſhould accuſe me, than mine own Conſcience.

Huſ. What if a louſe, or a flea ſtick upon thy skin, and bite thy fleſh? thou muſt make a Conſcience in taking her off; is there not a Conſcience in it?

Eliz. That is but an eaſie Argument to diſplace the Scriptures, and eſpecially in ſuch a part as my Salvation dependeth upon: for it is but an eaſie Conſcience that a Man can make.

Huſ. But why wilt thou not ſwear upon the Evangeliſts before a Judge?

Eliz. Becauſe I know not what a Book-Oath is.

Huſ. Then he began to teach her the Book-Oath.

Eliz. Young denieth to ſwear, and why.

Eliz. Sir, I do not underſtand it, and therefore I will not learn it.

Huſ. Then ſaid he, thou wilt not underſtand it, and with that roſe up and went his way.

The ſecond Examination before Doctor Martin.

The 2. examination of Eliz. Young. She troubled for bringing over Books.

WHo ſaid to her, Woman, thou art come from beyond the Sea, and haſt brought with thee Books of Hereſie and Treaſon, and thou muſt confeſs to us who tranſlated them, printed them, and who ſent them over (for once I knew thee to be but a meſſenger) and in ſo doing the Queens Highneſs will be good to thee (for ſhe hath forgiven greater things than this) and thou ſhalt find as

as much favour as is poſſible. But if thou be ſtubborn, and wilt not confeſs, thou wilt be wondrous evil handled: for we know the Truth already, but this we do, only to ſee whether thou wilt be true of thy word or no.

Eliz. Sir, ye have my Confeſſion, and more than that I cannot ſay.

M. Thou muſt ſay more, and ſhalt ſay more. Doſt thou think that we will be fully anſwered by this Examination that thou haſt made? Thou Rebel Whore and Traitor Heretick, thou doſt refuſe to ſwear upon the Evangeliſt before a Judge, I hear ſay. Thou ſhalt be racked Inch-meal, thou traitorly Whore and Heretick, but thou ſhalt ſwear before a Judge before thou go: yea, and thou ſhalt be made to confeſs how many books thou haſt ſold, and to whom.

Dr. Martin threatneth her with the Rack.

Eliz. Sir, I underſtand not what an Oath is, and therefore I will take no ſuch thing upon me. And no man hath bought any Books of me as yet, for thoſe Books that I had, your Commiſſioners have them all.

Martin. Thou traitorly Whore, we know that thou haſt ſold a number of Books, yea, and to whom: and how many times thou haſt been here, and where thou layeſt, and every place that thou haſt been in: Doſt thou think that thou haſt Fools in hand?

Eliz. No Sir, ye be too wiſe for me; for I cannot tell how many places I have been in myſelf but if it were in Turky, I ſhould have meat, and drink and lodging for my mony.

Martin. Thou Rebel Whore, thou haſt ſpoken evil words by the Queen, and thou dwelleſt amongſt a ſort of Traitors and Rebels that cannot give the Queen a good word.

Eliz. I am not able to accuſe any man thereof, neither yet is there any man that can prove any ſuch things by me, as ye lay unto my charge. For I know by Gods Word, and Gods Book hath taught me what is my duty to God, and unto my Queen, and therefore (as I ſaid) I am aſſured that no man living upon the earth, can prove any ſuch things by me.

Eliz. Young charged for ſpeaking againſt the Queen.

Mart. Thou Rebel and traitorly Whore, thou ſhalt be ſo racked and handled, that thou ſhalt be an Example to all ſuch traitorly Whores and Hereticks; and thou ſhalt be made to ſwear by the holy Evangeliſts, and confeſs to whom thou haſt ſold all and every of theſe heretical Books that thou haſt ſold: for we know what number thou haſt ſold, and to whom; but thou ſhalt be made to confeſs it in ſpite of thy Blood.

Eliz. Here is my Carkaſs; do with it what you will and more than that you cannot have. M. Martin, ye can have no more but my Blood.

Then fared he, as though he had been ſtark mad, and ſaid, Martin? Why calleſt thou me Martin?

Eliz. Sir, I know well enough, for I have been before you ere now. Ye delivered me once at Weſtminſter.

Mart. Where didſt thou dwell then?

Eliz. I dwelled in the Minories.

Eliz. Young and her Husband delivered by D. Martin.

Mart. I delivered thee and thy Husband both, ; and I thought then that thou wouldeſt have done otherwiſe than thou doſt now. For if thou hadſt been before any Biſhop in England, and ſaid the words, that thou didſt before me, thou hadſt fried a Fagot: and though thou didſt not burn then, thou art like to burn or hang now.

Eliz. Sir, I promiſed you then, that I would never be fed with an unknown Tongue, and no more will I yet.

Mart. I ſhall feed thee well enough. Thou ſhalt be fed with that (I warrant thee) which ſhall be ſmally to thine eaſe.

Eliz. Do what God ſhall ſuffer you to do: for more ye ſhall not. And then he aroſe, and ſo departed, and went to the Keepers houſe, and ſaid to the Wife. Whom haſt thou ſuffered to come to this vile traitorly Whore and Heretick to ſpeak with her? Then ſaid the Keepers Wife, as God receive my Soul, here came neither Man, Woman, nor Child, to ask for her.

Eliz. Young commanded to Cloſe Priſon, to have one day Bread, and another day Water.

Martin. If any Man, Woman, or Child, come to ask for her, I charge thee in pain of death, that they be laid faſt, and give her one day Bread, and another day Water.

Eliz. If ye take away my meat, I truſt that God will take away my hunger: and ſo he departed and ſaid, that was too good for her: and then was ſhe ſhut up under two locks in the Clink where ſhe was before.

The third Examination before Doctor Martin again.

THen was ſhe brought before him in his Chamber, within my Lord Chancellors houſe. Who asked her, ſaying; Elizabeth, wilt thou confeſs theſe things that thou haſt been examined upon? For thou knoweſt that I have been thy Friend, and in ſo doing, I will be thy Friend again; giving her many fair words, and then demanding of her how many Gentlemen were beyond the Seas.

The 3. Examination of Eliz. Young.

Dr. Martin ſeeketh to know how many Gentlemen were fled over the Sea.

Eliz. It is too much for me to tell you how many are on the other ſide.

Mart. No, I mean but in Frankford and Emden, where thou haſt been.

Eliz. Sir, I did never take account of them, it is a thing that I look not for.

Mart. When ſhall I have a true word come out of thy mouth?

Eliz. I have told you the Truth, but becauſe that it ſoundeth not to your mind, therefore ye will not credit it.

Mart. Wilt thou yet confeſs? and if thou wilt, that that I have promiſed, I will do: and if thou wilt not, I promiſe thee thou muſt go even hence to the Rack, and therefore confeſs.

Eliz. Young again threatned with the Rack.

Eliz. I can ſay no more than I have ſaid.

Mart. Well, foraſmuch as ſhe will confeſs no more, have her away to the Rack, and then ſhe will be marred. Then anſwered a Prieſt that ſate there, and ſaid, Woman, take an Oath, and confeſs. Wilt thou be hurt for other men?

Eliz. I can confeſs no more than I have. Do with my Carkaſs what ye will.

She again refuſeth to ſwear to accuſe others.

Mart. Did ye ever hear the like of this Heretick? What a ſtout Heretick is this? We have the Truth, and we know the Truth, and yet look whether ſhe will confeſs. There is no remedy, but ſhe muſt needs to the Rack, and therefore away with her, and ſo commanded her out of the Door, and called her Keeper unto him, and ſaid to him: There is no remedy but this Heretick muſt be racked; and talked with him more, but what it was ſhe heard not.

Then he called her in again, and ſaid, Wilt thou not confeſs, and keep thee from the Rack? I adviſe thee ſo to do: for if thou wilt not, thou knoweſt not the pain yet, but thou ſhalt do.

Eliz. I can confeſs no more. Do with my Carkaſs what ye will.

Mart. Keeper, away with her. Thou knoweſt what I ſaid. Let her know the pain of the Rack. And ſo ſhe departed, thinking no leſs, but that ſhe ſhould have gon to the Rack, till ſhe ſaw the Keeper turn toward the Clink again. And thus did God alienate their hearts, and diminiſh their tyrannous power, unto the time of further Examinations; For ſhe was brought before the Biſhop, the Dean, and the Chancellor, and other Commiſſioners, firſt and laſt, 13. times.

Eliz. Young commanded again to the Clink.

The fourth Examination was before the Biſhop of London, Sir Roger Cholmley, Dr. Cook, the Recorder of London, Dr. Roper of Kent, and Dr. Martin, as concerning her Faith, &c.

FIrſt ſhe being preſented by Dr. Martin, before the Biſhop of London, Dr. Martin began to declare againſt her, ſaying, The Lord Chancellor hath ſent you here a Woman, which hath brought Books over from Emden, where all theſe Books of Hereſie and Treaſon are printed, and hath therewith filled all the Land with Treaſon and Hereſie, neither yet will ſhe confeſs who tranſlated them, nor who printed them, nor yet who ſent them over. Wherefore my Lord Chancellor committeth her unto my Lord of London, he to do with her as he ſhall think good. For ſhe will confeſs nothing, but that ſhe bought theſe ſaid Books in Amſterdam, and ſo brought them over to ſell for gain.

The 4. Examination of Eliz. Young.

Dr. Martin preſenteth her to the Commiſſioners.

Dr. Cook. Let her head be truſſed in a ſmall line, and make her to confeſs.

Mart. The Book is called Antichriſt, and ſo may be well called, for it ſpeaketh againſt Jeſus Chriſt and the Queen. Beſides that, ſhe hath a certain ſpark of the Anabaptiſts, for ſhe refuſeth to ſwear upon the four Evangeliſts before a Judge: For I my ſelf and Mr. Huſſey have had her before us four times, but we cannot bring bring her to ſwear. Wherefore my Lord Chancellor would that ſhe ſhould abſtain and faſt, for ſhe hath not faſted a great while: For ſhe hath lien in the Clink a good while, where ſhe had too much her liberty.

Eliz. Young a great while in the Clink

Then ſaid the Biſhop, why wilt thou not ſwear before a Judge? that is the right trade of the Anabaptiſts.

Eliz. My Lord, I will not ſwear that this hand is mine.

No, ſaid the Biſhop? and why?

Eliz. Young refuſed to ſwear, and why.

Eliz. My Lord, Chriſt ſaith, That whatſoever is more than yea, yea, or nay, nay, it cometh of evil, And moreover, I know not what an Oath is: and therefore I will take no ſuch thing upon me.

Eliz. Young thought to be no Woman.

Then ſaid Cholmley, twenty pounds, it is a Man in a Womans Clothes, twenty pounds, it is a Man.

Boner. Think you ſo my Lord?

Chol. Yea, my Lord, &c.

Eliz. My Lord, I am a Woman.

Biſh. Swear her upon a Book, ſeeing it is but a queſtion asked.

Then ſaid Cholmley, I will lay twenty pounds, it is a Man.

Then Dr. Cooke brought her a Book, commanding her to lay thereon her hand.

Eliz. No, my Lord, I will not ſwear: for I know not what an Oath is. But I ſay that I am a Woman, and have Children.

Biſh. That know not we: wherefore ſwear.

Cholm. Thou il favoured Whore, lay thy hand upon the Book; I will lay on mine: and ſo he laid his Hand upon the Book.

Eliz. So will not I mine.

Then the Biſhop ſpake a word in Latine, out of St. Paul, as concerning ſwearing.

Eliz. My Lord, if you ſpeak to me of St. Paul, then ſpeak Engliſh, for I underſtand you not.

Biſh. I dare ſwear that thou doſt not.

Eliz. My Lord, St. Paul ſaith, that five words ſpoken in a language that may be underſtood, are better than many in a forain or ſtrange tongue which is unknown.

Dr. Cooke. Swear before us, whether thou be a Man or a Woman.

Eliz. If ye will not believe me, then ſend for Women into a ſecret place, and I will be tried.

Cholm. Thou art an ill favored Whore.

Sacrament of the Altar.

Then ſaid the Biſhop, How believeſt thou in the Sacrament of the Altar?

Eliz. My Lord, if it will pleaſe you that I ſhall declare mine own Faith, I will.

The Biſhop. Tell me, how believeſt thou in the Sacrament of the Altar?

Eliz. Will it pleaſe you that I ſhall declare my Faith? And if it be not good, then teach me a better, and I will believe it.

Dr. Cook. That is well ſaid, declare thy Faith.

The Confeſſion & Faith of Eliz. Young.

Eliz. I believe in God the Father almighty, the Son, and the Holy Ghoſt, three Perſons and one God. I believe all the Articles of my Creed. I believe all things written in the holy Scripture, and all things agreeable with the Scripture, given by the Holy Ghoſt unto the Church of Chriſt, ſet forth and taught by the Church of Chriſt. I believe that Jeſus Chriſt, the only Son of God, that immaculate Lamb, came into the world to ſave ſinners; and that in him, by him, and through him I am made clean from my ſins, and without him I could not. I believe that in the Holy Sacrament of Chriſts Body and Blood, which he did inſtitute and ordain, and left among his Diſciples that night before he was betrayed, when I do receive this Sacrament in Faith and Spirit, I do receive Chriſt.

The Sacrament to be received in Spirit and Faith.

Biſh. No more, I warrant you, but the Sacrament of Chriſts Body and Blood, received but in Spirit and Faith, with thoſe Hereticks.

Cholmley cannot abide Spirit and Faith.

Chol. Ah Whore, Spirit and Faith, Whore?

Eliz. This Sacrament never Man could or did make, but only he, that did what no Man could do.

Mart. Then thou muſt allow that graſs is a Sacra-ſtitution the Sacra- nt by ſt only e for all.

ment; for who could make graſs but he only?

Eliz. Sir, he hath ſuffered, and made a ſufficient Sacrifice once for all, and ſo hath he made his Sacrament ſufficient once for all: for there was never Man that could ſay, Take, eat, this is my Body, that is broken for you, but only Jeſus Chriſt, who had his Body broken for the ſins of the world; which Sacrament he hath left here amongſt us for a Teſtimonial of his Death, even to the worlds end.

Anno 1558.

Mart. Who taught thee this Doctrine? did Scory?

Eliz. Yea, Biſhop Scory and other that I have heard.

Biſh. Why, is Scory Biſhop now?

Eliz. If that do offend you, call him Dr. Scory, if ye will Roper. I knew when he was but a poor Doctor.

Mart. What do ye call Scory?

Eliz. Our Superintendent,

Biſh. Loe! their Superintendent.

Mart. And what are ye called?

Eliz. Chriſts Congregation.

Biſh. Loe! Chriſts Congregation, I warrant you.

Dr. Cooke. What living hath Scory?

Eliz. Sir, as far as I do know, he liveth by his own, for I know no Man that giveth him ought.

Recorder. Yes, I warrant you, he hath enough ſent him out of England.

Eliz. Sir, I know no ſuch thing.

Cholm. Hark Whore, hark; hark, how I do believe.

Eliz. My Lord, I have told you my belief.

Chol. Hark, thou il favored whore, how I do believe. When the Prieſt hath ſpoken the words of Conſecration, I do believe that there remaineth the very Body that was born of the Virgin Mary, was hanged on the Croſs, was Dead and Buried, and Deſcended into Hell, and Roſe again on the third day, and Aſcended into Heaven, and ſitteth at the Right hand of God. The ſame Body when the Prieſt hath ſpoken the words, cometh down, and when the Prieſt lifeth up his Body on this wiſe (he lifting up his Hands, ſaid) there it is.

Confeſſion of Cholmleys Faith.

Eliz. I have told you alſo how I do believe.

Mart. Away with her.

Cholm. Ah evill favoured Whore! nothing but Spirit and Faith, Whore?

Mart. Away with her, we have more to talk withall.

Then was ſhe carried into the Colehouſe, and ſearched for Books, and then put into the Stockhouſe, and her knife, girdle, and apron taken from her.

Eliz. Young carried into the Stockhouſe.

The fifth Examination before the Biſhop of Londons Chancellor.

THen was ſhe brought out of the Stockhouſe, and brought before the Biſhops Chancellor, who required of her, what age ſhe was of.

The 5. examination of Eli. Young.

Eliz. Sir, forty years and upwards.

The Chan. Why, thou art a Woman of a fair years; what ſhouldſt thou meddle with the Scriptures? it is neceſſary for thee to believe, and that is enough. It is more fit for thee to meddle with thy diſtaff, than to meddle with the Scriptures. What is thy Belief? I would hear it: for it cannot be good, in that thou art brought into Priſon.

Eliz. Sir, if it will pleaſe you to hear, I will declare it unto you. But I pray you that you will take your pen and write it, and then examine it; and if ye find any thing therein that is not fit for a Chriſtian Woman, then teach me better, and I will learn it.

Eliz. Young offered again to declare her belief.

Chan, Well ſaid. But who ſhall judge between thee and me?

Eliz. The Scripture.

Chan. Wilt thou ſtand by that?

Eliz. Yea Sir.

Chan. Well go thy way out at the door a little while, for I am buſie, and I will call for thee anon again.

Then he called me again and ſaid; Now Woman, the time is too long to write. Say thy mind, and I will bear it in my head.

Then Elizabeth began, and declared her Faith to him as ſhe had done before the Biſhop.

Really, corporally, ſubſtantially.

Chan. Woman, Spirit and Faith I do allow, but doſt thou not believe that thou doſt receive the Body of Chriſt, really, corporally, and ſubſtantially?

Eliz.

Anno 1558.

Eliz. Theſe words, really and corporally, I underſtand not; as for ſubſtantially, I take it, ye mean I ſhould believe that I ſhould receive his humane Body (which is upon the right hand of God, and can occupy no more places at once) and that believe not I.

Chan. Thou muſt believe this, or elſe thou art damned.

Eliz. Sir, can ye give me Belief or Faith?

Chan. No, God muſt give it thee.

Eliz. God hath given me no ſuch Faith or Belief.

The Chancellor then declared a text of S. Paul in Latin, and then in Engliſh, ſaying, I could make thee believe, but that thou haſt a cankered Heart, and wilt not believe. Who then can make thee to believe?

Faith cometh of God Ergo, no untruth ought to be believed. Chriſt is fleſh of our fleſh, but not in our fleſh. John. 6.

Eliz. You ſaid even now, that faith or belief cometh of God, and ſo believe I, and then may not I believe an untruth to be a truth.

Chan. Doſt thou not believe that Chriſts Fleſh is Fleſh in thy Fleſh?

Eliz. No Sir, I believe not that; for my Fleſh ſhall putrifie and rot.

Chan. Chriſt ſaid, my Fleſh is Fleſh in Fleſh.

Eliz. Who ſo receiveth him fleſhly, ſhall have a fleſhly reſurrection.

Chan. Chriſt ſaith in the 6. of John, My Fleſh is meat indeed, and my Blood is drink indeed.

Eliz. Chriſt preached to the Capernaites, ſaying; Except ye eat the Fleſh of the Son of Man, and drink his Blood, ye ſhall not have life in you: And the Capernaites murmured, at it. And his Diſciples alſo murmured, ſaying among themſelves, This is an hard ſaying, and who can abide it? Chriſt underſtood their meaning, and ſaid; Are ye alſo offended? Will ye alſo go away? What and if ye ſhall ſee the Son of Man aſcend up to Heaven, from whence he came? will that offend you? It is the Spirit that quickneth, the Fleſh profiteth nothing. I pray you Sir, what meaneth Chriſt by that?

This Man dare not expound the Scripture, yet he dare judge upon Herege.

Chan. O God forbid. Would ye have me to interpret the Scriptures? We muſt leave that for our old ancient Fathers, which have ſtudied Scriptures a long time, and have the Ghoſt given unto them.

Eliz. Why Sir, have you not the Holy Ghoſt given and revealed unto you?

The Papiſts dare not aſſure themſelves to have the holy Ghoſt.

Chan. No, God forbid that I ſhould ſo believe; but I hope, I hope: But ye ſay, ye are of the Spirit. Will you ſay that ye have no profit in Chriſts Fleſh?

The Capernaites faith.

Eliz. Sir, we have our profit in Chriſts Fleſh, but not as the Capernaites did underſtand it: For they underſtood that they muſt eat his Fleſh as they did eat Ox Fleſh and other, and drink his Blood, as we drink wine or beer out of a bowl. But ſo we muſt not receive it. But our profit that we have by Chriſt, is to believe that his Body was broken upon the Croſs, and his Blood ſhed for our ſins; that is the very meaning of Chriſt, that ſo we ſhould eat his Fleſh, and drink his Blood, when he ſaid; My Fleſh is meat indeed, and my Blood is drink indeed.

The place of John. cap. 6. expounded how Chriſts fleſh is meat.

Chan. How doth thy Body live, if Chriſts Fleſh is not Fleſh in thy Fleſh?

Eliz. Sir, I was a Body before I had a Soul; which Body God had created, and yet it could not live, till God had breathed life into me, and by that life doth my Body live. And when it ſhall pleaſe God to diſſolve my life, my Fleſh will offer it ſelf unto the place from whence it came, and through the merits of Chriſt my Soul will offer it ſelf to the place from whence is came.

Chriſts fleſh is fleſh in our fleſh, ſay the Papiſts.

Chan. Yea, but if thou do not believe that Chriſts Fleſh is Fleſh in thy Fleſh, thou canſt not be ſaved.

Eliz. Sir, I do not believe that.

Chan. Why, doth not Chriſt ſay, My Fleſh is meat indeed, and my Blood is drink indeed? Canſt thou deny that?

Chriſts fleſh is meat for our Soul ſay the Chriſtians.

Eliz. I deny not that; for Chriſts Fleſh and Blood is meat and drink for my Soul, the food of my Soul. For whoſoever believeth that Jeſus Chriſt the Son of God hath dyed and ſhed his Blood for his ſins, his Soul feedeth thereon for ever.

Chan. When thou receiveſt the Sacrament of the Altar, doſt thou not believe that thou doſt receive Chriſts Body?

In the Sacrament miniſtred and received according to Chriſts inſtitution, we receive Chriſt.

Eliz. Sir, when I do receive the Sacrament which Chriſt did inſtitute and ordain the night before he was betrayed, and left among his Diſciples, as often (I ſay) as I receive it, I believe, that ſpiritually and by Faith I receive Chriſt. And of this Sacrament, I know Chriſt himſelf to be the Author, and none but he. And this ſame Sacrament is an eſtabliſhment to my Conſcience, and an augmenting to my Faith.

Chan. Why, did not Chriſt take Bread, and gave thanks, and brake it, and gave it to his Diſciples, and ſaid; Take, eat, this is my Body that is given for you? Did he give them his Body, or no?

One queſtion ſolved by another.

Eliz. He alſo took the cup, and gave thanks to his Father, and gave it unto his Diſciples, ſaying Drink ye all hereof: for this is the cup of the New Teſtament in my Blood, which ſhall be ſhed for many. Now I pray you Sir, let me ask you one queſtion: Did he give the cup the name of his Blood, or elſe the wine that was in the cup?

Then was he very angry, and ſaid; Doſt thou think that thou haſt an hedge-Prieſt in hand?

Eliz. No Sir, I take you not to be an hedge-Prieſt. I take you for a Doctor.

Chan. So me thinketh. Thou wilt take upon thee to teach me.

Eliz. No Sir: But I let you know what I know; and by argument one ſhall know more.

There Sacrament a witneſs both of Chriſts death and of his coming again.

Chriſt ſaid; As oft as ye do this, do it in the remembrance of me; but a remembrance is not of a thing preſent, but abſent. Alſo S. Paul ſaith; So oft as ye ſhall eat of this Bread, and drink of this cup, ye ſhall ſhew forth the Lords Death till he come: Then we may not look for him here, until his coming again at the later day. Again is not this Article of our belief true, He ſitteth at the Right hand of God the Father Almighty; from thence he ſhall come to judge both the quick and the dead? But if he ſhall not come before he come to Judgment, then how is he here preſent in your Sacrament of the Altar? Wherefore I believe that the Humane Body of Chriſt occupieth no more but one place at once; for when he was here, he was not there.

Chriſts Body occupieth but one place at once.

The ſixth Examination before the ſaid Chancellor.

The ſixth examination of Eliz. Young.

WHo ſaid unto her; Woman, the laſt time that thou waſt before me, our talk was concerning the Sacrament.

Eliz. Sir, true it is, and I truſt that I ſaid nothing that ye can deny by the Scriptures.

The fleſhly reaſon of the Papiſts.

Chan. Yes, thou wilt not believe that Chriſts Fleſh is Fleſh in thy Fleſh.

Eliz. No Sir, God hath given me no ſuch belief; for it cannot be found by the Scriptures.

Chan. Wilt thou believe nothing but what is in the Scripture? Why, how many Sacraments doſt thou find in the Scripture?

Eliz. The Church of Chriſt doth ſet down twain.

Chan. I will as well find ſeven by the Scripture, as thou ſhalt find twain.

Name of Sacrament given by the Church.

Eliz. Sir, I talk not to you thereof, but I ſay that the Church of Chriſt ſetteth out twain, and I have been taught no more.

Two Sacraments.

Chan. What are thoſe twain?

Eliz. The Sacrament of Chriſts Body and Blood, and the Sacrament of Baptiſm.

Chan. What ſaiſt thou by the Sacrament of Wedlock?

Wedlock.

Eliz. I have not heard it called a Sacrament, but the Holy Eſtate of Matrimony, which ought to be kept of all Men that take it upon them.

Chan. How ſaiſt thou by Prieſts? Is it good that they ſhould marry? is it to be kept of them?

Prieſts marriage.

Eliz. I come not hither to reaſon any ſuch matters, for I am no Divine, and alſo it is no part of my Faith.

Chan. Can ye not tell? ye ſhall tell or ever you go.

Eliz. Sir, then muſt ye keep me a good while: for I have not ſtudied the Scriptures for it.

Chan. No? why, ye will not be aſhamed to flee unto the higheſt myſtery, even to the Sacrament at the firſt daſh, and ye are not afraid to argue with the beſt Doctor in the land.

Eliz.

Eliz. Gods myſteries I will not meddle with, but all things that are written, are written for our edification.

Praying for the dead.

Chan. What ſay you by prayer for the dead? is it not meet that if a Mans Friend be dead, his Friend commend his Soul unto God?

Eliz. There is no Chriſtian Man that will commend his Friend nor his foe unto the Devil. And whether it be good for him when he is dead or no, ſure I am, that it is good when he is alive.

Oblation for the dead.

Chan. Then thou alloweſt not prayer to bee good for them when they be dead, and lying in Purgatory. Is it not meet that prayer be made unto God for them?

Purgatory.

Eliz. Sir, I never heard in the Scriptures of Purgatory, but in the Scripture I have heard of Heaven and Hell.

Chan. Why, ye have nothing but the Skimming of the Scriptures. Our ancient Fathers could find out in the bottom of the Scriptures that there is a Purgatory. Yea, they could find it in the New Teſtament, that a Prieſt ſhall take the Sacrament, and go to the Altar, and make an Oblation, and offer it up every day.

Eliz. Sir, that could never be found in the Bible nor Teſtament, as far as ever I could hear.

Chan. Whom doſt thou hear read either the Bible or Teſtament, but a ſort of Schiſmaticks, bawdy Biſhops, and hedge-Prieſts (which have brought into the Church a ſtinking communion, which was never heard of in any place in the world, but here in England) which have deceived the King and all the Nobility, and all the whole Realm?

The holy communion blaſphemed.

Eliz. Sir, it is a vile name that ye give them all.

So many martyrs have been ſlain, and yet the Papiſts brag as though none will come forth to anſwer them.

Chan. Where are all the hedge-knaves become now, that they come not to their Anſwer?

Eliz. Anſwer Sir? why, they have anſwered both with the Scriptures, and alſo with their Blood; and then where were you that ye came not forth to anſwer in their times? I never knew any of you that were troubled, but twain, and that was not for Gods Word, it was for their diſobedience.

Chan. No, I pray you? did ye not know that we were killed, hanged, burned, and headed.

Eliz. Sir, I never knew that any of you ever was either hanged, killed, burned, or headed.

Fiſher Bp. of Rocheſter.

Chan. No? did ye never hear that the Bp. of Rocheſter loſt his head for the Supremay of the Biſhops of Rome?

Eliz. Then he died not for Gods Word.

Nothing to be received to ſalvation but only that which is found or founded in Scripture.

Chan. Well, thou wilt believe nothing but that which is written in Gods Word. Where canſt thou find the Sabbath written in the Scripture, by the name of the Sabbath? For the right Sabbath day will I prove to be Saturday. Or where canſt thou find the Articles of the Creed in the Scripture by the name of the Articles? Or where canſt thou find in the Scripture, that Chriſt went down into Hell?

Eliz. What place or part in the Scripture can ye find to diſprove any of theſe things?

Chan. What Prieſt haſt thou lien withal that thou haſt ſo much Scripture? Thou art ſome Prieſts Woman, I think, for thou wilt take upon thee to reaſon, and teach the beſt Doctor in all the land, thou.

Eliz. I was never yet Prieſts Wife, nor yet Prieſts Woman.

Chan. Have I touched your Conſcience?

Eliz. No Sir, ye have not touched my Conſcience, but beware ye hurt not your own.

Chan. Thou haſt read a little in the Bible or Teſtament and thou thinkeſt that thou art able to reaſon with a Dr. that hath gone to ſchool thirty years; and before God, I think if I had talked thus much with a Jew, as I have done with thee, he would have turned ere this time. But I may ſay by you as Chriſt ſaid by Jeruſalem, ſaying; O Jeruſalem, Jeruſalem, how often would I have gathered thee together, even as a Hen gathereth her chickens, but thou wouldeſt not. And ſo would we gather you together in one Faith, and ye will not: and therefore your own Blood be upon your own heads; for I can do no more but teach you. Thou art one of the rankeſt Hereticks that ever I heard; for thou believeſt nothing but what is in the Scripture: and therefore thou art damned.

But we read not that Chriſt did draw them into priſons, and condemned them to be burnt that would not come.

Eliz. I do believe all things written in the Scripture, and all things agreeable with the Scripture, given by the Holy Ghoſt unto the Church of Chriſt, ſet forth and taught by the Church of Chriſt, and ſhall I be damned becauſe I believe the Truth, and will not believe an untruth?

Anno 1558.

Eliz. Young deemed an Heretick, becauſe ſhe believeth all things written and agreeable to the Scripture, and nothing elſe.

Then the Chancellor called the Keeper, ſaying; Cluny take her away, thou knoweſt what thou haſt to do with her. And ſo ſhe departed, and was brought again to the ſtock-houſe, and there ſhe lay certain days, and both her hands manacled in one Iron; and afterward ſhe was removed into the Lollards Tower, and there ſhe remained with both her feet in the ſtocks and Irons till the next time of examination.

Eliz. Young had to the ſtock-houſe, and then to the Lollards Tower.

The ſeventh Examination before the Chancellor, and the Biſhops Scribe.

WHen ſhe was brought before the ſaid Chancellor and the Scribe, the Chancellor ſaid unto her; Woman, thou haſt been twice before me, but thou and I could not agree, and here be certain Articles that my Lord the Biſhop of London would that thou ſhouldeſt make anſwer unto, which are theſe: Firſt, how many Sacraments thou doſt allow?

The ſeventh examination of El. Young.

Eliz. Sir, as many as Chriſts Church doth allow, and that is twain.

Two Sacraments.

Then ſaid the Scribe. Thou waſt taught ſeven before King Edwards daies.

Chan. Which two Sacraments be, thoſe that thou doſt allow?

Eliz. The Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, and the Sacrament of Baptiſm.

Chan. Doſt thou not believe that the Pope of Rome is the Supreme Head of the Church, immediately under God in Earth?

Eliz. No Sir, no Man can be the Head of Chriſts Church; for Chriſt himſelf is the Head, and his Word is the Governor of all that be of that Church, whereſoever they be ſcattered abroad.

Head of the Church.

Chan. Doſt thou not believe that the Biſhop of Rome can forgive thee all thy ſins Heretical, deteſtable, and damnable, that thou haſt done from thine infancy unto this day?

Eliz. Sir, the Biſhop of Rome is a ſinner as I am, and no man can forgive me my ſins, but he only that is without ſin, and that is Jeſus Chriſt which dyed for my ſins.

Biſhop of Rome.

Chan. Doſt thou not know that the Pope ſent over his Jubile's, that all that ever would faſt and pray, and go to the Church, ſhould have their ſins forgiven them?

The Scribe. Sir, I thing that ſhe was not in the Realm then.

Chan. Haſt thou not deſired God to defend thee from the Tyranny of the Biſhop of Rome, and all his deteſtable enormities?

From the Biſhop of Rome and all his deteſtable enormities.

Eliz. Yes that I have.

Chan. And art thou not ſorry for it?

Eliz. No Sir, not a whit.

Chan. Haſt thou not ſaid, that the Maſs was wicked, and the Sacrament of the Altar moſt abominable?

Eliz. Yes that I have.

Chan. And art thou not ſorry for it?

Eliz. No Sir, not a whit.

Chan. Art thou not content to go to the Church, and hear Maſs?

Eliz. I will not go to the Church, either to Maſs or Mattens, till I may hear it in a tongue that I can underſtand: for I will be fed no longer in a ſtrange language. And always the Scribe did write every of theſe Articles, as they were demanded, and anſwered unto.

Then the Scribe asked her from whence ſhe came.

The Chancellor ſaid, this is ſhe that brought over all theſe Books of Hereſie and Treaſon.

Then ſaid the Scribe to her; Woman, where hadſt thou all theſe Books?

Eliz. I bought them in Amſterdam, and brought them over to ſell, thinking to gain thereby.

Then ſaid the Scribe, What is the Name of the Book?

Eliz. I cannot tell.

The

Anno 1558.

The Scribe. Why wouldſt thou buy Books and know not their Names?

Then ſaid Cluny the Keeper; Sir, my Lord Biſhop did ſend for her by Name that ſhe ſhould come to Maſs, but ſhe would not.

Eliz. Young refuſeth to go to Maſs.

Chan. Yea, did my Lord ſend for her by name, and would ſhe not go to Maſs?

Eliz. No Sir, I will never go to Maſs, till I do underſtand it, by the leave of God.

Chan. Underſtand it? Why, who the Devil can make thee to underſtand Latin, thou being ſo old?

Then the Scribe commanded her to ſet to her hand to all the ſaid things.

Elizabeth ſaid; Sir, then let me hear it read firſt.

Then ſaid the Scribe, Maſter Chancellor, ſhall ſhe hear it read?

Chan. Yea, let the Heretick hear it read.

Eliz. Young ſetteth her hand to her Examination.

Then ſhe heard it read, and ſo ſhe ſet to her hand.

The eighth Examination before the Biſhop.

The eighth Examination of Eliz. Young.

WHen ſhe was brought before the Biſhop, he asked the Keeper, Is this the Woman that hath the three Children? And the Keeper, ſaid, Yea, my Lord.

Biſhop. Woman, here is a ſupplication put unto my hands for thee: In like caſe there was another ſupplication put up to me for thee afore this, in the which thou madeſt as though that I ſhould keep thy Children.

Eliz. My Lord, I did not know of this ſupplication, nor yet of the other.

Then ſaid the Biſhop, Maſter Dean, is this the Woman you have ſued ſo earneſtly for?

The Dean. Yea, my Lord.

The Dean made ſure for Eliz. Young.

The Dean. Woman, what remaineth in the Sacrament of the Altar, when and after that the Prieſt hath ſpoken the words of Conſecration?

Eliz. A piece of Bread. But the Sacrament of Chriſts Body and Blood, which he did inſtitute and leave amongſt his Diſciples the night before he was betrayed, miniſtred according to his word, that Sacrament I do believe.

The Dean. How doſt thou believe concerning the Body of Chriſt? where is his Body, and how many Bodies hath he?

Eliz. Sir, in Heaven, he ſitteth on the right hand of God.

The Dean. From whence came his humane Body?

Eliz. He took it of the Virgin Mary.

The Dean. That is Fleſh, Blood, and Bones, as mine is. But what ſhape hath his Spiritual Body? hath it face, hands and feet?

Eliz. I know no other Body that he hath, but that Body whereof he meant when he ſaid; This is my Body which is given for you: and this is my Blood which ſhall be ſhed for you. Whereby he plainly meaneth that Body and no other, which he took of the Virgin Mary, having the perfect ſhape and proportion of a humane Body.

Story. Then ſaid Story; Ye have a wiſe Body! for ye muſt go to the Stake.

The Dean. Art thou content to believe in the Faith of Chriſts Church? But to ask of thee what Chriſts Church is, or where it is, I let it paſs.

Eliz. Sir, to that Church I have joyned my Faith, and from it I purpoſe never to turn by Gods help.

The Dean. Wouldſt thou not be at home with thy Children with a good will?

Elizabeth. Sir if it pleaſe God to give me leave.

The belief of the Papiſts followeth the multitude.

The Dean. Art thou content to confeſs thy ſelf to be an ignorant and fooliſh Woman, and to believe as our Holy Father the Pope of Rome doth, and as the Lord Cardinals Grace doth, and as my Lord the Biſhop of London thine Ordinary doth, and as the Kings Grace, and the Queens Grace, and all the Nobility of England do; yea, and the Emperors Grace, and all the Noble Princes of Chriſtendom?

True belief dependeth not upon Men, but upon the rule of Gods Word.

Eliz. Sir, I was never wiſe, but in few words I ſhall make you a brief anſwer how I do believe. I do believe all things that are written in the Scriptures given by the holy Ghoſt unto the Church of Chriſt, ſet forth and taught by the Church of Chriſt. Hereon I ground my Faith and on no Man.

Then ſaid Story; And who ſhall be judge?

Eliz. Sir, the Scripture.

Story. And who ſhall read it?

Eliz. He unto whom God hath given the underſtanding.

Biſhop. Woman, be reformable; for I would thou wert gone, and Maſter Dean here hath earneſtly ſued for thee.

Dean. Woman, I have ſued for thee indeed, and I promiſe thee, if thou wilt be reformable, my Lord will be good unto thee.

Eliz. I have been before my Lord Biſhop, and before Maſter Chancellor three times, and have declared my Faith.

Dean. And yet I know that Maſter Chancellor will ſay, that thou art a rank Heretick.

Story. Away with her.

Eliz. Young committed to the Dean.

Biſhop. Maſter Dean, ye know that I may not tarry, nor you neither. Let her Keeper bring her home to your own Chamber ſoon at four a Clock at afternoon, and if that ye find her reaſonable, then let her go, for I would that ſhe were gone.

Then ſaid the Dean, with a good will my Lord; and ſo ſhe was ſent unto the place from whence ſhe came, untill it was four of the Clock at afternoon.

The ninth Examination before the Dean, before whom it pleaſed God to deliver her.

The ninth Examination of Eliz. Young.

WHen it was four of the Clock at afternoon, as the hour was appointed, and the Dean was ſet, he asked her; Art thou a fool now, as thou waſt to day?

Eliz. Sir, I have learned but ſmall wiſdom ſince.

Dean. Doſt thou think that I am better learned than thou?

Eliz. Yes Sir, that I do.

Dean. Thinkeſt thou that I can do thee good?

Eliz. Yea Sir, and if it pleaſe God that ye will.

Talk between the Dean and Eliz. Young about receiving the Sacrament.

Dean. Then I will do thee good indeed. What doſt thou receive when thou receiveſt the Sacrament which Chriſt left among his Diſciples the night before he was betrayed?

Eliz. Sir, that that his Diſciples did receive.

Dean. What did they receive?

Eliz. Sir, that that Chriſt gave them they received.

Dean. What anſwer is this? Was Chriſt there preſent?

Eliz. Sir, he was there preſent; for he inſtituted his own Sacrament.

Dean. He took Bread, and he brake it, and he gave it to his Diſciples, and ſaid; Take, eat, this is my Body which ſhall be broken for you. When thou receiveſt it, doſt thou believe that thou receiveſt his Body.

Eliz. Sir, when I receive, I believe that through Faith I do receive Chriſt.

Dean. Doſt thou believe that Chriſt is there?

Chriſt not abſent from his Sacraments.

Eliz. Sir, I believe that he is there to me, and by Faith I do receive him.

Dean. He alſo took the Cup and gave thanks, and gave it to his Diſciples and ſaid; Drink ye all hereof, This is the Cup of the New Teſtament in my Blood, which is ſhed for many for the remiſſion of Sins. When thou doſt receive it after the inſtitution that Chriſt ordained among his Diſciples, the night before he was betrayed, doſt thou believe that Chriſt is there?

Eliz. Sir, by Faith I believe that he is there, and by Faith I do believe that I do receive him.

Dean. Now thou haſt anſwered me, Remember that thou ſayeſt, that when thou doſt receive according to the inſtitution of Chriſt, thou doſt receive Chriſt.

Eliz. Sir, I believe Chriſt not to be abſent from his own Sacrament.

Dean. How long wilt thou continue in that belief?

Eliz. Sir, as long as I do live, by the help of God, for it is, and hath been my belief.

Dean. Wilt thou ſay this before my Lord?

Eliz. Yea, Sir.

Dean. Then I dare deliver thee. Why, thou Calf, why wouldſt thou not ſay ſo to day?

Eliz. Sir, ye asked me no ſuch queſtion.

Dean. Then ye would ſtand in diſputation how many Bodies Chriſt had.

Eliz. Sir, indeed that queſtion ye did ask me.

Dean. Who ſhall be the Sureties that thou wilt appear before my Lord of London and me upon Friday next?

Eliz. Sir, I have no Sureties, nor know I where to have any.

Two Women ureties for liz. Young

Then ſpake the Dean unto two Women that ſtood there, who had earneſtly ſued for her, ſaying: Women, will ye be her Sureties, that ſhe ſhall appear before my Lord of London and me upon Friday next?

The Women. Yea Sir, and it pleaſe you.

Dean. Take heed that I find you no more a Brabler in the Scripture.

Eliz. Sir, I am no brabler in the Scripture, nor yet any Man can burthen me therewith.

Dean. Yes, I have heard of you well enough what ye are.

Then ſaid he to the two Women, What if a Man ſhould touch your Conſcience, do ye not ſmell a little of Hereſie alſo?

The Women. No, Sir.

Dean. Yes, a little of the Frying-pan, or elſe wherefore have ye twain ſo earneſtly ſued for her?

The one Woman anſwered, becauſe that her Children were like to periſh, and therefore God put me in mind to ſue for her.

Then ſaid the other Woman; And I gate her Child a Nurſe, and I am threatned to ſtand to the keeping of her Child; and therefore it ſtandeth me in hand to ſue to have her out.

Eliz. Young upon Sureties delivered.

Dean. Woman, give thanks unto theſe honeſt Women, who have ſo earneſtly ſued for thee, and I promiſe thee ſo have I. Theſe great Hereticks will receive nothing but in Spirit and Faith, and ſo he roſe and departed.

Eliz. Sir, God be praiſed, and I thank you for your goodneſs and theirs alſo, and ſo he went away; and upon the Friday next, becauſe ſhe was accuſed, her two Sureties went thither, and were diſcharged.

Elizabeth Lawſon.

Eliz. Lawſon Confeſſor.

IN the Town of Bedfield, and in the County of Suffolk, was dwelling an antient Godly matron, named Elizabeth Lawſon, about the age of ſixty years. This Elizabeth was apprehended as an Heretick by the Conſtables of the ſame Town, named Robert Kitrich, and Thomas Elas, in the year of our Lord 1556. becauſe ſhe would not go to Church to hear Maſs, and receive the Sacrament, and believe in it.

Rob. Kitrich, T. Elas, Perſecutors.

Firſt, they laid her in a Dungeon, and after that ſhe was carried unto Norwich, and from thence to Bury Goal, where at laſt ſhe was condemned to be burnt. In the mean time Sir John Sylliard had her home unto his Houſe, he being High Sheriff that year, where ſhe was hardly kept, and wrapped in Irons, till at length, when they by no means could move her to recant, ſhe was ſent to Priſon again with ſhameful revilings.

Eliz. Lawſon in Priſon two years & three quarters.

Thus ſhe continued in Priſon the ſpace of two years and three quarters. In the mean time there was burnt her Son and many more, whereby ſhe would often ſay; Good Lord, what is the cauſe that I may not yet come to thee with thy Children? Well, good Lord, thy bleſſed will be done, and not mine.

Eliz. Lawſon ſorry that ſhe was not burned.

Not long after this (moſt happily) followed the death of Queen Mary, after whom ſucceeded our Queen that now is. At which time this Elizabeth Lawſon remained yet ſtill in Bury Priſon, till at laſt ſhe was bailed upon Sureties, or elſe ſhe could not be delivered. For ſhe being a condemned perſon, neither the Temporality, nor yet Spiritual Authority would diſcharge her without Sureties.

Eliz. Lawſon bailed upon Sureties in Queen Elizabeths time.

Now ſhe being abroad and her Sureties made afraid by wicked Men, ſaid, they would caſt her again in Priſon, except ſhe would ſee them diſcharged.

Then ſhe got a Supplication to go unto the Queens Majeſty, and came to a friend of hers to have his Counſel therein; who willed her to ſtay a while, becauſe ſhe was old, the days ſhort, and the expences great, and Weather foul (for it was a little before Chriſtmaſs) and to tarry until Summer. In the mean time God brake the bond, and ſhortned her journey; for he took her home to himſelf out of this life in peace. Anno 1558.

This good old Woman, long before ſhe went to Priſon, had the falling ſickneſs, and told a friend of hers, one Simon Harliſton, after ſhe was apprehended, that ſhe never had it more, but lived in good health and joy of heart, through our Lord Chriſt.

Eliz. Lawſon preſerved from perſecution, ended her life in peace.

She had a very unkind Man to her Husband, who while ſhe was in Priſon, ſold away her raiment, and would not help her; and after ſhe was out of Priſon, ſhe returned home unto him, yet would he ſhew her no kindneſs, nor help her neither; and yet the Houſe and Land that he dwelt in he had by her: wherefore as long as ſhe lived, ſhe was found of the Congregation.

Eliz. Lawſon troubled with the falling ſickneſs, after her perſecution never felt it more.

The ſaid Elizabeth Lawſon alſo had a Siſter, Wife to one Robert Hollon in Mickfield in the ſame County of Suffolk, which likewiſe was perſecuted and driven out from Houſe to Houſe, and a young Man her Son with her, becauſe they would not go to the Church to hear Maſs, and receive the Sacrament of the Altar.

Thomas Chriſtenmaſs and William Wats.

T. Chriſtenmaſs, W. Wats.

IN this perillous rage of Queen Maries Reign were two Men perſecuted, one called Thomas Chriſtenmaſs, the other William Wats of Tunbridge in Kent. As theſe travelled from place to place, not reſting two nights together in one place, it happened them on a time to come to Rocheſter in Kent, where as they entring into the Town, even at the Towns end met with a little Damſel of eight years of age, but whither ſhe went, they knew not. It was then night, and they weary, and fain therefore would have lien in the ſame Town, but could not tell where, they feared ſo the bloody Catholicks. At laſt they deviſed to ask the Damſel whether there were any Hereticks in the Town, or no? and ſhe ſaid, Yea. They asked her where. She anſwered them; At ſuch an Inn, telling them the name, and where the Inn was. Shortly after, as they were gone from her, they bethought themſelves better, and God ſo moving their Hearts, they went to the Child again, and asked her how ſhe knew that the Innkeeper (of whom ſhe ſpake before) was an Heretick. Marry, quoth ſhe, well enough, and his Wife alſo. How knoweſt thou, pretty Maiden, ſaid they? I pray thee tell us. How know I, ſaid ſhe? Marry becauſe they go to the Church; and thoſe that will not hold up their hands there, they will preſent them, and he himſelf goeth from Houſe to Houſe, to compel them to come to Church. When theſe two Men heard this, they gave God praiſe, and avoided that Houſe, taking the warning of that Maid (of good bringing up as it ſhould ſeem) to be Gods marvellous providence towards them.

Gods providence upon Thom. Chriſtenmaſs and Wil. Wats.

Another eſcape of William Wats.

THis foreſaid William Wats, dwelling in Queen Maries days at Seal in Kent, the laſt year of her Reign ſave one, was apprehended by his enemies, and brought by the Conſtables before the Biſhop and Juſtices at Tunbridge, where the Biſhop and Juſtices would have perſwaded him all they could, to turn from the truth: howbeit in vain, for they could not remove him, although they ſpent all the forenoon thereabout, with many flattering words; ſo merciful was the Lord unto him.

Wil. Wats another time delivered by the Lords providence. Wil. Wats apprehended and brought before the Biſhop.

Now when dinner time was come, as they ſhould riſe, they committed the Priſoner to the Conſtables again, and ſo roſe up to go to dinner. The Conſtables took Wats, and led him to a Victualling-Houſe, where after they had well filled themſelves, they fell aſleep, ſuppoſing their Priſoner to be ſure enough under their hands. Wats Wife being then in the Houſe with her Husband, and very careful for his well doing, ſeeing the Conſtables thus faſt aſleep, deſired her Husband to depart and go thence, forſomuch as the Lord had made ſuch a way for him. Unto which her words he would not conſent, although ſhe perſwaded him all that ſhe could.

Another notable example of the Lords providence.

At the laſt (they replying one againſt another) a ſtranger heard them, and asked her what the matter was, that ſhe was ſo earneſt with her Husband. The Wife told him. Then ſaid the ſtranger unto Wats theſe words; Father, ther, go thy ways in Gods Name, and tarry no longer: the Lord hath opened the way unto thee. Whereupon the ſaid Wats went his way, and his Wife departed from him, and went home to her Houſe at Seale, thinking her Husband had gone another way. Now as ſhe was going in at her door, telling her Friends of his deliverance, immediately came the ſaid Wats in alſo, and they all being amazed thereat, willed him in all haſt to get him away; for they thought there would be ſearch for him immediately.

Anno 1558.

Wil. Wats delivered out of his enemies hands.

Then Wats ſaid, he would eat meat firſt, and alſo pray; which he did, and afterward departed thence. So ſoon as he was out of the doors, and had hid himſelf in an holly buſh, immediately came the ſaid Conſtables with thirty perſons into the ſaid Houſe to ſearch for him, where they pierced the Featherbeds, broke up his cheſts, and made ſuch havock, that it was wonderful; and ever anon as they were ſearching, the Conſtable cried, I will have Wats, I will have Wats, I tell thee, I will have Wats: but (God be thanked) Wats could not be found. And when they ſaw it booted not to ſearch for him, in the end they took his Wife, and ſet her in a pair of Stocks where ſhe remained two days, and ſhe was very bold in the truth, and at the laſt delivered through the providence of God; whoſe name be glorified in all his works, Amen.

Wil. Wats ſought for again.

W. Wats wife ſet in the Stocks.

John Glover of Manceter Gentleman.

Gods providence in delivering Mr. J. Glover, read before.

WHat a Fatherly and manifeſt providence of the Lord likewiſe did appear in the preſerving of Mr. John Glover, in the Dioceſs of Coventry and Lichfield, in the Town of Manceter, firſt, at the taking of Robert his Brother. At which time although the Commiſſion came down for him, yet ſo God ordered the matter, that his Brother being ſick was apprehended, and yet he being whole eſcaped, whereof mention is made before.

Another narrow eſcape of M. J. Glover, read before.

And again, another time how miraculouſly the merciful providence of the Lord wrought his eſcape out of his enemies hands, they being at his Chamber door, and drawing the latch to ſearch for him; and how his Wife the ſame time was taken and ſent to Lichfield, read before.

One Dabney.

THere was at London a certain honeſt godly perſon, a Painter, Named Dabney, whom John Avales in the time of Queen Mary had brought before Boner to be examined for his Faith. It happened the ſame time, as the ſaid Dabney was there, that the Biſhop was occupied with the Examination of other, ſo that he was bid to ſtand by, and to wait the Biſhops leaſure. Upon the ſame, or not long after, ſuddenly cometh word to the Biſhop to prepare him in all ſpeed, the general Proceſſion tarried for him. The Biſhop hearing that, ſetting all buſineſs apart, buſtleth himſelf with all ſpeed poſſible, to the Church, there to furniſh Proceſſion. By reaſon whereof Dabney, which newly came to the Houſe, was there left alone, while every man elſe was buſied in preparing and ſetting themſelves forward, according as the caſe required.

To be ſhort, as the time called on, Boner with his Houſhold maketh haſt, ſo faſt as they can, out of the doors to the Proceſſion. Dabney being left alone, cometh down to the outward Court next the gate, there walking with himſelf all heavy, looking for nothing leſs than to eſcape that danger. The Porter, who was only left at home, ſeeing the Man to walk alone, ſuppoſing he had been ſome Citizen there left behind, and waiting for opening the gate, went and opened the wicket, asking if he would go out. Yea, ſaid he, with a good will, if ye will let me out. With all my Heart, quoth the Porter, and I pray you ſo do.

Gods ſecret working in the deliverance of Dabney.

And thus the ſaid Dabney taking the occaſion offered of God, being let out by the Porter, eſcaped out of the Wolfs Mouth. The Proceſſion being done, when the Biſhop returned home, Dabney was gone, and could not be found. Whereupon ſearch was made, but eſpecially John Avales laid much privy wait for him; who after long ſearching, when he could not get him, at length received fifteen Crowns of his Wife to let him alone when he ſhould ſee him, and ſo that good Man eſcaped.

Alexander Wimſhurſt.

ALike example of God Almighties goodneſs towards his afflicted Servants in that dangerous time of perſecution, may alſo appear evidently in one Alexander Wimſhurſt a Prieſt ſometime of Magdalen Colledge in Oxford, and then the Popes own Knight, but ſince an earneſt enemy to Antichriſt, and a Man better inſtructed in the true fear of God. It happened that one had promoted him to Boner for Religion, upon what occaſion I do not underſtand. According to the old manner in ſuch caſes provided, he ſent forth Robin Caly, otherwiſe called Robin Papiſt, one of his whelps to bring in the game, and to cauſe this ſilly poor Man to appear before him. Little Robin, like a proper Man, beſtirreth him in his buſineſs, and ſmelleth him out, and when he had gotten him, bringeth him along by Cheapſide, not ſuffering him to talk with any of his acquaintance by the way, though they were of his old friends of Oxford that offered to ſpeak unto him.

Alexander Wimſhurſt, a Miniſter, delivered by Gods providence from his enemies.

Wimſhurſt taken by Robert Caly.

When they came into Pauls, it happened this Alexander to eſpy Doctor Chadſey there walking up and down. To whom, becauſe he was able in ſuch a caſe to do pleaſure, and for that he had been of his old acquaintance in Oxford, he was very deſirous to ſpeak to him ere he went through. Chadſey, perceiving that Robin Caly did attend upon him, ſaid that he durſt not meddle in the matter. Yes (ſaith little Robin) you may talk with him if it pleaſe you Maſter Doctor. To be ſhort, Alexander openeth his caſe, and in the end deſireth, for old acquaintance ſake, that he would find means he might be rather brought before Doctor Martin to be examined, than any other. Nay, ſaith he (alledging the words of Chriſt unto Peter in the laſt chapter of S. John.) You remember, Brother, what is written in the Goſpel; When thou waſt young, thou didſt gird thy ſelf, and wenteſt whither thou wouldeſt: but being aged, other Men ſhall gird thee, and lead thee whither thou wouldeſt not. Thus abuſing the Scripture to his private meaning, whereas notwithſtanding he might eaſily have accompliſhed ſo ſmal a requeſt, if it had liked him.

Wimſhurſt brought to D. Story, and D. Cook, Commiſſioners.

Thence was he carried to Story and Cook Commiſſioners, there to learn what ſhould become of him Before them he did uſe himſelf boldly and ſtoutly, as they on the other ſide did urge him with captious queſtions very cruelly: When they had baited the poor Man their fill, they asked him where his whore was. She is not my whore (ſaid he) but my lawful wife. She is thy whore, ſaid they. She is not my whore (ſaid he again) but my wife, I tell you. So when they perceived that he would not give place unto them, nor attributed to them ſo much as they looked for at his hand, according to the ordinary manner, they commanded him to Priſon. And now mark well the providence of God in his preſervation.

Wimſhurſt commanded to Priſon.

He was brought into Clunies Houſe at Pater-noſter-row, thence to be carried to Lollards Tower out of hand, but that Cluny (as it happened) his wife and his maid were ſo earneſtly occupied about preſent buſineſs, that as then they had not leiſure to lock up their Priſoner. In the Hall where Alexander ſate was a ſtrange Woman, whoſe Husband was then preſently in trouble for Religion, which perceived by ſome one occaſion or other, that this Man was brought in for the like cauſe. Alack good Man, ſaith ſhe, if you will you may eſcape the cruel hands of your enemies, foraſmuch as they be all away that ſhould look unto you. God hath opened the way unto you for a deliverance, and therefore loſe not the opportunity thereof, if you be wiſe. With thoſe and ſuch like words being then perſwaded, he gate out of the doors, and went away without any haſt making at all; ſo that if any had followed, he might have been eaſily recovered again. But undoubtedly, it was Gods will that he ſhould ſo eſcape the fury of his adverſaries, and be preſerved from all dangers of death and impriſonment.

Good counſel ſent of God.

A way made by Gods providence to Alexander Wimſhurſt to eſcape.

Bosomes Wife.

Bosomes wife.

AS the Works of the Lord are not to be kept ſecret, whatſoever the Perſons be in whom it pleaſeth him to work; ſo cometh to remembrance the Story of one Bosomes Wife, not unworthy to be conſidered. This good Woman being at Richmond with her Mother, was greatly called upon, and urged to come to Church. At length, through importunate crying and calling upon, ſhe granted unto them, and came. Being in the Church, and ſitting with her Mother in the Pew, contrary in all things to the doings of the Papiſts, ſhe behaved her ſelf; to wit, when they kneeled, ſhe ſtood, when they turned forward ſhe turned backward, &c.

The behaviour of Bosomes wife in the Church.

Bosomes wife ſummoned to appear at Kingſton.

This being notorious in the Church, at length the Conſtable and Churchwarden, named Sanders, attached her in the Queens Name, charging her with her Mother, the next day to appear at Kingſton. Who, at their command, ſo did.

The next day, according as they were aſſigned, they came to Kingſton to appear before the foreſaid Officers, who at the ſame time (as it chanced) were going over the Ferry, and meeting them by the way, ſaluted them by their names, but at that time had no further power to ſpeak unto them. Afterward, as they were in the Boat going over, they knockt their hands, ſtampt and ſtared, lamenting that they had let them ſo paſs their hands. This the Ferry-man declared unto them, and what they ſaid in the Boat. Whereupon the good Woman taking her Journey to London, eſcaped their cruelty, through the ſecret working (no doubt) of the Lord, who in all his works and evermore be praiſed, Amen.

Bosomes wife through Gods help eſcapeth.

Lady Knevet in Norfolk.

The Lady Anne Knevet.

AMong the number of the godly that were kept under the Providence of the Lord in thoſe perillous days, I may not forget an ancient good Lady of much worſhip, called Lady Anne Knevet, who till her death dwelt in Norfolk, in a Town named Wimondham, ſix miles from Norwich. Which ſaid good Lady in Q. Maries days being judged by the Common People to be more than an hundred years of Age, and by her own eſtimation well toward a hundred, kept her ſelf from their Popiſh Church, or having any Papiſtical Traſh miniſtred in her Houſe, but only the Service that was uſed in the later days of King Edward the ſixth, which daily ſhe had ſaid before her, either by one Mr. Tollin, who was then by Gods Providence preſerved in her Houſe, or elſe by one of her Gentlewomen or Houſhold Servants, that could ſerve the place in the ſaid Mr. Tollins abſence.

Lady Knevet threatned by the Biſhop.

Now this worſhipful Lady continuing in this manner of true ſerving of God, ſhe and her Family were many times threatned by Meſſengers, that the Biſhop would viſit her therefore. Unto which Meſſengers ſhe would always anſwer, That if his Lordſhip ſent word before what day he would come, he would thereafter be entertained at her hand. But God, whoſe Providence ruleth the raging Seas, never ſuffered them all that toiling time to moleſt her: Although oftentimes when ſhe had Service before her, there were very great Enemies to the Truth, and of much Authority, that came in, and kneeled to Prayer among them, and yet had no power to trouble her therefore.

The great Age of the Lady Knevet.

This good Lady (gentle Reader) kept good Hoſpitality, as any in that Country of her living. She alſo ſuccoured many perſecuted that came to her Houſe in the ſaid Queen Maries days. Were they never ſo ſimple, they were eſteemed of her as the Friends of the Goſpel, and departed not from her without mony and meat. Born ſhe was long before King Edward the fourth died, and ended her life in the Lord Jeſus's peace, about the beginning of the ſecond year of our moſt Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeths Reign, as one falling into a moſt ſweet ſleep.

Lady Eliz. Vane a great reliever of Gods people.

Unto whom not unworthily may be compared the Lady Elizabeth Vane, who likewiſe, being a great Harbourer and Supporter of the afflicted Martyrs and Confeſſors of Chriſt, was in great hazards and dangers of the Enemies, and yet notwithſtanding, through the merciful Providence of the Lord, remained ſtill untouched. Of this Lady Vane thou ſhalt read before.

Anno 1558.

John Davis, of the Age of twelve years, and under.

John Davis a Child under the Age of twelve years, caſt to be burned for the ſix Articles, and yet by Gods Providence preſerved.

ANno Dom. 1546. and the laſt year of K. Henry the eighth, John Davis, a Child of twelve years and under, who dwelling in the Houſe of Mr. Johnſon Apothecary, in the Town of Worceſter, his Uncle, uſing ſometimes to read of the Teſtament and other good Engliſh Books, was complained of by Alice Johnſon his Miſtreſs; which Alice being an obſtinate perſon, conſulted with one Thomas Parton, and one Alice, Wife to Nicholas Brook Organmaker, with certain of the Canons, and Mr. Johnſon Chancellor to Dr. Heath their Biſhop. The means whereby he was entrapped was wrought by the foreſaid Alice Brookes, who procured Oliver her Son, Schoolfellow with the ſaid John Davis, to feign Friendſhip with him, and under pretence to be inſtructed to ſee his Engliſh Books, and eſpecially to get ſomething of his writing againſt the ſix Articles. Which being had, was ſoon brought to the Canons of the Church, and the Chancellor. Whereupon Thomas Parton, whether being ſent, or of his own mind, came to apprehend him, and his Uncle was forced againſt his will, to bind the poor Boys Arms behind him; and ſo he was brought to the Officers of the Town, where he lay from the 14*th* of Auguſt, till the laſt of September. Then was he commanded to the Freemans Priſon, where one Richard Howborough, coming to perſwade him from burning, willed him to prove firſt with a Candle: who then holding his finger, and the other a Candle under it a good ſpace, yet (as the party himſelf to me aſſureth) felt no burning thereof, neither would the other that held the Candle believe him a great while, till he had looked, and ſaw no ſcorching of the Candle at all appeared.

Then was the Child removed from thence to an inner Priſon, called Peephole, where the low Bayliff, called Robert Tould, laid upon him a pair of Bolts, ſo that he could not lift up his ſmall Legs, but leaning on a ſtaff, ſlipt them forward upon the ground, the coldneſs of which Irons he feeleth yet in his Ankles, and ſhall ſo long as he liveth: with theſe Bolts his lying was upon the cold ground, having not one lock of Straw nor Cloth to cover him, ſave only two Sheep-skins, neither durſt Father or Mother, or any of his Friends come at him. Beſides this, and many great threats of the Papiſts, there was a mad man put to him in the Priſon, with a Knife about him, wherewith he oft times in his Frantick rage proffered to thruſt him in.

After this came to him one Joyliff and N. Yewer, two Canons, which had his Writings againſt the ſix Articles, and his Ballad, called, Come down for all your ſhaven Crown, to ſee whether he would ſtand to that he had written. Which done, with many great raging words, not long after ſate Mr. Johnſon the Chancellor in the Guildhall upon the poor Lad. Where firſt were brought in his Accuſers and ſworn, then were ſworn alſo twenty four men which went on his Queſt, and found him guilty, but he never came before the Chancellor. Upon this he was ſent to the common Goal among Thieves and Murtherers, there to tarry the coming of the Judges, and ſo to be had ſtrait to Execution. But the mighty mercy of the Lord, who helpeth the deſolate and miſerable when all other help is paſt, ſo provided for this ſilly condemned Lad, that the purpoſe of all his hard-hearted Enemies was diſappointed: For before the Judges came, God took away Henry the eighth out of this life. By reaſon whereof the force of the Law was then ſtaid, howbeit he was nevertheleſs arraigned, being holden up in a mans Arms at the Bar before the Judges, who were Portman and Marven. Which, when they perceived that they could not burn him, would have him preſently whipped. But Mr. Bourne Eſq; declared to the Judges how he had whipping enough. After that he had lain a week more in Priſon, he had him home to his Houſe, his Wife anointed his Legs her ſelf with Ointment, which then were ſtiff and num'd with Irons, till at length when Mr. Bourne and his Wife ſaw they could not win him to the belief of their Sacrament, they put him away, leſt he ſhould infect their Son Anthony, as they thought, with Hereſie.

Thus

Anno 1558.

Thus John Davis of the age aforesaid, in what danger he was for the Gospel ye see, and how the Lord preserved him, ye understand. He endured in Prison from the 14*th* day of August, till within seven days of Easter, who is yet alive, and a profitable Minister this day in the Church of England: Blessed be the Lord, qui facit mirabilia solus.

Mrs. Roberts.

The miraculous deliverance of Mrs. Roberts. This Gentlewoman was ... Sir John Gilford a troubler of Mrs. Roberts.

Furthermore, to both these may be also associate another Gentlewoman, to make the third, named Mrs. Roberts, yet living and dwelling (as I understand) in the Town of Hawkhurst in Sussex. She being earnestly addicted to the truth of Christs Gospel, and no less constant in that which she had learned therein, so kept her self during all the brunt of Q. Maries time, that she never came to their Popish Service, nor would pollute her Conscience with hearing their Idolatrous Mass. There dwelt the same time not far off a Justice, called Sir John Gilford, who using as fervent on the contrary side to set forward the proceedings of Q. Mary, thought to prove masteries with this Gentlewoman, in forcing her into the Church. And first sending his wife, he attempted her by fair words and gentle persuasions to conform her self to the Princes Laws, and to come, as other Christian People did, to the Church. Notwithstanding, she constantly persisting in the sincerity of the Truth, would by no perswasions be won to do therein against her Conscience; and so kept at home a certain space, till again the second time, Mr. Gilford thinking not to give her over so, sent his Officers and Servants to her, by force and power to hale her out of her House to the Church, and so did. Where by the way, she for grief of Conscience swouned, and so of necessity was brought home again, and falling into an Ague, was for that time dispensed withal.

The third time, yet the unquiet spirit of Mr. Gilford being not content, after the time that she recovered health again, he would needs come in his own person to compel her, wild she, nild she, to the Church. But (as the Proverb goeth) Who can let that God would have done? For when Mr. Gilford had purposed as pleased him, the Lord so disposed for his Servant, that as the said Mr. Gilford was coming up the stairs toward her Chamber, suddenly his old Disease the Gout so took him, and terribly tormented him, that he could go no further: And so he, that purposed to carry her to the Church against her will, was fain himself to be carried home to his House to his pain; protesting and swearing that he would never from henceforth trouble that Gentlewoman more, and no more he did.

Sir John Gilford stopped of his purpose by Gods working.

Mrs. Anne Lacy.

Mrs. Anne Lacy.

IN the number of good Gentlewomen being in trouble and danger for Gods Word, is not to be omitted the memory of one Mrs. Anne Lacy widow in Nottinghamshire, who was in great danger in Q. Maries time, insomuch that the Process was forth against her, and she ready to have been apprehended, being so nearly pursued, that she was driven to hide her Bible and other Books in a Dunghil. Mr. Lacy her Brother was then Justice of Peace: but to whom (as I have heard) she was but smally beholden. Nevertheless, where Kindred faileth, yet Gods Grace never faileth such as stick to him; for in this mean time, as the Process came out against her, Q. Mary died, and so she escaped.

Crosman's Wife.

Crosman's wife, Barber of Tibnam, Constable, Persecutor. Example of Gods gracious Providence.

ONe Crosman's Wife of Tibnam Longrow in Norfolk, in Q. Maries time, for not going to Church, was sought for at her House by one Barber of the said Town, then Constable of the Hundred, who when he came to her House, she being at home with a Child sucking in her Arms, stept into a corner on the one side of the Chimney, and they seeking the Chambers the Child never cried (although before they came it did) as long as they were there, and so by this means the Lord preserved her.

The Congregation at Stoke in Suffolk.

The story of a Congregation at Stoke in Suffolk.

THere was some likewise which avoided the violent rage of the Adversaries by means only of their number, and mutual concord in godliness, wherein they did so hold together, that without much ado none well could be troubled: whereof we have an example in a certain Town of Suffolk called Stoke. After the three sharp years of Q. Maries Persecution being past, yet notwithstanding the Inhabitants of the Town aforesaid, especially the women, came not to their Church to receive, after the Popish manner, the Sacrament. Who, if they had been but few, they could by no means have escaped Imprisonment. But because there were so many, the Papists thought it not best to lay hands upon them. Only they appointed them sixteen days respite after Easter, wherein as many as would, should receive the Sacrament; those that would not, should stand to the peril that would follow. Of this Company, which were many, giving their hands together, the chiefest doers were these:

Eve, an old woman of 60. years.
Alice Coker her daughter.
Elizabeth Foxe.
Agnes Cutting.
Alice Spencer.
Henry Canker.
Joan Fouke.
Agnes Spaulding.
John Steyre and his Brother.
John Foxe.
} Confessors.

These, after the order was taken for their not coming to the Church, took advisement among themselves what was best to be done, and at length concluded by promise one to another, that they would not receive at all. Yet some of them afterward, being perswaded with fair promises that the Communion should be ministred unto them according to K. Edwards Book, gate them unto the Parish Priest (whose name was Cotes) and asked him after which sort he would minister the Sacrament. He answered to such as he favoured, that he would give it after the right sort; the rest should have it after the Papistical manner.

Cotes Parish Priest at Stoke.

To be short, none did communicate so, but only John Steyre and John Foxe; of which the one gave his Wife leave to do as she thought best. The other went about with threats to compel his Wife, saying, that otherwise he would divorce himself from her. As for the rest, they did withdraw themselves from Church, resorting to their wonted Company. Only Foxes Wife tarried still at home, all in her dumps and heaviness, whose Husband practised with the Curate in the mean time, that the next day after he should give her the Sacrament, which was the 17. day after Easter. But the very same day, unknowing unto her Husband, she gate her self secretly to her Company, and with tears declared how violently her Husband had dealt with her. The other women bade her notwithstanding to be of a good cheer, and said that they would make their earnest Prayers unto the Lord, both for her and her Husband, and indeed when they had so done, the matter took very good success. For the next day after Goodman Foxe came of his own accord unto them, a far other man than he was before, and bewailed his own headiness and rashness, praying them that they would forgive him, promising ever after to be more strong in faith, to the great rejoycing both of them and his Wife.

John Steyre and John Foxe revolted.

The Christian Constancy of Elizabeth Foxe.

The effect of Christian Prayer.

John Foxe recovered again to the Truth by Prayer.

About half a year after this, the Bishop of Norwich sendeth forth certain of his Officers or Apparators thither, which gave them warning every one to come to the Church the next Sunday following. If they would not come, they should appear before the Commissary out of hand, to render account of their absence. But the women having secret knowledge of this before, kept themselves out of the way for the nonce, to avoid the summons or warning. Therefore when they were not at the Church at the day appointed, the Commissary did first suspend them, according to the Bishop of Romes Law, and within three weeks after did excommunicate them. Therefore when they perceived that an Officer of the Town was set to take some of them, they conveighing themselves privily out of the Town, escaped all danger.

The women of Stoke summoned by the Bishop.

How the women of Stoke escaped.

The Congregation in London.

The preſervation of the Congregation at London.

NO leſs marvellous was the preſervation of the Congregation in London, which from the firſt beginning of Queen Mary, to the later end thereof, continued, notwithſtanding whatſoever the malice, device, ſearching and inquiſition of men, or ſtrictneſs of Laws could work to the contrary. Such was the merciful hand of the Lord, according to his accuſtomed goodneſs, ever working with his People. Of this great bountiful goodneſs of the Lord, many and great examples appeared in the Congregation which now I ſpeak of. How oft, and in what great danger did he deliver them?

The Congregation at Mr. Cardens Houſe.

Firſt, At the Black-Friers, when they ſhould have reſorted to Sir Thomas Cardens houſe, privy watch was laid for them, but yet through the Lords vigilant Providence the miſchief was prevented, and they delivered.

The Congregation again delivered.

Again, How narrowly did they eſcape about Algate, where Spies were laid for them? and had not Thom. Simſon the Deacon eſpied them, and bid them diſperſe themſelves away, they had been taken. For within two hours the Conſtable coming to the Houſe after they were gone, demanded of the Wife what Company had been there. To whom ſhe, to excuſe the matter, made anſwer again, ſaying, That half a dozen good Fellows had been there at breakfaſt, as they went a Maying.

The Congregation again delivered.

Another time alſo about the great Conduit, they paſſing there through a very ſtrait Alley, into a Clothworkers loft, were eſpied, and the Sheriffs ſent for: but before they came, they having privy knowledge thereof, immediately ſhifted away out of the Alley, John Aveles ſtanding alone in the Mercers Chappel ſtaring at them.

The Congregation in a Ship at Billingſgate.

Another like eſcape they made in a Ship at Billingſgate, belonging to a certain good man of Ley, where in the open ſight of the People they were congregated together, and yet through Gods mighty Power eſcaped.

The Congregation in a Ship betwixt Ratcliff and Redriff.

Betwixt Ratcliff and Redriff, in a Ship called Jeſus Ship, twice or thrice they aſſembled, having there cloſely, after their accuſtomed manner, both Sermon, Prayer, and Communion, and yet through the protection of the Lord they returned, although not uneſpied, yet untaken.

The Congregation in a Coopers Houſe in Pudding lane.

Moreover, in a Coopers Houſe in Pudding Lane, ſo near they were to perils and dangers, that John Aveles coming into the Houſe where they were, talked with the Goodman of the Houſe, and after he had asked a queſtion or two, departed; God ſo working that either he had no knowledge of them, or no power to apprehend them.

The Congregation in a Houſe in Thames-ſtreet.

But they never eſcaped more hardly, than once in Thames-ſtreet in the night time, where the Houſe being beſet with Enemies, yet, as the Lord would, they were delivered by the means of a Mariner, who being at that preſent in the ſame Company, and ſeeing no other way to avoid, pluckt off his ſlops and ſwam to the next Boat, and ſo rowed the Company over, uſing his ſhoes in ſtead of Oars, and ſo the jeopardy was diſpatched.

I have heard of one, who being ſent to them to take their Names, and to eſpy their doings; yet being in amongſt them, was converted, and cried them all mercy.

Another notable example of Gods merciful Providence.

What ſhould I ſpeak of the extream and preſent danger which that goodly Company was in at the taking of Mr. Rough their Miniſter, and Cuthert Symſon their Deacon, had not the Lords Providence given knowledge before to Mr. Rough in his ſleep, that Cuthert Symſon ſhould leave behind him at home the Book of all their Names, which he was wont to carry about with him; whereof mention is made before.

The Miniſters of this Congregation.

In this Church or Congregation there were ſometime forty, ſometimes an hundred, ſometimes two hundred, ſometimes more, and ſometimes leſs. About the later time of Queen Mary it greatly increaſed. From the firſt beginning, which was about the firſt entry at Q. Maries reign, they had divers Miniſters; firſt Mr. Scamier, then Tho. Foule, after him Mr. Rough, then Mr. Auguſtine Bernher, and laſt Mr. Bentham. Concerning the deliverance of which Mr. Bentham (being now Biſhop of Coventry and Lichfield) Gods mighty Providence moſt notably is to be conſidered. For how is it poſſible, by mans eſtimation, for the ſaid Mr. Bentham to have eſcaped, had not the preſent power of the Lord, paſſing all mens expectation, been preſt and ready to help his Servant in ſuch a ſtreight. The ſtory and caſe is this.

A Story of Mr. Bentham.

At what time the ſeven laſt burned in Smithfield, mentioned in this Book before, were condemned and brought to the Stake to ſuffer, came down in the name of the King and Queen a Proclamation, being twice pronounced openly to the People, firſt at Newgate, then at the Stake where they ſhould ſuffer, ſtreightly charging and commanding, that no man ſhould either pray for them, or ſpeak to them, or once ſay God help them. Anno 1558.

The Queens Proclamation, no man to pray for the Martyrs, nor to ſpeak unto them.

It was appointed before of the godly there ſtanding together, which was a great Multitude, that ſo ſoon as the Priſoners ſhould be brought, they ſhould go to them to embrace and to comfort them, and ſo they did. For as the ſaid Martyrs were coming towards the place in the Peoples ſight, being brought with Bills and Gleeves (as the cuſtom is) the godly Multitude and Congregation with a general ſway made toward the Priſoners, in ſuch manner, that the Bill-men and the other Officers, being all thruſt back, could nothing do, nor any thing come nigh. So the godly People meeting and embracing, and kiſſing them, brought them in their arms (which might as eaſily have conveighed them clean away) unto the place where they ſhould ſuffer.

The Congregation embracing the Martyrs contrary to the Proclamation.

This done, and the People giving place to the Officers, the Proclamation with a loud voice was read to the People, containing (as is before ſaid) in the King and Queens Name, that no man ſhould pray for them, or once ſpeak a word unto them, &c. Mr. Bentham the Miniſter then of the Congregation, not ſparing for that, but as Zeal and Chriſtian Charity moved him, and ſeeing the fire ſet to them, turning his eyes to the People, cried and ſaid, We know they are the People of God, and therefore we cannot chuſe but wiſh to them, and ſay, God ſtrengthen them: and ſo boldly he ſaid, Almighty God, for Chriſts ſake ſtrengthen them. With that all the People with a whole conſent and one voice followed and ſaid, Amen, Amen. The noiſe whereof was ſo great, and the cries thereof ſo many, that the Officers could not tell what to ſay, or whom to accuſe. And thus much concerning the Congregation of the Faithful aſſembling together at London in the time of Queen Mary.

Mr. Bentham Miniſter of the Congregation.

Mr. Bentham ſpeaketh and prayeth for the Martyrs without danger.

Another delivery of Mr. Bentham out of great peril.

The ſaid M. Bentham another time, as he paſſed through S. Katherines, intending to walk and take the Air abroad, was inforced by two or three men, approaching upon him, needs to go with them to a place, whither they would lead him. Mr. Bentham aſtonied at the ſuddenneſs of the matter, and marvelling what the thing ſhould be, required what their purpoſe was, or whither they would have him. They anſwered, that by the occaſion of a man there found drowned, the Coroners Queſt was called and charged to ſit upon him, of the which Queſt he muſt of neceſſity be one, &c. He again loth to meddle in the matter, excuſed himſelf, alledging that in ſuch kind of matters he had no skill, and leſs experience; if it would pleaſe them to let him go, they ſhould meet with other more meet for their purpoſe. But when with this they would not be ſatisfied, he alledged further, that he was a Scholar of Oxford, and thereby was priviledged from being of any Inqueſt. The Coroner demanded the ſight of his Priviledge. He ſaid, if he would give him leave, he would fetch it. Then ſaid the Coroner, the Queen muſt be ſerved without all delay, and ſo conſtrained him notwithſtanding to be with them in hearing the matter.

Mr. Bentham forced againſt his will to ſit in the Coroners Office.

Being brought to the Houſe where the Coroner and the reſt of the Queſt were ſitting, as the manner is, a Book was offered to him to ſwear upon. Mr. Bentham opening the Book, and ſeeing it was a Papiſtical Primer, refuſed to ſwear thereupon, and declared moreover what Superſtition in the Book was contained. What? ſaid the Coroner; I think we ſhall have here an Heretick among us. And upon that, after much reaſoning amongſt them, he was committed to the cuſtody of an Officer till further examination: by occaſion whereof, to all mens reaſon, hard it had been and inevitable for Mr. Bentham to have eſcaped, had not the Lord helped where man was not able. What followed? Incontinent as they were thus contending and debating about matters of Hereſie, ſuddenly cometh the Coroner of the Admiralty, diſannulling and repealing the order and calling of that Inqueſt, for that it was (as he ſaid) pertaining to his Office; and therefore the other Coroner and his Company in that place had nothing to do. And ſo the firſt Coroner was diſcharged and diſplaced; by reaſon whereof M. Bentham eſcaped their hands, having no more ſaid unto him.

Mr. Bentham refuſeth to ſwear upon a Popiſh Primer.

Means wrought whereby Mr. Bentham eſcaped.

Anno 1558.

Engliſhmen preſerved at the taking of Calice.

Engliſhmen at Calice preſerved.

THe worthy works of the Lords mercy toward his people be manifold, and cannot be comprehended, ſo that who is he living in the earth almoſt who hath not experienced the helping hand of the Lord at ſome time or other upon him? Amongſt many other, what a piece of Gods tender providence was ſhewed of late upon our Engliſh Brethren and Countrimen, what time Calice was taken by the Tyrant Guiſe, a cruel enemy both to Gods truth and our Engliſh Nation? And yet by the gracious proviſion of the Lord, few or none at all, of ſo many that favored Chriſt and his Goſpel, in that terrible time miſcarried. In the number of whom there was a godly couple, one John Thorp and his Wife, which feared the Lord, and loved his truth: who being ſick the ſame time, and caſt out in the wild fields, harbourleſs, deſolate, and deſpairing of all hope of life, having their young Infant moreover taken from them in the ſaid fields, and carried away of the Souldiers; yet the Lord ſo wrought, that the poor Woman, being almoſt paſt recovery of Life, was ſet and carried the ſpace well nigh of a mile, by ſtrangers whom they never knew, into a village, where both ſhe was recovered for that night, and alſo the next day coming toward England, they chanced into the ſame Inn at the next Town, where they found their young Child ſitting by the fire ſide.

Edward Benet.

A Story of Ed. Benet now dwelling in S. Brides Pariſh.

ONe Edward Benet about the ſecond year of the Raign of Queen Mary, then dwelling at Queenhithe with one Grymocke a Baker, was deſired of one Tingle Priſoner then in Newgate, to bring him a New Teſtament. He procuring one of Maſter Coverdales tranſlation, wrapt it in a handkerchief, ſaying to George the Keeper, which asked him what he had, that it was a piece of poudred beef. Let me ſee it, ſaid he. Perceiving what it was, he brought him to Sir Roger Cholmley, who examined him why he did ſo, ſaying that Book was not lawful, and ſo committed him to the Compter in Wood ſtreet, where he continued 25. weeks.

Ed. Benet 25. weeks in the Counter, for bringing a New Teſtament to Tingle. Which after died in Priſon, and was buried on a dunghil. D. Stories words to Ed. Benet.

Doctor Story coming to the Priſon to examine other Priſoners, this Benet looking out at the grate, ſpake to him, deſiring him to be good unto him, and to help him out; for he had lien long in Priſon. To whom D. Story then anſwering; What, ſaid he, waſt thou not before me in Chriſts Church? Yes forſooth, ſaid Benet. Ah, ſaid Story, thou doſt not believe in the Sacrament of the Altar? Marry I will help thee out; Come, ſaid he to the Keeper, turn him out, I will help him: and ſo took Benet with him, and brought him to Cluny in Pater-noſter-row, and bade him bring him to the Colehouſe, and there he was in the Stocks a week.

Ed. Benet brought to Boner, and examined.

Then the Biſhop ſent for him to talk with him, and firſt asked him if he were ſhriven? No, ſaid Benet He asked him if he would be ſhriven? No, ſaid he. Then he asked him if the Prieſt could take away his Sins. No, ſaid Benet, I do not ſo believe. Then he and Harpsfield laughed at him, and mocked him, asking him if he did not believe that whatſoever the Prieſt here bound in earth, ſhould be bound in Heaven, and whatſoever he looſeth in earth, ſhould be looſed in Heaven. No, quoth Benet: But I believe that the Miniſter of God preaching Gods Word truly, and miniſtring the Sacraments according to the ſame, whatſoever he bindeth in earth, ſhould be bound in Heaven, and whatſoever he looſeth, &c. Then the Biſhop, putting him aſide, ſaid he ſhould go to Fulham and be whipped.

Then came to him M. Buſwell a Prieſt, lying in the Colehouſe in the Stocks, and brought Cranmers recantation, ſaying, that he had recanted. My Faith, ſaith the other, lyeth in no Mans Book, but in him which hath redeemed me. The next Saturday, Benet with five other was called for to come to Maſs in the Chappel. The Maſs being done, and they coming out, five of them went to Priſon, and were after burned. Benet being behind, and coming toward the gate, the Porter, opening to a company going out, asked if there were no Priſoners there. No, ſaid they. Benet ſtanding in open ſight before him, with other ſerving-men which were there by reaſon that Boner made many Prieſts that day (having one of his ſleeves and half the forepart of his coat burned off in Priſon, being more like a Priſoner than any of the other) when the gates were opened, went out amongſt them, and ſo eſcaped.

How Edw. Benet eſcaped out of the Biſhops Houſe.

Another eſcape of Ed. Benet.

Eight of the 24. taken at Iſlington, eſcaped, and how: Good warning ſent of God.

Again, in the laſt year of Queen Mary, the ſame Benet being taken again with the 24. beyond Iſlington, and brought to Sir Roger Cholmleys, the people coming very thick did cut off ſome of them, to the number of 8. which were behind, among whom was Benet. Then he knocked at the gate to come in, the Porter ſaid, that he was none of the company. He ſaid, Yes, and knocked again. Then there ſtood one by of the Congregation, named Johnſon, dwelling now at Hammerſmith, which ſaid; Edward, thou haſt done well, do no tempt God: go thy way. And ſo he taking the warning as ſent of God, with a quiet Conſcience eſchued burning.

Jeffery Hurſt Brother in law to George Marſh the Martyr.

The Story of Jeffery Hurſt dwelling in the Town of Shakerly In the Pariſh of Leaght.

IN the Town of Shakerley in Lancaſhire dwelled one Jeffery Hurſt the Son of an honeſt yeoman, who had beſides him eleven Children, the ſaid Jeffery being the twelfth and eldeſt of the reſt: and for that their Father was willing to bring them up, ſo that they ſhould be able another day to help themſelves, he did bind this Jeffery prentice unto the craft of nailing, to make all kind of nails, which occupation he learned, and ſerved out the time of 7. years. The which years being expired, he gave himſelf at times to learn of his other Brethren which went to ſchool: and as he was very willing to the ſame, ſo God ſent him knowledge; wherein he did perſevere and go forwards in ſuch ſort that he could write and read indifferently, and in longer continuance came by more knowledge, and ſo having the Bible and divers other Books in his Houſe, did come by pretty knowledge in the Scripture. After this he took unto him a Wife being the Siſter of M. George Marſh, of whoſe Martyrdom mention is made before, and being much familiar with him, did mend his knowledge not a little. Now when Queen Mary was entred, the firſt year of her Reign he kept himſelf away from their doings and came not at the Church: Whereupon he was laid in wait for, and called Heretick, and Lollard, and ſo for fear of further danger he was compelled to leave his Wife and Child, and all, and fled into Yorkſhire, and there being not known did lead his life, returning ſometimes, by night to his Houſe to comfort his Wife, and bringing with him ſome Preacher or other, who uſed to Preach unto them ſo long as the time would ſerve, and ſo departed by night again The names of the Preachers were M. Reneſes, M. Beſt, M. Brodbanke, M. Ruſſel, and every time they came thither they were about 20. or 24. ſometimes, but 16. at leaſt, who had there alſo ſometimes a Communion. And thus in much fear did he with other lead his life, till the laſt year of the Reign of Queen Mary. Then it chanced that the ſaid Jeffery Hurſt, after the death of his Father, came home and kept himſelf cloſe for ſeven or eight weeks.

Jeffery Hurſt leaveth wife, child and houſe for perſecution.

Preachers uſing to Jeffery Hurſts Houſe, and to Preach.

There dwelt not far off, at Morleſs, a certain Juſtice of Peace, and of quorum, named Maſter Thomas Lelond, who hearing of him, appointed a time to come to his Fathers Houſe where he then dwelt, to rifle the Houſe for Books, and to ſearch for him alſo, and ſo did. Jeffery and his company having knowledge of his coming, took the Books which were in the Houſe, as the Bible, the Communion Book, and the New Teſtament of Tindals Tranſlation, and divers others, and threw them all underneath a tub or fat, conveighing alſo the ſaid Jeffery under the ſame, with a great deal of ſtraw underneath him: for as it chanced they had the more time, becauſe that when the Juſtice came almoſt to the door, he ſtayd and would not enter the Houſe till he had ſent for Hurſts Mothers Landlady, Mrs Shakerley; and then with her conſent intended to go forwards. In the mean time, Jeffery by ſuch as were with him, was willed to lay in his window the Teſtament of Tindals Tranſlation, and a little Book containing the third part of the Bible, with the Book of Eccleſiaſticus, to try what they would ſay unto them.

M. T. Lelond Juſtice of Peace at Morleſs, in Lancaſhire, a cruel perſecutor.

Jeffery Hurſt conveighed under a dry fat.

Miſtreſs Shakerley, Hurſts Landlady.

This done, Miſtreſs Shakerley came. Unto whom eſtſoons the Juſtice declared the cauſe of his coming, and how he was ſorry to attempt any ſuch thing againſt any of her Tenants for her sake,but notwithstanding he must needs execute his Office. And again you must (said he) note this, that a scabbed Sheep is able to infect a great number; and especially having, as he hath,so many Brethren and Sisters, he is able to marr them all,if he be not looked unto in time. And thus concluding, M. Lelond entred into the House,and being come in,set himself in a chair in the middle of the House; and finding Sir Ralph Parkinson his Priest, and one of his Men, and one of Mistress Shakerleyes Men about the House,to search and rifle the chests for Books (which so did) in the mean time he talked with Hursts Mother, being of the age almost of 60. years: And chiding with her that she would suffer her Son so to order and behave himself like an Heretick,said; Thou old fool,I know my self that this new learning shall come again; but for how long; even for three Months or four Months, and no longer. But I will lay thee old fool in Lancaster Dungeon for this gear, and well worthy.

M. Lelond entreth to fear the Hursts House. Ralph Parkinson a popish persecuting Priest.

The Papists follow false prophesies of the Gospel to come again after 4 Months

Now as concerning the searchers, they found nothing but Latin Books, as Grammar, and such like. These be not they that we look for (said they) we must see further, and so looked into Hursts Chamber, where they found the foresaid Books. Then Sir Ralph taking up the Testament, lookt on it,and smiled. His Master seeing that, said,Now Sir Ralph,what have we here? Forsooth,saith he,a Testament of Tindals Translation,plain Heresie,and none worse than it. Then is all their goods,saith he,lost to the Queen, and their Bodies to Prison, and was wonderfully hasty; notwithstanding through Mistress Shakerly, for a space, he was content to see farther.

The New Testament of Tindals Translation made Heresie. Search made for Hurst and his Sister Alice.

Then the Priest looked on the other Book. What say ye to that Sir Ralph? is that as evil as the other? No, said he, but it is not good that they should have such English Books to look on; for this and such others may do much harm. Then he asked his Mother where her eldest Son was,and her daughter Alice? She answered she could not tell; they were not with her of long time before. And he swore by Gods Body, he would make her tell where they were, or he would lay her in Lancaster Dungeon; and yet he would have them notwithstanding too. To be short,for fear,he had his Brother J. Hurst and his Mother bound in an hundred pound to bring the parties before him within fourteen days, and so departed he, and the Priest put both the Books in his bosom, and carried them away with him. Then John Hurst went after them,desiring that he might have the Book which the Priest found no fault with;but he said, they should answer to them both,and which soever was the better, was not good.

The old mother threatned to go to Lancaster Castle. Hursts mother & brother bound in a 100. pound for his forth coming.

As this past on, when the time was come that Jeffery Hurst and his Sister should be examined, the Justice sent for them betimes in the morning,and had prepared a Mass to begin withal,asking Jeffery Hurst if he would first go and see his Maker, and then he would talk further with him. To whom when Jeffery answered and said; Sir, my Maker is in Heaven, and I am assured in going to your Mass I shall find no edification thereby;and therefore I pray you hold me excused.

Master Lelonds Maker. Talk between Jeffery Hurst and the Justice. Jeffery Hurst denieth to come to Mass.

Well, well, said he,I perceive I shall find you an Heretick, by God; but I will go to Mass,and I will not lose it for all your pratling. Then into his Chappel he went, and when Mass was done he sent for them, and caused his Priest to read a scrole unto them as concerning the seven Sacraments; and ever as he spake of the Body and Blood of Christ, he put off his Cap,and said; Loe ye may see, you will deny these things, and care not for your Prince;but you shall feel it ere I have done with you, and all the faculty of you,with other talk more between them,I know not what; but in the end they were licensed to depart under Sureties to appear again before him within three weeks, and then to go to Lancaster. Howbeit,in the mean while it so pleased God, that within four days of the day appointed, it was noised that the Queen was dead, and within fourteen days after the said Jeffery Hurst had sent home his two Books, and nothing was said unto him.

Examination after Mass.

J. Hurst and Alice his sister let go under sureties.

John Hurst by the Death of Q. Mary released.

It followed after this that Gods Word begun to take place,and the Queens Visitors came down into that Country, who did chuse four Men in the Parish, to wit Simon Smith, Jeffery Hurst, Henry Brown, George Eccersly, which four were Protestants, to see the Queens proceedings to take place;which according to their power did the same,notwithstanding it did little prevail:and therefore the said Jeffery being sore grieved with the Office, fell sick,in which sickness it pleased God to call him, making a very Godly end, God have the praise for it.

J. Hurst in Q. Elizabeths time put in Authority to see the proceeding of Religion.

Anno 1558.

Now to return to the foresaid Thomas Lelond again, he continuing in his Office still, did very few times come to the Church, but said he was aged, and might not labour,and there kept with him Sir Ralph Parkinson his Priest,which could (as it was said) minister the Communion unto the people, and sing Mass unto his Master: yes, and (as the same reported) did a prettier feat than all that; for he begat two Children by a Servant in a House, his Master knowing it, and saying nothing, for that he would not lose his good Mass-Priest.

Tho. Lelond the Popish Justice would not come to the Church in Q. Elizabeths time, and yet continued Justice still. A [illegible] Father of [illegible] Popish Church.

Furthermore, this was noted in the same Justice Lelonds behaviour at Service time, that he had a little dog which he would play with all Service time, and the same dog had a collar full of bells, so that the noise of them did molest and trouble others, as well as himself, from hearing the Service. Also in the same Justice it was noted and observed,that as he sate in his Chappel at Service time, his manner was on a Willow bark to knit knots, for that he could not be suffered to have his Beads, and to put the same upon a string also. Witness hereof Edward Hurst, with others.

Note a Catholick knack of a Popish Justice.

Furthermore, as concerning Henry Brown one of the four chosen Men above mentioned,this is also to be added, that the said Henry Brown dwelling in the Town of Pinnington in the same Parish, Anno 1564. had a little Boy, who as he was playing in the Town, one Glaves Wife gave unto the Boy a pair of Beads made of wood, for him to play withal. The little Boy, being glad thereof to have such a trim thing, went home and shewed his Father of them. His Father seeing the Beads, took them and burned them, and when he had so done, went forth and asked who had given unto his little Boy that pair of Beads.

The trouble & escape of Henry Brown out of his Enemies hands.

That did I, said Glaves Wife.

Well, said he, I have burned them.

Hast thou so, said she? and thrust him from her. They shall be the dearest Beads that ever thou sawest, and incontinent went and complained unto the said Justice, how Brown had burned her Beads.

Glaves Wife maintainer of Popery, & a persecutor.

This matter the Justice took sore to snuff,and was very angry,and did direct his Letter unto the Constables of the same Town, by his own hand subscribed; the title of which superscription on the backside was this, To the Constables of Pinnington give this.

Justice Lelond writeth to the Constables, to apprehend Henry Brown.

This done, the Constables according to this their charge did bring him afore the Justice at the time appointed;and when the Justice came to talk with him,he was in such a heat,that he called him Thief, and said that he had robbed his neighbour in burning of her Beads, and that there was Rings and other Jewels on them, and that he might as well have picked her purse; wherefore (said he) I will lay thee in Lancaster Dungeon for this gear.

Henry Brown troubled for burning of beads in Q. Elizabeths time.

Whilst they were thus talking, there came all his Servants about them from their work, saying; Is this Master Doctor Brown that will burn Beads? I pray you Sir, let us have him here and preach. I will give you a quarters wages, saith one; and I will give money saith another, and he shall be Master Doctor, with much derision and scoffing at this poor Man.

Like Master like Men.

He hearing this, spake again boldly, and said;Did you send for me to make a laughingstock of me? You be in Office,and ought rather to come to the Church,and see such Papistry abolished your self, than thus to trouble me for doing my duty: but I tell you plainly,that you do not come to Church as you ought to do,and therefore with more things that I have to charge you withal,I say you do not well. When all this misdemeanour of the Justice laid to his charge would not prevail, and also witness came in of the Papists which did know the Beads, and testified that they were plain,and cost but a half penny, he then went into his parlour in a chafe, and one Master Exberston a Papist with him; which Exberston turned back,and said, Is it you Henry Brown, that keepeth this stir? you are one of them that pulled down Crosses in the Church, and pulled down the Rood sollar, and all the Saints;

A lamentable thing when such Justices bear rule over Christian Congregations.

you

Anno 1558.

you were beſt now to go paint a black Devil, and ſet him up and worſhip him, for that will ſerve well for your Religion. And thus under ſuretiſhip he did depart till July following, and then he ſaid he ſhould go to Lancaſter Priſon, and ſo came he away.

Henry Brown under ſureties diſmiſſed for a time.

The time drew on that he ſhould appear, but God ſtaid the matter, and in July, as the foreſaid Thomas Lenold ſate in his chair talking with his friends, he fell down ſuddenly dead, not much moving any joint: And thus was his end; from ſuch God us defend.

The puniſhment of Gods ſtroke upon an obſtinate perſecutor.

William Wood of Kent.

Examination of W. Wood.

THe Examination of William Wood Baker, dwelling in the Pariſh of Strowd, in the County of Kent, before Doctor Kenall Chancellor of the Dioceſs of Rocheſter, Doctor Chadſey, the Major of Rocheſter, and M. Robinſon the Scribe, the 19. day October and in the ſecond year of Q. Mary, in S. Nicholas Church in Rocheſter.

W. Wood charged for not coming to Church.

M. Robinſon. Will. Wood, you are preſented, becauſe you will not come to the Church, nor receive the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar. How ſay you? have you received, or have you not?

Wood. I have not received it, nor dare I receive it, as you now miniſter it.

Kenal. Thou Heretick, what is the cauſe that thou haſt not received the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar? and at this word all they put off their caps and made low obeiſance.

Three cauſes why Wil. Wood durſt not receive the Sacrament of the Altar.

Wood. There be three cauſes that make my Conſcience afraid that I dare not receive it. The firſt, Chriſt did deliver it to his twelve Apoſtles and ſaid, Take, eat, and drink ye all of this, &c. and ye eat and drink up all alone. The ſecond cauſe is; you hold it to be worſhipped, contrary to Gods Commandment, Thou ſhalt not bow down nor worſhip. The third cauſe is; you miniſter it in a ſtrange Tongue, contrary to S. Pauls Doctrine, I had rather have five words with underſtanding, than ten thouſand with Tongues: by reaſon whereof the people be ignorant of the death of Chriſt.

Kenall. Thou Heretick, wilt thou have any plainer words then theſe, Hoc eſt corpus meum? Take, eat, this is my Body? Wilt thou deny the Scripture?

Wood. I will not deny the holy Scriptures, God forbid, but with my heart I do faithfully believe them. S. Paul. ſaith, God calleth thoſe things that are not, as though they were: and Chriſt ſaith, I am a vine: I am a dore. S. Paul ſaith, The rock is Chriſt: All which are figurative ſpeeches, wherein one thing is ſpoken, and another thing is underſtood.

Robinſon. You make a very long talk of this matter: Learn, Wood, learn.

Kenall. Nay, theſe Hereticks will not learn: Look how this Heretick glorieth in himſelf: Thou fool, art thou wiſer than the Queen and her Council, and all the learned Men of this Realm?

Wood. And pleaſe you, M. Chancellor, I think you would be loath to have ſuch glory, to have your life and goods taken away, and to be thus called upon, as you rail upon me. But the Servant is not greater than his Maſter. And where you do mock me, and ſay that I am wiſer than the Queen and her Council, S. Paul ſaith, The wiſdom of the wiſe of this World is fooliſhneſs before God, and he that will be wiſe in this World, ſhall be accounted but a fool.

Kenell. Doſt not thou believe that after theſe words ſpoken by a Prieſt, Hoc eſt corpus meum, This is my Body, there remaineth no more Bread and Wine, but the very Fleſh and Blood of Chriſt, as he was born of the Virgin Mary, really and ſubſtantially, in quantity, and quality as he did hang upon the Croſs?

Wood. I pray you, M. Chancellor, give me leave, for my learning, to ask you one queſtion, and I will anſwer you after.

Kenall. It is ſome wiſe queſtion, I warrant you.

Ezek. 5. Wil. Woods queſtion propounded to the Doctors.

Wood. God ſpake to the Prophet Ezekiel, ſaying, Thou Son of Man, take a Raſor, and ſhave off the hair of thy Head and of thy Beard, and take one part and caſt into the air, take the ſecond part and put it into thy coat lap, and take the third part and caſt it into the Fire: and this is Jeruſalem. I pray you M. Chancellor, was this hair that the Prophet did caſt into the Fire, or was it Jeruſalem.

Kenall: It did ſignifie Jeruſalem.

Wood. Even ſo this word of Chriſt, This is my Body, is not to be underſtood, that Chriſts carnal, natural, and real Body is in the ſame, in quantity and quality, as it was born of the Virgin Mary, and as he was Crucified upon the Croſs, is preſent or incloſed in the Sacrament: but it doth ſignifie Chriſts Body, as Saint Paul ſaith, So oft as ye do eat of this Bread and drink of this Cup, you ſhall ſhew forth the Lords death till he come. What ſhould the Apoſtle mean by this word, till he come, if he were here carnally, naturally, corporally, and really in the ſame quantity and quality as he was born of the Virgin Mary, and as he did hang on the Croſs, as you ſay? but Saint Paul ſaith, You ſhall ſhew the Lords death till he come. This doth argue that he is not here as you would have us to believe.

The natural quantity of Chriſt not in the Sacrament.

D. Chadſey. I will prove that Chriſt is here preſent under the form of Bread, but not in quantity and quality.

Kenall ſaid, Yes, he is here preſent in quantity and quality.

Chadſey. He is here preſent under a form, and not in quantity and quality.

Yes, ſaid Kenall.

No, ſaid Chadſey.

The Papiſts could not agree in their own Doctrine.

I will prove him here in quantity and quality, ſaid Kenall.

I will prove the contrary, ſaid Chadſey.

And theſe two Doctors were ſo earneſt in this matter, the one to affirm, the other to deny, contending and raging ſo ſore one at the other, that they fomed at the Mouth, and one was ready to ſpit in anothers face, ſo that in great fury and rage the two Doctors roſe up from the Judgment ſeat, and D. Kenall departed out of the Church in great Rage and Fury immediately.

Wood. Behold good people, they would have us to believe, that Chriſt is naturally, really, in quantity and quality, preſent in the Sacrament, and yet they cannot tell themſelves, nor agree within themſelves how he is there.

At theſe words the people made a great ſhout, and the Major ſtood up and commanded the people to be quiet, and to keep ſilence. And the God that did deliver Saint Paul out of the hands of the high Prieſts, by the contention that was between the Phariſees and Sadduces, did even ſo deliver me at that time out of the Mouths of the Bloody Papiſts, by the means of the contention of theſe two Doctors. Bleſſed be the name of the Lord, which hath promiſed to lay no more upon his, than he will make them able to bear, and in the midſt of temptation he can make his way for his (how, and when it pleaſeth him) to eſcape out of all dangers.

W. Wood delivered as was Saint Paul by the contention of the Phariſees and Sadduces.

Many other like examples of Gods helping hand have been declared upon his elect Saints and Children, in delivering them out of danger by wonderful and miraculous ways, ſome by one means, ſome by another. What a notable work of Gods mighty hand was ſeen in Simon Grinæus, mentioned in the Commentary of Melanchthon upon Daniel? Who having a ſudden warning by a certain old Man, who was not ſeen after, nor known then of any what he was, avoided the peril of taking and burning, as by the relation of Melanchthon, writing and witneſſing the ſame, may appear in the words of his own Story here following.

The Hiſtory of Simon Grinæus, collected out of Melanchthons commentaries upon the tenth Chapter of Daniel.

The Story of Simon Grinæus Ex Commentariis. Phil. Mel. in cap. 10. Danielis. John Faber B. of Vienna perſecutor: Obſequium amicos, veritas odium parit.

WHen I was (ſaith he) at the aſſembly holden at Spire, in the year of our Lord, 1539. by chance Simon Grinæus came thither unto me from the Univerſity of Heidelberge, where he heard Faber, the Biſhop of Vienna, in a Sermon defend and maintain certain deteſtable errors. When the Sermon was done, he followed Faber going out of the Church, and ſaluted him reverently, declaring unto him that he was moved of a good zeal and intent, ſomewhat to ſay unto him. Faber was contented to talk with him.

Then

Then Grinæus ſaid unto him, that he was very ſorry that a Man of ſuch learning and Authority ſhould openly maintain ſuch errors as were both contumelious againſt God, and alſo might be refuted by the manifeſt teſtimonies of the Scriptures. Ireneus writeth (ſaid he) that Polycarpus was wont to ſtop his ears whenſoever he heard any erroneous and wicked Doctrine. With what mind then (think you) would Polycarpus have heard you argue and reaſon what it is that the mouſe eateth, when he gnaweth the Conſecrated Hoſt? Who would not bewail ſuch ignorance and blindneſs of the Church? With this Faber brake off his talk, as he was about to ſay more, and asked his name. This Man diſſembling nothing, gently told him that his Name was Grinæus.

Faber gently admoniſhed of Grinæus for his Sermon.

This Faber (as many well know) was alſo timorous and fearful in the company of learned Men. Wherefore he fearing the learning, eloquence, and fervent zeal of Grinæus, ſpecially in ſuch a matter as this was, fained as though he had been ſent for by the King, and that he had no leiſure now to reaſon upon this matter. He pretended that he was very deſirous of acquaintance and longer talk with Grinæus, intreating him, that both for his own private cauſe, and alſo for the Common Wealth, he would come again the next day unto him, and ſo ſhewed him his lodging, and appointed him an hour when he ſhould come: Grinæus, thinking that he had ſpoken unfainedly, promiſed ſo to do.

Godly warning ſent by an old Man to Grinæus.

When he was departed from Faber, he came ſtraightway unto us, and was ſcarcely ſet at the table (for it was ſupper time) reciting a part of his talk with Faber unto me and others there preſent, when as I ſitting with my company, was ſuddenly called out of the Parlour by a certain ancient Fatherly Man, who ſhewing a ſingular gravity in his countenance, words, and behaviour, ſpake unto me, and ſaid, that the Sergeants would by and by come unto our lodging, being ſent by the Kings commandment, to carry Grinæus to Priſon, whom Faber had accuſed to the King; commanding that Grinæus ſhould ſtraightways depart out of the Town, and exhorted me, that we ſhould in no caſe delay the time: and ſo bidding me farewel, departed. But what old Man this was, neither did I know then, nor afterward could I underſtand. I returning again unto my company, bade them riſe, and told them what the old Man had ſaid unto me.

Grinæus accuſed and purſued.

Grinæus warned to fly eſcapeth.

By and by, we taking Grinæus in the midſt of us, carried him through the Street to the River of Rhene, whereas after we had ſtayed upon the hither bank a while, until Grinæus with his companion were carried over in a ſmall boat, returning again to our lodging, we underſtood that the Sergeants had been there, when we were but a little way gone out of the Houſe. Now in what great danger Grinæus ſhould have been, if he had been carried to Priſon, by this cruelty of Faber every Man eaſily may conjecture: Wherefore we judged, that that moſt cruel intent and purpoſe of him, was diſappointed by Gods merciful providence. And as I cannot ſay, what old Man it was that gave me that warning, even ſo likewiſe the Sergeants made ſuch quick ſpeed, that except Grinæus had been covered and defended by the Angels through the marvellous providence of God, he could never have eſcaped.

Concerning the truth of this matter, there be many good Men yet alive, which know both the ſame, and alſo were preſent at the doing thereof. Therefore let us give thanks unto God, which hath given us his Angels to be our keepers and defenders, whereby with more quiet minds we may fulfill and do the Office of our vocation.

With ſuch like examples of Gods mighty and merciful cuſtody, the Church of Chriſt in all ages doth abound, as by manifold experiences may appear as well among the Germanes, as alſo in other places and ages: but in no place more, nor in any time more plentiful, than in this perſecuting time of Q. Mary, in this our Realm of England, as partly hath been already hiſtoried, and part yet remaineth (the Lord willing) moreover hereunto to be added.

The Lady Katherine, Dutcheſs of Suffolk. Anno 1558.

The old hatred of Steph. Gardiner B. of Winchester againſt the Dutcheſs of Suffolk.

Stephen Gardiner Biſhop of Wincheſter, ſurmiſing the Lady Katherine Baroneſs of Willoughby and Ereſby, and Dutcheſs Dowager of Suffolk, to be one of his antient enemies, becauſe he knew he had deſerved no better of her, deviſed, in the holy time of the firſt Lent in Queen Maries Reign, a holy practiſe of revenge, firſt by touching her in the perſon of her Husband Maſter Richard Berty Eſquire, for whom he ſent an attachment (having the great Seal at his Devotion) to the Sheriff of Lincolnſhire, with a ſpecial Letter commanding moſt ſtraightly the ſame Sheriff, to attach the ſaid Richard immediately, and without bail to bring him up to London to his great Lordſhip. M. Berty her Husband being clear in Conſcience, and free from offence toward the Q. could not conjecture any cauſe of this ſtrange Proceſs, unleſs it were ſome quarrel for Religion, which he thought could not be ſo ſore as the Proceſs pretended.

M. Ric. Berty Husband to the Dutcheſs, attached by the Biſhop of W[illegible]

M. Berty appeareth before B. Gardiner.

The Sheriff, notwithſtanding the commandment, adventured only to take the bond of M. Berty with two Sureties, in a thouſand pound for his appearance to be made before the Biſhop on good Fryday following, at which day Maſter Berty appeared, the Biſhop then lying at his Houſe by Saint Mary Overies. Of whoſe preſence when the Biſhop underſtood by a Gentleman of his Chamber, in a great rage he came out of his Gallery into his dining Chamber, where he found a preſs of Suters, ſaying he would not that day hear any, but came forth only to know of M. Berty, how he being a Subject, durſt ſo arrogantly ſet at light two former Proceſſes of the Queen.

Talk between Biſhop Gardiner and M. Berty.

M. Berty anſwered, that albeit my Lords words might ſeem to the reſt ſomewhat ſharp toward him, yet he conceived great comfort of them. For whereas he before thought it extremity to be attached, having uſed no obſtinacy or contumacy, now he gathered of thoſe words, that my Lord meant not otherwiſe but to have uſed ſome ordinary Proceſs; albeit indeed none came to his hands.

Yea Marry, quoth the Biſhop, I have ſent you two Subpenas, to appear immediately, and I am ſure you received them, for I committed the truſt of them to no worſe Man but to M. Solicitor, and I ſhall make you an example to all Lincolnſhire for your obſtinacy.

M. Berty denying the receipt of any, humbly prayed his Lordſhip to ſuſpend his diſpleaſure and the puniſhment till he had good trial thereof, and then, if it pleaſe him, to double the pain for the fault, if any were.

The devotion of B. Gardiner to good Friday.

Well, quoth the Biſhop, I have appointed my ſelf this day (according to the holineſs of the ſame) for Devotion, and I will not further trouble me with you: but I enjoyn you in a thouſand pound not to depart without leave, and to be here again to morrow at 7. of the clock. Maſter Berty well obſerved the hour, and no jott failed: at which time the Biſhop had with him M. Sergeant Stampford, to whom he moved certain queſtions of the ſaid Maſter Berty, becauſe Maſter Sergeant was towards the Lord Wriotheſley, late Earl of Southampton, and Chancellor of England, with whom the ſaid Maſter Berty was brought up. Maſter Sergeant made very friendly report of M. Berty, of his own knowledge for the time of their Converſation together. Whereupon the Biſhop cauſed M. Berty to be brought in, and firſt making a falſe train (as God would, without fire) before he would deſcend to the quarrel of Religion, he aſſaulted him in this manner.

M. Berty attached for debt of 4000. li. pounds due to the Q.

Winch. The Queens pleaſure is, quoth the Biſhop, that you ſhall make preſent paiment of 4000. pound due to her Father by Duke Charles, late Husband to the Dutcheſs your Wife, whoſe Executor ſhe was.

Bert. Pleaſeth it your Lordſhip, quoth Maſter Berty, that debt is eſtalled, and is according to that eſtallment truly anſwered.

Kett Captain of the Rebels in K. Edw. time.

Winch. Tuſh (quoth the Biſhop) the Queen will not be bound to eſtallments in the time of Kettes Government: for ſo I eſteem the late Government.

Bert. The eſtallment (quoth M. Berty) was appointed by K. Henry the eighth. Beſides, the ſame was by

Ann. 1558

by ſpecial Commiſſioners confirmed in K. Edwards time; and the Lord Treaſurer being an Executor alſo to the Duke Charles ſolely and wholly, took upon him, before the ſaid Commiſſioners, to diſcharge the ſame.

Winch. If it be true that you ſay (quoth the B.) I will ſhew you favour. But of another thing Maſter Berty I will admoniſh you, as meaning you well. I hear evil of your Religion; yet I hardly can think evil of you, whoſe Mother I know to be as Godly and Catholick, as any within this Land; your ſelf brought up with a Maſter, whoſe education if I ſhould diſallow, I might be charged as Author of his error. Beſides, partly I know you my ſelf, and underſtand of my friends enough to make me your friend: wherefore I will not doubt of you; but I pray you, if I may ask the queſtion of my Lady your Wife, is ſhe now as ready to ſet up the Maſs, as ſhe was lately to pull it down, when ſhe cauſed in her progreſs, a dog in a Rochet to be carried, and called by my Name? or doth ſhe think her Lambs now ſafe enough, which ſaid to me, when I vailed my bonnet to her out of my Chamber window in the Tower, that it was merry with the Lambs, now the Wolfe was ſhut up? Another time my Lord her Husband, having invited me and divers Ladies to Dinner, deſired every Lady to chooſe him whom ſhe loved beſt, and ſo place themſelves: My Lady your Wife taking me by the hand, for that my Lord would not have her to take himſelf? ſaid, that foraſmuch as ſhe could not ſit down with my Lord whom ſhe loved beſt, ſhe had choſen him whom ſhe loved worſt.

Of the device of the Dog, quoth Maſter Berty, ſhe was neither the Author, nor the allower. The words, though in that ſeaſon they ſounded bitter to your Lordſhip, yet if it would pleaſe you without offence to know the cauſe, I am ſure the one will purge the other. As touching ſetting up of Maſs, which ſhe learned not only by ſtrong perſwaſions of divers excellent learned Men, but by univerſal conſent and order whole ſix years paſt, inwardly to abhor, if ſhe ſhould outwardly allow, ſhe ſhould both to Chriſt ſhew her ſelf a falſe Chriſtian, and to her Prince a maſquing Subject. You know, my Lord, one by Judgment reformed, is more worth than a thouſand transformed temporizers. To force a Confeſſion of Religion by Mouth, contrary to that in the heart, worketh damnation where Salvation is pretended.

Yea Marry (quoth the Biſhop) that deliberation would do well if ſhe were required to come from an old Religion to a new. But now ſhe is to return from a new to an ancient Religion: Wherein when ſhe made me her Goſſip, ſhe was as earneſt as any.

For that, my Lord (ſaid Maſter Berty) not long ſince, ſhe anſwered a friend of hers uſing your Lordſhips ſpeech; That Religion went not by age, but by truth: and therefore ſhe was to be turned by perſwaſion, and not by commandment.

I pray you (quoth the Biſhop) think you it poſſible to perſwade her?

Yea verily (ſaid M. Berty) with the truth: for ſhe is reaſonable enough.

The Biſhop thereunto replying, ſaid, It will be a marvellous grief to the Prince of Spain, and to all the Nobility that ſhall come with him, when they ſhall find but two Noble perſonages of the Spaniſh race within this land, the Queen, and my Lady your Wife, and one of them gone from the Faith.

Maſter Berty anſwered, that he truſted they ſhould find no fruits of infidelity in her.

So the Biſhop perſwaded M. Berty to travel earneſtly for the reformation of her opinion, and offering large friendſhip, releaſed him of his bond from further appearance.

The Dutcheſs and her Husband, daily more and more, by their friends underſtanding that the Biſhop meant to call her to an account of her Faith, whereby extremity might follow, deviſed ways how by the Queens licence they might paſs the Seas. Maſter Berty had a ready mean: for there reſted great Sums of Money due to the old Duke of Suffolk (one of whoſe Executors the Dutcheſs was) beyond the Seas, the Emperor himſelf being one of thoſe debtors. Maſter Berty communicated this his purpoſed ſute for licence to paſs the Seas; and the cauſe to the Biſhop, adding, that he took this time moſt meet to deal with the Emperor, by reaſon of likelihood of marriage between the Queen and his Son.

I like your device well (quoth the Bithop) but I think it better that you carry the Princes coming, and I will procure you his Letters alſo to his Father.

Nay (quoth M. Berty) under your Lordſhips correction and pardon of ſo liberal ſpeech; I ſuppoſe the time will then be leſs convenient: for when the marriage is conſummate, the Emperor hath his deſire; but till then he will refuſe nothing to win credit with us.

By Saint Mary (quoth the Biſhop, ſmiling) you gueſs ſhrewdly. Well, proceed in your ſute to the Queen, and it ſhall not lack my helping hand.

Maſter Berty found ſo good ſucceſs, that he in few days obtained the Queens Licence, not only to paſs the Seas, but to paſs and repaſs them ſo often as to him ſeemed good, till he had finiſhed all his buſineſs and cauſes beyond the Seas. So he paſſed the Seas at Dover about the beginning of June, in the firſt year of her Reign, leaving the Dutcheſs behind, who, by agreement and conſent betwixt her and her Husband, followed, taking Barge at Lion Key, very early in the morning, on the firſt day of January next enſuing, not without ſome peril.

There was none of thoſe that went with her, made privy to her going till the inſtant, but an old Gentleman, called Mr. Robert Cranwell, whom M. Berty had ſpecially provided for that purpoſe. She took with her her Daughter, an Infant of one year, and the meaneſt of her Servants, for ſhe doubted the beſt would not adventure that fortune with her. They were in number four Men, one a Greek born, which was a rider of Horſes, another a Joyner, the third a Brewer, the fourth a fool, one of the Kitchin, one Gentlewoman, and a Laundreſs.

As ſhe departed her Houſe called the Barbican, betwixt four and five of the clock in the morning, with her company and baggage, one Atkinſon a Herauld, Keeper of her Houſe, hearing noiſe about the Houſe, roſe and came out with a torch in his hands as ſhe was yet iſſuing out of the gate: wherewith being amazed, ſhe was forced to leave a male with neceſſaries for her young Daughter, and a milk-pot with milk in the ſame gate-houſe, commanding all her Servants to ſpeed them away before to Lion Key: and taking with her only the two Women and her Child: ſo ſoon as ſhe was forth of her own Houſe perceiving the Herauld to follow, ſhe ſtept in at Charterhouſe hard by. The Herauld coming out of the Dutcheſs Houſe, and ſeeing no Body ſtirring nor aſſured (though by the male ſuſpecting) that ſhe was departed, returned in; and while he ſtayed ranſacking parcels left in the male, the Dutcheſs iſſued into the Streets, and proceeded in her journey, he knowing the place only by Name where ſhe ſhould take her boat, but not the way thither, nor any with her. Likewiſe her Servants having divided themſelves, none but one knew the way to the ſaid Key.

So ſhe appeared like a mean Merchants Wife, and the reſt like mean Servants, walking in the ſtreets unknown, ſhe took the way that led to Finsbury Field, and the others walked the City Streets as they lay open before them, till by chance more than diſcretion, they met all ſuddenly together a little within Moregate, from whence they paſſed directly to Lion Key, and there took Barge in a morning ſo miſty, that the Stearman was loath to launch out, but that they urged him. So ſoon as the day permitted, the Council was informed of her departure, and ſome of them came forthwith to her Houſe, to enquire of the manner thereof and took an inventory of her goods, beſides further order deviſed for ſearch and watch to apprehend and ſtay her.

The fame of her departure reached to Leigh, a Town at the Lands end, before her approaching thither. By Leigh dwelt one Goſling, a Merchant of London, an old acquaintance of Cranwels, whither the ſaid Cranwell brought the Dutcheſs, naming her Miſtreſs White, the Daughter of Maſter Goſling, for ſuch a Daughter he had which never was in that Country. There ſhe repoſed her, and made new Garments for her Daughter, having loſt her own in the male at Barbican.

When the time came that ſhe ſhould take ſhip, being conſtrained that night to lye at an Inn in Leigh (where ſhe was again almoſt bewrayed) yet notwithſtanding ing by Gods good working ſhe eſcaped that hazzard; at length, as the tide and wind did ſerve, they went abroad, and being carried twice into the Seas, almoſt into the coaſt of Zeland, by contrary wind were driven to the place from whence they came, and at the laſt recoil, certain perſons came to the ſhore, ſuſpecting ſhe was within that ſhip; yet having examined one of her company that was aland for freſh Achates, and finding by the ſimplicity of his tale, only the appearance of a mean Merchants Wife to be a ſhipboard, he ceaſed any further to ſearch.

The Dutcheſs landed in Brabant. M. Berty with the Dutcheſs his Wife arrived at Santon, a Free-Town of Weſell in Cleveland.

To be ſhort, ſo ſoon as the Dutcheſs had landed in Brabant, ſhe and her Women were apparelled like the Women of Netherland with hooks; and ſo ſhe and her Husband took their journey towards Cleveland, and being arrived at a Town therein called Santon, took a houſe there, until they might further deviſe of ſome ſure place, where to ſettle themſelves.

A protection procured for the Dutcheſs, of the Magiſtrate of Weſell.

About five miles from Santon, is a free Town called Weſell, under the ſaid Duke of Cleves Dominion, and one of the Haunce Towns, priviledged with the Company of the Steelyard in London, whither divers Walloons were fled for Religion, and had for their Miniſter one Frances Peruſell, then called Francis de Rivers, who had received ſome courteſie in England at the Dutcheſs hands. Maſter Berty, being yet at Santon, practiſed with him to obtain a protection from the Magiſtrates for his abode and his Wives at Weſell; which was the ſooner procured, becauſe the ſtate of the Dutcheſs was not diſcovered, but only to the chief Magiſtrate, earneſtly bent to ſhew them pleaſure, whiles this protection was in ſeeking.

In the mean while, at the Town of Santon was a muttering that the Dutcheſs and her Husband were greater perſonages than they gave themſelves forth, and the Magiſtrates not very well inclined to Religion, the Biſhop of Arras alſo being Dean of the great Minſter, order was taken, that the Dutcheſs and her Husband ſhould be examined of their Condition and Religion upon the ſudden. Which practiſe diſcovered by a Gentleman of that Country to M. Berty, he without delay taking no more than the Dutcheſs, her Daughter, and two other with them, as though he meant no more but to take the air, about three of the Clock in the afternoon in February, on foot, without hiring of Horſe or Wagon for fear of diſcloſing his purpoſe, meant privily that night to get to Weſell, leaving his other family ſtill at Santon.

After the Dutcheſs and he were one Engliſh mile from the Town, there fell a mighty rain of continuance, whereby a long froſt and Ice before congealed, was thawed, which doubled more the wearineſs of thoſe new Lacquies. But being now on the way, and overtaken with the night, they ſent their two Servants (which only went with them) to villages as they paſt, to hire ſome Carr for their eaſe, but none could be hired. In the mean time Maſter Berty was forced to carry the Child, and the Dutcheſs his Cloak and Rapier. At laſt, betwixt ſix and ſeven of the clock in the dark night, they came to Weſell, and repairing to the Inns for lodging, and ſome repoſe after ſuch a painful journey, found hard entertainment: for going from Inn to Inn offering large money for ſmall lodging, they were refuſed of all the Inn-holders, ſuſpecting Maſter Berty to be a Launce-knight, and the Dutcheſs to be his Woman. The Child for cold and ſuſtenance cryed pitifully, the Mother wept as faſt, the Heavens rained as faſt as the Clouds could pour.

The hard entertainment of M. Berty, & the Dutcheſs at their returning into Weſell.

M. Berty, deſtitute of all other ſuccour of Hoſpitality, reſolved to bring the Dutcheſs to the Porch of the great Church in the Town, and ſo to buy coals, victuals, and ſtraw for their miſerable repoſe there that night, or at leaſt till by Gods help he might provide her better lodging. Maſter Berty at that time underſtood not much dutch, and by reaſon of evil weather and late ſeaſon of the night, he could not happen upon any that could ſpeak Engliſh, French, Italian, or Latin, till at laſt, going towards the Church Porch, he heard two ſtriplings talking Latin, to whom he approached, and offered them two Stivers to bring him to ſome Walloons Houſe.

Gods providence in time of diſtreſs.

By theſe Boys, and Gods good conduct, he chanced at the firſt upon the Houſe where Maſter Peruſell ſupped that night, who had procured them the protection of the Magiſtrates of that Town. At the firſt knock, the Goodman of the Houſe himſelf came to the door, and opening it, asked Maſter Berty what he was. Maſter Berty ſaid, An Engliſhman, that ſought for one Maſter Peruſells Houſe. The Walloon willed Maſter Berty to ſtay a while, who went back, and told Maſter Peruſell, that the ſame Engliſh Gentleman, of whom they had talked the ſame ſupper, had ſent by likelihood his Servant to ſpeak with him. Whereupon Maſter Peruſell came to the door, and beholding Maſter Berty, the Dutcheſs, and their Child, their faces, apparels, and bodies ſo far from their old form, deformed with dirt, weather, and heavineſs, could not ſpeak to them, nor they to him for tears. At length recovering themſelves, they ſaluted one another, and ſo together entred the Houſe, God knoweth full joyfully; M. Berty changing his apparel with the good Man, the Dutcheſs with the good Wife, and their Child with the Child of the Houſe.

Anno 1558.

The meeting of W. Peruſel and the Dutcheſs at Weſell.

Within few days after, by Maſter Peruſells means, they hired a very fair Houſe in the Town, and did not let to ſhew themſelves what they were, in ſuch good ſort as their preſent condition permitted. It was by this time thorow the whole Town what diſcourteſie the Innholders had ſhewed unto them at their entry, inſomuch as on the Sunday following, a Preacher in the Pulpit openly in ſharp terms rebuked that great incivility toward ſtrangers, by allegation of ſundry places out of holy Scriptures, diſcourſing how not only Princes ſometime are received in the Image of private perſons, but Angels in the ſhape of Men, and that God of his Juſtice would make them ſtrangers one day in another Land, to have more ſenſe of the afflicted heart of a ſtranger.

The Citizens of Weſell admoniſhed by their Preacher of their hardneſs towards ſtrangers.

The time thus paſſing forth, as they thought themſelves thus happily ſettled, ſuddenly a watch-word came from Sir John Maſon, then Queen Maries Embaſſador in Netherland, that my Lord Paget had fained an errand to the Bathes that ways: and whereas the Duke of Brunſwike was ſhortly, with ten Enſigns to paſs by Weſell for the Service of the Houſe of Auſtrick againſt the French King, the ſaid Dutcheſs and her Husband ſhould be with the ſame charge and company intercepted.

A train laid for the Dutcheſs by the L. Paget & the Duke of Brunſwick.

Wherefore to prevent the cruelty of theſe enemies, Maſter Berty with his Wife and Child departed to a place called Wineheim in high Dutchland under the Palſgraves Dominion; where under his protection they continued till their neceſſaries began to fail them, and they, almoſt fainting under ſo heavy a burden, began to fail of hope.

M. Berty & the Dutcheſs remove to Wineheim under the Palſgrave.

The helping hand of the Lord again in their neceſſity.

At what time, in the midſt of their deſpair, there came ſuddenly Letters to them from the Palatine of Vilva, and the King of Pole, being inſtructed of their hard eſtate by a Baron, named Joannes Alaſco, that was ſometime in England, offering them large courteſie. This purviſion unlooked for, greatly revived their heavy Spirits. Yet conſidering they ſhould remove from many their Countrymen and Acquaintance, to a place ſo far diſtant, a Country not haunted with the Engliſh and perhaps upon their arrival not finding as they looked for, the end of their journey ſhould be worſe than the beginning; they deviſed thereupon with one Maſter Carloe, late Biſhop of Chicheſter, that if he would vouchſafe to take ſome pains therein, they would make him a fellow of that journey. So finding him prone, they ſent with him Letters of great thanks to the King and Palatine, and alſo with a few Principal Jewels (which only they had left of many) to ſollicite for them, that the King would vouchſafe under his Seal, to aſſure them of the thing which he ſo honourably by Letters offered.

The troubles happening to the Dutcheſs in her journey to Poland.

That ſute, by the forwardneſs of the Palatine, was as ſoon granted as uttered. Upon which aſſurance the ſaid Dutcheſs and her Husband, with their family, entered the journey in April, 1557. from the Caſtle of Wincheim, where they before lay, towards Frankford. In the which their journey, it were long here to deſcribe what dangers fell by the way upon them and their whole company, by reaſon of their Lantgraves Captain, who, under a quarrel pretended for a Spaniel of Maſter Berties, ſet upon them in the High-way with his Horſmen, Anno 1558. Horſemen, thruſting their Bore-Spears thorow the Wagon where the Children and Women were, Maſter Berty having but four Horſemen with him. In the which brabble it hapned the Captains Horſe to be ſlain under him.

Whereupon a rumor was ſparſed immediately thorow Towns and Villages about, that the Lantgraves Captain ſhould be ſlain by certain Wallons, which incenſed the ire of the Countrymen there more fiercely againſt Maſter Berty, as afterward it proved. For as he was motioned by his Wife to ſave himſelf by the ſwiftneſs of his Horſe, and to recover ſome Town there by for his reſcue, he ſo doing was in worſe caſe than before: for the Townſmen and the Captains Brother, ſuppoſing no leſs but that the Captain had been ſlain, preſſed ſo eagerly upon him, that he had been there taken and murdered among them, had not he (as God would) ſpying a Ladder leaning to a Window, by the ſame got up into the Houſe, and ſo gone up into a Garret in the top of the Houſe, where he with his Dagger and Rapier defended himſelf for a ſpace: but at length the Burghmaſter coming thither with another Magiſtrate which could ſpeak Latine: he was counſelled to ſubmit himſelf to the order of the Law. M. Berty knowing himſelf clear, and the Captain to be alive, was the more bold to ſubmit himſelf to the judgment of the Law, upon condition that the Magiſtrate would receive him under ſafe conduct, and defend him from the rage of the multitude. Which being promiſed, M. Berty putteth himſelf and his Weapon into the Magiſtrates hand, and ſo was committed to ſafe cuſtody, while the truth of his cauſe ſhould be tryed.

Then Maſter Berty writing his Letters to the Lantgrave, and to the Earl of Erbagh, the next day early in the Morning the Earl of Erbagh, dwelling within eight miles, came to the Town whither the Dutcheſs was brought with her Wagon, Maſter Berty alſo being in the ſame Town under cuſtody.

The Earl, who had ſome intelligence of the Dutcheſs before, after he was come and had ſhewed ſuch curteſie as he thought to her eſtate was ſeemly, the Townſmen perceiving the Earl to behave himſelf ſo humbly unto her, began to conſider more of the matter, and further underſtanding the Captain to be alive, both they, and eſpecially the Authors of the ſtir ſhrunk away, and made all the friends they could to M. Berty and his Wife, not to report their doings after the worſt ſort.

M. Berty with the Dutcheſs honourably entertained of the K. of Pole.

And thus M. Berty and his Wife, eſcaping that danger, proceeded in their journey toward Poeland, where in concluſion they were quietly entertained of the King, and placed honourably in the Earldom of the ſaid King of Poles in Sanogelia, called Crozan, where M. Berty with the Dutcheſs, having the Kings abſolute power of Government over the ſaid Earldom, continued both in great quietneſs and honor, till the death of Q. Mary.

Thomas Horton Miniſter.

A ſtory of Thomas Horton Miniſter.

AS ye have heard of the dangerous trouble of the Dutcheſs of Suffolk in the time of her exile for Religion ſake, whom notwithſtanding the Lords preſent protection ſtill delivered in all diſtreſſes, as well from her enemies in England, as in Dutchland from the Launceknights there: ſo have we no leſs to behold and magnifie the Lords merciful goodneſs in preſerving of Thomas Horton from the like perils of the ſame Country.

Which Thomas Horton, what a profitable inſtrument he was to the Church of Chriſt in Q. Maries time, all our Engliſhmen almoſt, beyond the Seas then, did both know and feel.

This good Thomas Horton, as he uſed oftentimes to travel between Germany and England, for the behoof and ſuſtenance of the poor Engliſh exiles there: ſo he journeying upon a time between Maſtrick and Cullen, chanced to be taken there by certain Rovers, and ſo being led by them away, was in no little danger: and yet this danger of his was not ſo great, but the preſent help of the Lord was greater to aid and deliver him out of the ſame.

Thomas Sprat of Kent, Tanner.

The ſtory of Thom. Sprat and W. Porrege.

UNto theſe afore rehearſed examples of Gods bleſſed providence towards his Servants, may alſo be added the happy deliverance of Thomas Sprat and William Porrege his companion, now Miniſter. Whoſe ſtory briefly to courſe over is this.

M. Brent Juſtice in Kent, a perſecutor.

This Thomas Sprat had been Servant ſometimes to one Maſter Brent a Juſtice, and a heavy perſecutor, and therefore forſaking his Maſter for Religion ſake, he went to Calice, from whence he uſed often with the ſaid William Porrege, for their neceſſary affairs, to have recourſe into England.

It ſo happened about the fourth year of Queen Maries Reign, that they landing upon a time at Dover, and taking their journey together toward Sandwich, ſuddenly upon the way within three miles of Dover, met with the foreſaid Maſter Brent, the two Blachendens, and other Gentlemen more, with their Servants, to the number of ten or twelve Horſes. Of the which two Blachendens, being both haters and enemies of Gods Word and people, the one had perfect knowledge of William Porrege, the other had not ſeen him, but only had heard of his name before.

The two Blachendens in Kent, perſecutors.

Thus they being in the way where this Juſtice with his mates ſhould meet them directly in the face, Thomas Sprat firſt eſpying Maſter Brent, was ſore diſmayed, ſaying to his companion, Yonder is Maſter Brent, William Porrege, God have mercy upon us. Well, quoth the other, ſeeing now there is no remedy, let us go on our way. And ſo thinking to paſs by them, they kept themſelves aloof, as it were a ſcore off from them, Thomas Sprat alſo ſhadowing his face with his Cloke.

Tho. Sprat almoſt taken in the way by the Juſtice.

Notwithſtanding one of Maſter Brents Servants adviſing him better than his Maſter did, Yonder ſaid he to his Maſter, is Thomas Sprat, At which words they all reined their Horſes, and called for Thomas Sprat to come to them. They call you, ſaid William Porrege. Now here is no remedy but we are taken: and ſo perſwaded him to go to them being called, for that there was no eſcaping from ſo many Horſemen in thoſe plains and downs, where was no wood near them by a mile, nor hedge neither, but only one, which was a birdbolt ſhot off.

Tho: Sprat called of the Juſtice, but would not come.

All this notwithſtanding, Sprat ſtaid, and would not go. Then they called again, ſitting ſtill on horſeback. Ah ſirrah (quoth the Juſtice) why come ye not hither? And ſtill his companion moved him to go, ſeeing there was no other ſhift to flee away. Nay (ſaid Sprat) I will not go to them, and therewithal took his Leggs, running to the hedge that was next him. They ſeeing that, ſet Spurs to their Horſe, thinking by and by to have him, and that it was unpoſſible for him to eſcape their hands, as it was indeed, they being on Horſeback, and he on foot, had not the Lord miraculouſly delivered his ſilly Servant from the gaping mouth of the Lion ready to devour him. For as God would, ſo it fell out that he had got over the hedge, ſcrawling through the buſhes, when as they were even at his heels, ſtriking at him with their Swords, one of the Blachendens crying cruelly, cut off one of his Legs.

God always ſtronger than the Devil.

Thus Sprat had ſcarcely recovered the hedge from his enemies, when one of Maſter Brents Servants, which had been fellow ſometimes in Houſe with him, followed him in his Boots; and certain rode up at one ſide of the hedge, and certain at the other, to meet him at the upper end.

Tho. Sprat getteth over the hedge from his perſecutors.

Now while they were following the chaſe after Thomas Sprat, only one remained with William Porrege (who was one of the Blachendens, not he which knew him, but the other) who began to queſtion with him, not asking what was his name (as God would) for then he had been known and taken: but from whence he came, and how he came into Sprats company, and whither he went? Unto whom he anſwered and ſaid, From Calice, and that Sprat came over with him in the paſſage boat, and they two were going to Sandwich, and ſo without any more queſtions he let him depart.

W. Porrege eſcapeth.

Anon, as he kept along the hedge, one of the Horſmen which rode after Sprat, returning back, and meeting with the ſaid W. Porrege, demanded the very ſame queſtions as the other had done, to whom he made alſo the like anſwer as afore, and ſo departed, taking another contrary way from the meeting of the other Horſmen. And thus W. Porrege eſcaped.

The Lord diſpoſing the way of his Servants.

Now concerning Thomas Sprat, he being purſued on the one ſide by Horſmen, and on the other ſide by his own fellow, who followed after him in his Boots, crying, you were as good to tarry, for we will have you, we will have you: yet notwithſtanding he kept ſtill on his courſe, till at length he came to a ſteep down hill at the hedge end, down the which hill he ran from them, for they could not ride down the hill, but muſt fetch a great compaſs about, and ſo this Thom. Sprat ran almoſt a mile, and (as God would) got a Wood.

Tho. Sprat delivered by Gods help from his adverſaries.

By that time he came to the Wood, they were even at his heels: but the night drew on, and it began to rain, and ſo the malice of theſe perſecutors was at an end, the Lord working for his Servants, whoſe name be praiſed for ever and ever, Amen.

Not long after this, one of the two Blachendens aforeſaid, which ſo cruelly ſought the deſtruction of other, was cruelly murdered by his own Servants.

John Cornet.

The trouble of J. Cornet, and how he was delivered.

HEre might alſo be recited the hard adventures and ſufferings of John Cornet, and at length his deliverance, by Gods good working, out of the ſame.

Who, being a prentice with a Minſtrel at Colcheſter, was ſent by his Maſter, about the ſecond year of Q. Maries Reign, to a wedding in a Town thereby called Roughhedge, where he being requeſted by a company there of good Men, the Conſtables alſo of the Pariſh being preſent thereat, to ſing ſome ſongs of the Scripture, chanced to ſing a ſong called News out of London, which tended againſt the Maſs, and againſt the Queens miſproceedings.

Yackſley. Parſon of Roughhedge, Perſecutor. The Mother againſt her own Son.

Whereupon the next day he was accuſed by the Parſon of Roughhedge, called Yackſley, and ſo committed, firſt to the Conſtable, where both his Maſter gave him over, and his Mother forſook and curſed him. From thence he was ſent to the next Juſtice, named Maſter Cannall, and then to the Earl of Oxford, where he was firſt put in Irons and Chains, and after that ſo manacled, that the Blood ſpurt out of his Fingers ends, becauſe he would not confeſs the names of them which allured him to ſing.

Cornet whipped out of the Town, and ſo baniſhed.

And marvel it was that the cruel Papiſts were ſo contented, that they ſent him not alſo to Biſhop Boner, to ſuffer the extremity of the Fire. But Gods gracious providence diſpoſed otherwiſe for his Servant. For after he was manacled, the Earl commanded him to be brought again to the Town of Roughhedge, and there to be whipped till the Blood followed, and to be baniſhed the Town for ever: and ſo he was, during all the time of Queen Mary.

Thomas Bryce.

Tho. Bryce preſerved.

IF our Story would proceed ſo wide and ſo large, as did the exceeding mercy of Gods providence in helping his Servants out of wretchedneſs and thraldom of thoſe Bloody days, our tratiſe (I think) would extend to an endleſs proceſs.

For what good Man or Woman, was there almoſt in all this time of Queen Mary, who either in carrying a good Conſcience out of the Land, or tarrying within the Realm, could well eſcape the Papiſts hands, but by ſome notable experience of the Lords mighty power and helping hand working for him? What ſhould I here ſpeak of the miraculous deliverance of Thomas Bryce? who being in the Houſe of John Seal, in the Pariſh of Horting, and the Bailiff with other neighbours coming in, ſent by Sir John Baker to ſearch and apprehend him, and knowing perfectly both his ſtature and colour of his garments, yet had no power to ſee or know him ſtanding before their faces. So mightily the Lord did blind their eyes, that they asking for him, and looking upon him, yet notwithſtanding he quietly took up his bagg of Books, and ſo departed out of the Houſe without any hand laid upon him.

God blindeth the eyes of them which ſought for Tho. Bryce, that they could not ſee him.

Anno 1558.

Another ſtory of Th. Bryce and his Brother.

Alſo another time, about the ſecond year of Queen Mary, the ſaid Thomas Bryce, with John Bryce his Elder Brother, coming then from Weſell, meeting together at their Fathers Houſe, as they journyed towards London, to give warning there to one Springfield, which elſe was like to be taken unawares by his enemies waiting for him upon Gads-Hill, fell in company with a Promoter, which dogged them and followed them again to Graveſend, into the Town, and laid the Houſe for them where they were, all the ways as they ſhould go to the waters ſide, ſo that it had not been poſſible for them to have avoided the preſent danger of thoſe perſecutors, had not the Lords provident care otherwiſe diſpoſed for his Servants, through the Hoſtler of the Inn, covertly to convey them by a ſecret paſſage; whereby they took Barge a mile out of the Town, and ſo in the end both the lives of them, and alſo of Springfield were preſerved, through the Lords gracious protection.

Thomas and John Bryce delivered by Gods good means and protection.

Gertrude Crokhay.

The trouble and deliverance of Gertrude Crockhay.

GErtrude Crokhay dwelling at Saint Katherines by the Tower of London, and being then in her Husbands Houſe, it happened in the year 1556. that the Popes Childiſh Saint Nicholas went about the Pariſh. Which ſhe underſtanding, ſhut her door againſt him, not ſuffering him to enter into her Houſe.

This Dr. Mallet, is now Dean of Lincoln.

Then Doctor Mallet hearing thereof, and being then Maſter of the ſaid Saint Katherines, the next day came to her with twenty at his tail, thinking belike to fray her, and asked why ſhe would not the night before let in Saint Nicholas, and receive his bleſſing, &c. To whom ſhe anſwered thus: Sir, I know not Saint Nicholas (ſaid ſhe) that came hither. Yes quoth Mallet, here was one that repreſented S. Nicholas.

Indeed Sir (ſaid ſhe) here was one that was my neighbours Child, but not Saint Nicholas: for Saint Nicholas is in Heaven. I was afraid of them that came with him, to have had my purſe cut by them: for I have heard of Men robbed by Saint Nicholas Clerks, &c. So Mallet perceiving that nothing could be gotten at her hands, went his way as he came, and ſhe for that time ſo eſcaped.

Another trouble of the ſaid Gertrude in Dutchland.

Then in the year 1557. a little before Whitſontide, it hapned that the ſaid Gertrude anſwered for a Child that was Baptized of one Thomas Saunders, which Child was Chriſtened ſecretly in a Houſe after the order of the Service book in King Edwards time; and that being ſhortly known to her Enemies, ſhe was ſought for. Which, underſtanding nothing thereof, went beyond the Sea into Gilderland, to ſee certain Lands that ſhould come to her Children in the right of her firſt Husband, who was a ſtranger born: and being there about a quarter of a year, at the length coming homeward by Antwerp, ſhe chanced to meet with one John Johnſon a Dutchman alias John de Villa of Antwerp Shipper, who ſeeing her there, went of malice to the Margrave, and accuſed her to be an Anabaptiſt, whereby ſhe was taken and carried to Priſon. The cauſe why this naughty Man did thus, was, for that he claimed of Maſter Crokhay her Husband a piece of Money which was not his due, for a Ship that Maſter Crokhay bought of him, and for that he could not get it, he wrought this diſpleaſure. Well, ſhe being in Priſon, lay there a fortnight. In the which time ſhe ſaw ſome that were Priſoners there, who privily were drowned in Rheniſh Wine Fats, and after ſecretly put in ſacks and caſt into the River. Now ſhe, good Woman, thinking to be ſo ſerved, took thereby ſuch fear, that it brought the beginning of her ſickneſs, of the which at length ſhe died.

Cruelty in Flanders uſed ſecretly againſt the Chriſtians.

Then at the laſt was ſhe called before the Margrave, and charged with Anabaptiſtry: which ſhe there utterly denied, and deteſted the errour, declaring before him in Dutch her Faith boldly, without any fear. So the Margrave hearing the ſame, in the end being well pleaſed with the profeſſion, at the ſute of ſome of her friends delivered her out of Priſon, but took away her Book, and ſo ſhe came over into England again.

Gertrude returneth unto England.

William

Anno 1558.

William Mauldon.

A Story of W. Mauldon. W. Mauldon accuſed and ſcourged for true Religion.

I Lightly paſs over here the tedious afflictions of William Mauldon, how in the dangerous time of the ſix Articles, before the burning of Anne Askew, he was ſcourged, being young, of his Father: for profeſſing and confeſſing of true Religion; and afterward being examined in Auricular Confeſſion by the Prieſt, his Books were ſearched for, and ſo at length he was preſented up by the ſame Prieſt, in a Letter written to the Biſhop. Which Letter, had it not been burned by another Prieſt, to whoſe hands it came (as the Lord would have it) it had undoubtedly coſt him his life.

The prophecie of W. Mauldon in K. Henries time, for the fall of the Maſs, and Sacrament of the Altar.

This one thing in the ſame William Mauldon is to be noted, that being young, in thoſe days of King Henry, when the Maſs moſt flouriſhed, the Altars with the Sacrament thereof being in their moſt high veneration, that to Mans reaſon it might ſeem unpoſſible that the Glory and Opinion of that Sacrament and Sacramentals, ſo highly worſhipped, and ſo deeply rooted in the Hearts of ſo many, could by any means poſſible ſo ſoon decay and vaniſh to nought: yet notwithſtanding he being then ſo young, under the age of ſeventeen years, by the Spirit (no doubt) of propheſie, declared then unto his Parents, that they ſhould ſee it ſhortly even come to paſs, that both the Sacrament of the Altar and the Altars themſelves, with all ſuch plantations which the Heavenly Father did not plant, ſhould be plucked up by the roots; and even ſo within the ſpace of very few years the event thereof followed accordingly: the Lord therefore be praiſed for his moſt gracious reformation.

Robert Hornebye.

Rob. Hornby through Gods working preſerved.

I Let paſs likewiſe the dangerous eſcape of Robert Hornebye Servant ſometime and Groom of the Chamber to Lady Elizabeth, ſhe being then in trouble in Queen Maries days; who being willed to come to Maſs, refuſed ſo to do, and therefore coming afterward from Woodſtock to Hampton Court, was called before the Councel, and by them committed to the Marſhalſey, and not unlike to have ſuſtained further danger, had not the Lords goodneſs better provided for him, who at length by Doctor Martin was delivered.

Miſtreſs Sands.

M. Sands now Lady Bartlet preſerved from perſecution.

THe like alſo may be teſtified and recorded of Miſtreſs Sands, now Wife to Sir Morrice Barlet, then Gentlewoman waiter to the ſaid Lady Elizabeth being in the Tower. Which Miſtreſs Sands denied in like manner to come to Maſs, and therefore, beſide the heavy diſpleaſure of her Father, was not only diſplaced from her room, and put out of the Houſe, but alſo was in great jeopardy of further tryal. But the Lord, who diſpoſeth for every one as he ſeeth beſt, wrought her a way out of her enemies hands by flying over the Seas, where ſhe continued amongſt other baniſhed exiles in the City of Geneva and of Baſill, till the death of Queen Mary.

The Story of Thomas Roſe yet living, a Preacher, of the age of lxxvi. years, in the Town of Luton and County of Bedford.

The Story of Tho. Roſe yet living.

THis Thomas Roſe a Devonſhire Man, was born in Ermouth, and being made Prieſt in that Country, was brought out of it by one M. Fabian, to Polſted in Suffolk, where the ſaid M. Fabian was Parſon, and in ſhort time after by his means was placed in the Town of Hadley, where he, firſt coming to ſome knowledge of the Goſpel, began firſt there to intreat upon the Creed, and thereupon to take occaſion to inveigh againſt Purgatory, praying to Saints and Images, about the time that Maſter Latimer began firſt to Preach at Cambridge, in the time of Bilney and Arthur, forty ſeven years agoe, or thereabout; inſomuch that many embracing the truth of Chriſts Goſpel, againſt the ſaid Purgatory and other points, and the number of them daily increaſing, the adverſaries began to ſtirr againſt him, inſomuch that M. Bate (who afterward became a Godly zealous Man) was then brought to Preach againſt the ſaid Thomas Roſe, and ſo did. This notwithſtanding he continued ſtill very vehemently againſt Images, and the Lord ſo bleſſed his labours, that many began to deviſe how to deface and deſtroy them, and eſpecially four Men, whoſe names were, Ro. Ring, Ro. Debnam; Nich Marſh, and Ro. Gard, which uſually reſorted to his Sermons, and upon his Preaching were ſo inflamed with zeal, that ſhortly after they adventured to deſtroy the Rood of Dover Court, which coſt three of them their lives as appeareth before. The three perſons which ſuffered, and were hanged in Chains, were offered their lives, to have accuſed the ſaid Tho. Roſe, as of Counſel with them, which refuſed ſo to do, and therefore ſuffered. The ſaid Thomas Roſe had the Coat of the ſaid Rood brought unto him afterward, who burned it. The Rood was ſaid to have done many great miracles and great wonders wrought by him, and yet being in the Fire could not help himſelf, but burned like a block, as in very deed he was.

Three offered to have their lives ſaved, to accuſe Thom. Roſe, but would not.

At this time there were two ſore enemies in Hadley Walter Clerk, and John Clerk, two brethren: theſe complained to the Councel, that an hundred Men were not able to fetch the ſaid Thomas Roſe out of Hadley, who then was upon Examination of his Doctrine committed to the Commiſſaries keeping. And indeed ſuch was the zeal of a number towards the truth then in that Town, that they were much offended that their Miniſter was ſo taken from them, and had therefore by force fet him from the Commiſſary, if certain Wiſe Men had not otherwiſe perſwaded, which at length alſo with more quiet did ſet him in his Office again; which thing ſo angred the two Brethren, Walter Clerk, and John Clerk, that they complained to the Councel, as is aforeſaid, whereupon a Sergeant at Arms, named Cartwright, was ſent from the Councel, who arreſted the ſaid Thomas Roſe, and brought him before the Councel. Then his adverſaries being called, they laid to his charge, that he was privy of the burning of the Rood of Dover Court, and upon this he was committed to Priſon in the Biſhop of Lincolns Houſe in Holborn, Biſhop Langley the Kings Confeſſor, and there remained he in Priſon, from Shrovetide to Midſomer, very ſore ſtocked till after Eaſter.

Thom. Roſe arreſted by a Sergeant at Arms.

The cruel handling of Tho. Roſe by the Papiſts.

The Stocks were very high and great, ſo that day and night he did lye with his back on the ground, upon a little ſtraw, with his heels ſo high, that by means the Blood was ſollen from his feet, his feet were almoſt without ſenſe for a long time, and he herewith waxed very ſick, inſomuch that his Keeper pittying his Eſtate, and hearing him cry ſometime through the extremity of pain, went to the Biſhop, and told him that he would not keep him to dye under his hand, and upon this he had ſome more eaſe and liberty. Now at this time his Mother was come from Hadley to ſee him, but ſhe might not be ſuffered to ſpeak with the ſaid Thomas Roſe her Son (ſuch was their cruelty) but the Biſhop flattered her, and gave her a pair of pardon beads and bade her go home and pray, for ſhe might not ſee him; which thing pierced the hearts both of the Mother and Son, not a little. At this time alſo certain Men of Hadley, very deſirous to ſee him, travelled to ſpeak with him, but might not be ſuffered, till at length they gave the Keeper 4 s. and yet then might not ſpeak to him, or ſee him otherwiſe than through a grate. And thus continued he till Midſomer in Priſon there. Then was he removed to Lambeth, in the firſt year of Doctor Cranmers Conſecration, who uſed him much more courteouſly than ever the Biſhop of Lincoln did, and at length wrought his deliverance, and ſet him at liberty; but yet ſo, that he was bound not to come within 20. miles of Hadley. After this he came to London, and there Preached the Goſpel half a year, till Hadley Men hearing thereof, laboured to have him to Hadley again, and indeed by means of Sir Jo. Rainford Knight, obtained at the Archbiſhops Houſe to have him thither: Howbeit, by means one was placed in the Cure at Hadley, he could not enjoy his Office again there, but went to Stratford three miles off, and there continued in Preaching the word three years, till at length the adverſaries procured an inhibition from the Biſhop of Norwich, to put him to ſilence. But a great number travelled to have him continue in Preaching, and subscribed a Supplication to the Archbishop, with sevenscore hands, who under their Seals also testified of his honest demeanor, so that the adversaries this way not prevailing, they indicted him at Bury in Suffolk, so that he was constrained to flee to London, and to use the ayd of the Lord Audley, then Lord Chancellor, who removed the matter from them, and called it before him, and after certain Examination of the matter, did set him free, and did send him by a token to the Lord Cromwell, then Lord Privy Seal, for a Licence from the King to Preach: which thing obtained by the Lord Cromwell his means (who hereupon also had admitted the said Thomas Rose his Chaplain) forthwith he was sent into Lincolnshire and to York. In the mean time such complaint was made to the Duke of Norfolk, for that he Preached against Auricular Confession, Transubstantiation, and such other points contained in the six Articles (which then to have done, by Law was death) that the Duke in his own person not only sought him at Norwich, but also beset all the Havens for him, from Yarmouth to London, and being Lieutenant commanded, that whosoever could take the said Thomas Rose, should hang him on the next Tree. Howbeit, the said Thomas Rose at his coming home, having warning hereof by certain Godly persons, was conveighed away, and passed over in to Flanders, and so to Germany unto Zuricke, where a time he remained with Master Bullinger, and afterward went to Basil, and there hosted with Master Grinæus, till Letters came that Master Doctor Barnes should be Bishop of Norwich, and things should be reformed and he restored. But when he came into England again, it was nothing so, and therefore forthwith fled again beyond the Seas, being so beset, as if the mighty providence of God had not sent him in a readiness to receive him the self same Man, boat and boy that before carried him over, it had not been possible for him to have escaped. But such was the goodness of God towards him, that he safely was conveighed, and lived at Barow the space of three years, till at length purposing to come over into England, about business that he had, he, his Wife, and their Child, being but a year and three quarters old, upon the Sea, the ship being in great danger, wherein they sayled (for the mast being hewn down in that peril, they were carried whithersoever the waves tossed them,) they with divers others made a full account of death. Howbeit, at length they were taken Prisoners, and carried into Diepe in France, having all their stuff taken from them, and forty pound in Money. There they remained Prisoners from Michaelmass till Hollontide, in great heaviness, not knowing what would become of them, but depending only upon Gods providence. It pleased God at the same time, that one M. Young of the Town of Rye (who had heard him preach before) came thither for the redeeming of certain Englishmen there taken Prisoners. This M. Young moved to see them in this case, much pittied them, and comforted them, and told them he would pay their ransom, and so he did, had them away, and brought them to Rye, and from thence by stealth came they to London. At length the honourable Earl of Sussex, hearing of the said Thomas Rose, sent for him, his Wife, and his Child, and had them to his House at Attleborough, where they continued, till at length it was blazed abroad, that the Earl was a maintainer of such a Man to read in his House, as had Preached against the Catholick Faith (as they term it) The Earl being at the Parliament, and hearing thereof, wrote a Letter to warn him to make shift for himself, and to avoid. So that from thence he passed to London, making straight shift for a year there and somewhat more, till the death of King Henry. After the Kings death, he and others which in the Kings General Pardon were excepted (and therefore dead Men, if they had been taken whilst King Henry lived) by certain of the Councel were set at liberty, and at length, after King Edward was Crowned, were licensed to Preach again by the King; who gave unto the said Thomas Rose, the Benefice of West-Ham by London. But at the Death of that vertuous and noble Prince, he was deprived of all, and so should also have been of his Life, had not God appointed him friends, who received him in London secretly, as their Teacher in the Congregation, among whom for the poor Prisoners at their assemblies x li. a night oftentimes was gathered. And thus he continued amongst them, and with the Lady Vane almost a year in the Reign of Queen Mary. But although he oftentimes escaped secretly whilst he read to the Godly in Sundry places of London, yet at length through a Judas that betrayed them, he with 35. that were with him, were taken in Bow-Church-yard at a Sheremans House on New-years-day at night being Tuesday. The residue being committed to Prisons, the said Thomas Rose was had to the Bishop of Winchester Stephen Gardiner, but the Bishop would not speak with him that night, but committed him to the Clink till Tuesday after.

Anno 1558.

Thom. Rose Chaplain to the Lord Cromwell.

The mighty providence of God in preserving T. Rose from his enemies.

Thom. Rose again delivered.

Thom. Rose apprehended.

The first Examination of Thomas Rose, before Winch. at S. Mary-Overies.

ON Thursday being brought before the B. of Winchester, at S. Mary Overies, the said Thomas Rose spake as followeth.

The first Examination of Tho. Rose.

Rose. It maketh me to marvel (my Lord quoth he) that I should be thus troubled for that which by the word of God hath been established, and by the Laws of this Realm allowed, and by your own writing so notably, in your Book De vera obedientia, confirmed.

Bish. Ah Sirra, hast thou gotten that?

Rose. Yea, my Lord, I thank God, and do confess my self much thereby confirmed. For as touching the Doctrine of the Supremacy, against the Bishop of Romes usurped Authority, no Man hath said further. And as I remember, you confess in it, that when this truth was revealed unto you, you thought the scales to fall from your eyes.

Bish. Thou liest like a varlet, there is no such thing in my Book, but I shall handle thee and such as thou art well enough. I have long looked for thee, and at length have caught thee. I will know who be thy maintainers, or else I will make thee a foot longer.

Rose. My Lord, you shall do as much as pleaseth God, and no more, yet the Law is in your hand: but I have God for my maintainer, and none other. At these words one of his Servants stepped forth, and said, My Lord, I heard this Man Preach by Norwich in Sir John Robsters House, and in his Prayer he desired God to turn Queen Maries Heart, or else to take her out of the World; and this was in King Edwards time.

Rose. My Lord I made no such prayer, but next after the King I prayed for her after this sort, saying, Ye shall pray for my Lady Maries Grace, that God will vouchsafe to endue her with his Spirit, that she graciously may perceive the Mysteries contained within his holy Laws, and so render unto him her heart purified with true Faith, and true and Loyal Obedience to her Soveraign Lord and King, to the good ensample of the inferiour Subjects. And this, my Lord, is already answered in mine own handwriting to the Councel. Unto this he said little, but turning his face to certain that were by him; This, is he (quoth the Bishop) that my Lord of Norwich told me had begotten his maid with Child.

Rose. This is no Heresie, my Lord, although it be a lye. Indeed certain wicked persons raised this report of me, for the hatred they bare to the Doctrine which I Preached: but for purgation of my self herein I had no less than six of the Councels hands, that there might be due and diligent Examination for this matter in the Countrey by Men of worship appointed for that purpose, who can all testifie (I thank God) that I am most clear from such wickedness, and indeed they have cleared me from it, and therefore I doubt not, but all good Men will espy the mischievous device of mine adversaries, which (when other ways failed) by such sinister means went about to draw me into discredit and hatred: but God which is the helper of the innocent, and searcher of Mens hearts, hath and doth defend me, and hath laid open things that were hid, to their shame. One of the chief reporters of this, that I should so abuse my self, was one M. Clark, Servant and in some estimation with the old Lord Treasurer of England, reputed and taken for a Conjurer, who afterward for his good demerits hanged himself in the Tower. Then the Bishop commanded that I should be carried to the Tower, and kept safely, where I did lye till it was the week before Whitsontide. After which time time I was twice called, when as the Biſhop came to the Tower about other Priſoners. Notwithſtanding, the Biſhop had no great talk with me, but ſpake friendly. Howbeit, one Sir Richard Southwell, Knight, ſtill accuſed me for my Prayer, and ſaid I did put a difference betwixt Lady Mary and Lady Elizabeth, for that I prayed in King Edwards Faith, and prayed that he would confirm Lady Elizabeth in that which was well begun in her. Unto this the Biſhop ſaid little. But in the week before Penteceſt, I was conveyed from the Tower to Norwich, there to be examined by the Biſhop and his Clergy, as concerning my Faith, the manner whereof here followeth.

The ſecond Examination of Thom. Roſe before the Biſhop of Norwich, Hopkins by name, in his own Palace, in the preſence of Sir W. Woodhouſe Knight, M. Steward the Chancellor, D. Barret, with divers others, the Wedneſday in Whitſon-week, Anno Dom. 1553.

The 2. Examination of Tho. Roſe before the B. of Norwich.

AFter I was preſented by my Keeper, the Biſhop immediately asked me what I was. I told him I had been a Miniſter.

Biſh. What is this to the purpoſe, were ye a Frier or a Prieſt?

Roſe. Frier was I never, but a Prieſt have I been, and beneficed by the Kings Majeſty.

Biſh. Where were ye made Prieſt?

Roſe. In Exeter, in the County where I was born. Then the Biſhop required of me my Letters of Orders. I told him I knew not where they were become, for they were things of me not greatly regarded.

Biſh. Well, you are ſent to me to be examined; what ſay you, will you ſubmit your ſelf to the order of the Church of England?

Roſe. My Lord, I truſt I am not out of the order of Chriſts Church in England, neither do I know my ſelf an offendor there againſt.

Biſh. What? yes, ye have here preached moſt damnable and devilliſh doctrine.

Roſe. Not ſo, my Lord. The Doctrine by me here Preached was both true, ſincere and holy. But indeed the Doctrine that is now ſet forth, is moſt wicked and damnable, yea, and that both againſt Gods Laws and Mans. But as for the Doctrine by me preached, it is grounded upon the Word of God, ſet out alſo by the Authority of two moſt mighty Kings, with the conſent of all the Nobility and Clergy of the ſame: ſo that I Preached nothing but their lawful proceedings, having their lawful Authority under their Broad Seals for confirmation of the ſame, for which my doing ye cannot juſtly charge me. For why, ſithence the Law ceaſed, I have kept ſilence, ſo that the Council which ſent me unto you have not charged me therewith. Wherefore, ye do me open wrong to burden me with that wherein I am free.

Chan. What Sir? ye are very captious; anſwereſt thou my Lord after ſuch a ſort?

Roſe. Sir (ſaid I) I anſwer for my ſelf, and according to the truth: wherewith ye ought not to be offended, if ye be of God.

Chan. Thou art an evil Man. Waſt thou not abjured before now

Roſe. No, ye untruly report me, and are in no wiſe able to prove that which ye have ſpoken: ſo that your words appear to proceed altogether of malice, which I have not deſerved at your hands. But in this I well perceive ye are made an Inſtrument to utter other Mens malice conceived of old.

Chan. What ſayeſt thou to the real preſence in the Sacrament?

Roſe. I wiſt right well ye were made an Inſtrument to ſeek innocent Blood: well ye may have it, if God permit, it is preſent at hand, for I am not come hither to lye, but to dye (if God ſee it good) in defence of that which I have ſaid. Wherefore ye may begin when ye ſhall think good, for I have ſaid nothing but the truth, and that which in thoſe days was of all Men allowed for truth, and againſt the which ye at that time durſt not once whiſper, although ye now brag never ſo much.

Biſh. Well Father Roſe, ſaid he, whatſoever hath been done in times paſt, ſhall not now be called in queſtion, ſo that ye now ſubmit your ſelf. For not only you, but all the whole Realm hath been out of the right way, both high and low, ſpiritual and temporal, but all notwithſtanding have ſubmitted themſelves and acknowledged their Faith. Wherefore if ye will be accounted for an Engliſhman, ye muſt likewiſe ſubmit your ſelf.

How T. Roſe ſubmitted himſelf.

Roſe. My Lord, I am an Engliſhman born, and do moſt humbly require of the Chriſtian Congregation of England, to be counted as a particular member of the ſame, and with all due reverence ſubmit my ſelf as in the form and manner following: That whatſoever Law or Laws ſhall be ſet forth in the ſame for the eſtabliſhment of Chriſts true Religion, and that according to the Faith and Doctrine of the holy Patriarchs and Prophets, Jeſus Chriſt, and his holy Apoſtles, with the faithful Fathers of Chriſt Primitive Church, I do not only hold it and believe it, but alſo moſt reverently obey it. At which my aſſertion, the B. ſeemed to be greatly rejoyced, and ſaid, Well, then we ſhall ſoon be at a point. But ſaid he, you ſhall take this for no day of Examination, but rather of Communication, ſo that ye ſhall now depart and pawſe your ſelf, until we call for you again, and ſo ended our firſt meeting.

The third Examination of Tho. Roſe.

The 3. Examination of Tho. Roſe.

ON the Friday following, I was called again into Chriſts Church within their Ladies Chappel (as they termed it,) where was gathered a great part of the whole City of Norwich, and after I was by my Keeper preſented, the B. began with a great proteſtation, and after many words demanded of me whether according to my former promiſe I would ſubmit my ſelf or no. I anſwered as before I had done, that according to my former proteſtation, I would moſt gladly obey. Then ſaid the Chancellor, to utter his gentleneſs, I think you do but fain.

Roſe. The fault then (ſaid I) ſhall be in your ſelf, and not in me. For if ye burthen me with nothing but Scriptures, and the Fathers of Chriſts Primitive Church, then as I ſaid before, ſo I ſay again, I ſhall moſt gladly obey.

Chan. Well then, ſeeing you challenge to be a member of the Church of England, your Mother here for a trial of obedience provoketh you, as Mothers are wont to allure you, to receive this little gift at her hand.

Roſe. Forſooth ſaid I, if ſhe offer it me, as received of God my Father, I ſhall gladly receive it, as from the hand of my very true and Ghoſtly Mother.

Auricular Confeſſion.

Chan. What ſay you to ear Confeſſion? Is it not a Law Eccleſiaſtical and neceſſary for the Church of England.

Roſe. Some ways it might be permitted, and ſome ways not, and that becauſe it had not its original of God and his bleſſed Word; and yet I deny not, but that a Man being troubled in his Conſcience, and reſorting to a diſcreet, ſober and Chriſtian learned Man for the quieting of his mind, might well be permitted: but to bind a Man under pain of Damnation, once every year, to number his Sins into the ears of a filthy lecherous Prieſt, is not of God, neither can be approved by his word.

Biſh. Ah Sirrah, ye will admit nothing but Scripture, I ſee well.

Nothing but Scripture to be admitted for the regiment of the Soul.

Roſe. No truly, my Lord, I admit nothing but Scripture for the Regiment of the Soul: for why, Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God, and where the Word of God is not, there ought no belief to be given. For whatſoever is not of Faith is Sin: and here they left off ſpeaking any more of that matter.

But then M. Chancellor began to whet his teeth at me, ſaying, Yea, but you have preached, that the real, natural, and ſubſtantial preſence of Chriſt is not in the Sacrament of the Altar: what ſay ye to that?

Roſe. Verily, I ſay, that you are a Bloody Man, and ſeek to quench your thirſt with the Blood of an innocent, and therefore to ſatisfie you in that behalf, I ſay verily unto you, that even ſo I have here preached: and although contrary to Law, you charge me with the ſame, yet will I in no wiſe deny it, though juſtly I might do it, but ſtand thereunto, even to ſeal it with my Blood, deſiring all that be here preſent, to teſtifie the ſame, and believe it as the only truth.

Biſh. I charge you all to believe it not.

Roſe. Yea, but my Lord (ſaid I) if ye will needs have credence given you, you muſt bring Gods Word to maintain your ſayings.

Biſh. Why, doth not Chriſt ſay, This is my Body? and can there be any plainer words ſpoken?

Roſe. It is true my Lord, the words be as plain as can be, and even ſo be theſe, whereas it is ſaid, I am a door, a vine, and Chriſt called a ſtone, a Lyon, and yet is he naturally none of theſe: for they be all figurative ſpeeches, as both the Scriptures and Fathers do ſufficiently prove.

At which my ſaying, the Biſhop would have had me ſtay, ſaying, I ſhould have another day, wherein I might take better adviſement.

Tranſubſtantiation & real preſence againſt the Scriptures & the antient Fathers of the Primitive Church.

Roſe. Not ſo, my Lord, ſaid I, for I am at a full point with my ſelf in that matter, and am right well able to prove both your Tranſubſtantiation, with the real preſence, to be againſt the Scriptures and the antient Fathers of the Primitive Church. For Juſtinus, which is one of the antienteſt writers that ever wrote upon the Sacraments, writeth in his ſecond Apology, that the Bread, Water, and Wine in the Sacrament, are not to be taken as other meats and drinks, but be meats purpoſely ordained to give thanks unto God, and therefore be called Euchariſtia, and alſo have the names of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, and that it is not lawful for any Man to eat and drink of them, but ſuch as profeſs the Religion of Chriſt, and live alſo according to their profeſſion: and yet (ſaith he) the ſame Bread and Drink is changed into our Fleſh and Blood, nouriſheth our Bodies. By which ſaying it is evident, that Juſtine meant, that the Bread and Wine remain ſtill, or elſe they could not have been turned into our Fleſh and Blood, and nouriſh our Bodies. At which my ſaying they were not a little troubled, but inforced themſelves, to have denyed the Doctor, and would ſuffer me to ſpeak no more, but ſtraightway was I carried away unto my lodging: and ſo ended the ſecond day of mine appearance, which was the Friday in Whitſon week, and then was I appointed to appear again on the Monday following. Howbeit, upon what occaſion I know not, it was deferred unto the Wedneſday, which was Corpus Chriſti Even.

His talk with the Earl of Suſſex, Sir William Woodhouſe, and the Biſhops Chaplains.

IN the mean time the Biſhop ſent two of his Chaplains to me, with whom I had Communication about the real preſence: and after long reaſoning to and fro, concerning this point, at length I drave them to this iſſue, whether they did confeſs that Chriſt in the ſelf ſame Body which was conceived of the Virgin Mary, and wherein he ſuffered and roſe again, do in the ſelf ſame Body, naturally, ſubſtantially, and really ſit at the right hand of God the Father, without return from thence, until the day of the general judgment or not? Whereunto they anſwered, Yes truly, ſaid they, we confeſs it, hold it, and believe it. Then I again demanded of them, whether they did affirm, after the words pronounced by the Miniſter, there to remain Fleſh, Blood, Bones, Hairs, Nailes, as is wont moſt groſly to be Preached, or not? And they with great deliberation anſwered, that they did not only abhor the teaching of ſuch groſs Doctrine, but alſo would deteſt themſelves, if they ſhould ſo think.

The Papiſts affirmed the real Body of Chriſt to be in the Sacrament, but they knew not how.

At which two principal points, wherein they fully condemned my Doctrine which I ever taught, I was not a little comforted and rejoyced, but marvellouſly encouraged, Whereupon I demanded again of them, what manner of Body they then affirmed to be in the Sacrament? Forſooth (ſaid they) not a viſible, palpable, or circumſcriptable Body, for that is always at the Fathers right hand: but in the Sacrament it is inviſible, and can neither be felt, ſeen, nor occupy any place, but is there by the omnipotency of Gods Word they know not how.

And for this they brought in Saint Auguſtine, although of them not truly underſtood, yet would they admit none other ſenſe than their own, but would take upon them to confirm it with Martin Luther, Melanchon, Bucer, and Calvin: ſo that I perceiving their obſtinacy in that behalf, gave them over for that time, and afterward talked with Doctor Barret, whom I alſo found of the ſame judgment in that behalf. For (ſaid he) if ye would diſſent from the Fathers of the Primitive Church in this behalf, of which Saint Auguſtine is one, ye ſhall be contented to dye out of the Favour of God. Well, all this their obſtinacy and blaſphemous errors imprinted and deeply weighed in my mind, I gave them all over, and the more quietly to bring them to confeſs that openly, which they unto me had granted privately, I granted them according to the Scriptures, and my former proteſtation, a preſence, although not as they ſuppoſed.

Anno 1558.

After all this, came there unto me the honourable Earl of Suſſex, and that gentle Knight, Sir William Woodhouſe, with great perſwaſions: unto whom I ſaid, after long talk, that I would do all that I might, ſaving my Conſcience, which I would in no wiſe pollute, and no more I have, as knoweth God by whom all Men muſt be judged.

His laſt appearance before the Biſhop.

The laſt appearance of Thom. Roſe before the Biſhop.

NOw to come to my laſt appearance, after I was before the Biſhop preſented, he forthwith demanded of me, whether I were reſolved, as he had heard ſay. To whom I anſwered, that even as always I had ſaid before, even ſo I was now. Unto whom, by low bowing my knee, I gave my due reverence, and the rather for that the honourable Earl of Suſſex was there. Wherewith ſome which would be counted great Goſpellers, were (contrary to all Chriſtianity) ſore offended. Then I ſaid, that whatſoever Laws were ſet forth for the eſtabliſhment of Chriſts true Religion, and that according to the Doctrine of Chriſts holy Apoſtles, and the Faithful Fathers of the Primitive Church, I did not only obey them, but moſt earneſtly embrace and believe them. Yea, and yet to the further blinding of their eyes, I ſaid, that if any thing could juſtly be proved by Gods holy Word, by me heretofore preached, or taught untruly, either for lack of learning, ſlide of Tongue, or of ignorance; yet by better knowledge when it ſhall juſtly be tryed and examined by the ſame. I ſhall not refuſe (the thing perfectly approved) to revoke the ſame. Provided always, the Word of God herein to be judge.

All this ſpake I (as God knoweth) to keep them from ſuſpecting that which I went about, and that they ſhould have none occaſion to judge me of obſtinacy. Then ſaid I moreover, All you muſt of force confeſs, that the Doctrine by me heretofore preached, had, beſides the Authority of Gods eternal verity, the Authority of two moſt noble and mighty Princes, with the advice and Counſel of all the Nobility and Clergy of the ſame, and that with great deliberation from time to time, with open diſputations in both the Univerſities, enacted alſo by Parliament with the conſent of the whole Body and Commons of the ſame, and that without any reſiſtance or gainſaying eſtabliſhed, as a Religion moſt pure and perfect, moſt earneſtly and ſincerely Preached by the principal Biſhops and Doctors, and that before the Kings Majeſties Perſons; and I, as one being called to that Office, did the like with all the reſt, and in the zeal of God, and with a pure Conſcience did ſet forth the ſame as the only and abſolute truth of God, and the juſt and moſt true proceedings of my Soveraign Lord and King: and I had then my head at that preſent even where it now ſtandeth, betwixt mine ears, altogether applying the ſame, to apprehend with all diligence that which then was eſtabliſhed and taught, as the only and abſolute truth, and a thing unto me moſt deſirable, and well willing, without any deſire to hear the contrary, till now through this my captivity I am compelled to hear the contrary part ſpeak, who are even here preſent, and which my Lord ſent unto me.

Of whom, after long diſputations privately to and fro before this time had betwixt us, at length I have heard of them a contrary Doctrine, which I never before had heard; and therefore muſt confeſs mine own ignorance in the ſame. For (quoth I) after I had inforced theſe Men here preſent (meaning the Biſhops two Chaplains) to confeſs Jeſus Chriſts Natural Body with his full compleat members in due order and proportion of a perfect Mans Body to be preſent at the right hand of God the Father, and that without return from thence, until the laſt Judgment, and alſo that after the words pronounced by the Prieſt, there remaineth no ſuch groſs preſence of

Anno 1558. of Fleſh, Blood, Bones, Hair, and Nails, as was wont to be preached; but that after I had demanded of them what manner of Body they affirmed to be preſent, they ſaid; A Body inviſible by the omnipotency of Gods Word, which neither can be felt or ſeen, nor that hath any diſtinction of members, but ſuch a Body as occupieth no place, but is there they know not how; neceſſity compeld me to confeſs mine ignorance in that behalf, although in very deed they perceived not my meaning therein, neither was it in my thought they ſhould ſo do. For by this their confeſſion, and my ſilence, afterward I perceived their horrible Blaſphemies.

And me thought in this I had well diſcharged at that time my Conſcience, in cauſing them in open audience to confeſs the ſame, and ſo I granted a preſence, but not as they ſuppoſed.

For only I ſaid, that Chriſt after the words pronounced, is preſent in the lawful uſe and right diſtribution of his holy Supper; which thing I never denied, or any Godly Man that ever I heard of. For (ſaid I) Euſebius Emiſſenus, a Man of ſingular fame and learning, about 300. years after Chriſts aſcenſion, ſaith, That the converſion of the viſible Creatures of Bread and Wine into the Body and Blood of Chriſt, is like unto our converſion in Baptiſm. Where nothing is outwardly changed, but all the change is inwardly by the mighty working of the holy Ghoſt, which faſhioneth and frameth Chriſt in the heart and mind of Man, as by the example of Peter preaching to the people, Acts 2. By which he ſo pierced their Conſciences, that they openly with moſt earneſt repentance confeſſed their ſins, ſaying; Men and Brethren, what ſhall we do? Repent, and be baptiſed every one of you (ſaid Peter) in the name of Jeſus Chriſt; ſo that at this Sermon there were turned unto Chriſt three thouſand perſons; in whom Chriſt was ſo faſhioned and framed, as that he did dwell in every one of them, and they in him; and after the like manner (ſaid I) is Chriſt preſent in the lawful uſe and right diſtribution of his holy Supper, and not otherwiſe. For although I ſaid, according to the truth, that Chriſt dwelt in every one of theſe perſons rehearſed, yet meant I nothing leſs than that he in them ſhould have a groſs, carnal, or fleſhly dwelling.

How Chriſt is preſent in the Sacrament.

And no more meant I (as God knoweth) him carnally or ſpiritually to be in the Sacrament, but according to the Scriptures, and my former proteſtation, that is, to the Spiritual nouriſhment of all ſuch as worthily come unto that holy Supper, receiving it according to his holy inſtitution.

And thus I ended; which the Papiſts moſt maliciouſly and ſlanderouſly named a recantation; which I never meant; nor thought (as God knoweth.)

Now after I had thus concluded my ſpeech, the Biſhop taking me by the hand, ſaid; Father Roſe, you may be a worthy inſtrument in Gods Church, and we will ſee to you at our coming home (for he was about to take his journey in viſitation of his Dioceſs) and they feared much at this very time, leſt Queen Mary ſhould have miſcarried in child-travel, which was looked for, being then accounted very great with Child, ſo that they were not ſo fierce as they had been, and doubted very much of ſome ſtir, if I ſhould have ſuffered; and therefore were glad to be rid of me, ſo that by any colourable means for their own diſcharge it might be; ſo the night following was I only committed to mine own lodging.

On the morrow, when the Biſhop was ready to ride forth in viſitation, he called me before him, and perceiving that Sir W. Woodhouſe did bear me great favor, ſaid, he was ſorry for me and my expences; and therefore wiſhed that I were ſome where, where I might ſpend no more money, till his return. Why, my Lord (quoth Sir William Woodhouſe) he ſhall have meat and drink, and lodging with me, till you return again, ſeeing you now break up houſe; and hereupon I went home with Sir William that good Knight, who moſt gently entertained me, and I had great liberty. Upon this the Papiſtical Prieſts of the Colledge of Chriſts Church in Norwich, for that they ſaw me at liberty in Sir Williams abſence (who alſo was then from home a fortnight) blazed it abroad, that Sir William was bounden for me in Body and Lands. At his coming home therefore I asked Sir William if he were ſo bounden for me; and he denied it. Then ſaid I; Sir, but for reverence I bear to you, I might have been an hundred miles from you ere this. But I truſt now, Sir, ſeeing you be not bound for me, I may go viſit my friends. Go where you will, ſaid Sir William, for (quoth he) I told the Biſhop I would not be his Jaylor, but promiſed only meat, drink, and lodging for you. Shortly after, upon the device of ſome friends, I was cloſely conveighed to a friends Houſe where almoſt a Month I was ſecretly kept, till rumours were over. For at the Biſhops return ſearching was for me, inſomuch as all Houſes, where it was known I had been acquainted, were ſearched, and the Ships at Yarmouth.

Pop. Prieſts love to blaze abroad lies.

At the length the Biſhop ſent to a Conjurer, to know of him which way I was gone, and he anſwered, that I was gone over a water, and in the keeping of a Woman. And in very deed I was paſſed over a ſmall water, and was hid by a bleſſed Woman and Godly Woman (which lived in a poor cottage) the ſpace of three weeks, till all the great heat was over.

Then was I conveighed to London, and from thence paſſed over the Seas, where I lived till the death of Queen Mary, and till that it pleaſed God for the comfort of his Church, and reſtoring of all poor exiles and priſoners for his names ſake, to bleſs this Realm with the government of our noble Queen, whom God to the Glory of his own name, and the defence of his Church according to his good will and pleaſure, long preſerve and continue over us.

A brief diſcourſe concerning the troubles and happy deliverance of the reverend Father in God, Doctor Sands, firſt Biſhop of Worceſter, next of London, and now Archbiſhop of York.

KIng Edward dyed, the World being unworthy of him, the Duke of Northumberland came down to Cambridge with an Army of Men, having Commiſſion to proclaim Lady Jane Queen, and by power to ſuppreſs Lady Mary, who took upon her that Dignity, and was proclaimed Queen in Northfolk. The Duke ſent for Doctor Sands, being Vicechancellor, for Doctor Parker, for Dr. Bill, and Maſter Leaver to ſup with him. Amongſt other ſpeeches he ſaid; Maſters, pray for us, that we ſpeed well: if not, you ſhall be made Biſhops, and we Deacons. And even ſo it came to paſs, Doctor Parker, and Dr. Sands were made Biſhops, and he and Sir John Gates, who was then at the Table, were made Deacons, ere it was long after on the Tower-Hill. D. Sands being Vicechancellor, was required to preach on the morrow. The warning was ſhort for ſuch an Auditory, and to ſpeak of ſuch a matter; yet he refuſed not the thing, but went into his chamber, and ſo to bed. He roſe at three of the clock in the morning, took his Bible in his hand, and after that he had prayed a good ſpace; he ſhut his eyes, and holding his Bible before him, earneſtly prayed to God, that it might fall open, where a moſt fit text ſhould be for him to intreat of. The Bible, as God would have it, fell open upon the firſt chapter of Joſhuah, where he found ſo convenient a piece of Scripture for that time, that the like he could not have choſen in all the Bible. His Text was thus: Reſponderuntque Joſuæ atque dixerunt, Omnia quæ præcepiſti nobis faciemus, & quocunque miſeris ibimus: ſicut obedivimus in cunctis Moſi, ita obediemus & tibi, tantum ſit Dominus Deus tuus tecum ſicut fuit cum Moſe: qui contradixerit ori tuo, & non obedierit cunctis ſermonibus quos præceperis ei, moriatur; tu tantum confortare & viriliter age. Who ſhall conſider what was concluded by ſuch as named themſelves the State, and withal, the Auditory, the time and other circumſtances, he ſhall eaſily ſee that this Text moſt fitly ſerved for the purpoſe. And as God gave the Text, ſo gave he ſuch order and utterance, as pulled many tears out of the eye of the biggeſt of them.

In the time of his Sermon one of the Guard lift up to him into the Pulpit a Maſs Book and a Grail, which Sir George Haward with certain of the Guard had taken that night in Maſter Hurleſtones Houſe, where Lady Mary had been a little before, and there had Maſs. The Duke, with the reſt of the Nobility, required Doctor Sands to put his Sermon in writing, and appointed Maſter Leaver to go to London with it, and to put it in print. Doctor Sands required one day and a half for writing of it. At the time appointed he had made it ready, and Maſter Leaver was ready Booted to receive it at his hands, and carry it to London. As he was delivering of it, one of the Beadles, named M. Adams, came weeping to him, and prayed him to ſhift for himſelf, for the Duke was retired, and Queen Mary proclaimed.

Doctor Sands was not troubled herewithal, but gave the Sermon written to Maſter Layfield. Maſter Leaver departed home, and he went to dinner to one Maſter Mores a Beadle, his great friend. At the dinner Miſtreſs More ſeeing him merry and pleaſant (for he had ever a Mans courage, and could not be terrified) drank unto him, ſaying; Maſter Vicechancellor, I drink unto you, for this is the laſt time that I ſhall ſee you. And ſo it was; for ſhe was dead before Doctor Sands returned out of Germany. The Duke that night retired to Cambridge, and ſent for Doctor Sands to go with him to the Market place to proclaim Queen Mary. The Duke caſt up his cap with others, and ſo laughed, that the tears ran down his Cheeks for grief. He told Doctor Sands that Queen Mary was a merciful Woman, and that he doubted not thereof; declaring that he had ſent unto her to know her pleaſure, and looked for a general pardon. Doctor Sands anſwered; My Life is not dear unto me, neither have I done or ſaid any thing that urgeth my Conſcience. For that which I ſpake of the State, I have inſtructions warranted by the ſubſcription of ſixteen Counſellors, neither can ſpeech be Treaſon, neither yet have I ſpoken further than the Word of God, and the Laws of the Realm do warrant me, come of me what God will. But be you aſſured, you ſhall never eſcape death; for if ſhe would ſave you, thoſe that now ſhall rule, will kill you.

That night the Guard apprehended the Duke, and certain Grooms of the Stable were as buſie with Doctor Sands, as if they would take a priſoner. But Sir John Gates, who lay then in Doctor Sands his Houſe, ſharply rebuked them, and drave them away. Doctor Sands, by the advice of Sir John Gates, walked in the Fields. In the mean time the Univerſity, contrary to all otder, had met together in conſultation, and ordered that Doctor Mouſe and Doctor Hatcher ſhould repair to Doctor Sands lodging, and fet away the Statute Book of the Univerſity. the Keyes, and ſuch other things that were in his keeping, and ſo they did: for Doctor Mouſe being an earneſt Proteſtant the day before, and one whom Doctor Sands had done much for, was now become a Papiſt, and his great enemy. Certain of the Univerſity had appointed a Congregation at afternoon. As the bell rang to it, Doctor Sands cometh out of the Fields, and ſending for the Beadles, asketh what the matter meaneth and required them to wait upon him to the Schools, according to their duty. So they did. And ſo ſoon as Doctor Sands, the Beadles going before him, came into the regent Houſe and took his chair: One M. Mitch, with a rabble of unlearned Papiſts, went into a by-ſchool, and conſpired together to pull him out of his chair, and to uſe violence unto him. Doct. Sands began his Oration, expoſtulating with the Univerſity, charging them with great ingratitude, declaring, that he had ſaid nothing in his Sermon, but that that he was ready to juſtifie and their caſe was all one with his: For they had not only concealed, but conſented to that which he had ſpoken.

And thus while he remembred unto them how beneficial he had been to the Univerſity, and their unthankfulneſs to him again, in cometh Maſter Mitch with his conſpirators about twenty in number. One layeth hand upon the chair, to pull it from him, another told him that that was not his place, and another called him Traitor. Whereat he perceiving how they uſed violence, and being of great courage, groped to his dagger, and had diſpatched ſome of them as Gods enemies, if Doctor Bill and Doctor Blith had not fallen upon him, and prayed him for Gods ſake to hold his hands and be quiet, and patiently to bear that great offered wrong. He was perſwaded by them, and after that tumult was ceaſed, he ended his Oration, and having ſome money of the Univerſities in his hand, he there delivered the ſame every farthing. He gave up the Books, Reckonings, and Keyes pertaining to the Univerſity, and withal yielded up his Office, praying God to give the Univerſity a better Officer, and to give them better and more thankful hearts, and ſo repaired home to his own Colledge. Anno 1558.

On the morrow after, there came unto him one M. Gerningham, and one M. Thomas Mildmay. Gerningham told him that it was the Queens pleaſure that two of the Guard ſhould attend upon him, and that he muſt be carried Priſoner to the Tower of London, with the Duke. M. Mildmay ſaid, he marvelled that a learned Man would ſpeak ſo unadviſedly againſt ſo good a Prince, and wilfully run into ſuch danger. Doctor Sands anſwered; I ſhall not be aſhamed of bonds, but if I could do as M. Mildmay can, I needed not to fear bonds. For he came down in paiment againſt Queen Mary, and armed in the Field, and now he returneth in paiment for Queen Mary; before a Traitor, and now a great friend. I cannot with one Mouth blow hot and cold after this ſort.

Upon this, his Stable was robbed of four notable good Geldings, the beſt of them Maſter Huddleſtone took for his own ſaddle, and rode on him to London in his ſight. An Inventory was taken of all his goods by Maſter More Beadle for the Univerſity. He was ſet upon a lame Horſe that halted to the ground; which thing a friend of his perceiving, prayed that he might lend him a Nagg. The Yeomen of the Guard were contented. As he departed forth at the towns end, ſome Papiſts reſorted thither to jeer at him; ſome of his friends to mourn for him. He came in the rank to London, the people being full of out-cries. And as he came in at Biſhopſgate, one like a milk-wife hurled a ſtone at him, and hit him on the breaſt, with ſuch a blow, that he was like to fall off his Horſe. To whom he mildly ſaid; Woman, God forgive it thee. Truth is, that journey and evil intreating ſo mortified him, that he was more ready to dye than to live.

As he came through Tower-hill-ſtreet, one Woman ſtanding in her door cried; Fie on thee thou Knave, thou Knave, thou Traitor, thou Heretick. Whereat he ſmiled. Look, the deſperate Heretick (ſaid ſhe) laughed at this jeer. A Woman on the other ſide of the Street anſwered, ſaying; Fye on thee neighbour, thou art not worthy to be called a Woman, railing upon this Gentleman whom thou knoweſt not, neither yet the cauſe why he is thus intreated. Then ſhe ſaid; Good Gentleman, God be thy comfort, and give thee ſtrength to ſtand in Gods cauſe even to the end. And thus he paſſed through Fire and Water into the Tower, the firſt priſoner that entred in that day, which was Saint James day. The Yeomen of the Guard took from him his borrowed Nagg, and what elſe ſoever he had. His Man, one Quinting Suainton, brought after him a Bible and ſome ſhirts, and ſuch like things. The Bible was ſent in to him, but the ſhirts and ſuch like ſerved the Yeomen of the Guard.

After he had been in the Tower three weeks in a bad priſon, he was lift up into Nuns-Bower a better priſon, where was put to him M. John Bradford.

At the day of Queen Maries Coronation their priſon door was ſet open, ever ſhut before. One Maſter Mitchell his old acquaintance, which had been priſoner before in the ſame place, came in to him, and ſaid; Maſter Sands, there is ſuch a ſtir in the Tower, that neither gates, doors, nor priſoners are looked to this day. Take my cloak, my hat, and my rapier, and get you gone, you may go out of the gates without queſtioning, ſave your ſelf, and let me do as I may. A rare friendſhip; but he refuſed the offer, ſaying; I know no juſt cauſe why I ſhould be in Priſon. And thus to do were to make my ſelf guilty. I will expect Gods good will, yet muſt I think my ſelf moſt bounden unto you: and ſo maſter Mitchell departed.

While Doctor Sands and Maſter Bradford were thus in cloſe Priſon together 29. weeks, one John Bowler was their Keeper, a very perverſe Papiſt, yet by often perſwading of him, for he would give ear, and by gentle uſing of him, at the length he began to miſlike Popery, and to favour the Goſpel, and was ſo perſwaded in true Religion, that on a Sunday when they had Maſs in the Chappel, he bringeth up a Service Book, a Manchet, and a glaſs of Wine; and there Doctor Sands miniſtred the Communion to Bradford and to Bowler. Thus Bowler was Anno 1558. was their Son begotten in bonds. When Wyat was in Arms, and the old Duke of Northfolk ſent forth with a power of Men to apprehend him; that room might be made in the Tower for him and other his complices, Dr. Cranmer, Dr. Ridley, and Maſter Bradford were caſt into one Priſon, and D. Sands with 9. other Preachers were ſent unto the Marſhalſey.

The Keeper of the Marſhalſey appointed to every Preacher, a Man to lead him in the Street; he cauſed them to go far before, and he and Doctor Sands came behind, whom he would not lead, but walked familiarly with him. Yet Doctor Sands was known, and the people every where prayed to God to comfort him, and to ſtrengthen him in the truth. By that time the peoples minds were altered, Popery began to be unſavoury. After they paſſed the Bridge, the Keeper Thomas Way ſaid to Doctor Sands; I perceive the vain people would ſet you forward to the Fire. Ye are as vain as they, if you being a young Man will ſtand in your own conceits, and preferr your own knowledge before the judgment of ſo many worthy Prelates, antient, learned, and grave Men as be in this Realm. If you ſo do, you ſhall find me as ſtraight a Keeper, as one that utterly miſliketh your Religion. Doctor Sands anſwered; I know my years young, and my learning ſmall, it is enough to know Chriſt Crucified, and he hath learned nothing that ſeeth not the great Blaſphemy that is in Popery. I will yield unto God, and not unto Man: I have read in the Scriptures of many Godly and courteous Keepers. God may make you one. If not, I truſt he will give me ſtrength and patience to bear your hard dealing with me. Saith Thomas Way; Do ye then mind to ſtand to your Religion? Yea, ſaith Doctor Sands, by Gods Grace. Truly, ſaith the Keeper, I love you the better, I did but tempt you, What favour I can ſhew you ye ſhall be ſure of, and I ſhall think my ſelf happy, if I may dye at the ſtake with you. The ſaid Keeper ſhewed Doctor Sands ever after all friendſhip; he truſted him to go into the Fields alone, and there met with Maſter Bradford, who then was removed into the Bench, and there found the like favour of his Keeper, He laid him in the beſt Chamber in the Houſe, he would not ſuffer the Knight Marſhals Man to lay fetters on him, as others had. And at his requeſt he put M. Sanders in to him, to be his Bed-fellow, and ſundry times ſuffered his Wife, who was Maſter Sands Daughter of Eſſex, a Gentlewoman beautiful both in Body and Soul, to reſort to him. There was great reſort to Doctor Sands and Maſter Sanders; they had much Money offered them, but they would receive none. They had the Communion there three or four times, and a great ſort of Communicants. Doctor Sands gave ſuch exhortation to the people (for at that time being young, he was thought very eloquent) that he mov'd many tears, and made the people abhorr the Maſs, and defie all Popery.

When Wyat with his army came into Southwark, he ſent two Gentlemen into the Marſhalſey to Doctor Sands, ſaying, that Maſter Wyat would be glad of his company and advice, and that the gates ſhould be ſet open for all the Priſoners. He anſwered, tell M. Wyat, if this his Riſing be of God, it will take place; if not, it will fall. For my part, I was committed hither by order, I will be diſcharged by like order, or I will never depart hence. So anſwered M. Sanders, and the reſt of the Preachers, being there Priſoners.

After that D. Sands had been 9. weeks Priſoner in the Marſhalſey by the mediation of Sir Thomas Holcroft, then Knight Marſhall: he was ſet at liberty. Sir Thomas ſued earneſtly to the Biſhop of Wincheſter, Doctor Gardiner, for his deliverance after many repulſes: but he could not prevail, except Doctor Sands would be one of their Sect, and then he could want nothing. He wrung out of him at laſt, that if the Queen could like of his deliverance, he would not be againſt it; for that was Sir Thomas his laſt requeſt. In the mean time he had procured two Ladies of the Privy Chamber to move the Queen in it; who was contented if the Biſhop of Wincheſter would like of it. The next time that the Biſhop went into the Privy Chamber to ſpeak with the Queen, M. Holcroft followed, and had his warrant for D. Sands remiſſion ready, and prayed the two Ladies, when as the Biſhop ſhould take his leave, to put the Queen in mind of Doctor Sands. So they did, and the Queen ſaid; Wincheſter, what think you by D. Sands, is he not ſufficiently puniſhed? As it pleaſe your Majeſty, ſaith Wincheſter. That he ſpake, remembring his former promiſe to Maſter Holcroft, that he would not be againſt D. Sands, if the Queen ſhould like to diſcharge him. Saith the Queen; Then truly, we would that he were ſet at liberty. Immediately Maſter Holcroft offered the Queen the Warrant. Who ſubſcribed the ſame, and called Wincheſter to put to his hand, and ſo he did. The Warrant was given to the Knight Marſhall again, Sir Thomas Holcroft. As the Biſhop went forth of the Privy Chamber doo', he called M. Holcroft to him: Commanding him not to ſet Doctor Sands at liberty, untill he had taken Sureties of two Gentlemen of his Country with him, every one bound in 500. pounds, that D. Sands ſhould not depart out of the Realm without licence. Maſter Holcroft immediately after met with two Gentlemen of the North, friends and couſins to D. Sands, who offered to be bound in Body, Goods, and Lands for him. After Dinner, the ſame day, Maſter Holcroft ſent for Doctor Sands to his lodging at Weſtminſter, requiring the Keeper to company with him. He came accordingly, finding Maſter Holcroft alone walking in his Garden. Maſter Holcroft imparted his long ſute, with the whole proceeding, and what effect it had taken, to D. Sands: much rejoycing that it was his good hap to do him good, and to procure his liberty, and that nothing remained, but that he would enter into bonds with his two Sureties, for not departing out of the Realm. Doctor Sands anſwered; I give God thanks, who hath moved your heart to mind me ſo well, and I think my ſelf moſt bound unto you. God ſhall requite, and I ſhall never be found unthankful. But as you have dealt friendly with me, I will alſo deal plainly with you. I came a free man into Priſon; I will not go forth a bondman. As I cannot benefit my friends, ſo will I not hurt them. And if I be ſet at liberty, I will not tarry ſix days in this Realm, if I may get out. If therefore I may not get free forth, ſend me to the Marſhalſey again, and there ye ſhall be ſure of me.

This Anſwer much miſliked M. Holcroft: He told Doctor Sands that the time would not long continue, a change would ſhortly come, the ſtate was but a cloud, and would ſoon ſhake away. And that his couſin Sir Edward Bray would gladly receive him and his Wife into his Houſe, where he ſhould never need to come at Church, and how the Lady Bray was a zealous Gentlewoman, who hated Popery. Adding, that he would not ſo deal with him to loſe all his labour. When Doctor Sands could not be removed from his former ſaying, Maſter Holcroft ſaid; Seeing you cannot be altered, I will change my purpoſe, and yield unto you. Come of it what will, I will ſet you at liberty: And ſeeing you mind to go over Sea, get you gone ſo quickly as you can. One thing I require of you, that while you are there, you write nothing to come hither, for ſo you may undoe me. He friendly kiſſed Doctor Sands, bade him farewel, and command the Keeper to take no fees of him, ſaying; Let me anſwer Wincheſter as I may. Doctor Sands returning with the Keeper to the Marſhalſey, tarried all night, There on the morrow, he gave a Dinner to all the Priſoners, bade his bed-fellow, and ſworn ſtakefellow, if it had ſo pleaſed God, Maſter Sanders farewel, with many tears and kiſſings, the one falling on the others neck, and ſo departed, clearly delivered without Examination or Bond. From thence he went to the Bench, and there talked with M. Bradford and M. Farrer Biſhop of Saint Davids, then Priſoners. Then he comforted them, and they praiſed God for his happy deliverance. He went by Wincheſters Houſe, and there took boat, and came to a friends Houſe in London, called William Banks, and tarried there one night. On the morrow at night he ſhifted to another friends Houſe, and there he learned that ſearch was made for him.

Doctor Watſon and Maſter Chriſtopherſon, coming to the Biſhop of Wincheſter, told him that he had ſet at liberty the greateſt Heretick in England, and one that had of all other moſt corrupted the Univerſity of Cambridge, Doctor Sands. Whereupon the Biſhop of Wincheſter, being Chancellor of England, ſent for all the Conſtables of London, commanding them to watch for Doctor Sands, who was then within the City, and to apprehend him, and whoſoever of them ſhould take him and bring him to him, he ſhould have five pounds for his labour. Doctor Sands ſuſpecting the matter, conveighed himſelf by night to one M. Barties Houſe a ſtranger, who was in the Marſhalſey Priſoner with him a while, he was a good Proteſtant, and dwelt in Mark-Lane. There he was ſix days, and had one or two of his friends that repaired unto him. Then he repaired to an acquaintance of his, one Hurleſtone a Skinner, dwel-in Cornhill; he cauſed his Man Quinting to provide two Geldings for him, minding on the morrow to ride into Eſſex to Maſter Sands his Father in Law, where his Wife was.

At his going to bed in Hurleſtones Houſe, he had a pair of Hoſe newly made that were too long for him. For while he was in the Tower, a Taylor was admitted him to make him a pair of Hoſe. One came unto him, whoſe name was Benjamin, a good Proteſtant, dwelling in Birchin-Lane: he might not ſpeak to him, or come unto him to take meaſure of him, but only look upon his Legg, he made the Hoſe, and they were two inches too long. Theſe Hoſe he prayed the goodwife of the Houſe to ſend to ſome Taylor to cut them two inches ſhorter. The Wife required the Boy of the houſe to carry them to the next Taylor to cut. The boy chanced (or rather God ſo provided) to go to the next Taylor, which was Benjamin that made them, which alſo was a Conſtable, and acquainted with the Lord Chancellors commandment. The Boy required him to cut the Hoſe. He ſaid, I am not thy Maſters Taylor. Saith the Boy, becauſe you are our next neighbour, and my Maſters Taylor dwelleth far off, I came to you; for it is far night, and he muſt occupy them timely in the morning. Benjamin took the Hoſe, and looking upon them, he knew his handy-work, and ſaid; Theſe are not thy Maſters Hoſe, but D. Sands, them I made in the Tower. The Boy yielded and ſaid, it was ſo. Saith he, Go to thy Miſtreſs, pray her to ſit up till 12. of the clock, and then I will bring the Hoſe and ſpeak with D. Sands to his good.

At midnight the goodwife of the Houſe, and Benjamin the Taylor cometh into D. Sands Chamber: The Wife prayeth him not to be afraid of their coming. He anſwered nothing can be amiſs; what God will, that ſhall be done. Then Benjamin telleth him that he made his Hoſe, and by what good chance they now come to his hands. God uſed the means, that he might admoniſh him of his peril, and adviſe him how to eſcape it, telling him that all the Conſtables of London, whereof he was one, watched for him, and ſome were ſo greedily ſet, that they prayed him, if he took him, to let them have the carriage of him to the Biſhop of Wincheſter, and he ſhould have the five pound. Saith Benjamin, it is known that your Man hath provided two Geldings, and that you mind to ride out at Algate to morrow, and there then you are ſure to be taken. Follow mine advice, and by Gods Grace ye ſhall eſcape their hands. Let your Man walk all the day to morrow in the ſtreet where your Horſes ſtand, booted and ready to ride. The goodmans Servant of the Houſe ſhall take the Horſes, and carry them to Bednol-Green. The goodman ſhall be booted, and follow after, as if he would ride. I will be here with you to morrow about eight of the Clock; it is both Term and Parliament time, here we will break our faſt, and when the ſtreets is full, we will go forth. Look wildly, and if you meet your Brother in the ſtreets, ſhun him not, but outface him, and know him not. Accordingly Doctor Sands did, clothed like a Gentleman in all reſpects, and looked wildly, as one that had been long kept in Priſon out of the light, Benjamin carried him through Birchin-Lane, and from one Lane to another, till he came to Moregate. There they went forth untill they came to Bednol-Green, where the Horſes were ready, and Maſter Hurleſtone, to ride with him as his Man. Doctor Sands pulled on his boots and taking leave of his friends Benjamin, with tears they kiſſed each other; he put his Hand in his Purſe, and would have given Benjamin a great part of that little he had, but Benjamin would take none. Yet ſince D. Sands hath remembred him thankfully. He rode that night to his Father in Law M. Sands, where his Wife was: he had not been there two hours, but it was told M. Sands, that there were two of the Guard which would that night apprehend Doctor Sands, and ſo they were appointed. Anno 1558.

That night Doctor Sand. was guided to an honeſt Farmer near the Sea, where he tarried two days and two nights in a Chamber without all company. After that he ſhifted to one James Mower a Shipmaſter, who dwelt at Milton-Shore, where he expected wind for the Engliſh Fleet ready into Flanders. While he was there, James Mower brought to him 40. or 50. Mariners, to whom he gave an Exhortation; they liked him ſo well, that they promiſed to dye for him, ere that he ſhould be apprehended.

The 6. of May, being Sunday, the wind ſerved. He took his leave of his Hoſt and Hoſteſs, and went towards the Ship. In taking his leave of his Hoſteſs who was barren, and had bin married 8. years, he gave her a fine handkerchief and an old Royal of Gold in it, thanking her much, and ſaid; Be of good comfort, ere that one whole year be paſt, God ſhall give you a Child, a Boy. And it came to paſs, for that day twelve month lacking one day, God gave her a fair Son.

At the Shore Doct. Sands met with M. Iſaac of Kent, who had his Eldeſt Son there, who, upon the liking he had to D. Sands, ſent his Son with him, who afterward dyed in his Fathers Houſe in Frankford. D. Sands and D. Coxe were both in one Ship, being one Cockrels Ship, They were within the kenning, when two of the Guard came thither to apprehend D. Sands. They arrived at Antwerp, being bid to Dinner to Maſter Locke. And at dinner time one George Gilpin being Secretary to the Engliſh Houſe, and Kinſman to Doctor Sands, came to him, and rounded him in his ear, and ſaid; King Philip hath ſent to make ſearch for you, and to apprehend you. Hereupon they roſe from their Dinner in a marvellous great ſhower, and went out at the gate toward the Land of Cleve. They found a Wagon, and haſted away, and came ſafe to Ausburge in Cleveland, where D. Sands tarried 14. days, and then journyed towards Strausborough, where after he had lived one year, his Wife came unto him. He fell ſore ſick of a flux, which kept him nine Months, and brought him to deaths door. He had a Child which fell ſick of the Plague, and died. His Wife at length fell ſick of a Conſumption, and dyed in his Arms; no Man had a more Godly Woman to his Wife.

After this, Maſter Sampſon went away to Emanuel, a Man skilful in Hebrew. Maſter Grindall went into the Country to learn the Dutch Tongue. Doctor Sands ſtill remained in Strausborough, whoſe ſuſtentation then was chiefeſt from one Maſter Iſaac, who loved him moſt dearly, and was ever more ready to give than he to take. He gave him in that ſpace above an hundred Marks, which Sum the ſaid Doctor Sands paid him again, and by his other gifts and friendlineſs ſhewed himſelf to be a thankful Man. When his Wife was dead, he went to Zurike, and there was in Peter Martyrs Houſe for the ſpace of 5. weeks. Being there, as they ſate at Dinner, word ſuddenly came that Queen Mary was dead, and D. Sands was ſent for by his friends at Strausborough. That news made Maſter Martyr, and Maſter Jarret then there, very joyful; but Doctor Sands could not rejoyce, it ſmote into his heart that he ſhould be called to miſery.

Maſter Bullinger and the Miniſters feaſted him, and he took his leave and returned to Strausborough where he Preached; and ſo Maſter Grindall and he came towards England, and came to London the ſame day that Queen Elizabeth was Crowned.

The

Anno 1558.

The miraculous Preſervation of the Lady ELIZABETH, now Queen of England, from extream Calamity and danger of Life, in the time of Queen MARY, her Siſter.

The bleſſed protection of Almighty God in preſerving the Lady Elizabeth in her manifold dangers and troubles.

But when all hath been ſaid and told, whatſoever can be recited touching the admirable working of Gods preſent Hand in defending and delivering any one perſon out of thraldom, never was there, ſince the memory of our Fathers, any example to be ſhewed, wherein the Lords mighty Power hath more admirably and bleſſedly ſhewed it ſelf, to the glory of his own Name, to the comfort of all good hearts, and to the publick felicity of this whole Realm, than in the miraculous cuſtody and out-ſcape of this our Soveraign Lady, now Queen, then Lady Elizabeth, in the ſtrait time of Queen Mary her Siſter.

The troubles of the Lady Elizabeth in Q. Maries time.

In which Story we firſt have to conſider in what extream miſery, ſickneſs, fear, and peril her Highneſs was; into what care, what trouble of mind, and what danger of death ſhe was brought: Firſt, with great Routs and Bands of armed Men (and happy was he that might have the carrying of her) being fetched up as the greateſt Traitor in the World, clapped in the Tower, and again toſſed from thence, and from Houſe to Houſe, from Priſon to Priſon, from Poſt to Pillar, at length alſo Priſoner in her own Houſe, and guarded with a ſort of Cut-throats, which ever gaped for the ſpoil, whereby they might be fingering of ſomewhat.

Secondly, We have to conſider again, all this notwithſtanding, how ſtrangely, or rather miraculouſly, ſhe was delivered from danger, what favour and grace ſhe found with the Almighty; who, when all the help of man and hope of recovery was paſt, ſtretched out his mighty Protection, and preſerved her Highneſs, and placed her in this Princely Seat of Reſt and Quietneſs, wherein now ſhe ſitteth, and long may ſhe ſit, the Lord of his glorious mercy grant, we beſeech him.

In which Story, if I ſhould ſet forth at large and at full all the Particulars and Circumſtances thereunto belonging, and as juſt occaſion of the Hiſtory requireth; beſide the importunate length of the Story diſcourſed, peradventure it might move offence to ſome being yet alive, and truth might get me hatred. Yet notwithſtanding I intend (by the grace of Chriſt) therein to uſe ſuch brevity and moderation, as both may be to the glory of God, the diſcharge of the Story, the profit of the Reader, and hurt to none, ſuppreſſing the names of ſome, whom here although I could recite, yet I thought not to be more cruel in hurting their name, than the Queen hath been merciful in pardoning their lives.

The Hiſtory of the Lady Elizabeth.

Therefore now to enter into the Diſcourſe of this tragical matter, firſt here is to be noted, That Queen Mary when ſhe was firſt Queen, before ſhe was crowned, would go no whither, but would have her by the hand, and ſend for her to dinner and ſupper; but after ſhe was crowned, ſhe never dined nor ſupped with her, but kept her aloof from her, &c. After this it happened immediately upon the riſing of Sir Thomas Wyat (as before was mentioned) that the Lady Elizabeth and the Lord Courtney were charged with falſe ſuſpicion of Sir Thomas Wyats riſing. Whereupon Queen Mary, whether for that ſurmiſe, or for what other cauſe I know not, being offended with the ſaid Lady Elizabeth her Siſter, at that time lying in her Houſe at Aſhbridge, the next day after the riſing of Wyat, ſent to her three of her Counſellers, to wit, Sir Richard Southwel, Sir Edward Haſtings, then Maſter of the Horſe, and Sir Thomas Cornwallis, with their retinue and troop of Horſmen, to the number of 250. who at their ſudden and unprovided coming, found her at the ſame time ſore ſick in her Bed, and very feeble and weak of body. Whither when they came, aſcending up to her Graces Chamber, they willed one of her Ladies, whom they met, to declare unto her Grace, that there were certain come from the Court, which had a meſſage from the Queen.

Sir R. Southwel, Sir Ed. Haſtings, and Sir T. Cornwallis ſent to fetch up the Lady Elizabeth, with whom alſo afterward was ſent the L. W Howard, &c.

Her Grace having knowledge thereof, was right glad of their coming; howbeit being then very ſick, and the night far ſpent (which was at ten of the Clock) ſhe requeſted them by the Meſſenger, that they would reſort thither in the morning. To this they anſwered, and by the ſaid Meſſenger ſent word again, that they muſt needs ſee her, and would ſo do, in what caſe ſoever ſhe were. Whereat the Lady being agaſt, went to ſhew her Grace their words, but they, haſtily following her, came ruſhing as ſoon as ſhe into her Graces Chamber unbidden.

The unmannerlineſs of the Knights.

At whoſe ſo ſudden coming into her Bed-chamber, her Grace, being not a little amazed, ſaid unto them; Is the haſte ſuch that it might not have pleaſed you to come to morrow in the morning?

They made anſwer, that they were right ſorry to ſee her in that caſe. And (quoth ſhe) am not glad to ſee you here at this time of the night. Whereunto they anſwered, that they came from the Queen to do their meſſage and duty, which was to this effect, that the Queens pleaſure was, that ſhe ſhould be at London the 7. day of that preſent Month. Whereunto ſhe ſaid, Certes, no Creature more glad than I to come to her Majeſty, being right ſorry that I am not in caſe at this time to wait on her, as you your ſelves do ſee, and can well teſtifie.

Indeed we ſee it true (quoth they) that you do ſay; for which we are very ſorry. Albeit, we let you to underſtand, that our Commiſſion is ſuch, and ſo ſtraitneth us, that we muſt needs bring you with us, either quick or dead. Whereat ſhe being amazed, ſorrowfully ſaid, that their Commiſſion was very ſore; but yet notwithſtanding ſhe hoped it to be otherwiſe, and not ſo ſtrait. Yes verily, ſaid they. Whereupon they calling for two Phyſicians, Dr. Owen and Dr. Wendy, demanded of them whether ſhe might be removed from thence with life, or no. Whoſe anſwer and judgment was, that there was no impediment in their judgment to the contrary, but that ſhe might travel without danger of life.

A ſtrait Commiſſion from the Queen to bring the Lady Elizabeth, either quick or dead.

In concluſion, they willed her to prepare againſt the next Morning at nine of the Clock to go with them, declaring that they had brought with them the Queens Litter for her. After much talk, the Meſſengers declaring how there was no prolonging of times and days, ſo departed to their Chamber, being entertained and cheared, as appertained to their Worſhips.

On the next morrow at the time preſcribed, they had her forth as ſhe was, very faint and feeble, and in ſuch caſe, that ſhe was ready to ſwound three or four times between them. What ſhould I ſpeak here, that cannot well be expreſſed, what an heavy Houſe there was to behold the unreverend and doleful dealing of theſe men, but eſpecially the carnal fear and captivity of their innocent Lady and Miſtreſs.

Lady Elizabeth taketh her journey toward the Queen.

Now to proceed in her Journey from Aſhbridge, all ſick in the Litter, ſhe came to Redborne, where ſhe was guarded all night. From thence to S. Albanes to Sir Ralph Rowlets Houſe, where ſhe tarried that night, both feeble in body, and comfortleſs in mind. From that place they paſſed to Mr. Dods Houſe at Myms, where alſo they remained that night; and ſo from thence ſhe came to Highgate, where ſhe being very ſick, tarried that night and the next day. During which time of her abode, there came many Purſevants and Meſſengers from the Court; but for what purpoſe I cannot tell.

Lady Elizabeth brought up to London.

From that place ſhe was conveighed to the Court, where by the way came to meet her many Gentlemen to accompany her Highneſs, which were very ſorry to ſee her in that caſe. But eſpecially a great multitude of People there were ſtanding by the way, who then flocking about her Litter, lamented and bewailed greatly her eſtate. Now when ſhe came to the Court, her Grace was there ſtreightways ſhut up, & kept as cloſe Priſoner a fortnight, which was till Palm-Sunday, ſeeing neither King nor Queen, nor Lord, nor Friend, all that time, but only the then L. Chamberlain, Sir J. Gage, and the Vice-chamberlain, which were attendant unto the doors. About which time Sir William Sentlowe was called before the Councel. To whoſe charge was

Anno 1558.

was laid, that he knew of Wyats Rebellion. Which he ſtoutly denied, proteſting that hee was a True Man both to God and his Prince, defying all Traytors and Rebels, but being ſtraitly examined, he was in Concluſion committed to the Tower.

Sir. Wil. Kentleme committed to the Tower

The Friday before Palm-Sunday, the Biſhop of Wincheſter with 19. other of the Councel (who ſhalbe here nameleſs) came unto her Grace from the Queens Majeſty, and burdened her with Wyats conſpiracy; which ſhe utterly denied, affirming that ſhe was altogether guiltleſs therein. They being not contented with this charged her Grace with buſineſs made by Sir Peter Carew, and the reſt of the Gentlemen of the Weſt Country: which alſo ſhe utterly denying, cleared her Innocency therein.

Lady Eliz. charged with Sir Tho. Wyats conſpiracy.

Lady Eliz. charged with the buſineſs of Sir Peter Carew.

In Concluſion, after long debating of matters, they declared unto her, that it was the Queens will and pleaſure that ſhe ſhould go unto the Tower, while the matter were further tried and examined.

Lady Eliz. threatned to go to the Tower.

Whereat ſhe being agaſt, ſaid, that ſhe truſted the Queens Majeſty would be a more Gracious Lady unto her, and that her Highneſs would not otherwiſe conceive of her, but that ſhe was a True Woman; declaring furthermore to the Lords, that ſhe was Innocent in all thoſe matters wherein they had burdened her, and deſired them therefore to be a further mean to the Queen her Siſter, that ſhe being a True Woman in thought word, and deed, towards her Majeſty, might not be committed to ſo Notorious and doleful a place, proteſting that ſhe would requeſt no favour at her hand, if ſhe ſhould be proved to have conſented unto any ſuch kind of matter as they laid unto her charge; and therefore in fine deſired their Lordſhips to think of her what ſhe was, and that ſhe might not ſo extremely be dealt withal for her Truth.

Lady Eliz. purgeth her ſelf to the Lords.

Whereunto the Lords anſwered again, that there was no remedy, for that the Queens Majeſty was fully determined that ſhe ſhould go unto the Tower. Wherewith the Lords departed, with their caps hanging over their eyes. But not long after, within the ſpace of an hour or little more, came four of the foreſaid Lords of the Councel, which were the Lord Treaſurer, the Bp. of Wincheſter, the Lord Steward, the Earl of Suſſex, with the Guard; who warding the next Chamber to her, ſecluded all her Gentlemen and Yeomen, Ladys and Gentlewomen; ſaving that for one Gentleman Uſher, three Gentlewomen, and two Grooms of her Chamber, were appointed in their rooms, three other men of the Queens, and three waiting women to give attendance upon her, that none ſhould have acceſs to her Grace.

Lady Eliz. ſervants removed from her.

The Queens men and waiting Women attendant upon Lady Eli.

At which time there was an hundred of Northern Souldiers in white Coats, watching and warding about the Gardens all that night, and a great fire being made in the midſt of the Hall, and two certain Lords watching there alſo with their band and company.

Upon Saturday following, two Lords of the Councel (the one was the Earl of Suſſex, the other ſhall be nameleſs) came and certified her Grace, that forthwith ſhe muſt go unto the Tower, the Barge being prepared for her, and the Tide now ready, which tarrieth for noBody. In heavy mood her Grace requeſted the Lords that ſhe might tarry another Tide, truſting that the next would be better, and more comfortable. But one of the Lords replied, that neither time nor Tide was to be delayed.

The hard dealing of a certain Lord with the Lady Eliz.

And when her Grace requeſted him that ſhe might be ſuffered to write to the Queens Majeſty, he anſwered, that he durſt not permit that: adding, that in his judgment it would rather hurt, than profit her Grace in ſo doing.

The Earl of Suſſex gentle to the Lady Eliz.

But the other Lord, more curteous and favourable (who was the Earl of Suſſex) kneeling down, told her Grace that ſhe ſhould have liberty to write, and as he was a True Man, he would deliver it to the Queens Highneſs, and bring an anſwer of the ſame, whatſoever came thereof. Whereupon ſhe wrote, albeit ſhe could in no caſe be ſuffered to ſpeak with the Queen, to her great diſcomfort, being no offender againſt the Queens Majeſty.

Lady Eliz. writeth to the Queen, but it would not ſerve.

And thus the time and Tide paſſed away for that ſeaſon, they privily appointing all things ready, that ſhe ſhould go the next Tide, which fell about midnight; but for fear ſhe ſhould be taken by the way, they durſt not. So they ſtaied till the next day, being Palm-Sunday, when about nine of the clock theſe two returned again, declaring that it was time for her Grace to depart. She anſwered, if there be no remedy, I muſt be contented, willing the Lords to go on before. Being come forth into the Garden, ſhe did caſt her eyes towards the Window, thinking to have ſeen the Queen, which ſhe could not. Whereat ſhe ſaid, ſhe marvelled much what the Nobility of the Realm meant, which in that ſort would ſuffer her to be led into Captivity, the Lord knew whither, for ſhe did not. In the mean time commandment was given in all London, that every one ſhould keep the Church, and carry their Palms, while in the mean ſeaſon ſhe might be conveighed without all recourſe of people in the Tower.

After all this, ſhe took her Barge with the two foreſaid Lords, three of the Queens Gentlewomen, and three of her own, her Gentleman Uſher, and two of her Grooms, lying and hovering upon the water a certain ſpace, for that they could not ſhoot the Bridge, the Bargemen being very unwilling to ſhoot the ſame, ſo ſoon as they did, becauſe of the danger thereof: for the ſtern of the Boat ſtrook upon the ground, the fall was ſo bigg, and the water was ſo ſhallow, that the Boat being under the Bridge, there ſtaied again a while. At landing ſhe firſt ſtaied and denied to land at thoſe Stairs where all Traytors and Offenders cuſtomably uſed to land, neither well could ſhe, unleſs ſhe ſhould go over her ſhooes. The Lords were gone out of the Boat before, and asked why ſhe came not. One of the Lords went back again to her, and brought word ſhe would not come.

Lady Eliz. ſent to the Tower.

Then ſaid one of the Lords, which ſhall be nameleſs, that ſhe ſhould not chuſe; and becauſe it did then rain, he offered to her his Cloak, which ſhee, putting it back with her hand with a good daſh, refuſed. So ſhe coming out, having one foot upon the ſtair, ſaid; Here landeth as true a Subject, being Priſoner, as ever landed at theſe Stairs: And before thee, O God, I ſpeak it, having no other Friends but thee alone.

The words of Lady Eliz. entring the Tower.

To whom the ſame Lord anſwered again, that if it were ſo, it was the better for her. At her landing there was a great multitude of their Servants and Warders ſtanding in their order. What needed all this, ſaid ſhe? It is the uſe (ſaid ſome) ſo to be when any Priſoner came thither. And if it be (quoth ſhe) for my cauſe, I beſeech you that they may be diſmiſſed. Whereat the Poor Men kneeled down, and with one voice deſired God to preſerve her Grace, who the next day were releaſed of their cold Coats.

After this, paſſing a little further, ſhe ſate down upon a cold ſtone, and there reſted her ſelf. To whom the Lieutenant then being ſaid; Madam, you were beſt to come out of the rain, for you ſit unwholſomely. She then replying, anſwered again; It is better ſitting here, than in a worſe place; for God knoweth, I know not whither you will bring me. With that her Gentleman Uſher wept; ſhe demanding of him what he meant ſo uncomfortably to uſe her, ſeeing ſhe took him to be her comfort, and not to diſmay her, eſpecially for that ſhe knew her truth to be ſuch that no man ſhould have cauſe to weep for her. But forth ſhe went into Priſon.

The Doors were locked and bolted upon her, which did not a little diſcomfort and diſmay her Grace. At what time ſhe called to her Gentlewoman for her Book, deſiring God not to ſuffer her to build her foundation upon the ſands, but upon the Rock, whereby all blaſts of bluſtering weather ſhould have no power againſt her. The doors being thus locked, and ſhe cloſe ſhut up, the Lords had great Conference how to keep ward and watch, every man declaring his own opinion in that behalf, agreeing ſtraitly and circumſpectly to keep her.

The Chriſtian prayer of Lady Eliz.

Then one of them, which was the Lord of Suſſex, ſwearing, ſaid: My Lords, let us take heed, and do no more than our Commiſſion will bear us out in, whatſoever ſhall happen hereafter. And further, let us conſider that ſhe was the King our Maſters daughter; and therefore let us uſe ſuch dealing, that we may anſwer it hereafter, if it ſhall ſo happen: for juſt dealing (quoth he) is always anſwerable; whereunto the other Lords agreed that it was well ſaid of him, and thereupon departed. Being in the Tower, within a days Commandment was that ſhe ſhould have Maſs within her houſe. One Maſter Young was then her Chaplain, and becauſe there was none of her men ſo well learned to help the Prieſt to ſay Maſs, the Maſs ſtaied for that day.

The next day two of her Yeomen, who had gone long to School before, and were learned, had two Abcies provided, and delivered them, ſo that upon the Abcies they ſhould help the Prieſt. One of the ſaid Yeomen, holding the Abcie in his hand, pretending Ignorance at Kyrie Eleyſon, ſet the Prieſt, making as though he could anſwer no farther.

It would make a pitiful and a ſtrange ſtory, here by the way to touch and recite what examination and rackings of Poor Men there were to find out that knife that ſhould cut her throat; what gaping among my Lords of the Clergy, to ſee the day wherein they might waſh their goodly white Rochets in her Innocent Blood; but eſpecially the Biſhop of Wincheſter Stephen Gardiner, then Lord Cancellor, Ruler of the Roſt, who then within 5. days after came unto her, with divers other of the Council, and examined her of the talk that was at Aſhridge, betwixt her and Sir James Acroft, concerning her removing from thence to Dunnington Caſtle, requiring her to declare what ſhe meant thereby.

The Biſhop of Wincheſter enemy to Lady Eliz.

Lady Eliz. examined by the Bp. of Wincheſter

At the firſt ſhe being ſo ſuddenly asked, did not well remember any ſuch houſe; but within a while, well adviſing her ſelf, ſhe ſaid; Indeed (quoth ſhe) I do now remember that I have ſuch a place, but I never lay in it in all my life. And as for any that hath moved me thereunto, I do not remember.

Then to enforce the matter, they brought forth Sir James Acroft. The Biſhop of Wincheſter demanded of her what ſhe ſaid to that man. She anſwered, that ſhe had little to ſay to him, or to the reſt that were then Priſoners in the Tower. But my Lords (quoth ſhe) you do examin every mean Priſoner of me, wherein me thinks you do me great injury. If they have done evil, and offended the Queens Majeſty, let them anſwer to it accordingly. I beſeech you, my Lords, joyn not me in this ſort with any of theſe offenders. And as concerning my going unto Dunnington Caſtle, I do remember that Maſter Hobby and mine Officers, and you Sir James Acroft had ſuch talk, but what is that to the purpoſe, my Lords, but that I may go to min owne houſes at all times?

The Lord of Arundel kneeling down, ſaid, Your Grace ſaith true, and certainly we are very ſory that we have ſo troubled you about ſo vain matters. She then ſaid; My Lords, you do ſift me very narrowly. But well I am aſſured, you ſhall not do more to me than God hath appointed, and ſo God forgive you all.

The friendly ſpeech of the Earl of Arundel to the La. Eliz.

At their departure Sir James Acroft kneeled down, declaring that he was ſory to ſee the day in which he ſhould be brought as a witneſs againſt her Grace. But I aſſure your Grace (ſaid he) I have been marvellouſly toſſed and examined touching your Highneſs, which the Lord knoweth is very ſtrange to me For I take God to record before all your Honours, I do not know any thing of that Crime that you have laid to my charge, and will thereupon take my death, if I ſhould be driven to ſo ſtrict a trial.

Sir James Acroft examined touching the La. Eliz.

That day, or thereabouts, divers of her own Officers, who had made proviſion for her diet, brought the ſame to the outer gate of the Tower, the common raſcal Souldiers receiving it; which was no ſmal grief unto the Gentlemen, the bringers thereof. Wherefore they required to ſpeak with the Lord Chamberlain, being then Conſtable of the Tower. Who, coming before his preſence, declared unto his Lordſhip, that they were much affraid to bring her Graces diet, and to deliver it unto ſuch common and deſperate perſons as they were which did receive it, beſeeching his Honour to conſider her Grace, and to give ſuch order, that her viands might at all times be brought in by them which were appointed thereunto. Yea, Sirs, ſaid he? who appointed you this Office? They anſwered, her Graces Councel. Councel, quoth hee? There is none of them which hath to do either in that caſe, or any thing elſe within this place; and I aſſure you, for that ſhe is a Priſoner, ſhe ſhall be ſerved with the Lieutenants men, as other the Priſoners are.

Theſe were not the officers of the Tower, but ſuch as went in white & green.

Lady Eliz. ſervants reſtrained for bringing her diet to the Tower.

Whereat the Gentlemen ſaid, that they truſted for more favour at his hands, conſidering her perſonage; ſaying, that they miſtruſted not, but that the Queen and her Council would be better to her Grace than ſo, and therewith ſhewed themſelves to be offended at the ungrateful words of the Lord Chamberlain towards their Lady and Miſtreſs.

Anno 1558.

Diſpleaſure between the Lord Chamberlain and Lady Eliz. men.

At this he ſware by God, ſtriking himſelf upon the breaſt, that if they did either frown or ſhrug at him, he would ſet them where they ſhould ſee neither Sun nor Moon. Thus taking their leave, they deſired God to bring him into a better mind toward her Grace, and departed from him.

Upon the occaſion whereof, her Graces Officers made great ſute unto the Queens Council, that ſome might be appointed to bring her diet unto her, and that it might no more be delivered unto the common Souldiers of the Tower. Which being reaſonably conſidered, was by them granted. And thereupon were appointed one of her Gentlemen, her Clerk of her Kitchin, and her two Purveiers to bring in her Proviſion once a day. All which was done, the Warders ever waiting upon the bringers thereof.

The Lord Chamberlain himſelf being always with them, circumſpectly and narrowly watched and ſearched what they brought, and gave heed that they ſhould have no talk with any of her Graces waiting Servants, and ſo warded them both in and out. At the ſaid ſute of her Officers were ſent by the commandment of the Council, to wait upon her Grace, two Yeomen of her Chamber, one of her Robes, two of her Pantry and Ewry, one of her Buttry, another of her Cellar, two of her Kitchin, and one of her Larder, all which continued with her the time of her trouble.

Lady Eliz. waiting men in the Tower.

Here the Conſtable, being at the firſt not very well pleaſed with the coming in of ſuch a company againſt his will, would have had his men ſtill to have ſerved with her Graces men. Which her ſervants at no hand would ſuffer, deſiring his Lordſhip to be contented, for that order was taken, that no ſtranger ſhould come within their Offices. At which anſwer being ſore diſpleaſed, he brake out into theſe threatnings words. Well (ſaid he) I will handle you well enough. Then went hee into the Kitchin, and there would needs have his meat roſted with her Graces meat, and ſaid that his Cook ſhould come thither and dreſs it. To that her Graces Cook anſwered; My Lord, I will never ſuffer any ſtranger to come about her diet, but her own ſworn men, ſo long as I live. He ſaid they ſhould. But the Cook ſaid, his Lordſhip ſhould pardon him for that matter. Thus did he trouble her poor ſervants very ſtoutly; though afterward he were otherwiſe adviſed, and they more courteouſly uſed at his hands. And good cauſe why. For he had good chear, and fared of the beſt, and her Grace payed well for it. Wherefore he uſed himſelf afterward more reverently toward her Grace.

Variance between the Lord Chamberlain and Lady Eliz. ſervants.

After this ſort, having lien a whole Month there in cloſe Priſon, and being very evil at eaſe therewithal, ſhe ſent for the Lord Chamberlain, and the Lord Shandoyes to come and ſpeak with her. Who coming, ſhe requeſted them that ſhe might have liberty to walk in ſome place, for that ſhe felt her ſelf not well. To the which they anſwered, that they were right ſorry that they could not ſatisfie her Graces requeſt, for that they had commandment to the contrary, which they durſt not in any wiſe break. Furthermore, ſhe deſired of them, if that could not be granted, that ſhe might walk but into the Queens lodging. No, nor yet that (they anſwered) could by any means be obtained without a further ſute to the Queen and her Councel. Well, ſaid ſhe, my Lords, if the matter be ſo hard that they muſt be ſued unto for ſo ſmall a thing, and that friendſhip be ſo ſtrict, God comfort me, and ſo they departed, ſhe remaining in her old dungeon ſtill, without any kind of comfort but only God.

Lady Eliz. denied the liberty of the Tower.

The next day after the Lord Shandoyes came again unto her Grace, declaring unto her that he had ſued unto the Councel for further liberty. Some of them conſented thereunto, divers other diſſented, for that there were ſo many priſoners in the Tower. But in concluſion, they did all agree that her Grace might walk into thoſe lodgings, ſo that he and the Lord Chamberlain, and and three of the Queens Gentlewomen did accompany her, the Windows being ſhut, and ſhe not ſuffered to look out at any of them: wherewith ſhe contented her ſelf, and gave him thanks for his good will in that behalf.

Liberty granted to Lady Eliz. to walk in a little garden.

Afterwards there was liberty granted to her Grace to walk in a little Garden the Doors and Gates being ſhut up, which notwithſtanding was as much diſcomfort unto her, as the walk in the Garden was pleaſant and acceptable. At which times of her walking there, the priſoners on that ſide ſtraitly were commanded not to ſpeak or look out at the Windows into the Garden, till her Grace were gone out again, having in conſideration thereof their Keepers waiting upon them for that time. Thus her Grace with this ſmall liberty contented herſelf in God, to whom be praiſe therefore.

Suſpicious heads.

During this time, there uſed a little Boy, a mans Child in the Tower, to reſort to their Chambers, and many times to bring her Grace Flowers, which likewiſe hee did to the other Priſoners that were there. Whereupon naughty and ſuſpicious heads, thinking to make and wring out ſome matter thereof, called on a time the Child unto them, promiſing him Figgs and Apples, and asked of him when hee had been with the Earl of Devonſhire, not ignorant of the Childs wonted frequenting unto him. The Boy anſwered, that hee would go by and by thither. Further, they demanded of him, when he was with the Lady Elizabeths Grace. Hee anſwered, every day. Furthermore, they examined him, what the Lord of Devonſhire, ſent by him to her Grace. The Child ſaid, I will go know what he will give to carry to her. Such was the diſcretion of the Child, being yet but 4. years of age. This ſame is a crafty Boy, quoth the Lord Chamberlain. How ſay you my Lord Shandoyes? I pray you my Lord (quoth the Boy) give me the Figgs you promiſed me. No Mary (quoth he) thou ſhalt be whipped if thou come any more to the Lady Eliz. or the Lord Ccurtney. The Boy anſwered, I will bring my Lady my Miſtreſs more Flowers. Whereupon the Childs Father was commanded to permit the Boy no more to come up into their Chambers.

A young Child examined for bringing flowers to the La. Eliz.

The next day, as her Grace was walking in the Garden the Child peeping in at a hole in the Door, cried unto her, ſaying; Miſtreſs, I can bring you no more Flowers; Whereat ſhe ſmiled, but ſaid nothing, underſtanding thereby what they had done. Wherefore afterwards the Chamberlain rebuked highly his Father, commanding him to put him out of the houſe. Alas Poor Infant! quoth the Father. It is a crafty knave, quoth the Lord Chamberlain; let me ſee him here no more

The Conſtable of the Tower diſcharged of his office. Sir Henry Benfield with his company placed about the Lady Eliz.

The fifth day of May, the Conſtable of the Tower was diſcharged of his Office, and one Sir Henry Benifield placed in his room, a Man unknown to her Grace and therefore the more feared; which ſo ſudden mutation was unto her no little amaze. He brought with him an hundred Souldiers in Blew Coats, wherewith ſhe was marvellouſly diſcomforted, and demanded of ſuch as were about her, whether the Lady Janes Scaffold were taken away or no, fearing by reaſon of their coming, leſt ſhe ſhould have plaied her part. To whom anſwer was made, that the Scaffold was taken away, and that her Grace needed not to doubt of any ſuch Tyranny; for God would not ſuffer any ſuch Treaſon againſt her perſon. Wherewith being contented, but not altogether ſatisfied, ſhe asked what Sir Henry Benifield was, and whether hee was of that Conſcience, or no, that if her murdering were ſecretly committed to his charge he would ſee the execution thereof.

Lady Eliz. in great fear and doubt of life.

Lady Eliz. in doubt, of Sir Henry Benifield.

She was anſwered, that they were ignorant what manner of man he was. Howbeit they perſwaded her that God would not ſuffer ſuch wickdneſs to proceed. Well, quoth ſhe, God grant it be ſo. For thou, O God, canſt mollifie all ſuch Tyrannous hearts, and diſappoint all ſuch cruel purpoſes; and I beſeech thee to hear me thy creature, which am thy ſervant and at thy commandment, truſting by thy Grace ever ſo to remain.

About which time it was ſpread abroad, that her Grace ſhould be carried from thence by this new Jolly Captain and his Souldiers; but whither, it could not be learned. Which was unto her a great grief, eſpecially for that ſuch a company was appointed to her guard, requeſting rather to contiue there ſtill, than to be led thence with ſuch a ſort of Raſcals. At laſt, plain anſwer was made by the Lord Shandoyes, that there was no remedy; but from thence ſhe muſt needs depart to the Manour of Woodſtock, as he thought. Being demanded of her, for what cauſe; for that (quoth he) the Tower is like further to be furniſhed. She being deſirous to know what he meant thereby, demanded wherewith. He anſwered, with ſuch matter as the Queen and Council were determined in that behalf, whereof he had no knowledge; and ſo departed.

In concluſion, on Trinity Sunday, being the nineteenth day of May, ſhe was removed from the Tower, the Lord Treaſurer being then there for the lading of her Carts, and diſcharging the place of the ſame, Where Sir Henry Benifield (being appointed her Jayler) did receive her with a company of rake-hels to guard her, beſides the Lord of Darbies Band, waiting in the Country about for the Moonſhine in the water. Unto whom at length came my Lord of Tame joyned in Commiſſion with the ſaid Sir Henry, for the ſafe guiding of her to Priſon; And they together conveighed her Grace to Woodſtock, as hereafter followeth.

Lady Eliz. removed from the Tower to Woodſtock.

The firſt day they conducted her to Richmond, where ſhe continued all night, being reſtrained of her own men, which were lodged in out-chambers, and Sir Henry Benifields Souldiers appointed in their rooms to give attendance on her Perſon. Whereat ſhe being marvellouſly diſmaied, thinking verily ſome ſecret miſchief to be a working towards her, called her Gentleman Uſher, and deſired him with the reſt of his company to pray for her. For this night (quoth ſhe) I think to die. Wherewith he being ſtriken to the heart, ſaying; God forbid that any ſuch wickedneſs ſhould be pretended againſt your Grace. So comforting her as well as he could, at laſt he braſt out into tears, and went from her down into the Court, where were walking the Lord of Tame, and Sir Henry Benifield.

Lady Eliz. ſecluded from her ſervants.

Lady Eliz. in deſpair of her life.

Then he coming to the Lord of Tame (who had proffered to him much friendſhip) deſired to ſpeak with him a word or two. Unto whom he familiarly ſaid, he would with all his heart. Which when Sir Henry, ſtanding by, heard, he asked what the matter was. To whom the Gentleman Uſher anſwered; No great matter, Sir, (ſaid hee) but to ſpeak with my Lord a word or two.

Lady Eliz. Uſher talketh with the Lord of Tame.

Then when the Lord of Tame came to him, he ſpake on this wiſe: My Lord (quoth he) you have been always my good Lord, and ſo I beſeech you to remain. The cauſe why I come to you at this time, is to deſire your Honour unfainedly to declare unto me whether any danger is meant towards my Miſtreſs this night, or no, that I and my poor fellows may take ſuch part as ſhall pleaſe God to appoint: For certainly we will rather die, than ſhe ſhould ſecretly and innocently miſcarry. Mary (ſaid the Lord of Tame) God forbid that any ſuch wicked purpoſe ſhould be wrought; and rather than it ſhould be ſo, I with my men are ready to die at her foot alſo: and ſo (praiſed be God) thy paſſed that doleful night, with no little heavineſs of heart.

The gentle heart of the Lord of Tame to the Lady Eliz.

Afterwards paſſing over the water at Richmond, going towards Windſor, her Grace eſpied certain of her poor Servants ſtanding on the other ſide, which were very deſirous to ſee her. Whom wen ſhe beheld, turning to one of her men ſtanding by, ſhe ſaid; Yonder I ſee certain of my men: go to them and ſay theſe words from me, Tanquam ovis.i. Like a ſheep to the ſlaughter.

So ſhe paſſing forward to Windſor, was lodged there that night in the Dean of Windſors houſe, a place more meet indeed for a Prieſt than a Princeſs.

Lady Eliz. honourably received and beloved of the people.

And from thence her Grace was guarded and brought the next night to Maſter Dormers houſe, where much People ſtanding by the way, ſome preſented to her one gift, and ſome another, ſo that Sir Henry was greatly moved therewith, and troubled the poor People very ſore; for ſhewing their loving hearts in ſuch a manner, calling them Rebels and Traitors, with ſuch like vile words.

Beſides, as ſhe paſſed through the Villages, the Townſmen rang the Bells, as being joyful of her coming, thinking verily that it had been otherwiſe than it was indeed, as the ſequel proved after to the ſaid poor men. For immediately the ſaid Sir Henry hearing the ſame, ſent his Souldiers thither, who apprehended ſome of the Rigners, ſetteth them in the Stocks, and otherwiſe uncurteouſly miſuſing otherſome for their good wills,

The gentleentertainment of Lady Eliz. at the Lord of Tames houſe.

On the Morrow her Grace paſſing from Mr. Dormers (where was for the time of her abode there, a ſtrait watch kept) came to the Lord of Tames houſe, where ſhe lay all the night, being very princely entertained both of Knights and Ladies, Gentlemen and Gentlewomen. Whereat Sir Henry Benifield grunted, and was highly offended, ſaying unto them, that they could not tell what they did, and were not able to anſwer their doings in that behalf, letting them to underſtand, that ſhe was the Queens Majeſties priſoner, and no otherwiſe; adviſing them therefore to take heed and beware of afterclaps. Whereunto the Lord of Tame anſwered in this wiſe; that he was well adviſed of his doings, being joyned in commiſſion as well as he, adding with warrant, that her Grace might and ſhould in his houſe be merry.

Mr. Benifield grudging at the great entertainment of the Lady Eliz.

The next day, as ſhe ſhould take her journey from Richmond toward Woodſtock, the Lord of Tame with another Gentleman being at Tables, playing, and dropping vie Crownps, the Lady Elizabeth paſſing by, ſtaied and ſaid ſhe would ſee the game played out, which Sir Henry Benifield would ſcarſe permit. The game running long about, and they playing, drop vie Crowns, Come on, ſaith he; I will tarry ſaith ſhe, and will ſee this game out.

After this, Sir Henry went up into a chamber, where was appointed for her Grace a chair, two cuſhions, and a foot-carpet very fair and Prince-like wherein preſumptuouſly he ſate and called one Barwick his man to pull off his boots. Which as ſoon as it was known among the Ladies and Gentles, every one muſed thereat, and laughed him to ſcorn, obſerving his undiſcreet manners in that behalf, as they might very well.

The rude & ungentlemainly behaviour of Sir Henry Benfield.

When ſupper was done, he called my Lord, and willed him that all the Gentlemen and Ladies ſhould withdraw themſelves every one to his lodging, marvelling much that he would permit there ſuch a company, conſidering ſo great a charge committed to him.

Sir Henry (quoth my Lord) content your ſelf, all ſhall be voided, your men and all. Nay, my Souldiers (quoth Sir Henry) ſhall watch all night. The Lord of Tame anſwered, it ſhall not need. Well, ſaid he, need or need not, they ſhall ſo do, miſtruſting belike the company, which God knoweth was without cauſe.

Lady Eliz. cometh to Woodſtock.

The next day her Grace took her Journey from thence to Woodſtock, where ſhe was incloſed, as before in the Tower of London, the Souldiers guarding and warding both within and without the Walls, every day to the number of 60. and in the night without the Wals 40. during the time of her Impriſonment there.

The ſtrait watch kept at Woodſtock.

At length ſhe had gardens appointed for her walk, which was very comfortable to her Grace. But always when ſhe did recreate her ſelf therein, the Doors were faſt locked up, in as ſtrict manner as they were in the Tower, being at the leaſt five or ſix locks between her lodging and her walks; Sir Henry himſelf keeping the keyes, and truſting no man therewith. Wherupon ſhe called him her Jaylor; and he kneeling down, deſired her Grace not to call him ſo, for he was appointed there to be one of her Officers. From ſuch Officers (quoth ſhe) good Lord deliver me.

A merry ſtory concerning the ſtrait keeping of the Lady Eliz.

And now by the way, as digreſſing, or rather refreſhing the Reader, if it be lawful in ſo ſerious a ſtory to recite a matter incident, and yet not impertinent to the ſame; occaſion here moveth, or rather inforceth me to touch briefly what hapned in the ſame place and time by a certain merry conceited man, being then about her Grace: who noting the ſtrait and ſtrange keeping of his Lady and Miſtreſs by the ſaid Sir Henry Benifield, with ſo many locks and doors, with ſuch watch and ward about her, as was ſtrange and wonderful, ſpied a Goat in the ward where her Grace was; and whether to refreſh her oppreſſed mind, or to notifie her ſtrait handling by Sir Henry, or elſe both, he took it upon his neck, and followed her Grace therewith as ſhe was going into her lodging.

Anno 1558.

Which when ſhe ſaw, ſhe asked him what he would do with it, willing him to let it alone. Unto whom the ſaid party anſwered; No, by Saint Mary (if it like your Grace) will I not; for I cannot tell, whether he be one of the Queens Friends, or no. I will carry him to Sir Henry Benifield (God willing) to know what he is. So leaving her Grace, he went with the Goat on his neck, and carried it to Sir Henry Benifield, who when he ſaw him coming with it, askt him, half angerly, what he had there.

The ſtraitneſs of Sir Henry Benifield merrily noted.

Unto whom the party anſwered, ſaying; Sir (quoth he) I cannot tell what he is. I pray you examin him, for I found him in the place where my Ladies Grace was walking, and what talk they have had I cannot tell. For I underſtand him not, but he ſhould ſeem to me to be ſome ſtranger, and I think verily a Welchman, for he hath a white Frize Coat on his Back. And forſomuch as I being the Queens Subject, and perceiving the ſtrait charge committed to you of her keeping, that no ſtranger ſhould have acceſs to her without ſufficient licenſe, I have here found a ſtranger (what he is I cannot tell) in place where her Grace was walking; and therefore for the neceſſary diſcharge of my duty, I thought it good to bring the ſaid ſtranger to you, to examin, as you ſee cauſe; and ſo hee ſet him down. At which his words Sir Henry ſeemed much diſpleaſed, and ſaid; Well, well, you will never leave this gear I ſee: and ſo they departed.

Lady Eliz. with much ado, ſuffered to write to the Queen.

Now to return to the matter from whence we have digreſſed, after her Grace had been there a time, ſhe made ſute to the Council that ſhe might be ſuffered to write to the Queen. Which at laſt was permitted: So Sir Henry Benifield brought her pen, ink, and paper; and ſtanding by her while ſhe wrote (which he ſtraitly obſerved) always ſhe being weary, hee would carry away her Letters, and bring them again when ſhe called for them. In the finiſhing thereof, he would have been meſſenger to the Queen of the ſame. Whoſe requeſt her Grace denied, ſaying, one of her own men ſhould carry them, and that ſhe would neither truſt him, nor any of his therein.

The cruel dealing of Sir Henry Benifield to the Lady Eliz. reproved.

Then he anſwered again, ſaying; None of them durſt be ſo bold (he trowed) to carry her Letters being in that caſe. Yes (quoth ſhe) I am aſſured I have none ſo diſhoneſt that would deny my requeſt in that behalf, but will be as willing to ſerve me now as before. Well (ſaid he) my Commiſſion is to the contrary, and I may not ſo ſuffer it. Her Grace replying again, ſaid; You charge me very often with your Commiſſion. I pray God you may juſtly anſwer the cruel dealing you uſe towards me.

Then he kneeling down, defired her Grace to think and conſider how he was a Servant, and put in truſt there by the Queen to ſerve her Majeſty; proteſting that if the caſe were hers, he would as willingly ſerve her Grace, as now he did the Queens Highneſs. For the which his anſwer her Grace thanked him, deſiring God that ſhe might never have need of ſuch Servants as he was; declaring further to him, that his doings towards her were not good nor anſwerable, but more than all the Friends he had would ſtand by.

To whom Sir Henry replied and ſaid, that there was no remedy but his doings muſt be anſwered, and ſo they ſhould, truſting to make good account thereof. The cauſe which moved her Grace ſo to ſay, was for that he would not permit her Letters to be carried four or five days after the writting thereof. But in fine he was content to ſend for her Gentleman from the Town of Woodſtock, demanding of him whether he durſt enterpriſe the carriage of her Graces Letters to the Queen, or no: and he anſwered, Yea Sir, that I dare, and will with all my heart. Whereupon Sir Henry, half againſt his Stomack, took them unto him.

The Letters of the Lady Eliz. ſent to the Queen.

Then about the eighth of June came down Doctor Owen and Dr. Wendy, ſent by the Queen to her Grace, for that ſhe was ſickly; who miniſtring to her, and letting her Blood, tarried there and attended on her Grace five or ſix days. Then ſhe being well amended, they returned again to the Court, making their good report to the Queen and the Council of her Graces behaviour behaviour and humbleneſs toward the Queens Highneſs. Which her Majeſty hearing, took very thankfully: but the Biſhops thereat repined, looked black in the mouth, and told the Queen, they marvelled that ſhe ſubmitted not her ſelf to her Majeſties mercy, conſidering that ſhe had offended he Highneſs.

he Popiſh relates repined againſt the Lady Eliz.

About this time, her Grace was requeſted by a ſecret Friend, to ſubmit her ſelf to the Queens Majeſty, which would be very well taken, and to her great quiet and commodity. Unto whom ſhe anſwered, that ſhe would never ſubmit her ſelf to them whom ſhe never offended. For (quoth ſhe) if I have offended and am guilty, I then crave no mercy, but the Law, which I am certain (quoth ſhe) I ſhould have had ere this, if it could be proved by me. For I know my ſelf (I thank God) to be out of the danger thereof, wiſhing that I were as clear out of the peril of my enemies, and then I am aſſured I ſhould not ſo be locked and bolted up within walls and doors as I am. God give them a better mind when it pleaſeth him.

ady Eliz. rth requeſted to ſubmit her ſelf to the ueen.

About this time there was a great conſulting among the Biſhops and Gentlemen, touching a marriage for her Grace, which ſome of the Spaniards wiſhed to be with ſome Stranger, that ſhe might go out of the Realm with her Portion; ſome ſaying one thing, and ſome another.

ounſel of ie papiſts marry the ady Eliz. a Spaniard.

A Lord (who ſhall be here nameleſs) being there, at laſt ſaid, that the King ſhould never have any quiet Commonwealth in England, unleſs her Head were ſtriken from the ſhoulders. Whereunto the Spaniards anſwered, ſaying, God forbid that their King and Maſter ſhould have that mind to conſent to ſuch a miſchief.

Vicked ounſel given of the ord Paget gainſt the ady Eliz.

This was the courteous anſwer of the Spaniards to the Engliſhmen, ſpeaking after that ſort againſt their own Countrey. From that day the Spaniards never left off their good perſwaſions to the King, that the like Honour he ſhould never obtain, as he ſhould in delivering the Lady Elizabeths Grace out of Priſon; whereby at length ſhe was happily releaſed from the ſame. Here is a plain and evident example of the good clemencie and nature of the King and his Councellers toward her Grace (praiſed be God therefore) who moved their hearts therein. Then hereupon ſhe was ſent for ſhortly after to come to Hampton-Court.

ſpaniards more favourable to the ady Eliz. han ſome ngliſhmen.

But before her removing away from Woodſtock, we will a little ſtay to declare in what dangers her life was, during this time, ſhe there remained: firſt through fire, which began to kindle between the Boards and Cieling under the Chamber where ſhe lay, whether by a ſpark of fire gotten into a crany, or whether of purpoſe by ſome that meant her no good, the Lord doth know. Nevertheleſs a worſhipful Knight of Oxfordſhire, which was there joyned the ſame time with Sir Henry Benifield in keeping that Lady (who then took up the Boards and quenched the fire) verily ſuppoſed it to be done of purpoſe.

ady Eliz. n danger of re.

Furthermore it is thought, and alſo affirmed (if it be true) of one Paul Peny a Keeper of Wood-ſtock a notorious Ruffian and a Butcherly wretch, that he was appointed to kill the ſaid Lady Elizabeth: who both ſaw the man being often in her ſight, and alſo knew thereof.

ady Eliz. n danger of illing.

Another time, one of the Privy Chamber, a great man about the Queen, and chief darling of Stephen Gardiner, named Maſter James Baſſet, came to Blandenbridge a mile from Woodſtock, with twenty or thirty Privy Coats and ſent for Sir Henry Benifield to come and ſpeak with, him. But as God would, which diſpoſeth all things after the purpoſe of his own will, ſo it happened, that a little before, the ſaid Henry Benefield was ſent for by Poſt to the Council, leaving ſtraight word behind him with his Brother, that no man, whatſoever he were, though coming with a Bill of the Queens hand, or any other Warrant, ſhould have acceſs to her before his return again. By reaſon whereof it ſo fell out, that Maſter Benifields Brother, coming to him at the Bridge, would ſuffer him in no caſe to approach in, who otherwiſe (as is ſuppoſed) was appointed violently to murther the innocent Lady.

Another conſpiracy of murder againſt Lady Eliz.

Lady Eliz. preſerved by the Lords providence from execution in the Tower.

Wincheſters Platform overthrown. Whereof read before.

In the life of Stephen Gardiner we declared before, how that the Lady Elizabeth being in the Tower, a Writ came down, ſubſcribed with certain hands of the Council for her execution. Which if it were certain, as it is reported, Wincheſter (no doubt) was deviſer of that miſchievous drift: and doubtleſs the ſame Achitophel had brought his impious purpoſe that day to paſs, had not the fatherly Providence of Almighty God (who is always ſtronger than the Devil) ſtirred up Maſter Bridges, Lieutenant the ſame time of the Tower, to come in haſte to the Queen, to give Certificate thereof, and to know further her conſent touching her Siſters death: Whereupon it followed, that all that devices was diſappointed, and Winchеſters devilliſh platform, which he ſaid he had caſt, through the Lords great goodneſs came to no effect.

Where moreover is to be noted, that during the imprisonment of this Lady and Princeſs, one Maſter Edmund Tremaine was on the Rack, and Maſter Smithwike, and divers other in the Tower were examined, and divers offers made to them to accuſe the guiltleſs Lady, being in her Captivity. Howbeit, all that notwithſtanding, no matter could be proved by all Examinations, as ſhe the ſame time lying at Wood-ſtock had certain intelligence by the means of one John Gayer; who, under a colourable pretence of a Letter to Mrs. Cleve from her Father, was let in, and ſo gave them ſecretly to underſtand of all this matter. Whereupon the Lady Elizabeth, at her departing out from Woodſtock, wrote theſe Verſes with her Diamond in a glaſs Window.

Much ſuſpected by me:
Nothing proved can be.

Quoth Elizabeth, Priſoner.

Verſes written by Lady Eliz. in the Glaſs Window.

And thus much touching the Troubles of Lady Elizabeth, at Woodſtock. Whereunto this is more to be added, that during the ſame time, the Lord of Tame had laboured to the Queen, and became Surety for her, to have her from Woodſtock to his Houſe, and had obtained grant thereof. Whereupon preparation was made accordingly, and all things ready in expectation of her coming. But through the procurement either of Maſter Benifield, or by the doing of Wincheſter her mortal Enemy, Letters came over night to the contrary; whereby her Journey was ſtopped.

Lady Eliz. not ſuffered to come to the Lord of Tames houſe.

Thus this worthy Lady, oppreſſed with continual ſorrow, could not be permitted to have recourſe to any Friends ſhe had, but ſtill in the hands of her Enemies was left deſolate, and utterly deſtitute of all that might refreſh a doleful heart, fraught full of terrour and thraldom. Whereupon no marvel if ſhe hearing upon a time, out of her Garden at Woodſtock, a certain Milkmaid ſinging pleaſantly, wiſhed her ſelf to be a Milkmaid as ſhe was, ſaying that her caſe was better, and life more merry than was hers, in that ſtate as ſhe was.

Lady Eliz. wiſheth her ſelf to be a Milk-maid.

Now after theſe things thus declared, to proceed further there where we left before, Sir Henry Benifield and his Souldiers, with the Lord of Tame, and Sir Ralph Chamberline, guarding and waiting upon her, the firſt Night from Woodſtock ſhe came to Ricot. In which Journy ſuch a mighty wind did blow, that her Servants were fain to hold down her cloaths about her: Inſomuch that her Hood was twice or thrice blown from her Head. Whereupon ſhe deſiring to return to a certain Gentlemans Houſe there near, could not be ſuffered by Sir Henry Benifield ſo to do, but was conſtrained under an Hedge to trim her Head as well as ſhe could.

Lady Eliz. removed from Woodſtock to Hampton Court.

After this, the next night they journyed to Maſter Dormers, and ſo to Colbroke, where ſhe lay all that night at the George, and by the way coming to Colbroke, certain of her Graces Gentlemen and Yeomen met her, to the number of threeſcore, much to all their comforts, which had not ſeen her Grace of long ſeaſon before: notwithſtanding they were commanded in the Queens Name immediately to depart the Town, to both their, and her Graces no little heavineſs, who could not be ſuffered once to ſpeak with them. So that night all her men were taken from her, ſaving her Gentleman Uſher, three Gentlewomen, two Grooms, and one of her Wardrobe, the Souldiers watching and warding about the Houſe, and ſhe cloſe ſhut up within her Priſon.

The next day following, her Grace entred Hampton-Court on the backſide, into the Princes Lodging, the doors being ſhut to her, and ſhe guarded with Souldiers, as before, lay there a fortnight at the leaſt, ere any had recourſe unto her: At length came the Lord William Haward, who marvellous honourably uſed her Grace. Whereat ſhe took much comfort, and requeſted him to be a mean that ſhe might ſpeak with ſome of the Council. To whom (not long after) came the Biſhop of Wincheſter, the Lord of Arundel, the Lord of Shrewsbury, Secretary Peter, who with great humility humbled themſelves to her Grace. She again likewiſe ſaluting them, ſaid, My Lords, I am glad to ſee you: for me think, I have been kept a great while from you deſolately alone. Wherefore I would deſire you to be a mean to the King and Queens Majeſties, that I may be delivered from Priſon, wherein I have been kept a long ſpace, as to you my Lords it is not unknown.

Lord Wil. Howard gentle and favourable to Lady Eliz.

When ſhe had ſpoken, Stephen Gardiner the Biſhop of Wincheſter kneeled down, and requeſted that ſhe would ſubmit her ſelf to the Queens Grace, and in ſo doing he had no doubt, but that her Majeſty would be good to her. She made anſwer, that rather than ſhe would ſo do, ſhe would lie in Priſon all the days of her life; adding, that ſhe craved no mercy at her Majeſties Hand, but rather deſired the Law, if ever ſhe did offend her Majeſty in thought, word or deed: And beſides this, in yielding (quoth ſhe) I ſhould ſpeak againſt my ſelf, and confeſs my ſelf to be an offendor, which I never was towards her Majeſty, by occaſion whereof the King and the Queen might ever hereafter conceive of me an evil Opinion: And therefore I ſay, my Lords, it were bettter for me to lie in Priſon for the Truth, than to be abroad and ſuſpected of my Prince. And ſo they departed, promiſing to declare her Meſſage to the Queen.

Lady Eliz. requeſted by Winch. to ſubmit her ſelf to the Queens mercy.

Lady Eliz. ſtandeth to be tried by the Law.

On the next day the Biſhop of Wincheſter came again unto her Grace, and kneeling down declared that the Queen marvelled that ſhe would ſo ſtoutly uſe her ſelf, not confeſſing that ſhe had offended: ſo that it ſhould ſeem that the Queens Majeſty had wrongfully impriſoned her Grace.

Talk again between Wincheſter and Lady Elizabeth. Laly Eliz. denieth to confeſs any fault done to the Queen.

Nay, quoth the Lady Elizabeth, it may pleaſe her to puniſh me as ſhe thinketh good.

Well quoth Gardiner, her Majeſty willeth me to tell you, that you muſt tell another Tale ere that you be ſet at Liberty.

Her Grace anſwered, that ſhe had as lief be in Priſon with honeſty and Truth, as to be abroad, ſuſpected of her Majeſty; and this that I have ſaid, I will (ſaid ſhe) ſtand unto, for I will never bely my ſelf.

Wincheſter again kneeled down, and ſaid, Then your Grace hath the vantage of me and other the Lords for your wrong and long impriſonment.

What vantage I have (quoth ſhe) you know, taking God to record, I ſeek no vantage at your hands for your ſo dealing with me, but God forgive you and me alſo. With that the reſt kneeled, deſiring her Grace that all might be forgotten, and ſo departed, ſhe being faſt Locked up again.

Lady, Eliz. ſent for to the Queen.

A ſevennight after the Q. ſent for her Graceat ten of the Clock in the night to ſpeak with her: for ſhe had not ſeen her in two years before. Yet for all that ſhe amazed at the ſudden ſending for, thinking it had been worſe than afterwards it proved, deſired her Gentlemen and Gentlewomen to pray for her, for that ſhe could not tell whether ever ſhe ſhould ſee them again or no.

At which time Sir Henry Benifield with Mrs. Clarencius coming in, her Grace was brought into the Garden unto a ſtairs foot that went into the Queens Lodging, her Graces Gentlewoman waiting upon her, her Gentleman Uſher and her Grooms going before with Torches; where her Gentlemen and Gentlewomen being commanded to ſtay all ſaving one Woman, Mrs. Clarencius conducted her to the Queens Bed-Chamber where her Majeſty was.

Lady Eliz. brought to the Queens Bed-chamber.

At the ſight of whom her Grace kneeled down, and deſired God to preſerve her Majeſty, not miſtruſting but that ſhe ſhould try her ſelf as true a Subject towards her Majeſty, as ever did any, and deſired her Majeſty even ſo to judge of her; and ſaid, that ſhe ſhould not find her to the contrary, whatſoever report otherwiſe had gone of her.

Anno 1558.

To whom the Queen anſwered, you will not confeſs your offence, but ſtand ſtoutly to your Truth; I pray God it may ſo fall out.

Talk between the Queen and Lady Eliz.

If it doth not (quoth the Lady Elizabeth) I requeſt neither Favour nor Pardon at your Majeſties hands. Well (ſaid the Queen) you ſtiffly ſtill perſevere in your Truth. Belike you will not confeſs but that you have been wrongfully puniſhed.

I muſt not ſay ſo (if it pleaſe your Majeſty) to you.

Why then (ſaid the Queen) belike you will to other.

Smal comfort at the Queens hand toward her Sister.

No, if it pleaſe your Majeſty (quoth ſhe) I have born the Burden and muſt bear it. I humbly beſeech your Majeſty to have a good Opinion of me, and to think me to be your true Subject, not only from the beginning hitherto, but for ever, as long as Life laſteth: and ſo they departed with very few comfortable words of the Queen, in Engliſh: but what ſhe ſaid in Spaniſh, God knoweth. It is thought that King Philip was there behind a Cloth, and not ſeen, and that he ſhewed himſelf a very Friend in that matter, &c.

King Philip thought to be a Friend to Lady Elizabeth.

Lady Eliz. by Gods providence ſet at liberty Sir H. Benifield diſcharged.

Thus her Grace departing, went to her Lodging again, and that day ſevennight was releaſed of Sir Henry Benifield her Gaoler (as ſhe termed him) and his Souldiers, and ſo her Grace being ſet at liberty from impriſonment went into the Country, and had appointed to go with her Sir Thomas Pope, one of Q. Maries Counſellors, and one of her Gentlemen Uſhers, Maſter Gage: and thus ſtraitly was ſhe looked to all Queen Maries time, And this is the diſcourſe of her Highneſs impriſonment.

Mrs. Aſhley ſent to the Fleet 3. Gentlewomen of Lady Eliz. ſent to the Tower

Then there came to Lambeyre, Mr. Jerningham, and Mr. Noris Gentleman Uſher, Queen Maries men, who took away from her Grace, Mrs. Aſhley to the Fleet, and three other of her Gentlewomen to the Tower; which thing was no little trouble to her Grace, ſaying, that ſhe thought they would fetch all away at the end. But God be praiſed, ſhortly after was fetched away Gardiner through the merciful providence of the Lords goodneſs, by occaſion of whoſe opportune deceaſe (as is partly touched in this Story before) the life of this excellent Princeſs, the wealth of all England was preſerved. For this is credibly to be ſuppoſed, that the ſaid wicked Gardiner of Wincheſter had long laboured his wits, and to this only moſt principal mark bent all his devices, to take this our happy and dear Sovereign out of the way, as both by his words and doings before notified, may ſufficiently appear.

Note the wonderful working of the Lords providence in ſaving of Lady Eliz.

Lady Eliz. delivered by the death of Ste. Gardiner.

But ſuch was the gracious and favorable providence of the Lord, to the preſervation not only of her Royal Majeſty, but alſo of the miſerable and woful ſtate of this whole Iſland, and poor Subjects of the ſame, whereby the proud Platforms and peeviſh Practices of this wicked Achitophel prevailed not: but contrariwiſe, both he, and all the Snares and Trapps of his pernicious counſel laid againſt another, were turned to a Net to catch himſelf, according to the Proverb, Malum conſilium conſultori peſſimum.

How the Lord here began to work for Lady Eliz.

After the death of this Gardiner, followed the death alſo and drooping away of other her Enemies, whereby by little and little her Jeopardy decreaſed, fear diminiſhed, hope of comfort began to appear as out of a dark Cloud: and albeit as yet her Grace had no full aſſurance of perfect ſafety, yet more gentle entertainment daily did grow unto her, till at length in the month of November, and ſeventeenth day of the ſame, three years after the death of Stephen Gardiner, followed the death of Queen Mary, as hereafter God granting ſhall be more declared.

Although this Hiſtory following be not directly appertaining to the former matter, yet the ſame may here not unaptly be inſerted, for that it doth diſcover and ſhew forth the malicious hearts of the Papiſts toward this vertuous Queen our Soveraign Lady in the time of Queen Mary her Siſter, which is reported, as a Truth credibly told, by ſundry honeſt Perſons, of whom ſome are yet alive, and do teſtifie the ſame. The matter whereof is this.

A note of a Story declaring the malignant hearts of the Papiſts toward Lady Elizabeth.

Anno 1558.

Soon after the stir of Wiat and the troubles that happened to this Queen for that cause, it fortuned one Robert Farrer a Haberdasher of London, dwelling near unto Newgate-Market, in a certain morning to bee at the Rose Tavern (from whence he was seldom absent) and falling to his common drink, as he was ever accustomed, and having in his company three other companions like to himself, it chanced the same time one Laurence Shiriff Grocer, dwelling also not farr from thence, to come into the said Tavern, and finding there the said Farrer, (to whom of long time he had born good will) sate down in the seat to drink with him, and Farrer having in his full cups, and not having consideration who were present, began to talk at large, and namely against the Lady Elizabeth, and said, that Jill hath bin one of the chief Doers of this Rebellion of Wiat, and before all be done, she and all the Hereticks her partakers, shall well understand of it. Some of them hope that she shall have the Crown, but she and they (I trust) that so hope, shall hop headless, or be fried with fagots before she come to it.

Robert Farrer or London a tore enemy to Lady Eliz.

Laurence Shiriff sworn friend and servant to Lady Eliz. his Mrs.

Rob. Farrer raileth against Lady Elizabeth.

The foresaid Laurence Shiriff Grocer being then Servant unto the Lady Elizabeth, and sworn unto her Grace, could no longer forbear his old acquaintance and neighbour Farrer in speaking so unreverently of his Mistress, but said unto him; Farrer, I have loved thee as a neighbour, and have had a good opinion of thee, but hearing of thee that I now hear, I defie thee; and I tell thee I am her Graces sworn Servant, and she is a Princess, and the Daughter of a Noble King, and it evil becometh thee to call her a Jill, and for thy so saying. I say thou art a knave, and I will complain upon thee. Do thy worst said Farrer: for that I said, I will say again, and so Shiriff came from his company.

The part of a good trusty Servant.

Rob. Farrer complained of to the Commissioners but no redress was had.

Shortly after the said Shiriff, taking an honest neighbour with him, went before the Commissioners to complain; the which Commissioners sate then at Boner the Bishop of Londons house beside Pauls; and there were present, Boner, then being the chief Commissioner, the Lord Mordant, Sir John Baker, Dr. Darbishire Chancellor to the Bishop, Doctor Story, Doctor Harpsfield, and other.

The aforesaid Shiriff coming before them, Declared the manner of the said Rob. Farrers talk against the Lady Elizabeth. Boner answered, Peradventure you took him worse than he meant.

Yea my Lord, said Dr. Story, if you knew the man as I do, you would say there is not a better Catholick, nor an honester man in the City of London.

Well, said Shiriff, my Lord, she is my gracious Lady and Mistress, and it is not to be suffered that such a Varlet as he is should call so Honourable a Princess by the name of a Jill: And I saw yesterday in the Court that my Lord Cardinal Pool, meeting her in the Chamber of Presence, kneeled down on his knees and kissed her hand; and I saw also that King Philip meeting her, made her such obeysance, that his knee touched the ground; and then me thinketh it were too much to suffer such a Varlet as this is, to call her Jill, and to wish them to hop headless that shall wish her Grace to enjoy the possession of the Crown, when God shall send it unto her, as in the right of her inheritance. Yea? stay there quoth Boner. When God sendeth it unto her, let her enjoy it. But truly (said he) the man that spake the words that you have reported meant nothing against the Lady Eliz. your Mistress, and no more do we: but he like an honest and zealous man feared the alteration of Religion, which every good man ought to fear: and therefore (said Boner,) good man go your ways home and report well of us toward your Mistress, and we will send for Farrer and rebuke him for his rash and undiscreet words, and we trust he will not do the like again. And thus Shiriff came away, and Farrer had a flap with a Fox tail.

How B. Boner and Dr. Story bare with him that railed against Lady Elizabeth.

Now that ye may be fully informed of the aforesaid Farrer, whom Doctor Story praysed for so good a man, ye shall understand that the same Farrer having two Daughters being handsom Maidens, the elder of them for a sum of money he himself delivered to Sir Roger Cholmley to be at his commandment, the other he sold to a Knight called Sir William Goddelphin to be at his commandment; whom he made his lacky, and so carried her with him, being apparelled in mans apparel, to Bulein, and the said Farrer followed the camp. He also was a great and an horrible Blasphemer of God, and a common accuser of honest and quiet men, also a common drunkard. And now I refer the life of these Catholicks to your judgment, to think of them as you please.

Note the ungodly life of these Catholicks.

But of this matter enough, and too much. Now let us return where we left before, which was at the Death of Queen Mary. After whose decease succeeded her foresaid Sister Lady Elizabeth into the right of the Crown of England: who after so long Restrainment, so great dangers escaped, such blusterous storms overblown, so many injuries digested and wrongs sustained, by the mighty protection of our merciful God, to our no small comfort and commodity, hath been exalted and erected out of thrall to liberty, out of danger to peace and quietness, from dread to dignity, from misery to Majesty, from mourning to ruling: briefly, of a Prisoner made a Princess, and placed in her Throne Royal, proclaimed now Queen, with as many glad hearts of her Subjects, as ever was any King or Queen in this Realm before her, or ever shall be (I dare say) hereafter.

Lady Eliz. proclaimed Queen the same day that Q. Mary died.

The Lord make England thankful to him for his great benefits.

Touching whose flourishing state, her Princely Reign and peaceable government, with divers and sundry other things incident to the same, and especially touching the great stirres and alterations which have happened in other foreign Nations, and also partly among our selves here at home, forasmuch as the tractation hereof requireth another Volume by it self, I shall therefore defer the Reader to the next Book or Section insuing; wherein (if the Lord so please to sustain me with leave and life) I may have to discourse of all and singular such matters done and atchieved in these our latter days and memory, more at large.

Now then after these so great afflictions falling upon this Realm, from the first beginning of Queen Maries Reign, wherein so many Men, Women, and Children were burned, many imprisoned, and in Prisons starved, divers exiled, some spoyled of goods and possessions, a great number driven from house and home, so many weeping eyes, so many sobbing hearts, so many Children made Fatherless, so many Fathers bereft of their Wives and Children, so many vexed in Conscience, and divers against Conscience constrained to recant; and in conclusion, never a good man almost in all the Realm but suffered something during all the time of this bloody persecution; after all this (I say) now we are come at length (the Lord be praised) to the 17. day of November: which day as it brought to the persecuted Members of Christ rest from their carefull mourning, so it easeth me somewhat likewise of my laborious writing, by the death I mean of Q. Mary. Who being long sick before, upon the said 17. day of November, in the year above said about three or four a clock in the morning, yielding Life to nature, and her Kingdom to Queen Elizabeth her Sister.

Novemb. 17. Q. Mary endeth, Q. Elizabeth beginneth her Reign.

The manner of Q. Maries death.

As touching the manner of whose death, some say that she died of a Tympany, some (by her much sighing before her death) supposed she died of thought and sorrow. Whereupon her Council seeing her sighing, and desirous to know the cause, to the end they might minister the more ready consolation unto her, feared, as they said, that she took that thought for the Kings Majesty her Husband, which was gone from her. To whom she answering again, Indeed (said she) that may be one cause, but that is not the greatest wound that pierceth my oppressed mind: but what that was she would not express to them.

Albeit, afterward she opened the matter more plainly to Mr. Rise and Mistress Clarentius (if it be true that they told me, which heard it of Mr. Rise himself) who then being most familiar with her, and most bold about her, told her that they feared she took thought for King Philips departing from her. Not that only (said she) but when I am dead and opened, you shall find Calice lying in my heart, &c. And here an end of Q. Mary and of her persecution.

Q. Mary took thought for the loss of Calice.

More English Blood spilled in Q. Maries time, than ever was in any Kings Reign before her.

Of which Queen this truly may be affirmed, and left in story for a perpetual memorial or Epitaph for all Kings and Queens that shall succeed her, to be noted, That before her never was read in story of any King or Queen

Queen of England since the time of of King Lucius under whom in time of peace, by hanging, heading, burning, and prisoning, so much Christian Blood, so many Englishmens lives were spilled within this Realm, as under the said Queen Mary for the space of four years was to be seen, and I beseech the Lord never may be seen hereafter.

A brief declaration, shewing the unprosperous success of Queen Mary in persecuting Gods People, and how mightily God wrought against her in all her Affairs.

The Reign of Q. Mary how unprosperous it was both to her, and to her Realm, in all respects.

NOw, forasmuch as Queen Mary, during all the time of her Reign, was such a vehement Adversary and persecutor against the sincere professors of Christ Jesus and his Gospel: for the which there be many which do highly magnifie and approve her doings therein, reputing her Religion to be sound and Catholick and her proceedings to be most acceptable and blessed of Almighty God: to the intent therefore, that all men may understand, how the blessing of the Lord God did not only not proceed with her proceedings, but contrariwise rather, how his manifest displeasure ever wrought against her, in plaguing both her and her Realm, and in subverting all her counsels and attempts, whatsoever she took in hand, we will bestow a little time therein, to perpend and survey the whole course of her doings and chievances, and consider what success she had in the same. Which being well considered, we shall never find any reign of any Prince in this Land, or any other, which did ever shew in it (for the proportion of time,) so many arguments of Gods great wrath and displeasure, as was to be seen in the Reign of this Queen Mary, whether we behold the shortness of her time, or the unfortunate event of all her purposes, who seemed never to purpose any thing that came luckily to pass, neither did any thing frame to her purpose, whatsoever she took in hand touching her own private Affairs.

Q. Mary never had good success in any thing she went about.

A good King always maketh a flourishing Realm.

Of good Kings we read in the Scripture, in shewing mercy and pity, in seeking Gods will in his Word, and subverting the Monuments of Idolatry, how God blessed their ways, encreased their honours, and mightily prospered all their proceedings; as we see in King. David, Solomon, Josias, Josaphat, Ezechias, with such other. Manasses made the streets of Jerusalam to swim with the Blood of his Subjects, but what came of it the Text doth testifie.

Comparison between the Reign of Q. Mary and Q. Eliz.

Of Queen Elizabeth, which now reigneth among us, this we must needs say, which we see, that she in sparing the Blood, not only of Gods Servants, but also of Gods Enemies, hath doubled now the Reign of Queen Mary her Sister, with such abundance of peace and prosperity, that it is hard to say, whether the Realm of England felt more of Gods wrath in Queen Maries time, or of Gods favor and mercy in these so blessed and peaceable days of Q. Elizabeth.

Gamaliels reason. Acts 5.

Gamaliel speaking his mind in the Council of the Pharisees concerning Christs Religion, gave this reason; That if it were of God, it should continue, whosoever said nay; If it were not, it could not stand. So may it be said of Queen Mary and her Romish Religion, That if it were so perfect and Catholick as they pretend, and the contrary Faith of the Gospellers were so detestable and Heretical as they make it; how cometh it then, that this so Catholick a Queen, such a necessary Pillar of his Spouse the Church, continued no longer, till she had utterly rooted out of the Land this Heretical generation? yea how chanced it rather, that Almighty God, to spare these poor Hereticks, rooted out Queen Mary so soon from her Throne, after she had reigned but only five years and five months?

Q. Mary prospered so long as she went not against the Lord.

Now furthermore, how God blessed her ways and endeavours in the mean time, while she thus persecuted the true Servants of God, remaineth to be discussed. Where this is first to be noted, that when she first began to stand for the title of the Crown, and yet had wrought no resistance against Christ and his Gospel, but had promised her faith to the Suffolk men, to maintain the Religion left by King Edward her Brother, so long God went with her, advanced her, and by the means of the Gospellers brought her to the possession of the Realm.

Q. Maries promise to the Gospellers broken

But after that she breaking her promise with God and man, began to take part with Stephen Gardiner, and had given over her Supremacy unto the Pope, by-and-by Gods blessing left her, neither did any thing well thrive with her afterward during the whole time of her Regiment. Anno 1558.

The Ship called the Great Harry burned.

For first incontinently the fairest and greatest Ship she had, called Great Harry, was burned; such a Vessel as in all these parts of Europe was not to be matched.

Q. Maries Marriage with a stranger.

Then would she needs bring in King Philip, and by her strange, marriage with him, to make the whole Realm of England Subject unto a Stranger. And all that notwithstanding, that she either did or was able to do, she could not bring to pass to set the Crown of England upon his head. With King Philip also came in the Pope and his Popish Mass; with whom also her purpose was to restore again the Monks and Nuns unto their places, neither lacked there all kind of attempts to the uttermost of her ability: and yet therein also God stopt her of her will, that it came not forward. After this, what a dearth happened in her time here in her Land? the like whereof hath not lightly in England been seen, insomuch that in sundry places her poor Subjects were fain to feed of Acorns for want of Corn.

Q. Mary disappointed of her purpose in Crowning K. Philip.

Q. Mary stopped of her will in restoring Abbeylands.

Furthermore, where other Kings are wont to be renowned by some worthy victory and proweſs by them atchieved, let us now see what Valiant Victory was gotten in this Queen Maries days. King Edward the sixth her blessed Brother, how many Rebellions did he suppress in Devonshire, in Norfolk, in Oxfordshire and elsewhere? what a famous Victory in his time was gotten in Scotland, by the singular working (no doubt) of Gods blessed hand) rather than by any expectation of Man? King Edward the third (which was the eleventh King from the conquest) by Princely puissance purchased Calice unto England, which hath been kept English ever since, till at length came Queen Mary, the eleventh likewise from the said King Edward, which lost Calice from England again: so that the winnings of this Queen were very small, what the losses were let other men judge.

The victory of K. Edward 6. in Scotland.

The ill luck of Q. Mary in losing of Calice. The 11. K. from the Conquest got Calice and the 12. again after him lost it.

Hitherto the affairs of Queen Mary have had no great good success, as you have heard. But never worse success had any Woman, than had she in her Childbirth. For seeing one of these two must needs be granted, that either she was with Child or not with Child: if she were with Child and did Travel, why was it not seen? if she were not, how was all the Realm deluded? And in the mean while, where were all the Prayers, the Solemn Processions, the devout Masses of the Catholick Clergy? why did they not prevail with God, if their Religion were so godly as they pretend? If their Masses Ex opere operato be able to fetch Christ from Heaven, and to reach down to Purgatory: how chanced then they could not reach to the Queens Chamber, to help her in her Travel, if she had been with Child indeed? if not, how then came it to pass, that all the Catholick Church of England did so err, and was so deeply deceived? Queen Mary after these manifold Plagues and Corrections, which might sufficiently admonish her of Gods disfavour provoked against her, would not yet cease her persecution, but still continued more and more to revenge her Catholick Zeal upon the Lords faithful People, setting fire to their poor Bodies by dosens and half dosens. Whereupon Gods wrathful indignation, increasing more and more against her, ceased not to touch her more near with private Misfortunes and Calamities. For after that he had taken from her the fruit of Children (which chiefly and above all things she desired) then he bereft her of that, which of all earthly things should have been her chief stay of Honour, and staff of Comfort, that is, withdrew from her the Affection and Company even of her own Husband, by whose marriage she had promised before to her self whole Heaps of such Joy and Felicity: but now the Omnipotent Governor of all things so turned the Wheel of her own spinning against her, that her High Buildings of such Joys and Felicities came all to a Castle come down; her hopes being confounded, her purposes disappointed, and she now brought to desolation; who seemed neither to have the favour of God, nor the hearts of her Subjects, nor yet the love of her Husband; who neither had fruit by him while she had

The final end and death of Q. Mary.

At laſt, when all theſe fair admonitions would take no place with the Queen, nor remove her to revoke her bloody Laws, nor to ſtay the Tyranny of her Prieſts, nor yet to ſpare her own Subjects, but that the poor Servants of God were drawn daily by Heaps moſt pitifully as Sheep to the ſlaughter, it ſo pleaſed the Heavenly Majeſty of Almighty God, when no other remedy would ſerve, by death to cut her off, which in her life ſo little regarded the life of others, giving her Throne, which ſhe abuſed to the deſtruction of Chriſts Church and People, to another who more temperately and quietly could guide the ſame, after ſhe had reigned here the ſpace of five years and five months. The ſhortneſs of which years and reign, ſcarce we find in any other Story of King or Queen ſince the Conqueſt or before (being come to their own Government) ſave only in King Richard the third.

Q. Mary Reigned 5. years and 5 months.

The ſhortneſs of Q. Maries Reign noted.

An admonition to all Chriſtian Rulers,

And thus much here, as in the cloſing up of this Story, I thought to inſinuate, touching the unlucky and ruſful Reign of Queen Mary: not for any detraction to her place and State Royal, whereunto ſhe was called of the Lord, but to this only intent and effect, that forſomuch as ſhe would needs ſet her ſelf ſo confidently to work and ſtrive againſt the Lord and his proceedings, all Readers and Rulers may not only ſee how the Lord did work againſt her therefore, but alſo by her may be advertiſed and learn what a Perillous thing it is for Men and Women in Authority, upon blind Zeal and Opinion, to ſtirr up perſecution in Chriſtians Church, to the effuſion of Chriſtian Blood, leſt it prove in the end with them (as it did here) that while they think to perſecute Hereticks, they ſtumble at the ſame Stone as did the Jews in perſecuting Chriſt and his true Members to death, to their own confuſion and deſtruction.

The ſevere puniſhment of God upon the perſecutors of his People and Enemies to his Word, with ſuch alſo as have been Blaſphemers, contemners, and mockkers of his Religion.

A treatiſe of Gods ſevere Puniſhment againſt cruel Perſecutors, and Enemies to his Word.

LEaving now Queen Mary, being dead and gone, I come to them which under her were the chief Miniſters and doers in this perſecution, the Biſhops (I mean) and Prieſts of the Clergy, to whom Queen Mary gave all the execution of her Power, as did Queen Alexandra to the Phariſees after the time of the Machabees. Of whom Joſephus thus writeth, Ipſa ſolum nomen regium ferebat, cæterum omnem regni poteſtatem Phariſæi poſſidebant: that is, She only retained to her ſelf the name and Title of the Kingdom, but all her Power ſhe gave to the Phariſees to poſſeſs, &c. Touching which Prelates and Prieſts here is to be noted in like ſort the wonderful and miraculous providence of Almighty God which as he abridged the Reign of their Queen, ſo be ſuffered them not to eſcape unviſited: firſt beginning with Stephen Gardiner the Arch-perſecutor of Chriſt Church, whom he took away about the midſt of the Queens Reign. Of whoſe poiſoned life, and ſtinking end, forſomuch as ſufficient hath been touched before, I ſhall not need here to make any new rehearſal thereof.

After him dropped other away alſo, ſome before the death of Queen Mary, and ſome after; as Morgan Biſhop of St. Davids, who ſitting upon the Condemnation of the bleſſed Martyr Biſhop Farrer, and unjuſtly uſurping his Room, not long after was ſtricken by Gods hand after ſuch a ſtrange ſort, that his meat would not go down, but riſe and pick up again, ſometime at his mouth, ſometime blown out at his Noſe moſt horrible to behold, and ſo he continued till his death. Where note moreover that when Maſter Leyſon, being then Sheriff at Biſhop Farrers burning, had fet away the Cattle of the ſaid Biſhop from his Servants houſe called Matthew Harbottel, into his own cuſtody, the Cattle coming, into the Sheriffs ground, divers of them would never eat meat, but lay Bellowing and Roaring, and ſo died.

A note of wrong-gotten goods

This foreſaid Biſhop Morgan above mentioned, bringeth me alſo in remembrance of Juſtice Morgan, who ſate upon the death of the Lady Jane, and not long after the ſame fell mad, and was bereft of his wits, and ſo died, having ever in his mouth, Lady Jane, Lady Jane, &c.

Juſtice Morgan ſtriken with madneſs.

Before the death of Queen Mary, died Dr. Dunning the bloody and wretched Chancellor of Norwich, who, after he had moſt rigorouſly condemned and murdered ſo many ſimple and faithful Saints of the Lord, continued not long himſelf, but in the midſt of his Rage in Q. Maries days died in Lincolnſhire, being ſuddenly taken (as ſome ſay) ſitting in his Chair.

D. Dunning a cruel Chancellor ſtriken with ſudden death.

The like ſudden death fell alſo upon Berry Commiſſary in Norfolk, who (as is before ſhewed in the Story of Thomas Hudſon) four days after Q. Maries death, when he had made a great feaſt, and had one of his Concubines there, coming home from the Church after Evenſong, where he had miniſtred Baptiſm the ſame time, between the Church-yard and his houſe ſuddenly fell down to the ground with a heavy groan, and never ſtirred after neither ſhewed any one token of repentance.

What a ſtroke of Gods Hand was brought upon the cruel Perſecutor of the holy and harmleſs Saints of the Lord, Biſhop Thornton, Suffragan of Dover, who after he had exerciſed his cruel Tyranny upon ſo many godly men at Canterbury, at length coming upon a Saturday from the Chapter houſe at Canterbury to Borne and there upon Sunday following looking upon his men playing at the Bowls, fell ſuddenly in a Palſey, and ſo had to Bed, was willed to remember God: Yea, ſo I do (ſaidhe) and my Lord Cardinal too &c.

Gods ſtroke upon Dr. Thornton B. or Suffragan of Dover.

After him ſucceeded another Biſhop or Suffragan ordained by the foreſaid Cardinal. It is reported that he had been Suffragan before to Boner, who, not long after being made Biſhop or Suffragan of Dover, brake his Neck falling down a pair of Stairs in the Cardinals Chamber at Greenwich, as he had received the Cardinals bleſſing.

Another ſuffragan of Dover brake his neck after he had received the Cardinals bleſſing.

Among other plentiful and ſundry examples of the Lords Judgment and ſeverity practiſed upon the cruel Perſecutors of his People, that is not the leaſt that followeth, concerinng the Story of one William Fenning, the effect and circumſtance of which matter is this.

John Cooper of the age of 44. years, dwelling at Watſam in the County of Suffolk, being by Science a Carpenter, a man of very honeſt report and a good houſe-keeper, a harbourer of ſtrangers that travelled for conſcience, and one that favoured Religion, and thoſe that were religious, was of honeſt converſation and good life, hating all Popiſh and Papiſtical traſh.

This man being at home in his houſe, there came unto him one William Fenning, a Serving-man, dwelling in the ſaid Town of Watſam, and underſtanding that the ſaid Cooper had a couple of fair Bullocks, did deſire to buy them of him; which Cooper told him that he was loath to ſell them, for that he had brought them up for his own uſe, and if he ſhould ſell them, he then muſt be compelled to buy other, and that he would not do.

When Fenning ſaw he could not get them (for he had often aſſaied the matter) he ſaid, he would ſit as much in his light, and ſo departed, and went and accuſed him of high Treaſon. The words he was charged with were theſe, How he ſhould pray, if God would not take away Queen Mary, that then the Devil would take her away. Of theſe words did this Fenning charge him before Sir Henry Doiel Knight (unto whom he was carried by Mr. Timperley of Hincleſam in Suffolk, and one Grimwood of Lowſhaw Conſtable) which words Cooper flatly denied; and ſaid he never ſpake them: but that could not help.

Notwithſtanding, he was arraigned therefore at Berry before Sir Clement Higham, at a Lent Aſſiſe, and there this Fenning brought two naughty men that witneſſed the ſpeaking of the foreſaid words, whoſe names were Richard White of Watſam, and Grimwood of Hitcham, in the ſaid County of Suffolk. Whoſe Teſtimonies were received as Truth, although this good man John Cooper had ſaid what he could to declare himſelf innocent therein, but to no purpose, God knoweth. For his life was determined, as in the end appeared by Sir Clement Highams words, who said he should not escape, for an example to all Hereticks, as indeed he throughly performed. For immediatly he was judged to be hanged, drawn, and quartered, which was executed upon him very shortly after, to the great grief of many a good heart. Here good Cooper is bereft of his life, and leaves behind him alive his Wife and nine Children, with Goods and Cattle, to the value of three hundred Marks, the which Substance was all taken away by the said Sir Henry Doiel Sheriff, but his Wife and poor Children left to the wide World in their Cloaths, and suffered not to enjoy one Penny of that they had sore laboured for, unless they made Friends to buy it with mony of the said Sheriff, so cruel and greedy was he and his Officers upon such things as were there left.

Well, now this innocent man is dead, his Goods spoyled, his Wife and Children left desolate and comfortless and all things husht, and nothing feared of any part: yet the Lord, who surely doth revenge the guiltless Blood, would not still so suffer it, but began at the length to punish it himself. For in the Harvest after, the said Grimwood of Hitcham one of the witnesses before specified, as he was in his labour staking up a Goff of Corn, having his health, and fearing no Peril, suddenly his Bowels fell out of his Body, and immediatly most miserably he died; such was the terrible judgment of God, to shew his displeasure against his Bloody Act, and to warn the rest by these his judgments to repentance. The Lord grant us to honour the same, for his mercies sake. Amen.

The Judgment of God upon Grimwood.

This foresaid Fenning, who was the procurer of this Tyranny against him, is yet alive, and is now a Minister; which if he be, I pray God he may so repent that Fact, that he may declare himself hereafter such a one as may well answer to his vocation accordingly.

But since we have heard that he is no changeling, but continueth still in his wickedness, and therefore presented before the worshipful Master Humerston, Esquire and Justice of Peace and Quorum, for that he had talk with some of his Friends (as he thought) how many honest Women (to their great infamy) were in the Parish of Wenstbaston, wherein he is now Vicar, resident: wherefore he was commanded the next Sunday ensuing, to ask all the Parish forgiveness upon his Knees openly in Service time, which he did in Wenstbaston Church before said, and moreover the aboveseid Fenning is reported to be more like a shifter than a Minister.

A terrible example of Gods severe punishment upon one Nightingal, Parson of Crondal in Kent.

To these examples also may be added the terrible judgment of God upon the Parson at Crondal in Kent, who upon Shrove-Sunday, having received the Popes Pardon from Cardinal Pool, came to his Parish, and exhorted the People to receive the same, as he had done himself; saying that he stood now so clear in Conscience as when he was first born, and cared not now if he should die the same hour, in the clearness of his Conscience; whereupon being suddenly striken by the hand of God, and leaning a little on the one side, immediately shrunk down in the Pulpit, and so was found dead, speaking not one word more. Read before.

Not long before the death of Queen Mary died Dr. Capon Bishop of Salisbury About the which time also followed the unprepared death of Doctor Geffrey, Chancellor of Salisbury, who in the midst of his buildings, suddenly being taken by the mighty hand of God, yielded his life, which had so little pity of other mens lives before. Concerning whose cruelty partly mention is made before.

D. Geffrey Chancellor of Salisbury.

As touching moreover this foresaid Chancellor, here is to be noted, that he departing upon a Saturday, the next day before the same he had appointed to call before him 90. Persons and not so few, to examine them by Inquisition, had not the goodness of the Lord, and his tender providence thus prevented him with death, providing for his poor Servants in time.

And now (to come from Priests to Lay-men) we have to find in them also no less terrible demonstration of Gods heavy judgment upon such as have been Vexers and Persecutors of his People.

Before in the Story of Mr. Bradford mention was made of Master Woodroffe, who being the Sheriff, used much to rejoyce at the death of the poor Saints of Christ, and so hard he was in his Office, that when Mr. Rogers was in the Cart going toward Smithfield, and in the way his Children were brought unto him, the People making a Lane for them to come; Master Woodroffe bade the Car-mans heard should be be broken for staying his Cart. But what happened? He was not come out of his Office the space of a week, but he was striken by the sudden hand of God, the one half of his Body in such sort, that he lay benummed and bedrid, not able to move himself but as he was lifted of other, and so continued in that infirmity the space of seven or eight years, till his dying day.

Anno 1558.

M. Woodroff a cruel Sheriff plagued.

Likewise touching Ralph Lardin the betrayer of George Eagles, it is thought of some, that the said Ralph afterward was attached himself, arraigned, and hanged.

Read before. The betrayer of George Eagles plagued.

Who, being at the Barr, had these words before the Judges there, and a great multitude of People. This is most justly fallen upon me, saith he, for that I have betrayed the innocent Blood of a good and just man George Eagles, who was here condemned in the time of Queen Maries Reign through my procurement, who sold his Blood for a little mony. Not much unlike stroke of these severally was shewed upon William Swallow of Chelmesford, and his Wife, also upon Richard Potto, and Justice Brown, cruel Persecutors of the said George Eagles, concerning whose Story read before.

Among other Persecutors also came to our hands the cruelty of one Mr. Swingfield an Aldermans Deputy about Thames-street, who hearing one Angels Wife, a Mid-wife that kept her self from their Popish Church, to be at the labour of one Mrs. Walter at Crooked lane-end, took three other with him, and beset the house about, and took her and carried her to Boners Officers, big with Child, eight and twenty weeks gone, who laid her in Lollards-Tower; where, the same day she came in, through fear and a fall at her taking, she was delivered of a man Child, and could have no Women with her in that needful time. Lying there five weeks, she was delivered under Sureties by friendship, and Doctor Story hearing thereof charged her with Felony, and so sent her to Newgate. The cause was, for that she had a Woman at her house in her labour that died, and the Child also, and so he charged her with their death.

Gods punishment upon M. Swingfield and other which betrayed one Angels Wife.

But when Sir Roger Cholmley heard her tell her Tale, he delivered her; and not much more than ten weeks after, if it were so long, died the said Master Swingfield and the other three that came to take her.

Because some there be, and not a few, which have such a great devotion in setting up the Popish Mass, I shall desire them to mark well this Story following. There was a certain Bayliff of Crowland in Lincolnshire named, Burton, who pretending an earnest friendship to the Gospel in K. Edwards days, in outward shew at least (although inwardly he was a Papist or Atheist, and well known to be a man of a wicked and adulterous life) set forth the Kings proceedings lustily, till the time that King Edward was dead and Queen Mary placed quietly in her estate.

A story of Burton, Bayliff of Crowland, how he was plagued for setting up Mass.

Then perceiving by the first Proclamation concerning Religion, how the world was like to turn, the Bayliff turned his Religion likewise; and so he moved the Parish to shew themselves the Queens Friends, and to set up the Mass speedily. Nevertheless, the most Substantial of the Parish marvelling much at the Bayliffs inconstant lightness, considering also his abominable life, and having no great devotion unto his request, knowing moreover that their duty and friendship to the Queen stood not in setting up the Mass, spared to provide for it, as long as they might: but the Bayliff called on them still in the Queens Name.

At last, when he saw his words were not regarded, and purposing to win his Spurrs by playing the man in the Masses behalf and the Queens, he got him to Church upon a Sunday morning, and when the Curate was beginning the English Service, according to the Statute set forth by King Edward the sixth, the Bayliff cometh in a great Rage to the Curate, and saith, Sirrah, will you not say Mass? Buckle your self to to Maſs you Knave, or by Gods Blood I ſhall ſheath my Dagger in your ſhoulder. The poor Curate for fear ſettled himſelf to the Maſs.

Not long after this, the Bayliff rode from home upon certain buſineſs, accompanied with one of his Neighbours, and as they came riding together upon the Fennebank homeward again, a Crow ſitting in a Willow-tree took her flight over his head, ſinging after her wonted note, Knave, Knave, and withal let fall upon his face, ſo that her excrements ran from the top of his Noſe down to his Beard.

The poiſoned ſcent and ſavour whereof ſo noyed his Stomach, that he never ceaſed vomiting until he came home, wherewith his heart was ſo ſore and his body ſo diſtempered, that for extreme ſickneſs he got him to Bed, and ſo lying, he was not able for the ſtink in his Stomach and painful vomiting, to receive any relief of meat or drink, but cried out ſtill, ſorrowfully complaining of that ſtink, and with no ſmall Oaths curſed the Crow that poiſoned him. To make ſhort, he continued but a few days, but with extreme pain of vomiting and crying, he deſperately died, without any token of repentance of his former life.

Of the Martyrdom of J. Abbes. Read before

Of James Abbes Martyr, ye heard before. In the time of whoſe Martyrdom, what befell upon a wicked Railer againſt him, now ye ſhall further underſtand. Whereby all ſuch railing Perſecutors may learn to fear Gods hand, and to take heed how or what they ſpeak againſt his Servants. As this James Abbes was led by the Sheriff toward his execution, divers poor People ſtood in the way, and asked their Alms. He then having no mony to give them, and deſirous yet to diſtribute ſomething amongſt them, did pull off all his Apparel ſaving his Shirt, and gave the ſame unto them, to ſome one thing, to ſome another; in the giving whereof he exhorted them to be ſtrong in the Lord, and as faithful followers of Chriſt, to ſtand ſtedfaſt unto the Truth of the Goſpel, which he (through Gods help) would then in their ſight ſeal and confirm with his Blood. Whiles he was thus charitably occupied, and zealouſly inſtructing the People, a Servant of the Sheriffs going by and hearig him, cried out aloud unto them, and blaſphemouſly ſaid, Believe him not good People. he is an Heretick and a mad man, out of his wit, believe him not; for it is Hereſie that he ſaith. And as the other continued in his godly admonitions, ſo did this wicked wretch ſtill blow forth his Blaſphemous exclamations, until they came unto the Stake where he ſhould ſuffer. Unto the which this conſtant Martyr was tied, and in the end cruelly burned, as in his Story more fully is already declared.

A Story to be noted of all railing Perſecutors.

The Sheriffs Servant vilely railing againſt J. Abbes.

But immediately after the fire was put unto him (ſuch was the fearful ſtroke of Gods Juſtice upon this Blaſphemous Railer) that he was there preſently, in the ſight of all the People, ſtriken with a Frenzie, wherewith he had before moſt railingly charged that good Martyr of God, who in this furious Rage and madneſs caſting off his ſhooes, with all the reſt of his Cloaths, cried, out unto the People, and ſaid, Thus did James Abbes the true Servant of God, who is ſaved, but I am damned. And thus ran he round about the Town of Bury, ſtill crying out, that James Abbes was a good man and ſaved, but he was damned.

A fearful Example of Gods righteous judgment againſt the Sheriffs Servant railing againſt J. Abbes.

The Sheriff then being amazed, cauſed him to be taken and tied in a dark houſe, and by force compelled him again to put on his Cloaths thinking thereby within a while to bring him to ſome quietneſs. But he (all that notwithſtanding) as ſoon as they were gone, continued his former raging, and caſting off his Cloaths, cried as he did before, James Abbes is the Servant of God and is ſaved, but I am damned.

Example how Popery bringeth to deſperation.

At length he was tied in a Cart, and brought home into his Maſters houſe, and within half a year or thereabouts, he being at the point of death, the Prieſt of the Pariſh was ſent for: who coming unto him, brought with him the Crucifix, and their Houſeling Hoſt of the Altar. Which gear when the poor wretch ſaw, he cried out of the Prieſt, and defied all that Baggage, ſaying, that the Prieſt, with ſuch other as he was, was the cauſe of his Damnation, and that James Abbes was a good man and ſaved. And ſo ſhortly after he died.

But as Judge Hales never fell into that inconvenience before he had conſented to Papiſtry: ſo whoſo well conſidereth the end of Doctor Pendleton (which at his death full ſore repented that ever he had yielded to the Doctrine of the Papiſts, as he did) and likewiſe the miſerable end of the moſt part of the Papiſts beſides, and eſpecially of Stephen Gardiner himſelf (who after ſo long profeſſing the Doctrine of Papiſtry, when there came a Biſhop to him in his death Bed, and put him in in remembrance of Peter denying his Maſter: he anſwering again, ſaid, that he had denyed with Peter, but never repented with Peter, and ſo both ſtinkingly and unrepentantly died) will ſay, as Stephen Gardiner alſo himſelf gave an evident example of the ſame to all men, to underſtand that Popery rather is a Doctrine of deſperation, procuring the vengeance of Almighty God to them that wilfully do cleave unto it.

'he ſtinking end of Gardiner roveth Popery and ot the Goſpel to be ne Doctrine f deſperation

John Fiſher Biſhop of Rocheſter, and Sir Tho. More, in King Henries time, after they had brought John Frith. Baifield and Baynham, and divers other to their death, what great reward wan they thereby with Almighty God? Did not the Sword of Gods Vengance light upon their own necks ſhortly after, and they themſelves made a Publick Spectacle at the Tower-hill of bloody death, which before had no Compaſſion of the lives of others? Thus ye ſee the ſaying of the Lord to be true, He that ſmiteth with the Sword, ſhall periſh with the Sword, 2 Mach. 3.

And thus much concerning thoſe Perſecutors, aswell of the Clergy ſort, as of the Laity, which were ſtriken, and died before the death of Queen Mary. With whom alſo are to be numbred in the Race of perſecuting Biſhops, which died before Queen Mary, theſe Biſhops following.

D. Weſton Dean of Weſtminſter, afterward Dean of Windſor, chief diſputer againſt Cranmer, Ridley, and Latimer.

M. Slethurſt, Maſter of Trinity Colledge in Oxford, who died in the Tower.

Seth Holland Dean of Worceſter, and Warden of Allſoul Colledge in Oxford.

William Copinger, Monk of Weſtminſter, who bare the great Seal before Stephen Gardiner, after the death of the ſaid Gardiner, made himſelf Monk in the houſe of Weſtminſter, and ſhortly after fell mad, and died in the Tower.

D. Steward Dean of Wincheſter.

To behold the working of Gods judgments it is wondrous. In the firſt year of Queen Mary, when the Clergy was aſſembled in the Convocation-houſe, and alſo afterward, when the diſputation was in Oxford againſt Dr. Cranmer, Ridley, and Latimer, he that had ſeen then Doctor Weſton the Prolocutor in his Ruff, how highly he took upon him in the Schools, and how ſtoutly he ſtood in the Popes Quarrel againſt ſimple and naked Truth, full little would have thought, and leſs did he think himſelf (I dare ſay) that his glory and lofty looks ſhould have been brought down ſo ſoon, eſpecially by them of his own Religion, whoſe part he ſo doubtily defended. But ſuch is the reward and end commonly of them, who preſumptuouſly oppoſe themſelves to ſtrive againſt the Lord, as by the example of this Doctorly Prolocutor right well may appear. For not long after the diſputation above mentioned againſt Biſhop Cranmer and his fellows, God ſo wrought againſt the ſaid Dr. Weſton, that he fell in great diſpleaſure with Cardinal Pool and other Biſhops, becauſe he was unwilling to give up his Deanry and houſe of Weſtminſter unto the Monks and Religious men, whom indeed he favoured not, although in other things he maintained the Church of Rome. Who notwithſtanding at laſt, through importunate ſute, gave up Weſtminſter, and was Dean of Windſor; where not long after, he was apprehended in Adultery, and for the ſame was by the Cardinal put from all his ſpiritual Livings.

Anno 1558.

A Note of D. Weſton.

D. Weſton out of favour with Papiſts.

D. Weſton taken in adultery.

Wherefore he appealed to Rome, and purpoſed to have fled out of the Realm, but was taken by the way, and committed to the Tower of London and there remained until Queen Elizabeth was proclaimed Queen, at which time he being delivered, fell ſick and died. The common talk was, that if he had not ſo ſuddenly ended his life, he would have opened and revealed the purpoſe of the chief of the Clergy, meaning the Cardinal, which was to have taken up K. Henries Body at Windſor and to have burned it. And thus much of D. Weſton.

D. Weſton appealed to Rome.

A note of D. Chadſey. 34. Articles of D. Chadſey.

Concerning which Doctor Chadſey here is to be noted, that in the beginning of King Edwards Reign he recanted, and ſubſcribed to thirty four Articles, which he then fully conſented and agreed with his own hand writing to the whole form of Doctrine approved and allowed then in the Church, as well concerning juſtification by faith only, as alſo the Doctrine of the two Sacraments

Anno 1558. Sacraments then received, denying as well the Popes Supremacy, Tranſubſtantiation, Purgatory, Invocation of Saints, elevation and adoration of the Sacrament, the Sacrifice, and veneration of the Maſs, as alſo all other like excrements of Popiſh Superſtition, according to the Kings Book then ſet forth.

D. Chadſey ſubſcribed to the reformed Religion in K. Edwards time.

Wherefore the more marvel it is, that he, being counted ſuch a famous and learned Clerk, would ſhew himſelf ſo fickle and unſtable in his Aſſertions, ſo double in his doings, to alter his Religion according to time, and to maintain for Truth, not what he thought beſt, but what he might moſt ſafely defend. So long as the ſtate of the Lord Protector and of his Brother ſtood upright, what was then the conformity of this Doctor Chadſey, his own Articles in Latin, written and ſubſcribed with his own hand, do declare, which I have to ſhew, if he will deny them. But after the decay of the Kings Uncles, the fortune of them turned not ſo faſt, but his Religion turned withal, and eftſoons he took upon him to diſpute againſt Peter Martyr, in upholding Tranſubſtantiation at Oxford, which a little before with his own handwriting he had overthrown.

D. Chadſey mutable and inconſtant in his Religion.

After this enſued the time of Queen Mary, wherein Doctor Chadſey, to ſhew his double diligence, was ſo eager in his Commiſſion to ſit in Judgment, and to bring poor Men to their death, that in the laſt year of Queen Mary, when the L. Chancellor, Sir Thomas Cornwallis, L. Clinton, and divers other of the Council had ſent for him by a ſpecial Letter to repair unto London out of Eſſex, he writing again to the Biſhop of London, ſought means not to come at the Councils bidding, but to continue ſtill in his perſecuting progreſs. The Copy of whoſe Letter I have alſo in my hands (if need were) to bring forth.

The eagerneſs of D. Chadſey in puniſhing the poor Martyrs.

Mention was made not long before, of one William Mauldon, who in King Henry's time ſuffered ſtripes and ſcourgings for confeſſing the verity of Gods true Religion. It happened in the firſt year of Queen Elizabeth, that the ſaid William Mauldon was bound Servant with one named Mr. Hugh Aparry then a Wheattaker for the Queen, dwelling at Greenwich. Who being newly come unto him, and having never a Book there to look upon, being deſirous to occupy himſelf vertuouſly, looked about the houſe, and found a Primer in Engliſh, whereon he read in a Winters Evening. Whiles he was reading, there ſate one John Apowel that had been a Serving-man, about Thirty years of age, born toward Wales, whom the ſaid Mr. Hugh gave meat and drink unto, till ſuch time as he could get a Service. And as the foreſaid W. Mauldon read on the Book, the ſaid John Apowel mocked him after every word, with contrary gauds and flouting words unreverently, inſomuch that he could no longer abide him for grief of heart, but turned unto him and ſaid, John, take heed what thou doſt; Thou doſt not mock me, but thou mockeſt God: For in mocking of his Word, thou mockeſt him; and this is the Word of God, though I be ſimple that read it; and therefore beware what thou doſt.

W. Mauldon Prentice with M. Hugh Aparry at Greenwich.

Then Mauldon fell to reading again, and ſtill he proceeded on in his mocking; and when Mauldon had read certain Engliſh Prayers, in the end he read, Lord have mercy upon us, Chriſt have mercy upon us, &c.

And as Mauldon was reciting theſe words, the other with a ſtart ſuddenly ſaid, Lord have mercy upon me.

With that Mauldon anſwered and ſaid, What aileſt thou John?

He ſaid, I was afraid.

Whereof waſt thou afraid ſaid Mauldon?

Nothing now, ſaid the other: and ſo he would not tell him. After this, when Mauldon and he went to bed, Mauldon asked him whereof he was afraid?

He ſaid, when you read, Lord have mercy upon us, Chriſt have mercy upon us, methought the hair of my Head ſtood upright, with a great fear which came upon me.

Then ſaid Mauldon, John thou maiſt ſee, the evil Spirit could not abide that Chriſt ſhould have mercy upon us. Well John, ſaid Mauldon, repent and amend thy life, for God will not be mocked. If we mock and jeſt at his Word, he will puniſh us.

Alſo you uſe Ribaldry words, and Swearing very much: therefore for Gods ſake, John, amend thy life. So I will (ſaid he) by the grace of God; I pray God I may. Amen ſaid the other, with other words, and ſo went to bed.

On the morrow, about 8. of the Clock in the morning, the foreſaid John came running down out of his Chamber in his Shirt into the Hall, and wreſtled with his Miſtreſs as if he would have thrown her down. Whereat ſhe ſhrieked out, and her Servants holp her, and took him by ſtrength and carried him up into his Bed, and bound him down to his Bed; for they perceived plainly that he was out of his right mind.

A terrible example of Gods Judgment to be noted of all ſuch as be contemners and mockers of God, and his Word.

After that, as he lay, almoſt day and night his Tongue never ceaſed, but he cried out of the Devil of Hell, and his words were ever ſtill, O the Devil of Hell; now the Devil of Hell; I would ſee the Devil of Hell: Thou ſhalt ſee the Devil of Hell; there he was, there he goeth, with other words, but moſt of the Devil of Hell.

Thus he lay without amendment about ſix days, that his Maſter and all his houſhold was weary of that trouble and noiſe. Then his Maſter agreed with the Keepers of Bedlam, and gave a piece of Mony, and ſent him thither. It ſeemeth that he was poſſeſſed with an evil Spirit, from the which God defend us all.

This is a terrible Example to you that be mockers of the Word of God: therefore repent and amend, leſt the vengeance of God fall upon you in like manner. Witneſs hereof William Mauldon of Newington.

The ſame William Mauldon chanced afterward to dwell at a Town ſix miles from London called Waltamſtow, where his Wife taught young Children to read, which was about the year of our Lord 1563, and the fourth year of Q. Elizabeths Reign. Unto this School, amongſt other Children, came one Benfields Daughter, named Dennis, about the age of 12 years.

Gods puniſhment upon a young Damſel of 12 years old, blaſpheming the Majeſty of God.

As theſe Children ſate talking together, they happened among other talk (as the nature of Children is to be buſie with many things) to fall into communication of God, and to reaſon among themſelves, after their Childiſh diſcretion, what he ſhould be.

Whereunto ſome anſwered one thing, ſome another. Among whom, when one of the Children had ſaid, that he was a good old Father; the foreſaid Dennis Benfield caſting out impious words of horrible Blaſphemy, What he (ſaid ſhe) is an old doting Fool.

What wretched and blaſphemous words were theſe ye hear. Now mark what followed.

When W. Mauldon heard of theſe abominable words of the Girl, he willed his Wife to correct her for the ſame. Which was appointed the next day to be done. But when the next morrow came, her Mother would needs ſend her to the Market to London, the Wench greatly intreating her Mother that ſhe might not go, being marveloufly unwilling thereunto. Howbeit through her Mothers compulſion ſhe was forced to go, and went. And what happened? Her buſineſs being done at London, as ſhe was returning again homeward, and being a little paſt Hackney, ſuddenly the young Girl was ſo ſtricken, that all the one ſide of her was black, and ſhe ſpeechleſs. Whereupon immediately ſhe was carried back to Hackney, and there the ſame night was buried. Witneſs of the ſame ſtory William Mauldon and his Wife, alſo Benfield her Father, and her Mother, which yet be all alive.

Blaſphemy puniſhed.

A terrible Example (no doubt) both to old and young, what it is for Children to blaſpheme the Lord their God, and what it is for Parents to ſuffer their young ones to grow up in ſuch blaſphemous blindneſs, and not to nurture them betime in the rudiments of the Chriſtian Catechiſm, to know firſt their Creation, and then their Redemption in Chriſt our Saviour, to fear the Name of God, and to reverence his Majeſty. For elſe what do they deſerve but to be taken away by death, which contemptuouſly deſpiſe him, of whom they take the benefit of life?

And therefore let all young Maids, Boys, and Young men, take example by this wretched ſilly Wench, not only not to blaſpheme the Sacred Majeſty of the Omnipotent God their Creator, but alſo not once to take his Name in vain, according as they are taught in his Commandments.

A Leſſon to Children and young Girls.

A leſſon to Fathers and Godfathers and Godmothers.

Secondly, let all Fathers, Godfathers, and Godmothers, take this for a warning, to ſee to the inſtruction and catechiſing of their Children, for whom they have bound themſelves in promiſe both to God and to his Church. Which if the Father and Godfather, the Mother and Godmothers had done to this young girl, verily it may be thought this deſtruction had not fallen upon her.

A leſſon to all Atheiſts, Epicures and Infidels.

Thirdly, let all blind Atheiſts, Epicures, Mammoniſts, belly gods of this world, and Sons of Belial, Hypocrites, Infidels, and Mockers of Religion, which ſay in their hearts, there is no God, learn alſo hereby, not onely what God is, and what he is able to do, but alſo in this miſerable creature here puniſhed in this world, behold what ſhall likewiſe fall on them in the world to come unleſs they will bee warned betime, by ſuch examples as the Lord God doth give them.

A leſſon to all Blaſphemers and ſwearers.

Fourthly and laſtly, here may alſo bee a ſpectacle for all them which be Blaſphemers and abominable ſwearers, or rather tearers of God, abuſing his glorious Name in ſuch contemptuous and deſpiteful ſort as they uſe to do. Whom if neither the word and commandment of God, nor the calling of the Preachers, nor remorſe of Conſcience, nor rule of reaſon, nor their withering age, nor hoary hairs will admoniſh; yet let theſe terrible examples of Gods ſtrict judgment ſomewhat move them to take heed to themſelves. For if this young Maiden, who was not fully twelve years old, for her unreverent ſpeaking of God (and that but at one time) did not eſcape the ſtroke of Gods terrible hand, what then have they to look for, which being men grown in years, and ſtriken in age, being ſo often warned and preached unto, yet ceaſe not continually with their Blaſphemous Oaths, not only to abuſe his Name, but alſo moſt contumelioufly and deſpitefully to rear him (as it were) and all his parts in pieces?

About the year of our Lord 1565: at Brigthwel in the County of Berks, upon certain communication as touching the right reverend Martyrs in Chriſt, Biſhop Cranmer, Biſhop Ridley, and Maſter Hugh Latimer, there came into an houſe in Abyngdon, one whoſe name is Levar, being a Plowman, dwelling in Brightwel aforeſaid, and ſaid, that he ſaw that ill favored Knave Latimer when he was burned: and alſo in deſpite ſaid, that he had teeth like a horſe. At which time and hour, as near as could bee gathered, the Son of the ſaid Levar moſt wickedly hanged himſelf, at Shepton in the County aforeſaid within a mile of Abyngdon.

Gods juſt plague upon W. Swallow.

William Swallow, the cruel Tormentor of George Egles, was ſhortly after ſo plagued of God, that all the hair of his head, and nails of his fingers and toes went off, his eyes well near cloſed up, that hee could ſcant ſee. His Wife alſo was ſtriken with the falling ſickneſs, with the which malady ſhe was never infected before.

Gods juſt plague upon Rich. Potto.

Likewiſe Richard Potto, another troubler of the ſaid George Egles, upon a certain anger or chaſe with his ſervants, was ſo ſuddenly taken with ſickneſs, that falling upon his bed like a beaſt, there he died and never ſpake word.

Rich. Denton burned in his own houſe.

Thomas Mouſe and George Revet, two perſecutors, were ſtriken miſerably with the hand of God, and ſo died. Anno 1558.

Robert Edgore bereſe of his wits.

Alſo Robert Edgore, for that he had executed the Office of a Pariſh Clark againſt his Conſcience, through anguiſh and grief of Conſcience for the ſame, was ſo bereft of his wits, that he was kept in chains and bonds many years after.

As touching John Plankney Fellow of New Colledge in Oxford, Civilian, and one Havington, both Fellows of the ſame houſe aforeſaid, and both ſtubborn Papiſts, the matter is not much worthy the memory; yet the example is not unworthy to be noted, to ſee what little comfort and grace commonly followeth the comfortleſs Doctrine and Profeſſion of Papiſtrie, as in theſe two young men, amongſt many other may well appear. Of whom the one, which was Plankney, ſcholar ſometime to Marſhal (who wrote the Book of the Croſs) is commonly reported and known to them of that Univerſity, to have drowned himſelf in the River about Rudy, at Oxford, Anno 1566. the other in a Well about Rome, or as ſome do ſay, at Padua, and ſo being both drowned, were both taken up with Crucifixes, as it is ſaid of ſome, hanging about their necks; the more pity that ſuch young ſtudents did ſo muh addict their wits, rather to take the way of Papiſtry, than to walk in the comfortable light of the Goſpel, now ſo brightly ſpreading his beams in all the world; which if they had done, I think not contrary, but it had proved much better with them.

Two Papiſts of new College in Oxford drowned themſelves.

Albeit (I truſt) the Goſpel of Chriſt, being now received in the Queens Court amongſt the Courtiers and Servants of her Guard, hath framed their lives and manners ſo to live in the due fear of God, and temperance of life, with all ſobriety, and merciful compaſſion toward their own Chriſtians, that they need not greatly any other inſtructions to be given them in this ſtory: yet forſomuch as examples many times do work more effectually in the minds and memories of men; and alſo partly conſidering with my ſelf, how theſe, above all other ſorts of men in the whole Realm, in time paſt ever had moſt need of ſuch wholeſome leſſons and admonitions, to leave their unordinate riot of quaffing and drinking, and their Heatheniſh prophanity of life; I thought here to ſet before their eyes a terrible example, not of a ſtrange and forein perſon, but of one of their own coat, a Yeoman of the Guard, not fained by me, but brought to me by Gods providence, for a warning to all Courtiers, and done of very truth no longer ago than in the year of our Lord, 1568. And as the ſtory is true, ſo is the name of the party not unknown, being called Chriſtopher Landeſdale, dwelling in Hackney, in Middleſex. The order of whoſe life, and manner of his death being worthy to be noted, is this, as in ſtory here under followeth.

A ſtory of a Courtier one of the guard which happened, An. 1568.

Admonition to Courtiers.

This foreſaid Landeſdale being married to an ancient Woman yet living, having by her both goods and lands, notwithſtanding lived long in filthy whoredom with a younger woman, by whom he had two Children, a Son and a Daughter, and kept them in his houſe unto the day of his death. Alſo when he ſhould have been in ſerving of God on the Sabbath day, he uſed to walk or ride about his fields, and ſeldom hee or any of his houſe came to the Church after the Engliſh Service was again received. Beſides this, he was a great ſwearer, and a great drunkard, and had great delight alſo in making other men drunken, and would have them whom he had made drunkards, to call him Father, and he would call them his Sons; and of theſe Sons, by report, he had above forty. And if he had ſeen one that would drink freely, he would mark him, and ſpend his money with him liberally in ale or wine, but moſt in wine, to make him the ſooner drunken. Theſe bleſſed Sons of his ſhould have great cheer oftentimes, both at his own houſe and at Taverns: and not long before his death hee was ſo beaſtly drunken in a Tavern over againſt his door, that he fell down in the Tavern yard, and could not ariſe alone, but lay grovelling, till he was holpen up, and ſo carried home.

An example of Chriſtopher Landeſdale, one of the Guard, for all Courtiers to look upon

This

Anno 1558.

Landeſdale Feaſter of the Rich, and unmerciful to the poor.

This father of Drunkards, as he was a great feaſter of the rich and wealthy of Hackney, and others; ſo his poor Neighbours and poor Tenants fared little the better for him: except it were with ſome broken meat which after his feaſts his Wife would carry and ſend unto them, or ſome Alms given at his door.

Beſides all this, he did much injury to his poor Neighbours, in oppreſſing the Commons near about him, which was a ſpecial relief unto them, ſo that his Cattel did eat up all without pity or mercy.

Poor Lazarus lying by the rich mans door.

There chanced after this about two years before he died, a poor man, being ſick of the bloody Flix, for very weakneſs to lie down in a Ditch of the ſaid Landeſdales, not a ſtones caſt from his houſe, where he had a little ſtraw brought him. Notwithſtanding the ſaid Landeſdale had back houſes and Barns enow to have laid him in but would not ſhew him ſo much pity. And thus poor Lazarus there lay night and day, about ſix weeks ere he died.

Certain good Neighbours hearing of this, procured things neceſſary for his relief, but he was ſo far ſpent, that he could not be recovered; who lay broyling in the hot Sun, with a horrible ſmell, moſt pitiful to behold

Yet the rich Glutton was bitter, for he ſuffered Lazarus to lie at his Gates.

This poor man, a little before he died, deſired to be removed to another Ditch into the ſhadow. Whereupon one of the Neighbours coming to Landeſdales Wife for a bundle of Straw for him to lie upon, ſhe required to have him removed to Newington ſide, becauſe, ſhe ſaid, if he ſhould die, it would be very far to carry him to the Church.

Beſides this, there was a marriage in this Landeſdales houſe, and the gueſts that came to the marriage gave the poor man mony as they came and went by him, but Landeſdale diſdained to contribute any relief unto him, notwithſtanding that he had promiſed to Mr. Searles, one of the Queens Guard (who had more pity of him) to miniſter to him things neceſſary.

The death of poor Lazarus in the Ditch.

To be ſhort, the next day poor Lazarus departed this life, and was buried in Hackney Church-yard; upon whom Landeſdale did not ſo much as beſtow a winding ſheet, or any thing elſe towards his burial. And thus much concerning the end of poor Lazarus. Now let us hear what became of the Rich Glutton.

About two years after, the ſaid Landeſdale being full of Drink (as his cuſtom was) came riding in great haſte from London on Saint Andrews-day Anno 1568. and as is reported by thoſe that ſaw him, reeling to and fro like a Drunkard with his hat in his hand, and coming by a Ditch, there tumbled in headlong into the Ditch. Some ſay that the horſe, fell upon him, but that is not like. This is true, the horſe, more ſober than the Maſter, came home, leaving his Maſter behind him. Whether he brake his neck with the fall, or was drowned (for the Water was ſcarcely a foot deep) it is uncertain; but certain it is, that he was there found dead. Thus he being found dead in the Ditch, the Crowner (as the manner is) ſate upon him: and how the matter was handled for ſaving his goods, the Lord knoweth; but in the end ſo it fell out, that the goods were ſaved, and the poor horſe indited for his Maſters death.

The end of this unmerciful Epicure in the Ditch.

The Neighbours hearing of the death of this man, and conſidering the manner thereof, ſaid it was juſtly fallen upon him, that as he ſuffered the poor man to lie and die in the Ditch near unto him, ſo his end was to die in a ditch likewiſe. And thus haſt thou in this Story (Chriſtian Brother and Reader) the true Image of a rich Glutton and poor Lazarus ſet out before thine eyes:

The Image of the rich Glutton and poor Lazarus.

whereby we have all to learn, what happeneth in the end to ſuch voluptuous Epicures and Atheiſts, which being void of all ſenſe of Religion, and fear of God, yield themſelves over to all Prophanity of life, neither regarding any honeſty at home, nor ſhewing any mercy to their needy Neighbours abroad.

Chriſt our Saviour ſaith, Mat. 5. Bleſſed be the merciful, for they ſhall obtain mercy: but judgment without mercy ſhall be executed on them which have ſhewed no mercy, &c. And St. John ſaith, 1. John 4. He that ſeeth his Brother have need, and ſhutteth up his Compaſſion from him how dwelleth the love of God in him &c. Again, Eſay againſt ſuch profane Drunkards and quaffers thus crieth out, Wo be unto them that riſe up early to follow drunkenneſs, and to them that ſo continue until night, till they be ſet on fire with Wine. In thoſe companies are Harps and Lutes, Tabrets and Pipes and Wine: but they regard not the works of the Lord, and conſider not the operation of his hands, &c. Wo be unto them that are ſtrong to ſpue out Wine, and expert to ſet up drunkenneſs.

A warning to Gentlemen.

The puniſhments of them that be dead, be wholeſome documents to them that be alive. And therefore as the Story above exemplified may ſerve to warn all Courtiers and Yeomen of the Guard; ſo by this that followeth, I would wiſh all Gentlemen to take good heed and admonition betime, to leave their outragious ſwearing and blaſpheming of the Lord their God.

A fearful example of Gods puniſhment upon a Gentleman a great ſwearer in Cornwal.

In the time and reign of King Edward, there was in Cornwal a certain luſty young Gentleman, which did ride in Company with other more Gentlemen, together with their Servants, being about the number of twenty horſemen. Among whom this luſty Yonker entring into talk, began to ſwear moſt horribly, Blaſpheming the Name of God, with other ribaldry words beſides. Unto whom one of the Company (who is yet alive, and witneſs hereof) not able to abide the hearing of ſuch blaſphemous abomination, in Gentle words ſpeaking to him, ſaid, he ſhould give anſwer and account for every Idle word.

Gentle exhortation neglected.

The Gentleman taking ſnuff thereat; Why, ſaid he, takeſt thou thought for me? take thought for thy winding ſheet. Well (quoth the other (amend, for death giveth no warning; for as ſoon cometh a Lambs skin to the Market, as an old Sheeps. Gods wounds, ſaith he, care not thou for me; Raging ſtill after his manner worſe and worſe in words, till at length paſſing on their Journy, they came riding over a great Bridge, ſtanding over a Piece of an arm of the Sea. Upon the which Bridge this Gentleman ſwearer ſpurred his horſe in ſuch ſort, as he ſprang clean over with the man on his back. Who as he was going, cried ſaying, Horſe and man, and all to the Devil. This terrible Story happening in a Town in Cornwal, I would have been affraid amongſt theſe ſtories here to recite, were it not that he, which was then both reprehender of his ſwearing, and witneſs of his death, is yet alive, and now a Miniſter, named Heynes. Beſides this, Biſhop Ridley, then Biſhop of London, preached and uttered even the ſame fact and example at Pauls Croſs. The name of the Gentleman I could by no means obtain of the party and witneſs aforeſaid, for dread of thoſe (as he ſaid) which yet remain of his affinity and Kindred in the ſaid Country.

Having now ſufficiently admoniſhed, firſt the Courtiers, then the Gentlemen; now thirdly for a brief admonition to the Lawyers we will here inſert the ſtrange end and death of one Henry Smith,, Student of the Law.

The terrible end of a ſwearer.

The miſerable end of H. Smith, a Lawyer of the middle Temple, after he was perverted from the Goſpel.

This Henry Smith having a Godly Gentleman to his Father, and an ancient Proteſtant, dwelling in Camden in Glouceſterſhire, was by him vertuouſly brought up in the knowledge of Gods Word, and ſincere Religion; wherein he ſhewed himſelf in the beginning ſuch an earneſt profeſſor, that he was called of the Papiſts Prattling Smith. After theſe good beginnings it followed, that he coming to be a Student of the Law in the middle Temple at London, there through ſiniſter Company of ſome, and eſpecially as it is thought of one Gifford, began to be perverted to Popery, and afterward going to Lovane, was more deeply rooted and grounded in the ſame; and ſo continuing a certain ſpace among the Papiſts, of a young Proteſtant, at length was made a perfect papiſt. Inſomuch, that returning from thence, he brought with him Pardons, a Crucifix, with an Agnus Dei, which he uſed commonly to wear about his neck, and had in his Chamber Images, before which he was wont to pray. Beſides divers other Popiſh traſh, which he brought with him from Lovane. Now what end followed after this I were loth to utter in ſtory, but that the fact ſo lately done this preſent year, Anno 1559. remaineth yet ſo freſh in memory, that almoſt all the City of London not only can witneſs, but alſo doth wonder thereat. The end was this.

Note what lewd Company doth incorrupting good natures.

M. Smiths Images and Agnus Dei.

Not long after the said Henry Smith, with Gifford his Companion, was returned from Lovane, being now a foul jeerer, and a scornful scoffer of that Religion which before he professed; in his Chamber where he lay in a house in St. Clements Parish without Temple-Barr, in the Evening as he was going to bed, and his Cloaths put off (for he was found naked) he had tied his Shirt (which he had torn to the same purpose) about his privy places, and so with his own Girdle, or ribond garter (as it seemed) fastned to the bed-post there strangled himself. They that were of his Quest, and other which saw the manner of his hanging, and the print where he sate upon his beds side, do record, that he thrust himself down from his beds side where he sate; the place where he had fastned the Girdle being so low, that his Hips well near touched the Floor, his Legs lying across, and his Arms spread abroad. And this was the manner of his hanging, having his Agnus Dei in a silver Table, with his other Idolatrous trash in the Window by him. And thus being dead, and not thought worthy to be interred in the Church-yard, he was buried in a Lane called Foskew Lane.

Henry Smith a Lawyer hanged himself in his Chamber, and after what manner.

This heavy and dreadful end of Henry Smith, although it might seem enough to gender a Terrour to all young Popish Students of the Law; yet it did not so work with all, but that some remained as obstinate still as they were before. Amongst whom was one named Williams, a Student of the Inner-Temple, who being sometime a favourer of the Gospel, fell in like manner from that to be an obstinate Papist, and despiteful railer against true Religion, and in conclusion, was so hot in his Catholick Zeal, that in the midst of his railing he fell stark mad, and so yet to this present day remaineth. The Lord of his mercy turn him to a better mind, and convert him if it be his pleasure, Amen.

One Williams a Lawyer, and a railer against the Gospel, mad.

The miserable end of Twyford is here no less to be remembred, a busie doer sometimes in King Henries days by Boners appointment, in setting up of Stakes for the burning of poor Martyrs. Who, when he saw the Stakes consume away so fast; Yea, said he, will not these Stakes hold? I will have a Stake, I trow, that shall hold, and so provided a big Tree, and cutting of the Top, set it in Smithfield. But thanks be to God, ere the Tree was all consumed, God turned the State of Religion, and he fell into an horrible disease, rotting alive above the ground before he died. Read more of him before. But because the Story both of him, and of a number such other like, is to be found in sundry places of this history sufficiently before expressed, it shall be but a double labour again to recapitulate the same.

Of the miserable end of this Twyford read before.

Ye have heard before of the Condemnation and Martyrdom of a certain Boy called Thomas Drowry, condemned by Williams Chancellor of Glouceſter, contrary to all right and counsel of the Register then present, called Barker. Now what punishment fell after upon the said Chancellor, followeth to be declared.

The strange and fearful death of the same Dr. Williams.

WHen God of his inestimable mercy having pity of us, and pardoning our sins, for his Son Christ Jesus sake, had now taken from us that bloody Princess, and sent us this Jewel of Joy, the Queens Majesty that now reigneth (and long may she reign) over us; and that the Commissioners for restitution of Religion were coming toward Glouceſter; the same day Doctor Williams the Chancellor dined with Master Jennings the Dean of Glouceſter, who with all his men were booted ready at one of the Clock to set forward to Chipping-Norton, about fifteen Miles from Glouceſter, to meet the Commissioners which were at Chipping-Norton, and said to him; Chancellor, are not thy Boots on?

Chan. Why should I put them on?

To go with me (quoth the Dean) to meet these Commissioners.

Chan. I will neither meet them nor see them.

Dea. Thou must needs see them, for now it is past twelve of the Clock, and they will be here afore three of the Clock: and therefore if thou be wise, on with they Boots, and let us go together, and all shall be well. Anno 1558.

Chanc. Go your ways, Mr. Dean, I will never see them.

As I said, W. Jennings the Dean set forward with his Company toward the Commissioners, and by and by cometh one upon horseback to the Dean, saying; Master Chancellor lieth at the mercy of God, and is speechless. At that word the Dean with his Company pricked forward to the Commissioners, and told them the whole matter and communication between them two, as above. And they sent one of their men with the best words they could devise, to comfort him with many promises. But to be short, albeit the Commissioners were now nearer Glouceſter, than the Dean and his Company thought, making very great haste, especially after they had received these News: Yet Doctor Williams, though false of Religion, yet true of his promise, kept his ungracious Covenant with the Dean: for he was dead ere they came to the City, and so never saw them indeed.

Wherefore to pass over our own domestical examples of English persecutors plagued by Gods hand (wherewith this our present Story doth abound) I will stretch my Pen a little further, to adjoyn with a few like examples in Forain Countries. Declaration of forain examples.

Forain Examples.

HOimeister the great Archpapist, and chief Master-Pillar of the Popes falling Church, as he was, in his journy going toward the Counsel of Ratisbone, to dispute against the defenders of Christs Gospel, suddenly in his journy, not far from Ulmes, was prevented by the stroke of Gods hand, and there miserably died, with horrible roaring and crying out. Ex Illyrico de vocabulo fidei. Heimeister suddenly striken with death going to Ratisbone.

What a Pernicious and Pestilent Doctrine is this of the Papists, which leadeth men to seek their Salvation by Merits and works of the Law, and not by Faith only in Christ the Son of God, and to stay themselves by Grace? And what inconvenience this Doctrine of doubting and desperation bringeth men to at length, if the plain Word of God will not sufficiently admonish, yet let us be warned by examples of such as have been either teachers or followers of this Doctrine, and consider well what end commonly it hath and doth bring men unto. To recite all that may be said in this behalf, it were infinite. To note a few examples for admonitions sake, it shall be requisite. What inconvenience cometh by the Popes desperate Doctrine.

In the University of Lovane was one named Guarlacus a learned man, brought up in that School, who at length was Reader of Divinity to the Monks of Saint Gertrudes order. Where after he had stoutly maintained the corrupt errours of such Popish Doctrine, at last falling sick, when he perceived no way with him but death, he fell into a miserable agony and perturbation of Spirit,, crying out of his sins, how wickedly he had lived, and that he was not able to abide the judgment of God, and so casting out words of miserable desperation, said, his sins were greater than he could be pardoned, and in that desperation wrechedly he ended his life. Ex Epistola Claudii Senarclæ ad Bucerum ante Histor. de morte Diazii. The miserable end of Guarlacus Reader in Lovane.

Another like example we have of Arnoldus Bomelius, a young man of the said University of Lovane, well commended for his fresh flourishing wit and ripeness of learning, who so long as he favoured the cause of the Gospel, and took part with the same against the Enemies of the Truth, he prospered and went well forward; but after that he drew to the Company of Tyleman, Master of the Popes Colledge in Lovane, and framed himself after the Rule of his unsavoury Doctrine, that is, to stand in fear and doubt of his justification, and to work his Salvation by Merits and deeds of the Law, he began more and more to grow in doubtful despair and discomfort of mind; as the nature of that Doctrine is, utterly to pluck away a mans mind from all The Story of Arnoldus Bomelius, student at Lovane.

Note what evil instruction and Company doth.

certainty

Anno 1558. certainty and true liberty of Spirit, to a ſervile doubtfulneſs, full of diſcomfort and Bondage of Soul.

An horrible example of Arnoldus Bomelius, which killed himſelf with his own Dagger.

Thus the young man, ſeduced and perverted through this blind Doctrine of ignorance and dubitation, fell into a great agony of mind, wandring and wreſtling in himſelf a long ſpace, till at length being overcome with deſpair, and not having in the Popiſh Doctrine wherewith to raiſe up his Soul, he went out of the City on a time to walk, accompanied with three other Students of the ſame Univerſity, his ſpecial familiars. Who as they returned home again after their walk, Arnoldus for wearineſs, as it ſeemed, ſate down by a Spring ſide to reſt him a while. The other, ſuppoſing none other but that he for wearineſs there reſted to refreſh himſelf, went forward a little paſt him. In the mean time what doth Arnoldus, but ſuddenly taketh out his Dagger, and ſtrook himſelf into the Body.

His Fellows ſeeing him ſhrinking down, and the fountain to be all coloured with the Blood which iſſued out of the wound, came running to him to take him up, and ſo ſearching his Body where the wound ſhould be, at length found what he had done, and how he had ſtriken himſelf with his Dagger into the Breaſt. Whereupon they took him and brought him into an houſe next at hand, and there exhorted him, as well as they could to repent his fact; who then by outward geſture ſeemed to give ſome ſhew of repentance. Notwithſtanding, the ſaid Arnoldus, eſpying one of his Friends there buſie about him to have a Knife hanging at his Girdle, violently plucked out the Knife, and with main force Stabbed himſelf to the Heart.

Admonition to our Lovanians.

By theſe Lovanian examples, as we have all to learn, no man to be ſure of his life, but that he always needeth to crave and call unto the Lord to bleſs him with his Truth and Grace; ſo eſpecially would I wiſh our Engliſh Lovanians, which now make Forts in that Univerſity againſt the open Truth of Chriſts Goſpel, to be wiſe in time, and not to ſpurn ſo againſt the prick, Ne forte, &c.

Or if they think yet theſe examples not enough for ſufficient admonition, let them joyn hereunto the remembrance alſo of Jacobus Latomus, a chief and principal Captain of the ſame Univerſity of Lovane. Who after he had been at Bruſſels and there, thinking to do a great Act againſt Luther and his fellows, made an Oration before the Emperour, ſo fooliſhly and ridiculouſly, that he was laughed to ſcorn almoſt of the whole Court: Then returning from thence to Lovane again, in his Publick Lecture he fell in an open fury and madneſs, uttering ſuch words of deſperation and blaſphemous Impiety, that the other Divines which were there, and namely, Ruardus, Anchuſtanus, were fain to carry him away as he was raving, and ſo ſhut him into a cloſe Chamber. From that time unto his laſt breath, Latomus had never any thing elſe in his mouth, but that he was damned, and rejected of God, and that there was no hope of Salvation for him, becauſe that wittingly and againſt his knowledge he withſtood the manifeſt Truth of his Word. Ex Epiſt. Senarclæi ante hiſt. de morte Diazii. Item, ex Oratione Pauli Eberi in comitiis Wittembergæ habita.

Jacobus Latomus an enemy to the Goſpel, brought to madneſs and deſperation.

The terrible words of Latomus in his deſperation.

Thus Almighty God not only by his Word, but by examples in divers and ſundry wiſe doth warn us, firſt to ſeek to know the perfect will and decree of the Lord our God appointed in his Word. The perfect will and full Teſtament of the Lord in his Word, is this, that he hath ſent and given his only Son, unto us, being fully contented to accept our faith only upon him for our perfect juſtification and full ſatisfaction for all our tranſgreſſions; and this is called in Scripture, Juſtitia Dei. To this will and righteouſneſs of God, they that humble themſelves, find ſuch peace and reſt in their Souls, as no man is able to expreſs, and have ſtrength enough againſt all the invaſions and temptations of Sathan.

Gods will in his word to accept our Faith only for juſtification.

Obedience to Gods will rewarded.

Contrariwiſe, they that will not yield their Obedience unto the will and ordinance of God expreſſed in his Word, but will ſeek their own righteouſneſs, which is of man, labouring by their Merits and ſatisfaction to ſerve and pleaſe God; theſe not only do find with God no righteouſneſs at all, but in ſtead of his favour procure to themſelves his horrible indignation, in ſtead of comfort, heap to themſelves deſperation, and in the end what inconvenience they come to by theſe above, receited examples of Guarlacus, Bomelius, and Latomus, it is evident to ſee. And out of this Fountain ſpring not only the puniſhments of theſe men, but alſo all other inconveniences, which happen amongſt men, whereſoever this pernicious and Erroneous Doctrine of the Papiſts taketh place.

Diſobedience to Gods will puniſhed.

The chief Fountain of all miſchief in the world.

Manlius in his Book, De dictis Philippi Melanct. maketh mention of a certain Taylors Servant in Lipſia, who receiving firſt the Sacrament in both kinds with the Goſpellers, afterward, being perſwaded by the Papiſts, received with them under one kind. Whereupon being admoniſhed of his Maſter to come to the Communion again in the Church of the Goſpellers, he ſtood a great while and made no anſwer. At laſt, crying out upon a ſudden, he ran to the Window thereby, and ſo caſt himſelf out, and brake his neck.

In the ſame Manlius mention is alſo made of a certain Gentlemen of Name and Authority, but he nameth him not, who hearing theſe words in a ſong; Ein feſte burg iſt unſer Gott, that is, Our only hold or forteſs is our God, Pſalm 46. anſwered and ſaid, Ich wil holſten die burg zerchieſten, oderich wil nit leben, that is, I will help to ſhoot againſt thy ſtay or fort, or elſe I will not live. Joanes Sleidanus in his 23. Book maketh relation of Cardinal Creſentius, the chief Preſident and Moderator of the Council of Trent Anno 1552. The Story of whom is certain, the thing that hapned to him was ſtrange and notable, example of him may be profitable to others, ſuch as have grace to be warned by other mens evils. The narration is this.

Ex Joan. Sleidano lib. 23.

The twenty fifth day of March in the year aforeſaid Creſentius the Popes Legate, and Vicegerent in the Council of Trent, was ſitting all the day long until dark night, in writing Letters to the Pope. After his labour, when night was come, thinking to refreſh himſelf, he began to riſe? and at his riſing, behold there appeared to him a mighty black Dog, of a huge bigneſs, his eyes flaming with fire, and his Ears hanging low down well near to the ground, to enter in, and ſtrait to come toward him, and ſo to couch under the Board. The Cardinal not a little amazed at the ſight thereof, ſomewhat recovering himſelf, called to his Servants, which were in the outward Chamber next by, to bring in a Candle, and to ſeek for the Dog. But when the Dog could not be found, neither there, nor in any other Chamber about, the Cardinal thereupon ſtricken with a ſudden conceit of mind, immediately fell into ſuch a ſickneſs, whereof his Phyſitians, which he had about him, with all their induſtry and cunning could not cure him. And ſo in the Town of Verona died this Popiſh Cardinal, the Popes holy Legate, and Preſident of this Council;

There were in this Councel, beſides the Popes Legates and Cardinal of Trent, 24. Biſhops, Doctors of Divinity 62. And thus was the end of that Popiſh Councel, by the provident hand of the Almighty, diſpatched and brought to nought. Ex Sleidano. lib. 23.

Two adulterous Biſhops of Trent Connecl juſtly ſlain in adultery.

This Councel of Trent, being then diſſolved by the death of his Cardinal, was afterward notwithſtanding recollected again about the year of our Lord 1562. againſt the Erroneous proceedings of which Council other Writers there be that ſay enough. So much as pertaineth only to ſtory, I thought hereunto to add concerning two filthy Adulterous Biſhops to the ſaid Councel belonging, of whom the one, haunting to an honeſt wife, was ſlain by the juſt ſtroke of God with a Boreſpeer. The other Biſhop whoſe haunt was to creep thorow a Window, in the ſame Window was ſubtilly taken and hanged in a grin laid for him of purpoſe, and ſo conveighed, that in the Morning he was ſeen openly in the ſtreet hanging out of the Window, to the wonderment of all that paſſed by. Ex proteſtatione Concionatorum German. adverſus conventum Trident. &c.

Dr. Eckius the Popes ſtout champion.

Amongſt all the Religious orders of Papiſts, who was a ſtouter defender of the Popes ſide, or a more vehement impugner of Martin Luther, than Jo. Eckius? who, if his cauſe wherein he ſo travelled, had been godly, had deſerved (no doubt) great favour and condign Retribution at the hands of the Lord. Now forſomuch as we cannot better judge of him than by his end, let us conſider the manner of his departing hence, and compare the ſame with the end of Mr. Luther.

The end of Martin Luther compared to the end of Eckius.

In the which Mr. Luther, being ſuch an Adverſary as he was to the Pope, and having no leſs than all the world upon him at once, firſt this is to be noted, that after all theſe travels, the Lord gave him to depart both in great age, and in his own native Country where he was born. Secondly, he bleſſed him with ſuch a quiet death, without any violent hand of any Adverſary, that it was counted rather a ſleep than a death. Thirdly, as the death of his Body was mild, ſo his Spirit and mind continued no leſs godly unto the end, continually invocating and calling upon the name of the Lord, and ſo commending his Spirit to him with fervent prayer, he made a bleſſed and an heavenly ending. Fourthly, over and beſides theſe bleſſings, Almighty God did alſo add unto him ſuch an honourable burial, as to many great Princes ſcarce happeneth the like. And this briefly concerning the end of Martin Luther, as ye may read before more at large.

The manner of John Eckius death Eckius laſt words. Eckius dieth dreaming of his Guilders

Now let us conſider, and conferr with this the death of John Eckius, and the manner thereof, which we find in the Engliſh tranſlation of the Hiſtory of John Carion, fol. 250. in theſe words expreſſed. This year (ſaith he) died at Ingoldſtate, Dr. Eckius, a faithful ſervant and champion of the Pope, and a defender of the abominable Papacy. But as his life was full of all ungodlineſs, uncleanneſs, and Blaſphemy; ſo was his end miſerable, hard, and pitiful, inſomuch that his laſt words (as it is noted of many credible perſons) were theſe; In caſe the four thouſand Guilders were ready, the matter were diſpatched, &c. (Dreaming belike of ſome Cardinalſhip that he ſhould have bought.) Some ſay that the Pope had granted him a certain Deanry, which he ſhould have redeemed from the Court of Rome with the foreſaid ſum. Now what a heavenly end this was of Mr. Eckius; I leave it to the Readers judgment.

Ex Aspen dice Hiſt. Joan Carionis.

Gods judgment upon one John Vander Warf Shoulted of Antwerp, a perſecutor.

In the City of Antwerp was (as they term him there) a Shoulted, that is to ſay, the next Officer to the Markgrave, one named John Vander Warfe, Baſtard Son of a ſtock or kindred called Warfe, of good Eſtimation amongſt the chiefeſt in Antwerp. Who, as he was of nature cruel, ſo was he of judgment perverſe and corrupt, and a ſore perſecutor of Chriſts flock, with greedineſs ſeeking and ſhedding Innocent Blood, and had drowned divers good men and women in the water, for the which he was much commended of the Bloody generation. Of ſome he was called a Bloud-hound or Bloody dogg. Of other he was called Shilpad, that is to ſay, Shelroad; for that he being a ſhort-grundy, and of little ſtature, did ride commonly with a great Broad Hat, as a churl of the Country.

Shilpad, a kind of ſhel-fiſh, faſhioned like a Tode, with a hard and a broad ſhell upon his back.

This man, after he was weary of his Office (wherein he had continued above 20. years) hee gave it over; and becauſe he was now grown rich and wealthy, he intended to paſs the reſidue of his life in pleaſure and quietneſs.

Our Ladies drunken feaſt.

During which time, about the ſecond year after he had left his Office, he came to Antwerp to the feaſt called our Ladies Oumegang, to make merry; which feaſt is uſually kept on the Sunday following the Aſſumption of our Lady. The ſame day in the afternoon about four of the clock, he being well loden with wine, rode homewards in his Wagon, with his Wife and a Gentlewoman waiting on her and his fool. As ſoon as the Wagon was come without the Gate of the City called Croneborgh Gate, upon the Wooden Bridge being at that time made for a ſhift with rails or barrers on both ſides for more ſurety of the paſſengers (half a mans height and more) the horſes ſtood ſtill, and would by no means go forward, whatſoever the guider of the Wagon could do.

Then he in a drunken rage cried out to him that guided the Wagon, ſaying; Ride on in a thouſand Divels name, ride on. Whereat the poor man anſwered, that he could not make the horſes to go forward. By and by, while they were yet thus talking, ſuddenly roſe, as it were, a mighty whirl-wind, with a terrible noiſe (the weather being very fair, and no wind ſtirring before) and toſt the Wagon over the barr into the Town ditch, the ropes whereat the horſes had been tied, being broken aſunder in ſuch ſort, as if they had been cut with a ſharp knife, the Wagon alſo being caſt upſide-down, with the fore-end thereof turned toward the Town again, and he drowned in the mire; and when he was taken up, it was found, that his neck alſo was broken. His Wife was taken up alive, but died alſo within three days after. But the Gentlewoman and the Fool, by Gods mighty providence, were preſerved and had no harm. The Fool hearing the people ſay his Maſter was dead, ſaid; And was not I dead, was not I dead too? This was done, Anno 1553. The Lord of Reveſt plagued.

Touching the like grievous puniſhment of God upon one John Martin a perſecutor, read before.

John Martin plagued.

Eraſmus in an Epiſtle or Apology written in defence of his Colloquies, inferreth mention of a certain Noble Perſon of great riches and poſſeſſions, who having Wife and Children, with a great family at home (to whom by Saint Pauls Rule he was bound in Conſcience principally partly above all other worldly things to attend) had purpoſed before his death to go ſee Jeruſalem. And thus all things being ſet in order, this Noble man, about to ſet forward on his journey, committed the care of his Wife (whom he left great with Child) and of his Lordſhips and Caſtles to an Archbiſhop, as to a moſt ſure and truſty Father. To make ſhort, it hapned in the journey this Noble man to dye. Whereof ſo ſoon as the Archbiſhop had intelligence, in ſtead of a Father he became a thief and a robber, ſeiſing into his own hands all his Lordſhips and Poſſeſſions. And moreover, not yet contented with all this, he laid ſiege againſt a ſtrong Fort of his (unto the which his Wife for ſafeguard of her ſelf did flee) where in concluſion ſhe, with the Child that ſhe went withall, was pitifully ſlain, and ſo miſerably periſhed. Which ſtory was done (as teſtifieth Eraſmus) not ſo long before his time, but that there remained the Nephewes of the Noble man then alive, to whom the ſame Inheritance ſhould have fallen, but they could not obtain it.

Admonition.

What cometh of blind ſuperſtition, when a man not containing himſelf within the compaſs of Gods Word, wandreth in other by-ways of his own, and not contented with the Religion ſet up of the Lord, will bind his Conſcience to other ordinances, preſcriptions, and Religions deviſed by men, leaving Gods Commandments undone for the conſtitutions and precepts of men, what end and reward (I ſay) cometh thereof at length, by this one example, beſide infinite other of the like ſort, men may learn by experience: and therefore they that yet will defend Idolatrous Pilgrimage and raſh Vows, let them well conſider hereof. It is rightly ſaid of Saint Hierome; To have been at Jeruſalem is no great matter, but to live a godly and vertuous life, that is a great matter in very deed.

False devotion a perilous thing.

Againſt Idolatrous Pilgrimage.

A wonderful example of Gods judgment at Gaunt An. 1565.

In the year of our Lord, 1565. there was in the Town of Gaunt in Flanders, one William de Wever, accuſed and impriſoned by the Provoſt of St. Peters in Gaunt (who had in his Cloiſter a Priſon and a place of execution) and the day when the ſaid William was called to the place of judgment, the Provoſt ſent for Mr Giles Brackleman, principal Advocate of the Council of Flanders, and Borough-Maſter and Judge of St. Peters in Gaunt, with other of the Rulers of the Town of Gaunt, to ſit in judgment upon him, and as they in ſate judgment the Borough-Maſter, named Mr. Giles Brackleman, reaſoned with the ſaid William de Wever upon divers Articles of his faith.

Three cauſes why Saints are not to be prayed unto.

The one whereof was, why the ſaid William de Wever denied that it was lawful to pray to Saints; and he anſwered (as the report goeth) for three cauſes. The one was, that they were but creatures, and not the Creator.

The ſecond was, that if he ſhould call upon them, the Lord did both ſee it, and hear it: and therefore he durſt give the glory to none other, but to God.

The third and chiefeſt cauſe was, that the Creator had commanded in his Holy Word to call upon him in troubles, unto which commandment he durſt neither add nor take from it.

The Borough-Maſter Mr. Giles Brackleman alſo demanded, whether he did not believe that there was a Purgatory which he ſhould go into after this life, where every one ſhould be purified and cleanſed.

Purgatory denied.

He anſwered, that he had read over the whole Bible, and could find no ſuch place, but the death of Chriſt was his Purgatory: with many other queſtions proceeding after their order, until he came to pronounce his condemnation. But ere the ſaid condemnation was read forth, the judgment of God was laid upon the ſaid Borough-Maſter, who ſuddenly at that preſent inſtant was ſtriken with a Palſie, that his mouth was drawn up almoſt to his ear, and ſo he fell down, the reſt of the Lords by and by ſtanding up and ſhadowing him that the people could not well ſee him; and alſo the People were willed to depart, who being ſtill called upon to depart, anſwered, the place was ſo ſmall to go out, that they could go no faſter. Then the Borough-Maſter of the Town being taken up, was carried to his houſe, and it is not yet underſtood nor commonly known that ever he ſpake word after he was firſt ſtriken, but was openly known to be dead the next day following. And yet notwithſtanding that this was done about ten of the clock, they burned the ſaid William de Wever within three hours after, on the ſame day.

The judgment of God upon Giles Brackleman the Borough Maſter.

William de Wever Martyr, burnt at Gaunt. Anno 1565.

The fourth day of March, 1566, the like example of the Lords terrible judgment was ſhewed upon Sir Garret Trieſt Knight, who had long before promiſed to the Regent to bring down the preaching. For the which act (as the report goeth) the Regent promiſed again to make him a Grave, which is an Earl. Of the which Sir Garret it is alſo ſaid, that he coming from Bruxels towards Gaunt, brought with him the death of the Preachers, and being come to Gaunt, the ſaid Sir Garret with other of the Lords having received from the Regent a Commiſſion to ſwear the Lords and Commons unto the Romiſh Religion, the ſaid Sir Garret the 4. day of March above noted, at night being at ſupper, willed the Lady his Wife to call him in the morning one hour ſooner than he was accuſtomed to riſe, for that he ſhould the next day have much buſineſs to do in the Town-houſe, to ſwear the Lords and people to the Romiſh Religion. But ſee what hapned. The ſaid Sir Garret going to bed in good health (as it ſeemed) when the Lady his Wife called him in the morning, according to his appointment, was found dead in her bed by her, and ſo unable to proſecute his wicked purpoſe.

Another terrible example of Gods judgment againſt Sir Garret Trieſt Gentleman, and then Alderman of Gaunt, a perſecutor, Anno 1566.

The fifth of March, 1566. which was the day that Sir Garret Trieſt appointed to bee there, and the Lords of Gaunt were come into the Town-houſe (as they had afore appointed) to proceed and to give the Oath, according as they had their Commiſſion, and Mr. Martin de Peſter the Secretary being appointed and about to give the Oath, as the firſt man ſhould have ſworn, the ſaid Martin de Peſter was ſtriken of God with preſent death likewiſe, and fell down, and was carried away in a chair or ſettell, and never ſpake after. Witneſs hereof.

About the Borders of Suevia in Germany, not far from the City of Uberling, there was a certain Monaſtery of Ciſtercian Monks, called Salmeſuille, founded in the days of Pope Innocent 2. by a noble Baron named Guntherame, about the year of our Lord, 1110. This Cell thus being erected, in proceſs of time was inlarged with more ample poſſeſſions, finding many and great benefactors and endowers liberally contributing unto the ſame; as Emperors, Dukes, and rich Barons.

A ſtory of a tame Devil conjured in an Abbey in Suevia.

Amongſt whom moſt eſpecial were the Earls of Montfort, who had beſtowed upon that Monaſtery many new liberties and great priviledges, upon this condition, that they ſhould receive with free hoſpitality any ſtranger both Horſeman or Footman, for one nights lodging, whoſoever came. But this Hoſpitality did not long ſo continue, through a ſubtle and devilliſh device of one of the Monks, who took upon him to counterfeit to play the part of the Devil, ratling and raging in his Chains where the ſtrangers ſhould lie, after a terrible manner, in the night time to fray away the gueſts; by reaſon whereof no ſtranger nor traveller durſt there abide, and ſo continued this a long ſpace.

A ſubtle device of the Monks, to fray away their gueſts.

At length (as God would) it ſo hapned, that one of Earls of the ſaid houſe of Montfort, benefactors to that Abbey, coming to the Monaſtery, was there lodged, whether of ſet purpoſe, or by chance, it is not known.

When the night came, and the Earl was at his reſt, the Monk after his wonted manner beginneth his Pageant, to play the tame, yea rather the wild Devil. There was ſtamping, ramping, ſpirting of fire, roaring, thundering, bounſing of boords, and ratling of chains, enough to make ſome man ſtark mad. The Earl hearing the ſudden noyſe, and being ſomewhat peradventure affraid at the firſt, although he had not then the feat of conjuring, yet taking a good heart unto him, and running to his ſword, he laid about him well favouredly, and following ſtill the noyſe of the Devil, ſo conjured him at the laſt, that the Monk, which counterfeited the Devil in jeſt, was ſlain in his one likeneſs in earneſt.

After the impriſonment of the Congregation, which were taken hearing Gods Word in St James-ſtreet in Paris, Anno 1558. (as is above ſtoried) was a Letter written to the King, which was divulgate abroad, proving and declaring by divers Hiſtories, what afflictions and calamities from time to time, by Gods righteous judgment, have fallen upon ſuch as have been Enemies to his People, and have reſiſted the free paſſage of his holy Word. In which Letter, forſomuch as beſide the ſaid Examples much other good fruitful matter is contained, worthy of all men to be read, and eſpecially of Princes to be conſidered, I thought good here to copy out the whole, as the French Book doth give it. The tranſlation of the which Letter into Engliſh, is after this tenour, as followeth.

A Letter tranſlated out of French into Engliſh, written to King Henry the Second French King.

The doings of Henry 2. French K. againſt the Lutherans never proſpered with him.

CONſider, I pray you Sir, and you ſhall find that all your afflictions have come upon you, ſince you have ſet your ſelf againſt thoſe which are called Lutherans.

When you made the Edict of Chaſteaubriant, God ſent you Wars; but when you ceaſed the execution of your ſaid Edict, and as long as ye were enemy unto the Pope, and going into Almany for the defence of the Germans afflicted for Religion, your affairs proſpered as ye would wiſh or deſire.

This Truce was between the French King and the Emperor, which the Pope cauſed to be broken.

On the contrary, what hath become upon you ſince you were joyned with the Pope again, having received a Sword from him for his own ſafeguard? And who was it that cauſed you to break the Truce? God hath turned in a moment your proſperities into ſuch afflictions, that they touch not only the ſtate of your own perſon, but of your Kingdom alſo.

The cruel purpoſe of the Duke of Guiſe diſappointed.

To what end came the enterpriſe of the Duke of Guiſe in Italy, going about the ſervice of the enemy of God, and purpoſing after his return to deſtroy the Vallies of Piemont, to offer or ſacrifice them to God for his Victories? The event hath well declared, that God can turn upſide down our counſels and enterprizes; as he overturned of late the enterprize of the Conſtable of France at St. Quintins, having vowed to God, that at his return he would go and deſtroy Geneva, when he had gotten the victory.

The wicked Vow of the Conſtable of France defeated.

The marvellous Judgment of God upon a burning Perſecutor.

Have you not heard of L. Ponchet Archbiſhop of Tours, who made ſute for the erection of a Court called Chamber Ardent, wherein to condemn the Proteſtants to the Fire? who afterwards was ſtricken with a diſeaſe called the Fire of God; which began at his feet, and ſo aſcended upward, that one member after another to be cut off, and ſo died miſerably without any remedy.

Gods fearful hand upon Caſtellanus, Perſecutor.

Alſo one Caſtellanus, who having inriched himſelf by the Goſpel, and forſaking the pure Doctrine thereof to return unto his vomit again, went about to perſecute the Chriſtians at Orleans, and by the hand of God was ſtricken in his Body with a ſickneſs unknown to the Phyſicians, the one half of his Body burning as hot as fire, and the other as cold as Ice; and ſo moſt miſerably crying and lamenting, ended his life.

There be other infinite Examples of Gods Judgments worthy to be remembred; as the death of the Chancellor and Legate du Prat, which was the firſt that opened to the Parliament the knowledge of Hereſies, and gave out the firſt Commiſſions to put the faithful to death, who afterward died in his Houſe at Natoillet, ſwearing and horribly blaſpheming God, and his Stomach was found pierced and gnawn aſunder with Worms.

Alſo John Ruſe, Counſellor in the Parliament, coming from the Court, after he had made report of the Proceſs againſt the poor Innocents.

The wicked end of Claude de Aſſes, Perſecutor.

Alſo one named Claude de Aſſes, a Counſellor in the ſaid Court, the ſaid day that he gave his opinion and conſent to burn a faithful Chriſtian (albeit it was not done indeed as he would have it) after he had dined, committed whoredom with a Servant in the houſe, and even in doing the act he was ſtricken with a diſeaſe called Apoplexia, whereof he died out of hand.

Anno 1558.

Peter Liſet, Chief Preſident of the ſaid Court, and one of the Authors of the foreſaid Burning-Chamber, was depoſed from his Office, for being known to be out of his right wit, and bereaved of his underſtanding.

Alſo John Morin, Lieutenant Criminal of the Provoſt of Paris, after he had been the cauſe of the death of many Chriſtians, was finally ſtricken with a diſeaſe in his Legs, called the Wolves, whereby he loſt the uſe of them, and died alſo out of his wits, many days before denying and blaſpheming God.

J. Andrew, Book-binder, plagued.

Likewiſe John Andrew, Bookbinder of the Palace, a Spy for the Preſident Liſet, and of Bruſeard the Kings Sollicitor, died in a fury and madneſs.

The terrible Vengeance of God upon J. de Roma, a terrible Perſecutor.

The Inquiſitor John de Roma in Provence, his fleſh fell from him by piece-meal, ſo ſtinking that no man might come near him.

J. Minerius a cruel Perſecutor plagued of God.

Alſo John Minerius of Provence, which was the cauſe of the death of a great number of Men, Women and Children, at Cabriers and at Merindol, died with bleeding in the lower Parts, the fire having taken his Belly, blaſpheming and deſpiſing God: beſides many other whereof we might make recital, which were puniſhed with the like kind of death.

The French K. by ſundry ſorts of troubles warned of God.

It may pleaſe your Majeſty to remember your ſelf, that ye had no ſooner determined to ſet upon us, but new Troubles were by and by moved by your Enemies, with whom ye could come to no agreement; which God would not ſuffer, foraſmuch as your peace was grounded upon the Perſecution which ye pretended againſt Gods Servants: As alſo your Cardinals cannot let through their cruelty the courſe of the Goſpel, which hath taken ſuch root in your Realm, that if God ſhould give you leave to deſtroy the Profeſſors thereof, you ſhould be almoſt a King without Subjects.

Riches and Pride of the Clergy, the fountain of all Evils.

Tertullian hath well ſaid, that the Blood of Martyrs is the Seed of the Goſpel. Wherefore to take away all theſe evils coming of the riches of the Papiſts, which cauſe ſo much Whoredom, Sodomitry and Inceſt, wherein they wallow like Hogs, feeding their idle Bellies, the beſt way were to put them from their Lands and Poſſeſſions, as the old Sacrificing Levites were, according to the expreſs commandment which was given to Joſhuah. For as long as the Commandment of God took place, and that they were void of ambition, the purity of Religion remained whole and perfect; but when they began to aſpire to principalities, riches and worldly honours, then began the abomination of deſolation that Chriſt foretold.

The pureneſs of the Primitive Church, how long it continued, and whereby. The falſe Donation of Conſtantine.

It was even ſo in the Primitive Church, for it flouriſhed and continued in all pureneſs, as long as the Miniſters were of ſmall wealth, and ſought not their particular profit, but the glory of God only. But ſince the Pope began to be Prince-like, and to uſurp the dominion of the Empire under the colour of a falſe donation of Conſtantine, they have turned the Scriptures from their true ſenſe, and have attributed the ſervice to themſelves, which we owe to God. Wherefore your Majeſty may ſeize with good right upon all the Temporalties of the Benefices, and that with a ſafe Conſcience to employ them to their true and right uſe.

Exhortation to the King to ſeiſe upon the Temporalties of the Clergy. The Riches of the Popes Clergy, how they ought to be employed.

Firſt, for the finding and maintaining of the faithful Miniſters of the Word of God, for ſuch Livings ſhall be requiſite for them, according as the caſe ſhall require. Secondly, for the entertainment of your Juſtices that give judgment. Thirdly, for the relieving of the Poor, and maintenance of Colledges to inſtruct the poor Youth in that which they ſhall be moſt apt unto. And the reſt, which is infinite, may remain for entertainment of your own eſtate and affairs, to the great eaſement of your poor People, which alone bear the burthen, and poſſeſs in manner nothing.

In this doing, an infinite number of men, and even of your Nobility, which live of the Crucifix, ſhould employ themſelves to your ſervice, and the Commonwealths ſo much the more diligently, as they ſee that ye recompence none but thoſe that have deſerved; whereas now there is an infinite number of men in your Kingdom, which occupy the chieſeſt and greateſt Benefices, which never deſerved any part of them, &c. And thus much touching touching the ſuperfluous poſſeſſions of the Popes lordly Clergy. Now proceeding further in this exhortation to the King, thus the Letter importeth.

The malicious and lying ſlanders of the Papiſts to bring the true Goſpellers in hatred with Princes

But when the Papiſts ſee that they have not to alledge for themſelves any reaſon, they aſſay to make odious to your Majeſty the Lutherans (as they call us) and ſay; If their ſayings take place, ye ſhall be fain to remain a private perſon, and that there is never change of Religion but there is alſo change of Princedom. A thing as falſe as when they accuſe us to be Sacramentaries, and that wee deny the Authority of Magiſtrates, under the ſhadow of certain furious Anabaptiſts, which Sathan hath raiſed in our time to darken the light of the Goſpel. For the Hiſtories of the Emperors which have begun to receive the Chriſtian Religion, and that which is come to paſs in our time, ſhew the contrary.

Conſtantine confirmed in his kingdom the more, by receiving the Goſpel.

Was there ever Prince more feared and obeyed, than Conſtantine in receiving the Chriſtian Religion? was he therefore put from the Empire? No, he was thereby the more confirmed and eſtabliſhed in the ſame, and alſo his poſterity which ruled themſelves by his providence. But ſuch as have fallen away, and followed mens traditions, God hath deſtroyed, and their race is no more known in earth: So much doth God deteſt them that forſake him.

Examples of England and Germany, how Princes loſe no honour by the Goſpel.

And in our time the late Kings of England and Germany, were they conſtrained in reproving ſuperſtitions, which the wickedneſs of the time had brought in, to forſake their Kingdoms and Princedoms? All men ſee the contrary; and what honour, fidelity, and obedience the people in our time that have received the reformation of the Goſpel, do under their Princes and ſuperiours. Yea, I may ſay, that the Princes knew not before what it was to be obeyed, at that time when the rude and ignorant people received ſo readily the diſpenſations of the Pope, to drive out their own Kings and natural Lords.

The Popes Religion more noiſome to the ſtate of Princes than the Doctrine of the Lutherans.

Wholſome remedy ſhewed againſt the Popes pride.

The true and only remedy, Sir, is, that ye cauſe to be holden a holy and free Councel, where ye ſhould be chief, and not the Pope and his, who ought but only to defend their cauſes by the holy Scriptures; that in the mean while ye may ſeek out men not corrupted, ſuſpected, nor partial, whom ye may charge to give report faithfully unto you of the true ſenſe of Holy Scriptures. And this done, after the example of the good Kings, Joſaphat, Ezechias, and Joſias, ye ſhall take out of the Church all Idolatry, Superſtition, and abuſe, which is found directly contrary to the Holy Scriptures of the old and new Teſtament, and by that means ye ſhall guide your people in the true and pure ſervice of God, not regarding in the mean time the cavilling pretences of the Papiſts, which ſay that ſuch queſtions have been already anſwered at general Councels: for it is known well enough, that no Councel hath been lawful ſince the Popes have uſurped the principallity and Tyranny upon mens Souls, but they have made them ſerve to their covetouſneſs, ambition, and cruelty; and the contrary which is among thoſe Councels, maketh enough for their diſproof, beſide a hundred thouſand other abſurdities againſt the Word of God, which be in them. The true proof for ſuch matters is in the true and holy Scriptures, to the which no times, nor age hath any preſcription to bee alledged againſt them; for by them wee receiye the Councels founded upon the Word of God, and alſo by the ſame we reject that Doctrin which is repugnant.

A blind ſhift of the Papiſts to ſtop Princes from calling general Councels.

The contrarieties in the Popes Councels enough for their diſproof.

Propheſie againſt the French King.

And if ye do thus Sir, God will bleſs your enterpriſe, he will encreaſe and confirm your Reign and Empire, and your poſterity. If otherwiſe, deſtruction is at your gate, and unhappy are the People which ſhall dwell under your obedience. There is no doubt but God will harden your heart as he did Pharaohs, and take off the Crown from your head, as he did to Jeroboam, Nadab, Baza, Achab, and to many other Kings, which have followed mens traditions, againſt the commandment of God, and give it to your enemies to triumph over you and your Children.

And if the Emperor Antonine the meek, although he were a Pagan and Idolater, ſeeing himſelf bewrapt with ſo many warrs, ceaſed the perſecutions which were in his time againſt the Chriſtians, and determined in the end to hear their cauſes and reaſons, how much more ought you that bear the name of the moſt Chriſtian King, to be careful and diligent to ceaſe the perſecutions againſt the Poor Chriſtians, ſeeing they have not troubled nor do trouble in any wiſe the ſtate of your Kingdom, and your affairs; conſidering alſo that the Jews be ſuffered through all Chriſtendom, although they be mortal enemies of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which we hold by common accord and conſent for our God, Redeemer, and Saviour; and that until ye have heard lawfully debated, and underſtand our reaſons, taken out of the holy Scriptures, and that your Majeſty have judged, if we be worthy of ſuch puniſhments. For if wee bee not overcome by the Word of God, the fires, the ſwords, nor the cruelleſt torments ſhall make us affraid. Theſe bee exerciſes that God hath promiſed to his, the which hee foretold ſhould come in the laſt times, that they ſhould not be troubled when ſuch perſecutions ſhall come upon them.

The ſtory and the end of the French King

The ſtory and end of Henry 2. the French King that would not be warned.

WHoſoever was the Author or Authors of this letter above prefixed, herein thou ſeeſt (good Reader) good Counſel given to the King. If he had had the grace to receive it, and had followed the ſame, no doubt but Gods bleſſing working with him, he had not only ſet that Realm in a bleſſed ſtate from much diſturbance, but alſo had continued himſelf in all flouriſhing felicity of princely honour and dignity. For ſo doth the Lord commonly bleſs and advance ſuch Kings and Princes as ſeek his honour, and ſubmit their wills to his obedience. But commonly the fault of Kings and Potentates of this world is, that being ſet about with Paraſites, either they ſeldom hear the truth told them, or if they do, yet will they not lightly be put from their own wills, diſdaining to be admoniſhed by their inferiours, be their Counſel never ſo wholeſom and godly. Which thing many times turneth them to great plagues and calamities, as by plentiful example of Kings deſtroyed, wounded, impriſoned, depoſed, drowned, poyſoned, &c. may well to them that read Hiſtories appear: but eſpecially this preſent example of Henry the French King, the ſecond of that name, is in this our age notoriouſly to be conſidered. Who being well warned before (as may ſeem) would not yet ſurceaſe his cruel perſecution againſt the Lords people, but rather was the more hardened in heart, and inflamed againſt them; inſomuch that he ſaid to Anne du Bourg, one of the high Court of Parliament in Paris threatning him, that he would ſee him burn with his own eyes.

What cometh to kings that refuſe good counſel.

Further, his purpoſe was to extend his power and force likewiſe againſt other places more, in perſecuting the Goſpel of Chriſt and profeſſors thereof, to the uttermoſt of his ability, I leave it to the report of them, which in this matter know more than I here will utter.

Henry 2. the French King wholly ſet to perſecute the Church of Chriſt.

But notwithſtanding all theſe cracks and threatnings of the King (to ſee what the Lord can do in making high Kings to ſtoop) even the ſame day when the King was in his moſt rage againſt theſe good men, Almighty God, taking the cauſe in hand to fight for his Church, ſo turned the matter, that he made the great enemy of his both with his mouth and with his hands to work his own deſtruction; with his mouth in commanding, with his hand in giving him the Lance into his hand, which the ſame day gave him his deaths wound, as by the ſequele hereof in reading ye may underſtand.

Gods mighty power againſt his enemies.

The Stroke of Gods hands upon Henry the Second the French King.

KIng Henry being in the Parliment Houſe which was kept at the Frier Auguſtines at Paris, becauſe the Palace was in preparing againſt the marriage of his Daughter, and his Siſter, and having heard the opinion in Religion of Anne du Bourg Counſellor in the Law, a man eloquent and learned, he cauſed the ſaid Anne du Bourg, and Loys du Faux, Counſellors, to be taken priſoners by the Conſtable of France, who apprehended them, and delivered them into the hands of the County of Montgommery, the which carried them to Priſon. Againſt whom the King being wrathful and angry, among other talk, ſaid to the ſaid Ann de Bourg; Theſe eyes of mine ſhall ſee thee burnt: And ſo on the 19. of June, Commiſſion was given to Judges to make his Proceſs.

and

During this mean while, great feaſts and banquets were preparing in the Court, for joy and gladneſs of the marriage that ſhould be of the Kings Daughter and Siſter, againſt the laſt day of June ſave one. So when the day and time above prefixed was come, the King employed all the morning in examining as well the Preſidents as Counſellors of the ſaid Parliament againſt theſe Priſoners, and other their companions that were charged with the ſame Doctrine, which being done, they went to dinner.

Henry 2. the French King ſore ſet againſt the Poor Proteſtants.

The King, after he had dined, for that he was one of the defendants at the Tourney, which was ſolemnly made in Saint Antonies-ſtreet, near to the Priſon where the foreſaid Priſoners were commmitted, entred into the Liſts; and therein juſting, as the manner is, had broken many ſtaves right valiantly as could be, running as well againſt the County of Montgommery, as other more.

Whereupon he was highly commended of the lookers on. And becauſe he had done ſo valiantly, and was thought now to have done enough, he was deſired to ceaſe with praiſe: But he being the more inflamed with the hearing of his prayſe, would needs run another courſe with Montgommery: who then refuſing to run againſt the King, and kneeling upon his knees for pardon not to run; the King being eagerly ſet, commanded him upon his allegeance to run, and (as ſome affirm) did alſo himſelf put the ſtaff in his hand, unto whoſe hands he had commmitted the foreſaid Priſoners a little before. Montgommery thus being inforced whether hee would or no to run againſt the King, addreſſed himſelf after the beſt wiſe to obey the Kings commandment.

Henry 2. the French King in his triumph juſteth againſt Montgommery.

Montgomery againſt his will commanded to juſt againſt the King.

Whereupon he and the King met together ſo ſtoutly, that in breaking their ſpears the King was ſtricken with the counter-blow, ſo right in one of his eyes, by reaſon that the viſour of his Helmet ſuddenly fell down at the ſame inſtant, that the ſhivers entred into his head; ſo that the brains were periſhed, and thereupon ſo feſtered, that no remedy could be found, although Phyſitians and Surgeons were ſent from all places in the Realm, as alſo from Brabant by King Philip, but nothing availed, ſo that the 11. day after, that is, 10. of July, 1559. he ended his life in great dolour, having reigned 12. years, three Months, and 10. days.

Henry 2. the French King ſtricken and killed in his own juſting.

The deviliſh perſwaſion of the Cardinal of Lorain at the death of the French King.

Some report, that among other words he ſaid, that hee feared hee was ſtricken for caſting the Poor Chriſtians wrongfully in Priſon: but the Cardinal of Lorain ſtanding by (as he was always at hand) ſaid unto him, that it was the enemy that tempted him, and that he ſhould be ſtedfaſt in the faith. By this means the Hall, which was prepared for a place of joy and gladneſs, did now ſerve for a Chappel to keep the corps, being dreſſed with black mourning cloth, and night and day there was nothing heard but mourning and lamenting for the ſpace of 40. days.

Certain Gentlemen executed at Amboiſe for ſtanding againſt the houſe of Guiſe.

About two years after this, which was the year of our Lord, 1561. there were certain Gentlemen put to death at Amboiſe, for taking Arms againſt the houſe of Guiſe. Touching which Gentlemen this is to be noted, that as one of them ſhould be brought to the place of execution, where the other lay dead before him, he thruſt his hands into the Blood of two of his campanions which were there beheaded, and the lifting up to Heaven, cried with a loud voice; Lord behold the Blood of thy Children: thou wilt in time and place revenge it.

The Lords puniſhment upon the Chancellor Oliver for his ſentence given againſt certain Gentlemen, Proteſtants.

Not long after the ſame, the Chancellor Oliver, who was condemner of them, at the inſtigation and purſuit of the Cardinal of Lorain, through great remorſe of Conſcience fell ſick, and in a frenſie caſting out ſighs unceſſantly, and afflicting himſelf after a fearful and ſtrange faſhion for his unrighteous ſentence, and more than barbarous cruelty, ſhrieked upon a ſudden with an horrible cry, and ſaid; O Cardinal, thou wilt make us all to be damned. And within a very few days after he died.

The Death of Francis 2.

Francis the ſecond of that name, King of France, at the perſwaſion of the Cardinal of Lorain, and of certain others, cauſed an aſſembly of the Eſtates of the Realm in the Town of Orleans, among other things to maintain the Papal See, to the overthrow of thoſe which would live after the ſincerity of the Goſpel: but being fallen ſick, ſhortly after, in the foreſaid place, of a fever, through an impoſtume in his left ear hee died the fourth of December, 1561. having reigned but one year, and about five Months,

Anno 1558.

French King after he began to withſtand the courſe of the Goſpel.

How the Lord worketh for his Goſpel.

It was ſaid of this King Francis (as the author above mentioned reporteth) that when hee was drawing toward his end, the Cardinal of Lorain made him to ſay and pronounce theſe words which follow; Lord forgive me my treſpaſſes, and impute not unto me the faults which my Miniſters have done under my name and authority.

The words of King Francis at his death.

The terrible ſtroke of Gods revenge upon Carol. 9. the French King.

Nither is it unworthy of obſervation, that after the father it happened in much like ſort by Gods mighty judgment unto Carol. 9. his ſecond Son, and Brother to Francis above mentioned, in theſe our later days; who after the horrible and Bloody Murder of the Admiral, and other true profeſſors of Chriſts Goſpel, both Men, Women, and Children, to the number of many thouſands of divers Cities, inſomuch that the Priſons and ſtreets are ſaid to be coloured with Blood, ſmoaking after ſuch a cruel ſort, as in our time or Country the like hath not hitherto been ſeen; by the ſtroke of Gods juſt revenge, the ſame King, by credible report of ſtory, is ſaid to dye of bleeding, not only at his ears and noſe, but in all other places of his Body, where Blood might have any iſſue.

The death of Charles the Emperor.

Unto theſe afore recited Hiſtories of King Henry and his two Sons, might alſo be added the death of the Emperor Charles the fifth. Who in like manner being an enemy, and a great terrour to the Goſpel, was cut off likewiſe for doing any more hurt to the Church, much about the ſame time, Anno 1558. which was but three Months before the death of Queen Mary, and ten Months before the death of the ſaid Henry the ſecond. Touching the death of which Charles and Henry, and Francis, this Epitaph following was written in Latin Verſes, and printed in the French Story, Book above alledged.

An Epitaph upon Charles Emperor, Henry 2 French King and Francis his Son.

The ſudden death of Preſident Minard.

Not long after Anne du Bourg's death, the Preſident Minard, who was a ſore perſecutor, and the condemner of the ſaid Anne du Bourg, as he returned from the Palace or Councel Chamber to his own houſe, being upon his Mule, even hard by his houſe, was ſlain with a dagg; but who was the doer thereof, or for what cauſe he was ſlain, for all the inquiſition and diligent ſearch that could be made, it was never known.

The puniſhment of God upon the K. of Navar, after he had revolted from the Goſpel to Popery.

Among many other examples worthy to bee noted let us alſo conſider the end of the King of Navar, Brother to the worthy Prince of Condy, who after hee had ſuſtained a certain time the cauſe of the Goſpel, at length being allured by the flattering word of the Duke of Guiſe, and the Cardinal of Lorain his Brother, and upon hope to have his lands reſtored again, which the King of Spain retained from him, was contented to alter his Religion, and to joyn ſide with the Papiſts, and ſo being in camp with the Duke of Guiſe, at the ſieg of Roan, was there ſhot in with a pellet. After which wound received, being brought to a Town three miles from the camp, called Preaux, he did vehemently repent and lament his backſliding from the Goſpel, promiſing to God moſt earneſtly, that if he might eſcape that hurt, hee would bring to paſs that the Goſpel ſhould be preached freely

Anno 1558. freely through all France: Notwithstanding, within five or six days after he died.

Neither did the Duke of Guise himself, the great Arch-enemy of God and his Gospel, continue in life long after that, but both he and the whole Triumvirat of France, that is, three the greatest Captains of Popery were cut off for doing any more hurt, to wit, the Duke of Guise before Orleance, the Constable before Paris, the Marshal of St. Andrew before Dreux.

Of the Emperor Sigismundus.

AMongst others, here is not to be past over nor forgotten the notable example of Gods just scourge upon Sigismundus the Emperor, of whom mention is made before, in the Condemnation of John Huss, and Hierome of Prague. After the death and wrongful Condemnation of which blessed Martyrs, nothing afterward went prosperously with the said Emperor, but all contrary; so that he both died without issue, and in his Wars he ever went to the worst. And not long after, Ladislaus his Daughters Son King of Hungary, fighting against the Turk, was slain in the field. So that in the time of one Generation all the posterity and offspring of this Emperor perished. Besides this, Barbara his Wife came to such ruine by her wicked lewdness, that she became a shame and slander to the name and state of all Queens. Whereby all Christian Princes and Emperors may sufficiently be admonished, if they have grace, what it is to defile themselves with the Blood of Christs blessed Saints and Martyrs.

A note of Christopher Parker.

Christopher Parker, called Parker the wild, mentioned before in this Book of Monuments, who being a Persecutor of Richard Woodman, did manacle his hands with a cord, did cast himself into a Pond, and so drowned himself at Herstmonceux, in Sussex, the 8. September, 1575.

The Story of one Drainer of Kent, commonly called Justice Nine-holes.

The Story of one Drainer, otherwise called Justice Nine-holes.

I May not in this place omit the tragedy of one Drainer of Smarden in the County of Kent, Esquire, who bearing grudge against one Gregory Dods, Parson of the said Town, for reproving his vicious life, sent for him by two men, which took him and brought him before him, where he was had into a Parlour, as it were to break-fast. In which behind the Door he had placed one Roger Matthew secretly, to bear witness what he should say, no more being in sight but the said Drainer and one of his men, who willed and perswaded him to speak freely his mind, for that there was not sufficient record of his words to hurt him. But the Lord kept his talk without Peril, whereby the said Drainer sent him to the next Justice called Mr. George Dorel; who, perceiving it to be done more of malice than otherwise, delivered him upon Sureties, to appear at the next Sessions at Canterbury, and at length he was banished the Country.

A malicious Practice to intrap a good man.

This said Drainer afterward, being chosen Justice, to shew himself diligent in seeking the trouble of his Neighbours, made in the Roodloft-nine holes, that he might look about the Church in Mass time. In which place alway at the sacring thereof, he would stand to see who looked not, or held not up his hands thereto; which persons not so doing he would trouble and punish very sore. Whereby he purchased a name there, and is called to this day Justice Nine-holes, who now (God be thanked) is John out of Office, and glad of his Neighbours good will.

It so fell out, that since this was published, the said Drainer came to the Printers house, with other associates, demanding: Is Fox here? To whom answer was given, that Master Fox was not within. Is the Printer within (quoth Drainer?) It was answered, Yea. Whereupon being required to come up into his house, he was asked what his will was. Marry saith he, you have printed me false in your Book. Why, saith the Printer, is not your name Master Drainer, otherwise called Justice Nine-holes? It is false saith he, I made but five with a great Augur and the Parson made the rest. It was answered, I have not read that a Justice should make him a place in the Rood-Loft, to see if the People held up their hands. He said, Whereas you alledged, that I did it to see who adored the Sacrament, or who not, it is untrue; for I set as little by it, as the best of you all. Indeed saith the Printer, so we understand now; for you being at Supper in Cheapside among certain honest Company, and there burdened with the matter, said then, that you did it rather to look upon fair wenches than otherwise. He being in a great rage, sware, saying to this purpose; Can a man speak nothing but you must have understanding thereof? But, saith he, did I do any man any hurt? It was answered, that he meant little good to Master Dods aforesaid, especially procuring a secret witness behind his door, to catch some words that might tend to Dods destruction. Which thing Drainer sware, as before, was not true. To whom the Printer replied, that it was most true, for that the party there secretly hidden, hath since upon his knees, asking forgiveness for his intent, confessed the same to Dods himself. I will hang that Knave, saith he: And so he departed in a rage; and since is deceased, whose death and order thereof, I refer to the secret Judge.

A lamentable history of John Whitman Shoomaker, who suffered most cruel Torments at Ostend in Flanders, for the Testimony of Jesus Christ, and the Truth of his Gospel, Anno 1572.

A lamentable history of J. Whitman, Shoomaker.

John Whitman Shoomaker, being about the age of 49 years, born in Tinen a Town in Brabant, after his coming over into England, dwelt in Rie in the County of Sussex, being married 23. years: alwaies a professor of the Gospel, as well in the time of the freedom thereof, as in time of Persecution. About Candlemas in the year 1572. unknown to his Friends in Rie, understanding of shipping in Rie, which was ready bound for Ostend in Flanders, he went aboard the Saturday morning, and arrived at Ostend that night, where he lodged with one of his Kinsmen there dwelling. The next day being Sunday, in the morning he accompanied with his said Kinsman, took his Journy, as it were to have passed higher into the Country.

When they were about three Miles on their way out of the Town, suddenly Whitman staied and would go no further; but immediatly returned back again to Ostend, whither so soon as he was come, it being Service time in their Church, he forthwith addressed himself thither, and at the time of the heave-offering stept to the Sacrificer, and took from over his head his Idol, saying these words in the Dutch Tongue? Is this your God? and so breaking it, cast it down under his feet, and trode thereon. Forthwith the People in an uproar came to lay hold on him, atd hardly in the Church escaped he death by the Souldiers there present, but being rescued by some, to the intent to be further examined and made a publick Spectacle, he was carried immediately to Prison. Upon the next day, being Monday, the Judges and other Counsellors being assembled, he was brought forth into the common Hall, and examined of his fact, the intent, the Counsel and abbettors thereof, and also of his Faith: where he very constantly in defence of his Christian Faith, and great detestation of Idolatry, demeaned himself in such sort, that he wrung Tears from the eyes of divers, both of the chief, and others present. So was he committed again to Prison. The next day being Tuesday, he was brought out again before the Judges into the same place, And being examined as before, he no whit abated, but increased in his constancy. Whereupon Sentence was given upon him to have his hand cut off, and his Body scorched to death, and after to be hanged up. So the day following, being Wednesday, he was brought out of Prison to the Town-Hall, standing in the Market place, all things belonging to execution being made ready there. Which when they were all ready, the Hangman went into the Hall, and with a Cord tied the hands of Whitman, and came out leading him thereby. So soon as Whitman was out of the house, he made such haste, and as it were, ran so ſo to the place of Execution, that he drew the Hangman after him. There was a Poſt ſet up with Spars from the top thereof, a ſlope, down to the ground, in manner of a Tent, to the end that he ſhould be only ſcorched to death, and not burned. When he was come to the place, the Hangman commanded him to lay down his Right hand upon a Block, which he immediately with a Hatchet ſmote off: the good man ſtill continuing conſtant, the Hangman ſtept behind him, and bid him put out his Tongue, which he forthwith did, as far as he could out of his mouth, through the which he thruſt a long Inſtrument like a Pack-needle, and ſo let it ſtick. Then the Judges, ſtanding by in the Common-Hall, read again his Fact and Sentence. Whereunto he could make no anſwer, his Tongue hanging out of his head: ſo was he ſtripped out of his Caſſock, his Hoſe being put off in Priſon, and put within his Tent, and made faſt with two Chains, and fire was put round about, which broiled and ſcorched his Body moſt miſerably, all black, he not being ſeen, but heard to make a noiſe within the Tent. When he was dead, he was carried out to be hanged upon a Gibbet beſide the Town.

Admonition to the Reader concerning the Examples above mentioned.

IT hath been a long perſwaſion gendred in the heads of many men theſe many years, that to ground a mans Faith upon Gods Word alone, and not upon the See and Church of Rome, following all the Ordinances and Conſtitutions of the ſame was damnable Hereſie, and to perſecute ſuch Men to death was high ſervice done to God, Whereupon have riſen ſo great Perſecutions, Slaughters and Murders, with ſuch effuſion of Chriſtian Blood through all parts of Chriſtendom by the ſpace of theſe 70 years, as hath not before been ſeen. And of theſe Men Chriſt himſelf doth full well warn us long before, truly propheſying of ſuch times to come, when they that ſlay his Miniſters and Servants ſhould think themſelves to do good ſervice unto God, John 16. Now what wicked ſervice, and how deteſtable before God this is, which they falſly perſwade themſelves to be godly, what more evident demonſtrations can we require, than theſe ſo many, ſo manifeſt, and ſo terrible Examples of Gods wrath pouring down from Heaven upon theſe Perſecutors, whereof part we have already ſet forth; for to comprehend all (which in number are infinite) it is unpoſſible, Wherefore, although there be many which will neither hear, ſee, nor underſtand, what is for their profit, yet let all moderate and well diſpoſed Natures take warning in time. And if the plain Word of God will not ſuffice them, nor the Blood of ſo many Martyrs will move them to imbrace the Truth, and forſake Error, yet let the deſperate deaths and horrible puniſhments of their own Papiſts perſwade them, how perillous is the end of this damnable Doctrine of Papiſtry. For if theſe Papiſts, which make ſo much of their painted Antiquity, do think their proceedings to be ſo Catholick, and Service ſo acceptable to God, let them joyn this withal, and tell us how come then their proceedings to be ſo accurſed of God, and their end ſo miſerably plagued, as by theſe Examples above ſpecified, is here notoriouſly to be ſeen? Again, if the Doctrine of them be ſuch Hereſie, whom they have hitherto perſecuted for Hereticks unto death; how then is Almighty God become a maintainer of Hereticks, who hath revenged their Blood ſo grievouſly upon their Enemies and Perſecutors?

Three Arguments againſt the Papiſts. Gods Word. Blood of Martyrs. Gods puniſhment. The plagues of God ſet againſt pretenced Antiquity.

The putting out of the French Kings eyes, which promiſed before with his eyes to ſee one of Gods true Servants burned, who ſeeth not with his eyes to be the ſtroke of Gods hand upon him? Then his Son Francis after him, not regarding his Fathers ſtripe, would yet needs proceed in burning the ſame Man: and did not the ſame God, which put out his Fathers eyes, give him ſuch a blow on the Ear, that it coſt him his life? If the Platform of Stephen Gardiner had been a thing ſo neceſſary for the Church, and ſo grateful unto God, why then did it not proſper with him, nor he with it, but both he and his Plat-form lay in the duſt, and none left behind him to build upon it? After the time of Stephen Gardiner, and at the Council of Trent, what Conſpiracies and Policies were deviſed? what Practices and Trains were laid through the ſecret confederacy of Princes and Prelates, for the utter ſubverſion of the Goſpel and all Goſpellers, which if God had ſeen to have been for his glory, why then came they to none effect? yea, how or by whom were they diſcloſed and foreprized, but by the Lord himſelf, which would not have them come forward?

The vehement Zeal of Queen Mary was like to have ſet up the Pope here again in England for ever, if it had ſo much pleaſed the Lord God as it pleaſed her ſelf; or if it had been ſo godly as it was bloody, no doubt but Gods bleſſing would have gone withal. But when was the Realm of England more barren of all Gods Bleſſings? what Prince ever reigned here more ſhorter time, or leſs to his own hearts eaſe than did Queen Mary?

Queen Mary.

The Conſtable of France, when he covenanted with God, that if he had the victory of St. Quintins, he would ſet upon Geneva, thought (no doubt) that he had made a great good bargain with God; much like unto Julian the Emperor, who going againſt the Perſians, made his Vow, that if he ſped well, he would offer the Blood of Chriſtians. But what did God? came not both their Vows to like effect?

Conſtable of France.

The Examples of ſuch as revolted from the Goſpel to Papiſtry be not many; but as few as they were, ſcarce can any be found which began to turn to the Pope, but the Lord began to turn from them, and to leave them to their ghoſtly enemy; as we have heard of the King of Navar in France, of Henry Smith, and Dr. Shaxton in England, with other in other Countries more, of whom ſome died in great ſorrow of Conſcience, ſome in miſerable doubt of their ſalvation, ſome ſtricken by Gods hand, ſome given to hang or drown themſelves.

To add to theſe alſo the ſtinking death of Edmund Boner, commonly named the bloody Biſhop of London; who not many years ago, in the time and reign of Queen Elizabeth, after he had long feaſted and banquetted in durance at the Marſhalſea, as he wretchedly died in his blind Popery, ſo as ſtinkingly and as blindly at Midnight was he brought out and buried in the outſide of all the City, amongſt Thieves and Murderers, a place right convenient for ſuch a murderer; with confuſion and deriſion both of Men and Children, who, trampling upon his Grave, well declared how he was hated both of God and Man. What elſe be all theſe (I ſay) but plain viſible Arguments, Teſtimonies and Demonſtrations even from Heaven againſt the Pope, his murdering Religion, and his bloody Doctrine? For who can deny their doings not to be good, whoſe end is ſo evil? If Chriſt bid us to know men by their fruits, and eſpecially ſeeing by the end all things are to be tried, how can the profeſſion of that Doctrine pleaſe God, which endeth ſo ungodly? Eſaias, Chap. 50. propheſying of the end of Gods Enemies, which would needs walk in the light of their own ſetting up, and not in the light of the Lords kindling, threatneth to them this final malediction, in doloribus (ſaith he) dormietis, i. In ſorrow ſhall ye ſleep. Let us now take a ſurvey of all thoſe Perſecutors, which of late have ſo troubled the Earth, (and almoſt have burned up the World with Fagots and Fire, for maintenance of the Popes Religion) and ſee what the end hath been of them that are now gone, and whither their Religion hath brought them, but either to deſtruction, or deſparation, or confuſion and ſhame of Life. So many great Doctors and Biſhops have cried out of late ſo mightily againſt Prieſts marriage; and have they not, by Gods juſt judgment working their confuſion, been detected themſelves, and taken the moſt part of them in ſinful Adultery, and ſhameful Fornication? Cardinal Joannes Cremenſis the Popes Legate here in England, after he had ſet a Law that Prieſts ſhould have no Wives, was he not the next day after, being taken with his Whores, driven out of London with confuſion and ſhame enough, ſo that afterwards he durſt not ſhew his face here any more? Beſides the two Biſhops in the late Councel of Trent moſt ſhamefully taken in Adultery, mentioned before. Alſo beſides innumerable other like forreign ſtories, which I let paſs, to come now to our own domeſtical examples, I could well name half a ſcore at leaſt of famous Doctors, and ſome Biſhops, with their great Maſters of Popery, who, in ſtanding earneſtly againſt the marriages of Prieſts, have afterward been taken in ſuch diſhoneſt facts themſelves, that not only they have carried the publick ſhame of adulterous Letcherers, but ſome of them the marks alſo of burning Fornication with them in their Bodies to their Graves. Whoſe Names although I ſuffer here to be ſuppreſſed, yet the examples of them may ſuffice to admoniſh all men that be wiſe, and which will avoid the wrath of Gods terrible vengeance, to beware of Popery.

A ſecret note of Papiſts which have been great criers out of Prieſts marriage, and themſelves after taken in open Adultery.

And thus having hitherto recited ſo many ſhameful lives and deſperate ends of ſo many Popiſh Perſecutors ſtricken by Gods hand; now let us conſider again on the contrary ſide the bleſſed ends given of Almighty God unto them, which have ſtood ſo manfully in the defence of Chriſts Goſpel, and the reformation of his Religion, and let the Papiſts themſelves here be Judges. Firſt, what a peaceable and heavenly end made the worthy Servant and ſingular Organ of God, Martin Luther?

Compariſon between the end of Popiſh Perſecutors and the Goſpellers.

To ſpeak likewiſe of the famous John Duke of Saxony and Prince Elector, of the good Palſgrave, of Philip Melanction, of Pomeranus, Urbanus, Rhegius, Berengarius, of Ulricus Swinglius, Oecolampodius, Pillicanus, Capito, Munſtreus, Joannes Calvinus, Petrus Martyr, Martin Bucer, Paulus Phagius, Johannes Muſculus, Biblander, Geſnerus, Hoſman, Auguſtinus Marloratus, Lewes of Bourbon Prince of Condie, and his godly Wife before him, with many more, which were known to be learned men, and chief ſtanderds of the Goſpel ſide againſt the Pope, and yet no man able to bring forth any one example either of theſe, or of any other true Goſpeller, that either killed himſelf, or ſhewed forth any ſignification or appearance of deſpair, but full of hope and conſtant in Faith, and repleniſhed with the fruit of Righteouſneſs in Chriſt Jeſus, ſo yielded they their lives in quiet peace unto the Lord.

The godly end of the Goſpellers to be noted.

From theſe Forreigners, let us come now to the Martyrs of England, and mark likewiſe the end both of them, and ſemblably of all others of the ſame Profeſſion. And firſt to begin with the bleſſed and heavenly departure of King Edward the ſixth, that firſt put down the Maſs in England, and alſo of the like godly end of his good Uncle the Duke of Somerſet, which died before him, with an infinite number of other private perſons beſides of the like Religion, in whoſe final departing no ſuch blemiſh is to be noted, like to the deſperate Examples of them above recited. Let us now enter the conſideration of the bleſſed Martyrs, who although they ſuffered in their Bodies, yet rejoyced they in their Spirits, and albeit they were perſecuted of men, yet were they comforted of the Lord with ſuch inward joy and peace of Conſcience, that ſome writing to their Friends, profeſſed they were never ſo merry before in all their lives, ſome leapt for joy, ſome for triumph would put on their Scarfs, ſome their wedding Garment, going to the fire, others kiſſed the Stake, ſome embraced the Fagots, ſome clapt their hands, ſome ſung Pſalms, univerſally they all forgave, and prayed for their Enemies, no murmering, no repining was ever heard amongſt them: ſo that moſt truly might be verified in them, which their Perſecutors were wont to ſing in their Hymns.

The bleſſed end of King Edward 6. The patient end of the Duke of Somerſet the Kings Uncle.

The quiet and joyful end of the Martyrs.

Cæduntur gladiis more bibentium,
Non murmur reſonat, nec querimonia:
Sed corde tacito mens bene conſcia
Conſervat patientiam, &c.

Briefly, ſo great was their patience, or rather ſo great was Gods Spirit in them, that ſome of them in the flaming fire moved no more than the Stake whereunto they were tied. In fine, in them moſt aptly agreed the ſpecial tokens which moſt certainly follow the true Children of God, that is, outward Perſecution, and inward comfort in the Holy Ghoſt. In the world (ſaith Chriſt our Saviour) ye ſhall have Affliction, but in me ye ſhall have Peace, &c.

Two ſpecial notes of the true Church of Chriſt. Outward Affliction. Peace of Conſcience.

And likewiſe the words of S. Paul be plain; Whoſoever (ſaith he) ſtudieth to live godly in Chriſt, ſhall ſuffer perſecution. 2 Tim. 3. 1 Cor. 1.

But then what followeth with this Perſecution? the ſaid Apoſtle again thus declareth, ſaying, As the Paſſions of Chriſt abound in us, ſo aboundeth alſo our Conſolation by Chriſt, &c. according as by the examples of theſe godly Martyrs right perfectly we may perceive. For as their bodies outwardly lacked no Perſecutions by the hands of the wicked: ſo amongſt ſo many hundreds of them that ſtood and died in this Religion, what one man can be brought forth, which either have been found to have killed himſelf, or to have died otherwiſe than the true Servant of God, in quiet peace, and much comfort of Conſcience?

Which being ſo, what greater proof can we have to juſtifie their Cauſe and Doctrine againſt the perſecuting Church of Rome, then to behold the ends of them both? Firſt, of the Proteſtants, how quietly they took their death, and chearfully reſted in the Lord, and contrariwiſe to mark theſe Perſecutors, what a wretched end commonly they do all come unto.

The wretched end of Papiſts giveth teſtimony againſt their own Doctrine.

Experience whereof we have ſufficient in the examples above declared, and alſo of late in Boner, who albeit he died in his Bed unrepentant, yet was it provided by God, that as he had been a Perſecutor of the Light, and a Child of Darkneſs, ſo his Carkaſs was tumbled into the Earth in obſcure darkneſs, at midnight, contrary to the order of all other Chriſtians; and as he had been a Murderer, ſo was he laid amongſt Thieves and Murderers, a place by Gods judgment rightly appointed for him.

The end and death of Edmund Boner.

And albeit ſome peradventure, that have been notable Perſecutors in times paſt, do yet remain alive, who, being in the ſame Cauſe as the other were, have not yet felt the weight of Gods mighty hand, yet let not them think, that becauſe the judgment of God hath lighted ſooner upon other, therefore it will never light upon them; or becauſe God of his mercy hath granted them ſpace to repent, let not them therefore of Gods lenity build to themſelves an opinion of indempnity. The blood of Abel cried long, yet wrought at length. The ſouls of the Saints ſlain under the Altar, were not revenged at the firſt, Apoc. 6. but read forth the Chapter, and ſee what followed in the end. Blood, eſpecially of Chriſts Servants, is a perilous matter, and crieth ſore in the ears of God, and will not be ſtilled with the Laws of men.

Admonition to Perſecutors which yet remain alive.

Wherefore let ſuch Blood-guilty Homicides beware, if not by counſel, at leaſt by the examples of their Fellows. And though Princes and Magiſtrates, under whoſe permiſſion they are ſuffered, do ſpare their lives, let them not think therefore (as ſome of them ſhame not to ſay) that man hath no power to hurt them, and ſo think to eſcape unpuniſhed, becauſe they be not puniſhed by man, but rather let them fear ſo much the more. For oftentimes ſuch as have been Perſecutors and Tormentors to Gods Children, God thinketh them not worthy to ſuffer by man, but either reſerveth them to his own judgment, or elſe maketh them to be their own Perſecutors, and their own hands moſt commonly Hangmen to their own Bodies.

God maketh the Perſecutors of his people commonly to be their own Perſecutors.

So Saul, after he had perſecuted David, it was unneedful for David to purſue him again: for he was revenged of him, more than he deſired. It was needleſs to cauſe Achitophel to be hanged; for he himſelf was the ſtifler or ſtrangler of his own life.

Saul murdered of himſelf. Achitophel murderer of himſelf.

Neither for the Apoſtles to purſue Judas that betrayed their Maſter; for he himſelf was his own Hangman, Judas murderer of himſelf.

and no man elſe, that his Body burſt, and his Guts braſt out.

Senacherib murdered of his own Sons.

Senacherib, had he not for his Perſecutors his own Sons, and it coſt Ezechias nothing to be revenged of him for his Tyranny?

Herod and Antiochus murdered by lice.

Antiochus and Herod, although the Children of God, whom they ſo cruelly perſecuted, laid no hand upon them, yet they eſcaped not unpuniſhed of Gods hand, who ſent Lice and Worms to be their Tormentors, which conſumed and eat them up.

Pilate murderer of himſelf.

Pilate, after he had crucified Chriſt our Saviour, within few years after was he not driven to hang himſelf?

Nero murderer of himſelf.

Nero, after his cruel Murders and Perſecutions ſtirred up againſt the Chriſtians, when he ſhould have been taken by the Romans, God thought him not ſo worthy to be puniſhed by the hands of them, but ſo diſpoſed the matter, that Nero himſelf, when he could find no Friend nor Enemy to kill him, made his own hands to be his own Cut-throat.

Diocleſianus and Maximinian Emperors depoſed themſelves.

Diocleſianus, with Maximinian his Fellow Emperor, which were the Authors of the Tenth and laſt Perſecution againſt the Chriſtians, being in the midſt of their furious tyranny againſt the Name of Chriſt, needed no mans help to bridle them and pluck them back: for God of his ſecret Judgment put ſuch a Snaffle in the Mouths of theſe Tyrants, that they themſelves of their own accord depoſed and diſpoſſeſſed themſelves of their Imperial Function, and lived as private perſons all their lives after: And notwithſtanding that Maximinian, after that, ſought to reſume his Imperial State again, yet by Maxentius his Son he was reſiſted, and ſhortly after ſlain.

Maximinus eaten up with Lice.

What ſhould I here ſpeak of the cruel Emperor Maximinus? who when he had ſet forth his Proclamation engraven in Braſs, for the utter aboliſhing of Chriſt and his Religion, was not puniſhed by man, but had Lice and Vermin guſhing out of his Intrails, to be his Tormentors, with ſuch a rotten ſtinch laid upon his Body, that no Phyſicians could abide to come near, and was cauſed to be ſlain for the ſame.

Maxentius and K. Pharaoh, both drowned in their own Harneſs.

Maxentius the Son of Maximinian, and Pharaoh the King of Egypt, as they were both like Enemies againſt God and his People, ſo drank they both of one Cup, not periſhing by any mans hand, but both in like manner, after, were drowned with their Harneſs in the Water.

Achaz, Achab, Jezabel, Manaſſes, Joachim, Zedechias, puniſhed of God for their perſecutions.

Furthermore and briefly in this matter to conclude, if the Kings among the Jews, which were bloody and wicked, were not ſpared, as Achaz, Achab, Jezabel, Manaſſes, Joachim, Zedechias, with many other, but had at length, although it were long, the hire of their iniquity: let not theſe bloody Catholicks then think, which have been Perſecutors of Chriſts Saints, that they being in the ſame cauſe as the other above recited were, ſhall eſcape the ſame Judgment, which the longer it is deferred, the ſorer many times it ſtriketh, unleſs by due repentance it be prevented in time; which I pray God it may.

The murdering Mother Church, with her bloody Children admoniſhed.

Innumerable Examples more to the ſame effect and purpoſe might be inferred, whereof plentiful ſtore we have in all places, and in all Ages of men to be collected. But theſe hitherto for this preſent may ſuffice, which I thought here to notifie unto theſe our bloody Children of the murdring Mother Church of Rome, of whom it may well be ſaid, Manus veſtræ plenæ ſunt ſanguine, &c. Your hands be full of Blood, &c. Eſay, Chap. 1. to the intent that they, by the examples of their other Fellows before mentioned, may be admoniſhed to follow the Prophets counſel, which followeth and biddeth, Lavamini, mundi eſtote, &c. Be you waſhed, and make your ſelves clean, &c. Eſay 1. and not to preſume too far upon their own Security, nor think themſelves the further off from Gods hand, becauſe mans hand forbeareth them.

What the Laws of this Realm could ſay againſt the Perſecutors in Q. Maries time.

I know and grant, that man hath no further power upon any, than God from above doth give. And what the Laws of this Realm could make againſt them, as againſt open Murderers, I will not here diſcuſs, nor open that I could ſay (becauſe they ſhall not ſay that we deſire their blood to be ſpilled, but rather to be ſpared) but yet this I ſay, and wiſh them well to underſtand, that the ſparing of their Lives, which have been murtherers of ſo many, is not for want of power in Magiſtrates nor lack of any juſt Law againſt them, whereby they might juſtly have been condemned, if it had ſo pleaſed the Magiſtrates to proceed (as they might) againſt them; but becauſe Almighty God peradventure in his ſecret purpoſe, having ſomething to do with theſe Perſecutors, hath ſpared them hitherto, not that they ſhould eſcape unpuniſhed, but that peradventure he will take his own cauſe into his own hand, either by death to take them away (as he did by Boner, and by all Promooters in a manner of Queen Maries time) or elſe to make them to perſecute themſelves with their own hands, or will ſtir up their Conſcience to be their own confuſion, in ſuch ſort as the Church ſhall have no need to lay hands upon them.

Anno 1558.

The nature of the Church is not to perſecute with blood.

Wherefore with this ſhort Admonition to cloſe up the matter, as I have exhibited in theſe Hiſtories the terrible ends of ſo many Perſecutors plagued by Gods hand: ſo would I wiſh all ſuch whom Gods lenity ſuffereth yet to live, this wiſely to ponder with themſelves, that as their cruel Perſecution hurteth not the Saints of God, whom they have put to death, ſo the patience of Chriſts Church, ſuffering them to live, doth not profit them, but rather heapeth the greater Judgment of God upon them in the day of wrath, unleſs they repent in time; which I pray God they may.

In that the Perſecutors of the Church be ſuffered of the Church to live, it is to their confuſion.

And now to re-enter again to the time and ſtory of Q. Elizabeth where we left before.

In whoſe advancement and this her Princely governance, it cannot ſufficiently be expreſſed, what felicity and bleſſed happineſs this Realm hath received in receiving her at the Lords almighty and gracious hand. For as there have been divers Kings and Rulers over this Realm, and I have read of ſome, yet I could never find in Engliſh Chronicle the like that may be written of this our noble and worthy Queen: whoſe coming in was not only ſo calm, ſo joyful, and ſo peaceable, without ſhedding any blood, but alſo her Reign hitherto (reigning now 24. years and more) hath been ſo quiet, that yet (the Lord have all the glory) to this preſent day, her Sword is a Virgin, ſpotted and polluted with no drop of blood. In ſpeaking whereof, I take not upon me the part here of the Moral or of the Divine Philoſopher, to judge of things done, but only keep me within the compaſs of an Hiſtoriographer, declaring what hath been before, and comparing things done with things now preſent, the like whereof, as I ſaid, is not to be found lightly in Chronicles before. And this as I ſpeak truly, ſo I would to be taken without flattery, to be left to our Poſterity, ad ſempiternam clementiæ illius memoriam. In commendation of which her Clemency, I might alſo here add how mildly her Grace, after ſhe was advanced to her Kingdom, did forgive the foreſaid Sir Henry Benifield without moleſtation, ſuffering him to enjoy Goods, Life, Lands and Liberty. But I let this paſs.

Sir H. Benifield forgiven.

Thus haſt thou, gentle Reader, ſimply, but truly deſcribed unto thee the time, firſt of the ſorrowful adverſity of this our moſt Soveraign Queen that now is, alſo the miraculous protection of God, ſo graciouſly preſerving her in ſo many ſtraits and diſtreſſes, which I thought here briefly to notifie, the rather for that the wondrous works of the Lord ought not to be ſuppreſſed, and that alſo her Majeſty, and we likewiſe her poor Subjects, having thereby a preſent matter always before our eyes, be admoniſhed both how much we are bound to his Divine Majeſty, and alſo to render thanks to him condignly for the ſame.

Novemb. 18.

Now remaineth likewiſe in proſecuting the order of this, as of other Hiſtories before, to notifie and diſcourſe of things memorable eſpecially in the Church, ſuch as happened in the time of this her Majeſties quiet and joyful Government. And firſt here I let paſs by the way the death of Cardinal Poole, which was the next day after the death of Queen Mary, the death alſo of Chriſtopherſon Biſhop of Chicheſter, Hopton Biſhop of Norwich, omitting alſo to ſpeak of Doctor Weſton, who being chief Diſputer againſt Cranmer, Ridley, and Latimer, as is before declared, firſt fell in diſpleaſure with the Cardinal and other Biſhops, becauſe he was unwilling to part from his Deanry and Houſe of Weſtminſter unto the Monks, whom indeed he favoured not, although in other things a maintainer of the Church of Rome. Then being removed from thence, he was made

Dr. Weſton.

Dean

Anno 1558. Dean of Windſor, where he, being apprehended in Advowtry, was by the ſame Cardinal put from all his Spiritual Livings. Wherefore he appealed to Rome, and flying out of the Realm, was taken by the way, and clapt in the Tower of London, where he remained until this time that Queen Elizabeth was proclaimed. At which time being delivered, he fell ſick and died.

Alſo I let paſs the Coronation of this our moſt noble and Chriſtian Princeſs, and the order of the ſame, which was the fifteenth day of January, Anno 1559. To paſs over alſo the triumphant Paſſage and honourable Entertainment of the ſaid our moſt dread Soveraign, thorow the City of London, with ſuch Celebrity, Prayers, Wiſhes, Welcomings, Cries, tender Words, Pageants, Enterludes, Declamations and Verſes ſet up, as the like hath not commonly been ſeen, arguing and declaring a wonderful earneſt affection of loving hearts toward their Soveraign. Item, To pretermit in ſilence the Letters gratulatory, ſent to her Majeſty from divers and ſundry forreign places, as from Zurick, Geneva, Baſil, Berne, Wittemberge, Argentine, Frankford, &c. Theſe, I ſay, with many other things to let paſs, we will now (God willing) begin with the Diſception or Conference between the Popiſh Biſhops, and the learned men exiled in Germany, had at Weſtminſter; after that firſt we have inſerted a certain Oration of a worthy Gentleman, called Mr. John Hales, ſent and delivered to the ſaid Queen Elizabeth in the beginning of her Reign, the Copy whereof is this.

An Oration of John Hales to the Queens Majeſty, and delivered to her Majeſty by a certain Noble man, at her firſt Entrance to her Reign.

To the Noble Queen Elizabeth.

Riches and treaſures do nothing profit, where the uſe of them cannot be enjoyed.

ALbeit there be innumerable gifts and benefits of Almighty God, whereof every one would wonderfully comfort any perſon, on whom it ſhould pleaſe his goodneſs to beſtow it: yet is none of them either ſeparate by it ſelf, or joyned with any other, or yet all mingled together, to be companied to this one; that it hath pleaſed God of his mercy to deliver this Realm, our Country, from the tyranny of malicious Mary, and to commit it to the government of vertuous Elizabeth. For if a man had all the Treaſure of Solomon, and might not be ſuffered to have the uſe thereof, in what better caſe were he than miſerable Tantalus, over whoſe head the Apples continually hung, yet being hunger-ſtarved, he could never touch them? If a man had as ſtrong a Body as had Sampſon, and beſides, were as whole as a fiſh, as the Proverb is, yet if he were kept in Bands, what ſhould it avail him? Yea, rather if it be well conſidered, it is a hurt to him, if continuance of torment and pains may be a hurt.

If a man had as many Children as had Gideon the Judge, and might not be ſo ſuffered to bring them up in the fear of God, and good knowledge and manners, had he not been more happy to be without them, than to have them? If a man had as much knowledge of God as had S. Paul, and durſt not profeſs it openly with mouth, as he is commanded, but for fear of death ſhould declare the contrary in deed, ſlander the word of God, and deny Chriſt, which is forbidden, ſhould it not rather be a furtherance to his damnation than otherwiſe?

And to be ſhort, if any one man had all theſe gifts together, or generally all the gifts of Fortune, the Body, the Mind, and of Grace, yet if he might not have the uſe of them, what ſhould they profit him? Verily nothing at all. For felicity is not in having, but in uſing; not in poſſeſſing, but in occupying, not in knowledge, but in doing.

Felicity, not in having, but in uſing.

But alas, our natural Mother England, which hath been counted to be the ſureſt, the richeſt, and of late alſo the moſt godly Nation of the Earth, hath been theſe whole five years moſt violently by Tyrants forced to lack the uſe of all the gifts and benefits wherewith God and Nature had endued her. Her natural and loving Children could not be ſuffered to enjoy their right inheritance, whereby they might relieve and ſuccour her or themſelves; but whatſoever they had, was either by open force, or by crafty dealing pulled from them. And ſurely this had been tolerable, if none other miſchief had been therewith intended.

He is a gentle Thief (if Thieves may be counted gentle) that only robbeth a man of his Goods, and refraineth violent hands from his perſon. For ſuch loſs with labour and diligence may be recovered. He may be called a merciful murtherer, that only killeth the aged Parents, and uſeth no force on the Children.

For Nature hath made all men mortal, and that in like ſpace; and to kill the Parents, is as it were but a prevention of a ſhort time, if it were to the uttermoſt enjoyed. But theſe Tyrants were more ungentle than common Thieves, more empty of mercy than common murderers. For they were not only not contented to have the Goods of the People, but they would have it delivered to them by the owners own hands, that it might be ſaid to the world they gave it with their heart; and were not therewith pleaſed, but they would have their lives, that they ſhould not bewray them; and yet herrwith they were not ſatisfied, but they meant to root out the whole Progeny and Nation of Engliſhmen, that none ſhould be left to revenge and cry out on their extremities, and to bring our Country into the Spaniards Dominion.

Wicked practiſes of moſt cruel Tyrants.

It is an horrible cruelty for one brother to kill another; much more horrible for the Children to lay violent and murdering hands on their Parents, but moſt horrible of all to murther the Children in the ſight of their Parents, or the Parents in the ſight of their Children, as theſe moſt cruel Tormentors have done.

But what do I ſtand in theſe things which have ſome defence, becauſe the Turks perchance uſe ſo to do, and Ethnicks kill one another, to make Sacrifice of men to their phantaſtical Gods?

It was not enough for theſe unnatural Engliſh Tormentors, Tyrants, and falſe Chriſtians, to be the Lords of the Goods, Poſſeſſions, and Bodies of their Brethren and Country-men: but being very Antichriſts, and Enemies of Chriſts Croſs, they would be Gods, and reign in the Conſciences and Souls of men. Every man, woman, and child muſt deny Chriſt in word openly, abhor Chriſt in their deeds, ſlander his Goſpel with word and deed, worſhip and honour falſe Gods as they would have them, and themſelves did, and ſo give Body and Soul to the Devil their Maſter, or ſecretly flee, or after inward Torments be burned openly. O cruelty, cruelty! far exceeding all cruelties committed by thoſe ancient and famous Tyrants and cruel Murderers, Pharaoh, Herod, Caligula, Nero, Domitian, Maximine, Diocleſian, Decius, whoſe names for their cruel perſecution of the People of God, and their own tyranny practiſed on the People, have been, be, and ever ſhall be in perpetual hatred, and their Souls in continual torment in Hell. If any man would take upon him to ſet forth particularly all the acts that have been done theſe full five years, by this unnatural woman; (No, no woman, but a Monſter, and the Devil of Hell covered with the ſhape of a woman) as it is moſt neceſſary for the glory of God, and the profit of his Church, and this Realm, it ſhould be done: he ſhall find it a matter ſufficient for a perfect great Hiſtory, and not to be contained in an Oration, to be uttered at one time by the voice of man. But to comprehend the ſum of all their wickedneſs in few words; Behold, whatſoever malice in miſchief, covetouſneſs in ſpoil, cruelty in puiſhing, tyranny in deſtruction could do, that all this poor Engliſh Nation this full five years ſuffered already, or ſhould have ſuffered, had not the great mercy of God prevented it.

Cruelty of late days far exceeding all cruelties committed by the ancient and famous Tyrants in times paſt.

And albeit there have been many that have hazarded and loſt their lives to ſhake off this moſt rough brake (wherewith this Viragin, rather than Virgin, as ſhe would be called and taken, boaſted herſelf to be ſent of God, to ride and rame the People of England) albeit there have been many that have gone about to looſe their brethren out of the yoke of this moſt miſerable Captivity, and albeit ſome have proved to break the bands of this moſt cruel Tyranny, yet could they never bring to paſs that which they ſo earneſtly laboured, and ſo manfully attempted.

And it is nothing to be wondred, let the Papiſts boaſt thereof what it pleaſeth them. For Almighty God, being a moſt indifferent governor, puniſhing evil, and rewarding good, could not of his juſtice ſuffer his ſcourge ſo ſoon to be taken from this our Land, if he meant the Salvation of the people, as moſt manifeſtly it appeareth he did. For having once given to this Realm the greateſt Jewel that might be, that is, the free uſe of his lively Word (which if they had imbraced and followed, it would have reformed all diſorders and ſins for which his wrath was kindled and provoked) the people nothing regarded it, but either utterly contemned it, or abuſed it, and many made it a Cloak and colour to cover their miſchief. So that if he ſhould ſuddenly have withdrawn this plague, as Tyrants and evil Governors be the plague of God, they would neither have paſſed on his juſtice, nor yet ſhould they have felt the ſweetneſs of his mercy. For commonly the people regard but things preſent, and neither remember things paſt, nor yet paſs on things to come, unleſs they be warned by exceeding extremities.

Tyrants and evil governors be the plagues of God.

God worketh all things to his own glory.

Beſides this, it is moſt evident, that he had determined to make this noble conqueſt alone with his own hand and mighty power, and would not that it ſhould be done by Man, leſt Man ſhould impute any part of the glory of this victory to his own ſtrength, or to his own policy, or that Fortune ſhould ſeem to bear any ſtroke in ſo glorious a conqueſt, and ſo be partaker, in Mens opinions, of the triumph ſo worthy.

Neither did his almighty power work this when Man would have it diſpatched, that is, aſſoon as the enemy began to gather their force; for it is not ſo great a victory to diſcomfit a few diſperſed people, as it is to deſtroy a perfectly united army; but he ſuffered them to make their force as great as was poſſible, to work whatſoever miſchiefs by ſmile, baniſhment, priſonment hanging, heading, burning, or otherwiſe could be imagined.

Neither would his moſt provident wiſdom do it out of ſeaſon: but as the good husbandman doth not crop his Tree, till he hath rendered his fruit: ſo would he not root out theſe peſtilent Tyrants, till the moſt profit might be taken thereof.

Affliction tryeth Men whether they be good or evil.

When he had given ſufficient leaſure to all kind of Men to declare themſelves who were Crocodiles, ſometime lying in Water, ſometime on Land, that is, both Goſpellers and Papiſts; who were Spunges, ſuſpected whether they had life or not life, whether they were Chriſtians or Epicures: who were Cameleons, that could turn themſelves into all colours, with Proteſtants, Proteſtants; with Papiſts, Papiſts; with Spaniards, Spaniards, with Engliſhmen, Engliſhmen; who were Gnatho's that could apply themſelves to every Mans appetite that was in Authority; who were Marigolds, that followed Maries mad affections; who were weather-cocks, that did turn with every wind; who were Maſtives, that could bite and bark not; who were curs, ever barking; who were Foxes, that would promiſe much, and perform nothing; who could bind themſelves with many Oaths, and do clean contrary; who were Cain's, that ſought the innocent Abels deaths; who were the Wolves, that worried the Lambs; and finally, when he had ſuffered the ſpiritual ſhavelings to ſpue out their venom, and every Man plainly to declare outwardly what he was inwardly; then doth he work this moſt victorious conqueſt. And with his works he ſeemeth plainly to ſay thus unto us: Ye ſee (my people) what I have done for you, not for your ſakes, which nothing regarded the benefits that I moſt plenteouſly poured on you, and have deſerved moſt grievous puniſhment for your unthankfulneſs: but of mine infinite mercy, and for my glories ſake, which I will have opened to all the World in theſe latter days, to the fear of evil doers, and to the comfort of the well doers. Provoke no more my wrath: ye ſee what will follow it: be hereafter more prudent and wiſe than ye were before, Ye may, if ye will, be more circumſpect in time to come, than ye have been in the time paſt: ye may if ye liſt put me to leſs trouble, and keep your ſelves in more ſafety. I have not only diſcovered mine, yours, and my Land of Englands enemies, and all the crafts, ſubtilties, and policies that have been, or may be uſed by them, or any like hereafter, but I have alſo taken away their head and captain, and deſtroyed a great number of them, that ye ſhould not be troubled with them, and ſome of them have I left, that I may make them ſpectacles and examples to the terror and fear of their poſterity. Love me, and I will love you: ſeek my honor and glory, and I will work your commodity and ſafety: walk in my ways and commandments, and I will be with you for ever. Surely, if we conſider the wonderful mercy that it hath pleaſed God to uſe towards us, in the delivering of the Realm and us his people, out of the hands of thoſe moſt cruel Tyrants, as we cannot but do, unleſs we will declare our ſelves to be the moſt unthankful people that ever lived, we muſt needs judge it not only worthy to be compared, but alſo far to exceed the deliverance of the Children of Iſrael out of Egypt from the Tyranny of Pharaoh, and from the powers of Holofernes and Senacherib. For it is not read, that either Pharaoh or the other two ſought any other thing, than to be the Lords of the Goods and Bodies of the Iſraelites, they forced them not to commit Adultery, and to ſerve falſe Gods, as theſe Engliſh Tyrants did.

God plenteouſly poureth his benefits upon us, not for our ſakes, but of his infinite mercy, and for his glories ſake.

Anno 1558.

Wonderful is Gods mercy in delivering this Realm from the tyranny of the Papiſts.

But beſides, if we will note the wonderful Works of God in handling this matter, we ſhall well perceive, that far much more is wrought to his glory, and to the profit of his Church and people, than perchance all Men at the firſt do ſee. For he hath not only diſpatched the Realm of the chief perſonages and head of theſe Tyrants, but alſo as it were declareth, that he minded not that either they or their doings ſhould continue. For albeit that all acts, done by Tyrants tyrannouſly, be by all Laws, Reaſon and Equity, of no force, yet becauſe no Diſputation ſhould follow on this, what is tyrannouſly done, and what is not tyrannouſly done, he hath provided that this queſtion needeth not to come in queſtion. For he utterly blinded their eyes, and ſuffered them to build on falſe grounds which can no longer ſtand, than they be propped up with rope, ſword, and fagot. For her firſt Parliament whereon they grounded and wrought a great part of their tyranny, and wherein they meant to overthrow whatſoever King Edward had for the advancement of Gods Glory brought to paſs, was of no force or Authority. For ſhe perceiving that her Enemies Stomack could not be emptied, nor her malice ſpued on the people by any good order, ſhe committeth a great diſorder. She by force and violence taketh from the Commons their liberty, that, according to the Ancient Laws and Cuſtoms of the Realm, they could not have their free election of Knights and Burgeſſes for the Parliament. For ſhe well knew, that if either Chriſtiam Men, or true Engliſhmen, ſhould be elected, it was not poſſible that to ſucceed which ſhe intended. And therefore in many places divers were choſen by force of her threats, meet to ſerve her malicious affections. Wherefore that Parliament was no Parliament, but may be juſtly called a conſpiracy of Tyrants and Traitors. For the greater part, by whoſe Authority and voices things proceeded in that Court, by their Acts moſt manifeſtly declared themſelves ſo: the reſt being both Chriſtians and true Engliſh Men, although they had good wills, yet were not able to reſiſt or prevail againſt the multitude of voices and ſuffrages of ſo many evil, falſe to God, and enemies to their Country. Alſo divers Burgeſſes being orderly choſen, and lawfully returned, as in ſome places the people did what they could to reſiſt her purpoſes, were diſorderly and unlawfully put out, and others without any order of Law in their places placed. Doctor Taylor Biſhop of Lincoln a Chriſtian Biſhop and a true Engliſhman, being lawfully and orderly called to the Parliament, and placed in the Lords Houſe in his degree, was in his Robes by violence thruſt out of the Houſe. Alexander Nowell with two other, All three being Burgeſſes for divers ſhires, and Chriſtian Men and true Engliſhmen, and lawfully choſen, returned, and admitted, were by force put out of the Houſe of the Commons: for the which cauſe the ſaid Parliament is alſo void, as by a Preſident of the Parliament holden at Coventry in the 38. year of King Hery the ſixth, it moſt manifeſtly appeareth. And the third Parliament called in the name of her Husband, and of her evil Grace, wherein they would have undone that her Noble Father and the Realm had brought to paſs for the reſtitution of the liberty of the Realm, and for extinguiſhment of the uſurped Authority of the Biſhop of Rome

The Papiſts buildings ſtand ſo long only as they be propt up with rope, ſword and fagot.

Burgeſſes unlawfully, diſorderly, and violently thruſt out of the Parliament Houſe in Q. Maries days.

The third Parliament in Q. Maries days not orderly and formally called, and therefore of none effect.

Anno 1558.

Rome, is alſo void; and of none authority. For that the title and ſtile of Supream Head of the Church of England, which by a Statute made in the 35th year of the Reign of the ſaid King Henry, was ordained, that it ſhould be united and annexed for ever to the Imperial Crown of this Realm, was omitted in the Writs of ſummoning. Wherefore as a woman can bring forth no child without a man, ſo cannot thoſe Writs bring forth good and ſure fruit, becauſe this part of the Title, which was ordained by the Parliament for the forth to be always uſed in the Kings ſtile, was left out. For greater error is in lack of form, than in lack of matter. And where the foundation is naught, there can nothing builded thereon be good. There is no Law ſpiritual nor temporal (as they term them) nor any good Reaſon, but allow theſe Rules for infallible Principles. And if any man will ſay, that it was not in the free choice, liberty, and pleaſure of the King of this Realm, and the Queen, whether they would expreſs the ſaid Title in their ſtile, or not, as that ſubtile Serpent Gardiner, being Chancellor of the Realm, and traiterouſly ſending out the Writs of Parliament without the ſame ſtile, perceiving he had over-ſhot himſelf in calling the Parliament, and having committed many horrible murthers and moſt miſchievous acts, would have excuſed it, as appeareth by a piece of a Statute made in the ſame Parliament, in the eighth Chapter and two and twentieth Leaf, it may be juſtly and truly anſwered, that they could not ſo do. For although every perſon may by Law renounce his own private right, yet may he not renounce his right in that which toucheth the Commonwealth, or a third perſon.

And this Title and Stile more touched the Commonwealth and Realm of England, than the King. For, as I ſaid before, it was ordained for the conſervation of the Liberty of the whole Realm, and to exclude the uſurped Authority of the Biſhop of Rome. And therefore no King nor Queen alone could renounce ſuch Title: but it ought (if they would have it taken away) to be taken away orderly and formally by Act of Parliament, ſufficiently called and ſummoned. For the natural and right way to looſe and undo things, is to diſſolve them by that means they were ordained. And ſo it moſt manifeſtly appeareth, that all their doings, from the beginning to the end, were and be of none effect, force, or authority: but all that they have done, hath been meer Tyranny. O moſt marvellous Providence of Almighty God, that always, and in all things, doth that is beſt for the wealth of his People! O moſt mighty Power, that ſo ſuddenly overthroweth the counſels of the wicked, and bringeth their devices to nought! O infinite mercy, that ſo gently dealeth with his People, that he ſaveth them whom he might moſt juſtly deſtroy! O moſt joyful, moſt merry, and never to be forgotten Hope-wedneſday, in which it hath pleaſed thee, O God, to deliver thy Church, this Realm, and thy People from ſo horrible Tyranny! No Tongue can expreſs, no Pen can indite, no Eloquence can worthily ſet out, much leſs exornate theſe thy marvellous doings. No, no heart is able to render unto thy goodneſs ſufficient thanks for the benefits we have received. Who could ever have hoped this moſt joyful time? Yea, who did not look rather for thy moſt ſharp viſitation, and utter deſtruction of this Realm, as of Sodom, Gomorra, and Jeruſalem.

A joyful day.

But we ſee and feel, good Lord, that thy mercy is greater than all mens ſins, and far above all thy works. And albeit there is no Chriſtian and natural Engliſhman, Woman, or Child, either preſent, or that ſhall ſucceed us, which is not or ſhall not be partaker of this moſt exceeding mercy and wonderful benefit of Almighty God, and therefore is bound continually to praiſe and thank him: yet there is not one Creature that is more bound ſo to do, than you noble Queen Elizabeth. For in this horrible Tyranny, and moſt cruel Perſecution, your Grace hath been more hunted for, than any other. Divers times they have taken you, ſometime they have had you in ſtrong hold, ſecluded from all liberty; ſometime at liberty, but not without moſt cruel Gaolers cuſtody; and many times they determined, that without Juſtice ye ſhould be murthered privily. They thought, if your Grace had been ſuppreſſed, they ſhould have fully prevailed: If ye had been deſtroyed, their doings for ever ſhould be eſtabliſhed: If ye had been taken out of the way, there were none left that would or could undo that they had ordained. But he that ſitteth on high, and laugheth at their madneſs, would not ſuffer that the malicious purpoſes and moſt cruel deviſed injuſtice ſhould have ſucceſs. He took upon him the protection of you. He only hath been our Jeoſeba, that preſerved you from this wicked Athalia. He only was the Joiada that deſtroyed this cruel Athalia. He only hath made you Queen of this Realm, inſtead of this miſchievous Marana. No earthly Creature can claim any piece of thanks therefore, no mans force, no mans counſel, no mans aid, hath been the cauſe thereof. Wherefore the greater his benefits have been toward you, the more are you bound to ſeek his glory, and to ſet forth his honour. Ye ſee his Power, what he is able to do; he alone can ſave, and he can deſtroy, he can pull down, and he can ſet up. If ye fear him, and ſeek to do his will, then will he favour you, and preſerve you to the end from all Enemies, as he did King David. If ye now fall from him, or juggle with him, look for no more favour than Saul had ſhewed to him. But I have a good hope that both his Juſtice and Benefits be ſo printed in your heart, that ye will never forget them, but ſeek by all means to have the one, and to fear to fall into the other. I truſt alſo your wiſdom will not only conſider the cauſes of this late moſt ſharp Viſitation, but alſo to your uttermoſt power endeavor to out-root them.

God preſerveth the innocent, and maketh fruſtrate the malicious purpoſes of the wicked.

And foraſmuch as beſides this infinite mercy poured on your Grace, it hath pleaſed his Divine Providence to conſtitute your Highneſs to be our Debora, to be the Governeſs and Head of the Body of this Realm, to have the charge and cure thereof, it is requiſite above all things, as well for his glory and honour, as for your diſcharge, quietneſs and ſafety, to labour that the ſame Body now at the firſt be cleanſed, made whole, and then kept in good order. For as if the Body of man be corrupted and diſeaſed, he is not able to manage his things at home, much leſs to do any thing abroad: ſo if the Body of a Realm be corrupt and out of order, it ſhall neither be able to do any thing abroad, if neceſſity ſhould require, nor yet proſper in it ſelf. But this may not be done with piecing and patching, cobling and botching, as was uſed in time paſt, whilſt your moſt noble Father and Brother reigned. For as if a man cut off one Head of the Serpent Hydra, and deſtroy not the whole Body, many will grow inſtead of that one; and as in a corrupt Body that hath many diſeaſes, if the Phyſician ſhould labour to heal one part, and not the whole, it will in ſhort time break out afreſh: ſo unleſs the Body of a Realm or Commonwealth be clean purged from corruption, all the particular Laws and Statutes that can be deviſed ſhall not profit it.

An apt ſimilitude.

We need no foreign Examples to prove it: look upon this Realm it ſelf, it will plainly declare it. And as it is not enough to cleanſe the Body from his corruption, but there muſt be alſo Preſervatives miniſtred to keep it from putrefaction; for naturally of it ſelf it is diſpoſed to putrefie: ſo after the Body of a Realm is purged, unleſs there be godly Ordinances for the preſervation thereof ordained and duly miniſtred, it will return to the old ſtate. For this Body, which is the People, is univerſally naturally diſpoſed to evil, and without compulſion will hardly do that is his duty.

Thus muſt your Grace do, if ye mind the advancement of Gods glory, your own quietneſs and ſafety, and the wealth of this your Politick Body. And they be not hard to bring to paſs, where goodwill will vouchſafe to take to her a little pain. The Realm will ſoon be purged, if vice and ſelf-love be utterly condemned. It will be in good ſtate preſerved, if theſe three things, Gods Word truly taught and preached, Youth well brought up in godly and honeſt Exerciſes, and Juſtice rightly miniſtred, may be perfectly conſtituted. And without this foundation, let men imagine what it pleaſeth them, the Spiritual Houſe of God ſhall never be well framed or buiſded, nor the publick ſtate of your Realm well ordered. For in what Body Gods Word lacketh, the unity and charity that ought to be among the Members thereof, and which knitteth them together, is ſoon extinguiſhed. Where the youth is neglected, there can no good ſucceſs be hoped, no more than the Husbandman can look for a good

Three things which preſerve the good eſtate of a Realm or Commonwealth.

Crop where he ſowed no good Seed. And where Juſtice is not truly and rightly miniſtred, there the more Laws and Statutes be heaped together, the more they be contemned. And ſurely if this thing could not without exceeding charges be compaſſed, as God forbid that charges ſhould be weighed, be they never ſo great, where Gods glory and the wealth of the Realm may be furthered; yet ought it not to be neglected. What charges did King David the Father, and King Solomon his Son, imploy to build the ſtony Houſe of God? How much more charges ſhould a Chriſtian Prince imploy to build and ſet up the lively Houſe of God? But verily, I am fully perſwaded that it ſhall not be chargeable to do this. No, a great deal of ſuperfluous charges, which otherwiſe your Grace ſhall be forced to ſuſtain, ſhall thus be clean cut away, and ſo your Revenues by a mean moſt profitable, and to no good perſon hurtful, increaſed.

Charges not to be weighed, where Gods glory is to be furthered

Wherefore for Gods ſake, noble Queen, let not the opportunity, now by God offered, be by your Grace omitted. A Phyſician can in nothing ſo much declare his good will and cunning, nor purchaſe himſelf ſo great eſtimation, as when he findeth his Patient throughly ſick and weakned, and doth reſtore him to his perfect health and perfection. Likewiſe if a Prince ſhould deſire of God a thing whereby he might declare the zeal that he beareth to God, or whereby he might win fame and glory, he could deſire nothing ſo much, as to come into a ſtate corrupted, as this Realm of England, at this preſent is, not to deſtroy it, as did Cæſar, but to make it, as did Romulus.

If your Grace can bring this to paſs, as I am out of all doubt ye may quickly; ye ſhall do more than any of your Progenitors did before you. All men ſhall confeſs that you are not only for Proximity of Blood preferred, but rather of God ſpecially ſent and ordained. And as the Queen of Saba came from far off to ſee the glory of King Solomon, a woman to a man, even ſo ſhall the Princes of our time come, men to a woman, and Kings marvel at the vertue of Queen Elizabeth. Thus ſhall we your Subjects be moſt bound to praiſe God, and to think our ſelves moſt happy, that coming ſo ſuddenly from the worſe, be forthwith preferred to the beſt, rid from extreameſt Calamity, and brought to the greateſt Felicity; and it ſhall be beſides an example for all evil Princes, to leave their Perſecution of Chriſt and his Members, to ceaſe from their Tyranny, wherewith they continually oppreſs their poor Subjects. And ſo all People, not only we of this your Realm, but of all other Nations, ſhall have juſt cauſe to pray for your Graces health, and increaſe of honour.

This Oration of Mr. Hales being premiſed, now let us proſecute, the Lord willing, that which we promiſed, concerning the Diſputation or Conference had at Weſtminſter. The Copy whereof here followeth.

The Conference or Diſceptation had and begun at Weſtminſter the laſt of March, upon certain Queſtions or Articles of Religion propoſed, and alſo of the breaking up of the ſame, by the Papiſts default, at the firſt beginning of Queen Elizabeth.

SO it pleaſed the Queens moſt excellent Majeſty, having heard of the diverſity of Opinions in certain matters of Religion amongſt ſundry of her loving Subjects, and being very deſirous to have the ſame reduced to ſome godly and chriſtian Concord (by the advice of the Lords and others of the Privy Councel, as well for the ſatisfaction of perſons doubtful, as alſo for the knowledge of the very Truth in certain matters of difference) to have a convenient choſen number of the beſt Learned of either part, and to confer together their Opinions and Reaſons, and thereby to come to ſome good and charitable agreement. And hereupon by her Majeſties commandment, certain of her Privy Councel declared this purpoſe to the Archbiſhop of York (being alſo one of the ſame Privy Councel) and required him that he would impart the ſame to ſome of the Biſhops, and to make choice of eight, nine, or ten of them, and that there ſhould be the like number named of the other part. And further alſo they declared to him (as then was ſuppoſed) what the matter ſhould be. And as for the time, it was thought meet to be as ſoon as poſſible might be agreed upon. And then after certain days paſt, it was ſignified by the ſaid Archbiſhop, that there were appointed, by ſuch of the Biſhops to whom he had imparted this matter, nine perſons, that is to ſay, five Biſhops and four Doctors. The Names of whom here follow under written. Anno 1558.

The Papiſts.

The Biſhop of Wincheſter.
The Biſhop of Lichfield.
The Biſhop of Cheſter.
The Biſhop of Carliſle.
The Biſhop of Lincoln.
Dr. Cole.
Dr. Harpsfield.
Dr. Langdale.
Dr. Cheadſey.

The Proteſtants.

Dr. Story Biſhop of Chicheſter.
Dr. Coxe.
Mr. Whitehead.
Mr. Grindall.
Mr. Horne.
Mr. D. Sands.
Mr. Geſt.
Mr. Aelmer.
Mr. Juell.

Who were content, at the Queens Majeſties commandment, to ſhew their Opinions, and, as the ſaid Archbiſhop termed it, render accompt of their Faith in thoſe matters which were mentioned, and that eſpecially in writing, although he ſaid, they thought the ſame ſo determined, as there was no cauſe to diſpute upon them. The matter which they ſhould talk upon, was comprehended in theſe three Propoſitions, hereunder ſpecified.

1. It is againſt the Word of God, and the cuſtome of the ancient Church, to uſe a Tongue unknown to the People, in common Prayer, and the Adminiſtration of the Sacraments.

2. Every Church hath authority to appoint, take away, and change Ceremonies and Eccleſiaſtical Rites, ſo the ſame be to edification.

3. It cannot be proved by the Word of God, that there is in the Maſs offered up a Sacrifice Propitiatory for the Quick and the Dead.

It was hereupon fully reſolved by the Queens Majeſty, with the advice aforeſaid, that according to their deſire, it ſhould be in writing on both parts, for avoiding of much altercation in words; and that the ſaid Biſhops would, becauſe they were in authority of degree Superiors, firſt declare their minds and opinions to the matter, with their reaſons in writing. And the other number, being alſo nine men of good degree in Schools, and ſome having been in dignity in the Church of England, if they had any thing to ſay to the contrary, ſhould the ſame day declare their opinions in like manner, and ſo each of them ſhould deliver their writings to the other, to be conſidered what were to be improved therein, and the ſame to declare again in writing at ſome other convenient day, and the like order to be kept in all the reſt of the matters. All this was fully agreed upon with the Archbiſhop of York, and ſo alſo ſignified to both parties.

And immediately hereupon, divers of the Nobility and States of the Realm underſtanding that ſuch a meeting and conference ſhould be, and that in certain matters, whereupon (the Court of Parliament conſequently following) ſome Laws might be grounded; They made earneſt means to her Majeſty, that the parties of this Conference might put and read their Aſſertions in the Engliſh Tongue, and that in the preſence of them of the Nobility and others of her Parliament Houſe, for the better ſatisfaction and enabling of their own judgments, to treat and conclude of ſuch Laws as might depend herupon.

to

This alſo, being thought very reaſonable, was ſignified to both parties, and ſo fully agreed upon, and the day appointed for the firſt meeting to be the Friday in the forenoon, being the laſt of March, at Weſtminſter Church. At which foreſaid day and place, both for good order and for honour of the conference, by the Queens Majeſties commandment, the Lords and others of the privy Councel were preſent, and a great part of the Nobility alſo. And notwithſtanding this former order appointed, and conſented unto by both parties, yet the Biſhop of Wincheſter and his Collegues alledged they had miſtaken that their aſſertions and reaſons ſhould be written, and ſo only recited out of the Book, ſaying their Book was not then ready written, but they were ready to argue and diſpute, and therefore they would for that time repeat in ſpeech, that which they had to ſay to the firſt probation.

This variation from the former order, and eſpecially from that which themſelves had by the ſaid Archbiſhop in writing before required, adding thereto the reaſon of the Apoſtle, that to contend with words is profitable to nothing, but to ſubverſion of the hearer, ſeemed to the Queens Majeſties Councel ſomewhat ſtrange, and yet was it permitted without any great reprehenſion, becauſe they excuſed themſelves with miſtaking the order, and agreed that they would not fail but put it in writing, and, according to the former order, delivered it to the other part; and ſo the ſaid Biſhop of Wincheſter and his Collegues appointed Doctor Cole Dean of Pauls, to be the utterer of their minds; who partly by ſpeech only, and partly by reading of Authorities written, and at certain times being informed of his Collegues what to ſay, made a declaration of their meanings and their reaſons to their firſt propoſition: which being ended, they were asked by the privy Councel if any of them had any more to be ſaid, and they ſaid, No. So as the other part was licenced to ſhew their minds, which they did according to the firſt order, exhibiting all that which they meant to be propounded, in a Book written; which, after a Prayer and invocation, made moſt humbly to almighty God for the enduing of them with his holy Spirit, and a proteſtation alſo to ſtand to the Doctrine of the Catholick Church builded upon the Scriptures, and the Doctrine of the Prophets and the Apoſtles, was diſtinctly read by one Robert Horne, Batchelor in Divinity, late Dean of Dureſm, and after Biſhop of Wincheſter. The copy of which their Proteſtation here followeth according as it was by him penned and exhibited, with their Preface alſo before the ſame.

FOr as much as it is thought good unto the Queens moſt excellent Majeſty, (unto whom in the Lord all obedience is due) that we ſhould declare our judgment in writing upon certain propoſitions; we, as becometh us to do herein, moſt gladly obey.

Seeing that Chriſt is our only Maſter, whom the Father hath commanded us to hear; and ſeeing alſo his word is the truth, from the which it is not lawful for us to depart, no not one hairs breadth, and againſt the which (as the Apoſtle ſaith) we can do nothing; we do in all things ſubmit our ſelves unto this truth, and do proteſt that we will affirm nothing againſt the ſame.

And forasmuch as we have for our Mother the true and Catholick Church of Chriſt, which is grounded upon the Doctrine of the Apoſtles and Prophets, and is of Chriſt the head in all things governed; we do reverence her judgment, we obey her Authority as becometh Children; and we do devoutly profeſs, and in all points follow the Faith which is contained in the three Creeds, that is to ſay, of the Apoſtles, of the Councel of Nice, and of Athanaſius.

And ſeeing that we never departed, neither from the Doctrine of God which is contained in the holy Canonical Scriptures, nor yet from the Faith of the true and Catholick Church of Chriſt; but have Preached truly the Word of God, and have ſincerely miniſtred the Sacraments according to the inſtitution of Chriſt, unto the which our Doctrine and Faith the moſt part alſo of our adverſaries did ſubſcribe not many years paſt (although now as unnatural they are revolted from the ſame) we deſire that they render account of their backſliding, and ſhew ſome cauſe wherefore they do not only reſiſt that Doctrine which they have before profeſſed, but alſo perſecute the ſame by all means they can. We do not doubt, but through the equity of the Queens moſt excellent Majeſty, we ſhall in theſe diſputations be intreated more gently than in years late paſt, when we were handled moſt unjuſtly and ſcantly after the common manner of Men. As for the judgment of the whole controverſie, we refer unto the moſt holy Scriptures, and the Chatholick Church of Chriſt (whoſe judgment unto us ought to be moſt ſacred:) notwithſtanding by the Catholick Church we underſtand not the Romiſh Church, whereunto our adverſaries attribute ſuch reverence, but that which Saint Auguſtine and other Fathers affirm, ought to be ſought in the holy Scriptures, and which is governed and led by the Spirit of Chriſt.

The firſt propoſition.

It is againſt the Word of God, and the cuſtom of the Primitive Church, to uſe a Tongue unknown to the people in common Prayers and adminiſtration of the Sacraments.

By theſe words (the Word of God) we mean only the written Word of God, or Canonical Scriptures.

And by the cuſtom of the Primitive Church, we mean the order moſt generally uſed in the Church for the ſpace of 500. years after Chriſt, in which times lived the moſt notable Fathers, as Juſtine, Ireneus, Tertullian, Cyprian, Baſill, Chryſoſtome, Hierom, Ambroſe, Auguſtine, &c.

Two parts of the propoſition.

This aſſertion above written hath two parts. Firſt, that the uſe of the Tongue not underſtood of the people, in common Prayers of the Church, or in the adminiſtration of the Sacraments, is againſt Gods Word.

The ſecond, that the ſame is againſt the uſe of the Primitive Church.

The firſt part of the propoſition.

The firſt part is moſt manifeſtly proved by the fourteenth Chapter of the Epiſtle to the Corinthians, almoſt throughout the whole Chapter. In the which Chapter S. Paul intreateth of this matter, ex profeſſo, purpoſely. And although ſome do cavil that S. Paul ſpeaketh not in that Chapter of praying, but of Preaching, yet is it moſt evident to any indifferent reader of underſtanding, and appeareth alſo by the expoſition of the beſt Writers, that he plainly there ſpeaketh not only of Preaching and Prophecying, but alſo of Prayer and Thankſgiving, and generally of all other publick actions, which require any ſpeech in the Church or Congregation. For of Praying he ſaith; I will pray with my Spirit, and I will pray with my mind, I will ſing with my Spirit, and I will ſing with my mind. And of thankſgiving (which is a kind of Prayer) thou giveſt thanks well, but the other is not edified. And how ſhall he which occupieth the room of the unlearned ſay, Amen, to thy giving of thanks, when he underſtandeth not what thou ſayeſt? And in the end, deſcending from particulars to a general propoſition, concludeth, that all things ought to be done to edification. Thus much is clear by the very words of S. Paul; and the ancient Doctors Ambroſe, Auguſtine, Hierom, and other, do ſo underſtand this Chapter, as it ſhall appear by their teſtimonies which ſhall follow afterward.

¶ Upon this Chapter of S. Paul we gather theſe reaſons following.

The argument or probation.

1. All things done in the Church or Congregation, ought ſo to be done as they may edifie the ſame.

But the uſe of an unknown Tongue, in publick Prayer or adminiſtration of Sacraments, doth not edifie the Congregation.

Therefore the uſe of an unknown Tongue, in publick Prayer or adminiſtration of Sacraments, is not to be had in the Church. *

The Major proved.

The firſt part of this reaſon is grounded upon Saint Pauls Words, commanding all things to be done to edification.

The minor proved.

The ſecond part is alſo proved by S. Pauls plain words. Firſt by this ſimilitude. If the Trumpet give an uncertain ſound, who ſhall be prepared to battel? Even ſo likewiſe when ye ſpeak with Tongues, except ye ſpeak words words that have ſignification, how ſhall it be underſtood what is ſpoken? for ye ſhall but ſpeak in the ayr, that is to ſay, in vain, and conſequently without edifying.

And afterward in the ſame Chapter he ſaith, how can he that occupieth the place of the unlearned, ſay Amen, at thy giving of thanks, ſeeing he underſtandeth not what thou ſayeſt? for thou verily giveſt thanks well, but the other is not edified.

Theſe be S. Pauls words, plainly proving, that a Tongue not underſtood, doth not edifie. And therefore both the parts of the reaſon thus proved by Saint Paul, the concluſion followeth neceſſarily.

Another Argument or probation. 2. Secondly, nothing is to be ſpoken in the Congregation in an unknown Tongue, except it be interpreted to the people, that it may be underſtood. For ſaith Paul, If there be no Interpreter to him that ſpeaketh in an unknown Tongue, taceat in Eccleſia, let him hold his peace in the Church. And therefore the common Prayers and Adminiſtration of Sacraments, neither done in a known Tongue, neither interpreted, are againſt the commandment of Paul, and not to be uſed.

Another Argument. The Miniſter in Prayer or Adminiſtration of Sacraments uſing Language not underſtood of the hearers, is to them barbarous, and alien, which of Saint Paul is accounted a great abſurdity.

The fourth Argument or probation. It is not to be counted a Chriſtian common Prayer, where the people preſent declare not their aſſent unto it by ſaying Amen, wherein is implied all other words of aſſent.

Ambroſ. per hos enim impletur confirmatio precis, qui reſpondent Amen. But S. Paul affirmeth, that the people cannot declare their aſſent in ſaying Amen, except they underſtand what is ſaid, as afore.

Therefore it is no Chriſtian common Prayer where the people underſtand not what is ſaid.

The fifth Argument. Paul would not ſuffer in his time a ſtrange Tongue to be heard in the common Prayer in the Church, notwithſtanding that ſuch a kind of ſpeech was then a miracle, and a ſingular gift of the holy Ghoſt, whereby infidels might be perſwaded and brought to the faith; much leſs is it to be ſuffered now amongſt Chriſtian and Faithful Men, eſpecially being no miracle nor eſpecial gift of the holy Ghoſt.

The ſixth Argument. Some will peradventure anſwer, that to uſe any kind of Tongue, in common Prayer or Adminiſtration of Sacraments, is a thing indifferent.

Objection diſſolved. But S. Paul is to the contrary. For he commandeth all things to be done to edification, he commandeth to keep ſilence if there be no interpreter, and in the end of the Chapter he concludeth thus. If any Man be ſpiritual or a Prophet, let him know that the things which I write, are the commandments of the Lord. And ſo ſhortly to conclude, the uſe of a ſtrange Tongue, in Prayer and adminiſtration, is againſt the Word and Commandment of God.

To theſe reaſons, grounded upon Saint Pauls Words, which are the moſt firm Foundation of this Aſſertion, divers other Reaſons may be joyned, gathered out of the Scriptures and otherwiſe.

The 7. Reaſon. In the Old Teſtament all things pertaining to the publick Prayer, Benedictions, Thankſgivings, or Sacrifices, were always in their vulgar and natural Tongue. In the 2. Book of Paralipom. Chap. 29. it is written, that Ezechias commanded the Levites to praiſe God with the Pſalms of David, and Aſaph the Prophet, which doubtleſs were written in Hebrew their vulgar Tongue. If they did ſo in the ſhadows of the Law, much more ought we to do the like, who (as Chriſt ſaith) muſt pray, in ſpiritu & veritate.

The 8. Reaſon. The final end of our Prayer (as David ſaith) is, ut populi & conveniant in unum, & annuncient nomen Domini in Sion, & laudes ejus in Hieruſalem.

But the name and praiſes of God cannot be ſet forth to the people, unleſs it be done in ſuch a Tongue as they may underſtand, therefore common Prayer muſt be had in the vulgar Tongue.

The 9 Reaſon. The definition of publick Prayer out of the Words of S. Paul. Orabo ſpiritu, orabo & mente, Publicè orare, eſt vota communia mente ad Deum effundere, & ea ſpiritu, hoc eſt, lingua teſtari, Common Prayer is to lift up our common deſires to God with our minds, and to teſtifie the ſame outwardly with our Tongues, which definition is approved by S. Auguſtine, De magiſtro, cap. 1. Nihil opus eſt (inquit) loquutione, niſi forte ut ſacerdotes faciunt, ſignificandæ mentis cauſa ut populus intelligat. Anno 1558.

The miniſtration of the Lords Supper and Baptiſm are as it were Sermons of the Death and Reſurrection of Chriſt. The 10. Reaſon.

But Sermons to the people muſt be had in ſuch Language as the people may perceive, otherwiſe they ſhould be had in vain.

The 11. Reaſon or probation. It is not lawful for a Chriſtian Man to abuſe the gifts of God: but he that prayeth in the Church in a ſtrange Tongue, abuſeth the gifts of God. For the Tongue ſerveth only to expreſs the mind of the ſpeaker to the hearer. And Auguſtine ſaith, De doctrina Chriſtiana. lib. 4. cap. 10. Loquendi omnino nulla eſt cauſa, ſi quod loquimur non intelligunt, propter quos, ut intelligant, loquimur. There is no cauſe why we ſhould ſpeak, if they for whoſe cauſe we ſpeak, underſtand not our ſpeaking.

The 12. Reaſon or probation. The Heathen and barbarous Nations of all Countries and ſorts of Men, were they never ſo wild, evermore made their Prayers and Sacrifices to their Gods in their own Mother Tongue. Which is a manifeſt Declaration that it is the very light and voice of nature.

Thus much upon the ground of S. Paul and other reaſons out of the Scriptures, joyning therewith the common uſage of all Nations, as a Teſtimony of the Law of nature.

The ſecond part of the firſt Propoſition. Now for the ſecond part of the Aſſertion, which is, that the uſe of a ſtrange Tongue in publick Prayer and Adminiſtration of Sacraments, is againſt the cuſtom of the Primitive Church; it is a matter ſo clear, that the denial of it muſt needs proceed either of great ignorance, or elſe of wilful malice.

Juſtinus Apol. 2. The firſt Argument out of Juſtine Martyr. For firſt of all Juſtinus Martyr deſcribing the order of the Communion in his time, ſaith thus, Die Solis urbanorum ac ruſticorum cœtus fiunt, ubi Apoſtolorum Prophetarumq; literæ, quoad fieri poteſt præleguntur: Deinde ceſſante lectore, præpoſitus verba faciat adhortatoria, ad imitationem tam honeſtarum rerum invitans. Poſt hæc conſurgimus omnes, & preces offerimus, quibus finitis profertur (ut diximus) panis, vinum & aqua; tum præpoſitus, quantum poteſt, preces offert, & gratiarum actiones, plebs vero Amen accinit. That is to ſay, Upon the Sunday aſſemblies are made both of the Citizens and Country Men, whereas the writings of the Apoſtles and of the Prophets are read, as much as may be. Afterwards when the Reader doth ceaſe, the head Miniſter maketh an exhortation, exhorting them to follow ſo honeſt things. After this we riſe all together and offer Prayers, which being ended (as we have ſaid) Bread and Water are brought forth. Then the head Miniſter offereth Prayers and thankſgiving, as much as he can, and the people anſwereth Amen.

Theſe words of Juſtine, who lived about 160. years after Chriſt, conſidered with their circumſtance, declare plainly, that not only the Scriptures were read, but alſo that the Prayers and Adminiſtration of the Lords Supper were done in a Tongue underſtood.

The ſecond Argument out of Baſil. The Liturgies both of Baſil and Chryſoſtom declare, that in the celebration of the Communion, the people were appointed to anſwer to the Prayer of the Miniſter, ſometimes Amen, ſometimes, Lord have mercy upon us, ſometimes, And with thy Spirit, and, We have our Hearts lifted up unto the Lord, &c. Which anſwers they could not have made in due time, if the Prayer had not been made in a Tongue underſtood.

Baſilius: Epiſt. 63. And for further proof, let us hear what Baſil writeth in this matter to the Clerks of Neocæſarea. Cæterum ad objectum in Pſalmodiis crimen quo maxime ſimpliciores terrent calumniatores, &c. As touching that is laid to our charge in Pſalmodies and Songs, wherewith our ſlanderers do fray the ſimple, I have thus to ſay, that our cuſtoms and uſages in all Churches be uniform, and agreeable.

For in the night the people with us riſeth, goeth to the Houſe of Prayer, and in travel, tribulation, and continual tears, they confeſs themſelves to God, and at the laſt riſing

Anno 1558. riſing again, go to their Songs or Pſalmody, where being divided into two parts, they ſing by courſe together, both deeply weighing and confirming the matter of the Heavenly ſayings, and alſo ſtirring up their attention and devotion of heart, which by other means be alienated and plucked away. Then appointing one to begin the ſong, the reſt follow, and ſo with divers Songs and Prayers paſſing over the night, at the dawning of the day, all together, even as it were with one mouth and one heart, they ſing unto the Lord a ſong of Confeſſion, every Man framing to himſelf meet words of repentance.

If you will flye us from henceforth for theſe things, ye muſt flye alſo the Egyptians, and both the Libians, ye muſt eſchew the Thebanes, Paleſtines, Arabians, the Phœnices, the Sirians, and thoſe that dwell beſides Euphrates; and to be ſhort, all thoſe with whom watchings, Prayers, and common ſinging of Pſalms are had in honor.

Teſtimonies of Saint Ambroſe, written upon the fourteenth to the Corinthians, the firſt Epiſtle.
Super illud, qui enim loquitur linguis.

Ambroſius. Another argument of S. Ambroſe. HOc eſt quod dicit, quia qui loquitur incognita lingua, &c. This is it that he ſaith; becauſe he which ſpeaketh in an unknown Tongue, ſpeaketh to God. For he knoweth all things, but Men know not, and therefore there is no profit of this thing.

Ambroſ. The ſame Author afterwards, Super illud, ſi benedixeris Spiritu.

Hoc eſt, ſi laudem Dei lingua loquaris ignota, &c. Upon theſe words, if thou yeeld or give thanks with the Spirit, how ſhall he that occupieth the room of the unlearned, ſay, Amen, at thy giving of thanks, ſeeing he underſtandeth not what thou ſayeſt?

That is (ſaith Ambroſe) if thou ſpeak the praiſe of God in a Tongue unknown to the hearers. For the unlearned, hearing that which he underſtandeth not, knoweth not the end of the Prayer, and he anſwereth not Amen. That is as much to ſay as (true) that the bleſſing or thankſgiving may be confirmed. For the confirmation of the Prayer is fulfilled by them which do anſwer, Amen. That all things ſpoken might be confirmed in the minds of the hearers, through the teſtimony of the truth.

Ambroſ. ¶ Afterward in the ſame place upon theſe words, if any Infidell or unlearned come in.

Quum enim intelligit & intelligitur, &c. For when he underſtandeth, and is underſtood, hearing God to be praiſed and Chriſt to be worſhipped, he ſeeth perfectly that the Religion is true, and to be reverenced, wherein he ſeeth nothing to be done colourably, nothing in darkneſs, as among the Heathen, whoſe eyes are covered, that they ſeeing not the things which they call holy, might perceive themſelves to be deluded with divers vanities. For all falſhood ſeeketh darkneſs, and ſheweth falſe things for true. Therefore with us nothing is done privily, nothing covertly, but one God is ſimply praiſed, of whom are all things, and one Lord Jeſus, by whom are all things. For if there be none which can underſtand, or of whom he may be tryed, he may ſay, there is ſome deceit and vanity, which is therefore ſing in Tongues (not underſtood, he meaneth) becauſe it is a ſhame to open it.

Ambroſ. Upon this place, Omnia ad ædificationem fiant.

Concluſio hæc eſt, ut nihil incaſſum in Eccleſia geratur; hocque elaborandum magis, ut & imperiti proficiant, ne quid ſit corporis per imperitiam tenebroſum. Let all things be done to edifie.

This is the concluſion, that nothing ſhould be done in the Church in vain, and that this thing ought chiefly to be laboured for, that the unlearned alſo might profit leſt any part of the Body ſhould be dark through ignorance.

Ambroſe. Again, Si non fuerit interpres, taceat in Eccleſia.

Hoc eſt, intra ſe tacite oret aut loquatur Deo, qui audit muta omnia. In eccleſia enim ille debet loqui qui omnibus proſit.

If there be no interpreter, let him keep ſilence in the Church.

That is, let him pray ſecretly, or ſpeak to God within himſelf, which heareth all dumb things: for in the Church he ought to ſpeak which may profit all men.

Teſtimonies out of Saint Hierom, upon that place of Paul, Quomodo qui ſupplet locum idiotæ, &c.

PEr illum, ſaith Saint Hierom, qui ſupplet locum idiotæ, laicum intelligit, qui nullo gradu Eccleſiaſtico fungitur. It is the Lay-man, ſaith he, whom Paul here underſtandeth to be in the place of the ignorant Man, which hath no Eccleſiaſtical Office. How ſhall he anſwer Amen to the Prayer that he underſtandeth not? Hieronimus

And a little after upon theſe words, Nam ſi orare lingua, &c.

Hoc dicit, quinetiam ſi quis incognitis aliis linguis loquatur, mens ejus non ipſi effectur fine fructu, ſed audienti. Quicquid enim dicitur, ignorat. This is Paul's meaning, ſaith Hierom, If any Man ſpeaketh in ſtrange and unknown Tongues, his mind is not to himſelf without fruit and profit, but he is not profited that heareth him.

¶ And in the end of his Commentary upon the Epiſtle to the Galathians, he ſaith thus:

Quod autem (Amen) conſenſum ſignificat audientis, &c. That (Amen) ſignifieth the conſent of the hearer, and is the ſealing up of the truth, Paul in the firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians teacheth, ſaying, But if thou ſhalt bleſs in Spirit, who ſupplyeth the place of the ignorant? how ſhall he at thy Prayer anſwer (Amen) ſeeing he knoweth not what thou ſayeſt? Whereby he declareth that the unlearned Man cannot anſwer, that that which is ſpoken is true, unleſs he underſtand what is ſaid.

The ſame Hierom ſaith in the Preface of S. Pauls Epiſtle to the Galathians, that the noiſe of (Amen) ſoundeth in the Roman Church like an Heavenly thunder.

As Hierom compareth this ſound of common Prayer to thunder, ſo compareth Caſill it to the ſound of the Sea, in theſe words, If the Sea be fair, how is not the aſſembly of the Congregation much fairer? in the which a joyned ſound of Men, Women and Children, as it were of the Waves beating on the Shore, is ſent forth in our Prayers unto our God. Baſill ho. 4. hexam.

Cum populus ſemel audivit, εἰς τὰς αἰῶνας τῶν αἰώνων, ſtatim omnes reſpondent, Amen.

When the people once hear theſe words (World without end) they all forthwith anſwer, Amen. Chryſoſt. in 2 ad Cor. ca. 14.

And the ſame writer upon the ſame Chapter, upon theſe words, How ſhall he that occupieth the room of the unlearned, ſay Amen? En rurſus amuſſi (quod dicitur) ſaxum applicat, Eccleſiæ ædificationem ubique requirens, &c. Behold again, he applieth the ſtone unto the ſquare (as the Proverb is) requiring the edifying of the Congregation in all places. The unlearned he calleth the common people, and ſheweth that it is no ſmall diſcommodity, if they cannot ſay, Amen. Idem eodem loco, in illa verba, ſi ingrediatur infidelis, aut indoctus.

And again the ſame Chryſoſtom, Quin & in precibus viderit quis populum multum ſimul offerre, tum pro energumenis, tum pro pœnitentibus. Communes enim preces & à ſacerdote & ab illis fiunt, & omnes dicunt unam orationem, orationem miſericordia plenam. Iterum, ubi excluſerimus à ſacerdotalibus ambitibus eos qui non poſſunt eſſe participes ſanctæ menſæ, alia facienda eſt oratio, & omnes ſimiliter ſurgimus, &c. that is, Yea in Prayers you may ſee the people offer largely, both for the poſſeſſed and the penitents. For the Prieſts and the people pray altogether commonly, and all one Prayer, a Prayer full of mercy and pitty. And excluding out of the Prieſts limits all ſuch as cannot be partakers of the holy Table, another Prayer muſt be made, and all after, one ſort lye down upon the earth, and all again after one ſort riſe up together. Now when the peace is given, we all in like manner ſalute one another, and the Prieſt in the reverend myſteries wiſheth well to the people, and the people unto him: for Et cum ſpiritu tuo, is nothing elſe but this. All things that belong to the Sacrament of thankſgiving, are common to all. But he giveth not thanks alone, but all the people with him. Another Argument of Chryſoſtom.

Hereby

Hereby it may appear, that not the Prieſt alone communicated nor prayed alone, nor had any peculiar Prayer, but ſuch as was common to them all, ſuch as they all underſtood, and all were able to ſay with the Prieſt, which could not have been, if he had uſed a ſtrange Tongue in the miniſtration of the Sacraments.

Dionyſius. Dionyſius deſcribing the manner of the miniſtration of the Lords Supper, ſaith, That hymns were ſaid of the whole multitude of the people.

Cyprian ſer. 6. de or. dominica. Cyprian. ſaith, The Prieſt doth prepare the minds of the Brethren, with a Preface before the Prayer ſaying, Lift up your Hearts: that whiles the people doth anſwer, we have our Hearts lifted up to the Lord, they may be admoniſhed that they ought to think of none other thing than of the Lord.

Aug. in Pſal. 18. S. Auguſtine, Quod hic ſit, intelligere debemus, &c. What this ſhould be we ought to underſtand, that we may ſing with reaſon of Man, not with chatting of birds. For Owſels and Popinjaies, and Ravens, and Pies, and other ſuch like Birds are taught by Men to prate they know not what. But to ſing with underſtanding, is given by Gods holy will to the nature of Man.

Aug. de Magiſt. The ſame Auguſtine, There needeth no ſpeech when we pray, ſaving perhaps as the Prieſts do, to declare their meaning; not that God, but that Men may hear them, and ſo, being put in remembrance by conſenting with the Prieſts, may hang upon God.

To theſe teſtimonies of the ancient writers, we will joyn one Conſtitution of Juſtinian the Emperor, who Novell conſtitut. 123. lived 527. years after Chriſt, Jubemus ut omnes Epiſcopi pariter & Presbyteri, &c. We command that all Biſhops and Prieſts do celebrate the holy Oblation, and the Prayers uſed in holy Baptiſm, not ſpeaking low, but with a clear and loud voice, which may be heard of the people, that thereby the minds of the hearers may be ſtirred up with greater devotion, in uttering the praiſes of the Lord God. For ſo the holy Apoſtle teacheth in his firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians, ſaying, Truly, if thou only bleſs or give thanks in Spirit, how doth he which occupieth the place of the unlearned ſay, Amen, at the giving of thanks unto God? for he underſtandeth not what thou ſayeſt. Thou verily giveſt thanks well, but another is not edified. And again, in the Epiſtle to the Romans he ſaith, Corde creditur ad juſtitiam, ore autem fit confeſſio ad ſalutem, with the Heart a Man believeth unto righteouſneſs, and with the mouth confeſſion is made unto Salvation.

Therefore for theſe cauſes it is convenient, that amongſt other Prayers thoſe things alſo which are ſpoken in the holy Oblation, be uttered and ſpoken of the moſt Religious Biſhops and Prieſts unto our Lord Jeſus Chriſt our God with the Father and the holy Ghoſt, with a loud voice. And let the moſt Religious Prieſts know this, that if they neglect any of theſe things, neither the dreadful judgment of the great God and our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, neither will we when we know it, reſt, and leave it unrevenged.

Out of this Conſtitution of Juſtinian the Emperour, three things are worthy to be noted.

Firſt, that the common Prayer and miniſtration done with a loud voice, ſo as may be heard and underſtood of the people is a mean to ſtir up devotion in the people, contrary to the common aſſertion of Eckius and other adverſaries, who affirm that ignorance maketh a great admiration and devotion.

Secondly, that Juſtinian maketh this matter of not ordering common miniſtration and Prayers, ſo as it may be underſtood of the people, not a matter of indifferency, but ſuch a thing as muſt be anſwered for at the day of Judgment.

Thirdly, that this Emperor, being a Chriſtian Emperor, doth not only make Conſtitution of Eccleſiaſtical matters, but alſo threatneth revenge and ſharp puniſhment to the violaters of the ſame.

Theſe are ſufficient to prove that it is againſt Gods Word, and the uſe of the Primitive Chrurch, to uſe a language not underſtood of the people, in common Prayer and miniſtration of the Sacraments. Wherefore it is to be marvelled at, not only how ſuch an untruth and abuſe crept at the firſt into the Church, but alſo how it is maintained ſo ſtiffly at this day, and upon what ground theſe, that will be thought guides and paſtors of Chriſts Church, are ſo loth to return to the firſt original of S. Pauls Doctrine, and the practice of the Primitive Catholick Church of Chriſt. Anno 1558.

¶ The God of Patience and conſolation, give us Grace to be like minded one towards another in Chriſt Jeſus, that we all agreeing together, may with one Mouth praiſe God the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, Amen.

And the ſame being ended with ſome likelihood, as it ſeemed, that the ſame was much allowable to the audience; certain of the Biſhops began to ſay contrary to their former anſwer, that they had now much more to ſay to this matter, wherein although they might have been well reprehended for ſuch manner of cavillation; yet for avoiding of any more miſtaking of orders in this colloquy or conference, and for that they ſhould utter all that which they had to ſay, it was both ordered and thus openly agreed upon of both parts in the full audience, that upon the Monday following, the Biſhops ſhould bring their Minds and Reaſons in writing to the ſecond aſſertion, and the laſt alſo if they could, and firſt read the ſame: and that done, the other part ſhould bring likewiſe theirs to the ſame. And being read, each of them ſhould deliver to other the ſame writings. And in the mean time, the Biſhops ſhould put in writing, not only all that which Doctor Cole had that day uttered, but all ſuch other matters as they any otherwiſe could think of for the ſame: and as ſoon as they might poſſible, to ſend the ſame Book touching that firſt aſſertion to the other part, and they ſhould receive of them that writing which Mr. Horn had there read that day, and upon Monday it ſhall be agreed what day they ſhould exhibit their anſwers touching the firſt propoſition. Thus both parts aſſented thereto, and the aſſembly was quietly diſmiſſed.

The order of the ſecond days talk.

The Lord Keeper of the great Seal, the Archbiſhop of York, the Duke of Northfolk, and all the Councel being ſet, the Biſhops on the one ſide, and the Proteſtants, that is, the late baniſhed Preachers on the other ſide, thus began the Lord Keeper.

MY Lord and Maſters, I am ſure ye remember well, what order of talk and writing was appointed to be had this day in this aſſembly, at our laſt meeting, which I will not refuſe now to repeat again for the ſhortneſs of it, which was, that ye appointed that on both ſides ye ſhould bring in Engliſh writing, what ye had to ſay in the ſecond queſtion, and in this place appointed to read the ſame. Therefore begin my Lords.

Wincheſt. I am determined for my part that there ſhall be now read, that which we have to ſay for the firſt queſtion.

L. Keeper. Will ye not then proceed in the order appointed you?

Wincheſt. I am, as I ſaid, provided for the firſt queſtion or propoſition: and we ſhould ſuffer prejudice, if ye permit us not to intreat of that firſt, and ſo we would come to the ſecond queſtion, and this is the order we would uſe. I judge all my Brethren are ſo minded.

Biſhops. We are ſo determined.

L. Keeper. I know not what you would do for your determined order: but ye ought to look what order is appointed you to keep, which ye by this means do break and little regard.

Wincheſter.

Anno 1558.

Wincheſter. Sith our adverſaries part, if it pleaſe your Grace and Honours, have ſo confirmed their aſſertion and purpoſe, we ſuffer a prejudice or damage, if ye permit us not the like. Hereat Doctor Watſon Biſhop of Lincoln, being at this talk very deſirous to have ſpoken, ſaid now to the Biſhop of Wincheſter; I pray you let me ſpeak, which was permitted him: we are not uſed indifferently, ſince that you allow us not to open in preſent writing what we have to ſay for the declaration of the firſt queſtion, inſomuch, as that which ye take for the infirmation of the ſame, was meant nothing to that purpoſe, for that which Maſter Cole ſpake in this laſt aſſembly, was not prepared to ſtrengthen our cauſe, but he made his Oration of himſelf, and ex tempore, that is, with no fore-ſtudied talk.

At ſuch the Biſhops words the Nobility and other of the audience much frowned and grudged, ſith that they all well knew, that Maſter Cole ſpake out of a writing which he held in his hand, and often read out of the ſame, and in that the ſame places which the Biſhops informed him, and appointed him unto with their fingers; all which things do well declare the matter to be premeditate, and not done ex tempore, for that Maſter Cole was appointed by them to be their ſpeaker. Whereupon this of the Biſhop of Lincoln was the worſe taken, notwithſtanding he went onward complaining, and ſaid; we are alſo evil ordered as touching the time, our adverſaries part having warning long before, and we were warned only two days before the laſt aſſembly in this place. What with this buſineſs, and other trouble we have been driven to, have been occupied the whole laſt night. For we may in no wiſe betray the cauſe of God, nor will do, but ſuſtain it to the uttermoſt of our powers, as we ought ſo to endeavour by all manner of means. But hereunto we want preſently indifferent uſing.

L. Keeper. Take ye heed that ye deceive not your ſelves when it ſhall come to juſt trial of the matter, and that then it be not proved againſt you, that ye complain without cauſe, when the order and your manner towards it ſhall be duly weighed. I am willing and ready to hear you after the order taken and appointed for you to reaſon therein, and further or contrary to that I cannot deal with you.

Lich. Cov. Let us ſuffer no miſorder or injury herein, but be heard with indifferency, that is convenient and meet we ſhould have here.

L. Keeper. I pray you, Sirs, hear me, and mark it you well. It was concluded on by my Lords of the Councel, who you well know of, that their writing, which ye are now ſo willing to have heard, ſhould have been read the firſt day, and then did we underſtand that Maſter Cole had ſaid what you would have him, and as much as you willed him to ſay, and upon that indifferency among us. I judge ye were asked in the end of Maſter Coles rehearſal, whether that which he ſpake, was it ye would have him ſay, and ye granted it. Then, whether ye would that he ſhould ſay any more in the matter. Ye anſwered no, whereupon the other part was heard, which you hearing, then indeed without all good indifferency or plain dealing, ye pretended that ye had more to ſay. So mark you with how ſmall equity you uſed your ſelves.

The B. We had indeed more to ſay, if we might have been indifferently heard.

L. Keeper. Give me leave I ſay, and look what gains you ſhould have if your preſent requeſt ſhould be granted you, that call ſo much of indifferent uſing, how you ſhould uſe thoſe other Men? For many who are here preſent, were then away, ſo would you have your writing now read to them, which heard not this. Mark ye whether it had not been more fit that ye had provided it againſt the firſt day, when they orderly read theirs, ſith to my knowledge, and as far as I have had to do in the matter, you were of both ſides (I am ſure) warned at one time. Howbeit to ſatisfie your importunity and earneſtneſs of this crying out to have your firſt writing heard, I might well allow, if it ſo pleaſed the reſt of the Queens moſt Honourable Councel, that you diſpatch the work of the ſecond queſtion, appointed for this day, and give us up your writing for the firſt, ſo that when the day cometh that each of you ſhall anſwer the other in confirmation of the firſt queſtion, then the ſame day ye ſhall have time to read this your firſt writing, which ye now would ſo fain read. To this order all the Councel willingly condeſcended.

Lich. Cov. Nay, my Lords, they reading one, and we two Books in one day, we ſhould not have time enough to read them both. It would occupy too much time.

L. Keep. For my part I might well ſtay at the hearing of them both, and ſo I judge would the reſt of the Councel, and likewiſe the whole audience. At which ſaying there was a ſhout, crying on all ſides; Yea, yea, we would hear it gladly.

Lincoln. We cannot read them both at one time: for their writing (I am ſure) would require an hour and a half, if ſo be it be ſo long as their laſt was, and then our anſwer would require no leſs time after the firſt queſtion.

L. Keeper. I have ſhewed you we could be well contented to tarry out the time when it cometh thereunto. Therefore ye need not to be therein ſo curious, and we granting you thus much, and yet ye will obey no orders, I cannot tell what I ſhall ſay unto you.

Lincoln. We have been wonderfully troubled in the order of this diſputation. For firſt it was appointed us by my Lord the Archbiſhop, that we ſhould diſpute, and that in Latin, and then had we another commandment that we ſhould provide a Latin writing, and now at laſt we are willed to bring forth our writings in Engliſh.

At theſe words the Lord Keeper of the great Seal, the Archbiſhop, with all the Councel much muſed, and many murmured at ſuch his wrong report of the order well taken. Whereupon with an admiration the Lord Keeper anſwered; I marvel much of the uſing of your ſelf in this point, ſith I am aſſured the order was never otherwiſe taken, than that you ſhould bring forth in Engliſh writing what you had to ſay for your purpoſe.

Hereupon the Biſhops of Lichfield and Chicheſter, to excuſe my Lord of Lincoln, ſaid; We ſo underſtood the order, my Lords.

L. Keeper. How likely is that, ſith that it was ſo plainly told you? But to end theſe delays, I pray you follow the order appointed, and begin to intreat of the ſecond queſtion.

Lich. Cov. We were appointed this day by your Honours to bring in what we had to ſay in the firſt queſtion.

At the which ſaying the audience much grudged, who heard the former talk, contrary to ſuch his report.

L. Keeper. The order was taken, for that your writings were not ready the laſt time, that ye ſhould yield the ſame to theſe Men, meaning the Proteſtants, as ſoon as ye might, and upon the receipt of your writings, you ſhould have theirs, and this day you ſhould intreat of the ſecond queſtion, and of the third, if that ye had leaſure enough. This was the order, my Lords, except my memory much fail me. The ſame all the Councel affirmed.

Lincoln. We were willed then to bring in this day our writing for the firſt queſtion alſo.

L. Keep. Ah Sirs, if ye be ſo hard to be ſatisfied, and to encline to the truth, let my Lords here ſay what was then determined.

B. York. Ye are to blame to ſtand in this iſſue, for there was a plain decreed order taken for you to intreat of the ſecond queſtion. Wherefore leave you your contention herein, and ſhew what ye have to ſay in the ſecond queſtion.

L. Keeper. Go to now, begin my Lords.

Lich. Cov. It is contrary to the order in diſputations, that we ſhould begin.

Cheſter. We have the negative, they the affirmative, therefore they muſt begin.

Lich. Cov. They muſt firſt ſpeak what they can bring in againſt us, ſith we are the defending part.

Cheſter. So is the School manner, and likewiſe the manner in Weſtminſter-Hall is, that the Plaintiffs part ſhould ſpeak firſt, and then the accuſed party to anſwer.

Lich. Cov. I pray you let the propoſition be read, and then let us ſee who hath the negative part, and ſo let the other begin.

L. Keeper. The order was taken that ye ſhould begin.

Lich. Cov. But then we ſhould do againſt the School order.

L. Keeper.

L. Keeper. My Maſters, ye inforce much the School orders. I wonder much at it, ſith divers of thoſe orders are oftentimes taken for the exerciſe of youth, and ought to maintain a faſhion, and many preſcriptions, which we need not here to recite, much leſs obſerve. We are come hither to keep the order of God, and to ſet forth his truth, and hereunto we have taken as good order as we might, which lieth not in me to change.

Carlile. We are of the Catholick Church, and abide therein, and ſtand in the poſſeſſions of the truth; and therefore muſt they ſay what they have to alledge againſt us, and ſo we to maintain and defend our cauſe.

Lich. Cov. Yea, even ſo muſt the matter be ordered.

Cheſter. When they bring any thing againſt us, it is ſufficient for us to deny it: Therefore muſt they begin.

Lich. And when they affirm any thing, and we ſay nay, the proof belongeth to them, and ſo it behooveth them to ſhew firſt what they affirm, and for what cauſe and purpoſe.

L. Keeper. Here reſteth our purpoſe and whole matter, whether you will begin, if they do not, ſith it was determined ye ſhould begin.

Lich. Cov. We heard of no ſuch order.

L. Keeper. No did? Yes, and in the firſt queſtion ye began willingly. How cometh it to paſs that ye will not now do ſo?

Cheſter. Then had we the affirmation, which ſith that our adverſaries have now, they ſhould preſently begin.

This the Proteſtants denyed, ſaying, that they in the firſt day had the negative, wherein they did not yet refuſe to begin.

L. Keeper. If you have any thing to ſay, my Lords, to the purpoſe, ſay on.

Lich. A particular ſort of Men can never break an Univerſal Church, which we now maintain: and as for theſe Men, our adverſary part, I never thought that they would have done ſo much as have named themſelves to be of the Catholick Church, challenging the name as well as we.

Proteſtants. We do ſo, and we are of the true Catholick Church, and maintain the verity thereof.

Lincoln. Yet would ye overthrow all Catholick order.

Hor. I wonder that ye ſo much ſtand who ſhould begin.

Lincoln. You count it requiſite that we ſhould follow your orders, as we have taken the queſtions at your hands, in that ſort as you have affigned them.

Lich. Coven. Yea, even ſo we be driven to do now.

L. Keeper. Nay, I judge if ye mark the matter well, the queſtions are neither of their propounding them to you, nor of your device to them, but offered indifferently to you both.

Horne. Indeed, my Lords of the Queens moſt honourable Councel, theſe queſtions or propoſitions were propoſed unto us by your Honours, and they then having the preheminency, choſe to themſelves the negative, and yet freely began firſt: now again why do they not the like?

Lichfield being angry that he ſhould ſo ſtraitly ſpeak againſt them, went quite from the matter, ſaying; My L. Keeper of the great Seal, and you the reſt of the Queens moſt honourable Councel, I hope that you all, and the Queens Majeſty her ſelf, are inclined to favour the verity in all things, and the truth of the Catholick Church, which we muſt, will, or can do no otherwiſe, but earneſtly maintain to the uttermoſt of our power, and to this purpoſe let us now well weigh who are of the true Catholick Church, they, or we.

L. Keeper. Tarry, now you go from the matter, and make queſtions of your own.

Lichfield. Yet not ſtraying from his digreſſion, ſaid thus; We muſt needs go to work, and try that firſt, what Church they be of. For there are many Churches in Germany. Maſter Horne, Maſter Horne, I pray you which of theſe Churches are you of?

Horne. I am of Chriſts Catholick Church.

L. Keeper. Ye ought not thus to run into voluntary talk of your own inventing, nor to deviſe new queſtions of your own appointment, and thereby enter into that talk; ye ought not ſo to do. But ſay on, if you have any thing to ſay in this matter.

Lich. Nay, we muſt firſt thus go to work with them as I have ſaid, if that we will ſearch a truth: howbeit of the truth we have no doubt, for that we aſſuredly ſtand in it. Theſe Men come in, and they pretended to be doubtful. Therefore they ſhould firſt bring what they have to impugn or withſtand us withal. Anno 1558.

Winch. Let them begin; ſo will we go onward with our matter.

Cheſter. Otherwiſe, my Lords, if they ſhould not begin, but end the talk, then ſhould the verity on our ſides be not ſo well marked; for they ſhould depart ſpeaking laſt, cum applauſu populi, with the rejoycing triumph of the people.

Winch. Therefore I am reſolved that they ſhall begin ere that we ſay any thing.

Cheſter. I am ſorry, my Lords, that we ſhould ſo long ſtand in the matter with your Honours, and make ſo many words, and ſo much ado with you, whom we ought to obey: howbeit there is no indifferency if they begin not; and ſurely we think it meet, that they ſhould, for their parts, give us place.

Lichfield. Yea, that they ſhould, and ought to do, where any indifferency is uſed.

Aelmer. We give you the place (do we not?) and deprive you not of the preheminence, becauſe you are Biſhops; therefore I pray you begin.

The Biſhop. A goodly giving of place, I aſſure you: yea marry, ye gave place: ſuch words they uſed, with more ſcoffs.

L. Keeper. If ye make this Aſſembly gathered in vain, and will not go to the matter, let us riſe and depart.

Winch. Contented, let us be gone; for we will not in this point give over.

I pray you my Lords, require not at our hands that we ſhould be any cauſe of hinderance or let to our Religion, or give any ſuch evil example to our Poſterity, which we ſhould do if we gave over to them, which in no wiſe we may, or will do.

L. Keeper. Let us then break up, if you be thus minded. With theſe words the Biſhops were ſtraightways riſing. But then ſaid the Lord Keeper; Let us ſee whether every one of you be thus minded. How ſay you my Lord of Wincheſter, will you not begin to read your writing?

Winch. No ſurely, I am fully determined, and fully at a point therein, howſoever my brethren do.

Then the Lord Keeper asked how the Biſhop was called, who ſate next to Wincheſter in order. It was the Biſhop of Exeter, who being inquired his mind herein, anſwered that he was none of them. Then the Lord Keeper asked the other in order; and firſt Lincoln, who ſaid he was of the ſame mind that Wincheſter was of: and likewiſe anſwered Lichfield Coven. Cole, and Chadſey. Then Cheſter, being asked his ſentence, ſaid; My Lords, I ſay not that I will not read it, if ye command us; but we ought not to do it: yet I deſire your Honours not ſo to take it, as though I would not have read it. I mean not ſo.

L. Keeper. How ſay you to it, my Lord of Carlile?

Carlile. If they ſhould not read theirs this day, ſo that our writing may be laſt read, ſo am I contented that ours ſhall be firſt read.

L. Keeper. So would ye make orders your ſelves, and appoint that we ſhould ſpend one day in hearing you.

Abbot. Then the Abbot of Weſtminſter was asked his mind; who ſaid; If it pleaſe your Honours, I judge that my Lords here ſtay moſt on this point, that they ſeat when they ſhall begin firſt, and the other anſwer thereupon, there ſhall be no time given to them to ſpeak, which my Lord miſliketh.

L. Keeper. How can it otherwiſe be in talk appointed in ſuch Aſſembly and Audience: think you that there can be continual anſwering one another? when ſhould it after that ſort have an end?

Lich. Coven. It muſt be ſo in diſputation to ſeek out the truth.

L. Keeper. But how ſay you my Lord Abbot, are you of the mind it ſhall be read?

Abbot. Yea forſooth, my Lord, I am very well pleaſed withal. Harpsfield being inquired his mind, thought as the other did.

L. Keeper. My Lords, ſith that ye are not willing, but refuſe to read your writing after the order taken, we will break up and depart: and for that ye will not that we ſhould hear you, you may perhaps ſhortly hear of us.

Thus

Anno 1558.

THus have we declared the order and manner of this Communication or Conference at Weſtminſter, between theſe two parties, wherein if any Law or Order were broken, judge (good Reader) where the fault was, and conſider withal what theſe Papiſts be, from whom if ye take away their Sword and Authority, you ſee all their cunning, how ſoon it lieth in the duſt, or elſe why would they not abide the trial of writing? why would they, or durſt they not ſtand to the order agreed upon? Whether ſhould we ſay ignorance or ſtubbornneſs to be in them more, or both together? Who firſt being gently (as is ſaid) and favourably required to keep the order appointed, they would not. Then being ſecondly (as appeared by the Lord Keepers words) preſſed more earneſtly, they neither regarding the Authority, &c. of that place, nor their own reputation, nor the credit of the cauſe, utterly refuſed that to do. And finally, being again particularly every of them apart diſtinctly by name required to underſtand their Opinions therein, they all ſaving one (which was the Abbot of Weſtminſter, having ſome more conſideration of order and his duty of obedience than the other) utterly and plainly denied to have their Book read, ſome of them as more earneſtly than other, ſo alſo ſome other more undiſcreetly and unreverently than others. Whereupon giving ſuch example of diſorder, ſtubbornneſs, and ſelf-will, as hath not been ſeen and ſuffered in ſuch an honourable Aſſembly, being of the two Eſtates of this Realm, the Nobility and the Commons, beſides the preſence of the Queens Majeſties moſt honourable Privy Councel, the ſame Aſſembly was diſmiſſed, and the godly and moſt Chriſtian purpoſe of the Queens Majeſty made fruſtrate. And afterward, for the contempt ſo notoriouſly made, the Biſhops of Wincheſter and Lincoln, having moſt obſtinately both diſobeyed common Authority, and varied manifeſtly from their own order, and ſpecially Lincoln, who ſhewed more folly than the other, were condignly committed to the Tower of London, and the reſt (ſaving the Abbot of Weſtminſter) ſtood bound to make daily their perſonal appearance before the Councel, and not to depart the City of London and Weſtminſter, until further order were taken with them for their diſobedience and contempt.

Biſhops committed to the Tower.

Beſides the former Proteſtation or Libel written and exhibited by the Proteſtants concerning the firſt queſtion, there was alſo another like writing of the ſaid Proteſtants made of the ſecond queſtion, but not publiſhed, which if it come to our hand, we will likewiſe impart unto thee.

As theſe Biſhops above-named were committed to the Tower, ſo Boner Biſhop of London, about the ſame time was commanded to the Marſhalſey, where he both in his blind bloody Hereſie, and alſo in his deſerved captivity, long remained, abiding the Queens pleaſure. Gods pleaſure, I beſeech him, ſo be wrought on that perſon, that the Church of Chriſts Flock, if they can take or look for no goodneſs of that man to come, yet they may take of him and of other no more harm hereafter than they have done already. We all beſeech thee this, O Lord eternal, Per Chriſtum Dominum noſtrum, Amen.

Boner caſt in the Marſhalſey.

About this time, at the beginning of the flouriſhing Reign of Queen Elizabeth, was a Parliament ſummoned and holden at Weſtminſter, wherein was much debating about matters touching Religion, and great ſtudy on both parts imployed, the one to retain ſtill, the other to impugn the Doctrine and Faction which before in Queen Maries time had been eſtabliſhed. But eſpecially here is to be noted, that though there lacked no induſtry on the Papiſts ſide, to hold faſt that which they moſt cruelly from time to time had ſtudied, and by all means practiſed to come by: yet notwithſtanding, ſuch was the Providence of God at that time, that for lack of the other Biſhops, whom the Lord had taken away by death a little before, the reſidue that there were left, could do the leſs; and in very need, God be praiſed therefore, did nothing at all in effect. Although yet notwithſtanding there lacked in them neither will nor labour to do what they could; if their cruel ability there might have ſerved. But namely amongſt all other, not only the induſtrious courage of Dr. Story, but alſo his words in this Parliament are worthy to be known of Poſterity: who like a ſtout and furious Champion of the Popes ſide, to declare himſelf how luſty he was, and what he had and would do in his Maſters quarrel, ſhamed not openly in the ſaid Parliament Houſe to braſt out into ſuch an impudent ſort of words, as was a wonder to all good ears to hear, and no leſs worthy of Hiſtory.

Dr. Stories impudent words in the Parliament.

The ſum of which his ſhameleſs talk was uttered to this effect: Firſt, beginning with himſelf, he declared, That whereas he was noted commonly abroad, and much complained of, to have been a great doer, and a ſetter forth of ſuch Religion, Orders, and Proceedings, as of his late Soveraign that dead is, Queen Mary, were ſet forth in this Realm, he denied nothing the ſame, proteſting moreover that he therein had done nothing, but that both his Conſcience did lead him thereunto, and alſo his Commiſſion did as well then command him, as now alſo doth diſcharge him for the ſame, being no leſs ready now alſo to do the like, and more, in caſe he by this Queen were authoriſed likewiſe, and commanded thereunto. Wherefore, as I ſee (ſaith he) nothing to be aſhamed of, ſo leſs I ſee to be ſorry for, but rather ſaid that he was ſorry for this, becauſe he had done no more than he did, and that in executing thoſe Laws they had not been more vehement and ſevere. Wherein he ſaid there was no default in him, but in them, whom he both oft and earneſtly had exhorted to the ſame, being therefore not a little grieved with them, for that they laboured only about the young and little ſprigs and twigs, while they ſhould have ſtricken at the root, and clean have rooted it out, &c. And concerning his perſecuting and burning them, he denied not, but that he was once at the burning of an Earwig (for ſo he termed it) at Uxbridge, where he toſt a Fagot at his face as he was ſinging Pſalms, and ſet a Winebuſh of Thorns under his feet, a little to prick him, with many other words of like effect. In the which words he named moreover Sir Philip Hobby, and another Knight of Kent, with ſuch other of the richer and higher degree, whom his counſel was to pluck at, and to bring them under coram, wherein (ſaid he) if they had followed my advice, then had they done well and wiſely. This, or much like was the effect of the ſhameleſs and tyrannical excuſe of himſelf, more meet to ſpeak with the voice of a Beaſt, than a Man.

The words of Dr. Story in the Parliament Houſe.

This Martyr burnt at Uxbridge was Maſter Denley.

Although in this Parliament ſome diverſity there was of judgment and opinion between parties, yet notwithſtanding, through the merciful goodneſs of the Lord, the true cauſe of the Goſpel had the upper hand, the Papiſts hope was fruſtrate, and their rage abated, the order and proceedings of King Edwards time concerning Religion was revived again, the Supremacy of the Pope aboliſhed, the Articles and bloody Statutes of Queen Mary repealed; briefly, the furious Fire-brands of cruel Perſecution, which had conſumed ſo many poor mens bodies, were now extinct and quenched.

Finally, the old Biſhops were depoſed, for that they refuſed the Oath in renouncing the Pope, and not ſubſcribing to the Queens juſt and lawful Title. In whoſe rooms and places, firſt for Cardinal Poole ſucceeded Dr. Matthew Parker, Archbiſhop of Canterbury. In the place of Heath ſucceeded Dr. Young. Inſtead of Boner, Edmund Grindall was Biſhop of London. For Hopton, Thurlby, Tonſtall, Pates, Chriſtopherſon, Peto, Coates, Morgan, Feaſie, White, Oglethorpe, &c. were placed Dr. John Parkhurſt in Norwich, Dr. Coxe in Ely, Jewel in Saliſbury, Pilkenton in Dureſm, Dr. Sands in Worceſter, Mr. Downam in Weſtcheſter, Bentam in Coventry and Lichfield, David in S. Davids, Ally in Exeter, Horne in Wincheſter, Story in Hereford, Beſt in Carliſle, Bullingham in Lincoln, Scamler in Peterborough, Bartlet in Bathe, Geſt in Rocheſter, Barlo in Chicheſter, &c.

Anno 1558.

The Appendix of ſuch Notes and Matters, as either have been in this Hiſtory omitted, or newly inſerted.

IN the ſtory of Sir Roger Acton above mentioned, I find that with him were taken many other perſons, that all the Priſons in and about London were replenished with People. The chief of them, which were twenty and nine, were condemned of Hereſie, and attainted of High Treaſon, as movers of War againſt their King, by the temporal Law in the Guildhall, the twelfth day of December, and adjudged to be drawn and hanged for Treaſon, and for Hereſie to be conſumed with fire, Gallows and all, which Judgment was executed in January following on the ſaid Sir Roger Acton, and twenty eight other.

Some ſay that the occaſion of their death was the conveighance of the Lord Cobham out of Priſon. Other write that it was both for Treaſon (as the Adverſaries termed it) and Hereſie.

Certain affirm, that it was for feigned cauſes ſurmiſed by the Spiritualty, more of diſpleaſure than truth, as ſeemeth more near to the truth.

Concerning John Frith, of his Life and Story this followeth more to be added.

FIrſt, This John Frith was born in the Town of Weſtrame in Kent, who after by diligent Eſpials was taken in Eſſex flying beyond the Seas, and brought before the Councel, Sir Thomas More then being Chancellor, and ſo from them committed unto the Tower, where he remained Priſoner the ſpace of a quarter of a year, or thereabout. It chanced that Doctor Currein, ordinary Chaplain unto King Henry the Eighth, preached a Sermon in Lent before his Majeſty. And there very ſore inveighing againſt the Sacramentaries (as they them termed and named) which favoured not the groſs opinion that Chriſts Body was carnally real in the Sacrament, he ſo far diſcourſed in that matter, that at the length he brake out thus far and ſaid; It is no marvel though this abominable Hereſie do much prevail amongſt us; for there is one now in the Tower of London ſo bold as to write in the defence of that Hereſie, and yet no man goeth about his Reformation, meaning John Frith, who then had anſwered Sir Thomas More in writing againſt a Confutation of that erroneous Opinion, which of late before the ſaid Mr. More had written againſt John Friths Aſſertion in that behalf. This Sermon of purpoſe was deviſed and appointed by the Biſhop of Wincheſter and others, to ſeek the deſtruction of Frith, by putting the King in remembrance that the ſaid Frith was in the Tower there ſtaid, rather for his ſafeguard than for his puniſhment, by ſuch as favoured him, as the Lord Cromwell, who being Vicegerent in Cauſes Eccleſiaſtical came then into ſuſpicion therefore. For in ſuch ſort was the matter handled before the King, that all men might well underſtand what they meant. The King then being in no point reſolved of the true and ſincere underſtanding of the Doctrine of that Article, but rather a perverſe ſtout Adverſary to the contrary, called to him my Lord of Canterbury and my Lord Cromwell, and willed them forthwith to call Frith unto Examination, ſo that he might either be compelled to recant, or elſe by the Law to ſuffer condign puniſhment.

Friths long protract in the Tower without Examination was ſo heinouſly taken of the King, that now my Lord of Canterbury with other Biſhops, as Stokeſley then Biſhop of London, and other learned men were undelayedly appointed to examine Frith. And for that there ſhould be no concourſe of Citizens at the ſaid Examination; my Lord of Canterbury removed to Croydon, unto whom reſorted the reſt of the Commiſſioners. Now before the day of Execution appointed, my Lord of Canterbury ſent one of his Gentlemen and one of his Porters, whoſe name was Perlebeane, a Welchman born, to fetch John Frith from the Tower unto Croydon. This Gentleman had both my Lords Letters and the Kings Ring unto my Lord Fitzwilliams Conſtable of the Tower, then lying in Canon-Row at Weſtminſter in extream anguiſh and pain of the Strangullion, for the delivery of the Priſoner. Maſter Fitzwilliams more paſſionate than patient, underſtanding for what purpoſe my Lords Gentleman was come, banned and curſed Frith and all other Hereticks, ſaying, Take this my Ring unto the Lieutenant of the Tower, and receive your man your Heretick with you, and I am glad that I am rid of him. When Frith was delivered unto my Lord of Canterburits Gentleman, they twain, with Perlebeane, ſitting in a Wherry, and rowing towards Lambeth: The ſaid Gentleman much lamenting in his mind the infelicity of the ſaid Frith, began in this wiſe to exhort him to conſider in what eſtate he was, a man altogether caſt away in the world, if he did not look wiſely to himſelf. And yet though his Cauſe were never ſo dangerous, he might ſomewhat in relenting to Authority, and ſo giving place for a time, help both himſelf out of the trouble, and when opportunity and occaſion ſhould ſerve, prefer his Cauſe which he then went about to defend, declaring further, that he had many well-willers and friends, which would ſtand on his ſide ſo far forth as poſſibly they were able and durſt do; adding hereunto, that it were great pity that he being of ſuch ſingular knowledge, both in the Latin, Greek, and both ready and ripe in all kind of Learning, and that namely as well in the Scriptures, as in the ancient Doctors, ſhould now ſuddenly ſuffer all thoſe ſingular gifts to periſh with him with little commodity or profit to the World, and leſs comfort to his Wife and Children, and other his Kinsfolks and Friends. And as for the verity of your Opinion in the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of our Saviour Chriſt, it is ſo untimely opened here among us in England, that you ſhall rather do harm than good: wherefore be wiſe, and be ruled by good counſel, until a better opportunity may ſerve.

This I am ſure of (quoth the Gentleman) that my Lord Cromwell and my Lord of Canterbury much favouring you, and knowing you to be an eloquent learned young man, and now towards the felicity of your life, young in years, old in knowledge, and of great forwardneſs and likelyhood to be a moſt profitable Member for this Realm, will never permit you to ſuſtain any open ſhame, if you will ſomewhat be adviſed by their counſel: on the other ſide, if you ſtand ſtiff to your Opinion, it is not poſſible to ſave your life. For like as you have good Friends, ſo have you mortal Foes and Enemies.

I moſt heartily thank you, quoth Maſter Frith unto the Gentleman, both for your good will, and for your counſel: by the which I well perceive that you mind well unto me; howbeit my Cauſe and Conſcience is ſuch, that in no wiſe I either may or can for any worldly reſpect, without danger of damnation, ſtart aſide and flie from the true Knowledge and Doctrine which I have conceived of the Supper of the Lord, or the Communion, otherwiſe called the Sacrament of the Altar: For if it be my chance to be demanded what I think in that behalf, I muſt needs ſay my knowledge and my conſcience, as partly I have written therein already, though I ſhould preſently loſe twenty lives, if I had ſo many. And this you ſhall well underſtand that I am not unfurniſhed, either of Scriptures or ancient Doctors, Schoolmen, or other for my defence; ſo that if I may be indifferently heard, I am ſure that mine Adverſaries cannot juſtly condemn me or mine Aſſertion, but that they ſhall condemn with me both S. Auguſtine, and the moſt part of the old Writers: yea, the very Biſhops of Rome of the oldeſt ſort ſhall alſo ſay for me, and defend my Cauſe. Yea marry, quoth the Gentleman, you ſay well; if you might be indifferently heard. But I much doubt thereof, for that our Maſter Chriſt was not indifferently heard heard, nor ſhould be, as I think, if he were now preſent again in the World, ſpecially in this your Opinion, the ſame being ſo odious unto the World, and we ſo far off from the true knowledge thereof.

Well, well (quoth Frith then unto the Gentleman) I know very well, that this Doctrine of the Sacrament of the Altar, which I hold, and have opened contrary to the opinion of this Realm, is very hard meat to be digeſted both of the Clergy and Laity. But this I will ſay to you, taking the Gentleman by the hand, that if you live but twenty years more, whatſoever become of me, you ſhall ſee this whole Realm of mine opinion concerning this Sacrament of the Altar: namely, the whole eſtate of the ſame, though ſome ſort of men particularly ſhall not be fully perſwaded therein. And if it come not ſo to paſs, then account me the vaineſt man that ever you heard ſpeak with tongue: Beſides this, you ſay that my death would be ſorrowful and uncomfortable unto my Friends.

I grant (quoth he) that for a ſmall time it would ſo be. But if I ſhould ſo mollifie, qualifie, and temper my cauſe in ſuch ſort as to deſerve only to be kept in Priſon, that would not only be a much longer grief unto me, but alſo to my friends would breed no ſmall diſquietneſs both of body and mind. And therefore all things well and rightly pondered, my death in this cauſe ſhall be better unto me and all mine, than life in continual bondage and penuries. And Almighty God knoweth what he hath to do with his poor Servant, whoſe cauſe I know defend, and not mine own; from the which I aſſuredly do intend (God willing) never to ſtart, or otherwiſe to give place, ſo long as God will give me life.

This communication, or like in effect, my Lord of Canterburies Gentleman and Frith had, coming in a Wherry upon the Thames from the Tower to Lambeth.

Now when they were landed, after ſome repaſt by them taken at Lambeth, the Gentleman, the Porter, and Frith, went forward towards Croydon on foot. This Gentleman ſtill lamenting with himſelf the hard and cruel deſtiny towards the ſaid Frith; namely, if he once came amongſt the Biſhops; and now alſo perceiving the exceeding conſtancy of Frith, deviſed with himſelf ſome way or means to conveigh him clean out of their hands; and thereupon conſidering that there were no more perſons there to conveigh the Priſoner, but the Porter and himſelf, he took in hand to win the Porter to his purpoſe. Quoth the Gentleman unto Perlebeane the Porter (they twain privately walking by themſelves without the hearing of Frith) you have heard this man I am ſure, and noted his talk ſince he came from the Tower. Yea, that I have right-well marked him (quoth the Porter) and I never heard ſo conſtant a man, nor ſo eloquent a perſon. You have heard nothing, quoth the Gentleman, in reſpect both of his knowledge and eloquence: if he might liberally either in Univerſity or Pulpit declare his Learning, you would then much more marvel at his Knowledge. I take him to be ſuch a one of his Age in all kind of learning and knowledge of Tongues, as this Realm never yet in mine opinion brought forth; and yet thoſe ſingular Gifts in him are no more conſidered of our Biſhops, than if he were a very Dolt or an Idiot; yea, they abhor him as a Devil therefore, and covet utterly to extinguiſh him as a Member of the Devil, without any conſideration of Gods ſpecial Gifts. Marry (quoth the Porter) if there were nothing elſe in him but the conſideration of his perſonage both comly and amiable, and of natural diſpoſition, gentle, meek, and humble; it were pity he ſhould be caſt away. Caſt away (quoth the Gentleman?) He ſhall be ſure caſt away if we once bring him to Croydon, and ſurely (quoth the Gentleman) before God I ſpeak it, if thou Perlebeane wert of my mind, we would never bring him thither. Say you ſo, quoth the Porter? I know that you be of a great deal more credit than I am in this matter; and therefore if you can deviſe honeſtly or find ſome reaſonable excuſe, whereby we may let him go and provide for himſelf, I will with all my heart condeſcend to your deviſe. As for that (quoth the Gentleman) it is already invented how and which ways he ſhall conveigh himſelf without any great danger or diſpleaſure taken towards us, as the matter ſhall be handled. You ſee (quoth the Gentleman) yonder hill before us, named Briſtow Cawſie, two miles from London, there are great Woods on both ſides, when we come there we will permit Frith to go into the Woods on the left hand of the way, whereby he may conveigh himſelf into Kent among his Friends, for he is a Kentiſh man born, and when he is gone, we will linger an hour or twain about the Highway, until that it ſomewhat draw towards the night. Then in great haſte we will approach unto Streatham, which is a mile and a half off, and make an out-cry in the Town that our Priſoner is broken from us into the Woods on the right hand towards Wayneſworth, ſo that we will draw as many as we may of the Town to ſearch the Country that way for our Priſoner, declaring that we followed above a mile or more, and at length loſt him in the Woods, becauſe we had no more company, and ſo we will rather than fail lye out one night in ſearching for him, and ſend word from Streatham to my L. of Canterbury at Croydon in the Evening of the Priſoners eſcape, and to what Coaſt he is fled. So that by the Morning, if he have any good luck at all, he will ſo provide for himſelf, that the Biſhops ſhall fail of their purpoſe. I aſſure you (quoth Perlebeane) I like very well the deviſe herein; and therefore go ye to Frith, and declare what we have deviſed for his delivery: for now we are almoſt at the place.

When my Lord of Canterburies Gentleman came nigh to the Hill, he joyned himſelf in Company with the ſaid Frith, and calling him by his name, ſaid, Now Maſter Frith, let us twain commune together another whiles: you muſt conſider, that the Journey which I have now taken in hand thus in bringing you to Croydon, as a ſheep to the ſlaughter, ſo grieveth me, and as it were overwhelmeth me in cares and ſorrows, that I little paſs what danger I fall in, ſo that I could find the means to deliver you out of the Lyons mouth. And yet yonder good Fellow and I have ſo deviſed a means, whereby you may both eaſily eſcape from this great and imminent danger at hand, and we alſo be rid from any vehement ſuſpicion. And thereupon declared unto Frith the full proceſs diſcourſed before, how every thing in order ſhould be handled.

When Frith had diligently heard all the matter concerning his delivery, he ſaid to the Gentleman, Oh good Lord, with a ſmiling countenance, is this the effect of your ſecret conſultation, thus long between you twain? Surely, ſurely, you have loſt a great deal more labour in times paſt, and ſo are you like to do this; for if you ſhould both leave me here, and go to Croydon, declaring to the Biſhops, that you had loſt Frith, I would ſurely follow after as faſt as I might, and bring them news that I had found and brought Frith again. Do you think (quoth he) that I am affraid to declare my opinion unto the Biſhops of England in a manifeſt Truth?

You are a fond man (quoth the Gentleman) thus to talk; as though your reaſoning with them might do ſome good. But I do much marvel, that you were ſo willing to flie the Realm before you were taken, and now ſo unwilling to ſave your ſelf. Marry, there was and is a great diverſity of eſcaping between the one and the other, quoth Frith.

Before, I was indeed deſirous to eſcape, becauſe I was not attached, but at liberty, which liberty I would fain have enjoyed for the maintenance of my ſtudy beyond the Sea, where I was Reader in the Greek Tongue, according to S. Paul's counſel. Howbeit, now being taken by the higher Power, and as it were by Almighty Gods permiſſion and providence delivered into the hands of the Biſhops, only for Religion and Doctrines ſake, namely, ſuch as in conſcience, and under pain of damnation, I am bound to maintain and defend, if I ſhould now ſtart aſide and run away, I ſhould run from my God, and from the teſtimony of his holy Word, worthy then of a thouſand Hells. And therefore I moſt heartily thank you both for your good wills towards me, beſeeching you to bring me where I was appointed to be brought; for elſe I will go thither all alone. And ſo with a chearful and merry countenance he went with them, ſpending the time in pleaſant and godly communication, until they came to Croydon, wherefore that night he was well entertained in the Porters Lodge. On the morrow he was called before certain Bps. and other learned men, ſitting in Commiſſion with the L. of Canterbury, terbury, to be examined, where he ſhewed himſelf paſſing ready and ripe in anſwering to all Objections, as ſome then reported, incredibly and contrary to all mens expectations. And his Allegations, both out of S. Auguſtine, and other ancient Fathers of the Church, were ſuch, that ſome of them much doubted of S. Auguſtine's Authority in that behalf. Inſomuch, that it was reported of ſuch as were nigh and about the Archbiſhop of Canterbury (who then was not fully reſolved of the ſincere truth of that Article) that when they had finiſhed their Examination of Frith, the Archbiſhop conferring with Doctor Heath privately between themſelves, ſaid, This man hath wonderfully travelled in this matter, and yet in mine Opinion he taketh the Doctors amiſs. Well, my Lord, ſhould Doctor Heath ſay, there was no man that could avoid his Authorities of S. Auguſtine. Wherein, ſaid my Lord? Then Doctor Heath began to repeat the ſaid Authorities of S. Auguſtine again, inferring and applying them ſo ſtraightly againſt my Lord of Canterbury, that my Lord was driven to this ſhot-anker, and ſaid, I ſee by it, quoth he to Heath, that you with a little more ſtudy will be eaſily brought to Frith's opinion, or ſuch like words in effect: and ſome Chaplains there were of my Lord of Canterburies, which openly reported, that Doctor Heath was as able to defend Frith's Aſſertions in the Sacrament, as Frith was himſelf.

This learned young man being thus throughly ſifted at Croydon, to underſtand what he could ſay or do in his Cauſe, there was no man willing to prefer him to anſwer in open Diſputation as poor Lambert was. But now without regard of Learning or good Knowledge, he was ſent and detained unto the Butchers ſtall; I mean Biſhop Stokeley's Conſiſtory, there to hear not the opinion of S. Auguſtine, and other ancient Fathers of Chriſts Primitive Church of the ſaid Sacrament, but either to be inſtructed and to hear the maimed and half cut away Sacrament of Antichriſt, the Biſhop of Rome, with the groſs and fleſhly imagination thereof, or elſe to periſh in the fire, as he moſt conſtantly did, after he had before the Biſhop of London, Wincheſter, and Chicheſter, in the Conſiſtory in Paul's Church, moſt plainly and ſincerely confeſſed his Doctrine and Faith in this weighty matter, &c.

A note of William Plane.

IN the later days of King Henry the Eighth, about that time Anne Askew was in trouble, one Doctor Crome was travelled withal to recant, for that he had preached ſomewhat againſt things maintained of the Papiſts in the Church. And one Mr. Tracy hearing thereof, brought a Letter ſecretly to one Plane dwelling in Bouge-Row, and deſired him to carry it to Dr. Crome; which Letter tended to the end to perſwade him not to recant, but to ſtand in the Truth. When this good man, William Plane, had it, as he was ever willing to further the Truth, ſo he gladly delivered the ſame to Doctor Crome. Which when he had received, and read it, he laid it down upon the Table, and after the ſaid William Plane was gone, an arch Papiſt came thither to perſwade him to recant, and in travelling with him he found the ſaid Letter on the Boord, which when he had read, he examined him from whence it came; ſo what through flattery and threatning, he declared who was the Meſſenger that brought it. Then was William Plane ſent for, caſt in the Tower, where he lay miſerably thirteen weeks, none admitted to come to him; in which time he was extreamly racked, within half a finger breadth as far as Anne Askew: but they could never get of him of whom he had the Letter, nor for all their extremity would he accuſe any man; ſo in the end he was delivered out of ahe Tower, and lived about three years after, and ſo godly ended his life. But unto this day would that Tracy never inquire in what condition his Wife and Children were left, although he was his Meſſenger in carrying the Letter: But (good Lord) the ſtrange Diſeaſe that grew upon him by that extream racking, as it is odious to rehearſe, ſo I will wiſh them to repent that were the Inſtruments of his Torments, if they be alive, and warn other Papiſts to the ſame, in whom any cruelty hath been in the like cauſe. Anno 1558.

A note of Lady Jane.

THE Lady Jane, ſhe whom the Lord Guilford married, being on a time, when ſhe was very young, at Newhall in Eſſex at the Lady Maries, was by one Lady Anne Wharton deſired to walk, and they paſſing by the Chappel, the Lady Wharton made low curteſie to the Popiſh Sacrament hanging on the Altar: which when the Lady Jane ſaw, ſhe marvelled why ſhe did ſo, and asked her whether the Lady Mary were there, or not. Unto whom the Lady Wharton anſwered, No: but ſhe ſaid that ſhe made her curteſie to him that made us all. Why (quoth the Lady Jane) how can he be there that made us all, and the Baker made him? This her Anſwer coming to the Lady Maries ear, ſhe did never love her after, as is credibly reported, but eſteemed her as the reſt of that Chriſtian Profeſſion.

The Copy of Queen Maries Letter to the Duke of Norfolk.

A Letter of Q. Mary to the Duke of Norfolk.

RIght truſty and right intirely beloved Coſin, we greet you well, and having by the aſſiſtance of God, and our loving Subjects, diſcomfited Wyat and the other Rebels of our County of Kent, who having paſſed the River of Kingſton, came back again towards London, and were encountred above Charing-Croſs, and there were overthrown, and the moſt part of them were there ſlain; Wyat, and three of the Cobhams, Bret, Knevet, Rudſtone, Iſeley, and other the chief Captains taken Priſoners: We have thought good as well to give you knowledge hereof, to the end ye may with us, and the reſt of our loving Subjects, rejoyce, and give God thanks for this our Victory, as alſo further to ſignifie unto you, that where the ſaid Rebel did alway pretend the matter of our Marriage to be the cauſe of this unlawful ſtir, now plainly appeareth by good and ſubſtantial Examinations of divers of the ſaid Traitors, that whatſoever they pretended, the final meaning was to have deprived us from our eſtate and dignity Royal, and conſequently, to have deſtroyed our Perſon. Which thing, as we do aſcertain you of our Honour to be matter of truth, ſo we pray you to cauſe the ſame to be publiſhed in all places of thoſe our Counties of Norfolk and Suffolk, to the intent our good and loving Subjects thereof be no more abuſed with ſuch falſe pretenſes, or other untrue Rumours or Tales, by whomſoever the ſame ſhall be ſet forth. And now things being in this ſort quieted, we cannot but give you thanks for the readineſs that you have been in with the Force of our ſaid Country, to have ſerved us if need had been, praying you to do the like on our behalf to all the Gentlemen and others with you, with whom nevertheleſs we require you to take ſuch orders as the Force of our ſaid Country may be ſtill in like readineſs, to be imployed under good and ſubſtantial Captains, to be choſen of the Gentlemen inheritors within the ſaid Shire, for our further Service upon one hours warning, whenſoever we ſhall require the ſame. And in the mean time our pleaſure is, that ye have good regard to the quietneſs and good order of the Country, ſpecially to the apprehenſion of ſpreaders of falſe and untrue Tales and Rumours, whereby ye ſhall both deſerve well of your whole Country, and alſo do acceptable Service, which we will not fail to remember accordingly. Given under our Signet at our Palace of Weſtminſter, the Eighth of February, the firſt year of our Reign.

In haſte.

Anno 1558.

A Treatiſe of Mr. Nicholas Ridley, in the name, as it ſeemeth, of the whole Clergy, to King Edward the Sixth, concerning Images not to be ſet up, nor worſhipped in Churches.

¶ Certain Reaſons which move us that we cannot with ſafe Conſciences give our aſſent, that the Images of Chriſt, &c. ſhould be placed and erected in Churches.

Firſt, the words of the Commandment, Exod. 20. Thou ſhalt not make to thy ſelf any graven Image, &c. And the ſame is repeated more plainly, Deut. 27. Maledictus homo qui facit ſculptile & conflatile, &c. ponitque illud in abſcondito, &c. That is, Curſed is the man which maketh a graven or molten Image, &c. and ſetteth it in a ſecret place; and all the People ſhall ſay, Amen.

In the firſt place, theſe words are to be noted, Thou ſhalt not make to thy ſelf, that is, to any uſe of Religion.

In the latter place, theſe words, And ſetteth it in a ſecret place; for no man durſt then commit Idolatry openly. So that conferring the places, it doth evidently appear, That Images both for uſe of Religion, and in place of peril for Idolatry, are forbidden.

God, knowing the inclination of man to Idolatry, ſheweth the reaſon why he made this general prohibition, Ne forte errore deceptus adores ea & colas: That is to ſay, Leſt peradventure thou being deceived, ſhouldſt bow down to them and worſhip them.

This general Law is generally to be obſerved, notwithſtanding that peradventure a great number cannot be hurt by them, which may appear by the example following.

God forbade the People to joyn their Children in marriage with ſtrangers, adding the reaſon; Quia ſeducet filium tuum, ne ſequatur me: That is, For ſhe will ſeduce thy ſon, that he ſhall not follow me, Deut. 7.

Moſes was not deceived or ſeduced by Jethroes daughter, nor Boaz by Ruth, being a woman of Moab. And yet for all that, the general Law was to be obſerved, Thou ſhalt joyn no marriage with them. And ſo likewiſe, Thou ſhalt not make to thy ſelf any graven Image, &c.

Deut. 4. God giveth a ſpecial charge to avoid Images. Beware (ſaith he) that thou forget not the Covenant of the Lord thy God which he made with thee, and ſo make to thy ſelf any graven Image of any thing which the Lord hath forbidden thee, for the Lord thy God is a conſuming Fire, and a jealous God.

If thou have Children and Nephews, and do well in the Land, and being deceived, do make to your ſelves any graven Image, doing evil before the Lord your God, and provoke him to anger, I do this day call Heaven and Earth to witneſs, that you ſhall quickly periſh out of the Land, which ye ſhall poſſeſs, ye ſhall not dwell in it any longer time, but the Lord will deſtroy you, and ſcatter you amongſt all Nations.

Note what ſolemn obteſtation God uſeth, and what grievous puniſhments he threatneth to the breakers of the ſecond Commandment.

In the Tabernacle and Temple of God no Image was by God appointed openly to be ſet, nor by practice afterwards uſed or permitted, ſo long as Religion was purely obſerved; ſo that the uſe and execution of the Law is a good Interpreter of the true meaning of the ſame.

If by virtue of the ſecond Commandment Images were not lawful in the Temple of the Jews, then by the ſame Commandment they are not lawful in the Churches of Chriſtians. For being a moral Commandment, and not ceremonial (for by conſent of Writers, only a part of the Precept of obſerving the Sabbath is ceremonial) it is a perpetual Commandment, and bindeth us as well as the Jews.

The Jews by no means would conſent to Herod, Pilate, or Petronius, that Images ſhould be placed in the Temple at Jeruſalem, but rather offered themſelves to the death, than to aſſent unto it. Who, beſides that they are commended by Joſephus for obſerving the meaning of the Law, would not have indangered themſelves ſo far, if they had thought Images had been indifferent in the Temple of God. For as S. Paul ſaith, 2 Cor. 6. Quid Templo Dei cum Simulachris, &c. Joſeph. Antiq. lib. 17. cap. 8. li. 18. cap. 5. & 15.

Gods Scripture doth in no place commend the uſe of Images, but in a great number of places doth diſallow and condemn them.

They are called in the Book of Wiſdom, The Trap and Snare of the feet of the Ignorant.

It is ſaid that the Invention of them was the beginning of Spiritual Fornication: And that they were not from the beginning, neither ſhall they continue to the end.

In the 15*th* Chapter of the ſame Book it is ſaid, Umbra pictura, labor ſine fructu, &c. And again, They are worthy of death both that put their truſt in them, and that make them, and that love them, and that worſhip them.

The Pſalms and Prophets are full of like Sentences, and how can we then praiſe the thing which Gods Spirit doth always diſpraiſe?

Furthermore, an Image made by a Father (as appeareth in the ſame Book) for the memorial of his Son departed, was the firſt invention of Images, and occaſion of Idolatry, Wiſdom 14.

How much more then ſhall an Image made in the memory of Chriſt, and ſet up in the place of Religion, occaſion the ſame offence? Euſeb. Eccleſ. Hiſt. lib. 7. c. 18. Images have their beginning from the Heathen, and of no good ground; therefore they cannot be profitable to Chriſtians. Whereunto Athanaſius agreeth, writing of Images againſt the Gentiles: Athanaſius cont. Gentes, Ἡ τῶν εἰδώλων ἔυρεσις οὐκ ἀπὸ ἀγαθοῦ, ἀλλ' ἀπὸ κακίας γέγονε, καὶ ὃ δὲ τὴν ἀρχὴν ἔχον κακὴν, ἐκ κακοῦ πᾶσι κάλον κρινεῖν, ὅλον ὂν φαῦλον. That is to ſay, The invention of Images came of no good, but of evil, and whatſoever hath an evil beginning, can never in any thing be judged good, ſeeing it is wholly naught.

S. John ſaith, My little Children, beware of Images: but to ſet them in the Churches, which are places dedicated to the Service and Invocation of God, and that over the Lords Table, being the higheſt and moſt honourable place where moſt danger of abuſe both is, and ever hath been, is not to beware of them, nor to flee from them, but rather to imbrace and receive them. Tertullian expounding the ſame words, writeth thus, Lib. de corona militis. Filioli, cuſtodite vos ab Idolis; non jam ab idolatria quaſi ab officio, ſed ab Idolis; i. ab ipſa effigie eorum. That is to ſay, Little Children, keep your ſelves from the ſhape it ſelf, or form of them.

Images in the Church either ſerve to edifie or to deſtroy. If they edifie, then there is one kind of edification which the Scriptures neither teach nor command, but always diſallow; if they deſtroy, they are not to be uſed; for in the Church of God all things ought to be done to edifie, 1 Cor. 14.

The Commandment of God is, Thou ſhalt not lay a ſtumbling block or a ſtone before the blind: and curſed is he that maketh the blind wander in his way.

The ſimple and unlearned People, who have been ſo long under blind Guides, are blind in matters of Religion, and inclined to Error and Idolatry. Therefore to ſet Images before them to ſtumble at (Nam laquei pedibus inſipientium ſunt; that is, They be Snares and Traps for the feet of the Ignorant) or to lead them out of the true way, is not only againſt the Commandment of God, but deſerveth alſo the malediction and curſe of God, Wiſd. 14.

The uſe of Images is to the learned and confirmed in knowledge, neither neceſſary nor profitable. To the ſuperſtitious a confirmation in Error; To the ſimple and weak an occaſion of fall, and very offenſive and wounding of their Conſciences; and therefore very dangerous. For S. Paul ſaith, 1 Cor. 9. offending the Brethren, and wounding their weak Conſciences, they ſin againſt Chriſt. And Matth. 18. Wo be to him by whom offence or occaſion of falling cometh, it were better that a milſtone were tied about his neck, and he caſt into the Sea, than to offend one of the little ones that believe in Chriſt. And where objection may be made, that ſuch offence may be taken away by ſincere Doctrine and Preaching; it is to be anſwered, that that is not ſufficient, as hereafter more at large ſhall appear.

And though it ſhould be admitted as true, yet ſhould it follow, that ſincere Doctrine and Preaching ſhould always and in all places continue as well as Images; and ſo whereſoever an Image to offend were erected, there ſhould alſo of reaſon a godly and ſincere Preacher be continually maintained: for it is reaſon that the remedy be as large as the offence, the medicine as general as the poyſon, but that is not poſſible in the Realm of England that Images ſhould be generally allowed, as reaſon and experience may teach.

As good Magiſtrates, which intend to baniſh all whoredom, do drive away all naughty perſons, ſpecially out of ſuch places as be ſuſpected; even ſo Images, being Meretrices, i. Whores, for that the worſhipping of them is called in the Prophets Fornication and Adultery, ought to be baniſhed, and eſpecially out of Churches, which is the moſt ſuſpected place, and where the ſpiritual Fornication hath been moſt committed.

It is not expedient to allow and admit the thing which is hurtful to the greateſt number, but in all Churches and Commonwealths the ignorant and weak are the greateſt number, to whom Images are hurtful, and not profitable.

And where it is commonly alledged, That Images in Churches do ſtir up the mind to devotion, it may be anſwered, that contrariwiſe they do rather diſtract the mind from Prayer, hearing of Gods Word, and other godly Meditations, as we read, that in the Councel-Chamber of the Lacedemonians no Picture or Image was ſuffered, leſt in conſultation of weighty matters of the Commonweal, their minds by the ſight of the outward Image might be occaſioned to be withdrawn, or to wander from the matter.

The experience of this preſent time doth declare that thoſe parts of the Realm, which think and are perſwaded that God is not offended by doing outward reverence to an Image, do moſt deſire the reſtitution of Images, and have been moſt diligent to ſet them up again: Reſtitution therefore of them by common Authority ſhall confirm them more in their Error to the danger of their Souls, than ever they were before. For as one man writeth;

Nihil magis eſt certum, quàm quod ex dubio factum eſt certum. That is to ſay, Nothing is more certain or ſure, than that which of doubtful is made certain.

The profit of Images is uncertain, the peril, by experience of all Ages and ſtates of the Church (as afore) is moſt certain.

The benefit to be taken of them (if there be any) is very ſmall; the danger in ſeeing of them, which is the danger of Idolatry, is the greateſt of all other. Now to allow a moſt certain peril for an uncertain profit, and the greateſt danger for the ſmalleſt benefit, in matters of Faith and Religion, is a tempting to God, and a grievous offence.

Probations out of the Fathers, Councels, and Hiſtories.

FIrſt, It is manifeſt, that in the Primitive Church Images were not commonly uſed in Churches, Oratories, and places of Aſſembly for Religion; but they were generally deteſted and abhorred, inſomuch that the want of Imagery was objected to the Chriſtians for a Crime.

Origen reporteth, that Celſus objected the lack of Images, lib. 4. contra Celſum.

Arnobius ſaith alſo, That the Ethnicks accuſed the Chriſtians that they had neither Altars nor Images.

Zephirus in his Commentary upon the Apology of Tertullian, gathereth thus of Tertullians words; Qui locus perſuadendi frigeret penitus, niſi perpetuo illud teneamus: Chriſtianos tunc temporis odiſſe maximè ſtatuas cum ſuis ornamentis, &c. That is to ſay, Which place of perſwaſion were very cold, and to no purpoſe at all, except we hold this always, That Chriſtians in thoſe days did hate moſt of all Images with their trim decking and ornaments.

Ireneus lib. 1. cap. 4. reproveth the Hereticks called Gnoſtici, for that they carried about the Image of Chriſt made in Pilates time after his own proportion (which were much more to be eſteemed then any that can be made now) uſing alſo for declaration of their affection towards it, to ſet Garlands upon the Head of it.

Lactantius affirmeth plainly: Non eſt dubium, quin religio nulla ſit, ubicunque ſimulachrum eſt: lib. Divin. inſtit. 2. cap. 19. That is to ſay, It is not to be doubted, that there is no Religion whereſoever is any Image. If Chriſtians then had uſed Images, he would not have made his Propoſition ſo large. Anno 1558.

S. Auguſtine De Civitate Dei, lib. 4. cap. 31. commendeth Varro the Roman in theſe words: Quum Varro exiſtimaverit caſtius ſine ſimulachris obſervari religionem, quis non videt, quantum appropinquaverit veritati? That is to ſay, When as Varro thought Religion might be kept more purely without Images, who doth not ſee how near he came to the Truth? So that not only by M. Varroes judgment, but alſo by S. Auguſtines approbation, the moſt pure and chaſt obſervation of Religion, and neareſt the Truth, is to be without Images.

The ſame S. Auguſtine in Pſal. 113. hath theſe words: Plus valent ſimulachra ad curvandam infœlicem animam, quàm ad docendam: That is to ſay, Images have more force to bough down and crook the ſilly ſoul, than to teach it.

And upon the ſame Pſalm he moveth this queſtion; Quivis puer, imo quævis beſtia ſcit non eſſe Deum quod vident, cur ergo Spiritus Sanctus toties monet cavendum quod omnes ſciunt? That is to ſay, Every Child, yea every Beaſt knoweth that it is not God which they ſee, why then doth the Holy Ghoſt ſo oft give warning to beware of that thing which all do know.

S. Auguſtines Anſwer.

Quoniam cum ponuntur in Templis, & ſemel incipiunt adorari à multitudine, ſtatim naſcitur ſordidiſſimus affectus erroris. That is to ſay, For when they are ſet in Churches, and begin once to be worſhipped of the Multitude or Common People, ſtreightway ſpringeth up a moſt filthy affection of Error.

This place of S. Auguſtine doth well open how weak a reaſon it is to ſay, Images are a thing indifferent in Chambers and in Churches. For the alteration of the place, manner, and other circumſtances, doth alter oftentimes the nature of the thing. It is lawful to buy and ſell in the Market, but not ſo in Churches. It is lawful to eat and drink, but not ſo in Churches. And therefore ſaith S. Paul, Annon habetis domos ad edendum ac bibendum? An Eccleſiam Dei contemnitis? That is to ſay, Have you not Houſes to eat and drink in? Do you contemn the Church of God?

Many other actions there be which are lawful and honeſt in private places, which are neither comly nor honeſt, not only in Churches, but alſo in other Aſſemblies of honeſt People.

Tertullian ſaith, he uſed ſometimes to burn Frankincenſe in his Chamber, which was then uſed of Idolaters, and is yet in the Romiſh Churches, but he joyneth withal; Sed non eodem ritu, nec eodem habitu, nec eodem apparatu, quo agitur apud Idola: That is to ſay, But not after ſuch a Rite or Ceremony, nor after ſuch a faſhion, nor with ſuch preparation or ſumptuouſneſs, as it is done before the Idols.

So that Images placed in Churches, and ſet in honorabili ſublimitate, that is to ſay, in an honourable place of eſtimation, as S. Auguſtine ſaith, and eſpecially over the Lords Table, which is done (uſing the words of Tertullian) eodem ritu, & eodem habitu, that is, after the ſame manner and faſhion which the Papiſts did uſe, eſpecially after ſo long continuance of abuſe of Images, and ſo many being blinded with ſuperſtitious opinion towards them, cannot be counted a thing indifferent, but a moſt certain ruin of many Souls.

Epiphanius in his Epiſtle to John Biſhop of Jeruſalem (which Epiſtle was tranſlated out of the Greek by S. Jerom, being a likelyhood that Jerom miſliked not the Doctrine of the ſame) doth write a fact of his own, which doth moſt clearly declare the judgment of that notable learned Biſhop concerning the uſe of Images, his words are theſe: Quum veniſſem ad villam quæ dicitur Anablatha, vidiſſemque ibi præteriens lucernam ardentem, & interrogaſſem quis locus eſſet, didiciſſemque eſſe Eccleſiam, & intraſſem ut orarem: inveni ibi velum pendens in foribus ejuſdem Eccleſiæ tinctum atque depictum, Anno 1558. depictum, & habens imaginem quaſi Chriſti vel ſancti cujuſdam, non enim ſatis memini [illegible] fuit. Cum ergo hoc vidiſſem in Eccleſia Chriſti contra authoritatem Scripturarum, hominis pendere imaginem, ſcidi illud, &c. Et paulo poſt. Et præcepi in Eccleſia Chriſti iſtiuſmodi vela quæ contra religionem noſtram veniunt non appendi, &c. That is to ſay, When I came to a Village called Anablatha, and ſaw there, as I paſſed by, a Candle burning, and enquiring what place it was, and learning that it was a Church, and had entered into the ſame to pray, I found there a Vale or Cloth hanging at the door of the ſame Church, dyed and painted, having on it the Image of Chriſt as it were, or of ſome Saint (for I remember not well whoſe it was.) Then when I ſaw this, that in the Church of Chriſt, againſt the Authority of the Scriptures, the Image of a man did hang, I cut it in pieces, &c. And commanded that ſuch manner of Vails or Clothes, which are contrary to our Religion, be not hanged in the Church of Chriſt.

Out of this place of Epiphanius divers notes are to be obſerved.

Firſt, That by the Judgment of this ancient Father, to permit Images in Churches is againſt the Authority of the Scriptures, meaning againſt the ſecond Commandment, Thou ſhalt not make to thy ſelf any graven Image, &c.

Secondly, That Epiphanius doth reject not only graven and molten, but alſo painted Images: forſomuch as he cut in pieces the Image painted in a Vail hanging at the Church door; what would he have done, if he had found it over the Lords Table?

Thirdly, That he ſpareth not the Image of Chriſt: for no doubt that Image is moſt perillous in the Church of all other.

Fourthly, That he did not only remove it, but with a vehemency of zeal cut it in pieces, following the example of the good King Ezechias, who brake the braſen Serpent, and burnt it to aſhes.

Laſt of all, That Epiphanius thinketh it the duty of vigilant Biſhops to be careful, that no ſuch kind of painted Images be permitted in the Church.

Serenus Biſhop of Maſſilia broke down Images, and deſtroyed them when he did ſee them begin to be worſhipped, Greg. in regiſt. epiſt. 109.

Experience of the times ſince hath declared, whether of theſe two Sentences were better. For ſince Gregorius his time, the Images ſtanding in the Weſt-Church, it hath been overflowed with Idolatry, notwithſtanding his or other mens doctrine: Whereas if Serenus's judgment had univerſally taken place, no ſuch thing had happened. For if no Images had been ſuffered, none could have been worſhipped: and conſequently, no Idolatry committed by them.

¶ To recite the Proceſs of Hiſtories and Councels about the matter of Images, it would require a long Diſcourſe, but it ſhall be ſufficient here briefly to touch a few.

IT is manifeſt to them that read Hiſtories, that not only Emperors, but alſo divers and ſundry Councels in the Eaſt-Church have condemned and aboliſhed Images both by Decrees and Examples.

Petrus Crinitus de honeſta diſciplina, l. 9. c. 9. ex libris Auguſtatibus hæc verba tranſcripſit. Valens & Theodoſius Auguſti Imperatores præfecto prætorio ad hunc modum ſcripſerint. Quum ſit nobis cura diligens in rebus omnibus ſuperni numinis religionem tueri: Signum Salvatoris Chriſti nemini quidem concedimus coloribus, lapide aliave materia fingere, inſculpere, aut pingere, ſed quocunque reperitur loco tolli jubemus, graviſſima pœna eos mulctando qui contrarium decretis noſtris, & imperio quicquam tentaverint. That is to ſay, Petrus Crinitus in his Book of honeſt Diſcipline, Book 9. Chap. 9. wrote out of the Emperors Books theſe words: Valens and Theodoſius the Emperors wrote to the High Marſhal or Lieutenant in this ſort. Whereas we are very careful that the Religion of Almighty God ſhould be in all things kept, We permit no man to caſt, grave, or paint the Image of our Saviour Chriſt, either in colours, ſtone, or other matter; but whereſoever it be found, we command it to be taken away, puniſhing them moſt grievouſly that ſhall attempt any thing contrary to our Decrees and Empire.

Leo the Third, a man commended in Hiſtories for his excellent vertues and godlineſs, who (as is judged of ſome men) was the Author of the Book De re militari, that is, Of the Feat of War, being tranſlated out of the Greek by Sir John Cheeke, and dedicated to K. Henry the Eighth, your Highneſſes Father, by Publick Authority commanded aboliſhing of Images; and in Conſtantinople cauſed all the Images to be gathered together on a heap, and burned them unto aſhes.

Conſtantine the Firſt his Son, aſſembled a Councel of the Biſhops of the Eaſt-Church; in which Councel it was decreed as followeth. It is not lawful for them that believe in God thorow Jeſus Chriſt, to have any Images, either of the Creator, or of any Creatures ſet up in Temples to be worſhipped, but rather that all Images by the Law of God, and for the avoiding of offence, ought to be taken out of Churches. Which Decree was executed in all places where any Images were, either in Greece or in Aſia. But in all theſe times, the Biſhops of Rome rather maintaining the Authority of Gregory, weighing like Chriſtian Biſhops the peril of the Church, always in their Aſſemblies allowed Images.

Not long after, the Biſhop of Rome, practiſing with Tharaſius Patriarch of Conſtantinople, obtained of Irene the Empreſs, her Son Conſtantine being then young, that a Councel was called at Nice, in the which the Popes Legates were Preſidents, which appeared well by their fruits: for in that Councel it was decreed, That Images ſhould not only be permitted in Churches, but alſo worſhipped: which Councel was confuted by a Book written by Carolus Magnus the Emperour, calling it a fooliſh and an arrogant Councel.

Soon after this Councel, aroſe a ſharp contention between Irene the Empreſs, and her Son Conſtantine the Sixth, the Emperour, who deſtroyed Images. And in the end, as ſhe had before wickedly burned the bones of her Father in Law, Conſtantine the Fifth, ſo afterward unnaturally ſhe put out the eyes of her Son Conſtantine the Sixth.

About which time, as Eutropius writeth, the Sun was darkened moſt terribly for the ſpace of ſeventeen days, God ſhewing, by that dreadful ſign, how much he miſliked thoſe kinds of proceedings.

To be ſhort, there was never thing that made more diviſion, or brought more miſchief into the Church, than the Controverſie of Images: by reaſon whereof, not only the Eaſt-Church was divided from the Weſt, and never ſince perfectly reconciled, but alſo the Empire was cut aſunder and divided, and the Gate opened to the Saracens and Turks to enter and overcome a great piece of Chriſtendom. The fault whereof moſt juſtly is to be aſcribed to the Patrons of Images, who could not be contented with the example of the Primitive Church, being moſt ſimple and ſincere, and moſt agreeable to the Scripture: (For as Tertullian ſaith, Quod primum verum, quod poſterius adulterinum; That is to ſay, What as is firſt, that is true, and that that is later is counterfeit.) But with all extremity maintained the uſe of Images in Churches, whereof no profit nor commodity did ever grow to the Church of God. For it is evident, that infinite millions of Souls have been caſt into eternal damnation by the occaſion of Images uſed in place of Religion, and no Hiſtory can record, that ever any one ſoul was won unto Chriſt by having of Images. But leſt it might appear that the Weſt-Church had always generally retained and commended Images, it is to be noted, that in a Councel holden in Spain, called Concilium Eliberinum, the uſe of Images in Churches was clearly prohibited in theſe form of words; Placuit in Eccleſiis picturas eſſe non debere, ne quod colitur aut adoratur in parietibus depingatur. That is to ſay, We decree, that Pictures ought not to be in Churches, leſt that be painted upon the walls which is worſhipped or adored.

But this notwithſtanding experience hath declared, that neither aſſembling in Councels, neither Writings, Preachings, Decrees, making of Laws, preſcribing of Puniſhments, hath holpen againſt Images, to the which Idolatry hath been committed, nor againſt Idolatry whilſt Images Images ſtood. For theſe blind Books and dumb Schoolmaſters (which they call Lay-mens books) have more prevailed by their craved and painted preaching of Idolatry, than all other written Books and preachings in teaching the truth, and the horror of that vice.

Having thus declared unto your Highneſs a few cauſes of many which do move our Conſciences in this matter; we beſeech your Highneſs moſt humbly not to ſtrain us any further, but to conſider that Gods Word doth threaten a terrible judgment unto us, if we, being Paſtors and Miniſters in his Church, ſhould aſſent unto the thing which in our Learning and Conſcience we are perſwaded doth tend to the confirmation of Errour, Superſtition and Idolatry: and finally, to the ruine of the Souls committed to our charge, for the which we muſt give an account to the Prince of Paſtors at the laſt day, Hebrews 12. 1. Pet. 5. We pray your Majeſty alſo not to be offended with this our plainneſs and liberty, which all good and Chriſtian Princes have ever taken in good part at the hands of Godly Biſhops.

Saint Ambroſe writing to Theodoſius the Emperor, uſeth theſe words; Sed neque Imperiale eſt libertatem dicendi negare, neque Sacerdotale quod ſentiat non dicere. Item, in cauſa verò Dei quem audies, ſi Sacerdotem non audies, cujus majore peccatur periculo? quis tibi verum audebit dicere, ſi Sacerdos non audeat? Epiſt. lib. 5. Epiſt. 29. that is to ſay: But neither it it the part of an Emperor to deny free liberty of ſpeaking, nor yet the duty of a Prieſt not to ſpeak what he thinketh. And again; In Gods cauſe whom wilt thou hear, if thou wilt not hear the Prieſt, to whoſe great peril the fault ſhould be committed? Who dare ſay the truth unto thee, if the Prieſt dare not? Theſe and ſuch like Speeches of S. Ambroſe, Theodoſius, and Valentinianus the Emperors did always take in good part, and we doubt not but your Grace will do the like, of whoſe not only clemency, but alſo beneficence, we have largely taſted.

We beſeech your Majeſty alſo, in theſe and ſuch like controverſies of Religion, to refer the diſcuſſment and deciding of them to a Synod of our Biſhops and other Godly learned Men, according to the example of Conſtantinus Maximus, and other Chriſtian Emperors, that the reaſons of both parts being examined by them, the judgment may be given uprightly in all doubtful matters.

And to return to this preſent matter, we moſt humbly beſeech your Majeſty to conſider, that beſides weighty cauſes in policy, which we leave to the Wiſdom of your Honourable Counſellors, the ſtabliſhment of Images by your Authority ſhall not only utterly diſcredit our Miniſters, as builders up of the things which we have deſtroyed, but alſo blemiſh the fame of your moſt Godly Father, and ſuch notable Fathers as have given their Life for the Teſtimony of Gods Truth, who by publick Law removed all Images.

The Almighty and Everlaſting God plentifully indue your Majeſty with his Spirit and Heavenly Wiſdom, and long preſerve your moſt Gracious Reign and proſperous Government over us, to the advancement of his Glory, to the overthrow of Superſtition, and to the benefit and comfort of all your Highneſs loving Subjects.

A Note of Mr. Ridley.

MAſter D. Ridley ſometime Biſhop of London of whom mention is made, was a Man ſo reverenced for his Learning and Knowledge in the Scripture, that even his very enemies have reported him to have been an excellent Clerk, whoſe life if it might have been redeemed with the ſum of 10000. marks, yea, 10000. pounds, the Lord Dacres of the North, being his Kinſman, would have given it to Q. Mary, rather than he ſhould have been burned. And yet was ſhe ſo unmerciful, for all his gentleneſs in K. Edw. days, that it would not be granted for any ſute that could be made. Oh, that ſhe had remembred his labour for her to K. Edw. the 6. with Cranmer before mentioned, in ſuch ſort that even ſhe had yielded but the reward of a Publican, Mat. 5. then had the Earth not ſo been bereft of him as it was; but the Lord forgive us our ſins which were the cauſe thereof, and grant that we never ſo provoke his anger again, if it be his bleſſed will, Amen.

Another Note of Mr. Ridley

Anno 1558.

MAſter Ridley late Biſhop of London, being Priſoner in the Tower, had there given him the liberty of the ſame, to prove belike whether he would go to Maſs or no, which once he did. And M. Bradford being there Priſoner alſo the ſame time, and hearing thereof, taketh his pen and ink, and writeth to him an effectual Letter to perſwade him from the ſame, and ſheweth the occaſion that thereby ſhould enſue, which (God be honored) did M. Ridley no little good: for he repented his fact therein, as he himſelf maketh mention, writing again in the latter end of the Book of Marcus Antonius, which he ſent to M. Bradford, and never after that polluted himſelf with that filthy dregs of Antichriſtian ſervice.

A Commiſſion ſent from the Pope, with the Sentence definitive to proceed againſt the Reverend Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Thomas Cranmer.

PAulus Epiſcopus ſervus ſervorum Dei chariſſimo in Chriſto filio Philippo Regi, & chariſſimæ in Chriſto filiæ Mariæ Reginæ Angliæ, Franciæ; illuſtribus ac venerabilibus fratribus Londinenſi & Elienſi Epiſcopis ſalutem, & Apoſtolicam benedictionem. Dudum per literas veſtras, chariſſime fili Philippe Rex, & Chriſtiana filia Maria Regina nobis ſignificatur, quod iniquitatis filius Thomas Cranmerus, olim Archiepiſcopus Cantuarienſ. in hæreſes aliaq; tam grandia & enormia crimina erat prolapſus, quod non ſolam regimine Eccleſiæ Cantuarienſis ſe reddiderat indignum, verum etiam majori pœnæ ſe fecerat obnoxium. * The ſecular ſtate ignominious, and diſdained with the proud Clergy.

Eum forficibus tondere incipiat Pontifex degradator, & alter Barbitonſorem ibidem præſentem totaliter tonderi faciat caput degradandi, dicens.

Te velut ingratum filium à ſorte Domini ad quam vocatus fueras abjicimus, & coronam tui capitis regale quidem ſignum ſacerdotii de tuo capite amovemus propter tui regiminis pravitatem.

Deinde ſi velit Pontifex, dicat.

Quod ore cantaſti, corde non oredidiſti, nec opere impleviſti, ideo cantandi officium in Eccleſia Dei à te amovemus.

Tum Miniſtri pontificis exuunt degradatum veſte, & habitu clericali, & ipſum induunt habitu ſeculari.

Si degradatus tradi debeat curiæ ſeculari.

Pontifex degradator degradatum amplius non tangit, ſed in hunc modum pronunciat, dicens.

Denunciamus ut hunc exutum omni ordine ac privilegio clericali, curia ſecularis in ſuum forum recipiat.

Rogat judicem ſecularem ut citra mortis periculum, &c.

Domine judex, rogamus vos cum omni affectu quo poſſumus, ut amore Dei, pietatis & miſericordiæ intuitu, & noſtrorum interventu precaminum miſerrimo huic nullum mortis vel mutilationis periculum inferas.

A Note concerning Dr. Cranmer in his Diſputation.

THat day wherein Doctor Cranmer late Biſhop of Canterbury anſwered in the Divinity School at Oxford, there was alledged unto him by Doctor Weſton, that he the ſaid Cranmer in his Book of the Sacrament falſly falſified the ſaying of the Doctors, and ſpecially the ſaying of Saint Hilary in theſe words, Vero for Vere, ſhewing a print or two thereof, to have defaced his doings therein: but Doctor Cranmer with a grave and fatherly ſobriety anſwered, that the print of S. Hilaries works, whereout he took his notes, was verbatim according to his Book, and that could his Books teſtifie if they were there to beſeen. Saying further, that he ſuppoſed D. Smith in that order rehearſed it in his Book of the Sacrament, to the which D. Smith there preſent (though he were demanded the anſwer thereof) ſtood in ſilence, As Canis mutus non valens latrare. But by and by D. Weſton without ſhame, to ſhadow D. Smiths ſilence, ſpitely ſaid to Cranmer; belike you took your learning out of Mr. D. Smiths Book.

All this already is teſtified before.

IT chanced at that preſent to be in the School one William Holcot Gentleman then a ſojourner in the Univerſity Colledge; he hearing the ſame untruth, and remembring that he had amongſt his Books in his ſtudy the ſaid Book of Doctor Smith, at his return to his ſaid ſtudy deſirous to ſee the truth therein, found it agreeable to the writing and affirmation of Doctor Cranmer. And the ſaid Holcot, then and there better remembring himſelf, found amongſt his Books the Book of Stephen Gardiner, intituled the Devils Sophiſtry. In which Book was the ſaid ſaying of Saint Hilary alledged by the ſaid Stephen verbatim, both in Latin and Engliſh according to Doctor Cranmers confirmation. Then the ſaid William Holcot intending (for the manifeſt opening and trial of the truth therein) to have delivered the ſaid Gardiners Book to Doctor Cranmer, brought it to Bocardo the Priſon of Oxford, where Doctor Cranmer then remained, but there in the delivery thereof he was apprehended by the Bailiffs and by them brought before Doctor Weſton and his Collegues then at dinner at Corpus Chriſti Colledge, who ſtraightways laid Treaſon to the charge of the ſaid William Holcot, for the maintenance of Cranmer in his naughtineſs (as they called it) and ſo upon ſtrait examination, to know who were privy to his doings in delivery of the ſaid Gardiners Book, committed him to the ſaid Priſon of Bocardo, where he ſojourned and ſlept in the ſtraw that night.

And in the morrow in the morning, Doctor Cole yet alive, then Dean of Pauls, and Doctor Feffery, two of them then Viſitors, further examined the ſaid Holcot of that his doings; threatning him to lay treaſon to his charge, and ſo to ſend him for the trial thereof to the then Lord Chancellor Stephen Gardiner, willing him preſently to ſubſcribe to the Articles then in queſtion, but he refuſed, deſiring reſpite until the Laws of the Realm had determined the ſame. And ſo was he again committed to the ſaid Priſon. And after three days Doctor Weſton and the reſidue of the Viſitors ſolemnly in Saint Maries-Church pronouncing ſentence againſt the late Biſhops, Cranmer, Ridley, and Latimer; amongſt other called there before them the ſaid Holcot, willing him to ſubſcribe to their three Articles. He demanding them then theſe demands, firſt, whether they thought in their Conſciences that the Articles, whereunto they willed him to ſubſcribe, were according to the Scriptures, and that the Religion then they went about to plant were the true Religion of Chriſt: they anſwered all with one voice, Yea, yea. Then asked he them whether they thought themſelves able to anſwer, and would anſwer before God for him if he ſubſcribed thereunto as they willed him: And they likewiſe anſwered, Yea, yea. And ſo he the ſaid Holcot through fear and frailty of the Fleſh (as Noephitus) upon their threats ſubſcribed. Then they with many fair and flattering words delivered him, but would not let him have again his Book brought to Bocardo, leſt (as it ſeemed) he he ſhould ſhew it to their ſhame. And they privily willed the Maſter and the fellows of the ſaid Univerſity Colledge to ſee the ſaid William Holcot forth coming: And if they within a fortnight after did not hear from the then Lord Chancellor what ſhould be done with him, that then they at the fortnights end ſhould expel him out of the ſaid Colledge, which they would have done, if the then Vicechancellor had not willed them to the contrary. Which Holcot, though then an Apoſtata, is yet now a penitent Preacher.

An Epiſtle of Biſhop Hooper in Latin, ſent to the Convocation-Houſe touching matters of Religion.

Epiſcopis, Decanis, Archidiaconis, & cæteris Cleri Ordinibus in Synodo Londinenſi congregatis, gratiam & pacem a Domino.

NOn vos latet (Viri doctiſſimi) in rebus arduis, ambiguis, & cauſis difficilioribus, judicium apud veteres (juxta mandatum Dei) delatum fuiſſe ſemper ad Sacerdotes, Levitas, & ad Præſidem, qui pro tempore judicis munere fungebatur; ut omnes hi cauſas & lites difficiliores explicarent, ex præſcripto Legis Dei. Ita qualeſcunque controverſiæ fuerunt; ex ſententia Sacerdotum & Præſidis, ad normam & præſcriptum Legis Dei latæ, componebantur. Et ab eo quod judices partibus litigantibus ſtatuiſſent, nullo modo erat declinandum. Quod ſi quis contumacius Sacerdoti aut Præſidi non paruiſſet, juxta legem Dei ſententiam pronuncianti, pœnas contumaciæ morte luebat, quo populus, hac ultione & contumaciæ vindicta admonitus, metueret, & deinceps inſoleſcere deſiſteret. Quam difficiles, imo quam periculoſæ, inter nos & vos, de re Euchariſtica lites agantur, veſtræ conciones, ſcripta, & libelli teſtantur: nos vero qui meliorem, veriorem, & antiquiſſimam fidem ſuſtinemus, confiſcatione omnium bonorum noſtrorum, dura & inhumana carceris ſervitute ſentimus. Quare mei ipſius nomine, ac omnium fratrum qui mecum eandem Catholicæ ac ſanctæ religionis veritatem profitentur, vos omnes in Chriſto Jeſu obteſtor, ut cauſam hanc, vel aliquam quamcunque ob religionem ortam inter nos & vos, deferre dignemini ad ſupremam Curiam Parliamenti; ut ibi utraque pars coram ſacro & excelſo Senatu ſeſe religioſe, & animo ſubmiſſo, judicio & autoritati verbi Dei ſubjiciat. Et ſi veſtram religionem, quam ſanctam, orthodoxam, ac catholicam eſſe contenditis, ex verbo Dei aſſerere poteſtis, illam & nos libenter amplexabimur, noſtram, quam modo pro ſacroſancta defendimus, repudiantes, Gratias item Deo & vobis agentes quam maximas, quod per vos ab erroribus liberati, ad veritatis cognitionem revocemur. Non ſolum autem hoc à vobis obteſtamur, ut vos veſtramque cauſam judicio verbi Dei coram ſummo Parliamento deferatis; verum etiam ut nobis commodum detur tempus, quo veterum ſcripta & ſacras literas evolvamus, à ſancto Senatu impetrare dignemini. Et ſi ibi juſtas ac ligitimas rationes fidei noſtræ non reddiderimus, judicio magiſtratus nos ipſos ſubmittimus, ut arbitam ultionem noſtri ſceleris & impietatis nobis infligat. Si hæc facere non recuſaveritis, religio quam caſtam, illibatam, et ſalvam, ac ob omnibus amplectendam eſſe contenditis, glorioſius de veſtra fide & religione, ac de nobis ipſis (qui illam impiam eſſe & falſam conteſtamur) victoriam reportabit. Nam ſi veſtra Religio & cultus in cauſa Euchariſtiæ fontem & originem ducunt ex verbo Dei; procul dubio ſanctam & ſempiternam eſſe oportet. Et ſcitis quod res ſancta & vera quo magis examinatur, & per verbum Dei exploratur, eo fit illuſtrior & purior. Et quanto purior et illuſtrior fit, tanto magis ab omnibus deſideratur, & obviis ulnis excipitur. Quis enim non deſideraret & amplecteretur religionem & cultum à Deo mandatum, & ab illius verbo ſancitum ac confirmatum? Quare ſi veſtra religio & cultus Dei res ſit adeo vera, ſancta, & à Deo mundo exhibita; non eſt quod ei metuatis. Nam quod variis modis tentatur ac probatur, modo pium ac ſanctum fuerit, jacturam ab hoſtibus nullam ſentit, ſed potius hoſtes conculcat ac interficit. Selis radii ſterquilinicrum ſordibus non coinquinantur; veritaſque divini verbi errorum tenebris & caligine non offunditur. Nec eſt quod vobis ipſis metuatis; modo reipſa id præſtetis, quod ubique jactatis. Nam quotquot veſtras partes non ſequuntur, aliqua graviſſimo ignominiæ genere nimis ſuperbè afficitis: nos omnes omnino indoctos eſſe prædicatis, aut plane dementatos affirmatis. Vobis autem pluſquam divinam vendicatis prudentiam; nobis vero pluſquam belluinam ſtoliditatem tribuitis. Jam quam facile erit doctis indoctos, hominibus ſanæ mentis inſanis percitos, ingenio & prudentia flagrantibus ſtolidos & ignaros vincere; ſacer Parliamenti conventus nullo negotio intelliget. Ideo, ſi omnino ob Chriſtum & illius cauſæ gloriam quam nos defendimus, aut ob ſalutem noſtram, ut veſtra prudentia nos ſtultitiæ arguamur, veſtraque doctrina & eruditione nos ignorantiæ accuſemur, hoc facere non vultis; tamen, ut publice impietatis convincamur coram ſummo Senatu, hoc præſtate. Et ſi iſtis rationibus nihil moveamini; tamen veſtra ipſorum cauſa certè poſtulat, ut palam eæ lites inter nos componantur, idque coram competenti judice, ne apud omnes pios male audiat, & fortaſſis hac ſuſpicione laboret, quaſi lucem & publicum examen fugiat, ne impietatis, & Idololatriæ per verbum Dei deprehendatur. Et vos qui malam cauſam, imo peſſimam, ferro & igne defenditis, non tam docti nec pii, ut omnino videri & haberi vultis, invenimini: ſed potius ignorantiæ & ſtultitiæ, quas nobis impingitis, redarguamini. Non vos fugit quomodo publicè, palam, & in facie ac in præſentia omnium ſtatuum hujus regni, in ſumma curia Parliamenti, veritas verbi Dei per fidos, doctos, & pios miniſtros de veſtra impia Miſſa glorioſe victoriam reportavit: quamvis per trecentos annos non ſolum locum & templum Dei occupaverit, verum etiam corda hominum (tanquam Deus) inhabitaverit. Sed quocunque titulo, nomine, honore, reverentia, ſanctitate, tempore, patronis, univerſalitate ſplenduit, ubi per ſanctiſſimum Regem Edovardum ſextum ſanctiſſimæ memoriæ ad vivum lapidem lydium verbi Dei examinari per proceres, heroës, ac doctos hujus regni erat mandatum; ſtatim evanuit, & nihil aliud apparuit, quam ſpurciſſimum & immundiſſimum idolum ſub pallio & nomine Dei impie contectum. Æqua & juſta petimus, ut palam & publice lites inter nos componantur, Si igitur veſtræ cauſæ & vobis ipſis non diffidatis, una nobiſcum apud ſanctum Senatum agere dignemini, ut coram illo, authoritate verbi Dei, quis noſtrum veriorem partem defenderit, dignoſcatur. Nullis enim legibus ſanctis & juſtis unquam fuit permiſſum, ut una pars litigans de altera parte judex conſtitueretur. Nam in omnibus controverſiis et cauſis difficilioribus (maxime in Religione) medius aliquis, & neutra litigantium pars in judicem eligenda eſt. Nec Chriſtus ipſe (quamvis ipſa veritas) æterni Patris Filius, hanc poteſtatem & imperium judicandi ſibi vendicavit: quandocunque lites de ejus Doctrina, inter illum & Phariſæos, vel quoſcunque alios contigerunt. Sed ſemper ad legem appellavit, adverſarioſque ſuos ut legis præſcripto & ſententiæ ſtarent, rogavit; ſcrutamini (inquiens) Scripturas. Nos etiam à vobis nihil aliud in nomine Domini noſtri Jeſu Chriſti, ſupplices petimus & rogamus, niſi ut cauſa de qua inter nos litigatur, ſententia & authoritate Verbi Dei decidatur ac finiatur. Et ſi per Verbum Dei fidem noſtram parum candidam & piam oſtendere valetis; porrigemus vobis herbam, dabimuſque dextras. Nec in impios Arrianos pii & ſancti Patres, hanc judicandi poteſtatem ſibi aſſumpſerunt; ſed adfuit diſputationi pius Princeps Conſtantinus Imperator qui rationes partium litigantium diligenter perpendit, & ſententiam atque judicium cauſæ ſoli authoritati Verbi Dei detulit. Quid hoc eſt igitur? quo jure contenditis? vultis & noſtri et cauſæ noſtræ teſtes, accuſatores, et judices eſſe? nos tantum Legem et Evangelium Dei, in cauſa religionis, judicem competentem agnoſcimus; illius judicio ſtet vel cadat noſtra cauſa. Tantum (iterum atque iterum) petimus, ut coram competenti judice detur nobis, qui vincula et carceres ſuſtinemus, amicum Chriſtianumque auditorium: atque haud dubitamus, quin noſtras rationes, et argumenta authoritate Verbi divini ſumus ſtabiliturі, ac veſtra planè ſubverſuri. Hactenus præjudicio injuſte gravamur; nec mirum, cum una pars litigantium judex alterius partis conſtituatur. Quapropter ad Verbum Dei, tanquam unicum et ſolum competentem, in cauſa religionis, jujudicem appellamus. Si præter & contra hanc Legem Dei, falſa & impia (ut cepiſtis) vi & dolo promovere non deſiſtetis; ſed fratres veſtros truculenter perſequendo pergetis; nos in tantis periculis conſtituti ad miſericordiam Dei confugiemus, qui ſolus & poſſit & velit nos à veſtris erroribus incolumes & ſalvos conſervare. Præterea, ut olim aliqui ex nobis, pro ſalute & incolumitate aliquot veſtrum, apud Magiſtratum civilem interceſſimus; ſic & nunc pro omnium veſtrum ſalute in Chriſto Jeſu apud Patrem cæleſtem intercedere non deſiſtemus, ut tandem ad meliorem & ſinceriorem mentem reverſi unicum Chriſtum Jeſum quem præcinuerunt Prophetæ, prædicaverunt Apoſtoli, quemque omnes pii agnoſcunt jam (quoad humanitatem) ſedentem ad dextram Patris in cœlis amplectamini, & exoſculemini; repudiato confictо & ementito illo Chriſto, ex pane confecto, quem non ſolum juvenes virgines, & ſenes, verum etiam oves & boves, pecoraque campi, volucres cœli, & piſces maris panem agnoſcunt ac ſentiunt, & non Deum. Deſiſtite, rogamus, igitur enixe ulterius oculos piorum perſtringere. Verus enim Chriſtus, quatenus homo, jam amplius ſurſum ac deorſum per manus Sacerdotum agitari & immolari non poteſt. Infernum vicit, peccata veſtra in Cruce perlitavit, mortem deſtruxit, & jam aſtra tenet; quem olim videbitis venientem in nubibus cœli cum poteſtate magna & gloria, ſempiterniſque pœnis vos plangetis, niſi hic pœnitentiam falſæ & impiæ veſtræ doctrinæ egeritis. Si Deus autem, pro ſua inexhauſta bonitate & clementia, per Verbum ſuum lites iſtas inter nos componi dignetur; non dubito quin oculos veſtros ita ſit aperturus, ut quam horribiliter & impiè Dei ac hominm teſtimonio & ſcriptis vos abuti videatis. Sed ſi furioſo & excandeſcenti ſpiritu veſtræ partes, citra authoritatem Verbi Dei, defendere velitis; actum eſt omnino de veſtra æterna ſalute, quod Dominus propter filium ſuum unicum avertat. Cogitate etiam apud vos ipſos an hoc ſit piorum Miniſtrorum Eccleſiæ officium, vi, metu, & pavore corde hominum in veſtras partes compellere? Profectò Chriſtus non ignem, non gladium, non carceres, non vincula, non violentiam, non confiſcationum bonorum, non Regineæ Majeſtatis terrorem, media organa conſtituit, quibus veritas ſui verbi mundo promulgaretur: ſed miti ac diligenti prædicatione Evangelii ſui mundum ab errore & Idololatria converti præcepit. Vos non Chriſti ſed Antichriſti armis utimini, quibus populum invitum ad veſtra ſacra compellitis; & non volentem & inſtructum Verbo Dei trahitis. Sed quàm malus cuſtos perpetuitatis ſit timor, non ignoratis. Certè qui timet, niſi Dei Spiritu ſemper revocetur, odit. Tradite igitur ſaluberrima præcepta Legis & Evangelii populo Dei, ut pro Chriſti Miniſtris per verbum Chriſti ab omnibus agnoſcamini. Ideò enim Miniſtri Eccleſiæ Chriſti eſtis conſtituti, ut tantùm Chriſti Doctrinam populum Dei doceretis, & non ut novam, & à Chriſto alienam obtruderetis. Quæ jam vos in Eccleſia agitis, ſi coram æquo judice amicam ac Chriſtianam diſputationem non recuſaveritis; ex Verbo Dei oſtendemus, vel à Lege Moſaica mutata, vel per Antichriſtum, & pſeudominiſtros in Eccleſiam fuiſſe introducta, ut hoc brevi tractatu excelſæ Parliamenti Curiæ facilè conſtabit. Scio inter vos eſſe tam turgido & iniquo ſpiritu prædicatos, qui putant nos tantùm inanis gloriæ, ſuperbiæ, arrogantiæ, & famæ noſtræ fumo duci, & ideo velle potius ſemper malè currere, quam admonitos de errore bene recurrere. Sed hoc Deus novit, quod tantùm illius gloriam, noſtramque ſalutem in Chriſto quærimus, dicant adverſarii quid velint. Meminerint autem noſtri adverſarii & cogitent, quanquam apud illos nec pro doctis nec piis hominibus habeamur (& haud dubie nos ipſos omnis impietatis & peccati apud Deum quotidie accuſamus) tamen homines ſumus ratione præditi. Et quis (niſi inſanus) jactura & amiſſione omnium bonorum ſuorum, uxoris, liberorum, libertatis & vitæ redimeret famæ aut inanis gloriæ titulum? Profectò tanti pœnitere (ut dicitur) non emerimus. Igitur illius verbi veritatem noſtris bonis omnibus ac vitæ ipſi præferimus: Et ſi centies (Deo nos adjuvante) moriendum nobis fuerit; ad idololatriam & impium cultum Dei, quæ Dei miſericordia hactenus reliquimus, non revertemur. Domini ſumus, ſive vivimus, ſive morimur; ejus igitur voluntas in vobis & in nobis cum miſericordia fiat, Amen.

Veſtræ ſalutis in Chriſto

A Note of Biſhop Farrer.

DOctor Leiſon, Doctor of Law, a Civilian, a Juſtice of Peace, the ſame who is mentioned before, would not ſuffer Biſhop Farrer (when he was at the Stake to be burnt) to ſpeak his mind, and about half a year after the ſaid Doctor Leiſon died, and when he would have ſpoke himſelf he could not.

The Trouble and Examination of Thomas Hitton Martyr, with his Examinations, Anſwers, Condemnation and Martyrdom, Anno 1529. the 20th of February.

Read before: The Story and Martyrdom of Tho. Hitton.

THomas Hitton of Martham in the Dioceſs of Norwich, an honeſt poor man and religious, ever fearing God from his youth, and loving his Word; when perſecution for the ſame Word in the days of King Henry the Eighth grew to be ſomewhat hot, took his Journey toward Rocheſter in Kent, intending to have gone to Dover, and ſo to have croſſed the Seas into France and other Countries for a time, where repoſing himſelf a while, he might be free from the heat of Perſecution. As he was going on his intended Journey, one Thomas Swaineſland, Baily to William Warrham Archbiſhop of Canterbury, meeting him by the way, and ſuſpecting him to be (as they called them) an Heretick, cauſed him to be ſtaied and brought before the ſaid William Archbiſhop of Canterbury, his Maſter; who demanded of him from whence he came, and whither he intended to have gone, if he had not been intercepted? The ſaid Thomas anſwered, that he came out of the Dioceſs of Norwich, and purpoſed to have gone beyond the Seas, if God had ſo permitted. Then the Biſhop asked him, if he had ever been beyond the Seas before, and what Books he had brought over. He anſwered, that he had been once beyond the Seas before, and had brought certain Books with him from thence, namely, two New Teſtaments, and one Primer in Engliſh. The Biſhop asked him to whom he gave the ſaid Books. He anſwered, he would not declare. For (ſaith he) ſuch is your bloody Cruelty, that you would never ſleep quietly till you have ſucked their Blood, as you mean to do mine. The Biſhop ſeeing he could extort no more out of him, and perceiving his conſtant ſpirit and fervent zeal to the Truth, commanded him to Priſon till further opportunity might ſerve for the ſhedding of his Blood.

W. Warrham Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

The Examination of Tho. Hitton before the Archbiſhop.

The ſecond Appearance of Thomas Hitton before the ſaid Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

WIthin a while after the Biſhop commanded the ſaid Thomas to be brought before him again, who demanded of him how he judged and believed of the Religion then in force, and of the Authority of the Biſhop of Rome. The ſaid Thomas anſwered, that the Religion then uſed was moſt abominable Idolatry, and contrary to the holy Word of God. And as for the Pope (quoth he) he is Antichriſt, the Firſt-born of Satan, and hath no more power or authority, than any other Biſhop hath in his own Dioceſs, nor ſo much neither. The Biſhop hearing this, was in ſuch a pelting chafe, that at that time he would talk no more with him, but returned him from whence he came, namely to Bocardo, with commandment to appear before him again upon the thirteenth day of the ſame Month following, at his Mannor of Knoll, to anſwer to ſuch Articles and Interrogatories as ſhould be objected ex officio againſt him.

Anno 1558.

The third appearance of Thomas Hitton before the ſaid Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

THe ſaid Thomas Hitton at the day prefixed, made his perſonal appearance before the Biſhop at the place appointed, to whom the Biſhop miniſtred certain Articles and interrogatories for him to anſwer unto, commanding him to ſwear, to anſwer truely and unfainedly unto them, and every part of them. The ſaid Thomas Hitton refuſed to ſwear, ſaying, It is againſt Gods Laws and good Conſcience for any man to ſwear to ſhed his own Blood, for ſo he ſhould be a Murtherer of himſelf, and become guilty of his own Death. But notwithſtanding that he refuſed to ſwear to anſwer, yet he anſwered truely and directly to every particular Article and Interrogatory propounded unto him, but ſo as was finally to their contentation, yet no doubt to the great glory of God, and comfort of the godly. This done, the Biſhop brake off his Seſſion for that time, and commanded him to Priſon again, and to appear before him in the place aforeſaid upon the Friday next following, to anſwer further as ſhould be demanded of him, granting him liberty withall to add to, or ſubtract from his former anſwers, or elſe utterly to deny and revoke the ſame.

Tho. Hitton refuſeth to ſwear againſt himſelf.

The fourth appearance of Thomas Hitton before the ſaid Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

THe day and time approaching, the ſaid Thomas Hitton appeared again accordingly, and having heard his former anſwers and confeſſions diſtinctly by the Notary read unto him, hee reformed them in certain points; to ſome hee added, from other ſome he ſubtracted, but none hee denied. Then the Biſhop perceiving his unmoveable conſtancie in the truth, ſetting learning and reaſon apart, being not able to convince him by arguments and truth, nor yet to reprove the Spirit which ſpake in him, fell to exhorting of him to have reſpect to his Souls health, and not ſo wilfully (as they termed it) to caſt away himſelf for ever, but to repent, and abjure his errors, and in ſo doing, he would be good unto him, he ſaid. When the Biſhop with all his perſwaſions could do no good with him to withdraw him from the Truth of Gods Word, then the Doctors and other the aſſiſtants attempted the like: all which notwithſtanding, the ſaid Thomas Hitton would not deſiſt nor ſhrink one jot from the truth, but both affirmed and confirmed his former Articles and confeſſions to the end; Inferring withal, that they ſinned againſt the Holy Ghoſt, in as much as they knew that Gods Word was the Truth, and that the Maſs and all Popiſh Religion is nothing but Idolatry, Lies, and open Blaſphemy againſt the Majeſty of God and his word, and contrary to Gods Word in every reſpect, and yet they would allow and maintain the ſame, contrary to their own Conſciences: whereat all the Bench was greatly offended, and commanded him to Priſon again, aſſigning him a day to come before them again.

The conſtancy of Tho. Hitton in his confeſſion.

The fifth appearance of Thomas Hitton before the ſaid Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

AT the day appointed, the ſaid Thomas Hitton appeared, to whom the Biſhop ſaid, Thomas, doeſt thou believe that any man either ſpiritual or temporal, is of ſufficient Authority to ſet forth any law or ſanction of himſelf, the breach whereof is mortal or venial ſin? To whom Thomas Hitton anſwered, that no man either ſpiritual or temporal might make any law or ſanction, the breach whereof is mortal or venial ſin, except the ſame law or ſanction be drawn out of the Word of God, or elſe grounded upon the ſame with a good Conſcience. And therefore the Church cannot ſet forth any law, the breach whereof is Mortal or Venial ſin, unleſs it be grounded upon the Word of God alſo. But if any man, or the Church of God it ſelf, do ſet forth any Law grounded upon the Word of God and good Conſcience, the breach thereof to the violator is mortal and deadly ſin. After all manner of ways and means attempted to draw this poor man from Chriſt and his T[illegible] Biſhop, ſeeing that he could not prevail, determined to ſend him to the Biſhop of Rocheſter, and ſo did, who aſſayed by all means poſſible to remove him from his former profeſſed truth. But ſeeing all his endeavors fruſtrate, and that he profited nothing, he ſignified the ſame to the Archbiſhop, and withal both went himſelf unto him, and carried the poor Priſoner with him thither alſo.

Another appearance of Tho. Hitton before the Archbiſhop.

In the afternoon of the ſame day, the ſaid Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Biſhop of Rocheſter, and divers other aſſiſtants, called the ſaid poor man before them again, and cauſed all the former Articles, Interrogatories, and Demands to be read unto him in Engliſh, to the end he ſhould either have revoked the ſame, or elſe, recanted them altogether, uſing both threats and fair promiſes to the performance thereof, but all in vain: for his Faith was built upon the Rock Chriſt Jeſus, and therefore unable to be removed with any ſtorms of perſecution whatſoever.

The ſentence of condemnation againſt Tho. Hitton.

In fine, the Archbiſhop (with mature judgment you muſt believe) conſulting with the Biſhop of Rocheſter, and other, proceeded to his condemnation, reading the Bloody Sentence of Death againſt him, and ſo was he, being condemned, delivered to the ſecular power, who carried him to the Priſon, and ſoon after he was burned for the Teſtimony of Jeſus Chriſt, as you may ſee more at large in his ſtory, for whoſe conſtancy in the truth, the everlaſting God be praiſed, Amen.

A Note of a certain good man troubled in Bulloyn the firſt year of King Edward the ſixth, for the Goſpel.

THe examination of mee William Haſtlen Gunner, in the Caſtle of high Bulloyn, in the year of our Lord, 1547. and the firſt year of the Reign of King Edward the ſixth. As I was in the Church of Bulloyn, called the Stals, upon the 10. of April being Eaſter Tueſday, reading of a godly Book, called the lamentation of a Chriſtian, againſt the Citizens of London, between the hours of three and four at afternoon, there came certain men to me as I ſtood at an Altar in the Church reading to my ſelf, and asked me what good Book I had, and I ſaid, they ſhould hear if they pleaſed: then they deſired me to read out that they might hear, and ſo did I very gladly; but I had not read long, but the Prieſts and Clerks were at their Latin Evenſong, I reading mine Engliſh Book, there came a tipſtaff for me, taking my two Books from me, and commanded me to go with him, for he ſaid I muſt go before the Councel of the Town. Then went I forthwith with him, and a little without the Church door, Sir John Bridges met us, and bade the Tipſtaff carry me to Sir Leonard Beckwith Knight, to be examined; and coming before his preſence, he asked me what Books they where that I had at the Church, and was reading of one of them openly in the Church to the people: and I ſaid ſo farr as I had read them they were good godly Books: and he ſaid, they were Hereſie, and with that he asked me how I did believe of the Sacrament of the Altar, whether I did not believe that to be the very Body of Chriſt, Fleſh, Blood, and Bones: and I asked him whether he meant that, that was in the Pixe or no? and he ſaid, Ye, even that in the Pixe: and I ſaid, that ſince I had ſure knowledge of Scriptures, I did not believe it to be the Body of Chriſt, but a bare piece of Bread, nor by Gods help will I ever believe it otherwiſe to be: then he ſaid, I was an Heretick, and asked me what I made of the Sacrament: and I ſaid, if it were duely miniſtred according to Chriſts inſtitution, that then I did believe that the faithful Communicants, in receiving that bleſſed Sacrament, did receive into their inward man, or Soul, the very Body and Blood of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt. Then ſaid he, doeſt thou not believe it to remain the very Body of Chriſt after the words of Conſecration pronounced by the Prieſt? And I ſaid, No. Then ſaid he, What doeſt thou make of the Church? I ſaid, as it is now uſed, it is a Den of Theeves, and the Sinagogue of Sathan. Thou Heretick, ſaid he, there remaineth the very Body of Chriſt. But I ſaid, that Chriſt being God and man, dwelleth not in the Temples made with mens hands: much other communication had we at that time, but but this was the effect that day. Then he asked me whether I would be forth-coming till to Morrow. And I ſaid, Sir, if you think that I will not, you may lay me where as I ſhall be ſo. Then he let me go for that night, and ſaid, we ſhall talk further with thee to Morrow; ſo I departed home. And about the ſpace of two hours after, Mr. Huntingdon the Preacher (which did much good with his Preaching in Bulloyn at that time) came to me, and ſaid, that he heard me ſpoken of at my Lord Grayes, which was then Lord Deputy of the Town and Country of Bulloyn; and I perceive, ſaid he, that you are in great danger of trouble, if you eſcape with your life: for there are ſome of the Council marvellouſly bent againſt you. I ſaid, the Lords will be done: Well, ſaid he, without you feel in your ſelf a full purpoſe, by Gods help, to ſtand earneſtly to the thing that ye have ſpoken, you ſhall do more hurt than good: Wherefore, ſaid he, if you will go to Calice, I will ſend you where you ſhall be well uſed, and be out of this danger. Then I thanked Mr. Huntington, ſaying, I purpoſe by Gods aſſiſtance to abide the uttermoſt that they can do unto me. Well then (ſaid he) I can tell you, you will be ſent for to Morrow betimes before the whole Council: that is (ſaid I) the thing that I look for. Then roſe I betimes in the Morning and went into the Market-place, that I might ſpy which way the Officer ſhould come for me; I had not tarried there long, but I ſpyed a Tipſtaff and went toward him, and asked him whom he ſought; and he ſaid, A Gunner of the great Ordnance in the Caſtle of Bulloyn: and I ſaid, that I am he: Then ſaid he, you you muſt go with me to my Lords: and I ſaid, therefore I looked. When I came there, I ſaw my Lord and the whole Council were aſſembled together in a cloſe Parlour. Doing my duty to them, my Lord ſaid to me, It is informed me that thou haſt ſeditiouſly congregate a Company together in the Church, and there in the time of Service thou didſt read unto them an Heretical Book, and haſt not reverently uſed ſilence in the time of the Divine Service, what ſayſt thou to this? I ſaid, if it pleaſe your Honour, I was in the Church a good while before any Service began, and no Body with me, reading to my ſelf alone, upon a Book that is agreeable to Gods Word, and no Hereſie in it that I read, and when it drew toward Service time, there came Men to the Church, and ſome of them coming to me whom I knew not, asking me what good Book I had; I ſaid it was a new Book that I had not yet read over: then they prayed me that I ſhould read ſo that they might hear ſome part with me; and ſo I did, not calling, pointing, nor aſſembling any Company to me. And for the Service being in Latin, that for the ſtrangeneſs of the Tongue, beſides much Superſtition joyned with it, was not underſtood of the moſt part of them that ſaid or ſung it, much leſs of them that ſtood by and did hear it, whereas by the Word of God all things in the Church or Congregation ſhould be done to the edifying of the People: and ſeeing I could have no ſuch thing by their Service, I did endeavour to edifie my ſelf, and other that were deſirous of reading godly Books. And becauſe the Church is ſo abuſed contrary to the Word of God, being beſet round about with a ſort of abominable Idols, before whom no man ought to kneel, nor do any manner of reverence, becauſe the Scriptures do curſe both the Idol and the Idol-maker, and all that do any Worſhip or Reverence unto them, or before them, for that cauſe I uſed no Reverence there. Well, ſaid my Lord, I would thou couldſt anſwer to the reſt, as well as thou haſt done to this; but I fear me thou canſt not: for it is told me that thou haſt ſpoken againſt the bleſſed Sacrament: And I ſaid, if it pleaſe your Lordſhip that did I never in all my life, nor ever will do by the Grace of God. With that my chief Accuſer, Sir Leonard Beckwith Knight, ſaid to me, Didſt thou not ſay to me yeſterday, that thou didſt not believe the Sacrament of the Altar, after the words of Conſecration by the Prieſt, to be the very Body of Chriſt, fleſh, blood and bones, as it was born of the Virgin Mary? It is true indeed that I ſaid ſo; for neither do I believe it to remain Chriſts Body, nor ever will by the Grace of God believe it ſo to be: for I believe that Chriſt with that Body that was conceived and born of the Virgin Mary, did aſcend up into Heaven, and there (according to our Belief) he ſitteth on the Right hand of God the Father, and from thence that Body ſhall come at the Day of Judgment to judge the quick and the dead; and yet in the mean while I believe, that (the Sacrament duly miniſtred according to Chriſts Inſtitution) all the faithful Receivers of this Sacrament, lifting up the eyes of their mind into Heaven where Chriſts Body is, they do receive in that Sacrament into their Soul or Inward man, the very Body of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt: yea, and I believe further, that Chriſt concerning his Divine Power, or the Power of his Godhead, is whereſoever two or three be gathered together in his Name, that he is in the midſt even amongſt them; and that he is ſo with his faithful Flock even to the Worlds end. Then they laid their heads together and had privy talk: after that two of them ſaid to me, that it was rank Hereſie that I did believe it to remain bare Bread after the Prieſt had conſecrated it; and not believing it to be the very Body of Chriſt, I was worthy to be burned: then ſaid I earneſtly unto them, Think you not, though I be a vile Abject in your ſight, and he that is moſt buſie among you to ſeek my Blood, but that my Blood ſhall be required at his or their hands? Then had they privy talk together again, after the which my Lord ſaid unto me, Thou heareſt that they here lay Hereſie to thy charge, and I am a Man of War, and have no skill in ſuch high Myſteries, wherefore thine Accuſers ſay, that thou muſt ſuffer here as an Heretick, that all the reſt of the Garriſon may beware by thee that they fall not into the like Hereſie, and ſo caſt away themſelves. Then ſaid I, I appeal from this Council to the Council of England: then ſaid my Lord, I am very glad that thou haſt appealed to the Council of England, for there are Learned men and Divines that can skill of ſuch matters, thither ſhalt thou be ſent ere it be long. Then was I carried to Sir John Abridges Houſe, and having Pen and Ink, I was bidden to write mine Articles, which were in effect thoſe points of Religion which you have heard before in my Examination: then on the Morrow, being Thurſday, and the 15*th* of April, I was brought to the Priſon in the Town, called the Marſhalſey, where I was very gently uſed: for a good Gentleman, one Mr. Waghan was the Keeper there at that time; but ſurely when I was apprehended, I had not ſo much as one peny to help my ſelf with, for we had been long unpaid: furthermore I thought in that Town of War, that there were very few or none that favoured the Word of God, for I looked for no help there, but to be hated and deſpiſed of all Men there: for I knew not paſt two or three there that had any love to the Goſpel till I was in Priſon, and then there came very many Souldiers unto me that I never knew before, and gave me Mony, ſo that I had as good as three Pound given me in a ſmall time that I was in Priſon. The 14 day of May toward night, I was ſent into England, one M. Meſſenger and one other man brought me to London even the ſame day, being Sunday at Night and the 15*th* day of May. There was a great talk over all the City of one Doctor Smith that recanted that day, they brought me to the Marſhalſea and there left me, I hearing no more of them that brought me thither: but M. Huntington as a faithful Miniſter of Jeſus Chriſt, that gave me warning before of all this trouble, came from Bulloyn to London, cauſing my Articles to be ſeen, ſo that by his painful diligence to the Council for me, after that I had been there little more than one month, I was diſcharged out of Priſon, and bid get me home to Bulloyn to my Living again.

But ſurely if I had not appealed to the Council of England, I had been burned in Bulloyn; for it was told me of them that knew much in that matter, that it was already determined ſhortly to have been accompliſhed, if I had not appealed: for the which deliverance I give praiſe to the Everliving God.

This was laid in Queen Maries Cloſet upon her Desk, againſt her coming unto her Prayers.

O Loveſom Roſe moſt redolent,
Of fading Flowers moſt freſh:
In England pleaſant is thy ſcent,
For now thou art Peerleſs.

This Roſe which beareth ſuch a ſmell,
Doth repreſent our Queen:
O liſten, that I may you tell
Her colours freſh and green.
The Love of God within her heart,
Shall beautifie her Grace:
The fear of God on the other part,
Shall ſtabliſh her in place.
This Love and Fear her Colours are,
Whereby if ſhe be known;
She may compare both nigh and far,
Unable to be overthrown.
The Love of God it will her cauſe,
Unfained if it be,
To have reſpect unto his Laws,
And hate Idolatry.
If that ſhe have the Fear of God,
And be thereto right bent:
She will do that he her bode,
And not her own intent.
O Noble Queen take heed, take heed,
Beware of your own intent:
Look ere you leap, then ſhall you ſpeed,
Haſte maketh many ſhent.
Remember Saul that Noble King,
What ſhame did him befall:
Becauſe that unto the Lords bidding
He had no luſt at all.
The Lord hath bid you ſhall love him,
And other gods defie:
Alas take heed, do not begin
To place Idolatry.
What greater Diſobedience
Againſt God may be wrought,
Than this; To move mens Conſcience
To worſhip things of nought?
What greater folly can you invent
Than ſuch men to obey?
How can you ſerve your own intent
Not foreſeeing your own decay?
And whereas firſt ye ſhould maintain
Your Realm in perfect Unity:
To rent the Peoples hearts in twain
Through falſe Idolatry.
Is this the way to get you fame,
Is this to get you love?
Is this to purchaſe you a Name,
To fight with God above?
Is this your care to ſet up Maſs,
Your Subjects Souls to ſtroy?
Is this your ſtudy no more to paſs,
Gods Poople to annoy?
Is this to Reign, to ſerve your will,
Good Men in Bonds to keep;
And to exalt ſuch as be evil,
And for your Grace unmeet?
Such as made that fond Divorce,
Your Mother to deface;
Are nigheſt you in power and force,
And moſt bounden unto your Grace.
Well, yet take heed of had-I-wiſt,
Let Gods Word bear the Bell:
If you will reign, learn to know Chriſt,
As David doth you tell.
What great preſumption doth appear,
Thus in a week or twain;
To work more ſhame than in ſeven years
Can be redreſt again?
All is done without a Law,
For will doth work in place:
And thus all Men may ſee and know
The weakneſs of your caſe.
That miſerable maſking Maſs,
Which all good Men do hate;
Is now by you brought up again,
The root of all Debate.
Your Miniſters that love Gods Word,
They feel this bitter Rod;
Who are robbed from houſe and goods,
As though there were no God.
And yet you would ſeem merciful
In the midſt of Tyranny, Anno
And [illegible]reas you maintain 1558.
Moſt vile Idolatry.
For fear that thou ſhould hear the Truth,
True Preachers may not ſpeak;
But on good Prophets you make ruth,
And unkindly them intreat.
Him have you made Lord Chancellor,
Who did your Blood moſt ſtain:
That he may ſuck the Righteous blood,
As he was wont again.
Thoſe whom our late King did love,
You do them moſt diſdain:
Theſe things do manifeſtly prove
Your colours to be but vain.
Gods Word you cannot abide,
But as your Prophets tell:
In this you may be well compared To wicked Jeſabel.
Who had 400 Prophets falſe.
And fifty on a rout:
Through whoſe falſe preaching poor Ely
Was chaſed in and out.
Gods Prophets you do evil intreat,
Baals Prieſts defend your Grace:
Thus did the Jews put Chriſt to death,
And let go Barrabas.
Hath God thus high exalted you,
And ſet you on a Throne:
That you ſhould priſon and deface
His Flock that maketh moan?
The Lord which doth his Flock defend,
As the Apple of an eye;
Of this full quickly will make an end,
And baniſh Cruelty.
Therefore my counſel pray you take,
And think thereof no ſcorn:
You ſhall find it the beſt counſel,
Ye had ſince you were born.
Put away blind affection,
Let Gods Word be Umpire.
To try our true Religion,
From this evil-favoured gear.

The Inſtruction of King Edward the Sixth, given to Sir Anthony Seyntleger, Knight of his Privy-Chamber, being of a corrupt Judgment of the Euchariſt. Upon this ſaying of an ancient Doctor of the Catholick Church.

Dicimus Euchariſtiam Panem vocari in Scripturis, Panis in quo gratiæ actæ ſunt, &c.

IN Euchariſt then there is Bread,
Whereto I do conſent:
Then with Bread are our Bodies fed,
And further what is meant?
I ſay that Chriſt in Fleſh and Blood
Is there continually,
Unto our Soul a ſpecial food,
Taking it ſpiritually.
And this Tranſubſtantiation I Believe as I have read:
That Chriſt Sacramentally
Is there in form of Bread.
St. Auſtin ſaith, the Word doth come
Unto the Element:
And there is made, he ſaith in ſum,
A perfect Sacrament.
The Element doth then remain,
Or elſe muſt needs enſue:
St. Auſtins words be nothing plain,
Nor cannot be found true.
For if the Word, as he doth ſay,
Come to the Element:
Then is not the Element away,
But bides there verament.
Yet whoſo eateth that lively food,
And hath a perfect Faith,
Receiveth Chriſt's Fleſh and Blood,
For Chriſt himſelf ſo ſaith.

Not

Anno 1558.

Not with our Teeth his Fleſh to tear,
Nor take Blood for our drink:
Too great an abſurdity it were,
So groſly for to think.
For we muſt eat him ſpiritually,
If we be ſpiritual:
And whoſo eats him carnally,
Thereby ſhall have a fall.
For he is now a Spiritual meat,
And ſpiritually we muſt
That Spiritual meat ſpiritually eat,
And leave our Carnal luſt.
Thus by the Spirit, I ſpiritually
Believe, ſay what men liſt,
None other Tranſubſtantiation I Believe of the Euchariſt.
But that there is both Bread and Wine,
Which we ſee with our eye:
Yet Chriſt is there by power Divine
To thoſe that ſpiritually
Do eat that Bread and drink that Cup,
Eſteeming it but light;
As Judas did, which eat that Sop,
Not judging it aright.
For I was taught not long agone,
I ſhould lean to the Spirit:
And let the Carnal fleſh alone,
For it doth not profit.
God ſave him that teaching me taught,
For I thereby did win,
To put from me that Carnal thought,
That I before was in.
For I believe Chriſt Corporally
In Heaven doth keep his place:
And yet Chriſt Sacramentally
Is here with us by Grace.
So that in this high Myſtery
We muſt eat Spiritual meat,
To keep his Death in Memory,
Leſt we ſhould it forget.
This do, I ſay, this have I ſaid,
This Saying ſay will I:
This Saying though I once denaid,
I will no more to die.

F I N I S.

This young Prince became a perfect School-Maſter unto old erroneous Men, ſo as no Divine could amend him, and therefore this piece is worthy of perpetual memory to his immortal fame and glory.

When Queen Mary came to her reign, a Friend of Mr. Sentlegers charged him with this his Pamphlet. Well, quoth he, content your ſelf. I perceive that a Man may have too much of Gods Bleſſing. And even here Peter began to deny Chriſt, ſuch is mens frailty.

A Note of a Letter of one John Melvin, Priſoner in Newgate.

Chriſti Electis ſalutem, Eſdr. 4.

Hoc ſeculum fecit Altiſſimus propter multos; futurum autem propter paucos.

The Almighty Lord hath made this World for many, but the World or life to come but for a few.

Pauci electi. Matt. 20.

MOſt certain it is, dearly Beloved, that Chriſts Elect be but few in compariſon of that great number which go in the broad way into everlaſting perdition, which live after the fleſh, loving this preſent evil world, deny God in word and deed, whoſe eyes are blinded, and their hearts hardened.

Pauci qui ſalvabuntur, Luke 13. 2 Tim. 2. Cognovit Dominus qui ſunt ejus.

Moſt certain it is alſo, that our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt hath and knoweth his own, whoſe Names are written in the Book of Life, redeemed with the moſt precious Blood of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt. So that the eternal Father knoweth them that be his.

The Almighty and Eternal God grant, that we may have the teſtimony of our Conſcience, and the Spirit of God to bear record with our Spirits, that we be his elect Children, walking in the Spirit, not fulfilling the luſts of the Fleſh, but as Chriſts Members, having Chriſt Jeſus fixed before our eyes, he being to us the true Way, the infallible Verity, and the eternal Life. Chriſt hath given us example, let us follow him as dear Children, for Gods delight is to behold his Saints which be in the Earth. Let us put on the whole Armour of God, and walk in the light in theſe evil days, in the which Satan in his Angels ſeeketh whom he may devour. The Almighty Lord deliver us from the mouths of thoſe unſhamefaſt Dogs. They truly ſeek ours, and not us unto the Lord. Eſdras ſaith and writeth truly, The World is made for them, and they for the World. Dearly bought, let us remember Chriſt which ſaith, I have choſen you out of the world, you ſhall be hated of all worldly Men. Did ever the Covetous, Idolaters, Oppreſſors, or Whoremongers love us? Nay, they love Maſs-mongers, which ſay, Peace, peace, when there is no peace. Nay, either they flatter the ears, or elſe they ſay nothing, as dumb Dogs not able to bark, of whom be you ware; for though they come in Sheeps cloathing, they be ravening Wolves, whoſe damnation ſleepeth not, from whoſe captivity the holy will of God ſave and preſerve you, Amen.

Sanctis qui ſunt in terra, & præclaris his toto animo delectabor.

Ego vos elegi è mundo. Regnum meum non eſt de hoc mundo.

Ezek. 33, & 34.

Dearly Beloved, we having the record of our Conſcience, that we be very Members in Chriſts Body, ſeparate from that malignant Antichriſts Church: Let us rejoyce in Conſcience, and in the Lord, having heavenly hope in all his Promiſes, which be eternal and moſt ſure to us in Chriſt our Saviour, who loſeth none of all them, whom the Eternal Father hath given him, but at his appearing to be our merciful Judge, ſhall raiſe us up at the laſt day; for the Trumpet of God ſhall blow, and be heard of all Adams Poſterity, ſounding, Venite ad Judicium, Come unto Judgment, come and be judged. Let us therefore be prepared, having the wedding Garment, yea, the whole Armour of God, the marriage Garment, clear Lamps, that is, pure hearts, and burning heavenly light in the ſame. Let us prepare our ſelves richly to reſtore to our Lord and Maſter our Talents, with the increaſe of heavenly living and occupying; then without all doubt, we ſhall hear that moſt bleſſed wiſh of our alone Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, who ſhall then ſay, Rejoyce good Servants, I will make you Stewards over many things: Enter into the everlaſting Reſt and Kingdom, which hath been prepared for you from the beginning. This is the Kingdom of Jeſus Chriſt, which at this preſent is in Babylon, and baniſhed to the Deſart, the troubleſom Waters of Satan in the Antichriſt and his Shavelings, ſpewed out of Chriſts mouth. The Lord be our aid, avenger and deliverer when his holy will is, Amen.

John 17.

Auguſtine.

Dearly bought with the moſt precious Blood of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, that we be not deceived by the Antichriſt; let us ponder, weigh, mark and ſtudy the heavenly Doctrine of our Saviour Chriſt in his laſt Supper: the Text is, Benedixit, dixit bene, gratias egit; he ſpake heavenly and well, he gave thanks, he took Bread, brake it and gave it to his Diſciples, ſaying, Take, eat this Sacramental Bread, and me the Bread of Life which came down from Heaven, which giveth life to the World; take true Faith, heavenly Hope kindled with Chriſtian Charity, thankſgiving for my death; Let theſe heavenly Vertues enter into your Souls, then enter I. This is my Body: This is the true eating of my Body, which is given to the death of the Croſs, for the ranſom and ſins of Gods Elect. Likewiſe after Supper he took the Cup, he ſpake well, gave thanks, and gave it them, ſaying, Drink ye all of this: drink, I ſay, by this infallible Verity and everlaſting Word joyned and annexed with this Cup, my Blood which is ſhed from before the beginning of the World, for many, in remiſſion of ſins: he or ſhe that thus dwelleth in me, and I in him, eateth my fleſh and drinketh my Blood. St. Auguſtine ſaith, Why prepareſt thou thy Tooth and Belly? believe and thou haſt eaten. St. Bernard ſaith, When Faith, Hope, Chriſtian Love, and thankſgiving for Chriſts death enter into a Chriſtian, Chriſt entereth.

Quid paras dentem & ventrem? crede & manducaſti.

Eccleſia cum paucis diebus habuit quantum ad humanitem, modo fide tenet, oculis non videt.

And again St. Auguſtine ſaith upon theſe words of Chriſt Ye ſhall always have the poor with you, but me ſhall ye not have always with you: The Church had him but a few days touching his humanity, now they have him by Faith, with theſe eyes they do not ſee him. O Jeſus Chriſt thou Son of the living God, which art in the boſom of thy Father, God with God, the very image of God the Father Eternal, give us victory over this Antichriſt in thy moſt precious Blood. Be faithful to the end, and our Saviour ſhall crown us in glory; let us ſanctifie the Name of God in thought, word and deed.

I ſay unto the Papiſt, and will not flatter,
Our God is in Heaven whom they will not ſee:
And is no ſuch little pretty matter,
As their god the Pope faineth him to be.
Pray for all the Preachers of the Verity,
That God may give us grace and conſtancy.
They ſing and ſay, they have him in a ſtring:
Tye not the Dog ſo, for fear of hanging.
To all the Faithful, whoſe Names in general,
In the Book of Life, by Chriſt are written all.
The godly thought and patient mind,
Doth liberty in Priſon find.
Whoſo to patience can attain,
Shall find in Priſon is no pain.
Thrall, trouble, bound or free,
As pleaſeth God, ſo ſhall all bee.
Wherefore I never will forſake
What pleaſeth God lay on my back.

John Melvin, Preacher and Priſoner in Newgate.

A Note concerning the Trouble of Julius Palmer, lately come to my hands.

To his aſſured Friend and Brother in Chriſt, Mr. Perry, Preacher at Beverſtone, give theſe.

MAſter Perry, after my hearty Commendations in the Lord Jeſus Chriſt unto you and your Wife, &c. whereas you have written unto me for my help in ſtopping the malicious and envious mouth of Thomas Thackam, I would be as glad as any man to teſtifie the Truth, both for that I know of the ſhameleſs malice of the ſaid party againſt the Members of Chriſt, as alſo the godly and vertuous behaviour of Palmer both before he was in Priſon, and after in Priſon, with the credit of that good and godly work of that Hiſtory: but ſurely many things are out of my head, which I cannot as yet remember. And for thoſe things I know, I write unto you. And firſt as touching the friendſhip ſhewed unto the Lady Vane, and his zeal therein uttered, truth it is that he received her into his houſe for Mony for a ſmall ſpace, in the which time they two did not well agree, for that ſhe could not ſuffer his wickedneſs of words and geſtures unreproved, but that his Wife many times, being of more honeſty, made the matter well again: but to be ſhort, ſuch was his friendſhip in the end towards that good Lady, being out of his houſe, that ſhe feared no man more for her life than him. And I being her Man, ſhe gave me great charge always to beware of him. As touching his friendſhip towards John Bolton in Priſon, I am ſure he never found any, as they that uſed to viſit him can ſomewhat ſay: Except you account this friendſhip, that he being bereft of his ſenſes, Thackam wrought him to yield unto the Papiſts, and as a right Member of them became his Surety that he ſhould be obedient unto them. And he, being burdened in Conſcience therewith, fled away unto Geneva: for the which flying Thackam had nothing ſaid unto him, which ſheweth that he was their Inſtrument. And this friendſhip to John Bolton; for Downer, I have heard no evil of him; for Gately and Radley now Vicar of St. Lawrence, and Bowyer a Tanner, they three left no means unpractiſed to catch and perſecute the Members of Chriſt, as I my ſelf can well prove. As touching Palmer, for that I many times frequented his company in his Lodging, he would utter ſometimes unto me the grief of his mind. Among other things once he told me, that for that he heard he was ſomewhat ſuſpected with the Woman of the houſe, he was much grieved withal, the which he uttered with many tears, I then counſelling him to depart thence to avoid the occaſion of offence, he ſaid no, but the Lord ſhould try him ere it were long: for, ſaid he, Thackam hath let me his School, and now would have it again, and becauſe I will not let him have it this he hath brought upon me, but God forgive him. Afterward being in Priſon, I talking with him at the Grate, he ſhewed me his Judgment of the Scriptures, and delivered it unto me, what became of it I know not now. He praiſed God highly for his eſtate, and then he ſaid he truſted it would appear whether Thackam had ſaid of him well or not. And further he ſaid, that now Thackam hath his will to have his School again: for if I would have yielded up the School, he would have ſent me away. I never truſted him ſo well, ſaid he, to communicate my mind unto him before witneſs, but ſometime alone, and therefore he hath deviſed a Letter in my Name, and brought it to light, to cauſe me to be examined of my Conſcience. This is as much as I can ſay at this time. Thus fare you well in the Lord, Amen. From Croſly this 18. of May.

Yours to Command in Chriſt
John Moyer Miniſter.

Anno 1558.

Have me commended, I pray you, to all my Friends at Reading.

A Note of Julius Palmer.

ALſo being at Magdalen Colledge about a Month before he was burned, and reaſoning againſt one Barwick Maſter of Art, ſometime his familiar Friend and old Acquaintance in the ſaid Colledge; after much talk Barwick ſaid unto him, Well Palmer, now thou talkeſt boldly and ſtoutly at thy pleaſure; If thou wert brought to a Stake, thou wouldſt tell me another tale. Take heed, it is an hard matter to burn. Hereunto Palmer anſwered, Indeed it is a hard matter for him to burn that hath his Soul linked to his Body, as a Thiefs Foot is tied in a pair of Fetters. But if a man be once able, through Gods help, to ſeparate and divide the Soul from the Body, for him it is no harder thing to burn, than for me to eat this Crum of Bread.

A true Copy of the Confeſſion of Patrick Patingham, ſent out of Newgate to certain of his Friends.

I Patrick Patingham, being condemned for the Verity of Gods Truth, that is to ſay, in confeſſing of one God, which was the Creator of all things viſible and inviſible, and alſo that he made thoſe by his Son, whom he hath made heir of all things. And alſo I confeſs, that he is the only begotten Son of God, in whom we have redemption, even the forgiveneſs of ſins. And alſo in confeſſing Gods moſt holy Church, being builded upon the foundation of the Apoſtles and Prophets, Chriſt Jeſus being the Head Corner-ſtone. In whom, ſaith St. Paul, every building coupled together groweth to an holy Temple in the Lord, in whom I believe I am builded together as a Member, and made an habitation for God in the Spirit. And alſo I confeſs, that Chriſt is the Head of the Holy Church, as St. Paul ſaith, and that God is Chriſts Head.

And alſo I had ten Articles, that is to ſay, againſt their wicked Traditions and Commandments which they uſe, which are againſt the Commandments of God, whereof they did condemn me, not ſuffering me to ſpeak in the Conſiſtory-houſe, but condemning me, my cauſe not heard. But yet I did proteſt unto them, that their Church or Synagogue is of Satan, that is to ſay, Satan being the Head thereof. Furthermore, my Friend or Friends unknown, I have received your Letter, and read it over, wherein you ſay that I am in a blaſphemous Error. Indeed Friends I confeſs, that it is an Error; If you will make my belief, that is to ſay, that Chriſt is the Son of the Living God to be an Error, and to believe that there is one God, as St. Paul ſaith, and one Mediator betwixt God and Man, even the Man Chriſt Jeſus. And although there be that are called Gods, whether in Heaven or in Earth, as there be Gods many, and Lords many, yet unto us there is but one God, which is the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him, and one Lord Jeſus Chriſt, by whom are all things,

Anno 1558.

things, and we by him. I believe that there is but one Lord, one Faith, one Baptiſm, and one God in all, and above all, and through all, which only God, as Saint Paul ſaith, worketh in all Creatures that believe in him, and ſpeaketh in them, as St. Paul ſaith; God in times paſt diverſly and many ways ſpake unto the Fathers by Prophets, but in theſe laſt days he ſpake unto us by his Son, whom he hath made heir of all things. My Friend or friends, be it known unto you, that this is no errour, as ye ſuppoſe, but it is the Truth of Gods will, that we ſhould believe, as St. John ſaith; That Chriſt Jeſus is the Son of the living God and in ſo believing we ſhould have everlaſting life. Thus with love I write unto you, praying God night and day to deliver you from evil which is in you, and to keep you from it. Wherefore my Friend or Friends, you are not crucified with Chriſt, you are not dead with him in Baptiſm, nor do you know God, or his Son whom he hath ſent, or his commandments which he hath commanded and yet will ye teach other, with moſt hearty Prayer praying to God for you continually.

Patrick Patingham.

A note of a certain Letter of William Tyms.

GRace, mercy, and peace from God the Father, through the mercies of his dear Son Jeſus Chriſt, our Lord and only Saviour, with the comfort of his holy Spirit, that as you have full godly begun, even ſo you may continue to the end, to the Glory of God, and your everlaſting comfort, which thing to do I pray God to give you grace, who is the giver of all good and perfect gifts to the glory of his holy name, Amen.

My dear Siſters, after moſt hearty commendations unto you, and alſo moſt hearty thanks-giving unto you for all the great kindneſs that you have always ſhewed unto me moſt unworthy of the ſame: I certifie you that I am very glad to hear of your good health, which I pray God long to continue to his glory. And eſpecially I do much rejoyce in your moſt godly Conſtancy in the Goſpel of Chriſt, which is the Power of God unto Salvation, unto ſo many as believe it. Therefore (my dear hearts) go forward as you have godly begun: for the time will come that theſe cruel Tyrants, which now ſo cruelly perſecute the true Members of Chriſt, ſhall ſay for very anguiſh of mind; Theſe are they whom we ſometime had in deriſion, and jeſted upon. We fools thought their life to have been very madneſs, and their end to have been without honour: But lo how they are counted among the Children of God, and their Portion is amongſt the Saints. Therefore we have erred from the way of Truth. The light of righteouſneſs hath not ſhined unto us, and the Sun of underſtanding roſe not upon us. We have wearied our ſelves in the way of wickedneſs and deſtruction. Tedious ways have we gon, but as for the way of the Lord we have not known it. What good hath our pride done unto us? or what profit hath the Pomp of Riches brought us? All theſe things have paſſed away as a ſhadow, or as a meſſenger running before: As a Ship that paſſeth over the Waves of the Water, which when it is gon, by the Trace thereof cannot be found, neither the path it the floods, &c. For as ſoon as we were born, we began inordinately to draw to our end, and have ſhewed no token of vertue, but are conſumed in our own wickedneſs. Such words ſhall they that thus have ſinned ſpeak in the hell, &c. But the righteous ſhall live for evermore, their reward is alſo with the Lord, and remembrance with the Higheſt: therefore ſhall they receive a glorious Kingdom, and a beautiful Crown at the Lords hands; for with his right hand ſhall he cover them, and with his holy Arm ſhall he defend them &c. The Souls of the righteous are in the hands of God, and the pains of death ſhall not touch them, but in the ſight of the unwiſe they appear to die, and their end is taken for very deſtruction, but they are in reſt. And though they ſuffer pain before men, yet is their hope full of immortality. They are puniſhed but in few things, nevertheleſs in many things ſhall they be well rewarded? for God proveth them, and findeth them meet for himſelf: yea, as the gold in the Furnace doth he trie them, and receiveth them as a burnt offering; and when the time cometh, they ſhall be looked upon, the righteous ſhall ſhine as the ſparks that run through the red Buſh, they ſhall judge the Nations, and have dominion over the People, and their Lord ſhall Reign for ever. They that put their truſt in him ſhall underſtand the Truth, and ſuch as be faithful will agree unto him in love, and he ſhall be a Pillar in the Temple of God, and ſhall no more go out, and there ſhall be written upon him the name of God. And they ſhall lie under the Altar (which is Chriſt) crying with a loud voice, ſaying: How long tarrieſt thou Lord, holy and true to judge and avenge our Blood on them that dwell on the earth? and they ſhall have long white Garments given unto them, and it ſhall be ſaid unto them, that they ſhould reſt yet for a little ſeaſon, till the number of their fellows and Brethren of them, that ſhould be killed as they were, were fulfilled. For, as St. John ſaith, they are worthy that thus overcome, to be cloathed in white Array, and their names ſhall not be put out of the Book of life, but ſhall be ſeperated from the Goats and ſet on Chriſts right hand, hearing his ſweet and comfortable voice, when he ſhall ſay; Come ye bleſſed of my Father, and poſſeſs the Kingdom prepared for you from the beginning of the World: And the very ready way to obtain the ſame, is, as our Maſter Chriſt ſaith, to forſake our ſelves, taking up our Croſs, following our Maſter Chriſt, which for the joy that was ſet before him abode the Croſs, and deſpiſed the ſhame, and is ſet down on the Throne at the right hand of God: therefore let us follow his example in ſuffering for his Word, ſeeing that he of his merciful goodneſs ſuffered ſo much for us when we were his enemies: for it was our ſin that killed Chriſt, and he by his death hath made us alive. Therefore with joy (ſeeing all theſe his merciful benefits purchaſed for us only by his death and blood-ſhedding) let us with boldneſs confeſs his holy Word before this wicked generation, even to death, when we be called thereto, and ſo be well aſſured, that our lives be not in the hands of men, but in Gods hands. Therefore (my dear Siſters) as you have godly begun, ſo go forward even through many Tribulations, even into the everlaſting Kingdom of Heaven. To the which, God the Father of all mercy, for his dear Son Chriſts ſake, bring both you and all yours, Amen.

Yours to command, to my poor Power,
William Tyms.

Another Sermon of Maſter Latimer concerning his playing at Cards

NOw you have heard what is meant by this firſt Card, and how you ought to play with it, I purpoſe again to deal unto you another Card, almoſt of the ſame ſute; for they be of ſo nigh affinity, that one cannot be well played without the other. The firſt Card declared, that you ſhould not kill, which might be divers ways, as being angry with your Neghbour, in mind, in countenance, in word, or deed. It declared alſo how you ſhould ſubdue the paſſions of Ire, and ſo clear evermore your ſelves from them: and where this Card doth kill in you theſe ſtubborn Turks of Ire; this ſecond Card will not only they ſhould be mortified in you, but that you your ſelves ſhall cauſe them to be likewiſe mortified in your Neighbour, if that your ſaid Neighbour hath been through your occaſion moved unto Ire, either in countenance, word, or deed, Now let us hear therefore the Tenour of this Card.

When thou makeſt thine oblation at mine Altar, and there doſt remember that they Neighbour hath any thing againſt thee, lay down there thy oblation, and go firſt and reconcile thy Neighbour, and then come and offer thy oblation. This Card was ſpoken by Chriſt, as teſtifieth St. Mark in his fifth Chapter, againſt all ſuch as do perſume to come unto the Church to make oblation

oblation unto God either by Prayer, or any other deed of Charity, not having their Nighbours reconciled. Reconciling is as much to ſay, as to reſtore thy Neighbour unto Charity, which by thy words or deeds is moved againſt thee: then if ſo be it that thou haſt ſpoken to, or by thy Neighbour, whereby he is moved to ire or wrath, thou muſt lay down thy Oblation. Oblations be prayers, almſ-deeds, or any work of Charity; theſe be called oblations to God. Lay down therefore thine oblation, begin to do none of theſe foreſaid works before thou goeſt unto thy Neighbour, and confeſs thy fault unto him, declaring thy mind, that if thou haſt offended him, thou art glad and willing to make him amends, as farr forth as thy words and ſubſtance will extend, requiring him not to take it at the worſt. Thou art ſorry in thy mind, that thou ſhouldeſt be occaſion of his offending. What manner of Card is this will ſome ſay? Why? What have I to do with my Neighbours or Brothers malice? as Cain ſaid; Have I the keeping of my Brother, or ſhall I anſwer for him and for his faults? This were no reaſon: As for my ſelf, I thank God I own no man malice nor diſpleaſure, if other own me any, at their own peril be it. Let every man anſwer for himſelf. Nay Sir, not ſo, as you may underſtand by this Card: for it ſaith; If thy Neighbour hath any thing, any malice againſt thee, through thine occaſion, lay even down, ſaith Chriſt, thine oblation; Pray not to me, do no good deeds for me, but go firſt unto thy Neighbour, and bring him again unto my flock, which hath forſaken the ſame through thy naughty words, mocks, ſcorns, or diſdainous Countenance, and ſo forth: and then come and offer thine oblation, then do thy devotion, then do thy almſdeeds, then pray, if thou wilt have me hear thee. O good Lord, this is an hard reckoning, that I muſt go and ſeek him out that is offended with me, before I pray or do any good deed. I cannot go unto him. Peradventure he is an hundred miles from me, beyond the ſeas, or elſe I cannot tell where; if he were here nigh, I would with all my heart go unto him, This is a lawful excuſe before God on this faſhion, That thou wouldeſt in thy heart be glad to reconcile thy Neighbour, if he were preſent, and that thou thinkeſt in thy heart, whenſoever thou ſhall meet with him, to go unto him, and require him charitably to forgive thee, and ſo never intend to come from him, until the time that you both depart one from the other true Brethren in Chriſt. Yet peradventure there be ſome in the world that be ſo deviliſh and ſo hardhearted, that they will not apply in any condition unto Charity. For all that, do that lieth in thee by all charitable means to bring him to unity: If he will in no wiſe apply thereunto, thou mayſt be ſorrowful in thy heart, that by thine occaſion that man or woman continueth in ſuch a damnable ſtate: this notwithſtanding, if thou do the beſt that lieth in thee to reconcile him, according to ſome Doctors mind, thou art diſcharged towards God. Nevertheleſs, St. Auguſtin doubteth in this caſe, whether thy oblations, prayers, or good deeds, ſhall avail thee before God, or no, until thy Neighbour come again to good ſtate, whom thou haſt brought out of the way. Doth this Noble Doctor doubt therein? what aileth us to be ſo bold and count it but a ſmall fault or none, to bring another man out of patience for every trifle that ſtandeth not with our mind? You may ſee what a grievous thing this is to bring another man out of patience, that peradventure you cannot bring in again with all the goods that you have: for ſurely after the opinion of great wiſe men, friendſhip once broken will be never well made whole again. Wherefore you ſhall hear what Chriſt ſaith unto ſuch perſons; Saith Chriſt, I came down into this world, and ſo took on mee bitter paſſion for mans ſake, by the merits whereof I intended to make unity and peace in mankind, to make man Brother unto me, and ſo to expel the dominion of Sathan the Devil, which worketh nothing elſe but diſſention: and yet now there be a great number of you that have profeſſed my name, and ſay you be Chriſtian men, which do rebel againſt my purpoſe and mind. I go about to make my fold; you go about to break the ſame, and kill my flock. How dareſt thou (ſaith Chriſt) preſume to come unto my Altar, unto my Church, or into my preſence, to make oblation unto me, that takeſt on thee to ſpoil my Lambs? I go about like a good Shepha[illegible]er them together: and thou doſt the contrary, evermore ready to divide and loſe them. Who made thee ſo bold to meddle with my ſilly beaſts, which I bought ſo dearly with my precious Blood? I warn thee out of my ſight, come not in my Preſence, I refuſe thee and all thy works, except thou go and bring home again my Lambs which thou haſt loſt: wherefore, if thou thy ſelf intend to be one of mine, lay even down by and by thine Oblation, and come no further toward mine Altar, but go and ſeek them without any queſtions, as it becometh a true and faithful ſervant. A true and faithful ſervant, whenſoever his Maſter commandeth him to do any thing, he maketh no ſtops nor queſtions, but goeth forth with a good mind: and it is not unlike he continuing in ſuch a good mind and will, ſhall well overcome all dangers and ſtops whatſoever betides him in his journey, and bring to paſs effectually his Maſters will and pleaſure. In the contrary, a ſlothful ſervant, when his Maſter commandeth him to do any thing, by and by he will ask queſtions, where, when, which way, and ſo forth, and ſo he putteth every thing in doubt, that although both his errand and way be never ſo plain, yet by his untoward and ſlothful behaviour, his Maſters commandment is either undone quite, or elſe ſo done, that it ſhall ſtand to no good purpoſe. Go now forth with the good ſervant, and ask no ſuch queſtions, and put no doubts, be not aſhamed to do thy Maſters and Lords will and commandment. Go, as I ſaid, unto thy Neighbour that is offended by thee, and reconcile him (as is aforeſaid) whom thou haſt loſt by thy unkind words, by thy ſcorns, mocks, and other diſdainous words and behaviours, and be not nice to ask of him the cauſe why he is diſpleaſed with thee, require of him Charitably to remit, and ceaſe not till you both depart one from the other true Brethren in Chriſt. Do not like the ſlouthful ſervant thy Maſters meſſage with cautels and doubts; come not to thy Neighbour whom thou haſt offended, and give him a penniworth of ale, or a banquet, and ſo make him a fair Countenance, thinking that by thy drink or dinner he will ſhew thee like Countenance. I grant you may both laugh and make good chear, and yet there may remain a bag of ruſty malice, twenty year old, in thy Neighbours Boſom; when he departeth from thee with a good Countenance, thou thinkeſt all is well then. But now I tell thee it is worſe then it was, for by ſuch cloaked Charity, where thou doeſt offend before Chriſt but once, thou haſt offended twice herein: for now thou goeſt about to give Chriſt a mock, if he would take it of thee: Thou thinkeſt to blind thy Maſter Chriſts commandment. Beware, do not ſo, for at length he will overmatch thee, and take thee tardy whatſoever thou be, and ſo as I ſaid, it ſhould be better for thee not to do his meſſage on this faſhion, for it will ſtand thee in no purpoſe. What? ſome will ſay, I am ſure he loveth me well enough. He ſpeaketh fair to my face, yet for all that thou maieſt be deceived. It proveth not true love in a man to ſpeak fair. If he love thee with his mind and heart, he loveth thee with his eyes, with his tongue, with his feet, with his hands and his Body; for all theſe parts of a mans Body be obedient to the will and mind. He loveth thee with his eyes that looketh chearfully on thee, when thou meeteſt with him, and is glad to ſee thee proſper and do well. He loveth thee with his tongue, that ſpeaketh well by thee behind thy back, or giveth thee good Counſel. He loveth thee with his feet, that is willing to go to help thee out of trouble and buſineſs. He loveth thee with his hands, that will help thee in time of neceſſity, by giving ſome almſ-deeds, or with any other occupation of the hand. He loveth thee with his Body, that will labour with his Body, or put his Body in danger to do good for thee, or to deliver thee from adverſity, and ſo forth, with the other members of his Body. And if thy Neighbour will do according to theſe ſayings, then thou maieſt think that he loveth thee well, and thou in like wiſe oughteſt to declare and open thy love unto thy Neighbour in like faſhion, or elſe you be bound one to reconcile the other, till this perfect love be ingendered amongſt you. It may fortune thou wilt ſay, I am content to do the beſt for my Neighbour that I can ſaving my ſelf harmleſs. I promiſe thee Chriſt will not hear this excuſe; for he himſelf ſuffered harm for our ſakes, and for our Salvation was put to extreame death. I wis if it had pleaſed him, he might have ſaved us and never felt pain; but in ſuffering pains and death, he did give us example and teach us how we ſhould do one for another, as he did for us all. For, as he ſaith himſelf, he that will be mine, let him deny himſelf, and follow me in bearing my Croſs and ſuffering my pains. Wherefore we muſt needs ſuffer pain with Chriſt to do our Neighbour good, as well with the Body and all his members, as with heart and mind.

our

Now I truſt you wot what your Card meaneth, let us ſee how that we can play with the ſame. Whenſoever it ſhall happen you to go and make your Oblation unto God, ask of your ſelves this queſtion, Who art thou? the anſwer as you know is, I am a Chriſtian man. Then you muſt again ask unto your ſelf, What Chriſt requireth of a Chriſtian man? by and by caſt down your trump, your heart, and look firſt of one Card, then of another. The firſt Card telleth thee thou ſhalt not kill, thou ſhalt not be angry, thou ſhalt not be out of patience. This done, thou ſhalt look if there by any more Cards to take up, and if thou look well, thou ſhalt ſee another Card of the ſame ſute, wherein thou ſhalt know that thou art bound to Reconcile thy Neighbour. Then caſt thy trump upon them both, and gather them all three together, and do according to the vertue of thy Cards, and ſurely thou ſhalt not loſe. Thou ſhalt firſt kill the great Turks, and diſcomfit and thruſt them down. Thou ſhalt again fetch home Chriſts Sheep that thou haſt loſt, whereby thou maieſt go both patiently, and with a quiet mind unto the Church, and make thy Oblation unto God, and then without doubt he will hear thee. But yet Chriſt will not accept our Oblation (although we be in patience, and have reconciled our Neighbour) if that our Oblation be made of another mans ſubſtance, but it muſt be our own. See therefore that thou haſt gotten thy goods according to the Laws of God and of thy Prince. For if thou getſt thy goods by polling and extortion, or by any other unlawful ways, then if thou offer a thouſand pound of it, it will ſtand thee in no good effect, for it is not thine. In this point a great number of executors do offend, for when they be made rich by other mens goods, then they will take upon them to build Churches, to give Ornaments to God and his Altar, to gild Saints, and to do many good works therewith; but it ſhall be all in their own name, and for their own glory. Wherefore (ſaith Chriſt) they have in this world their reward, and ſo their Oblations be not their own, nor be they acceptable before God. Another way God will refuſe thy voluntary Oblation, as thus: If ſo be it, that thou haſt gotten never ſo truly thy goods, according both to the Laws of God and man, and haſt with the ſame goods not relieved thy Poor Neighbour, when thou haſt ſeen him hungry thirſty, and naked, he will not take thy Oblation when thou ſhalt offer the ſame, becauſe he will ſay unto thee: When I was hungry, thou gaveſt me no meat; when I was thirſty, thou gaveſt me no drink; and when I was naked thou didſt not cloath me. Wherefore I will not take thy Oblation, becauſe it is none of thine. I left it thee to relieve thy Poor Neighbours, and thou haſt not therein done according unto this my commandment; Miſericordiam volo, & non ſacrificium, I had rather have mercy done, than Sacrifice or Oblation. Wherefore until thou doeſt the one more than the other, I will not accept thine Oblation. Evermore beſtow the greateſt part of thy goods in works of mercy, and the leſs part in voluntary works. Voluntary works be called all manner of offering in the Church, except your four offering days, and your tithes; ſetting up candles, gilding and painting, building of Churches, giving of Ornaments, going on Pilgrimages, making of High-ways, and ſuch other, be called voluntary works, which works be of themſelves marvellous good, and convenient to be done. Neceſſary works, and works of mercy are called the commandments, the four offering days, your tithes, and ſuch other that be long to the commandments; and works of mercy conſiſt in relieving and viſiting thy Poor Neighbours. Now then, if men be ſo fooliſh of themſelves, that they will beſtow the moſt part of their goods in voluntary works, which they be not bound to keep, but willingly and by their devotion; and leave the neceſſary works undone, which they are bound to do, they and all their voluntary works are like to go unto everlaſting damnation. And I promiſe you, if you build an hundred Churches, give as much as you can make to gilding of Saints, and honouring of the Church, and if thou go as many Pilgrimages as thy Body can well ſuffer, and offer as great Candels as Oaks, if thou leave the works of mercy and the commandments undone, theſe works ſhall nothing avail thee. No doubt the voluntary works be good, and ought to be done; but yet they muſt be ſo done, that by their occaſion the neceſſary works, and the works of mercy be not decayed and forgotten: If you will build a glorious Church unto God, ſee firſt your ſelves to be in Charity with your Neighbours, and ſuffer not them to bee offended by your works. Then when ye come into your Pariſh Church, you bring with you the Holy Temple of God; as St. Paul ſaith, you your ſelves be the very Holy Temples of God: And Chriſt ſaith by his Prophet; In you will I reſt, and intend to make my manſion and abiding place: Again, if yo liſt to gild and paint Chriſt in your Churches, and honour him in veſtiments, ſee that before your eyes the poor people die not for lack of meat, drink, and clothing. Then do you deck the very true Temple of God, and honour him in rich veſtures, that will never be worn, and ſo forth uſe your ſelves according unto the commandments; and then finally ſet up your Candles, and they will report what a glorious light remaineth in your hearts, for it is not fitting to ſee a dead man light Candles. Then, I ſay, go your Pilgrimages, build your material Churches, do all your voluntary works, and they will then repreſent you unto God, and teſtifie with you, that you have provided him a glorious place in your hearts. But beware I ſay again, that you do not run ſo far in your voluntary works, that ye do quite forget your neceſſary works of mercy, which you are bound to keep: you muſt have ever a good reſpect unto the beſt and worthieſt works toward God, to be done firſt and with more efficacy, and the other to be done ſecondarily. Thus if you do with the other that I have ſpoken of before, ye may come according to the tenor of your Cards, and offer your Oblations and Prayers to our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who will both hear and accept them to your everlaſting joy and glory, to the which he bring us, and all thoſe whom hee ſuffered death for, Amen.

A Note of William Gie.

ONe William Gie, Servant with Maſter Revet Merchant, brought a Bible and Service Book of Richard Waterſon, who then dwelt with Maſter Duixlie in Pauls Church-yard, and one Spilman bound the Book: and when the ſaid Gie, had inquired for the ſaid Richard to have his Book at Duixiles, anſwer was made that he was not within, and ſo the ſaid Gie went his way to Spilmans for the Book; and becauſe he found it not done, he left it there, and immediatly ſearch was made in Spilmans houſe, and the ſaid Bible and Service Book was found and carried to Boner then Biſhop of London. He having the Books, commanded Spilman for the binding thereof to Lollards Tower; and as Cluny went for the key thereof Spilman conveighed himſelf away. After that, Waterſon and Gie being apprehended by Robin Calie, John Hill, and John Avales, and being two days in the Counter, were brought before Boner and other Commiſſioners. Being examined, Doctor Story demanded Gie; Wherefore, he brought the Bible? He anſwered, to ſerve God withal. Then ſaid Boner; Our Lady Mattins would ſerve a Chriſtian man to Serve God. The Bible, ſaid Story, would breed Hereſies; a Bible Bable were more fit for thee. So they concluded that either of them ſhould have forty ſtripes lacking one, and Boner ſaid it was the law. And they ſaid to Waterſon, if he would pay forty pound, he ſhould be releaſed of his ſtripes: at length they came to 10. pound, and when they ſaw he would not, they made a Warrant to Maſter Grafton, and ſent Waterſon and Gie to Bridewel to be beaten upon the Croſs. And becauſe the matter ſhould not be ſlightly handled, Story was ſent with them to ſee it done. Gie being whipped upon the Croſs, interceſſion was made that he might be forgiven part of his penance.

A Note

A Note of Michaels Wife.

Michaels Wife aforementioned, being Priſoner in Ipſwich for Religion, reſorted daily from the Priſon to her Husbands houſe, and returned again, keeping Faith and promiſe. And her Husband thereat being fearful, ſhe would comfort him, ſaying, ſhe came not to trouble him, neither ſhould he ſuſtain trouble by her. Wherefore ſhe would will him to be of good chear, for her coming was of good will to ſee him and her Children, and not to bring them into trouble, but to ſhew her duty therein while ſhe might have liberty.

A Note of John Spicer.

IN Queen Maries time there was one John Spicer, of whom mention is made before, he being at the Stake, ready to give his life for the Truth, a Bag of Gunpowder was brought him by his Son. And another ſtanding by (one named Maſter Beckingham) took the Gunpowder of his Son, and put it under the Girdle of the ſaid Spicer, and exhorted him to be ſtrong in the Lord; alſo divers of the Sheriffs Servants comforted him in like manner, and deſired him not to faint. Unto whom Spicer anſwered? Doubt you not of me (ſaith he) my Soul is quiet; but be ye ſtrong and ſtand faſt in the Lord Jeſus, and commit your ſelves to him in the confeſſion of his holy name, and profeſſion of his Truth.

A Note of Mandrel.

Mandrel ſtanding at the Stake, as is mentioned before, Doctor Geffery the Chancellor ſpake to him, wiſhing him to yield to the Doctors, who many hundred years had taught otherwiſe then he doth believe, &c. To whom Mandrel anſwered; Maſter Chancellor (ſaid he) trouble me with none of your Doctors whatſoever they ſay; but bring me the Book of God, the old Teſtament and the New, and I will anſwer you. What ſayeſt thou Mandrel (quoth he) by the Saints in the Church, the Image of our Lady, of the Crucifix, and other holy Saints? be they not neceſſary, &c. Yes, Mr. Chancellor (ſaid he) very neceſſary to roaſt a ſhoulder of Mutton. Then Doctor Billing a Frier once, ſtanding by, ſaid; Maſter Chancellor (quoth he) hear how theſe Hereticks ſpeak againſt the Crucifix and the holy Croſs; and yet the holy Croſs is mentioned in all the Tongues, both Hebrew, Greek, and Latin. For in Latin it is called T in Greek Tau, &c. Whereupon one Thomas Gilford, a Merchant of Pool, ſtanding by, ſaid; Ah merciful Lord (ſaid he) is not this a marvellous matter for a poor man thus to be charged, and put to the pains of fire for T Tau?

When Mandrel and Spicer were examined before the Chancellor, the Chancellor called them, ſaying: Come on, come on, ſaith he, thou Spicer art too blame, for thou haſt taught Mandrel theſe Hereſies. Thou art by thy occupation a Bricklaier: Yea, that I am. And can ſing in the Quire: Yea, that I can, ſaith he. And can play on the Organs. True, ſaith he. Well then, ſaid the Chancellor, and thou haſt marred this poor man, and haſt taught him all theſe Hereſies. No, Maſter Chancellor (quoth he) I have not taught him, but I have read him. He is able, thanks be to God, to teach both you and me.

A Note of Elizabeth Pepper.

Elizabeth Pepper before mentioned, when ſhe was burned at Stratford, was eleven weeks gone with Child, as ſhe then teſtified to one Boſomes Wife, who then unlooſed her Neckerchief; and moreover, when ſhe was asked, why ſhe did not tell them, anſwered; Why (quoth ſhe) they knew it well enough. Oh, ſuch are the bloody hearts of this cruel generation, that no occaſion can ſtay them from their miſchievous murdering of the Saints of the Lord, that truly profeſs Chriſt crucified only and alone, for the ſatisfaction of their Sins.

A Note of one confeſſing Gods Truth at the Gallows.

Anno 1558.

A Notorious Felon, one Dick Adams, being upon the Gallows, making his confeſſion, and ready to be caſt down from the Ladder, was deſired at that inſtant by one Mrs. Harris, the Gram mar-Schoolmaſters Wife, to remember the bleſſed Sacrament before he died, to whom the ſaid Adams ſaid; Marry Miſtreſs never in better time, who went up to the Top of the Ladder, and ſaid it was the moſt abominable Idol that ever was, and willed all men to take it ſo; for we have been greatly deceived thereby. Whereupon the Sheriff cauſed him to hold his peace, and to take his death patiently. He went down to his place, and was caſt from the Ladder, ſpeaking to his laſt word, that it was an abominable Idol: his Body therefore was buried out of the Churchyard by the High-way; who although he was a Thief in his life, yet he earneſtly repented thereof, ſo that I doubt not but he died the Child of God, and not unworthy to be put in the Regiſter of the Lords accepted Confeſſors.

A note of Gertrude Crockhay.

IN the late days of Queen Mary, among other ſtrange dealings, of the Papiſts with the faithful, this is not with the reſt to be forgotten, that a godly Marton named Gertrude Crockhay, the Wife of Maſter Robert Crockhay, dwelling then at St. Katherines by the Tower of London, abſtained her ſelf from the Popiſh Church. And ſhe being in her Husbands houſe, it happened in Anno 1556. that the fooliſh Popiſh Saint Nicholas went about the Pariſh, which ſhe underſtanding, ſhut her doors againſt him, and would not ſuffer him to come within her houſe. Then Doctor Mallet hearing thereof (and being then Maſter of the ſaid St. Katherines next day came to her with twenty at his Tail, thinking belike to fray her, and asked why ſhe would not the night before let in St. Nicholas, and receive his bleſſing, &c. To whom ſhe anſwered thus; Sir, I know not Saint Nicholas, ſaid ſhe, that came hither. Yes (quoth Mallet) here was one that repreſented Saint Nicholas. Indeed Sir, (ſaid ſhe) here was one that is my Neighbours Child, but not Saint Nicholas. For Saint Nicholas is in Heaven. I was afraid of them that came with him to have had my purſe cut by them. For I have heard of men robbed by Saint Nicholas Clerks, &c. So Mallet perceiving that nothing could be gotten at her hands, went his way as he came, and ſhe for that time ſo eſcaped.

Refer this to the year of the Lord, 1556.

Then in Anno 1557. a little before Whitſontide, it happened that the ſaid Gertrude anſwered for a Child that was baptiſed of one Thomas Saunders, which Child was chriſtened ſecretly in a houſe, after the order of the Service Book in King Edwards time, and that being ſhortly known to her Enemies, ſhe was ſought for, which underſtanding nothing thereof, went beyond the Sea into Gelderland, to ſee certain Lands that ſhould have come to her Children in the right of her firſt Husband, who was a ſtranger born. And being there about a quarter of a year, at the length coming homeward, by Antwerp, ſhe chanced to meet with one John Johnſon a Dutchman, alias John de Wille of Antwerp Shipper, who ſeeing her there, went of malice to the Margrave, and accuſed her to be an Anabaptiſt, whereby ſhe was taken and carried to Priſon. The cauſe why this naughty man did thus, was for that he claimed of Maſter Crockhay her Husband a piece of mony, which was not his due, for a Ship, that the ſaid Maſter Crockhay bought of him; and for that he could not get it, he wrought this diſpleaſure. Well, ſhe being in Priſon, lay there a fortnight; in which time ſhe ſaw ſome that were Priſoners there, who privily were drowned in Rheniſh Wine fats, and after ſecretly put in Sacks and caſt into the River. Now ſhe good Woman, thinking to be ſo ſerved, took thereby ſuch fear, that it brought the beginning of her ſickneſs, of the which at length ſhe died.

Then at the laſt ſhe was called before the Margrave, and charged with Anabaptiſtry, which ſhe there utterly denied, and deteſted the Errour, declaring before him in Dutch Anno 1558. Dutch her faith boldly without any fear. So the Margrave hearing the ſame, in the end being well pleaſed with her profeſſion, at the ſute of ſome of her Friends delivered her out of Priſon, but took away her Book, and ſo ſhe came over into England again. And being at home in her Husbands houſe, he thinking to find means to get her to go abroad, made one Vicars a Yeoman of the Tower his Friend, who was great with Boner, to work that liberty for her. Now this Vicars making means to Boner for the ſame, Boner put the matter over to Darbiſhire his Chancellor who enjoyned her to give certain mony to poor folks, and to go on the Wedneſday and Sunday after to Church to Evenſong, which ſhe ſo did, and afterward had ſuch trouble in her Conſcience thereby, that ſhe thought verily God had caſt her off, and that ſhe ſhould be damned, and never be ſaved: ſo not long after this, it hapned that Mr. Rough, of whom mention is made before, came to her houſe, unto whom ſhe made moan of her unquietneſs for going to Church, and deſired his Counſel what ſhe might do, that ſhould beſt pleaſe God, and eaſe her troubled Soul, &c. Unto whom Mr. Rough replyed many comfortable Sentences of Scripture to comfort her, and in the end gave her Counſel to go to the Chriſtian Congregation, which ſecretly the perſecuted had, and confeſs her fault unto them, and ſo to be received into their fellowſhip again; who hearing that was glad, and intended ſo to do, and ſo would have done, if ſore ſickneſs had not immediately prevented the ſame. But when Doctor Mallet heard by one Robert Hemmings Woodmonger, that ſhe lay very ſick indeed, which Hemmings was her great Enemy, he came to her twice to perſwade her to recant, and to receive (as the Papiſts term it) the Rites of the Church. Unto whom ſhe anſwered, ſhe could not, nor would, for that ſhe was ſubject to vomit; and therefore he would not (ſhe was ſure, ſhe ſaid) have her to caſt up their God again, as ſhe ſhould do, if ſhe did receive it. And ſo immediately vomited indeed? wherefore he ſeeing that, went from her into the Hall to her Daughter named Clare Sacke, and told her, if her Mother would not receive, ſhe ſhould not be buried in Chriſtian burial, as he termed it. Then Clare went and told her ſick Mother what he ſaid unto her. Who hearing the ſame, ſpake theſe words following; Oh (ſaid ſhe) how happy am I, that I ſhall not riſe with them, but againſt them. Well (quoth ſhe) the earth is the Lords, and all that therein is; and therefore I commit the matter to him, &c.

Read before.

Shortly hereupon, that is, the 27. day of March 1558. the ſaid Doctor Mallet came again to her with one Doctor Weſt, Queen Maries Chaplain. And coming in, he ſaluted her, and told her that he had brought her a good learned man to perſwade her, who was one of the Queens Chaplains, &c. and therefore he deſired her to hear and believe him in that he ſhould ſay, &c. Then Doctor Weſt exhorted her to receive their Sacrament, and to be aneled, for he ſaid, ſhe was ſtrong enough for it, &c. Unto whom ſhe anſwered, that ſhe was able and ſtrong enough to receive it indeed, but ſhe would not, for that it was abominable, &c. Then ſaid Weſt, ye be in an ill mind; Do ye think to die a Chriſtian Woman? Yea, ſaid ſhe, that I do. I pray you, ſaid Weſt, how came you firſt into that Opinion. Marry, ſaid ſhe, there is he that firſt taught it me (meaning Doctor Mallet) at the Marriage of my Brother and his Siſter, where I heard him earneſtly preach this Doctrine, which I now do hold. And if God ſhall lay our ſins to our charge, if we repent not, much more damnable is his offence, being once a publick Preacher of the ſame, and now to turn from it. Then Mallet told her he was then deceived by little new-fangled two-peny Books, as you be now (ſaid he) but now I am otherwiſe perſwaded, as I would have you; and to receive the Sacrament, which if you would, you ſhould, I warrant you, be ſaved, my Soul for yours. At whoſe words ſhe earneſtly deſired them to be content: for (ſaith ſhe) ye be come to rob and to draw me from my Chriſt, which I tell you Truth you ſhall not do, for I will never conſent to you while I live. When Weſt heard her ſay ſo, he drew his ſtool nigher to hear her ſpeak, and being drunken, he fell down, whereby Mallet was fain to help him up again, and ſo immediately after they departed thence. And the thirteenth day of April next after that, ſhe died conſtantly in the Lord, and yielded her Soul and life into his holy hands, with theſe words? Oh Lord, into thy hands receive my Soul, and ſo immediately gave up her life unto the Lord, to whom be praiſe for ever, Amen.

While ſhe was beyond Sea, as it is ſaid before, Maſter Crockhay her Husband, by the procurement of Doctor Mallet, was cited to come before Maſter Huſſey the Commiſſary who (had it not been for that he made means unto the ſaid Huſſey before) would have ſent him to Priſon, and bound him in Recogniſance to ſeek her out. But he more eaſily eſcaped their hands by friendſhip, as before I have ſaid.

Now when Dr. Mallet heard of her death, Maſter Crockhay, and one Robert Hemmings Bayliff of Saint Katherines, being before him for the burying of her, he ſaid plainly, ſhe ſhould be buryed nigh to ſome Highway, and a mark ſet up, in token that an Heretick was buryed there. Then the ſaid Hemmings told him, the Hogs would ſcrape her up, which were not decent, nor beſt? and Mr. Crockhay intreated ſhe might be buried in his Garden, which at length he granted, and willed the ſaid Hemmings to ſee it done, and that he ſhould be ſure he buried her there indeed.

After, when the Corps was brought to the ſaid Garden the ſaid Robert Hemmings the Bayliff would needs ſee it opened: which when the Cover was taken off, the Wife of the ſaid Hemmings put her hand within the ſheet, and felt the hair of the ſaid dead Corps, ſaying; Now will I juſtify that ſhe is here, and ſo ſhe did, telling Mallet that thoſe her hands did feel her; this is the effect of this Story.

Now ſince the coming in of Queen Elizabeth, the ſaid Doctor Mallet came to the ſaid Maſter Crockhay, and asked him forgiveneſs, alledging this Verſe of the Poet.

Amantium iræ amoris redintegratio eſt.

The Lord give him repentance and grace to ſeek perfect friendſhip with him, if it be his bleſſed will, Amen.

A Note of William Wood.

ACcording as I have ſent unto you the true record of my Examination before the Doctors above mentioned, ſo I thought it not inconvenient to ſend you likewiſe certain Notes of my other two deliverances in Q. Maries time, and this I do not (as God knoweth) to get any praiſe to my ſelf, or to reproach any other, but that God may be glorified in his works, and that our Brethren may know, that though there be many times but little help on earth, yet that there is more in Heaven. About a month after my Examination, one Apleby and his Wife (that were perſecuted from Maidſtone in Kent) came to my houſe in Strowd, and deſired me that he might have a place in my houſe for him and his Wife for a time, becauſe Perſecution was ſo hot, that he could no longer ſtay there; and I at his inſtance let him have a place with me: but within a fortnight after the Papiſts eſpied him, and complained of him to the Biſhop of Rocheſter, and the Biſhop ſent his chief man, called Ralph Crowch, and he carried him to Rocheſter before the Biſhop, and the ſaid Apleby ſtood in the defence of the Truth boldly, and the Biſhop ſent both him and his Wife to the Jayl of Maidſtone, and there they were burned for the Teſtimony of the Goſpel of God. And the Friday fortnight after I was in the Market at Rocheſter talking with another man, and the ſaid Ralph Crowch was ſent for me; and he coming within a Stones caſt of me where I was talking with my Neighbour George Smally, one William Stanley a Papiſt, dwelling alſo in Strowd, met with the ſaid Crowch, and they two talked together a while, and I doubted that they talked of me, becauſe many times in their talk they looked on me, and then the ſaid Ralph Crowch went over the ſtreet to another Officer or Conſtable which knew not me, and ſent the ſaid Conſtable for me, and coming for me, knowing my Neigbour George Smally, took him inſtead of me, and carried him to the Biſhop, and when he came before him, the Biſhop ſaid to the Officers, this is not the Knave, this is not not be Knave, and the Biſhop checked the Major and his Officers, and ſaid that they mocked him, becauſe he carried the other man for me, ſuch was the mighty providence of God to defend me, and the Maior the ſame night ſent forty bils and men with other weapons to beſet my houſe to take me; but the Lord kept me from them and delivered me out of their hands, to him be glory therefore, Amen.

The third time that the Lord delivered me was on Faſter day next after. I had been at London all the Lent, and on Eaſter Even at night I came home to Strowd to my wife, and a Child of three years old told one of the Neighbours that her Father was come home. And on Eaſter day, after their Popiſh Evenſong was done, came Maſter Reade, Thomas Crowch, Brother to the above ſaid Ralph Crowch, William Stanly, Thomas Bets, Lionell Newman, and Roger Braunch, with threeſcore people or thereabouts, and ſearched my houſe very ſtraitly for me: but as Gods Providence was there was Mault a drying upon the Kill, and they ſearched ſo narrowly for me, that I was glad to heave up a corner of the hair whereon the Mault lay, and went into the Kill-hole, and there ſtood till they were gone, and ſo I eſcaped from them; but within an hour after there came a Woman to my Wife to borrow a bruſh, and ſpied mee thorow the key-hole of the door, and there ſhe carrying tydings abroad, immediately came a great company of men and beſet my houſe round about, and I ſaid to my wife, You ſee that theſe four men ſeek for my life, that is, Maſter Reade, Thomas Crowch, William Stanley, and Thomas Bets: for I do think that none of the reſt will lay hands on me; and therefore I pray thee wife follow theſe four men, and talk loud to them that I may hear, and ſo eſcape, and if they ſearch on the backſide, I may avoid on the ſtreet ſide; and be of good comfort, for our lives are in Gods hand, and though there be little help here on Earth, yet there is help enough from Heaven; and when theſe men were ſearching on the backſide, I went into the ſtreet, among (as I gheſs) an hundred people, and none of them laid hands on me, neither ſaid they any thing to me, ſo I went out of the Town, and lay there at an honeſt mans houſe at the Pariſh of Cobham that night.

And at the ſame time alſo two of my Neighbours, honeſt men and of good wealth, the one called John Pemmet a Fiſherman, the other named John Baily a Glover, becauſe they came not to their Popiſh Church to buy ſome of their Idolatrous wares, were complained of to the Juſtices, who did bind them to anſwer for their faith before the Judges at the Aſſiſes which were holden at Midſummer after (as I remember) at Rocheſter in the Palace-yard; and there was at that time a Sail cloth of a ſhip tied to the top of the Biſhops Palace wall, to keep away the Sun from the Judges, becauſe it was hot, and the wind blew and ſhook the Sail, ſo that when theſe two men were called to be examined, and when they ſhould have anſwered, there fell from the top of the wall three or four great ſtones upon the Judges necks, ſo that ſome of them which ſate on the Bench were ſore hurt and maimed, ſo that they aroſe ſuddenly all amazed, and departed, and the two men were delivered.

The Story of John Alcocke.

THis John Alcoke or Aucoke, of whom mention is made before, was a very faithful honeſt man, by his occupation a Woad-ſette, ſingularly well learned in the Holy Scriptures, and in all his Converſation a juſt and righteous man that feared God, and ſtudied to do indeed that thing that he had learned in the Scriptures. Now after that Sir Richard Yeoman was driven away, and the people on Sundays and other days came to the Church, and had no man to teach them any thing (for as yet Parſon Newel was not come to Hadley to dwell, nor had gotten any Curate. Beſides that, the Laws made by King Edward were in force, and the Latine mumblings not received every where.) John Alcocke therefore took the Engliſh Book uſed by King Edward, exhorting the people to pray with him, and ſo read certain prayers in Engliſh before them: and moreover, he gave them godly leſſons and exhortations out of Chapters that he read unto them. For this, the Biſhop of Winchester Stephen Gardiner ſent for him, and caſt him into Newgate at London: where after many examinations and troubles, for that he would not ſubmit himſelf to ask forgiveneſs of the Pope, and to be reconciled to the Romiſh Religion, he was caſt into the lower Dungeon, where with evil keeping, and ſickneſs of the houſe, hee died in Priſon. Thus died he a Martyr of Chriſts Verity, which hee heartily loved and conſtantly confeſſed, and received the Garland of a well foughten battel at the hand of the Lord. His Body was caſt out, and buried in a dunghil; for the Papiſts would in all things be like themſelves; therefore would they not ſo much as ſuffer the dead Bodies to have honeſt and convenient Sepulture. Anno 1558.

He wrote two Epiſtles to Hadley, which follow here.

The firſt Epiſtle of John Alcocke.

GRace be with you, and peace from the Father, and our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which gave himſelf for our ſins, that he might deliver us from this preſent evil world, according to the will of God our Father, to whom be praiſe for ever and ever, Amen. Gal. 1.

Oh my Brethren of Hadley, why are ye ſo ſoon turned from them which called you in the Grace of Chriſt, unto another Doctrine? which is nothing elſe but that there be ſome which trouble you, and intend to pervert the Goſpel of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt. Nevertheleſs though theſe ſhould come unto you that have been your true Preachers, and preach another way of Salvation, than by Jeſus Chriſts death and paſſion, hold them accurſed. Yea, if it were an Angel came from heaven, and would tell you that the ſacrifice of Chriſts Body upon the Croſs once for all ever, for all the ſins of all thoſe which ſhall be ſaved, were not ſufficient; accurſed be he. If he were an Angel, or whatſoever hee were, that would ſay that our Service in Engliſh were not right Gods Service, but will better allow the moſt wicked mumming that you now have: Thoſe, whatſoever they bee, except they do repent and allow the Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt, they ſhall never come into that Kingdom that Chriſt hath prepared for thoſe that be his. Wherefore, my dearly beloved Brethren of Hadley, remember you well what you have been taught heretofore of the Lord Gods true and ſimple Prophets, that only did wiſh your health and Conſolation. Heb. 9. 10 Chriſts ſacrifice. Church Service. True Prophets.

Do not (my good Brethren) I pray you, forget the comfortable word of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, Matthew 11. Come unto me all you that are troubled and laden, with the dangers that ye are in the ſtormy daies, and hear my words, and believe them, and you ſhall ſee the unſpeakable comfort that you ſhall receive. The Lord is my Shepheard, ſaith the Prophet David, ſo that I can want nothing, Pſal. 23. He feedeth his Sheep in green paſtures, and leadeth them unto clear and wholſome waters of comfort. I am that good Shepheard, ſaith our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, John 10. for I give my life for my Sheep, and I know my Sheep, and my Sheep know me; but my Sheep will not know an hireling: for he careth not but only for his god the belly, and ſo ſeeketh the deſtruction of their Souls. Therefore beware of hirelings, you that count your ſelves the Sheep of Jeſus Chriſt. Be ſure that ye know his voyce and obey it, and be not deceived through ſtrange voyces, but go from them, and earneſtly abide by your profeſſion that you have made in your Baptiſm, and ſhrink not from it. For if you do, you ſhall declare your ſelves to be a vain people, and without underſtanding. And for this cauſe doth God plague his People, and ſuffereth them to be deceived with falſe Prophets and wicked men. I pray you note what the Prophet Eſay ſaith to the people of thoſe days, Eſay 1. becauſe they were ſlipping from the Lord their God, which had done ſo Marvellous works for them, as you well do know in the Hiſtories of the Bible. Hear O Heaven (ſaith he) and hearken thou Earth, for the Lord hath Hirelings. A vain people.

hath ſpoken, I have nouriſhed and brought up Children, but they have done wickedly againſt me. The Ox hath known his Owner, and the Aſs his Maſters Crib; but Iſrael hath received no knowledge, my People hath no underſtanding. Alas for this ſinful Nation, a People of great Iniquity, a froward Generation, unnatural Children.

They have forſaken the Lord, they have provoked his wrath, and are gone backward. Hearken alſo what the Prophet Jeremy ſaith, Jer. 2. Be aſtonied ye Heavens, be afraid and aſhamed at ſuch a thing, ſaith the Lord, for my People hath done two evils. They have forſaken me, the Well of the waters of Life, and digged them broken Pits that can hold no Water. Is Iſrael a Bond-ſervant or one of the houſhold of the Lord? Why then is he ſo ſpoiled? Why then do they roar and cry upon him as a Lion? Underſtand thoſe things now in theſe days that the Prophet ſpake of them. Oh my Brethren of Hadley, why cometh this plague upon us, that we have now in theſe days and other times? Hearken what the Prophets ſay, Cometh not this upon thee becauſe thou haſt forſaken the Lord thy God? Thine own wickedneſs ſhall reprove thee, and thy turning away ſhall condemn thee, that thou maiſt know and underſtand how evil and hurtful a thing it is, that thou haſt forſaken the Lord thy God, and not feared him, ſaith the Lord God of Hoſts, the holy One of Iſrael; that is to ſay, he that maketh Iſrael holy. And underſtand by Iſrael the Children of God, and thoſe things that were ſpoken to the carnal Iſrael, are ſpoken unto us, that are or ſhould be the ſpiritual Iſrael. Grace be with you all, Amen.

An evil and hurtful thing.

Iſrael.

Your, John Alcocke, Priſoner for Gods Word in Newgate at London.

The ſecond Epiſtle of John Alcocke.

A Letter.

MY Brethren of Hadley, note well what St. Paul ſaid in the tenth Chapter to the firſt of the Corinthians; Brethren, I would you ſhould not be ignorant of this, that our Fathers were all under the Cloud, and all paſſed through the Sea, and were baptized under Moſes in the Cloud and in the Sea, and did eat one ſpiritual meat and drank of one ſpiritual drink. They drank of that ſpiritual Rock that followed them, which Rock was Chriſt: Nevertheleſs in many of them had God no delight, for they were over-ſmitten in the Wilderneſs. Theſe are examples unto us, that we ſhould not luſt after evil things as they luſted; that is to ſay, we ſhould ſtand forth to defend the Verity of God, which we would do right well, alas, were it not for loſs of goods: we do ſo much luſt after them, that we will rather ſay there is no God, than we will profeſs his Word to be truth to the loſing of our goods. And our Saviour Chriſt ſaith, Mark 10. He that is not content to forſake Father and Mother, Wife and Children, Houſe and Land, Corn and Cattel, yea, and his own life for my Truths ſake, is not meet for me. And if we be not for our Lord God, then we muſt needs be meet for the Devil, and we muſt needs be ſervants to one of them. If we be not aſhamed of the Goſpel of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, but earneſtly confeſs it to the uttermoſt of our power, then are we ſure to be confeſſed of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, and that before the Angels in Heaven, to be his Servants. But if we will ſo luſt to keep our goods, and rather deny him than to loſe our goods, then doth it follow whoſe Servants we are. Therefore (my dear Brethren of Hadley) beware that you do not conſent to any thing againſt your Conſcience. For if you do, beware of Gods great wrath: I exhort you therefore (my beloved Brethren in our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt) to ſtand faſt in your Profeſſion, and become not manifeſt Run-aways from the truth of our Lord God, but ſtick earneſtly to it, and doubt not but our God will be unto you a ſtrong defence and refuge in the needful time. Bow down thine ear, O Lord, (ſaith David, Pſal. 86.) and hear me: for I am poor and in miſery. Be merciful unto me, O Lord, for I will call daily upon thee: comfort the Soul of thy Servant; for unto thee, O Lord, do I lift up my Soul. For thou Lord art good and gracious, and of great mercy unto all them that call upon thee. Give ear Lord unto my prayer, and ponder the voice of my humble petition. All Nations whom thou haſt made ſhall come and worſhip thee, O Lord, and ſhall glorifie thy Name. For thou art great, and doſt wonderful things: Thou art God alone. Teach me thy ways, O Lord, and I will walk in thy Truth: Oh knit my heart unto thee, that I may fear thy Name. I will thank thee, O my God, with all my heart, and will praiſe thy Name for ever. O you Chriſtian People of Hadley, comfort your ſelves one another in theſe notable Pſalms of David, and the whole Bible. Embrace the noble Jewel of our Lord God the Bible, and endeavour your ſelves to walk the way that it doth teach you.

Luſt after evil things.

Confeſſion of the Goſpel. Luke 12.

Invocation and Prayer.

Pſalms of David are comfortable.

The Bible is a Jewel.

My good Brethren, we as helpers, ſaith St. Paul, 2 Cor. 6. do exhort you, that you receive not the grace of God in vain. For behold now is the accepted time, now is the day of Salvation. Let us beware that we take ſure hold while we have time; for time will away. While ye have the light walk in it, leſt when ye would deſire it, ye cannot have it. Underſtand the Light to be the knowledge of Chriſt, and to obey, that is to have the light. For that cauſe came our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, to make himſelf known, John 12. Unto thoſe that did receive him he gave power to be the Sons of God, and ſo to be made Inheritors of his Kingdom, which ſhall never end, John 1. who would not be glad to become the Kings Son, that he thereby might be partaker of the Kingdom that never ſhall have end? O vain man, what art thou that wilt refuſe everlaſting life for a day or two, or an hour? thou canſt not tell how ſhort. Open thine eyes, and ſee thine own comfort and refuge to Chriſt. O fly and refuſe this worldly wiſdom; for worldly wiſdom doth ſhut out the wiſdom of God. For the word of the Croſs is fooliſhneſs unto them that periſh; but unto us which are ſaved it is the power of God. For it is written, 1 Cor. 1. I will deſtroy the wiſdom of the wiſe, and will caſt away the underſtanding of the prudent. Where are the wiſe? where are the Scribes? where are the Diſputers of this world? hath not God made the wiſdom of this world fooliſhneſs? For inſomuch as the world by the wiſdom thereof knew not God in his wiſdom, it pleaſed God through fooliſhneſs of preaching to ſave them that believe. For the Jews require tokens, and the Greeks ask after wiſdom; but we preach Chriſt crucified, ſaith St. Paul, to the Jews an occaſion of falling, and unto the Greeks (a People that are wiſe in their own conceits) to them is the preaching of Chriſt crucified fooliſhneſs. But unto them that are called, both Jews and Greeks, we preach Chriſt, the power of God and the wiſdom of God. For the fooliſhneſs of God is wiſer than men, and the weakneſs of God is ſtronger than men.

Vanity of this life. Worldly wiſdom.

Brethren, look upon your Calling, how that not many wiſe men after the fleſh, not many mighty, not many of high degree are called. But that which is fooliſh before the world hath God choſen, that he might confound the wiſe; and that which is deſpiſed before the world hath he choſen, and that which is nothing, that he might deſtroy that which is ought, that no fleſh ſhould rejoyce. Of the ſame are ye alſo in Chriſt Jeſus, which is made of God unto us wiſdom and righteouſneſs, and ſanctifying and redemption, according as it is written, that he that rejoyceth ſhould rejoyce in the Lord, that your Faith ſhould not ſtand in the wiſdom of men, but in the power of God. We ſpeak of this wiſdom among them that are perfect, not the wiſdom of this world, nor the Rulers of this world, which go to nought; but we ſpeak of the wiſdom of God, which the carnal man doth not underſtand. The natural man perceiveth nothing of the Spirit of God. It is fooliſhneſs with him. But God hath opened it to us by his Spirit; for the Spirit ſearcheth out all things. Wherefore (my dear Brethren) try your ſelves well, whither you have the Spirit of Chriſt, or no. If you have the Spirit of Chriſt, then are ye dead concerning ſin; but ye are alive unto God through Jeſus Chriſt. If this Spirit dwell in you, then will ye increaſe and go forward in your Profeſſion, and not fear what fleſh may do unto the Carkaſs. Therefore ſtand faſt in the liberty wherewith Chriſt hath made you free, and be not wrapped up again in the yoke of bondage, that is to ſay, to go from God by wicked life, or ſerve God another way than he hath commanded in his holy Word.

Spirit of Chriſt.

Galat. 5.

I truſt you go forward (my dear Brethren and Siſters) in your promiſe that you made to your Lord God in your Baptiſm: I pray God open unto you the knowledge of himſelf, and lighten the eyes of your underſtanding, that you may know what is the hope of your calling, and what the riches of his glorious Inheritance is upon the Saints. For ye are the choſen Generation, the kingly Prieſthood, that holy nation, that peculiar people, that ſhould ſhew the vertues of him which hath called you out of darkneſs into his marvellous light, that is to ſay, to fear God, and to work righteouſneſs and ſo to receive the end of your Faith, the ſalvation of your Souls. This is a true ſaying; If we be dead with Chriſt, we ſhall live with him alſo. If we be patient, we ſhall alſo Reign with him. If we deny him, he alſo will deny us. If we believe not, yet he abideth faithful, he cannot deny himſelf. The very God of peace ſanctifie you throughout, and I pray God that your Spirit, Soul, and Bodies be kept blameleſs, unto the coming of our Lord Jeſus. Faithful is he that hath called you, which will alſo doe it. Brethren, pray for us, and greet all the Brethren among you.

By me your Brother in the Lord and Saviour Chriſt, John Alcocke, Priſoner of the Lord at Newgate.

Give glory to God.

GOd be merciful to thee (O England) and ſend thee a great number of ſuch faithful Fathers and godly Paſtors, as Doctor Tailor was, to guide thee, feed thee, and comfort thee after thy great miſeries and troubles, that thou haſt ſuffered under the Tyrannous captivity and rage of the Roman Antichriſt, and ſuch ravening Wolves, as have without all mercy murdered the godly and learned Preachers, and give all men grace to conſider that ſuch horrible Plagues and mutations have juſtly fallen upon this Realm for Sin, and with unfained hearts to turn to God, who as he hath ſcourged us with leſs Plagues then we deſerved, ſo he calleth us again by his undeſerved and unſpeakable mercy unto repentance and amendment of our living. It is doubtleſs now high time to turn unfainedly to God, and to correct our ſinful livings, and to remember what Saint John Baptiſt ſaith, Matth. 3. The Ax is now ſet to the Root of the Tree, and every Tree that bringeth not forth good fruit ſhall be hewen down and caſt into the Fire. For this may all men aſſure themſelves of, both rich and poor, high and low, old and young, that the Almighty, Jealous, and Righteous God, will not ſuffer the ſinful and wicked life of the ungodly unrepentant that contemn his mercy now profered unto them, to be unpuniſhed, but as he hath from the beginning of the World ſhewed himſelf a Righteous Judge, and puniſher of wickedneſs, even ſo will he do ſtill now. God expulſed our firſt Parents Adam and Eve from Paradiſe, and laid upon them and upon us all theſe miſeries, ſickneſs, calamities, and death, that we daily feel, and miſerably are oppreſſed withal, Gen. 3. God in Noahs days drowned the whole World, onely eight perſons were preſerved, Geneſ. 8. 9. God burnt up Sodom and Gomorah with Fire and Brimſtone from Heaven, and deſtroyed thoſe Cities and all the Country about, Geneſ. 18. God gave over Jeruſalem called the holy City of God, and delivered his own people the Jewes into perpetual Captivity, Luke 19. If we ſeek the cauſe of theſe puniſhments, was it not ſinful living and unrepentant hearts? What ſhould I recite the calamity of other lands, ſeeing Gods judgments have not been unexecuted upon this Realm of England for ſinful living? The old Britains were with Cadwallader their King conſtrained to flee and leave this land, becauſe of Peſtilence and Famine: What miſeries and deſtructions brought the Danes in with them? and what troubles ſuſtained the Inhabitants of this Realm afore the ſame were again driven out? What bloodſhed was here in King William Conquerors days? were not the Noble men ſlain, and Gentlemen brought into Bondage? were not their Matrons defiled, and their Daughters given to be Kitchin Drudges under the Normans proud Ladies? were not their lands, houſes, and poſſeſſions divided by lot unto ſtrangers? Their gold and ſilver wherein they truſted, was the bait that their enemies hunted after: What a plague was the Civil War between the King and Barons? what horrible bloodſhed was in this Realm? till at the laſt Gods merciful providence ended thoſe miſeries by the happy joyning of the two Regal houſes together in the Marriage of King Henry the Seventh. What miſeries have chanced in our time, we have not onely ſeen and heard, but we have felt them; and God be praiſed, had our parts of them. Doubtleſs this all hath chanced for the ſins of the people, as the Prophet Jeremy plainly teacheth, ſaying, Iere. 6. Who is a wiſe Man that underſtandeth this? And to whom ſhall the word of the Lords Mouth come, that he may Preach it forth? why hath the land periſhed, and is burnt like a Wilderneſs, ſo that no man may paſs through it? And the Lord ſaith, becauſe they have forſaken my Law which I have given them, and they have not heard my voyce, and have not walked in them, and have gone after the vanity of their own hearts, and after Baalim the Images of Baal, which they have learned of their Fathers. We ſee here plainly the contempt of Gods Word, and of the Preachers of the ſame, walking after their covetous minds and lewdneſs of their Hearts, and following of their Idolatrous inventions, brought the Wrath of God upon the people, as witneſſed alſo Jeſus Syrach, ſaying, Eccleſ. 10. Becauſe of unrighteous dealing, wrong, Blaſphemies, and divers deceits, a Realm ſhall be tranſlated from one people to another. And a little after he ſaith; The Lord hath brought the Congregation of the wicked to diſhonour, and deſtroyed them unto the end. God hath deſtroyed the ſeats of proud Princes, and ſet up the meek in their ſtead. God hath withered the Root of proud Nations, and planted the lowly among them. God hath overthrown the Lands of the Heathen, and deſtroyed them unto the ground. He hath cauſed them to wither away: He hath brought them to nought, and made the memorial of them to ceaſe from the Earth. But what availeth it to read ſuch threats of God, if we believe them not? Or, if we believe them to be Gods threats, and deſpiſe them? Doubtleſs, the Lord is Righteous, a Jealous God, a puniſher of ſin, as he himſelf ſaith, Exod. 20. I puniſh the ſins of the Fathers upon their Children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me. God give us grace to remember this, and with ſpeedy and unfained repentance to turn unto God. I ſay (unfained repentance) and not (alas) as we have done in times paſt like Hypocrites to diſſemble with God and Man, making Gods holy Word nothing elſe but a Cloak to cover our malice, covetouſneſs, whoredom, pride, exceſs, gluttony, wrath, envy, hatred, murder, with all other wicked living moſt deteſtable in the ſight of God. If men will well conſider themſelves, they have long enough diſſembled, and heaped the wrath of God heavy enough upon their heads. It is now high time to become a new people, to amend indeed, and to follow the Counſel of the holy Ghoſt, ſaying unto us by the Prophet Jeremy, Ierem. 3. Why do mortall men murmure againſt God? let them murmure againſt their own ſins. Let us ſearch our own ways, and let us ſeek and return unto the Lord. Let us lift up our Hearts and Hands unto the Lord in Heaven, for we have done wickedly, and provoked the Lord to wrath: and therefore wilt thou not be intreated. Doubtleſs, the Lord will not be intreated, except men very earneſtly turn unto him. We have felt in our ſelves, and ſeen before our eyes, that when God ſtriketh, no man can be able to abide the heavy ſtroak of his fiſt. He hath hitherto corrected us with mercy, as a Father, let us thank him, and return unfainedly, ſo will he not extend his wrath as a Judge. His will is, that we ſhould return and live, and not periſh with the wicked. I live (ſaith the Lord) and will not the death of a ſinner, but that he be converted and live, Ezech. 33. Here the godly Oath certifieth us of forgiveneſs, and requireth an unfained Converſion unto God, that is, that men acknowledge in heart their wicked living, and be ſorry that ever they have with wicked living offended againſt that ſo good and loving a Father, and truſt to have forgiveneſs through Chriſts Blood, and fully and firmly ſet their hearts to ſerve God, and to walk the ways of his commandments all the days of their life. Then ſhall we be true Chriſtians, built upon the Corner-Stone Chriſt, not Certain Cautions of the Author to the Reader, of things to be conſidered in reading this ſtory.

AMongſt other eſcapes and overſights in the Edition of this ſtory committed, part of them we leave to thine own gentle Caſtigation, gentle Reader: certain other ſpecialities there be, whereof we thought it good and expedient to give thee warning, as hereafter followeth.

Cautions of the Author to the Reader.

Firſt, when mention is made of Peters being at Rome, and ſuffering at Rome, following certain Authors; yet foraſmuch as other Writers there be, and reaſons to prove that he was not at Rome, I deſire therefore that this my affirmation may not prejudice other mens judgments, if any ſee or can ſay further in that matter.

Touching the ſtory of the Turks, whereas I in following our Chriſtian Authors writing of the Turks, have noted Solimannus to be the 12. Turk after Ottamannus, as they do all record: I have found ſince by the computation of the Turks ſet forth in the Table of their own deſcent, the ſaid Solimannus to be the ſixth Emperour of the Turks; and this Solimannus his Son, which now Reigneth, to be but the twelfth. Which I thought here to ſignifie unto thee, becauſe of their own Turkiſh propheſie noted before, leſt in conſtruing of that prophecy, being in the ſame place expounded, thou be deceived.

Item, where Maſter George Blag is named to be one of the privy Chamber; here is to be noted alſo, that although he were not admitted as one of the privy Chamber, yet his ordinary reſort thither, and to the Kings preſence there was ſuch, as although he were not one of them, yet was he ſo commonly taken.

Item, in the ſtory of the Duke of Somerſet, where it is ſaid, that at the return of the Earl of Warwick out of Norfolk, there was a conſultation amongſt the Lords aſſembling themſelves together in the houſe of Mr. York, &c. againſt the Duke of Somerſet; here is to be noted that the coming of the Lords to the ſaid houſe of Mr. York was not immediately upon the Duke of Northumberlands return, but firſt he went to Warwick, and from thence after a ſpace came to the houſe aforeſaid.

Item, here is alſo to be noted touching the ſaid Duke of Somerſet, that albeit at his death relation is made of a ſudden falling of the people, as was at the taking of Chriſt, this is not to be expounded, as though I compared in any part the Duke of Somerſet with Chriſt.

And though I do ſomething more attribute to the commendation of the ſaid Duke of Somerſet, which dyed ſo conſtantly in his Religion, yet I deſire thee (gentle Reader) ſo to take it, not that I did ever mean to derogat or impair the Martial praiſe or facts of other men, which alſo are to be commended in ſuch things where they well deſerved.

Item, touching the ſame Duke of Somerſet, where the ſtory ſaith, he was attainted, rea l, indicted.

Item, where mention is made of one Nicholas Underwood to be the betraier of the Duke of Suffolk; joyn with the ſaid Underwood alſo Nicholas Laurence, alias Nicholas Ethel, Keeper of Aſteley-Park, who taking upon him and promiſing to keep the Duke for two or three days, until he might find ſome means to eſcape, conveighed him into an hollow Tree, and after moſt traiterouſly bewraied him.

This Nicholas Underwood dwelleth now at Coten by Nunn Eaton, and Laurence in Nunn Eaton.

Item, in the ſtory of Sir Thomas Wyat there is alſo to be corrected, that where the ſtory ſaith, that he was taken by Sir Clement Parſon, which was not ſo, and he no ſuch Knight, amend it thus: that he firſt came to Clarentius, being ſent unto him, and afterward yeilded him to Sir Moris Bartley. Briefly and in general, beſides theſe caſtigations above noted, if thou find any other committed in the printing hereof, gently I deſire thee (gentle Reader) to beſtow a little pains with thine own hand to amend them.

Notes omitted of them that were burnt at Briſtow.

THe eighth day of Auguſt was brought William Sarton, Weaver of Briſtow, before one Dalby Chancellor of Briſtow aforeſaid, and by him committed to Priſon, and alſo condemned, for holding that the Sacrament was a ſign of an holy thing; alſo he denied, that the Fleſh and Blood of Chriſt is there after their words of Conſecration: he was burned the eighteenth of September, Anno 1556. and as he went to the fire, he ſung Pſalms. The Sheriff, John Griffith, had prepared Green-wood to burn him; but one Maſter John Pikes, pitying the man, cauſed divers to go with him to Ridland, half a mile off, who brought good ſtore of Helme-ſheaves, which indeed made good diſpatch with little pain, in compariſon to that he ſhould have ſuffered with the Green-wood. In the mean ſpace, whileſt they went for the ſheaves, the ſaid Sarton made many good exhortatious to the People, and after died conſtantly and patiently with great joyfulneſs.

A Note of Preſts Wife of Exceter.

IN Cornwal, not far from Lanceſton, within the Dioceſs of Exceter, in Queen Maries days, dwelled a poor man, whoſe name was Preſt, his Wife being an honeſt Woman, very ſimple, but of good zeal and upright life, being taught by God in hearing of his Word (albeit it was in thoſe days very ſeldom preached any where) and feeling a ſweet taſte thereof, framed her life anew after the Rule of the ſame. And baniſhed quite from her all the Popiſh dregs of Superſtition and Hypocriſie, and gave her ſelf wholly to Prayer, and invocating the name of God, both for the afflicted Church of Chriſt in thoſe days very dangerouſly toſt and turmoiled; as alſo for her own inward contentation and ſpiritual conſolation, which ſhe not a little felt to her unſpeakable joy and incomparable comfort. And when ſome, who before had known her, ſaw that marvellous change in her and (as the cruel Serpent) envied her felicity, they went upon the ſame immediately, and accuſed her to certain Juſtices of the Shire, being extream enemies to the truth, and very perſecutors of the ſame; who taking the matter in hand, as very glad of ſuch occaſion, ſent for her to the place where ſhe was, and began at the ſecond, if not at the firſt daſh, to demand her belief in their Popiſh Sacrament of the Altar.

Preſts Wife of Exceter, Martyr.

The good poor woman, who had learned not to be aſhamed to confeſs her Maſter Chriſt before men, and to render account of her Faith when it was asked, told freely and frankly her opinion therein, and hid back nothing that either ſhe thought might profit them, if they had any Grace to receive it, or elſe might ſound to Gods glory and praiſe, though it were never ſo much by them threatned and rebuked. Whereupon ſhe was forthwith committed to the Goal of Lanceſton, where ſhe remained a quarter of a year, or thereabouts, and afterwards was diſpatched of that vile and filthy Priſon, and delivered over to the hands of two Champions of the Popes, the one called Doctor Raynolds, Dean of Exceter, and the other named Maſter Blaxton, Treaſurer of the ſame Church, men ſurely fervent hot in the furtherance of the Romiſh Affairs, and in withſtanding the truth of the pure Evangelical Goſpel. So the time that this good poor Woman was under their hands, ſhe had many ſore conflicts by them. And the ſaid Blaxton having a Concubine, which ſundry times reſorted to him with other of his Goſſips, always when they came, this ſaid good Woman was called forth to his houſe, and there to make his Minion with the reſt of his company ſome mirth, he would examine her with ſuch mocking manner, deriding the Truth, that it would have vexed any Chriſtian Soul to have ſeen it. Then when he had long uſed his fooliſhneſs in this ſort, and had ſported himſelf enough in deriding this Chriſtian Martyr; in the end he ſent her to Priſon again, and there kept her very miſerably, ſaving ſometimes he would ſend for her, when his foreſaid Gueſt came to him, to uſe with her his accuſtomed folly aforeſaid. But in fine, the vile Wretches (after many combats and ſcoffing perſwaſions) when they had played the part of a Cat with a Mouſe, at length they condemned her, and delivered her over to the Secular Power, who within ſhort ſpace after moſt cruelly brought her forth to the place where ſhe ſhould ſuffer, and there in great contempt of the Truth (which ſhe moſt conſtantly confeſſed) they conſumed her Carkaſs immediately with fire into Aſhes; which ſhe very patiently ſuffered and moſt joyfully received, yielding her Soul and Life unto the Lord and her Body to the Tormentors; for the which the Lords Name therefore be praiſed, Amen.

The Martyrdom of one Snel by Richmond.

AT Bedaile a Market Town in Yorkſhire, were two Men in the later days of Queen Mary, the one named John Snel and the other Richard Snel. Who being ſuſpected for Religion were ſent unto Richmond, where Dr. Dakins had Commiſſion from the Biſhop of Cheſter to have the Examination of them.

This Dr. Dakins many times conferred with them, ſometimes threatning Fire and Fagot if they would not recant, and ſometimes flattering them with fair Fables if they would return into the holy Catholick Church. But they ſtood conſtantly to the ſure Rock Jeſus Chriſt, in whom they put their whole truſt and confidence, whilſt at laſt being ſo ſore impriſoned, that their Toes rotted off, and the one of them could not go without Crouches, they brought them to the Church by compulſion, where the one of them heard their abominable Maſs, having a certain ſum of mony given him by the benevolence of the People, and ſo departed thence: but the firſt News that was heard of him within three or fours days, was, that he had drowned himſelf in a River running by Richmond, called Swaile.

Gods puniſhment upon the Doctor that condemned Snel.

Immediately after, Dr. Dakins giving Sentence that the other ſhould be burnt, came home to his houſe and never joyed after, but died. The Commiſſary of Richmond, named Hillings, preached at his burning, exhorting him to return to the Church; but his labour was in vain, the conſtant Martyr ſtanding ſtrongly to the Faith which he profeſſed.

Then being brought to the Stake, whereunto he was tied by a Girdle of Iron, there was given unto him Gunpowder, and a little Straw was laid under his feet and ſet round about with ſmall Wood and Tarr-barrels; the fire was put in the Straw, which by and by flaming about his head, he cried thrice together, Chriſt help me: Inſomuch that one Robert Atkinſon being preſent, ſaid, Hold faſt there, and we will all pray for thee. Thus this bleſſed Martyr ended his life.

A Story of one Laremouth, omitted in the body of this Story.

ALbeit I am loth to inſert any thing in this Book which may ſeem incredible or ſtrange to ordinary working for quarrelling Adverſaries, which do nothing but ſpy what they may cavil: yet forſomuch as beſides other Reporters, the perſon is yet alive, called Thorne, a godly Miniſter, which heard it of the mouth of the party himſelf, I thought therefore firſt for the incredible ſtrangeneſs thereof, neither to place this Story in the body of theſe Acts and Monuments, and yet in ſome out-corner of the Book not utterly to paſs it untouched, for the Reader to conſider it, and to credit it as he ſeeth cauſe. The Story is this: There was one Laremouth, otherwiſe called Williamſon, Chaplain to the Lady Anne of Cleve, a Scotiſhman, to whom being in Priſon in Queen Maries days, it was ſaid (as he thought) thus ſounding in his ears, Ariſe and go thy ways. Whereunto when he gave no great heed at the firſt, the ſecond time it was ſaid to him again in the ſame words. Upon this, as he fell to his Prayers, it was ſaid the third time likewiſe to him, Ariſe and go thy ways; which was about half an hour after. So he ariſing upon the ſame, immediately a piece of the Priſon-wall fell down, and as the Officers came in at the outward Gate of the Caſtle or Priſon, he leaping over the Ditch eſcaped, and in the way meeting a certain Beggar changed his Coat with him, and coming to the Sea-ſhoar, where he found a Veſſel ready to go over, was taken in, and eſcaped the ſearch, which was ſtraitly laid for him in all the Country over. Anno 1558.

A Letter of W. Hunter to his Mother a little before his burning.

MOſt reverend and loving Mother, after my moſt humble wiſe I have me moſt heartily commended unto you, deſiring you to pray unto God moſt heartily for me, that I may have his Bleſſing and yours, the which I eſteem more worth unto me than any worldly Treaſure. In this preſent Letter you ſhall underſtand the cauſe of my writing unto you at this time, that I am in good health and proſperity, as ever I was in this preſent life. Wherefore I render thanks unto Almighty God for it, who alone is moſt worthy of all praiſe, truſting in God you be in health alſo. Furthermore, I certifie you wherefore my Father continueth here, to the intent to hear ſome godly and joyful tidings both for Soul and Body, which I truſt it ſhall be to your ſingular comfort and conſolation, and to the great rejoycing of all other of my Friends. Therefore I deſire you (gentle Mother) to admoniſh my Brother unto a godly life with diligent attendance, and to pray for me, conſidering his bounden duty, that God may by your faithful Prayer aid and ſtrengthen me in this my proſperous journey and courſe which I run, truſting to obtain a Crown of everlaſting Life, which doth ever endure.

No more unto you at this time, but God preſerve you unto everlaſting Life.
So be it.

IT is given to the Queens Majeſty to underſtand, that certain of her Subjects by their evil diſpoſitions do

Anno 1558. do ſow and ſpread abroad divers ſeditions, to the derogation and diſhonour, firſt of Almighty God, in the ſtate of Religion ſtabliſhed by the Laws of this Realm, and alſo to the diſhonour of her Highneſs, in diſproving her lawful right of Supremacy amongſt her Subjects. And this that they do, is not done as in ſecrecy or by ſtealth, but openly avouched, and in all Companies diſputed on And thus by their bold attempts they ſeem not to obey or regard the Authority of Laws, nor the quiet of her Subjects. As for example, by bringing in and ſpreading abroad divers lewd Libels, and ſeditious Books from beyond the Seas, and in ſuch boldneſs, that they do commend thoſe writers in their Seditious Books, containing manifeſt matter againſt the eſtate eſtabliſhed. Which boldneſs of men, ſo univerſally and every where ſeen and heard, cannot be thought to be done but by the comfort and aid, or at the leaſt way winkt at by them whom the Queens Highneſs hath placed in Authority to repreſs theſe inſolencies. And the Queens Highneſs cannot more juſtly charge any for this diſorder, than ſuch who be in Commiſſions choſen to repreſs theſe diſorders. If it be anſwered me, that they cannot ſee ſuch open boldneſs and Factious diſorders, I muſt ſay that they have no eyes to ſee? and if they hear not of ſuch contemptuous talk and ſpeech, I may ſay that they have no ears. I would have thoſe men judge what will come of theſe unbridled ſpeeeches in the end, if reformations be not had thereof. What cometh of Factions and Seditions, we have been taught of late years, and what the fruits thereof be, which I beſeech God long to defend us from. If ſuch diſorders be not redreſſed by Law, then muſt force and violence reform. Which when they take place, may fortune to fall as ſoon on them that ſeem to have leaſt conſideration in this matter. If force and violence prevail, then ye know that Law is put to ſilence, and cannot be executed, which ſhould only maintain good order. If it be replyed againſt me, that to the ſuppreſſing of theſe open talks there is no Law, which by ſpecial Letter can charge any man offender; I muſt ſay, that whatſoever the Letter of the Law be, the meaning of the Law was and is clean contrary to the liberty of theſe doings. If it be ſaid, that no man can be charged by the Law, except it can be proved againſt him, that his ſpeech and deeds be done maliciouſly; what ye call malice I cannot tell. But if the bringing in of theſe Seditious Books make mens minds to be at variance one with another, diſtraction of minds maketh Seditions, Seditions bring in Tumults, Tumults work Inſurrections and Rebellion, Inſurrections make Depopulations and Deſolations, and bring in utter ruine and deſtruction of mens Bodies, Goods, and Lands: And if any ſow the Root whereof theſe men come, and yet it can be ſaid that he hath no malice, or that he doth not maliciouſly labour to deſtroy both publick and private wealth, I cannot tell what Act may be thought to be done maliciouſly. And further, if it be ſaid to me, that the man which ſhould be charged with offence, muſt be proved to have done his Act adviſedly: To that I anſwer, If any bring in thoſe Books, diſtribute them to others, commend and defend them, and yet cannot be charged to have done adviſedly, I have no skill of their adviſedneſs. If it be ſaid, that the Law entreateth of ſuch Acts as be directly derogatory and of none other, what is direct overthwarting the Law, when the contrary thereof is plainly treated, holden, and defended, and the Truth by Arguments condemned? It may be ſaid again, that the world doth not now like extremity in Laws Penal, and calleth them bloody Laws. As for extream and bloody Laws, I have never liked of them; But where the execution of ſuch Laws toucheth half a dozen offenders, and the not excution may bring in danger half a 100, I think this Law nor the execution thereof may juſtly be called extreme and bloody. In ſuch like compariſon I may utter my meaning, as to make a difference between whipping and hanging. Indeed, though whipping may be thought extreme, yet if by whipping a man may eſcape hanging, in this reſpect, not whipping bringeth in this bloodineſs and extremity, and not the execution of the Law; and better it were, a man to be twice whipped, then once hanged: The pains do differ, but wiſe men will ſoon conſider the diverſity. The Truth is, to ſuffer diſobedient Subjects to take boldneſs againſt the Laws of God and their Prince, to wink at the obſtinate minds of ſuch as be unbridled in their affections; to maintain a forain power of the Biſhop of Rome, directly againſt the Princes Prerogative ſtabliſhed by Laws, is not this to hatch Diſſention, and to cheriſh Sedition? To extol the writings of ſuch, who by all their wits deviſe to ſupplant the Princes lawful Authority? If theſe doings be not means to the diſturbance and utter ruine of this Realm, I know not what is good governance. If theſe be not the ſparks of Rebellion, what be they? Thus much having ſpoken to your Wiſdoms, I doubt not of your aſſenting with me; the rather alſo becauſe I utter them unto you as from the Queens Majeſty by commandment, who doth require of us all a more diligence in execution of Laws, than is ſpied commonly abroad: Whereby we ſhall do our duties to Almighty God the better, declare our allegiance to our Soveraign, regard the Majeſty of the Laws, love the quiet of our Country, and procure the ſafety of our ſelves.

God ſave the Queen.

And here I truſt, we are now come to an end of all our Engliſh Martyrs which hitherto have been burnt for the verity of the Goſpel, if we add beſides to the ſame a godly Countriman of ours, one named Richard Atkins an Hartfordſhire man, who of late about two years paſt in the Reign of this our gracious Queen, Anno 1581 moſt miſerably was tormented at Babylon, that is, in the City of Rome. The cauſe and manner of whoſe ſuffering and Martyrdom here enſueth, taken out of a certain late printed Story, and teſtified by ſuch as were preſent witneſſes and beholders of the ſame moſt tragical execution. The purport of which Story in words, as it is put down by the ſaid Reporter, here under followeth.

A true report of the horrible and mercileſs Martyrdom of one Richard Atkins, an Engliſh-man, with extreme Torments, and moſt cruel rage of furious Tyrants, Perſecutors, put to death at Rome.

ABout the month of July, Anno 1581. one Richard Atkins born in Hartfordſhire, an Engliſhman, came to Rome, and having found the Engliſh Colledg, knocked at the door, To whom divers of the Students there came out, to welcom him, underſtanding that he was an Engliſh-man. Among other talk had with him they willed him to go to the Hoſpital, and there to receive his meat and Lodging, according as the order was appointed: whereunto he anſwered, I come not (my Countrimen) to any ſuch intent, as you judge, but I come lovingly to rebuke the great miſorder of your lives, which I grieve to hear, and pity to behold: I come likewiſe to let your proud Antichriſt underſtand, that he doth offend the heavenly Majeſty, rob God of his honour, and poyſoneth the whole world with his abominable blaſphemies, making them do homage to Stocks and Stones, and that filthy Sacrament, which is nothing elſe but a fooliſh Idol. When they heard theſe words, one Hugh Griffin, a Welchman, and Student in the Colledge, cauſed him to be put in the Inquiſition? where, how they examined him, and how he anſwered them I know not, but after certain days he was ſet at liberty again And one day going in the ſtreet, he met a Prieſt carrying the Sacrament; which offending his Conſcience, to ſee the People ſo crouch and bow down to it, he caught at it to have thrown it down, but miſſing of his purpoſe, and it being judged by the People, that he did catch at the holineſs that (they ſay) cometh from the Sacrament, upon meer devotion, he was let paſs, and nothing ſaid to him: few days after he came to St. Peters Church, where divers Gentlemen and other were hearing Maſs, and the Prieſt at the elevation; he uſing no reverence, ſtepped among the People to the Altar, and threw down the Chalice with the Wine, ſtriving likewiſe to have pulled the Cake out of the Prieſts hands; for which divers roſe up and beat him with their fiſts, and one drew his Rapier, and would have ſlain him: ſo that in brief he was carried to Priſon, where he was examined, wherefore he had committed ſuch a haynous offence; whereunto he anſwered, that he came purpoſely for that intent, to rebuke the Popes wickedneſs and their Idolatry. Upon this he was condemned to be burned; which Sentence (he ſaid) he was right willing to ſuffer, and the rather, becauſe the ſum of his offence pertained to the glory of God. During the time he remained in Priſon, ſundry Engliſh men came unto him, willing him to be ſorry for that he had done, and to recant from his damnable Opinion; but all the means they uſed were in vain, he confuted their dealings by divers places of Scripture, and wiſhed them to be ſorry for their wickedneſs, while God did permit them time, elſe they were in danger of everlaſting damnation; theſe words made the Engliſhmen depart: for they could not abide to hear them. Within a while after, he was ſet upon an Aſſe without any Saddle, he being from the middle upward naked, having ſome Engliſh Prieſts with him to talk with him, but he regarded them not, but ſpake to the People in ſo good Language as he could, and told them they were in a wrong way, and therefore willed them for Chriſts ſake, to have regard to the ſaving of their Souls. All the way as he went, there were four that did nothing elſe but thruſt at his Body with burning Torches, whereat he never moved, nor ſhrunk one jot, but with a chearful countenance laboured to perſwade the People, often bending his body to meet the Torches, as they were thruſt at him, and would take them in his own hand, and hold them burning ſtill upon his Body, whereat the People not a little wondred. Thus he continued almoſt the ſpace of half a mile, till he came before St Peters, where the place of Execution was. When he was come to the place of execution, there they had made a device, not to make the fire about him, but to burn his Legs firſt, which they did, he not diſmaying any whit, but ſuffered all marvellous chearfully; which moved the People to ſuch a quandary as was not in Rome many a day. Then they offered him a Croſs, and willed him to imbrace it, in token that he died a Chriſtian; but he put it away with his hand, telling them that they were evil men to trouble him with ſuch paltry, when he was preparing himſelf to God, whom he beheld in Majeſty and mercy, ready to receive him into eternal reſt. They ſeeing him in this mind, departed, ſaying, Let us go and leave him to the Devil, whom he ſerves. Thus ended this faithful Souldier and Martyr of Chriſt, who is, no doubt, in glory with his Maſter: whereunto God grant us all to come, Amen.

This is faithfully avouched by John Young, who was at that time, and a good while after in Rome, in Service with Maſter Doctor Morton; who ſeeing the Martyrdom of this man, when he came home to his houſe, in preſence of Maſter Smith his Son, Mr. Creed, and the ſaid John Young, ſpake as followeth. Surely this Fellow was marvellous obſtinate, he nothing regarded the good counſel which was uſed to him, nor ſhrunk all the way when the Torches were thruſt at his naked Body. Beſide, in the place of execution he did not faint nor cry one jot in the fire, albeit they tormented him very cruelly, and burned him by degrees, as his Legs firſt to put him to the greater pain; yet all this he did but ſmile at. Doubtleſs, but that the Word of God cannot be but true, elſe we might judge this Fellow to be of God; for who could have ſuffered ſo much pain as he did? but truely I believe the Devil was in him.

The curſed Life and bloody End of Dr. Story, a cruel Perſecutor of Chriſt in his Members.

I Had thought (Chriſtian Reader) here to have made an end, and to have concluded the Volume of this Book, had not the remembrance of Dr. Story, an Arch-enemy to Chriſts Goſpel, and bloody Perſecutor of Gods People, come into my mind. The diſcourſe of whoſe life and doings, I thought good here briefly to lay open to the view of the world, as followeth. This Dr. Story being an Engliſh man by birth, and from his infancy not only nuſled in Papiſtry, but alſo even as it were by nature earneſtly affected to the ſame, and growing ſomewhat to riper years, in the days of Queen Mary became a bloody Tyrant, and cruel Perſecutor of Chriſt in his Members (as all the Stories in this Book almoſt do declare.) Thus he raging all the Reign of the foreſaid Queen Mary againſt the infallible Truth of Chriſts Goſpel, and the true profeſſors thereof, never ceaſed till he had conſumed to Aſhes two or three hundred bleſſed Martyrs, who willingly gave their lives for the Teſtimony of his Truth; and thinking their puniſhment in the fire not cruel enough, he went about to invent new Torments for the holy Martyrs of Chriſt, ſuch was his hatred to the Truth of Chriſts Goſpel: but in the end the Lord God looking upon the affliction and cruel bloodſhedding of his Servants, took away Queen Mary the great Pillar of Papiſtry. After whom ſucceeded Lady Elizabeth now Queen of England, who ſtaying the bloody Sword of Perſecution form raging any further, cauſed the ſame Doctor Story to be apprehended, and committed to ward, with many other his complices, ſworn enemies to Chriſts glorious Goſpel. The ſaid Story having been a while detained in Priſon, at the laſt, by what means I know not, brake forth of hold, and conveighed himſelf over the Seas, where he continued a moſt bloody Perſecutor, ſtill raging againſt Gods Saints with fire and Sword. Inſomuch as he growing to be familiar and right dear to Duke Dalva in Antwerp, received ſpecial Commiſſion from him to ſearch the Ships for goods forfeited, and for Engliſh Books, and ſuch like.

And in this favour and authority he continued there for a ſpace, by the which means he did much hurt, and brought many a good Man and Woman to trouble and extreme Peril of life through his blood-thirſty cruelty: but at the laſt the Lord (when the meaſure of his iniquity was full) proceeded in judgment againſt him, and cut him off from the face of the earth, according to the prayers of many a good man; which came to paſs in order as followeth. It being certainly known (for the bruit thereof was gone forth into all Lands) that he not only intended the ſubverſion and overthrow of his native Country of England, by bringing in forain Hoſtility, if by any means he might compaſs it; but alſo daily and hourly murthered Gods People, there was this Platform laid (by Gods providence no doubt) that one Maſter Parker, a Merchant ſhould ſaile unto Antwerp and by ſome means conveigh Story into England.

This Parker arriving at Antwerp, ſuborned certain to repair to Dr. Story, and to ſignifie unto him, that there was an Engliſh Ship came, fraught with Marchandize, and that if he would make ſearch thereof himſelf, he ſhould find ſtore of Engliſh Books, and other things for his purpoſe. Story hearing this, and ſuſpecting nothing, made haſte towards the Ship, thinking to make the ſame his Prey; and coming abroad, ſearched for Engliſh Heretical Books (as he called them) and going down under the Hatches, becauſe he would be ſure to have their Blood if he could, they clapped down the Hatches, hoiſed up their Sails, having (as God would) a good gale, and ſailed away into England? where they arriving preſented this bloody Butcher, and Traiterous Rebel Story to the no little rejoycing of many an Engliſh heert. He being now committed to Priſon, continued there a good ſpace: during all which time he was laboured and ſolicited daily by wiſe and learned Fathers to recant his deviliſh and erroneous opinions, to conform himſelf to the Truth, and to acknowledge the Queens Supremacy. All which he utterly denied to the death, ſaying, that he was ſworn Subject to the King of Spain, and was no ſubject to the Queen of England, nor ſhe his Soveraign Queen; and therefore (as he well deſerved) he was condemned (as a Traitor to God, the Queens Majeſty, and the Realm) to be drawn, hanged, and quartered; which was performed accordingly, he being laid upon a Hurdle, and drawn from the Tower along the ſtreets to Tiborn where he being hanged till he was half dead, was cut down and ſtripped; and (which is not to be forgot) when the executioner had cut off his privy Members, he ruſhing up upon a ſudden, gave him a blow upon the ear, to the great wonder of all that ſtood by: and thus ended this bloody Nimrod his wretched life, whoſe judgment I leave to the Lord.

IN the hiſtory of George Eagles, alias Trudgeover-the-world, mention is made of his apprehenſion in a corn field, where, by the benefit of the height of the Anno 1558. the corn, and breadth of the field, he had eſcaped, had not one of his perſecutors with more malicious craft climbed a high tree to view over the place, and ſo deſcried him. This perſecutor named Ralph Lurdane (as we have ſince learned) a lewd fellow of life for theft and whoredom, was, within few years after he had apprehended the foreſaid George Eagles for gain of Mony, attached of felony for ſtealing an horſe, condemned, and hanged in the ſame place and Town of Chelmsford, where George Eagles before ſuffered Martyrdom.

A brief Note concerning the horrible Maſſacre in France, Anno 1572.

The cruel Maſſacre in France.

HEre, before the cloſing up of this Book, in no caſe would be unremembred the tragical and furious Maſſacre in France, wherein were Murthered ſo many hundreds and thouſands of Gods good Martyrs. But becauſe the true narration of this lamentable ſtory is ſet forth in Engliſh at large, in a Book by it ſelf, and extant in print already, it ſhall the leſs need now to diſcourſe that matter with any new repetition; onely a brief touch of ſummary notes for remembrance may ſuffice. And firſt for brevity ſake to overpaſs the bloody butchery of the Romiſh Catholicks in Orange againſt the Proteſtants, moſt fiercely and unawares breaking into their houſes, and there, without mercy, killing Man, Woman, and Child; of whom ſome being ſpoyled and naked, they threw out of their loſts into the ſtreets; ſome they ſmothered in their houſes with ſmoak, with ſword and weapon ſparing none, the Carkaſſes of ſome they threw to dogs, with was An. 1570. in the Reign of Charles 9. Likewiſe to paſs over the cruel ſlaughter at Roane, where the Proteſtants being at a Sermon without the City Walls upon the Kings Edict, the Chatholicks in fury rann upon them coming home, and ſlew of them above 40. at leaſt, many more they wounded. This example at Roane, ſtirred up the Papiſts in Diepe to practiſe the like rage alſo againſt the Chriſtians there returning from the Sermon; whoſe ſlaughter had been the greater, had they not more wiſely before been provided of weapons for their own defence at need. All which happened about the ſame year aforeſaid Anno 1570. But theſe with ſuch like I briefly overſlip, to enter now into the matter above promiſed, that is, briefly to entreat of the horrible and moſt barbarous Maſſacre wrought in Paris, ſuch as I ſuppoſe was never heard of before in any Civil diſſenſion amongſt the very Heathen. In few words to touch the ſubſtance of the matter.

The horrible Maſſacre at Paris.

After long troubles in France, the Catholick ſide, foreſeeing no good to be done againſt the Proteſtants by open force, began to deviſe how by crafty means to entrap them, And that by two manner of ways: The one by pretending a power to be ſent into the lower Countrey, whereof the Admiral to be the Captain; not that the King ſo meant indeed, but onely to underſtand thereby what power and force the Admiral had under him, who they were, and what were their names. The ſecond was by a certain marriage ſuborned, between the Prince of Navarre, and the Kings Siſter. To this pretenſed marriage, it was deviſed that all the chiefeſt Proteſtants of France ſhould be invited, and meet in Paris. Among whom firſt they began with the Queen of Navarre, Mother to the Prince, that ſhould Marry the Kings Siſter, attempting by all means poſſible to obtain her conſent thereunto. She being then at Rochel, and allured by many fair words to repair unto the King, conſented at length to come, and was received at Paris; where ſhe after much ado, at length being wone to the Kings mind, and providing for the marriage, ſhortly upon the ſame fell ſick, and within five days departed, not without ſuſpition, as ſome ſaid, of poiſon. But her Body being opened, no ſign of poiſon could there be found, ſave only that a certain Apothecary made his brag, that he had killed the Queen by certain venemous odours and ſmels by him confected.

A Bloody marriage between the Kings Siſter and Prince of Navarre.

After this notwithſtanding the marriage ſtill going forward, the Admiral, Prince of Navarre, Condè, with divers other chief States of the Proteſtants, induced by the Kings Letters and many fair promiſes, at laſt were brought to Paris. Where with great ſolemnity they were received, but eſpecially the Admiral. To make the matter ſhort, The day of the marriage came, which was the eighteenth of Auguſt. Anno 1572. Which marriage being celebrate and ſolemnized by the Cardinal of Eorbone, upon an high ſtage ſet up of purpoſe without the Church Walls, the Prince of Navarre and Condè came down, waiting for the Kings Siſter being then at Maſs. This done, they reſorted all together to the Biſhops Palace to dinner. At evening they where had to a Palace in the middle of Paris to ſupper. Not long after this, being the two and twentieth of Auguſt, the Admiral coming from the Councel Table, by the way was ſtrucken with a Piſtolet, charged with three Pellets, in both his Arms. He being thus wounded, and yet ſtill remaining in Paris; although the Vidam gave him Counſel to flee away, it ſo fell out that certain Souldiers were appointed in divers places of the City to be ready at a Watch-word at the commandment of the Prince, Upon which Watch-word given, they burſt out to the ſlaughter of the Proteſtants, firſt beginning with the Admiral himſelf, who being wounded with many ſore wounds, was caſt out of the Window into the ſtreet, where his Head being firſt ſtriken off, and embalmed with ſpices to be ſent to the Pope, the ſavage people raging againſt him, cut off his Arms and Privy Members, and ſo drawing him three days thorow the ſtreets of Paris, they dragged him unto the place of execution out of the City, and there hanged him up by his heeles to the greater ſhew and ſcorn of him.

After the Martyrdom of this good Man, the armed Souldiers with rage and violence ran upon all other of the ſame profeſſion, ſlaying and killing all the Proteſtants they knew or could find within the City gates incloſed. This Bloody ſlaughter continued the ſpace of many days, but eſpecially the greateſt ſlaughter was in the three firſt days, in which were numbred to be ſlain, as the ſtory writeth, above ten thouſand, Men, Women, old and young, of all ſorts and conditions. The Bodies of the dead were carried in Carts to be thrown in the River: ſo that not onely the River was all ſtained therewith, but alſo whole ſtreams in certain places of the City did run with gore Blood of the ſlain Bodies. So great was the outrage of that Heatheniſh Perſecution, that not only the Proteſtants, but alſo certain, whom they thought indifferent Papiſts, they put to the ſword in ſtead of Proteſtants. In the number of them that were ſlain of the more learned ſort, was Petrus Ramus, alſo Lambinus, another notorious learned man; Plateanus, Lomenius, Chapeſius, with others.

10 Thouſand ſlain in three days. Ex hiſtoria Rie. Dinothi, lib. 5.

Petrus Ramus Lambinus, with other, ſlain.

And not onely within the Walls of Paris this uproar was contained, but it extended further into other Cities and quarters of the Realm, eſpecially Lyons, Orleans, Tholous, and Roane. In which Cities it is almoſt incredible, nor ſcarce ever heard of in any nation, what cruelty was ſhewed, what numbers of good men were deſtroyed; inſomuch that within the ſpace of one Month thirty thouſand at leaſt of Religious Proteſtants are numbred to be ſlain, as is credibly reported and ſtoried in the Commentaries of them which teſtifie purpoſly of the matter.

Commentaria de ſtatu Galliæ part. 3

Furthermore here is to be noted, that when the Pope firſt heard of this Bloody ſtir, he with his Cardinals made ſuch joy at Rome, with their Proceſſion, with their gunſhot, and ſinging of Te Deum, that in honour of that feſtival act, a jubile was commanded by the Pope with great indulgence, and much ſolemnity. Whereby thou haſt here to diſcern and judge, with what Spirit and Charity theſe Catholicks are moved to maintain their Religion, which otherwiſe would fall to the ground without all hope of recovery. Likewiſe in France no leſs rejoycing there was upon the 28. day of the ſaid Month, the King commanding publick Proceſſions thorow the whole City to be made, with bonefires, ringing, and ſinging; where the King himſelf, with the Queen, his Mother, and his whole Court reſorting together to the Church, gave thanks and laud to God, for that ſo worthy victory atchieved upon St. Bartholomews day againſt the Proteſtants, whom they thought to be utterly overthrown and vanquiſhed in all the Realm for ever.

The Spirit and Charity of the Pope to be noted.

28. of Auguſt St. Bartholomew; a bloody day.

And

The great diſtreſs of the Proteſtants in France.

And in very deed to mans thinking it might appear no leſs after ſuch a great deſtruction of the Proteſtants, having loſt ſo many worthy and Noble Captains as then were cut off, whereupon many, for fear revoking their Religion, returned to the Pope, divers fled out of the Realm, ſuch as would not turn, keeping themſelves ſecret, durſt not be known nor ſeen, ſo that it was paſt all hope of man, that the Goſpel ſhould ever have any more place in France: but ſuch is the admirable working of the Lord, where mans help and hope moſt faileth, there he moſt ſheweth his ſtrength and helpeth, as here is to be ſeen and noted. For whereas the little ſmall remnant of the Goſpel ſide, being now brought to utter deſperation, were now ready to give over unto the King, and many were gone already againſt Conſcience, yet ding to time, yet the Lord of his goodneſs ſo wrought, that many were ſtaied and reclaimed again through the occaſion firſt of them in Rochel: Who hearing of the cruel Maſſacre in Paris, and ſlaughter at Tholous, moſt conſtantly with valiant hearts (the Lord ſo working) thought to ſtand to their defence againſt the Kings power by whoſe example certain other Cities hearing thereof took no little courage to do the like: as namely Montalbane, the City called Nemanſium, Sanſer in Occitamia, Millialdum, Mirebellum, Fuduzia, with other Towns and Cities more: who being confederate together, exhorted one another to be Circumſpect, and take good heed of the falſe diſſembling practices not to be be truſted of the mercileſs Papiſts, intending nothing but Blood and deſtruction.

Gods helping hand at need.

The Town of Rochel example to other Towns

The Cities of the Proteſtants take courage to defend themſelves.

Theſe things thus paſſing at Rochel, the King hearing thereof, giveth in commandment to Captain Strozzius and Guardius to ſee to Rochel. After this he ſendeth a Noble man, one Bironius, requiring of the Rochel men to receive him for their Governour under the King. Of this great Conſultation being had, at length the Rochel men began to condeſcend upon certain conditions; which being not eaſily granted unto, and eſpecially they hearing in the mean time what was done to others of their fellows, which had ſubmitted themſelves, thought it ſo better to ſtand to the defence of their lives and Conſciences, and to adventure the worſt. Whereupon began great ſiege and battery to be laid againſt Rochel both by land and ſea, which was Anno 1572. about the fourth day of December. It would require another Volume to deſcribe all things, during the time of this ſiege, that paſſed on either ſide, between the Kings part, and the Town of Rochel; briefly to run over ſome parts of the matter: In the beginning of the next year following, which was Anno 1573. in the Month of January, commandment was given out by the King to all and ſundry Nobles and Peers of France, upon great puniſhment, to addreſs themſelves in moſt forcible wiſe to the aſſaulting of Rochel. Whereupon a great concourſe of all the Nobility, with the whole Power of France, was there aſſembled, amongſt whom was alſo the Prince of Anjou, the Kings Brother (who there not long after was proclaimed King of Polonie) accompanied with his other Brother Duke Alanſon, Navarre, Conde, and other a great number of States beſides. Thus the whole power of France being gathered againſt one Poor Town, had not the mighty hand of the Lord ſtood on their ſide, it had been unpoſſible for them to eſcape. During the time of this ſiege, which laſted about ſeven Months, what Skirmiſhes and Conflicts were on both ſides, it would require a long tractation. To make ſhort, ſeven principal aſſaults were given to the poor Town of Rochel, with all the power that France could make. In all which aſſaults ever the Popes Catholick ſide had the worſt. Concerning the firſt aſſault thus I find written, that within the ſpace of 26. days were charged againſt the walls and houſes of Rochel, to the number of thirty thouſand ſhot of Iron bullets and Globes, whereby a great breach was made for the Adverſary to invade the City: but ſuch was the courage of them within, not men onely, but alſo of Women, Matrons, and Maidens, with ſpits, fire, and ſuch other weapon as came to hand, that the Adverſary was driven back, with no ſmall ſlaughter of their Souldiers: onely of the Townſmen were ſlain and wounded to the number of ſixty perſons. Likewiſe in the ſecond aſſault 2000. great Field-pieces were laid againſt the Town; whereupon the Adverſary attempted the next day to invade the Town, but through the induſtry of the Souldiers and Citizens, and alſo of the Women and Maids, the Invaders were forced at length to flie away faſter then they came. No better ſucceſs had all the aſſaults that followed: whereby conſider (gentle Reader) with thy ſelf, in what great diſtreſs theſe good men were, not of Rochel onely, but of other Cities alſo, during theſe ſeven Months above mentioned, had not the mighty hand of the Lord almighty ſuſtained them. Concerning whoſe wondrous operation for his Servants in theſe hard diſtreſſes, three memorable things I find in Hiſtory to be noted.

Bironius.

Rochel men ſtand to their defence.

Rochel firſt beſiegedby Bironius. Anno 1573.

The whole power of France ſet againſt Rochel

The ſiege of Rochel during ſeven Months.

7. Aſſaults againſt Rochel.

Anno 1558.

The one concerning the ſiege of Sanſer; which City being terribly battered and razed with Gunſhot of great Canons, and Field-pieces, having at one ſiege no leſs then three thouſand Bullets and Gunſtones flying upon them, wherewith the creſts of their helmets were pierced, their ſleeves, their hoſe, their hats pierced, their weapons in their hands broken, their wals ſhaken, their houſes rent down; yet not one perſon ſlain nor wounded with all this, ſave onely at the firſt a certain Maiden, with the blaſt of the ſhot flying by her, was ſtrucken down, and died.

Three notable examples of Gods great mercy in preſerving his ſervants.

The ſecond thing to be noted is this, that in the ſame City during all the time of the ſiege, which laſted ſeven Months and a half, for all the Ordinance and Battering-pieces diſcharged againſt them, which are numbred to ſix thouſand, not ſo much as 25. perſons in all were ſlain.

The ſecond example.

The third example, no leſs memorable, was at Rochel: Whereas the poorer ſort began to lack corn and victual, there was ſent to them every day in the river (by the hand of the Lord no doubt) a great multitude of fiſh (called Surdones) which the poorer people did uſe in ſtead of bread. Which fiſh, the ſame day as the ſiege brake up, departed and came no more. Teſtified by them which were preſent there in Rochel all the time.

The third miraculous work of God, in ſending fiſh.

What number was loſt on both ſides during all this ſeven Months Warr, it is not certainly known. Of the Kings camp what number was ſlain, by this it may be conjectured, that 132. of their Captains were killed and ſlain, of whom the chiefeſt was Duke-Damoule.

132 Captains of the Kings Army ſlain.

To cloſe up this Tragical Story, concerning the breaking up of this ſeven Months Siege: thus it fell out, that ſhortly after the ſeventh aſſault given againſt Rochel, which was Anno 1573. about the Month of June, word came to the Camp, that Duke Anjou the Kings Brother was proclaimed King of Polonie. Whereat great joy was in the Camp. By occaſion whereof the New King, more willing to have peace, entred talk with them of Rochel: who, as he ſhewed himſelf to them not ungentle, ſo found he them again to him not unconformable. Whereupon a certain agreement pacificatory was concluded between them upon conditions. Which agreement the new Polonie King eftſoons preferred to the French King his Brother, not without ſome ſuite and interceſſion to have it ratified. The King alſo himſelf, partly being weary of theſe chargeable Wars, was the more willing to aſſent thereunto. And thus at length, through the Lords great work, the Kings Royal conſent under form of an Edict was ſet down in writing, and confirmed by the King, containing 25. Articles. In which alſo were incluided certain other Cities of the Proteſtants, granting to them benefit of Peace and liberty of Religion. This Edict or Mandate ſent down from the King by his Herald at Arms, Bironius in the Kings name cauſed to be ſolemnely proclaimed at Rochel. An. 1573. the tenth day of June.

Peace concluded between the King and the Proteſtants.

Duke Anjou the Kings Brother made King of Poland.

Peace agreed and concluded between the King and Proteſtants of Rochel, & certain other Cities.

Anno 1573. Junii 10.

The year next following, 1574. for two things ſeemeth fatal and famous; for the death firſt of Charles the ninth th French King, alſo moſt of all for the death of Charles, Cardinal of Loraine, Brother to Guiſe. Of the manner of the Cardinals death, I find little mention in ſtories. Touching the Kings death, although Ric. Dinothus ſaith nothing, for fear belike, becauſe he being a French-man, his name is expreſſed and known: but another ſtory (whom the ſaid Dinothus doth follow) bearing no name, ſaith thus: That he died the 25. day of May upon Whitſon even, being of the age of 25. years: and addeth more; Pro fluvio ſanguinis illum laboraſſe certum eſt,

The Death of Charles the ninth the French King, and of the Cardinal of Loraine.

Certain

Anno 1558.

The manner of Charles the French Kings death, to be noted.

Certain it is, that his ſickneſs came of Bleeding. And ſaith further: Conſtans fert fama, illum dum è variis corporis partibus ſanguis emanaret, in lecto ſæpe volutatum, inter horribilium blaſphemiarum diras, tantam ſanguinis vim projeciſſe, ut paucas poſt horas mortuus fuerit. That is, The conſtant report ſo goeth, that his Blood guſhing out by divers parts of his Body, he toſſing in his Bed and caſting out many horrible Blaſphemies, laid upon Pillows with his Heels upward and Head downward, voided ſo much blood at his mouth that in few hours he died. Which ſtory, if it be true, as is recorded and teſtified, may be a Spectacle and Example to all perſecuting Kings and Princes polluted with the Blood of Chriſtian Martyrs. And thus much briefly touching the late terrible Perſecution in France.

Ex comment. de Stat. Gallic. part. 4.

The Concluſion of the Work.

AND thus to conclude (good Chriſtian Reader) this preſent Tractation, not for lack of matter, but to ſhorten rather the matter for largneſs of the Volume, I here ſtay for this preſent time, without further addition of more diſcourſe, either to over-weary thee with longer tediouſneſs, or overcharge the Book with longer prolixity, having hitherto ſet forth the Acts and Proceedings of the whole Church of Chriſt, namely, of the Church of England, although not in ſuch particular perfection, that nothing hath overpaſſed us; yet in ſuch general ſufficiency, that I truſt not very much hath eſcaped us, neceſſary to be known, touching the principal affairs, doings and proceedings of the Church and Churchmen. Wherein may be ſeen the whole ſtate, order, deſcent, courſe and continuance of the ſame, the increaſe and decreaſe of true Religion, the creeping in of Superſtition, the horrible troubles of Perſecution, the wonderful aſſiſtance of the Almighty in maintaining his Truth, the glorious conſtancy of Chriſts Martyrs, the rage of the Enemies, the alteration of Times, the travels and troubles of the Church, from the firſt Primitive age of Chriſts Goſpel, to the end of Queen Mary and the beginning of this our gracious Queen Elizabeth. During the time of her happy Reign, which hath hitherto continued (through the gracious protection of the Lord) the ſpace now of 24. years, as my wiſh is, ſo I would be glad the good will of the Lord were ſo, that no more matter of ſuch lamentable Stories may ever be offered hereafter to write upon. But ſo it is, I cannot tell how, the elder the World waxeth, the longer it continueth, the nearer it haſteneth to its end, the more Satan rageth, giveth ſtill new matter of writing Books and Volumes: Inſomuch that if all were recorded and committed to Hiſtory, that within the ſaid compaſs of this Queens Reign hitherto hath happened, in Scotland, Flanders, France, Spain, Germany, beſides this our own Country of England and Ireland, with other Countries more, I verily ſuppoſe one Euſebius or Polyhiſtor, which Pliny writeth of, would not ſuffice thereunto. But of theſe incidents and occurrents hereafter more, as it ſhall pleaſe the Lord to give grace and ſpace. In the mean time the Grace of the Lord Jeſus work with thee (gentle Reader) in all thy ſtudious Readings. And while thou haſt ſpace, ſo imploy thy ſelf to read, that by reading thou maiſt learn daily to know that which may profit thy Soul, may teach thee experience, may arm thee with patience, and inſtruct thee in all Spiritual knowledge more and more to thy perpetual comfort and ſalvation in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord; to whom be all glory in Secula Seculorum, Amen.

Edward Bulkley to the Chriſtian Reader.

WHereas that excellent Man, both for learning and godlineſs, Mr. John Fox of bleſſed memory, ended this worthy Work with this ſhort declaration of that horrible Maſſacre and Murther of Gods Saints and Servants in France; I have thought good to ſet down the ſame more particularly and largely, and afterward to add thereunto a Declaration of other outragious Cruelties, committed in France by the Favourers and Followers of the Church of Rome upon faithful Chriſtians, both before and after the ſaid Maſſacre: All faithfully collected and taken out of the Hiſtory of that honourable man James Auguſt Thuanus, Preſident of the Parliament of Paris, and Counſellor of State to the late French King Henry the Fourth. And thus I have done, that we may thereby be the more moved to hate and abhor that bloody Babylon of Rome, and to take the better heed, that by our ſins and contempt of Gods holy Word, by his great mercy committed unto us, we do not again fall into the cruel claws thereof, and into the bloody hands of her Followers; as moſt certainly we had done, if God in great mercy had not prevented that ſavage, barbarous, and monſtrous Powder-Treaſon: of which great and merciful Deliverance God make us mindful and truly thankful in glorifying his Name, and ſerving him in true holineſs and righteouſneſs all the days of our life, Amen.

At Orleance a thouſand of Men, Women and Children were murthered. Pag. 63.

The Citizens of Auguſtobona, when they heard of the Maſſacre at Paris, ſhut the Gates of their Town that no Proteſtant might eſcape, and caſt all that they ſuſpected into Priſon, which afterward were brought forth and murthered. Pag. 64.

At Avaricum in like manner the ſuſpected for Religion were caſt into Priſon, and afterward murthered. Pag. 65.

At the Town of Charite, a Troop of Lewes Gonzaga's Horſemen killed 18 Perſons. Ibidem.

At Lions there were 800 moſt miſerably and cruelly murthered; the Children hanging at their Fathers necks, and the Fathers imbracing their Children, &c. Three hundred were ſlain in the Archbiſhops houſe. The Monks would not ſuffer their Bodies to be buried. Pag. 68. Pag. 69.

At Romanium ſeven were killed, Pag. 71.

At Tholoſſa 200 were murthered. Pag. 72.

At Roan 500 were put to death. At the laſt Thuanus writeth thus; This example paſſed unto other Cities, and from Cities to Towns and Villages, ſo that it is by many publiſhed, that in all the Kingdom above 30000 were in theſe tumults divers ways deſtroyed; although I think the number was ſomewhat leſs. Pag. 73.

A little before this Maſſacre, a Man, Nurſe, and Infant

And the Monday following there was ſolemn Service in the Church of Minerva, at which the Pope and the Cardinals were preſent. A Jubile alſo was publiſhed, and in the evening the

Pag. 117. Caſter a City in the County of the Albingens, held by the Proteſtants, being upon the Kings great promiſes of their ſafety, delivered up into the hands of Crucete a Noble man, was notwithſtanding with murthers and ſpoil cruelly waſted.

Pag. 120. 121. At Burdeaux, by the inſtigation of a Monk, called Enimund Angerius, were 264. cruelly murthered, of whom ſome were Senators. This Monk continually provoked them in his Sermons to this ſlaughter.

Pag. 177. There was great rejoycing in the Camp of the Duke Alba, for the murther in Paris.

I have thought good to add hereunto the like Cruelty, committed at ſundry other times before this Maſſacre, by the followers of the Church of Rome, againſt the true Profeſſors of Chriſt his Goſpel; taken alſo out of the Hiſtories of the ſaid honourable man James Auguſt Thuanus, who in the firſt part of his ſecond Tome, lib. 29. writeth thus.

Pag. 195. Anno Dom. 1562. AT Agendicum in Main, a cruel ſlaughter of the Proteſtants was committed by the inſtigation of Æmarus, Inquiſitor of Criminal cauſes, Cardinal Guiſe (as was thought) not being ignorant thereof, being Archbiſhop of that City, who, to the ſtirring up of more hatred againſt him, was accuſed to have been at the ſtir and ſlaughter at Vaſſey. A rumour being ſpread abroad, that the Proteſtants had taken ſecret Counſel to invade and ſpoyl the Churches, above an hundred of every eſtate and ſex were by the enraged People killed or drowned in the River Igonna, which runneth by the City, the houſes of many were ſpoiled; the Church without the City where the Proteſtants aſſembled, was pulled down and made equal to the ground, and their Vines pulled up by the Roots.

Lib. 30. Pag. 232. The Duke of Guiſe entred into Bloeſe; which although he got without any fight, yet all furious liberty was permitted to the Souldiers, houſes were ſpoiled, many Proteſtants which had remained were ſlain, or drowned in the River; neither were Women ſpared, of whom ſome were defiled, and more murthered. Amongſt whom one Matron of good birth, having eſcaped drowning in Water, could not eſcape from the hands of the murtherers. From thence he went to Mere, a Town two Leagues from Bloeſe, were Proteſtants had frequent aſſembly at Sermons; which for many days together was ſpoiled, and many killed, and Caſſobonius the Paſtor was drowned in the next River.

Pag. 233. At Ligolium certain men were ſtrangled, the Preachers eyes pulled out, and he burned by a ſoft and ſlow fire.

Pag. 236. At Anjou, Albiacus the Paſtor was murthered, certain Women ſlain, and ſome defiled; amongſt which, two Siſters were abuſed in the ſight of their Father, who was bound to a Well to behold that ſight.

Pag. 238. John Turry a Preacher, above 70. years old, being taken was drowned in the River Clavium.

Pag. 239. An hundred and twenty being put into the Church at Ceſarodum, were cruelly murthered and drowned in the Ibidem. River Liger. Many more Men and Women, which would not go to Maſs, were ſlain by the procurement of one Antonie Pleſſiac Richel, who had been a Monk and was then a leader of footmen. Children that had been baptized by the Proteſtants, were by them rebaptized. Anno 1558. Ibidem.

John Burgeolus, Preſident of Turen, an old man, being ſuſpected to be a Proteſtant, having bought with a great ſum of mony his life and ſafety, was notwithſtanding taken and beaten cruelly with Clubs and Staves, and being ſtripped of his Cloaths, was brought to the Bank of the River Liger, and was hanged his feet upward, and head downward in the Water up to his breaſt; then (he yet alive) they opened his Belly, pulled out his Guts, and threw them into the River, and taking his heart, put it upon a ſpear, carrying it with contumelious words about the City.

Renatus Campanus did throw above fifty whom either Pag. 241.

At Samararobridge certain were ſlain, Bibles in the Pag. 242.
French Tongue and other Books were burned, and the Pulpit overthrown.

At Abbatſ-villa, Robert Sandeliſius Allocurius was ſlain, and his Son Francis, who firſt was wounded and left in the way for dead, and after being alive, and carried into an Inn, was taken out and killed. Francis Cantalupe Seconvilla, and Antony Cancelerie Altamrius Kinſman flying away, were taken and killed.

At Valonia a Tumult of purpoſe was raiſed, Huſuill, Pag. 246.
and Cocavill dwelling thereby were ſlain with certain men of the Town, of whom was one John Gifford; who being overwhelmed with Stones, and being ſuppoſed to be dead, yet after lifting up his head, and calling for help, was with Spits and Spears thruſt thorow and killed; the hatred of the furious People being ſcarcely ſatisfied with his double death.

In Andomaribridge the Paſtor or Preacher lying ſick, Pag. 249.

The Town of Barre being taken by the Papiſts, all kind of cruelty was there uſed, Children were cut up, and the Guts of ſome of them and hearts pulled out, which in rage they gnawed with their Teeth. They that were in the Caſtle, when they had yielded themſelves to the will of the Conqueror, were almoſt all hanged. One Ralet ſpared not his own Son, but ſuffered him in that Tumult to be hanged.

Pag. 395. At Galliacum, which is a Town by the River Tarvis, a great ſlaughter of Proteſtants was committed by the means of Laureſce Stroſſius Cardinal, Biſhop of Albiens, in which, above 150. were murthered: of which, ſome were drawn thorow the ſtreets, and after death caſt into the fields, to be eaten of Kites; other Ibidem. were drowned in the River, or caſt head-long from an high place. Proteſtants houſes were marked with Chalk to be murthered.

Lib 33. Pag. 427. In a Town called Penna, 300. (notwithſtanding the ſafety of their lives was promiſed to them) were cruelly murthered by Spaniards, which were newly come to ſerve the French King; who alſo killed certain Women there ſcoffingly ſaying, that they were Lutheran men, diſſembling their Sex by their apparel.

Lib. 34. Pag. 512. Anno 1563. Columbarius was ſlain in the ſiege of Montalbane, whoſe cruelty had been ſo great, that he counted it but a ſport to burn Women, Children, and old Men in an houſe together.

Pag. 514. The Town of Nonne being yielded to the Papiſts, upon condition, that the forain Souldiers ſhould depart ſafe with horſe and Armour, leaving their Enſigns, and that the Enemies Souldiers that were foot-men ſhould not enter into the Town, and that no harm ſhould be done to the Townesmen; but that they might (if they would) go into the Caſtle: after the yielding of it, the Gates were ſet open, and ſtraight they came to murthering and ſpoyling without any regard of the forcſaid conditions. Men and Women without difference were killed; the ſtreets founded with miſerable mourning, Blood flowing in the ways, and the laſcivious Souldiers Swords ſhining in the flames of the fire, which they had caſt upon the houſes. Many were cruelly killed, being thrown down headlong from on high. Among others, this example of inordinate filthineſs and cruelty is reported. A certain Woman being drawn out of a privy place, into the which to avoid the rage of the Souldiers ſhe had fled with her Husband, was in his ſight ſhamefully defiled: and then being commanded to draw a Sword, not knowing to what end, was forced by others, who ordered her hand, to give her Husband a deadly wound, whereof he died; the Souldiers not being content to defile her Body, but alſo to make her to defile her hands with the ſlaughter of her Husband.

Pag. 628. Anno 1564. Thuanus in his 36. Book, maketh a large declaration of a horrible conſpiracy of ſome in France with King Philip, for the taking and deſtruction of the Queen of Navarré, her Son Henry, and Katherine her Daughter, which was by Gods providence ſtrangely diſcovered and defeated, but the Conſpirators not puniſhed.

Pag. 638. In Turone the Proteſtants being aſſembled to hear a Sermon, ſome were beaten, and ſome ſlain; the preacher in the Pulpit thruſt thorow and ſlain.

Ibidem. Philibert Cureus, a noble and vertuous man, and an earneſt Proteſtant, was by Conſpiracy of adverſaries ſlain, as he was hunting and going to his Brother.

An Auguſtinian Frier called Pulvarelius, coming to the Town Fuxium, and falſly lying, in ſaying that the Proteſtants, whom he called Hugonites, had killed all the Catholicks in Apamea, cauſed 35. Lib. 44. Pag. 271. Anno 1598. At Samarobridge in Picardy, in the time of Peace, above an hundred Proteſtants were murthered: and at Autiſſiodore, which the Proteſtants having held in the laſt War, had now yielded up, 150. were cruelly killed, and their dead Bodies were drawn, and caſt partly into Jakes, and partly into the River.

Pah. 272. Anno 1568. Cipierius, the Count of Tendas his Son, as he was returning from the Duke of Savoy his Kinſman, was with his retinue, to the number of 35. cruelly murthered at Forum Julii.

Pag. 273. Within the ſpace of three months, in time of Peace were about 10000. murthered.

Pag. 309. Bordius a Captain under the Prince of Conde at Mirabellum, was coutrary to promiſe cruelly killed, and his naked Body caſt into the ſtreet, that being unburied the Dogs might eat it.

The Prince of Conde being taken Priſoner, and his life promiſed him, was ſhot in the Neck by Montiſquius, Captain of the Duke of Anjous Guard of whom Thuanus writeth thus; Hic exitus fuit Ludovici Borbonii Condæi regiæ ſtirpis viri ſupra natalium ſplendorem magnitudine animi ac virtute illuſtriſſimi; qui fortitudine, conſtantia, ingenio, ſolertia, rerum uſu, comitate, facundia, liberalitate, quæ omnes ſimul virtutes in illo uno excellebant, paucos æquales, neminem ſua ætate, vel inimicorum confeſſione, ſuperiorem habuit: That is, This was the end of Lewis Bourbon Prince of Conde, of the Kings Blood, a man above the honour of his birth moſt honourable in courage and vertue; who in valiancy, conſtancy, wit, wiſdom, experience, courteſie, eloquence, and liberality, all which vertues excelled in him, had few his equals, and none, even by the confeſſion of his Enemies, ſuperior to him. Hitherto out of the hiſtory of Jacobus Auguſtus Thuanus (who is reported to be a Catholick) which endeth in the year 1578. wherein I have for ſhortneſs ſake omitted ſundry particular outrages and murthers committed by that bloody Babylonical Generation; from whoſe boody hands God in mercy defend and preſerve us.

Hereunto I will only ad the murthering of Henry the third, and Henry the fourth, late French Kings, by Papiſts: the former murthered by Clement a Monk; the other by Francis Ravilliac a Franciſcan Frier: and to make up the full meaſure of impiety and cruelty, the Barbarous and monſtrous Powder Plot ſhall follow; whereby it was intended and purpoſed to have blown up the Parliament houſe, when our gracious King James, Prince Henry, all the Nobility, Biſhops, Knights and Burgeſſes ſhould be aſſembled therein. To the effecting of which deviliſh device, about thirty four Barrels of Gunpowder were laid under the ſaid Parliament houſe, and there found. This bloody conſpiracy was practiſed by preciſe Papiſts, whoſe Conſciences would not permit them to come to our Churches; but did eaſily ſuffer and allow them to attempt this ſavage and horrible practice: Viz. Francis Treſham, two Winters, Sir Everard Digby, Percy, &c. Hereunto alſo three Jeſuits (or rather Jebuſites) Heny Garnet (who ſuffered death for it) Oſwald Teſmond, and John Gerrard were privy and conſenting. Teſmond encouraged Bates unto it, abſolved him; and miniſtred the Sacrament to him. Gerrard miniſtred the Oath of ſecrecy to Catesby, Percy, John Wright, Thomas Winter, and Fawkes; abſolved them, and miniſtred the Sacrament unto them, as it is more largely declared in the Book intituled, The Relation of the proceedings againſt the barbarous Traitors, Garnet a Jeſuit, and his confederates, Pag. 50. & 62. & 133. This bloody device ſhould have been executed the fifth of November, 1605. but was by Gods great mercy diſcovered and defeated, to the juſt deſtruction of thoſe deteſtable Traitors, who fell into the Pit that they digged for others, and to the eternal ſhame and confuſion of that bloody Babylon of Rome, and her favourers and followers.

John 8. 44.

Ye are of your Father the Devil, and the luſts of your Father ye will do: he hath been a murtherer from the beginning, and abode not in the Truth, becauſe there is no Truth in him. When he ſpeaketh a lye, then ſpeaketh he of his own; for he is a lyar, and the Father thereof.

A TREATISE OF AFFLICTIONS and PERSECUTIONS of the FAITHFUL, preparing them with Patience to ſuffer Martyrdom.

CHAP. I.

Shewing, That ſuch as will live godly in Chriſt Jeſus, muſt needs ſuffer Afflictions.

WE are all prone by Nature to decline Afflictions, each one ſuppoſing to find out ſome back way to eſcape them. Firſt, Some are of opinion, that they can ſhift themſelves by playing the Temporizers: Secondly, Others, by hiding and concealing themſelves: Thirdly, Another ſort, by flying from thoſe places where Tyrants vex and domineer: Fourthly, A fourth, thinking to bear off blows by their greatneſs and credit they have gotten in the World: Fifthly and laſtly, A fifth ſort imagining to find ſome evaſion, either by reaſon of their Allies, or good Services which they have done; dreaming forſooth, that either theſe or the like projects ſhould yield them good reſpect, and preſerve them from being called into queſtion by thoſe that hate them. In a word, which of us hath not ſome fetch or other to break looſe, if he ſhould be either examined or purſued?

This is the true cauſe that ſo few are prepared, and careful timely to foreſee what belongs to ſuffering ſhame and diſgrace for the truth, as the diſcommodities of long impriſonment, or what appertains to the conſtant and patient bearing of hideous torments and death for the Cauſe of the Goſpel. But alas, all theſe are but as fig-leaves, and vain hopes, which being ſomewhat pleaſing to the fleſh do only dull and deceive us; cauſing us to grow ſecure and careleſs, and ſo unprovided to ſuffer till we be ſurpriſed, and in ſafe cuſtody in our enemies hands. So that 1 Pet. 3.15. when we ſhould be able to give a reaſon of the hope that is in us, we have not a word to ſay.

To prevent theſe ſo great inconveniences, let us hold this for a ſure Principle, That it is impoſſible to live godly, and not ſuffer perſecution. For God hath ſo decreed, 2 Tim. 3.12. Rom. 8.20. That if we will partake of the glory of his Son, we muſt firſt be conformed to him in his Sufferings. Yea, this is Matth. 7.14. that ſtrait gate and narrow way which leadeth unto life. Through much tribulation we muſt enter into the Kingdom of God, Acts 14. 22. and whoſoever bears not the Luke 14.27. Hebr. 12.7. Croſs of Chriſt, following him, cannot be his Diſciple. The Apoſtle in the Epiſtle to the Hebrews plainly tells us, That if we be Children, we muſt taſte of that Diſcipline which God nurtures his withal in his Family. It is and Matth. 10.16. muſt be the portion of Gods beloved ones, to live in this World as ſheep amongſt Wolves.

Indeed, if we could live without ſin, we might then conceive ſome hope of freedom from the Croſs. But whilſt corrupt Nature lives in us, and brings forth ſuch bitter fruits, God hath, and will in all Ages raiſe up ſome Tyrant or other, as means to mortifie and tame the pride and rebellion thereof. Devils may as ſoon ceaſe to be, as that enmity ſhould ceaſe between the Seed of the Woman and the Seed of the Serpent. As long as the Church Gen. 3.15. Matth. 8.24. continues to be Chriſts poor Barque in the Salt Sea of this World, ſhe muſt make her account to be toſſed with ſtorms and tempeſts of Perſecutions.

What ſhould I ſay, no Crown is to be expected in Heaven, if we will not fight the good fight of faith here on 2 Tim. 4. 7. Pſal. 126. 5. earth; nor to reap in joy, if in this world we refuſe to ſow in tears: The life of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt cannot 2 Cor. 4. 10. be manifeſt in us, except we bear about in our body the dying of the Lord Jeſus.

Let every Chriſtian then hold this for certain, That when the World ceaſeth to hate the Children of God, and the Devil to envy them, then may they look, and not before, to live in the World without Perſecutions.

Hath not the Way, the Life, and the Truth ſaid it? John 16. 33. In the World you ſhall have tribulation. And therefore let not the great ones of the World think to be exempted out of this rank, more than the ſmall: For to the Saints and Members of the true Church afflictions are even as ordinary, as is Baptiſm, Faith, and the Spirit of Adoption.

Was not Moſes the adopted Son of Pharoahs Daughter, Exod. 2. 15. Acts 7. 29. fain to fly out of Egypt to ſave his life? Was not David, Hebr. 11. 27. though anointed King, hunted by Saul his purſuer, as a 1 Sam. 26. Partridge into the Mountains? Iſaiah and Daniel were of 20. S. Jerome in his Commentary upon Iſaiah. Dan. 6. 16. the blood Royal, yet they eſcaped not; the one, from being cruelly rent in ſunder with a ſaw, after he had preached to his Nation ſixty years; nor the other (although next unto the King he ſwayed the affairs of the Babyloniſh Empire) to be caſt into the Lyons Den.

In the times of the great Perſecutions under Dioclefian the Emperour of Rome, who were the firſt that were ſacrificed, but Nicomede, and the principal Favourites of the Court? Who is ignorant that two of the moſt noble Princes of our times that ever Germany had, notwithſtanding their munition and means, were taken Priſoners by the Emperour, or held captive five or ſix years in great diſtreſs? What ſhould I here mention Lady Jane Gray proclaimed Queen of England, and yet cruelly put to death? Or Thomas Cranmer Primate of England, burned to aſhes at Oxford? Or the Lord Cobham that religious and valiant Knight, hanged, and burned hanging in S. Giles's in the Fields? All theſe, with many more, were apprehended, and not long after put to death, even then when they might ſeem moſt to have flouriſhed in the World.

Seeing then that neither Age, Sex, Power nor Place can ſecure us from ſufferings, which are every where foretold in the holy Scriptures to abide us, whether we be high or low; let us in the name and fear of God prepare to take up Acts 20.23.

the Cross of Christ betimes; learn we of the silly Ant in Prov. 6. 6. Summer, to store up food against the cold and stormy Winter of Affliction: Imitating those, who dwelling in the defenced Cities, are careful to provide themselves of munition before they be besieged.

CHAP. II.

Shewing, How the Faithful ought to bear Persecutions patiently.

FOr*asmuch as Afflictions are thus necessary and inevitable to Believers, that whether they will or no, they must pass this strait way: they ought to bethink them how to make hard things easie. And herein to follow the dealing of the Physician with his Patient, who, intending to give him some bitter Potion or Pill, is wont to sweeten the one with Syrrup, and to wrap up the other in Gold, lest he should abhor to take in, or swallow down, either the one or the other. Even so are we, by committing to memory some elect and choice Sentences of Holy Scriptures concerning the Cross, to cover over the same therewith, that it may not appear so dreadful unto us, as we apprehend it to be. For that which causeth us to fly and fear Persecution, is a prejudicate opinion we have conceived in our minds, that some deadly Poison lurks under it. And therefore we shun so much as to taste a little sup thereof, in regard we imagine it to be the only bitter drug in the World.*

Now, that which makes us fall into, and breeds in us this Error, is because (as therein so almost in all things else) we are led rather by sense, than by the word, by which we ought to ballance and regulate all our perswasions and resolutions. For could we believe what the Prophets and Apostles (inspired of God) have preached and written for the use of Posterity, as touching Persecutions, we would not only have them in a more honourable esteem, but thankfully and patiently bear them.

To which end, let us endeavour firmly to imprint in our minds these and the like Sentences. S. Paul tells us, That if we be reproached for the Name of Christ, we may think our selves happy; for the Spirit of Glory and 1 Pet. 4. 14. of God (saith he) resteth upon you. And S. Paul speaking of himself and his Associates, saith thus, And not
Rom. 5. 3. only so, but we glory in tribulation also, knowing that tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, &c.
Gal. 6. 14. And in another place, God forbid that I should glory save in the Cross of our Lord Jesus Christ. These places, with sundry others to the same purpose, do sufficiently manifest how much the true Christian ought to think himself honoured of God, when it pleaseth him to call such an one forth to suffer for his name in the defence of his Truth.

What other thing else, I pray you, was the cause of S.
2 Tim. 4. 7, 8. Pauls glorying, and that glory in an higher degree, which Christ hath ordained for us by his death; with which glory

Is it not in regard of their invincible patience and constancy of faith, by which they overcame the world and their own flesh, which is not to be esteemed a small or mean victory?*

If Alexander obtained so great renown by conquering Darius; and Scipio for discomfiting Hannibal, &c. *who slew but a few mortal men like themselves; how much are we, in comparison of them, to admire their valour, who have not only warred against men, but against their threats, gibbets, fires, yea against death it self, and in the end triumphed over it? Tertullian tells us, That there is no better Order of Knighthood, nor Chains of greater price, than those to which the Martyrs of Jesus Christ are fastened, nor richer Bracelets than the Manacles wherewith their hands are bound. In the Ecclesiastical Historie it is reported of a good Bishop, who by the Emperor Decius being cast into a filthy stinking Prison or Hole for the Name of Christ, with as many Irons as he could bear, intreated his Friends (who sometime came to visit him) That after his death they would bury with him the signs and tokens of his Valour; meaning his Bolts and fetters which were put upon his legs and hands; teaching us, That when we see it is the will of God to impose them upon us, and thereby to dub us Knights of his Order, we should esteem our selves no less honoured, than if a King, by way of gratifying a valiant Champion for some great Services done for him, should reward the same with some of his own precious Jewels, and then no less to brave it out in these our Ornaments, than a woman when she sees her self decked with all costly array from top to toe. In his Epistle to the Martyrs of his time. It was Babylas Bishop of Antioch in the year 250. Ex Chrys. li. contra Gentiles.

If that which Cicero writes be true, That no vertue gives to man greater lustre than Magnanimity: we may thence safely conclude, That none ought in this kind to be preferred before a Christian Martyr; who neither loves, desires, or admires ought, save that which is honest and praise-worthy, nor gathers any riches to himself but what he knows to be lasting, and hopes to possess for ever in the Kingdom of Heaven: and therefore sleighting either mens favours or displeasures, as those that are High-born contemn the one, when they seem to smile, and are not much daunted with the frowns of the other, knowing right-well that all things under the Sun are but vanity, and subject to change with their Ages and Seasons. In his Book of Offices.

We read in the Ecclesiastical Story of one Phanutius Bishop of Thebaides, who under the tyranny of Maximinus, having one of his eyes put out, never presented himself before Constantine the Great, but that good Emperor embracing of him would kiss that eye, which being lost, we know how unseemly it causeth that part to be. But thus the Emperor would shew, That nothing ought to be in higher esteem with us, than the Cross of Christ, and the marks thereof when we bear or wear them on any part of our Bodies.

If the good and holy life of a Christian be so much set by of us, then must the death of such a one be much more glorious, when for the Name of Christ, he takes the same joyfully. Who could be more dear in the eye of God the Matth. 3. 17. Father, than his Son Jesus Christ? Yet gave he him to suffer death for our sins, and by suffering the same, according to the will and appointment of his heavenly Father, hath he not obtained a name which is above every name, That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, &c?

If Gods glory ought to be preferred before all things, yea, our own salvation; and that Christ by dying to save us, hath obtained the greatest glory that ever was; what may we judge of that death we endure for his Honour, his Word, and for the maintenance of his pure Worship and Service?

Abraham never performed a more honourable act, than in offering up his Son Isaac at Gods command, nor for which he is more praised. I demand then, that seeing our own life is more dear and precious to us than the life of another, whether the Martyrs, who according to the will of God, and for his honour, have been so prodigal of their blood, have not deserved greater, or at least an equal praise and commendation with Abraham?

The Bishops of old had such an honourable esteem of Martyrdom, that they preferred it before their Episcopal Dignities; so as both themselves, and their Disciples and Followers whom they had taught, were so ambitious thereof, that when they wanted opportunity to suffer, being excluded therefrom by the interceding of Friends, or were not the first that suffered, they took it so to heart, that some of them carried the grief thereof to their Graves.

Think, I pray you, what a shame it were for a Gentleman, who, being called by his Prince to fight in his wars, should busie himself only about combing, curling, and perfuming his hair, tooting all day long in a Looking-glass, to deck and attire himself: and then judge by that, what valiant Souldiers we are, and what a goodly reputation tation we shall reap either at the hands of God, or of good men, if in our spiritual warfare, wherein we are to be imployed during our whole life, whilst the alarm is struck-en up, and every one mounted to give the onset in the face of the enemy, we in the mean-time will play least in sight, hiding our selves behind every bush, as Scholars that are loth to go to School for fear of the Rod.

Good God! That men of noble spirits should so much affect the renown of being valiant, fearing nothing more than to be reputed for base Fellows and Cowards; yea some are so jealous thereof, that they cannot endure to hear so much as a suspicion of flying, and yet all this their valour tends only to covet a fame which consists in skill how to kill and destroy mens lives.

Now we being Kings then and the adopted Children of God, if either greatness of our Courage, or nobleness of our House or Birth whence we are descended, may prevail any thing with us: then who, I pray you, ought to shew forth more valour than the faithful, or more dread the staining of their honour by playing the Dastards? This being yet one Argument more to put Spirits in them; namely, that their prowess tends not to kill and slay mens bodies, as that of worldlings doth, but to save, heal, support and succour, as the Arm and Power of God, which is far more honourable than the other.

CHAP. III.

Manifesting the great profit and benefit which the Faithful reap by Persecution.

HAving shewen in the former Chapter that a more honourable Condition cannot befall a Christian than to suffer Affliction for the Name of Christ; we are here to shew how nothing is more beneficial and profitable, which will the better appear if we reckon up some few particulars thereof. To begin with the first then. In affliction God manifests his readiness to comfort us, and his power in sustaining and upholding us, that we sink not under the weight of them. Examples whereof we have in Joseph and David, and sundry others; who, by the afflictions they suffered for righteousness sake, were prepared (in that which God had appointed) the one to be Governour over the Land of Egypt, the other over the Kingdom of Israel. For as in the time of war, a Simi- Captain or a General of an Army, takes occasion there to let his Souldiers see his fidelity, vigilancy, fortitude and skill he hath in leading them out and in; and as a Physician among the sick and diseased, is occasioned to exercise the profundity of his Art and Experience he hath atchieved; Or as Friends, when we are in distress, do give us to understand what love they bear towards us, and how mindful they are of us; Even so, or much more, doth God declare how greatly he loveth us, and how faithful he is in performing his promises, in the time of our distresses, which is no mean benefit.

For the Experience which we get from his bounty, love, power, and care of our welfare, causeth us with greater confidence to stay and rest our selves wholly upon him; and the trial also of his fidelity doth more and more confirm us in waiting for the performance of his promises, which consequently occasions him to accomplish the same in us.

Again, had we no other good for which we ought to rejoyce in afflictions, and accustom our selves to bear them both patiently and thankfully, but this, that they serve to set forth Gods glory, which after a sort shines in us, while during our troubles he upholds us in them, and in due time delivers us out of them; what can we desire more? For his glory ought to be so dear unto us, that if our damnation it self might be a means to advance it, we should not refuse to undergo it, but freely and willingly offer our selves to be cast into Hell. Subjects and Servants joy in nothing more than in seeing their Lords and Masters highly honoured, as on the contrary nothing vexeth them more, than when they see them disesteemed, or ought to be breached tending to the impeaching or obscuring their estimation or honour. Shall we then, who are not only Subjects and Servants, but have obtained the Prerogative to be accounted Sons and Friends in our Fathers House and Family, shall not we, I say, rejoyce? The second fruit which we reap from afflictions, is, that hereby God multiplies his gifts and graces upon us, as it is written, My grace is sufficient for thee: for my power 2 Cor. 12.9. is made perfect in weakness, 2 Cor. 12. 9. Humility, Faith, Patience, Prudence, and Repentance, are augmented and increased in us by suffering persecutions. For look as bodily exercise is an help to increase health, strength, and heat in the outward man; and catechising or posing of children (to which we often call them) is the way whereby they grow in knowledge; even so the several trials and troubles, through which God exerciseth, and makes proof of our faith, cause it to go from a less measure and degree thereof unto a greater.

A Captain, who hath once or twice besieged a City or Castle, becomes much more expert, hardy, and wary than a fresh-water Souldier; so also is the prudence, counsel, courage, fortitude, and zeal much greater, and resolution stronger, in such as have often passed through the pikes of tribulations, than theirs who never knew what such trials meant. Yet I affirm not that Persecutions have always this effect in all, who have but once burnt their fingers in this fire of afflictions; as if they should not cause them sometimes to grow cold, and forsake their Standing: for as concerning such, their faith was never truly grounded in them, they have only had the outside and shadow of Faith. Even as the Seed sowed upon the stones easily drieth away for lack of good moisture, and rooting, by the excessive heating of the Sun; so this formal Professor, with his painted shews of Religion, and outward appearance of Faith, when the heat of Persecution approacheth, vanisheth away and comes to nothing.

But where Faith is lively rooted in the heart of the Believer, and always watered by the Holy Ghost, although through storms and tempests it may come to be shaken, yet do the roots therefore grow more strong and setled; as the Root of a Tree planted in a high place, which hath the winds still beating upon it, is fortified, and grows daily by the sap, which the other wants that is seated in a low and shady place. In a word, Persecution may be compared to fire, which hardens the clay, and melts the wax, and consumes the stubble: so it works divers effects, according as it meets with sundry subjects; for either it adds courage to one strong in Faith, or else softens such as are yet weak, or in the end ruins such as are Backsliders and Apostata's. So did the red Sea save Exod. 14.22, the people of God, who believed in him and his promises, 28. and drowned Pharaoh and his Host (being Infidels) in the bottom thereof as a stone.

Now whereas I said, That Persecutions do cause unto us the multiplying of Gods spiritual gifts and graces, my meaning is not only concerning the spiritual, but even of temporal good things also: for howsoever the latter of these happens not so usual to the faithful as the first, because the Lord according to his wise dispensation (knowing mans Nature to be altogether corrupted) would not occasion such, by enriching them, to forget him, and fixing their minds on things earthly, to make them their Treasure; yet it oft comes to pass, that the Faithful have been greatly enriched even by Persecutions.

Among others, Abraham prospered more in power and Gen. 13. 2, 6. worldly substance amongst heathens and strangers, than ever he had like to have done in his own Country. Also Joseph, in his Fathers house but a silly Sepheard, being Gen. 27.21. & 41.45. banished thence by the hatred and persecutions of his Brethren, became the Governour of a whole Kingdom, Gen. 42. 6. Did not Daniel also obtain such honours and dig- Dan. 2. 48. nities in Babylon among Idolaters, as he could never have & 5. 29. expected to be raised to the like in Judæa? But to say no more of ancient examples, I could alledge many the like, and that of late years. But these formerly mentioned may suffice; but only this I think, that of all such as have been persecuted for the Truths sake, there is not one (if he would speak uprightly) but must acknowledge, that he was never unprovided for in his afflictions, nor left altogether without necessaries; God thereby teaching him by experience, what care he had over him.

Let not Persecution therefore too much daunt us, lest we or our Posterity should by means thereof fall into Poverty. For as we read in the History of Job, after the Sabeans and Chaldeans had stripped him of all that ever he had, yet God in the end restored to him more than he had lost. Say then that our Goods be confiscated by Tyrants, let us not fear we shall be utterly impoverished thereby; for it is the course which God takes in providing as of food and raiment, by way of rendring us a reward when we have lost our livelyhood in his service.

Simile. Kings are usually wont to recompence such as have ventured the loss of their Lives and Livings in their quarrel. And do we not see many Italians banished out of Naples, and other parts, who have obtained great Pensions in France? Shall we think then, that God hath less love or respect of his, who shew themselves forward to defend his Kingdom and Honour? We may therefore assure our selves, that if we walk with a right foot in the way of Gods Commandments, it is in a manner impossible for us to escape Persecution; but yet on the other side, we ought much more to believe, that his blessings shall never cease to accompany us, and to restore unto us an hundred fold back again that which Tyrants either can or would snatch away from us, be it food or rayment.

Afflictions serve in the Church, as rods hanged up here and there in Schools. The third fruit which we may reap out of our Afflictions, is, That God useth them as his Fatherly rods to correct the offences which we his Children have and daily do commit against him: So as they are no less needful for a Church than rods in a School, or household Discipline in a well governed Family. For we cannot long persist in the right way without them, our Nature being so corrupt as it is; we should grow to be disordered, if we were not held in by Persecutions and Afflictions. What should become of a Commonwealth, if every one were left to do as him listed? So if God should forbear to correct his Children, the City of God would in time come to be a Sodom, and the Sheepfold of Christ an Hogstie or a Colledge of Devils.

Simile. A loving Father, that puts forth a Son to be a Scholar, intreats his Master now and then to correct him: And if through indulgency he neglects to do it, the Father will complain of him that he marrs his Child. Would we be Scholars in Christs School, and not suffer him to do that to us, which we would a Schoolmaster should do to our Children? So indeed, if we shall refuse to bear the yoke in your youth, we may worthily be condemned with the world when we are old. It is good for a man, saith Lam. 3. 27. the holy Prophet, That he bear the yoke in his youth; for such is the untamedness of our simple Nature, that if it be not betimes curbed, and continually kept short, it will hardly be reclaimed or brought within compass. But if God once take the rod into his hands, we begin then to have some fear of offending him; and if we do, we are ready to confess it. The rod wakens the dead and drowsie Conscience: It makes us mourn and weep, as also to accuse and condemn our selves for our ingratitude towards so good and gracious a Father; we begin to toss and roul our selves this way and that way to find ease, waiting from whence it will spring forth unto us.

In this perturbation and anxiety of Conscience the holy Spirit of God, seeing us cast down and humbled, sets before our eyes Gods mercy in Christ: Whose blood applyed by faith, purgeth and heals the wound which is made therein. This done, he will carry such an hand over us, as shall withhold us from vice, and draw us on to the love of vertue. And thus we see how the Lord doth by little and little correct our sinful disposition, by exercising us with manifold Afflictions; whereby the whilst he provides for his own glory. Let us therewith consider his admirable bounty, seeing thus he covers our shame: for whereas he might justly cause us to suffer for our sins which we have committed against his Majesty, he instead thereof turns it to suffering for his Truth and holy Names sake; putting this honourable Title as a veil over us, to shadow our nakedness.

For first he alters the nature of the punishment, which is due unto us for our misdeeds, into an assured hope of recompencing all our labour and travel we undergo for righteous causes. And in the second place, he turns the dishonour which we ought to receive, as a token of the vengeance which he might to our ignominy execute upon us, into an immortal Trophee of Honour, wherewith we are crowned in the presence of God and of his Angels. Thirdly, hereby he graciously provides for the peace of our Consciences, which, instead of sorrow and grief wherewith they might be wounded for guilt of sin, on the contrary do sensibly rejoyce and glory in these sufferings for the Name of Christ. And fourthly, in the midst of all these joyes, and most singular consolations, yet the Conscience (for all that) ceaseth not to retain a scruple or dram of Rubarb mingled herewith, to purge out now and then some corrupt humours, and by Persecutions to put us in mind of our sins committed against the Lord in times past.

But yet he so tempers and moderates these his Drugs, and that in so exquisite and artificial a manner, that while he humbleth us with his left hand, he supporteth us with his right hand; if he causeth grief, by and by he comforts us; in smiting he heals us; in which mixture and tempering of things, so much differing in nature and quality, consists the salvation of our souls: Even as the skilful and expert Physician, by measuring out an equal and just proportion of contrary Drugs, meeting with our corrupt humours, provides for the safety of our Bodies.

Simile. We see that an hot or dry Summer, or a fair Spring time, brings many Diseases therewith; and how fast Weeds sprout forth among the good Herbs; besides filling our Houses with flies, fleas, and like annoyances; the air and streets with unsavory and infectious smells: all which in Winter, in cold and frosty weather, do take their leave, and are gone: So whilst outward joy and prosperity, with other contentments last, the Body of the Church is pestered with sundry and divers spiritual bad humours and dangerous diseases; which on the contrary it is preserved and freed from by the variety of Gods fatherly rods and chastisements.

(4) Now to proceed to the fourth benefit of Afflictions, which is to kill the pride of our rebellious Nature: The Hebrews use these two words, to afflict and humble, for one and the same thing; as if the later were the fruit of the former. Nor do we want examples which may sufficiently admonish us, that as worldly prosperity usually causeth our hearts to swell, and to be puffed up; so on the contrary, adversities and afflictions dejects and humble us. Whilst Nebuchadnezzar abounded in all his delights, his Dan. 4. 30. Dan. 3. 15. heart was swoln so far with pride, that he began not only to oppress his Subjects, but to justle even against God himself by his Blasphemies. But when God had once cast him into the Furnace of Affliction, he then became as meek and humble a person as was in all his Kingdom.

Manasses reigning in peace and liberty over the people Dan. 4. 37. 2 Chron. 33. from verf. 1. to verf. 24. of Judah, grew so insolent, that there was no impiety or injustice wherein he overflowed not; but being surprised by his enemies, and laid in iron bands and fetters, he was changed in an instant, and became as low in his own esteem as ever he thought himself high: which appeareth in his Prayer made to God in his Affliction, wherein he prostrates himself before him, confessing his offences with great compunction of heart and humility.

Acts 9. from verf. 1. to verf. 24. S. Paul bare himself like a fierce and cruel Lion all the while he enjoyed favour from the High Priests, raging hither and thither, breaking forcibly into houses, and apprehending such as he found to be Professors of the Gospel; but the same man, being touched by Gods hand in the way as he was journying towards Damascus (intending there to exercise his Commission upon the Saints and Servants of Christ) suddenly became also as meek as a Lamb, and was ready to proffer his service in whatsoever the Lord would enjoyn him to do.

Eusebius, in his Prologue to the eighth Book of his Ecclesiastical History, relates, how God seeing the pride which began to bud and spring forth in the Church, and principally among the Pastors thereof (who out of their ambition strove about Dignities and Preferments therein) was moved for that very thing to raise up that great Persecution which befell the Church under the reign of Diocletian and Maximian, to crack their pride, and to provoke voke them to prayer, yea rather to watch over their flocks, than to contend who should be the greatest.

Wherein we may see, that by the blessing of God there is a kind of vertue in afflictions, to humble and bring those home who through prosperity have forgotten themselves, and strayed out of the right way. Nay, so forcible are they to abate and take down the pride of such who otherwise are hardened and grown obstinate, that even Pharaoh, as rebellious and stiff-necked as he was, seemed sometimes to bend and bow under the mighty hand of God. Whilst God gave him some respite, it is true, he still hardened his heart; but when the next judgment fell upon him and his people, he by and by became as pliable as a glove for ones hand.

Exod. 8. & 9.27. & 10.16.

Seeing then all of us naturally are thus inclined to wax proud by prosperity, a vice which God sets and opposeth himself against above other, as most abominable in his sight, we ought not methinks so much to be terrified at the approach of Persecutions, foras much as they withhold from, and correct in us the same our pride, sooner than all the instructions which are taught us by word of mouth.

The next benefit Afflictions bring us, is to quicken us up to the prayer of faith, which is never better discerned than when Afflictions lye heaviest upon us. In my distress (saith David) I cried unto the Lord. For as our desires to obtain mercy grow stronger, so are our requests more or less fervent; our desire alway being according to our necessity. Let a man be sick, poor, or lye under any other greater trial, the prayers of such do beyond comparison exceed in earnestness and fervour theirs, who are well and at their hearts ease. David in many of his Psalms pressed the Lord in such wise by prayer, when troubles lay heavy upon him, as if he meant to take no denial.

Psal. 17.1,2. & 28.1,2.

With what vehemency prayed the Apostles to God for strength, being persecuted by the Rulers, Elders, and Scribes of Jerusalem, insomuch as the place was shaken where they were assembled? He that shall duly weigh with what prayers and tears our Lord Jesus Christ solicited his Father in his passion, being nigh unto his death, will confess that fire is not more apt to be kindled by the winds which blow upon it, than the prayer of Faith is fired and augmented by Affliction. Would any man have imagined that ever such voices of prayers and praises should have been made in the belly of a Whale, as Jonas made, being there as it were in the bottom of Hell?

CHAP. IV.

Wherein is shewed that Afflictions are not only profitable, but pleasant also.

I Grant that Afflictions considered in themselves are no way joyous but grievous, as the Apostle declareth, Heb. 12. 11. because they are rather Messengers of Gods displeasure; the root also from whence they spring being indeed our sins. But as we see how our Apothecaries in their Shops have the skill to mix poisons with good and healthful Medicines: So our God, being infinitely more wise, knows so to temper our afflictions for our good, that out of things, bitter and distastful to us in their own nature, he can compose not only a profitable, but a most pleasant potion.

Yea, even as Bees out of the bitterest Herbs draw the most sweet honey, so the Lord out of the tartest troubles extracts such sweets, that at length we shall with Samson be forced to say, Out of the Eater came forth meat, and out of the Strong came forth sweetness. Hunger in it self is sharp, and hard to be endured; yet our taste is greatly delighted, when we can eat with an appetite. Could any man judge how beneficial a fire were, if he were not some times pinched with cold? Or with what delight could we accept of drink in the heat of Summer, if we were not almost dried up with thirst? Or how acceptable rest is, if we were not tired out with travel and labour? As we see then, that these accidents (how grievous or incommodious soever, now incident unto our nature corrupted by sin) do notwithstanding dispose us to receive exceeding contentments therefrom: So Persecutions, albeit in and of themselves naturally abhorred, proceeding partly (as we have said) from Gods displeasure, and partly from Satan and his Instruments; yet do they fit and prepare us for the injoying of those great Consolations which God hath promised to his Elect. Afflictions cause us to feel, first, That God is the Father of Mercies, and of all Comfort: Secondly, That the Office of Christ his Son is, to revive the desolate and broken in heart; Thirdly, That the Holy Ghost is the Comforter of his Church: Fourthly, That the Word of God is it that ministers comfort to us in all our tribulations and adversities which for the most part befall us for adhering thereto.

Judg. 14.14.

2 Cor. 1.1. Mat 11.28. John 14.16. Rom. 15.4.

For as he who would taste meat savoury to his palate, useth salt therewith; so if we would (to purpose) find the Word of God tasteful to us, commonly it is when we are in affliction. When did the Apostles rejoyce more, than after they had tasted of the whip for the Name of Christ? When did S. Stephens face appear as if it had been the face of an Angel, but when he stood before the Councel at Jerusalem to answer for his life? He that looked upon the three young men in the hot fiery furnace, saw them walking up and down there, as in some pleasant and delightful Medow or Garden. Behold that ancient Father Ignatius, who (as himself records) being led from Syria to Rome, there to be devoured, accompanied by Sea and Land with a Band of Souldiers (which he tearms ten Leopards) wished by the way as he went) that he were in the midst of those Beasts which were ready to rent him in pieces, and that their appetites might be whetted to dispatch him quickly; fearing lest it should happen to him as to some other Martyrs, that the Beasts out of a kind of reverence and humanity would not dare to approach unto him; being ready, he said, rather to provoke them to the fight, than that they should suffer him so to escape: Pardon me, I pray you, saith he, for I know what is profitable for me: I now begin to be a Disciple of Christ, I affect nothing this world affords: What is so dear to me as Christ? If it be not sufficient for me to be torn with Beasts, let Fires and all the Tortures of Men and Devils be prepared for me; let all my Body be dismembred, my Bones bruised to pieces, so that I may enjoy communion with my God, and come into the presence of my Saviour. And when he heard the Lions roaring, he said, I am the Lords wheat, I must be ground with the teeth of wild Beasts, that I may be found pure bread.

Acts 5. 4. Acts 6. 15. Dan. 3.25.

Simile.

May we not now conjecture by the wishes of this holy Bishop, what sweet delight he found in himself in approaching nigh unto his Martyrdom? As a Queen then, or great Lady takes no greater content than when she perceives in her Husband some apparent signs of his favour, especially then when she hath conceived some suspicion of alienating his affection from her, or it seems to be any way cooled or abated: So the faithful soul, who loves the Lord entirely, desires nothing more, nor taketh at any time more delight, than when she feels from her Husband Christ, love for love, but chiefly in the hour of temptation and tribulation, which oft times causeth our heads and hearts to be possessed with jealousies and suspitions that we are out of his favour. Let us conclude then, that seeing (in regard of the reasons heretofore alledged) Persecutions are so honourable, every way profitable and delectable to the true Christian; What cause hath he either to be grieved or terrified when they befall him? Nay, he ought with the Apostles and Martyrs to triumph and rejoyce.

To which purpose may fitly be applyed that saying of Themistocles to his Children, when he saw the great honours that the King of Persia had conferred upon him by their Exile, finding kinder entertainment among Strangers than in their own Country; We had perished, said he, if we had not perished. So may we say, That did not our natural life perish here by Persecutions, we had never been saved in the Kingdom of Heaven.

Run we then (my Brethren) with patience the race that is set before us; let us not be ashamed, with Simon the Cyrenian, to carry the reproachful Cross of Christ; and seeing we must dye once, let us desire rather to dye gloriously for righteousnes sake, than ignominiously by shunning it. If Princes had rather dye in a breach than in their bed; and to lose their life in the field, than an eye

eye at Tilt or Tourney; let us imitate them in this our ſpiritual Conflict, earneſtly intreating the Lord, if it be his bleſſed will, that we may fight and dye valiantly in the defence of his Truth, and for the honour of his Son If worldly minded men can and will ſuffer many hard adventures, ſome for their honour, others for their profits and pleaſures, though but vain and temporary; with what longing ſhould we aſpire to that certain and eternal happineſs, reſt, and glory, wherewith all thoſe ſhall be crowned who fight manfully and conſtantly for the cauſe of Chriſt?

But the world and worldlings ſmile at this wiſdom, counting it fooliſhneſs; the fleſh alſo joyning therewith, thinks all we have ſaid to be either idle phantaſies, or meer paradoxes; and no marvel, for both of them being from the earth, can ſavour nothing but what is earthly, as Chriſt ſaith. Between the judgment of the Church, and that of the World, there is a broad difference, when the queſtion is of determining what is true honour, profit, or pleaſure; whence it is that in a manner the one ſcorns that which the other admires and adores. So as they never conſent in approving or condemning with one voice that which is queſtioned; for the belly hath no ears. If therefore we mean to be ruled aright either in the matter of faith or outward manners, let us not be guided therein either by the worlds judgment, or yet that of the fleſh; for the world is poreblind, and the belly, as we have ſaid, hath no ears.

Ponder we then theſe things, that ſo we may be prepared to obey the will of God: let us not wilfully ruſh into danger; only if God ſhall call us forth to ſuffer, purpoſing thereby to conform us to our Head, and ſo to accompany that great cloud of Witneſſes through the narrow way that leads to his Kingdom, yield we our necks to bear the ſweet and eaſie yoke of Chriſt. Be it that Satan and his Confederates do perſecute the Church of Chriſt, yet hath ſhe an aſſured liding place. The faithful may be impriſoned, but in the mean while they leave the world in a worſe Priſon, viz. ſhut up under the wrath of God. They may be in bonds, yet is not that ſo bad as to lye bound in the bonds of iniquity; they are oft ſhut up in dark and unſavoury places, but how can darkneſs be grievous to them who are the children of light, eſpecially when God ſhines upon them with the light of his countenance? Stinking holes and odious ſmells cannot ſo offend and annoy them, but that the ſweet ſavour of a good conſcience, purified by faith, ſurmounts all. They may be put into dungeons in the world, yet being choſen of God out of the world, they have their converſation in heaven. Be it that they loſe a few commodities here, it is but as if they forſook counters to receive gold, things terreſtrial for celeſtial. A Chriſtian may ſuffer, but he cannot dye; he may loſe his life, but he cannot loſe Chriſt; when he leaves the world he goes to God.

Wherefore let us then put on the whole armour of God, Eph. 6. 11. and as good ſouldiers of Jeſus Chriſt, enure our ſelves to 2 Tim. 2. 3. endure hardneſs. So ſhall it come to paſs, that continuing faithful in this ſpiritual welfare unto the death, we ſhall at length receive the Crown of Eternal Life. Rev. 2. 10.

THE HISTORY OF

Four MARTYRS Burnt at Liſle in Flanders, in the Year 1556. whoſe Names are Robert Oguier, and his Wife, Baudicon and Martin, their two Sons.

THe example which is ſet before us in this ſo Godly a Family may well ſerve for an entrance to the Continuation of the Hiſtory of forein Martyrs, in that we may thence learn, what thoſe true Ornaments are wherewith both Parents and their Children ought to be decked and adorned, namely with ſuch a light ſhining forth from the ſound knowledge of the Goſpel, as whereby the Church of God may be edified and confirmed in ſeeing them to hold the profeſſion of their Faith conſtantly even unto the death.

THe City of Liſle may well be placed in the firſt rank of thoſe Cities of Merchandize in the Low Country of Flanders, Artois and Haynault, upon which the Lord hath multiplied his bleſſings, not ſo much of Worldly good things, as of his Spiritual Graces; yea; in ſo abundant meaſure, that even under the Tyranny of Antichriſt in the Countries aforenamed, few places can be named where the Goſpel in that time was more freely publiſhed and preached, or with greater zeal received than there.

For, for three years together the Goſpel was ſecretly taught among them, ſometime in Houſes, then in woods, in Fields, and in Caves of the Earth, not without the hazarding of their deareſt life, if they had been diſcovered: yet could not theſe apparent dangers under ſuch tyranny cool or abate the burning zeal which almoſt conſumed the heart of this people, hungring and thirſting after the ſpiritual food of their Souls.

What was among them preached, was accordingly practiſed: works of mercy and charity were there exerciſed, not only towards thoſe of the houſhold of Faith, but even towards them which were without; ſo as many by means hereof were drawn and brought on to the knowledge of Chriſt. They ordained in their aſſembly certain Deacons to receive the Alms which were given, men fearing God, being well approved of, who went weekly from Houſe to Houſe to collect the Alms of ſuch as they knew to be Faithful: admoniſhing every one how to carry themſelves in their vocations, and of their duty in contributing towards the relief of the poor Saints.

And thus each one according to his place endeavoured to expreſs and manifeſt his Faith by the fruits thereof, namely good works.

In a very ſhort ſpace of time, the Lord by the Miniſtry of his Word (though preached in ſecret) erected here a flouriſhing Church, ſo as the Congregation conſiſted of a competent number of Men, Women and Children, not only of the City, but out of four or five Villages beſides bordering nigh unto it, who came alſo with an eager appetite to be inſtructed.

In the mean while, you may conceive that Satan and his adherents ceaſed not to ſtorm and rage hereat, not being able long to endure theſe their holy meetings; but when the time was now come, that God had given them power to prove and try his Church, they foreſlowed not to exerciſe their cruelty upon it, which long before they had plotted and contrived.

Upon Saturday then the ſixth of March, Ann. 1556. between nine and ten of the Clock in the Night, the Provoſt of the City with his Sergeants Armed themſelves to make ſearch, if they could find any met together in Houſes; but as then there was no aſſembly. Therefore they came to the Houſe of one whoſe Name was Robert Oguier, which was a little Church, for all both great and ſmall, men-ſervants and maids were familiarly inſtructed there in the knowledge of God, as the iſſue well manifeſted.

Being violently entred into the ſaid Houſe, and ſeeking here and there for their prey, they found certain Books which they carried away. But he whom they principally aimed at was not then in the Houſe; viz. Baudicon the Son of the ſaid Robert Oguier, who at that time was gone abroad to commune and talk of the Word of God with ſome of the Brethren, as he oft uſed to do. Returning home, he knocked at the door: Martin his younger Brother, watching his coming, bad him be gone, willing him not to come in. But Baudicon, thinking his Brother miſtook him for ſome other, ſaid, it is I, open the door: with that, the Sergeants approaching nigh unto it, opened the ſame, and cauſing him to enter in, ſaid, Ah Sir, you are well met; to whom he anſwered, I thank you my friends, you alſo are welcome hither.

Then ſaid the Provoſt, I arreſt you all in the Emperors Name, and with that commanded each of them to be bound, to wit, the Husband and his Wife with their two Sons, leaving their two Daughters to look to the Houſe. Now as they conveyed them along through the Streets, Baudicon with a Voice ſomewhat extended (which might eaſily be heard at that time of the night) ſaid, O Lord, aſſiſt us by thy Grace not only to be Priſoners for thy Name ſake, but to confeſs thy holy truth in all purity before Men, ſo far as to Seal the ſame with our Bloods for the edification of thy poor Church. The Prayer which Baudicon made as he was led to Priſon.

Thus were they brought into ſeveral Priſons, where they were ſeverally handled; yet ceaſed they not to praiſe and bleſs the Lord with one conſent; within a few days after, the Priſoners were preſented before the Magiſtrates of the City, and examined as touching their courſe of life, who directed their Speech firſt to Robert Oguier in theſe words: It is told us that you never come to Maſs, yea, and alſo diſſuade others from coming thereto; we are further informed that you maintain Conventicles in your Houſe, cauſing erroneous Doctrines to be preached there contrary to the ordinance of our Holy Mother the Church, where-whereby you have tranſgreſſed the Laws of Imperial Majeſty.

Robert Oguier anſwered, whereas firſt of all you lay to my charge that I go not to Maſs; I refuſe ſo to do, indeed, becauſe the death and pretious Blood of the Son of God, and his Sacrifice is utterly aboliſhed there, and troden under foot. For Chriſt by one Sacrifice hath perfected for ever them that are ſanctified. The Apoſtle ſaith by one offering. For do we read in all the Scriptures, that either the Prophets, Chriſt, or any of his Apoſtles ever ſaid Maſs? for they knew not what it meant. Chriſt indeed inſtituted the holy Supper, in which all Chriſtian people do communicate together, but they Sacrificed not. If you pleaſe to read the Bible over, you ſhall never find the Maſs once mentioned therein. And therefore it is the meer invention of Men. You know then what Chriſt ſaith, In vain do they worſhip me, teaching for Doctrines the commandments of Men. If either my ſelf, or any of mine had been at Maſs, which is ordained by the commandment of Men, Chriſt would have told us, we had worſhipped him in vain.

Heb. 10.14.

Mat. 15.9.

As for the ſecond accuſation, I cannot nor will deny, but there have met together in my Houſe honeſt people fearing God; I aſſure you not with intention to wrong or harm any, but rather for the advancement of Gods Glory, and the good of many. I knew indeed that the Emperor had forbidden it, but what then? I knew alſo that Chriſt in his Goſpel had commanded it. Where two or three, ſaith he, are gathered together in my Name, there am I in the midſt of them. Thus you ſee I could not well obey the Emperour, but I muſt diſobey Chriſt. In this caſe then, I chooſe rather to obey my God, then Man.

Mat. 18. 20.

One of the Magiſtrates demanded what they did when they met together.

To which Baudicon the eldeſt Son of Robert Oguier anſwered; if it pleaſe you my Maſters to give me leave, I will open the buſineſs at large unto you.

The Sheriffs ſeeing his promptneſs, looking one upon another ſaid, well, let us hear it then. Baudicon, lifting up his eyes to Heaven, began thus: when we meet together in the Name of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt to hear the Word of God, we firſt of all proſtrate upon our knees before God, and in the humility of our Spirits do make a confeſſion of our Sins before his divine Majeſty. Then we pray that the Word of God may be rightly divided, and purely preached: we alſo pray for our Soveraign Lord the Emperour, and for all his honourable Counſellors, that the Common-Wealth may be peaceably governed to the Glory of God; yea we forget not you whom we acknowledge our ſuperiours; intreating our good God for you, and for this whole City, that you may maintain it in all tranquillity. Thus I have ſummarily relâted unto you what we do: think you now, whether we have offended ſo highly in this matter of our aſſemblies. Moreover if you will not be offended to hear the tenour of the Prayers we make there, I am ready to recite the ſame unto you.

One of the Magiſtrates gave him a ſign by which he might underſtand that they deſired to hear it. Baudicon then kneeling down before them, prayed with ſuch fervency of affection, that the like ardency of zeal never appeared in him in ſo admirable a manner as at that time; Inſomuch that the Magiſtrates were forced to burſt forth into tears; beholding what a gratious Spirit the young man was endued withal. Then ſtanding up, he ſaid, now your Maſterſhips may take a ſcantling by this, how we are imployed in our meetings.

Whilſt they were thus examined, each of them made an open confeſſion of the Faith which they held. After this being returned again into Priſon, they not long after were put to the torture, to make them confeſs who they were that frequented their Houſe, but they would diſcover none, unleſs ſuch as were well known to the Judges, or elſe were at that time abſent. About four or five days after, they were convented again before their Judges, namely, the Father and his two Sons: and after many words paſſed, they asked them whether they would ſubmit themſelves to the will of the Magiſtrates. Robert Oguier and Baudicon his Son, with ſome deliberation, ſaid, yes, we will.

Then demanding the ſame of Mart. the younger brother, he anſwered, that he would not ſubmit himſelf thereto, but would accompany his Mother; ſo he was ſent back again to Priſon, whilſt the Father and the Son were adjudged to be burnt alive to aſhes. Now as they went to receive the Sentence, one of the Judges ſitting in his place, after ſentence pronounced, ſaid, to day you ſhall go to dwell with all the Devils in Hell fire (which he ſpake as one tranſported with fury in beholding the great patience of theſe two Servants of Chriſt) for they took all things quietly, vanquiſhing their enemies cruelty by patient bearing the Croſs, and in praying God for the ſame. Having received the ſentence of death, they were returned to the Priſon whence they came, being joyful that the Lord did them that honor to be enrolled in the number of his Martyrs. No ſooner entred they the Priſon, but a band of fryers came in thither: one amongſt the reſt told them, the hour was come in which they muſt finiſh their days. Robert Oguier and his Son anſwered, we know it well. But bleſſed be the Lord our God, who now delivering our Bodies out of this vile Priſon, will receive our Souls into his glorious and Heavenly Kingdom.

Anno 1556.

One of the Fryers whoſe Name was Lazard, a notable limb of Antichriſt, endeavoured to turn them from their Faith, ſaying, Father Robert, thou art an old Man, let me intreat thee in this thy laſt hour to think of ſaving thine own Soul. And if thou wilt give ear unto me, I warrant thee thou ſhalt do well.

The old Man anſwered, poor Man, how dareſt thou attribute that to thy ſelf which belongs to the Eternal God, and ſo rob him of his honour? for it ſeems by thy ſpeech, that if I will harken to thee, thou wilt become my Saviour. No, no, I have one only Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, who by and by will deliver me from this miſerable World. I have one Doctor, whom the Heavenly Father hath commanded me to hear, and I purpoſe to hearken to none other.

A Fryer, called the Father of Saint Clare, exhorting him to take pity of his Soul which Chriſt hath redeemed: Thou willeſt me, ſaid Robert, to pity mine own Soul, doſt thou not ſee what pity I have on it, when for the Name of Chriſt I willingly abandon this Body of mine to the Fire, hoping to day to be with him in Paradiſe? I have put all my confidence in God, and my hope wholly is fixed upon the merits of Chriſt his Death and Paſſion, he will direct me the right way to his Kingdom. I believe whatſoever the holy Prophets and Apoſtles have written, and in that Faith will I live and dye.

Mat.

The Fryer hearing this, ſaid, Out Dog, thou art not worthy the Name of a Chriſtian; thou and thy Son with thee are both reſolved to damn your Bodies and Souls with all the Devils in the bottom of Hell.

As they were about to ſever Baudicon from his Father, he ſaid, Let my Father alone, and trouble him not thus, he is an old Man, and hath an infirm Body, hinder him not I pray you, from receiving the Crown of Martyrdom.

Another of the Fryers ſaid, Away varlet, thou art the cauſe of thy Fathers perdition. The Friers then returning themſelves towards the Executioner, ſaid, On, on, Officer, do thine Office, for we will be gone, we loſe but our labour, ſeeing the Devil hath betwitched them.

Baudicon was then conveyed into a Chamber apart, and there being ſtripped of his Clothes was fitted to be ſacrificed; now as one brought him Gunpowder to put to his Breaſt, an odd fellow ſtanding by ſaid, Wert thou my Brother, I would ſell all that I am worth to buy Fagots to burn thee, thou findeſt but too much favour. The young Man anſwered, Well, Sir, the Lord ſhew you more mercy. Some that were preſent, ſaying, Good God, is it not a pitiful ſight to behold theſe poor Men? A Doctor being by anſwered, And what pity would you have ſhewed towards them? I would in ſtead of allowing them this powder have them fryed on Gridirons, as S. Laurence was.

Saint Laurence was roſted on a Gridiron by Pagans: In this age the Godly find in a manner the like from falſe and fained Chriſtians.

Whilſt they ſpake thus to Baudicon, ſome of the Friers cloſed in with the old Man, perſwading him at leaſt to take a Crucifix into his hands, leſt the people (ſaid they) ſhould murmure againſt you; adding further, that he might for all that lift up his heart to God, becauſe you know; ſaid they, it is but a piece of Wood.

A gentle perſwaſion.

Thus they faſtened it between his hands, but as ſoon as Baudicon was come down, and eſpied what they had done done to his Father; he ſaid, Alas Father, what do you now, will you play the Idolater even at our laſt hour. And then pulling the Idol out of his hands which they had faſtned therein, he threw it away, ſaying, What cauſe hath the people to be offended at us, for not receiving a Jeſus Chriſt, of Wood? We bear upon our hearts the Croſs of Chriſt the Son of the everliving God, feeling his holy Word written therein in Letters of Gold.

As they were led to execution, a band of Souldiers were attendant upon them, no leſs then if a Prince had been conducted into his Kingdom. Being come to the place where they were to ſuffer, they aſcended up the Scaffold which was there prepared for them. Then Baudicon asked leave of the Sheriffs to make a Confeſſion of his Faith before the people. Anſwer was made, That he was to look unto his Ghoſtly Father and Confeſſor; confeſs your ſelf (ſaid they) to him. He was then haled rudely to the Stake, where he began to ſing the ſixteenth Pſalm. The Fryer cryed out, Do you not hear my Maſters, what wicked errours theſe Hereticks ſing, to beguile the people withal. Baudicon hearing what he ſaid, replyed thus; Now ſimple Idiot, calleſt thou the Pſalms of the Prophet David, errors? But no marvel, for thus you are wont to Blaſpheme againſt the Spirit of God.

Then turning his eyes towards his Father, who was about to be chained to the Stake, he ſaid, Be of good courage Father, the worſt will be paſt by and by. As the Executioner was faſtening him to the Poſt, he chanced to hit him with his hammer on the foot, to make him ſtand nearer to the ſame. The old Man being ſenſible of the blow, ſaid, Friend, thou hurteſt my foot, why doſt thou abuſe me thus? The Frier hearing this, ſaid, Ah theſe Hereticks; They would be counted Martyrs forſooth; but if they be but touched a little, they cry out as they were killed. To which Baudicon thus replyed: Think you then that we fear the Tormentors? No ſuch matter; for had we feared the ſame, we had never expoſed our Bodies to this ſo ſhameful and painful a kind of death.

Then he often reiterated theſe ſhort breathings, O God, Father everlaſting, accept the Sacrifice of our Bodies, for thy well beloved Son Jeſus Chriſts ſake. One of the Friers cryed, Heretick, thou lyeſt, he is none of thy Father, the Devil is thy Father. And thus, during theſe conflicts, he bent his eyes to Heaven, and ſpeaking to his Father, ſaid; Behold, for I ſee the Heavens open, and millions of Angels ready preſt to receive us, rejoycing to ſee us thus witneſſing the truth in the view of the World. Father let us be glad and rejoyce, for the joys of Heaven are ſet open to us.

Then ſaid one of the Friers, I ſee Hell open, and millions of Devils preſent to carry you thither. But the Lord, who never forſakes any that put their truſt in him, ſtirred up the heart and opened the mouth of a poor Man who ſtood among the multitude, beholding this ſpectacle, who being moved with compaſſion, cryed aloud, Be of good comfort Baudicon, ſtand thou to it, thou fighteſt in a good quarrel, I am on thy ſide; after which words he departed thence; and a way being made for him, ſaved himſelf from danger.

Fire was forthwith put to the Straw and Wood which burnt beneath, whilſt they (not ſhrinking for the pains) ſpake one to another; Baudicon often repeating this in his Fathers ears, Faint not Father, nor be afraid, Yet a very little while and we ſhall enter into the Heavenly Manſions.

In the end the Fire growing hot upon them, the laſt words they were heard to pronounce, were Jeſus Chriſt thou Son of God, into thy hands we commend our Spirits. And thus theſe two ſlept ſweetly in the Lord.

Within eight days after, Jane the Mother, and Martin her Son, were executed in the ſame City of Liſle; but of this more hereafter.

Jane the Wife of Robert Oguier, and Martin her Son, Martyrs.

THe Wife here follows her Husband, and accompanies her Son: her Converſion is admirable; for being ſevered from him, the Friers having ſeduced her, laboured with her to turn her Son alſo out of the right way; but he underſtanding thereof recovers his Mother again, and ſo they both gave their lives for the truth, to the great confuſion of their enemies.

But before we come to deſcribe their happy ends, we will, as briefly as may be, note by the way the great conflicts of Spirit which both of them ſuſtained.

There were ſent unto them many of the Popiſh rabble, to turn them from their Faith. Now that this their deviliſh enterpriſe might the rather be effected, they ſundred one of them from the other, ſo as by the politick device of a Monk, the poor Woman began to waver, and let go her firſt Faith. At this their enemies rejoyced not a little, whilſt the poor little flock of Chriſt, hearing ſuch ſad news, were in continual perplexity, but the Lord left them not in their mournful condition.

For on a day one of the Monks reſorted to her in the Priſon, counſelling her to win her Son Martin, and to draw him from his errors: which ſhe promiſed to do. But when he was come to his Mother, and perceived that ſhe was not only fallen, but alſo quite turned out of the right way, he began with tears to bewail her miſerable eſtate.

O Mother, ſaith he, what have you done? Have you denied him who hath redeemed you? Alas, what evil hath he done you, that you ſhould requite him with this ſo great an injury and diſhonour. Now I am plunged into that woe, which I have moſt feared. Ah good God, that I ſhould live to ſee this, which pierceth me to the very heart.

His Mother hearing theſe his pitiful complaints, and ſeeing the tears which her Son ſhed for her, began again to renue her ſtrength in the Lord, and with tears cryed out, O Father of mercies, be merciful unto me miſerable Sinner, and cover my tranſgreſſion under the righteouſneſs of thy bleſſed Son; Lord enable me with ſtrength from above, to ſtand to my firſt Confeſſion, and make me to abide ſtedfaſt therein even unto my laſt breath.

It was not long after this her change, but the ſame Inſtruments of Satan, who had ſeduced her, came in, ſuppoſing to find her in the ſame mind wherein they left her: whom ſhe no ſooner eſpied, but with deteſtation ſaid, Avoid Satan, get thee behind me: for henceforth thou haſt neither part nor portion in me. I will by the help of God ſtand to my firſt Confeſſion; And if I may not ſign it with Ink, I will Seal it with my Blood. And ſo from that time this frail Veſſel, who for a while relented, after her recovery grew ſtronger and ſtronger.

The Judges ſeeing their conſtancy, delayed not to diſpatch them out of the way, condemning them to be burned alive, and their Bodies being reduced to aſhes, the ſame to be ſcattered and diſperſed in the air. The Mother and the Son having heard their Sentence read, in the way as they were going back again to Priſon, ſaid, now bleſſed be our God, who cauſeth us thus to triumph over our enemies: This is the wiſhed hour, our gladſome day is come. Let us not then, ſaid Martin, forget to be thankful for the honour he doth us, in thus conforming us unto the Image of his Son. Let us remember thoſe who have traced this path before us: for this is the High-way to the Kingdom of Heaven. Let us then, good Mother, go on boldly out of the Camp with the Son of God, bearing his reproach, with all his holy Martyrs; for ſo we ſhall find paſſage into the Glorious Kingdom of the everliving God. Heb. 13. 13.

Some of the company hearing, but not being able to brook theſe words, ſaid, We ſee now thou Heretick that thou art wholly poſſeſſed, Body and Soul, with a Devil, as was thy Father and Brother, who are both in Hell. Martin ſaid, Sirs, as for your railings and curſings, our God will this day turn them into bleſſings in the ſight of himſelf and of all his holy Angels.

A certain temporizer ſaid to Martin, Thou ſilly youth, thou ſayeſt thou knoweſt not what; thou art too well conceited of thy ſelf and of thy cauſe. Seeſt thou not all this people here about thee? what thinkeſt thou of them? they believe not as thou doſt, and yet I doubt not but they ſhall be ſaved. But you imagine to do that which will never come to paſs, though you pretend never ſo much that you are in the Faith, and have the Scriptures for you. See here the ſundry ſlights of Satan.

The good Woman hearing this, anſwered, Sir, Chriſt Jeſus our Lord ſaith, That it is the wide gate and broad Mat. 7. 13.

way which leads to deſtruction, and therefore many go in thereat: but the gate, ſaith he, is narrow that leads to life, and few there be that find it. Do ye then doubt whether we are in the ſtraight way or no, when ye behold our ſufferings? would you have a better ſign than this, to know whether we are in the right way or no? Compare our Doctrine with that of your Prieſts and Monks: we for our parts are determined to have but one Chriſt and him crucified; we only embrace the Scriptures of the old and new Teſtament. Are we deceived in believing that which the holy Prophets and Apoſtles have taught?

Mat. 7.12. How we may know we are in the right way.

One of the Friers turning towards Martin, ſaid, Young Man, be well adviſed; for thy Father and thy Brother have acknowledged the ſeven Sacraments of the Church together with us: and thou poor ſilly youth haſt heard ſome wicked Heretick who hath deluded thee: thinkeſt thou thy ſelf wiſer than ſo many learned Drs. as have lived in ſo many Ages? Martin anſwered, I pray you Sir, doth not Chriſt our Lord tell us, that his Father hath hid the ſecrets of his Kingdom from the wiſe and prudent, and revealed them to Babes? And doth not the Lord oftentimes catch the wiſe in their own craftineſs?

Mat. 11.25. Job. 5.13.

And whereas you ſay my Father and Brother have confeſſed ſeven Sacraments, I well perceive by this that I ought not to give credit to ought you ſay; know ye not that the Devil is the Father of lies, and all liers? Is it not ſufficient that I acknowledge ſo many Sacraments as God himſelf hath inſtituted and ordained, to wit, Baptiſm and the Supper of the Lord?

Then came there into the Priſon two Men of great Authority in the City of Liſle, the one called Mounſieur Barras, the other Beaufremes, who promiſed Martin great matters, if he would recant and return to the Roman Church. Beaufremes among other ſpeeches ſaid thus unto him, Young Man, I have compaſſion on thy tender years, if thou wilt be ruled by us, I will promiſe thee thou ſhalt not dye this ſhameful death: moreover, I will give thee one hundred pounds Sterling.

1000*l.* amount to twohundred Crowns, but this Faithful Martyr of Chriſt was not like Judas, who for love of Money ſold his Maſter.

Martin gave him this anſwer. Sir, you preſent before me many temporal commodities: but alas, do you think me ſo ſimple, as to forſake an eternal Kingdom for enjoying of a ſhort tranſitory life? No ſir, it is too late to ſpeak to me now of worldly commodities, but of thoſe ſpiritual, which God hath prepared for me to day in his Kingdom: nor do I purpoſe to hearken after any other: only, I pray you let me crave one hours reſpite to give my ſelf to prayer, and calling upon the Name of my God: for you know now it is eight days ſince my Father departed this World, and hitherto I have ſcarce enjoyed an hours reſt; That which I have had, hath rather been to ſlumber in, than have any quiet ſleep, having continually had eight or nine perſons invironing me about, and talking unto me.

After theſe great Men were forced to go even as they came, Martin declared the effect of this his combat to certain Brethren who were there detained with him in Priſon; ſaying moreover. Let us lift up our heads, Brethren, the brunt is over, this I hope is their laſt aſſault; forget not, I pray you, the holy Doctrine of the Goſpel, nor thoſe good leſſons which you have learned from our Brother * Guy. Manifeſt it now to all, that you have received them not only into your Ears, but alſo into your Hearts; follow me, we lead you the way; fear not, God will never leave nor forſake you: farewel Brethren, ſaid he, and ſo departed from them.

*It is very likely he means Guy de Brez, a Godly Miniſter, of whom you ſhall read more, Godwilling, hereafter.

Soon after Martin and his Mother were bound and brought to the place of their Martyrdom: His Mother having aſcended the Scaffold, cryed to Martin, Come up, Come up my Son. And as he was ſpeaking to the people, ſhe ſaid, ſpeak out Martin, ſaith ſhe, that it may appear to all, that we dye not Hereticks. Martin would have made a Confeſſion of his Faith, but could not be ſuffered. His Mother being bound to the Stake, ſpake in the hearing of the Spectators, We are Chriſtians, and that which we now ſuffer is not for Murther or Theft, but becauſe we will believe no more than that which the Word of God teacheth us: Both rejoycing that they were counted worthy to ſuffer for the ſame.

The Fire being kindled, the vehemency thereof did nothing cool or abate the fervency of their zeal, but they continued conſtant in the Faith, and with lifting up their hands to Heaven, in an holy accord ſaid, Lord Jeſus into thy hands we commend our Spirits. And thus they bleſſedly ſlept in the Lord. Theſe were the fruits which theſe holy aſſemblies in the City of Liſle brought forth. None need to enquire whether the reſt were ſuffered to live in peace; for what other ſpectacles were to be eſpied in the High-ways and Fields, but poor fugitives flying hither and thither, for ſafeguard of their lives. So great was the cruelty which was then and there exerciſed among them: and yet, when all is done, God will be glorified in his Saints and Children.

Anno 1556.

The happy death of the Mother and her Son.

John Rabec, Martyr, burned at Aniers in France, the 24. of April, 1556.

THis Robert had his Tongue cut out becauſe he would not pronounce Jeſus, Maria, to joyn them both in one Prayer; for being urged thereunto with great threats, he boldly anſwered, that if his Tongue ſhould but offer to utter thoſe words at their bidding, himſelf would bite it aſunder with his teeth.

A Martyrs Tongue cut out for refuſing to kiſs upon the Virgin Mary.

Bartholomew Hector, Martyr, was burned according to the Sentence of the Parliament of Turin in Piedmont, in the year 1556. June the 19.

BEing called before Authority to be examined he would anſwer them to nothing before he had made his prayer to God. Whereupon falling down there on his knees, he beſought him to open his Mouth, and to direct his Speech only to utter that which might tend to his honor and glory, and to the edification of his Church. Afterwards, when he was bound to the Stake, Gunpowder and Brimſtone was brought to be placed about him, he lifting up his Eyes to Heaven, and ſaying, Lord how ſweet and welcom is this to me?

The Martyr would not anſwer the Adverſary till he had firſt craved aſſiſtance from God.

Charles Covinck, or le Roy de Gand, once a Frier Carmelite at Gand in Flanders was apprehended and executed at Bruges in the ſame Countrey, Anno 1557. April 27.

BEeing perſwaded by his Brother to return again to his Order, and take upon him his Friers habit; he made him this direct anſwer, what needs that, ſaith he? now I have caſt off that Popiſh weed, I will never reſume it again. Chriſt hath now ſet me free, I will be no longer of the Order of the Slaves of Satan.

Charles would none of his Popiſh habit which he had once rejected.

One of the Magiſtrates of Bruges conferring with him, promiſed to procure his deliverance if he would yield but a little; and if his Friers Coat diſpleaſed him, he would get him a diſpenſation from the Pope to forbear the wearing of it, and provide him a Canonſhip. Sir, ſaid Charles, I give you many thanks for your good will and theſe your kind offers: would to God I could accept of them without offending his Majeſty; you offer me a Canonſhip, that I might live quietly and in ſecurity; but know you Sir, That reſt is no true reſt and quietneſs which is obtained againſt the peace of a good Conſcience?

That is not worthy the name of reſt which is procured with offence of Conſcience.

A few days after his execution, one of them, who had his hand deepeſt in procuring his cruel death, died himſelf in ſuch terror and horror of Conſcience, that it gave ſufficient teſtimony to thoſe of Bruges, that they had put to death an Innocent, and that God was highly offended with thoſe that had perſecuted him.

A judgment of God upon a perſecutor.

Philibert Hamelin of Tournay, Miniſter and Martyr, was there executed in the year 1557.

WHilſt he remained Priſoner ſome of his friends dealt with him to break Priſon, and offered him means tending thereto. But he on the contrary, having reſolved to give his Life for ſo juſt a quarrel as he maintained, refuſed, ſaying, I eſteem it altogether unbeſeeming for a Man that is called to preach Gods Word to others, to run away and break Priſon for fear of danger, but rather to maintain the Truth taught even in the midſt of the flaming Fire.

Preachers muſt be no breakers of Priſons.

After Sentence of death was paſſed upon him by the Court, whereby he knew he had not long to live, yet did he eat

Anno 1557. eat his dinner with the reſt of the Priſoners, as joyfully as though he had been in no danger, ſpeaking unto them of the happineſs of eternal life, comforting all that ſate at Table with him in the Conſciergery.

A good conſcience is a continual feaſt.

That none might hear what he ſaid at the place of Execution, the Trumpets were cauſed to be ſounded continually; yet might it be ſeen, both by his geſtures and chearfulneſs of his countenance, that they could not let him from ſpeaking to God.

Archambant Seraphon Martyr, in the year 1557.

A practiſe of the Papiſts.

BEing demanded what he thought of the Pope and his Authority, he anſwered, I think verily the ſame is he of whom S. Paul ſpeaks in his ſecond Epiſtle to the Theſſalonians, Chap. 2. Which words he being willed to ſign with his hand; Yea, yea Sir, ſaid he, I am now ready to ſign it with my Blood rather than with Ink.

The Martyrs ready to ſeal the truth with their blood.

He reports in a Letter written to his Wife and Friends, that whereas this Jaylor was wont to carry himſelf as ſternly towards him as a Lion, roaring always in ſuch wiſe upon him, that all the Priſoners were amazed at it, the Lord had now ſo mollified his heart, that he became as meek as a Lamb, declaring how he would come and viſit him himſelf in his Priſon, and as well as he was able, comforted him, ſaying, Take no care, God will aſſiſt you; nor ſhall it be ſo ill with you as you think for. For what do your Enemies ſay? Alas! he is but a ſilly Pedlar, who, paſſing along this way, broached his Opinions to none: that alſo which he holds concerning the ſame, he keeps to himſelf; therefore be of good cheer. Sir, ſaid he, I praiſe God I am of good comfort, being ready to receive whatever it ſhall pleaſe him to appoint; If life, life; if death, death be it.

A Jaylor of a Lion became a Lamb.

One thing I had like to have omitted concerning him, which yet is worth the noting, namely, this:

An exhortation to get the Pſalms without Book.

This Archambant, in a Letter to his Wife, puts his Brethren in mind to learn Davids Pſalms; My Brethren, ſaith he, I exhort you in the Name of God, that you would learn, yea, learn the Pſalms without Book whilſt you have time and leiſure; for when you ſhall be caſt into dark Priſons (I ſay, when God ſhall call you to ſuffer for his ſake) you ſhall then have no Book with you, whether of a ſmall or great print, to ſee what part ſucceeds another, which I now utter to my great grief and ſhame; for if I ſhould tell you I lacked forewarning long ago, you can bear witneſs to the contrary: Nor do I know now what to do, but even to humble my ſelf before the Lord, crying unto him, Mercy, mercy, Lord have mercy upon me. Bleſſed and happy are they who are careful to get knowledge and faith, as Oyl into their Veſſels, before the Bridegroom come.

When he looked on his hands, he was wont to ſay, O Fleſh, thou muſt ſuffer and be turned into aſhes, until the laſt day.

Jeffery Vergale Martyr, in the year 1557. he was burned at Turin the laſt of December.

STanding upon a ſtool at the Stake, the Executioner, according to the cuſtom, prayed him to forgive him his death.

The death of the Martyrs is not without fruit.

Jeffery anſwered him, I not only forgive thee, but thoſe alſo who firſt impriſoned me at Burges, yea, thoſe that brought me to this City, and have condemned me to this death. Be not afraid, do thine office, my death ſhall not be unprofitable.

Nicholas Jeuville Martyr, in the year 1557. who with two others mentioned hereafter, were burned in the place called Mawbert without Paris in France.

THis godly Martyr being condemned to be burned alive, and his Tongue to be cut out, the Tormentor being there preſent offered to put the Halter about his neck, but he repulſed him twice, appealing from the Sentence. But becauſe he was preſſed upon to receive it the third time, and thinking his appeal would not take place, he took it, ſaying; Praiſed be God, for I am now counted worthy to be one of the heavenly Order.

Two Innocents condemned to ſuffer death, the one of them being called Henry the Taylor.

THis Henry rejoyced at the hearing of the Sentence read, ſaying, This is the day we have long expected, and therefore give our ſelves willingly to dye, but as for the puniſhment, my Maſters, that we leave to you: yet we pray that God would pardon you this injuſtice.

These two were burnt at Antwerp. The Martyrs willingly give their necks to the block, but left the puniſhment to their Perſecutors.

At which ſpeeches the Magiſtrates turned away their faces, not willing to hear it; but Adrian, who was the other Martyr, told them boldly, That God would require the Blood of the Juſt at their hands, whom they daily put to death.

The next day being appointed for their Execution, a great multitude were aſſembled into the Market place, to behold the behaviour of theſe godly men, who, as they were led to death, proteſted, That the cauſe why they died, was only for bearing witneſs to the truth of the Goſpel, which words they uttered with ſuch courage, that the Officers, who inviroined them round about, ſtrove to damp the ſame by a great noiſe; which they made, leſt their voice ſhould be underſtood. Whilſt the Executioner faſtened them to the Stake, there was on an inſtant ſuch an hurly burly amongſt the people, that with one voice they cried, Kill, kill, ruſhing one in upon another. By and by the Shops and doors of Houſes were ſhut up. The Hangman let fall all his preparations, leaving the two Patients ſtanding at the Stake. The Margrave being on Horſeback, could by no means get away, being compaſſed in on each ſide. The Officers trembling for fear, threw down their Halberds. The Spy who attended there to hearken, not knowing where to beſtow himſelf, forſook his Horſe, and ran into a Church for fear.

There were they in great fear, where no fear was, for as ſaith the Pſalmiſt, God is in the generation of the righteous. Pſal. 14. 5.

And though one told him that a Cutpurſe had cauſed all this ado, he would not be drawn to believe him, but ſaid, I know we are but dead men; it is not the Thief, but the ſeditious People who now begin to work their revenge. Thus God confounded theſe blood-thirſty, ſhewing how he could have brought all their preparations to nothing, if it had pleaſed him.

As ſoon as this Hubbub was quieted, the Servant of the Executioner ran and ſtrangled the two Martyrs, who had now a good ſpace been faſtened to the Stake, ſtill calling upon the Name of the Lord. The Fire being afterward kindled, the Bodies were conſumed to aſhes the 19. of January, 1559.

A Recantation fathered upon a Martyr called Cornelius Hallewin, which he never conſented to, and how he took the ſame, in the year 1559.

THe Father of this Cornelius, ſoliciting the Margrave and his Wife (who as it was thought was Godmother to Cornelius) to get his Son out of Priſon; It was ſo agreed among them, that a Libel ſhould be framed under the name of Cornelius, wherein he ſhould now acknowledge his Error, be confeſſed to a Prieſt, would alſo receive his Maker, and come again into the ſtate of Grace, as a good Child of his holy Mother the Church. And further ſhould ſay, That Sermons were of no worth, becauſe they were not made upon holy ground. Alſo requiring that if he had failed in ought elſe, the ſame ſhould be attributed to his young years, and therefore craved pardon. Howbeit the ſaid Cornelius wrote Letters daily in the mean while to the Brethren, ſhewing forth an admirable conſtancy in defending the Faith; gladding the hearts of many, who gave God thanks for the Graces of his good Spirit wherewith he had indued him.

The Miniſter of the Flemiſh Church hearing of this Libel, by the means of ſome friends, got a Copy thereof, and having read it, conſidering how the tenor thereof tended to a great ſcandal, made the Elders and Deacons of the Church acquainted therewith, who were not a little grieved for the infirmity of their weak Brother. Whereupon, the Miniſter wrote a ſharp Letter unto him, willing him to turn and repent him of his backſliding, by making a true Confeſſion thereof before the Councel. When Cornelius had received this Letter, and read it, he was ſo vexed and perplexed in his ſpirit, that he knew not how to demean himſelf, ſo as all the godly his Priſon-fellows had much ado to ſtay and comfort him. The blood guſhed out of his noſe, he ſpread abroad his arms, and made pitiful outcries. What, to deny the truth (ſaid he) God forbid? Oh that the faithful ſhould conceive ſo hardly of me! Good God, thou knoweſt that I am guiltleſs, nor have I this way offended. Then the reſidue of the Brethren adviſed him to get a ſight of his Indictment, which if it contained no ſuch thing, then to ſend it to the Church, and ſo manifeſt to them his innocency touching that whereof he was accuſed: beſides, making a plain confeſſion of his Faith, to impart the ſame to the Counſel, and therewithal to ſhew how he was abuſed by the Margrave and his Parents, which he accordingly did.

The ſaid Cornelius being condemned to dye, the Margrave offered him ſo much more favour as to dyea more eaſie kind of death, if he would but give ear to the Prieſts whom he had brought with him into the Priſon. Cornelius replied, No Sir, God forbid I ſhould do ſuch a thing: do ye with my body what ye will. As they bound him and Herman Janſſen (who both ſuffered together) Herman willed the Margrave to take heed what he did: for, ſaith he, this will not go for payment in Gods ſight in bereaving us thus of our lives. I wiſh you to repent therefore before it be too late, you cannot long continue this tyrannous courſe, for the Lord will ſhortly avenge it. The Margrave commanded they ſhould have a Croſs or Crucifix put into their hands, promiſing Cornelius that if he would ſo do, he ſhould only be beheaded, and not burned: but they both rejected the Croſs, ſaying, They would not give the leaſt ſign that might be of betraying the Truth, and that it was all one to them what death they put them to, ſo they died in and for the Lord. The puniſhment, they ſaid, could laſt but for a while, but the glory to come was eternal.

Then were they led towards the Market place, and Herman rejoycing in the Lord, ſung the hundred and thirtieth Pſalm. Cornelius followed him, and gave the people godly Exhortations. Being come to the place of Execution, the Sword was laid there ready to behead them, if they would take the Croſs into their hands, and admit the Friers into their Company? But becauſe they would not yield one whit unto them, wood was made ready to burn them. Then Cornelius fell on his knees, praying God to forgive his Enemies, who had ſinned through ignorance. After which they were put into a little Lodge made of Fagots, and ſtrangled at the Stake. But whilſt this was a doing, there fell out ſuch a tumult amongſt the People, that they were not a little afraid of an uprore; the Hangman, he caught hold of his Sword to defend himſelf, thinking they would kill him firſt; but the buſineſs was as ſuddenly quieted as raiſed. The fire being kindled, flamed forth upon the Bodies of theſe holy Martyrs. The Margrave thought, according to the uſual courſe, to have quenched the fire, that ſo conveying the Bodies away half burnt, they might be laid upon the Wheels nigh unto the City, in the accuſtomed places where they were to lye, as Spectacles to be gazed on. But the peoples wrath being ſtirred, croſſed him in his purpoſe, ſo as his Serjeants and Halberdiers leaving him, he ſtood as one aſtoniſhed, cauſing the Executioner to finiſh out the reſt of this Tragedy.

Notes upon the occaſion of a Sedition at Paris, the fifth of March, 1559.

THe fifth day of March, there was a great uprore raiſed in the Church of S. Innocents in Paris. The Preachers all the Lent never ceaſed to move the people to kill all the Lutherans they could meet withal, and not leave the execution thereof to the Magiſtrates. Amongſt the reſt a Minorite, who preached in the ſaid Church, ſpent all his Sermons upon that Subject. The ſame day taking his Text out of the eighth of S. Johns Goſpel, concerning the Woman taken in Adultery being brought to Jeſus Chriſt; he uttered execrable things againſt the Magiſtrate: ſhewing that it was no wonder if the Judges did not caſt the firſt ſtone at the Lutherans, becauſe they themſelves were alſo Lutherans: and therefore the people were not to attend them any longer, but to riſe and make open war againſt them, yea, upon the chiefeſt of them, which were but ſuſpected to hold that Doctrine. In this garboil a poor Prieſt (with a brother of his, a Captain, paſſing by, and thinking by fair Language to pacifie the diſordered Tumult) had his foot no ſooner out of the Church door, but he was ſet upon by this Blood-thirſty Crue, who although he asked forgiveneſs in the name of the Saints, deſiring to be confeſſed, and ſhewed all outward ſigns of being one of their own ſide, yet could he of this headleſs Beaſt, the Multitude, obtain no favour, but was ſtabbed into the belly with a Dagger, and fell down dead. And yet they were not ſatisfied ſo, but the very meaneſt among them had a blow at him, raking with their hands in his wounds, and then in triumph lifting him up, bragged that they had bathed their hands in the blood of a Lutheran.

Anno 1559.

And thus thinking to martyr the Chriſtians, by the providence of God, it fell on thoſe of their own ſide.

The Captain with much ado getting into the Vicars Houſe, they beſet the Houſe leſt he ſhould eſcape their fingers. And hearing that the Magiſtrate was coming to deliver him, they feared not with one voice to ſay, That they would ſpare none, no not the King himſelf, though he came in his own Perſon. If any more pitiful than the reſt uttered but ſo much as the leaſt word tending to compaſſion, they were cruelly handled on all ſides, ſo as many met with hard uſage even for that.

Not fully a year before this, there fell out the like, if not a worſe Spectacle of Cruelty in the Church of Saint Euſtace,

For a Doctor of the Sorboniſts, commonly called the Soul of Picardy, who in his Sermons preached out nothing but Fire and Fagots, incouraged the Pariſians to ſlaughter the Lutherans, making many goodly promiſes to all ſuch as would undertake ſuch a bloody deſign: which was not ſo ſoon propounded, as accepted of by the peeple. For a poor Scholar, who out of devotion was preſent at the Sermon, happening [illegible] accident) to laugh at his Fellow Pupil; an old Tuſcoat ſitting by and obſerving it, cried out forthwith, That a Lutheran mocked the Preacher. The people at the ſound of this voice began to ſtir, not knowing upon what ground: and haling him out of the Church, miſerably maſſacred him, till they had forced both his eyes out of his head, buffeting him with their fiſts; and one among the reſt, cauſed his Horſe to trample upon him thrice.

John Barbeville of Normandy, being queſtioned by three of the Counſel about the Sacrament; anſwered, That in the holy Supper, being adminiſtred according to Chriſts Inſtitution, he received by Faith the Body and Blood of the Lord, but not after any carnal manner: foraſmuch as being now aſcended into Heaven, he ſhall not return thence, till he come to judge the quick and the dead. Upon which Article one of the Councel added this ſcoff, Which aſcended into Heaven, and drew the Ladder up after him.

See here what mockgods theſe be who condemn the poor Chriſtians.

Upon ſome occaſion they ſaid unto him, That he was but a ſilly Aſs, and therefore could not underſtand the Scriptures. Well, ſaith he, be it that I am an Aſs, yet did you never read, that God opened the mouth of the Prophet Baalam's Aſs to reprove him, for loading him with ſtripes when he was going to utter his lies againſt the Children of God? If God opened the Aſſes mouth, do ye now wonder if he opens mine, to cauſe me to ſpeak againſt the falſhood and lies which you ſpread abroad againſt the people of God? For as the Aſs ſpake being overcharged with blows, which the falſe Prophet gave him, ſo now in regard of the heavy burden wherewith in times paſt you have oppreſſed me by your Traditions, I am conſtrained to ſpeak as I do.

A retorting ſpeech well applyed.

Another Inquiſitor, a Monk called Benedict, told him, That he was come to comfort and inſtruct him in the Truth. How can you, ſaid Barbeville, ſay, you come to inſtruct me in the Truth, when your ſelf doth wear the habit of a Lyar? I cannot expect it from you; for no man can gather Figs of Thiſtles, or Grapes of Thorns.

God

Anno 1559. God ſo wrought here, and the Truth ſo prevailed, that though it was plainly confeſſed, yet the Priſoners were delivered Anno 1559.

THe Court of the Parliament of Paris, willing to moderate the Cruelties uſed againſt thoſe of the Reformed Religion, ſolicited them what they could, to diſſemble and to yield in ſome points; wherein the well-minded of that ſide were not yet rightly informed: but to this their advice they would by no means conſent. Then they took another courſe, and that was ſimply to examine them touching the manner of eating Chriſts Body in the Sacrament, without mentioning Tranſubſtantiation, or any Carnal Preſence; hoping this way to free them from the Crime of Sacramentaries, upon which point for the moſt part the Sentence of Death was pronounced: ſeeing they had heard formerly from the Priſoners, That the Churches of France held, how the Body of Chriſt was received by the Faithful, not in imagination, but truly and indeed, and that the ſigns were neither naked nor empty Elements, but exhibited that whereof they were ſigns.

This was propounded to four young men who were in the flowre of their Age, and lying Priſoners in the Conſciergery of the Palace, if it might be, to ſatisfie them. Now when this Confeſſion was preſented in the Court, all that were well affected were glad of it, in regard it was drawn ſo favourably; ſome being of opinion that it would work their deliverance. Others there were which oppoſed this Project, and requeſted they might be examined what they thought of the Maſs, it being ſo neceſſary an Article; provided, that there might be ſome moderation in the ordinary courſe of ſuch Interrogations. Notwithſtanding it was thought, that this would rather hinder than further their deliverance; yet did the better part perſiſt in their purpoſe of freeing them.

[redacted] asked again what they thought of the Maſs; they anſwered, That they would ſtand to their firſt Confeſſion. It was replyed, That the Court would reſt ſatisfied with that Anſwer, if ſo be they would now only go to Maſs. But with one voice they affirmed, That they would never yield to come there where God was ſo diſhonoured. The Court, to make it appear that no advantage ſhould be taken againſt them for this their Anſwer, gave them leave ſeverally to ſhew their Reaſons. This pleaſed the Priſoners well, and therefore they ſpared not to paint forth the Maſs in its lively colours; that all might perceive there was cauſe ſufficient why they ſhould deteſt it.

The Maſs deciphered in its colours.

Firſt, one of them by way of oppoſition ſhewed how contrary the Maſs was to the Lords Supper. The ſecond declared, it was Blaſphemy to affirm, that there was any other Propitiatory Sacrifice for ſins than the Blood of Chriſt. The third avouched, That if the Article of Tranſubſtantiation (wheron the Maſs depends) were allowed, Chriſt his Deity and his Humanity ſhould be aboliſhed, and therefore it muſt be flat Idolatry to worſhip Almighty God in a corruptible piece of Paſte. The fourth told them, That the fruits of the Sacrament could not be received where the Word was not joyned with the ſign, where one of the ſigns were withheld, or where there was no Communion.

Thus was the Maſs anatomized, with the abominations thereof, with all boldneſs; ſo as ſome of the Judges were conſtrained to aver openly, That there was a great abuſe in it indeed, being a manifeſt wrong done to the Inſtitution of Chriſt; as alſo that the Laity were there deprived of the Cup, and the Bread only given, the whole being performed in a Language which the poor people underſtood not.

It was beyond the expectation of all men, that ſo free a Confeſſion would have paſſed for currant in that place, in which whoſoever came before them formerly, and made the like, was condemned to dye. But now the Truth ſo prevailed, that againſt all hope and ordinary proceedings in times paſt, yea, contrary to the minds of thoſe which were Gods chiefeſt enemies, the order was this, That howſoever Sentence of Death had been pronounced againſt three others of this Company, by the inferiour Judges, yet theſe four ſhould have their lives ſaved; provided, that they departed the Country within fifteen days. Which exception, though it ſavoured of ſome Injuſtice, yet was it nothing in compariſon of the former Cruelties; and this baniſhment turned rather for a benefit to them, than any hurt, for by this means they had liberty to go to ſuch places where God was purely ſerved.

Four witneſſes of the Truth gently entreated by their Judges.

The Story of Peter Chevet, Martyr.

BEing asked whether he durſt affirm that he had the Spirit of God? Yea, ſaid he, for I am one of Gods Children, and therefore have the Spirit of God given unto me, as the earneſt of my Adoption.

He was in outward appearance a ſilly poor man, a Vine-dreſſer, of the age of 60 years and upwards.

It is to be feared, ſaid ſome, that you will bring your ſelf in danger of the Law, and ſo be burned. Truly, ſaid he, I do not think to eſcape better cheap; and though you ſcorch and roaſt me alive, yet will I never renounce Jeſus Chriſt. Is it not written, He that ſhall confeſs me before men, him will I confeſs before my Father which is in Heaven, &c. Being asked whether he deſired not to be abſolved, confeſſed, and to receive Pardon, having ſtood excommunicate now three years: He anſwered, I confeſs my faults every day to my God; but where is that godly Abſolver that will take upon him to pardon me? The Official anſwering, ſaid, That is even I. Now poor man, ſaid Peter, it is a queſtion whether thou canſt ſave thy ſelf, and wilt thou take upon thee then to ſave others? The Official finding himſelf galled with this Anſwer, threatned him with longer Impriſonment. Alas, alas, ſaith he, though I ſhould rot in Priſon, yet ſhall you ſtill find me the ſame man.

Mat. 10. 32.

He could ſay the New Teſtament by heart, and was ſo prompt therein in all his anſwers, that the people who heard him, ſaid if he were ſuffered to ſpeak, he would convert all the City of Paris.

Being come to the place where he was to ſuffer, the Executioner would not take the pains to help him from off the Cart, but tumbled him down with his head forward. Notwithſtanding all this and other Cruelties, he manfully overcame the ſame with invincible Conſtancy. And when they pulled off his Clothes, he was heard to ſay intelligibly, How happy, how happy, O how happy am I! with his eyes ſtill lifted up to Heaven.

He was burned in the place called Maubert, nigh to the City of Paris, the 11. of March, 1559.

A notable Speech uttered by Anne du Burg, Counſellor for the King in Parliament, in the Month of June, Anno 1559.

AMong the reſt there was a Counſellor called Anne du Burg, a man of ſingular underſtanding and knowledge, bred and nurſed up in the boſom of the Church of Chriſt. This man having rendred thanks to God, for moving the Kings heart to be preſent at the deciſion of ſo weighty a cauſe as that of Religion is, and having exhorted himſelf well to conſider thereof, being the Cauſe of Chriſt himſelf, which of good right ought to be maintained by Princes, ſpake boldly thereto, as God gave him utterance: It is not, ſaith he, a matter of ſmall conſequence, to condemn ſuch as in the midſt of the fiery flames call upon the Name of Jeſus Chriſt. This I do but note here by the way, becauſe the conſequence is touched before by Maſter John Foxe, where he mentions the terrible end of ſuch as were Perſecutors of the Truth.

Only one thing more touching the ſaid Anne du Burg I could not here omit, and it is this; A certain woman being Priſoner (for the ſame Cauſe) right over againſt him, had a little window in her Chamber which opened towards that where Mr. Du Burg lay; from whence either by words or ſigns (when ſhe was not otherwiſe letted) ſhe encouraged him to perſevere conſtantly in the Truth; by whom he was ſo comforted, that the ſame Du Burg, being importuned by ſome of his Friends to recant, uſed theſe words: Nay, I trow not, ſaid he, for a woman hath taught me my Leſſon, how I ought to carry my ſelf in this buſineſs to which God hath called me: feeling in himſelf, as it ſeemed, the force and power of the godly admonitions of this poor woman.

In the Hiſtory of the Martyrs mention is made of one Peter Arundian, whoſe conſtancy was ſo admirable in ſuffering the extremity of death, that it was the means to imbolden this worthy Counſellor Anne du Burg, with others, to ſuffer for the Cauſe of the Goſpel.

Whoſe godly zeal was ſuch, as that her ſtory may not (as I think) be well omitted, but fully ſet down as I find it recorded in the Volume of the French Martyrs. Her name was Margaret Rich, who ſuffered the nineteenth of Auguſt in the place called Maubert, not far from the City of Paris in France.

Chriſtian women, ſaith the Hiſtorian, behold here the courage and zeal of this Margaret your Siſter, who is ſet before you for a pattern to imitate: ſhe encouraged both great and ſmall, who at the ſame time were Priſoners with her.

Margaret Rich was born in Paris, the wife of Anthony Ricant Bookſeller, dwelling in Paris, in the place called the Mount of Saint Hillary, at the ſign of the great Quail. This woman was as vertuouſly diſpoſed as could be; ſhe had gotten ſome ſmall inſight into the myſtery of iniquity, by means of her husband, who yet ſuffered her to obſerve the Superſtitions of Popery, without urging her any further; for he was a man indifferent in the matter of Gods Service: but yet her Conſcience gave her, that knowing her courſe to be evil, it was not ſufficient to forſake that, unleſs ſhe did cleave to the contrary good which leads to life and ſalvation, namely to ſerve God according to his Word. Underſtanding then, that there were godly meetings of good Chriſtians, which aſſembled together in the City, ſhe found the means to come in amongſt them, and profited ſo well thereby, that ſhe reſolved in her ſelf never to go again to Maſs, but to dye rather.

At length, being hardly uſed by her husband becauſe of this her ſudden change, he threatned her ſo far as to carry her himſelf to the Maſs, (the next day which was Eaſter Sunday) rather than that ſhe ſhould not go. After ſhe had endured much from this man, who would have her to play the diſſembler, ſhe to preſerve her ſelf therefrom, being alſo afraid of her husbands fury, upon Eaſter-day withdrew her ſelf to a friends houſe of hers: thinking it ſafer to diſpleaſe her husband, than God, to whom ſhe had dedicated her ſelf.

This day being paſt, becauſe ſhe would not over-long abſent her ſelf from her own home, ſhe determined to return back again to him, whom God had bound and conjoyned her with, though ſhe could not but foreſee the great evils and inconveniences which would follow thereupon, in regard of her ſaid husbands crooked diſpoſition. She came no ſooner home, but ſhe was diſcovered by the Curate of S. Hillary, committed Priſoner, and brought into the Conſciergery. They asked her where ſhe had kept her Eaſter: ſhe without feigning told them, ſhe abſented her ſelf from home, that ſhe might abide a while with ſome of her loving Friends, leſt ſhe ſhould be urged to prophane the Supper of the Lord, as others uſually did; and therefore had kept the ſame according to Gods Ordinance, in the Aſſembly of faithful and devout Chriſtians. Being asked whether indeed ſhe had been preſent at thoſe ſecret Meetings: ſhe anſwered, Yea, and eſteemed her ſelf happy that ever ſhe came among them. And thus being queſtioned by the Councel, with other Priſoners about the Maſs, Purgatory, Auricular Confeſſion, and ſuch other points, ſhe freely told them what ſhe had learned concerning the ſame out of Gods Word; ſo as the fifth of May ſhe was ordered to be ſent to the Biſhop or his Official, to ſee if by any means ſhe might be reclaimed. But the Official prevailing nothing with her, becauſe ſhe perſiſted conſtant in the profeſſion of the Truth, he pronounced Sentence againſt her, declaring her to be a pertinacious and obſtinate Heretick; yea, ſuch a one as was to be redelivered over to the Secular Power, and thence to be ſent back to the Conſciergery.

Being brought back into the Court, certain Doctors and others were ſent to reaſon with her: yet her faith for all that ſtaggered not, but remained victorious, notwithſtanding all their batteries laid againſt it.

Then by the Sentence of the Court ſhe was condemned to be carried in a Dung-cart to the place called Maubert, a gagg to be put into her mouth, and there to be burned and conſumed to aſhes. But before ſhe ſhould ſuffer death, ſhe was ſentenced to be put to the extraordinary Torture, to make her confeſs whom ſhe knew, and was converſant withal, and to name the Houſe where ſhe received the Communion: yet did this woman undergo all theſe her afflictions, with incredible joy, ſinging Pſalms, and praiſing God continually: ſhe was never ſeen to ſhrink at her impriſonment, ſhe daily exhorted the women who were Priſoners with her, and comforted them. Such of the Martyrs as went from the Conſciergery to ſuffer death, paſſed by the Chamber where ſhe lay, yet was ſhe not diſheartned to ſee them in the hands of their Executioners, but cried to them, exhorting them to rejoyce, and with patience to bear the reproach of Chriſt. Anno 1559.

But to return to the manner of her death; after Sentence ſhe was led to the Chappel, as the manner is; yet ſhe ceaſed not all the way to exhort the people, and to ſing Pſalms, till ſhe was put into a Dung-cart to be conveyed to the place of Execution. The renown of her conſtancy was ſo famous from the beginning of her troubles, that no ſmall multitude of people were gathered together in the ſtreets, for the deſire they had to behold her: God ſo appointing that the great and more than ordinary graces of his Spirit (which were in this woman) might be manifeſted before ſo great a confluence of Spectators and Eye-witneſſes. She paſſed on then, as it were triumphing, through the midſt of this Aſſembly, not ſhewing any ſign of the fear of death, but with a freſh colour and cheerful countenance paſſed on with her eyes lifted up to Heaven, nor did her Gagg ſo diſfigure her, but that ſhe ſhewed an amiable aſpect upon all that viewed her. So as even the rude and obſtinate Multitude admired her, ſaying one to another, Do you not ſee how this Heretick ſmiles and laughs?

Coming to the place of her Martyrdom, they told her, if ſhe would relent, ſhe ſhould be ſtrangled. She anſwered, That her Reſolution was ſo rightly founded upon the Word of God, that ſhe never meant to change. And to let them ſee that Death terrified her not, ſhe began to diſrobe her ſelf without troubling the Hangman at all. Being hoiſed up in the air, they asked her again, if ſhe would not accept of the grace which the Court offered her, to be ſtrangled. She gave them a ſign, that ſhe would not. Then was the fire kindled, and ſo ſhe yielded up her Soul into the hands of God.

How one that was naturally deaf helped himſelf.

IT is recorded of John Beſſroy a Lock-ſmith, dwelling in Paris, that he had a long time behaved himſelf very religiouſly, never denying his Houſe for Chriſtian Meetings, what danger ſoever might enſue thereupon. He had an incredible deſire to profit by the preaching of the Goſpel. And therefore being hindered by a natural infirmity of deafneſs to underſtand what was ſpoken, he uſed this help, commanding a Lad which he kept to hearken to the Sermon attentively, and at his return home made the ſaid Boy to tell him in his ear all that he had heard. Inſomuch that he became exceedingly expert in the knowledge of the Truth, wherein he perſiſted conſtantly to the death, and was (after he had received the extraordinary Torture) burned for the ſame in the place called the Grave, in the Month of September, Anno 1549.

He was exceedingly maligned of his neighbours for his piety, but eſpecially becauſe he had a little Infant of his baptized ſecretly, and then for working upon a light Holiday, which was the cauſe of his apprehenſion and death.

Another Relation of Anne du Burg.

Du Burg being asked if he had conferred with any about certain Articles formerly mentioned, anſwered, That he had conferred with his Books, but eſpecially the holy Scriptures.

Having framed a Confeſſion of his Faith which he intended to have preſented to the Court of Parliament, certain Counſellers which were Advocates in the ſaid Court, pretending Friendſhip towards him, being yet but time-ſervers, ſhewing themſelves alſo diſcontented therewith, laboured with him to make another Confeſſion, not directly contrary to the Truth, but ſomewhat ambiguous and doubtful, ſo as it might give ſatisfaction to his Judges. Du Burg having of a long time reſiſted, was in a manner overcome (by their intreaties) to conſent to their counſel; telling him, it ſufficed that himſelf underſtood his own true meaning, though ambiguouſly expreſſed; as alſo that his Judges would not ſtand ſtrictly to examine ſuch a Confeſſion as had only an outward appearance of conſenting to their Doctrine. Now this diſguiſed Confeſſion was no ſooner come into the hands of his Judges, but great hopes were conceived of his inlargement. But when the Aſſembly had got a true Copy thereof, they were greatly grieved, being more careful of the ſaving his ſoul, of Gods glory, and the edification of his Church, than of ſuch a deliverance, which could not be obtained without great diſhonour to God.

And

Anno 1559

And therefore they gave order to M. Auguſtin * Marlorate to write a large diſcourſe concerning the duty of ſuch as were called of God to bear witneſs to his eternal truth before the Magiſtrate; wherein were alſo ſet down Gods threatnings and Judgments againſt ſuch as either directly or indirectly in what kind ſoever did diſavow the ſame. Exhorting him more highly to prize the Glory of God, than his own liberty; the truth of the Goſpel, than a ſhort and tranſitory life. That it beſeemed him not now to give over, having already made ſo happy a beginning, and ſo good a progreſs in his Chriſtian courſe. That the report of his conſtancy was ſpread not only through the Kingdom of France, but throughout all Chriſtendom. That he had been a means to confirm many weak ones; and cauſed others to enquire after the means of Salvation. That the eyes of all were fixed on him, to expect the manner of his coming out of Priſon. So as if now through fear, or faint heartedneſs he ſhould enterpriſe ought that might contradict his firſt confeſſion, he would thus become an occaſion of much ſcandal and offence. And there exhorted him to give glory to God, to edifie his Church, aſſuring him that God would never leave nor forſake him. Theſe Letters wrought in the Conſcience of Du. Burga ſenſe of his Sin: for which asking pardon of God, without any further delay, he ſent a petition to his Judges, in which retracting this his laſt Confeſſion he proteſted to ſtand unto his firſt.

* Of the manner of whoſe death you ſhall read hereafter.

Slanders raiſed by the Sorboniſts againſt the Proteſtants of Roan in France, and what was the iſſue thereof.

THree Doctors of the Sorboniſts, whoſe Names were Secard, Columbell, and Francillon, in their Collations to their Pariſhioners accuſed thoſe of the Religion with their wonted ſlanders, as, that they committed Whordom one with another after the candles were put out, and were taught to rebel againſt their King and Governors; which Governors and theſe Sorboniſts accuſed to connive and hold with them, inciting the people to run upon thoſe of the Religion, ſince the Magiſtrates forbare to do their duty. But here God catched the wiſe in their own craftineſs; for by means hereof many began to look into theſe matters whereof the Godly were accuſed; Namely, to enquire both what they did and ſpake in their Aſſemblies. Where ſeeing and finding the clean contrary to theſe accuſations before mentioned, they were drawn to abhor theſe lying Spirits, and by little and little came to cleave unto the ſaid Aſſemblies themſelves; yea many who were lewdly given, and came in among them to another end.

But theſe accuſers, not content herewith, went in the night into Churches, not ſparing to deface the Images that ſtood therein, and then charged the Proteſtants to be the only actors thereof. Whereupon the Cardinal of Burbon Archbiſhop of Roan was often fain to repair them with many Ceremonies. But at laſt a Monk of Magdalens Hoſpital was taken with the manner of breaking down theſe Images in the Churchyard of Saint Mark. For which he received no correction, excuſing the matter, by ſaying, that whatſoever he had done therein proceeded from a good meaning. Yet among all theſe diſorders the Church of Roan ſtill ſubſiſted, though not without great peril and danger.

The Story of a Lockſmith, Martyr, who being dry had holy Water given him to drink.

ABout this time was a Lockſmith burnt in the City of Agen, upon the clamours and Seditious Sermons of a Frier called Melchior Flavin, who denounced this Lockſmith to be an Heretick, becauſe he had made a Chriſtian and good confeſſion, and therefore purſued him unto the death. A little before he was to dye, Redon the Lieutenant of Agen asked him if he would drink. Sir, ſaith the Priſoner, if you pleaſe to give me drink, I will. Then the Lieutenant brought him a glaſs of Water, of which he drank a little. Now, ſaid the other unto him, what haſt thou drunk? the Priſoner anſwered, Water. Saith the other, Thou haſt drunk holy-water, which I gave thee to drive the Devil out of thee. I know, ſaith the poor Man, that every Creature of God is good in its own nature; but had you told me it had been ſuch as now you ſay it is, I would not have drunk it, for it is defiled with Idolatry. At this anſwer the Lieutenant hurled the glaſs of Water at the poor Mans face with ſuch force, that the glaſs breaking to pieces hurt him. For which inhumane act he was reproved by his fellows, and amerced to pay ten pounds. But the Lockſmith took his death patiently, and endured it conſtantly.

The miſerable death of a Conſul who was both an Accuſer and a Judge.

JOſias Simler, a learned Divine of our time, in the Life of Maſter Henry Bullinger, a worthy Servant of God, and a Faithful Miniſter of the Church of Zuricke, recordeth an Hiſtory which he ſaith hapned in a City of Suitzerland among the papiſts, An. 1559. He expreſſeth neither the Conſuls Name, nor the City, the thing being ſufficiently known to the Inhabitants thereabouts. This Conſul, being a rich and potent Man, intending to build a brave and magnificent Houſe, ſent far and near for the rareſt and moſt exquiſite Workmen he could hear tell of. Amongſt the reſt he ſent to the City of Trent (ſo much renowned among Papiſts in regard of the laſt Councel the Pope had there) for an excellent carver and Maſter Builder called John, a Man very Religious, and a lover of the Truth: for which cauſe the ſaid John refuſed at the firſt to go thither, alledging for himſelf that he was of a contrary Religion to that which the Conſul profeſſed, and therefore could not ſafely inhabit among ſuch as would obſerve his contempt of the Maſs and their other Ceremonies. The Conſul promiſed him ſafety in reſpect of his perſon, and that he ſhould be forced to nothing againſt his Conſcience. Upon this his promiſe John came and wrought a long time with the Conſul: but when he came to demand his wages they entred into ſome terms of diſcontent. In the end at the command of this Conſul, John was committed to Priſon, and by the ſame Conſul accuſed for a ſleighter of the Romiſh Religion, yea, to have ſpoken unreverently thereof; wherefore he was Condemned to be beheaded.

As they led him to Execution he went towards it with undaunted courage, and dyed very conſtantly; proteſting in the preſence of all the Spectators, that he moſt gladly laid down this life preſent, for the maintenance of that Religion whereof he had made profeſſion, believing undoubtedly that it was the Truth; but added, that the Conſul who was the Author of his Death ſhould himſelf dye within three days, and appear before Gods Judgment Seat to render an account of his Sentence. Which came to paſs according as this pious Man foretold: for the Conſul being then in the prime of his youth, and of an healthful diſpoſition of Body, from that day began to be aſſailed firſt with an exceeding heat, and then with an extraordinary cold; and thus was he ſmitten with a new kind of ſickneſs, ſo as within three days he followed him, of whom he had bin both the moſt unjuſt Accuſer and Judge.

The ſpeech of a poor Porter called Chevillon, whipped for the Truth, and after confined to the Gallies.

BEing whipped thorow the Streets of Romans, he ſaid to him that laſhed him, Lay on my friend, lay it on and ſpare not, chaſtiſe this Fleſh which hath ſo often rebelled againſt his God: thinking himſelf happy that he ſuffered in ſo good a quarrel.

The miſerable end of one called Aubeſpine, a Counſellor of Grenolle, and a perſecutor.

AFter theſe Bloody Perſecutions, this Aubeſpine fell in love with a Gentlewoman, and therein gave ſuch way to his paſſion, that he forſook his calling, caſting off all care of his own welfare, to follow her whitherſoever ſhe went. But ſhe diſregarding him, he took it ſo to heart, that he neglected his own perſon: by reaſon whereof ſwarming full of lice, he could by no means be rid of them; for they increaſed upon him, and came out at all the parts of his Body, as they are ſeen to iſſue out of a dead carkaſs. It was not long before his death, but feeling himſelf ſmitten with Gods hand, he began to deſpair of his mercy, and to ſhorten his days he concluded to famiſh himſelf: in the mean while the lice gathered ſo thick about his throat, as if they would ſtrangle him. Some beholding this ſo lamentable aſpectacle, being much moved therewith in commiſerating his eſtate, agreed to make him eat whether he would or no, forcing him to take ſome broth, or a Cullis, which he reſiſting with all his might, they bound his Arms, gagging his Mouth with a ſtick to keep it open, whilſt they put ſomewhat thereinto. Being thus gagged he died like an inraged Beaſt, with the abundance of lice which crept towards his Throat. And thus it was ſpoken even by ſome of the Romiſh Religion, that look what torment he had deviſed for the Miniſters of Valence, ſending them gagged to their Execution, he was by the juſt Judgment of God puniſhed after a ſort in the ſame kind.

Gag them ſaid he, for if we ſuffer them to ſpeak, they will do more harm at their death than in their life: which practiſe was not only liked but executed.

John Ponce of Leon a Gentleman of Sevil in Spain.

AMong thoſe that with a firm faith ſealed the truth of the Goſpel with their Blood in the Spaniſh Inquiſition at Sevil the four and twentieth of September 1559. Don John Ponce of Leon, the Son of Roderic Ponce of Leon Count of Baylen, may of good right deſerve to be placed in the firſt rank. For beſides the Noble Race from whence he ſprang, the Lord had indued him with ſingular vertues well beſeeming ſo worthy and Chriſtian a Gentleman. Thoſe who were of his familiar acquaintance, and did well obſerve his converſation, gave this teſtimony of his ſincerity, that his like was not known in Spain of a long time, in that a Man of his Eſtate was ſo forward to exerciſe his charity towards ſuch in whom he ſaw but any good inclination to Religion: Yea, his yearly revenues, which were alſo great, were not only imployed that way, but he ſeemed to exceed the chiefeſt of his Rank, in yielding his help and aid towards the relief of the poor. All which the World taking knowledge of, attributed (as it is wont) that which proceeded from his ſo Chriſtian bounty, rather unto waſtfulneſs and prodigality.

The Inquiſitors of Sevil envying the ſweet ſavour of ſuch a Life and converſation as he led before them, flowing from an inward taſte of true Religion, ſpared him no more than thoſe of meaner condition. For having gotten him into their hands, they left no means unaſſayed, but uſed the utmoſt of their devices to weaken his Faith. The truth is, that at the firſt this noble perſonage was much perplexed, but at the laſt the Lord fortified him ſo with his Grace, that he was ſet in the firſt round of the guilty. Concerning his Sentence (howſoever this holy Tribunal mixed the ſame with many untruths to blear the eyes of the ignorant withal) yet may it eaſily be collected out of the tenor of his Sentence, what he confeſſed and profeſſed.

For in the ſaid Sentence were read his Articles for which he was principally condemned to the Fire; Namely, That he abhorred the Idolatry which is committed in adoring the Sacrament, calling it a breaden God. Alſo, that when he met it as it was carried through the Streets, either in ſolemnity or to ſome ſick Body, he paſſed into another Street going apace before it, that he might give no reverence unto it. That coming often into the Cathedral Church where Maſs was ſaid, he turned his back towards the Prieſt, becauſe he would not ſee him elevate his God. That he uſed much to walk to and fro about the Scaffold where the Faithful were executed, with a kind of delight, coveting to ſtand near unto them, that by accuſtoming himſelf in beholding the place and torments he ſaw others indure, he might be the better emboldned to ſuffer the like when God ſhould call him thereunto.

Theſe were in effect the Articles which were inſerted in his Sentence, a part whereof alſo was drawn out of the Confeſſion of his Faith, the ſum being this: Firſt. That a Man is juſtified and accepted of God only for the merit of Jeſus Chriſt apprehended by Faith. That the Popes Pardons and Indulgences ſent from Rome are meer deluſions, and that the Pope is Antichriſt, &c. That it was the deſire of his heart to be burned, or to ſuffer ſome other extremity for the maintenance of the Faith which he profeſſed. That he endeavoured to imploy the goods and riches wherewith God had bleſſed him, only for the defence and further inlarging of the Doctrine of the Goſpel; Yea, to forſake life, Wife, Children, and all, for the ſame: to which end he had daily ſent up many hearty Prayers to God. Anno 1559.

In all this buſineſs, the holy Tribunal laboured by cunning devices to obſcure this Confeſſion, cauſing it to be ſuited that he held not out to the end, with many other like inventions to make the people believe they had turned him to their Law: but herein they ſhewed themſelves not well adviſed, in that they belied both him and themſelves. For in publiſhing his crimes and offences with the manner of his death, what did they elſe but declare and manifeſt the truth of the fact, which plainly appeareth in theſe words of the Sentence; John Ponce of Leon, burned for an Heretick and obſtinate Lutheran, &c. Which words made their fraudulent dealing apparent to ſuch as doubted any way of the conſtancy and perſeverance of this pious Chriſtian Knight.

John Gonzalve a Preacher in Sevil, Martyr: with whom were executed two of his Siſters, their Mother remaining in Priſon, reſerved to act her part in another Tragedy.

Gonzalve a renowned Preacher throughout the Country of Andalouſie, was alſo led in this Inquiſitorial triumph: who forſaking his School Divinity, in which learning he excelled all his fellows, gave himſelf wholly to the ſtudy of the holy Scriptures, according to the purity whereof his whole converſation was ordered, both inwardly and outwardly. He was often obſerved in all his Sermons to aym at this mark, namely to deliver Mens minds from that blind conceit of meriting by works; that ſo way might be made for juſtification only by Faith in Chriſt Jeſus, and deeply to ingraft into them the knowledge of the ſole merit of his plenary ſatisfaction. For which his labour he expected to receive from Man the ſame reward which all the true Servants of God had in their times.

Being then ſeized upon by thoſe of this Spaniſh Inquiſition, he yielded a reaſon of his Faith in that Purity and ſincerity, as did the aforeſaid John Ponce; who as they had been friends and of familliar acquaintance, ſo were they joyned together in the ſame confeſſion, and led to the ſame execution together. The night before he ſuffered he had a ſore conflict with an old Sect of Prieſts, who were of the Inquiſition, but in the end he cauſed them to return vanquiſhed and aſhamed. He was led from the Caſtle and Priſon of Trion with his two Siſters unto the place appointed for his end, that they with him might drink of the ſame Cup, leaving his Mother and one of his Brethren behind him in Priſon, reſerved to be executed when their turn came about. He never ſhewed the leaſt ſign of being diſmaid; but contrariwiſe with great conſtancy and courage of heart ſtanding above all the people, to whom he had formerly preached and delivered the pattern of ſound Doctrine; He began with a loud voice to recite the Pſalm which begins thus, O Lord my Rock be not thou ſilent to me, &c. not changing his countenance at all upon the Scaffold, though they had gagged him there, becauſe he comforted and freely exhorted one of his Siſters to be conſtant: whoſe ſpirit he feared might otherwiſe faint. Hearkening very attentively to his Sentence which was there again recited, he was not any thing at all abaſhed or troubled thereat, but took his ſolemn degrading patiently, receiving the marks and garments of his confeſſion, to wit, his yellow Robe, an Haltar, and a painted Miter, with a joyful and a chearful heart; knowing that howſoever they were diſgraceful in the eyes of the World, yet he eſteemed of them as ornaments of honour in the ſight of God and his Angels, abhorring his Maſſing attire, whereof they had diſrobed him.

When the time was come that thoſe which ſhould be burned were brought to the place of Execution, they were every one commanded to recite the Articles of their belief, which they willingly did: but when they came to the Article, I believe the holy Catholick Church, they were bidden to add this word Romane, whereupon they were ſilent: then, did the Monks and Friers importune Gonzalves Siſters, and other Chriſtian Women who were to be burned with them, to repeat the

ſaid

Anno 1559. ſaid word Romane; who anſwered they would, if they might hear John Gouzalve pronounce it (not that they intended ſo to do, but being confident of his renouncing the ſame) hoping by this means to free him of his gagge, and ſo to obtain the liberty of ſpeech, by which he might render a reaſon of his Faith, and ſo of this Article among the reſt. Being ungagged, the firſt word he ſpake was, that they ſhould be of good courage, and not to add one word more than what they had recited. Upon this their laſt confeſſion they were forthwith ſtrangled, as the Fire was kindled upon them, to burn and conſume them.

Iſabel of Vacnia, Mary of Viroes, Cornella Mary of Bohorques, and Jane her Siſter burnt at Sevil in Spain.

AMong all the moſt ancient profeſſors of true Religion that had their abode in the Church of God at Sevil (who in a manner were all waſted by the Tyranny of the Inquiſition) the power of faith appeared in theſe four women above ſpecified. Now howſoever they were all endued with ſingular piety and godlineſs, yet the younger of them named Bohorques, being under the age of one and twenty, was inſtructed above the reſt in holy Letters, and by dayly reading and conference with good and Godly Men, wherewith Sevil at that time was well furniſhed, ſhe had obtained ſuch promptneſs in the knowledge of the Texts of the old and new Teſtament, that many who were eſteemed learned in that City, have confeſſed they were often put to a non-plus by ſuch reaſons as ſhe alledged out of the Scriptures.

As touching the firſt of theſe, Vaenia; her Houſe was a School or Colledge of piety, being the place alſo where all the meetings were, to publiſh the praiſes of God. No evil example was to be ſeen there, nor ought that ſavoured of feigned holineſs, but ſuch as proceeded from uprightneſs of Heart and Sincerity. But the Inquiſitors, who always lye in wait to take hold, though but with the leaſt threed of their net, caught theſe four Women with other their Neighbours, in the ſame, when God knew they were fitted for the confeſſion of his holy truth. Now as the Latin Tongue did much aid the ſaid Mary Bohorques to retain her in reading of the Holy Bible, whilſt the Popes Tyranny forbad the ſame to be read in the vulgar Tongue; ſo ſhe came quickly to be invironed with the more adverſaries during her captivity. Doctor Egidus (whoſe memory was renowned throughout Spain among all ſuch as truly worſhipped God) had been her Inſtructor, and was wont to ſay of this Maid, that he always went from her more learned by conferring with her, then when he came to her.

Would to God many maids in theſe days might deſerve to be ſo commended.

During her Captivity there came many Monks to diſpute and reaſon with her, above all, thoſe of the order of Saint Dominick, who were enforced to admire the Spirit of Wiſdom, wherewith this Damoſel was inſpired, as alſo at the pregnant anſwers which ſhe gave to their demands. She ſuffered ſo many kinds of torments, that by the violence thereof they forced her to nominate her Siſter Jane Bohorques, and to confeſs that ſhe had often been preſent at the Preaching of the Goſpel. This Jane was the Wife of one called Frances Varquis, Lord of Higueras, a Man of excellent Note. She was ſix Months gone with Child when ſhe was committed to Priſon, and therefore was not ſo ſtraightly uſed, nor hardly dealt with all as other of the Priſoners were. But within eight days after her delivery, her Child was taken from her, and then giving her no longer time of breathing, they began to deal with her after the guiſe of the Spaniſh Inquiſition, forming her Inditement agreeable to the rigour and ſeverity thereof. To which her extremity ſhe had comfort of none, but of a vertuous young Maiden, who afterwards was burned for the profeſſion of the truth: which maid being one day brought by the Inſitors to the torture, was in a manner diſmembred, and then laid upon a Bed of Straw, whereon both were laid in the Priſon, ſerving rather to vex then any way to eaſe them, yet did the other yield her all the relief which her ſelf or the place could poſſibly afford. Scarce had this poor Damoſell recovered ſome eaſe after theſe intolerable bruiſes, but this aforeſaid Jane Bohorques taſted of the ſame bitter Cup, where ſhe was ſo cruelly tormented on the Burro, as they call it, which is a bench or form whereon they give the Towel or Napkin, that the cords pierced through the Fleſh into the Bones, both of her Arms and Leggs: and in this pitiful plight the Blood guſhing out, ſhe was returned to her Priſon, where within eight days after it pleaſed God to free her out of the clutches of theſe bloodthirſty, into his eternal happineſs and Glory. Now they were very loth it ſhould be bruited abroad that this Gentle, ſo well born and delicately bred, ſhould dye under ſo cruel Torments: but they who were the beholders of ſuch inhumanity could not be ſilent. Yet theſe good Fathers, being under no controle, take their liberty thus to imbrue their hands in the Blood of Gods Saints.

Her Siſter Mary being led with the reſt of her fellows to the place where they were to ſuffer, ſhe went thereto with ſuch joy and gladneſs, as one triumphing over her enemies: which the whole tribunal obſerving, and fearing leſt others would be imboldned by her conſtan defence of the truth and ſinging of Pſalms as ſhe went, gagged her. And when ſhe came to the place of Execution, that they might obſcure the glory of this Heavenly conſtancy they preſently ſtrangled her.

Julian Hernaudes burned in Sevil in Spain, Anno 1559

THis Julian, who for his ſmall ſtature was called, le petit, was Servant to John Piers a Spaniard, and Miniſter of the Goſpel in Geneva, where, through much reſort of many learned Men thither, Religion flouriſhed. At which time being moved with Godly zeal, rather then being counſelled thereto, he undertook a buſineſs, which as it was of great importance, ſo of no ſmall peril and imminent danger; for he brought with him thence and cauſed a great number of Books of the holy Scriptures in Spaniſh to be conveied into Spain, earneſtly thirſting after the increaſe and growth of the light of the Goſpel in his Native Country; which Godly enterprize of his the Lord ſo guided, that he brought the ſame to a proſperous Iſſue; Yea, which is yet the more admirable, even within the Walls of Sevil, notwithſtanding all the watch and ward the Officers of the Inquiſition uſed.

Theſe Books to the poor Chriſtians there were welcomed with no leſs joyfulneſs, then the rain when it ſhowers down upon the parched ground. For the Goſpel by means hereof grew, and was enlarged; ſo as the Lord thereby reaped a very great Harveſt. But the news hereof coming to the ears of the holy Fathers, firſt, by the indiſcretion and fool-hardineſs of one more zealous then wiſe, and then by the treachery of wily ſpies of the Inquiſition, who counterfeited a profeſſion of the Goſpel, meerly to enſnare and betray the ſincere profeſſors thereof, by their diſloyal practiſes: no ſooner had theſe venerable Fathers, or hunters rather, gotten a ſent of this game where it lay, but coming violently upon them, took the Dam with her young ones. By which great ſurpriſal the whole flock was ſcattered; but ſo many was the number of them even at their firſt apprehenſion, that it amaſed the huntſmen themſelves.

Pſal. 72. 6.

Deut. 21. 6.

For the Priſons were ſo repleniſhed, that they were fain to borrow private Houſes to ſhut up the Priſoners in. At once they burned twenty and upwards of them together, whilſt in Sevil they detained in bonds 800. Amongſt whom this Julian was one of the firſt which they met withal, whom they kept in Priſon above three years laden with Irons: during which time, every day afforded new ſpectacles of catching their prey. But ſuch was his wonderfull conſtancy, that he wearied his Tormentors from vexing him any more; ſo as new forces never failed this little lean Body, to ſuffer any torture the Inquiſition could deviſe. He was naturally of a chearful Spirit, and God ſo increaſed the ſame in him, that he came from the torture with no leſs courage then when he was wont to come unto it: ſo as neither pain of the rack, nor the threats of the Officers, nor yet the cruelties they exerciſed upon him could withhold him from manifeſting to his Priſon-fellows, as he went along by them his conqueſt and victory, to the ſhame and reproach of his adverſaries, uſing to ſay in Spaniſh; Theſe Hypocrites are gone away confounded, no leſs then Wolves which have been long hunted.

See what great increaſe God can bring out of weak beginnings.

Such honor have all Gods Saints.

After

After many fierce encounters and ſharp diſputes with the Monks and others of the Popiſh crew, being brought out of the Priſon into the Caſtle, there to receive the mark and livery of Chriſt the Son of God, with the reſt of the Priſoners, it was reported, that he with a bold courage and ſetled countenance thus ſpake unto them, Courage my valiant and conſtant Brethren, now is the hour come in which, as the true Champions of Jeſus Chriſt, we muſt witneſs his truth before Men, and for a ſhort trial for his ſake we ſhall triumph with him for ever and ever. But the Officers of the Inquiſition interrupted him inſtantly, by putting a gagg in his Mouth, with which he continued untill a little before he dyed. Mounting then upon the Scaffold where he was to ſuffer, by manifold ſigns he ſhewed the conſtancy and ſtedfaſtneſs of his Faith, which by words he could not. For in aſcending up the ſteps of the Scaffold, kneeling down he kiſſed them; and being faſtned to the Stake, invironed and compaſſed round about with Fagots, he ſundry times bowed his head within the pile of Wood, as if he deſired to dye by Fire, and ſo rendred up his Soul into the hands of God, to the great admiration of the Spectators, and the animating of his fellow Martyrs who were to ſuffer with him. When he was to dye, a certain Doctor called Ferdinando Rodrigo, contrary to his intention, made the Faith of this our little Julian much more glorious: for he thinking by terrifying him with the apprehenſion of the preſent torment he was to endure, obtained ſo much favour of the Sheriff, as to permit him to ſpeak; thinking thereby to give the people ſome intimation of his recantation; which is the utmoſt triumph that theſe holy Fathers of the Inquiſition thirſt after: but it proved clean contrary: for Julian recovering liberty of ſpeech, did yield a more clear evidence and demonſtration of his Faith than formerly he had done, and ſo confuted this Doctor Rodrigo (calling him a Seducer, and one that ſpake againſt his Conſcience) that by and by in an outrage, to cover his ſhame, he cryed out like a Bedlam; Muſt Spain, which commands ſilence to ſo many, be thus troubled now with this ſo contemptible a wretch? Kill him, diſpatch him, &c. At which words, the Tormentors being there at a beck, forthwith kindled the Fire upon him.

When the Martyrs were hindred to manifeſt their Faith by ſpeech, yet they would by outward geſtures do it as well as they could.

¶ Now having thus formerly mentioned what tortures are exerciſed upon the Bodies of Gods Saints by the mercileſs Inquiſitors of Spain: and that alſo upon thoſe of their own Nation: it ſhall not be much from the purpoſe if from thence we take occaſion more particularly here to relate unto thee (Chriſtian Reader) with what inhumanity ſuch are uſed who for the cauſe of Religion fall into the hands of theſe carnal Tyrants, according as I find the ſame ſet forth at large by my Author, whoſe footſteps in the whole Work I endeavour to follow.

WHen they purpoſe to torture any one, the Jaylor is commanded to bring forth his Priſoner into the accuſtomed place where it is to be given: which place is under the earth, and very obſcure. Then going thorow many turnings, and thorow ſundry doors, ſo as the horrible cryes of thoſe who are there tortured can in no wiſe be heard, there is a ſeat prepared for the Inquiſitors on high, with a Regiſter alſo to behold that tragical act. The torches being lighted, thoſe who are to act their parts in this woful Tragedy are brought in: the Tormentor who attends their coming, is covered all over with a black Garment, cloſe to his Body, on his Head a black Hood, which hides his face from being ſeen; having only two or three holes made therein for himſelf to ſee and breath at; and all this is the way to terrifie the poor Patient, who beholdeth as it were a grim Devil ready to torment him. Theſe Fathers being ſet upon their ſeat begin again to charge the Priſoner voluntarily to confeſs the truth: which if he refuſe to do, and if it then happen that an Arm or any other Member of his Body be broken, or that they dye on the torture (for that is all the favour he hath ſhewed him) they make it his own fault and none of theirs. After, they have uſed all the terrible threats that can be, they cauſe him to be ſtripped ſtark naked, wheher Man, Woman, or Maid, though they be never ſo modeſt and baſhful. Many having fallen into their Bloody fingers, thus to have their ſhame diſcovered to the ſight of others, was more grievous than all their torments beſides which they indured. Laying aſide then all Humanity in unclothing them, they put upon them (a ſhame it is to ſpeak it) linnen breeches, as if their ſecrets parts were better and more honeſtly covered with breeches than with a ſhirt or ſmock, or as if the torments they meant to put them to would not pierce deep enough as well in the one as in the other: with ſuch ſhameleſs ſpectacles the chaſt Inquiſitors fed their Ages, and with ſuch a cruel luſt ſatisfied their infamous and deteſtable virginity. Anno 1559.

The Man or Woman ſtanding naked then, and their nakedneſs covered only with little breeches, as was ſaid, they becken to the Tormentor, ſignifying thereby what kind of torture he is to put them to. For herein, as alſo in many things of a like nature, they have ſome ſecret watch-word or ſign among themſelves; and the Officers being well acquainted therewith can readily diſcern what torments the holy Fathers would have Men put unto, to teach them the Faith of the Roman Church. The moſt uſual are the cords with the pullies, ſinews, fire, and water, of all which we will ſpeak in place convenient. Whilſt they thus ſtand naked, they exhort them once again to tell the truth. If the Patient be to endure the Cord, they tye his hands behind his back, pulling him up eight or ten times, according to the number of twitches limited by the Inquiſitor to the Tormentor; that ſo nothing may be done (there forſooth) without order. At the firſt incounter are reckoned up to him all his Articles; and then, beſides the binding of his hands, they tye his thumbs very hard together with a ſmall Cord, then they tye his hands and thumbs unto a greater Cord, hoiſing him up by a pully very high, which done, they put upon his legs heavy bolts, if he have them not on before: to which are yet added, for the firſt pull, an Iron weight of five and twenty pound, which is hanged to theſe bolts between his feet. Being thus arayed the Tormentor draws him up on high, the Regiſter and the Inquiſitor mixing therewith their former exhortations to confeſs. When he comes touch the pulley with his head, they will him yet then to confeſs: if he obey, they preſently let him down; if not, then they let him hang in this condition, until he have anſwered their demands. Now, after he hath hung thus without making any confeſſion, they let him down, to redouble on his feet the former weight. And then pulling him up again, threaten him to hang till he there dye, if he declare not to them that which they ask of him; commanding the Tormentor to let him hang a long while in the air, that through the heavineſs of the weight which hangs at his feet, all his members and joynts be ſtretched out beyond meaſure. When the Patient through extremity of torment, which he endures, cryes out, they in like ſort cry as loud as they can, that he ſhould now confeſs what he knows: if not, then they let him fall. For when they perceive he continues conſtant, then they command the Officer to let go the Cord, which is as ſoon done as ſpoken, yet not wholly and altogether to the mid way, but to a certain ſtop, which hinders his falling to the ground, by reaſon whereof he receives ſuch a ſudden check, that there is neither nerve, muſcle, ſinew, nor joynt in the Arms or Legs, nor in the whole Body, which are not with extream torture disjoynted and diſplaced; ſo as being thus ſtopped in his fall in the mid way, his Body is pitifully and miſerably ſtretched out.

But yet this ſufficeth not. For if then through their importunity he will confeſs nothing, they augment the weight the third time, and thus in a manner being as good as dead cauſe him to be pulled up: to which cruelty they add railing and reviling ſpeeches, calling him Dog and Heretick, who being obſtinate conceals the truth from them, and therefore deſerves to be left dying there. If the poor creature in regard of his intolerable agony cryeth unto Jeſus Chriſt to help him, and to have mercy upon him (as all ſuch do as ſuffer for the truth) then they ſcoff and mock him, ſaying, Jeſus Chriſt, Jeſus Chriſt, let this Jeſus Chriſt alone a while, and tell us what that Jeſus Chriſt is thou calleſt upon? Confeſs to us that which we demand of thee; the which reſtifies to their Faces how odious and hateful a thing it is unto them to hear ſuch as ſuffer in the quarrel of Chriſt to call upon his name. If the ſorrowful wretch deſire to be let down, promiſing to confeſs and to tell them ſomwhat, they will for all that torment him again. For having pauſed a little, then they tell him that is not all, and ſo continue threatning him with the Strappado as before.

This helliſh Torture beginneth at nine of the Clock, and laſts till noon, or one of the Clock; and when they pleaſe to make an end, then they ask of the Tormentor if he have his other Engines ready, which they do to ſtrike the greater terror into the bruiſed and Martyred Patient, whom they now have in their hands. He anſwers he hath them not there, then they command him to fit and prepare them againſt the next day, and not to fail: we will ſee, ſay they, whether we can fetch the whole truth out of this fellow or no. And at their going out, they comfort the deſolate Soul thus; This ſhall ſuffice for this time, but look between this and tomorrow thou adviſeſt thyſelf well, what thou oughteſt to confeſs, otherwiſe thou art like to dye on the Torture; nor think to eſcape by what thou haſt endured, for that is but as a Bed of Roſes in regard of the torment which is to come. Being gone, the Hangman indeavours to ſet together the joynts of the Patients Leggs and Arms, as well as he can. Then his Clothes being put on, he is brought again into his Priſon, and if he be not able to go, then he is carried thither; and ſometimes this help proves a vexation unto him, in that they churliſhly hale him by his Arms and Leggs. The Jaylor alſo in ſcorn asks of him, if he need a Chirurgion: now if they mean to torture him no more, then he is called for two or three days after, and as he paſſeth from the Priſon, they make him come nigh the door where he was tortured, where the Tormentor preſents himſelf before him in all points as hath formerly been related, that at this very ſight the Priſoner in his paſſage might be put in mind of what he had but a while ſince ſuffered. When he is come before them, there he finds the Inquiſitor, the Regiſter with others ſet in their Seats attending for him, where according to the guiſe, they adjure him to ſpeak the truth: If at that time they can draw nothing out of him, they ſend him to Priſon again. But if he happen to diſcloſe ought ſerving their turn, then they ply him hard to utter all: and thereupon make him turn thence to the Torture, hoping thereby to get ſomething more out of him.

If they purpoſe to exerciſe this their cruelty with all extremity upon the ſame Patient, they ſend for him the third day, whilſt his ſinews and joynts are in the prime of their pain, and ſo renew their horrible threats unto him, to reveal his Hereſies, and thoſe which he had formerly mentioned, and who they be that are of his opinion; otherwiſe he muſt prepare himſelf for the Torture, wherein if he any way miſcarry in his Body, or if death it ſelf do follow, the fault ſhall be his, and not theirs. If he continue unmovable in his mind, they cauſe the Jaylor to bring him to the place of Torture, and there they ſitting in their Tribunal, command him to be ſtripped naked, and then tormented as you have formerly heard. Beſides, as an addition thereto, they tye his thighs and hamſtrings together with a ſmall cord, forcing the ſame ſo with pieces of wood, that the ſaid cords do eat into his very Fleſh; in which extremity they leave him for ſome three or four hours, or as they pleaſe, plying him the while with infinite threats and deriſions, which is all the comfort they miniſter to him in this his miſerable condition.

They have yet another kind of torment, which Juſtices in other places exerciſe upon ſuch as are the moſt notorious offendors, whereof this holy Tribunal make uſe, as fitting well to their cruel humour. They call it the Burno, which is a plank of timber made hollow in form of a gutter or trough, wherein a man may lye on his back; Now juſt where the Back-bone ſhould repoſe it ſelf, there is a round piece of Wood lying overthwart, keeping up the back from reſting in the bottom of the hollow place, ſo as it giveth no reſt to him that is tormented thereon. Now this Trough is ſo framed, that the Heels of him who is put therein lye much higher than his Head. Being put into his Caſe or Coffin, his Leggs, Arms, and Thighs are bound hard with ſmall cords, which by little and little are ſo ſtrained with certain ſticks, that they eat into the Fleſh, yea pierce to the bare Bone. Then they lay a linnen cloth on his face, to hinder his breathing at the noſtrils, whilſt they pour water into his Mouth, which is diſtilled from above by this cloth to a certain quantity, (as it ſeems good to his Judge) not by drops, but ſtreaming down, to cauſe the ſaid cloth to go down into his throat. The poor patient the whilſt lies in this torment as one in a manner dead, not being able either to ſtir or breath. Now when this wet Cloth is pulled out of the depth of his throat, to make him to anſwer unto their demands; If you ſhould behold how Blood and Water comes out together, you would imagine they had plucked the very Bowels out of his Belly: in which woful plight he is held as long as they think good, even until with horrible threats and torments he be returned back again to Priſon.

If they pleaſe to proceed further in adding more torments, within a Month or two after the ſaid cruelties are renewed, either in more terrible or moderate manner, to ſome once, to others to the ſixth time.

This is yet another torment which is peculiar to this holy ſeat of the Inquiſitors. They cauſe a great fire of hot burning Coals to be brought, which they apply nigh unto the Soles of his Feet whom they intend to torment, which are firſt thorowly anointed with greaſe or ſuet, that the heat of the fire may pierce more deeply.

Thus much be ſaid as touching theſe Torments uſed by thoſe cruel Tormentors of the Bloody Inquiſition of Spain upon the Bodies of poor Chriſtians.

A Note of Francis Oliver Chancellor of France.

THis Chancellor, who in the former Perſecutions not behaving himſelf according to a good Conſcience, (being in times paſt ſo far enlightned as to make profeſſion of the truth,) was viſited with a mortal diſeaſe; in which ſickneſs he was obſerved to caſt forth hideous ſighs without ceaſing. In which perplexity the Cardinal of Lorrain came to viſit him, ſtanding aloof off from him. To whom the Chancellor uttered theſe words; Ah Cardinal, thou wilt damn us all. It is alſo reported, that he much and often bewailed the death of Anne du Burg, of whom mention was made heretofore. And thus living a while in this miſerable condition he ended his days.

Gods judgment upon an Apoſtata.

A Papiſt defined by Jaques de Lo.

HAving called the vows of Papiſts papiſtical vows, he was asked what a Papiſt was. He is a Papiſt, ſaid De Lo, who ſquares his actions and converſation according to the Popes Laws. Anno 1560.

Being preſſed by the Papiſts to confeſs whom he knew of the Reformed Religion, he would name none but ſuch as had ſuffered; and withal further added, I entreat you my Brethren in the name of God, that you conceive no ſiniſter opinion as touching me in this behalf: for I am reſolved, by the help of my God (without whoſe aſſiſtance I can do nothing, and with which I can do all things) to ſuffer my Fleſh rather to be rent in pieces, then to reveal any whoſe perſons might thereby be endangered.

Note his admirable conſtancy.

The notable converſion of a notorious evil liver, by Name John Herwin, of Houtkerk in Flanders, Martyr; who by degrees was ſo far brought into Chriſts Fold, that he was called forth to bear witneſs of the Truth, from which he was once as far remote as the Heavens are from the Earth, in the year 1560.

THis John Herwin, born in Geeſtercorn, &c. in the Weſt ſide of Flanders, was of a diſſolute life, ſuch as Souldiers for the moſt part are of; but God having a purpoſe to ſhew forth in him the admirable work of converſion, to draw him to Chriſt, put it into his heart to leave his own Country, and come to the City of London. Being arrived there about Eaſter, the Lord going on with his work brought him by his providence into a Brew-houſe, being a Brewer by his calling, where he met with a Maſter and fellow Servants fearing God; a thing ſeldom ſeen in Men of that Profeſſion, ſeeing ordinarily they are exceſſive drinkers. His Maſter cauſed him oft to reſort to the Dutch Church in the ſaid City of London, where by ordinary hearing of the Word Preached he began firſt to taſt, and after to increaſe more and more in the ſaving knowledge of Chriſt. News coming over, over, that Wars were likely to be in Flanders, cauſed him to leave England, and to return again into his own Country. He came thither at the ſame time that three other Martyrs were there apprehended, but he was not taken with them.

The Bayliff of Furne when he ſaw he could not meet with him, underſtanding that he was at Houſcot, advertiſed the Bailiff of the ſaid place, that he might take him at his Sifters Houſe. As ſoon as he heard thereof he delayed no time, but in the night time came with his Serjeants and apprehended him. Now leading him to Priſon, the Bailiff meeting certain drunkards in the Streets, ſaid, They ſay, We have many Goſpellers in Houſcot, but it little appears by theſe diſorders.

John Herwin hearing him ſay ſo, and not willing to balk it, replyed, Is drunkenneſs a ſin, Maſter Bayliff? Then ſaid the Bayliff, What of that? Herwin made this concluſion; Why then commit you not theſe fellows to Priſon, ſeeing it is your Office to puniſh vice, and to protect ſuch as fear God. The Bayliff was mute: yet for all that Herwin was fain to take up his lodging in Priſon, where he behaved himſelf ſo vertuouſly, that every one admired it. But becauſe he was not called forth before the Magiſtrates of Houſcot ſo ſoon as he deſired and expected, he grew heavy and ſad, asking of ſome whom he knew well, if they could tell why they ſo delayed the matter? For his heart was fixed with an holy zeal to confeſs Jeſus Chriſt before his Judges. Many feared him much, who knew what he had been in times paſt; he being as yet but a Novice, and a new comer on in the profeſſion of the Goſpel; in which caſe men for the moſt part have but ſome glimmering of the light, and are unſetled in their Judgments.

At length he was brought before the Sheriffs of the Town, who commanded a Prieſt to diſpute with him. At the firſt Encounter he asked Herwin how long it was ſince he was confeſſed? alſo what he thought of confeſſion, asking him ſundry other trivial queſtions, to which Herwin anſwered no leſs modeſtly than Chriſtianly, in ſo much as they who were of ſound Judgment eaſily diſcerned how he was not the Man he had been in times paſt, but that his Priſon had been to him a good School where he had well conned his leſſon. The Prieſt demanded further whether he believed there were ſeven Sacraments or no? The Bayliff helping the Prieſt, ſaid, whats that to the purpoſe, whether there be ſeven or two, he will acknowledge no more then he liſt (for he had confeſſed there were but two.) The chief Sheriff demanded of him in theſe terms, whither he believed that the Lord remained upon the Altar, Fleſh, Body, and Bone. I anſwer (ſaith Herwin) with Saint Steven, that the higheſt dwelleth not in Temples made with hands. Heaven, ſaith the Lord, is my throne, and the Earth is my footſtool; what houſe will ye then make unto me, and where is the place of my reſt? Hath not my hand made all theſe? And then took occaſion to admoniſh the Judges which ſate there, to examine the Doctrine of the Roman Church, by the true touchſtone which is the holy Scripture, that ſo they might diſcern how oppoſite and contrary the one is to the other. Conſider alſo, ſaith he, what the words of Saint Peter import, where he affirms that we ought to obey God rather then Man. Yea it is high time for you to think upon what I ſay, and that ſeriouſly alſo, for at the laſt day it is neither your Prieſts, nor your placcards (which you think to ſtop our Mouths withal) that ſhall any way excuſe you then. And as for the Title of the Roman Catholick Church, which you hold out againſt us; I deny not but in the Apoſtles time and afterwards there was a true Church in Rome, as well as in Corinth, Galatia, among the Philippians, and in other Churches; but after that ſhe fell from the pure Word of God, and falſified the Sacraments thereof, turning Eccleſiaſtical Diſcipline into Auricular Confeſſion, God hath alſo forſaken her, and ſhe ought now no more to be called a Church of God, but rather the Synagogue of Satan. As ſoon as the chief Sheriff (who is called the firſt ſpeaker) heard this, he commanded him away.

Iſai. 66. 1. 2

Act. 4. 19. & 5. 29.

A godly admonition to Judges and Magiſtrates.

When the Church of Rome was a true Church.

Having then given ſufficient Teſtimony of his Faith, before thoſe of Houſcot, he craved for Juſtice either one way or another. But they on the contrary urged him to deſiſt from his opinion. To which he anſwered, that his faith was not built of an opinion, but ſaid he, the Lord hath taught me to eſchew evil and do good. Yea, ſaid they, but ſeeſt thou not how theſe opinions have troubled the World? And alſo how many of the learneder ſort do contradict them? Anſwer. So far is it off that the Doctrine of the Goſpel ſhould be the cauſe of troubles, that it only is the means of quieting the debates, and ſtrifes which Reign in the World. Theſe troubles ariſe indeed from the malice of Men. And as touching your learned Men you ſpeak of, it is impoſſible for humane wiſdom to comprehend the Doctrine of God: for which cauſe Chriſt ſaith. Father I thank thee, that thou haſt hid theſe ſecrets from the wiſe Men of the World, and haſt revealed them to Babes. Now as the Sergeants conveyed him to Priſon, they counſelled him to ſpeak more mildly, and then he might do well enough.

Anno 1559.

Pſal. 14.

Mat. 11. 25. Luke 10. 21.

Before his death he was ſorely ſet upon by certain Sophiſters, who alledged to him the ſayings of many of the ancient Fathers upon the point of the Lords Supper, but he overcame them, by holding cloſe the true ſenſe of Chriſts Words. In Priſon he comforted himſelf in ſinging of Pſalms and ſpiritual Songs, ſome of which he indited himſelf. The Canons and Prieſts ſeeing the people flock together to the Priſon door to hear him, eſpecially upon the Sundays and holy days, ſtrove by all means to put him by his ſinging. They coupled him with two malefactors, to be a grief unto him: who obtaining certain Inſtruments by the help of their conſorts, brake Priſon and fled. Herwin might thus have eſcaped if he would; but fearing his flight might be imputed to the Godly Chriſtians in the City, he reſolved rather to remain there, than to flie. His Sentence in the mean while coming from the Court, he was no ſooner advertiſed of it, but he thanked God for advancing him to ſo high an honour as to be counted worthy to ſuffer for his Name: Teſtifying the joy he inwardly had, by a Letter which he ſent to the Brethren; praying and exhorting them to be conſtant and to perſevere in that Doctrine which they had received from God.

The fourth day of November between four and five of the Clock in the morning Herwin was ſent for by the Magiſtrates from Priſon into the place of Judgment, where by intreatings and goodly promiſes they urged him to recant and receive their breaden God, which was then to be offered up; or at leaſt to confeſs that Jeſus Chriſt was there corporally preſent, upon which he ſhould by and by be delivered out of all dangers. Now Herwin refuſing their offer was bound and brought by force into the Chappel: but he in ſign of his deteſtation, turned his back always upon it, ſhutting his eyes, and ſtopping his ears. At the elevation of their Hoſt, one who was kneeling to it, aſked him if Jeſus Chriſt was not now between the Prieſts hands, No, no, ſaid Herwin, he is in Heaven at the right hand of his Father.

Soon after the Sentence of death was read againſt him, and ſo was he delivered into the hands of the Tormentor. As he paſſed out of the Townhouſe, ſtanding upon the firſt ſtep, and viewing the people who waited to ſee him, See here (ſaith he) how this wicked World rewards the poor Servants of Jeſus Chriſt. Whilſt I gave my ſelf to drunkenneſs, to playing at Cards and Dice, living in all diſſolution and ungodly behaviour, I was never in danger of theſe bands (lifting up his hands which were bound) I was then counted a good fellow, and at that time who but I? But no ſooner began I by converſion to ask after a Godly life, but the World made war upon me, and became my enemy, perſecuting and impriſoning me, and now laſt of all ſending me to the place where I muſt pay my laſt debt. But the Servant is not better than his Lord: For ſeeing they perſecuted him, no queſtion they will perſecute us.

Being come to the place where he was to ſuffer, one of the aſſembly reaching him forth his hand drew nigh unto him, comforting him, never leaving him till he enterd into the Cabbin of Wood in which he was to be burnt. He then began to ſing the thirteieth Pſalm, of which having ſung only the firſt ſtaff, a Fryer hearing the ſame haſtned towards him (not without much difficulty) through the throng, that he might come near to interrupt him, who kneeling on his knees ſaid, Oh John, turn, there is yet time and ſpace. The Martyr, ſleighting his gloſing words, turned

Anno 1561. turned his back upon him. And many there preſent cryed to the Fryer, Turn thou, thou Hypocrite: and thus was he ſuffered quietly to finiſh the Pſalm. The Frier ſeeing himſelf diſappointed this way of his purpoſe, continuing ſtill in his impudency, ſaid to the people, be ye not offended good people in hearing this Heretick ſing of God. They cryed again to him, Hold thy peace thou Balaamite, here is no Body offended. Many ſung with a ſoft voice with the Martyr, and ſome again ſung aloud without faining.

There were more than four hundred which encouraged him to continue to the end, as he had well begun. Then he ſaid unto them, Brethren, I fight under the Standard and in the quarrel of my great Lord and Captain Chriſt.

Having ended the Pſalm he made his Prayer to God upon his Knees. Then riſing up, and being about to enter into his Lodge made with an heap of fagots, he ſaid to the people, I am now going to be ſacrificed; follow you me when God of his goodneſs ſhall call you to it. When he was gone in, the Frier put him in mind again, that yet there was time to repent: but he, as one little minding what this deceiver ſaid, commended his Spirit into the hands of God. He that reached him forth his hand ſtood in the midſt of the Sergeants, and not far off from the Tormentor, ſtill encouraging the Patient, and yet none laid hold on him; they were ſtricken with ſuch aſtoniſhment, partly with the Martyrs courage, and partly with their own ſhame in putting to death an Innocent. The Executioner not being his craftſmaſter ſtrangled and burnt him moſt cruelly, ſo as the people were heard to bewail the manner of it, whilſt the Martyr yielded up the ghoſt the ſaid fourth day of November, Anno. 1560. His Body was conſumed to aſhes, which were buried in the Market-place of Houſcot.

Here ſhall not be amiſs to inſert a Godly Prayer which a like notorious wretch (before his converſion) made at his death after he was converted, and ſuffered for the ſame cauſe. His name was Lievin Blekere, by his Trade a Painter who dwelt in a little Village in the Low Countries, called Pamelle, Anno 1566.

O Heavenly Father, I give thee thanks that thou haſt pulled me out of darkneſs, and haſt revealed the light of thy Goſpel unto me, for elſe I had periſhed everlaſtingly. O Father, thou didſt ordain me to be one of thy Witneſſes, even from my Mothers Womb, yea, before the Foundation of the World was laid. Now therefore Lord let this Sacrifice be acceptable unto thee, receive me thy poor Servant into thy Grace and favour, and pardon the Sin of my Perſecutors.

To one that ſtood by he ſaid, Brother, fight the good fight of Faith with me, and pray for me ſo long as you ſee life to be in me. And while he was yet ſpeaking the Tormentor ſtrangled him. The dead Body, being a little ſcortched with the Fire was taken thence and hanged on a gibbet by Pamelle, whence he was taken down in the night and buried.

John de Boſchane drowned in a tub in Priſon, the twenty eighth day of February in the City of Antwerp, Anno 1561.

THe evening before he ſuffered many of the Faithful expected what ſhould be done unto him. But the Magiſtrates of the Town fearing an uprore, knowing that he was a Man free of Speech, and beloved of the people, took Counſel to drown him ſecretly in the Priſon, which could not be executed without Murther, and cruel Torment. For the Tub (in which he ſhould be drowned) being neither large nor deep enough, the Martyr himſelf being tall of ſtature, and the Executioner having provided ſo little Water that he could not poſſibly be drowned therein; therefore he was conſtrained, for the ſhortning of this ſo cruel a torment, to wound him in the Body with divers ſtabs of a Dagger, which were to be ſeen thereon after he was dead. Thus finiſhed this Boſchane Martyr his life, being twenty ſix years of Age, in the City of Antwerp, in the year of our Lord 1560.

A ſure way to make an end of him.

The Story of one John de Buiſons, who was beheaded in the Priſon, as John the Baptiſt was in the night.

THis holy Servant of Chriſt having valiantly ſtood to the profeſſion of the Goſpel, was ſoon after condemned to dye. Now fearing leſt any Tumult or Sedition ſhould be raiſed in the City of Antwery, he was beheaded in the Priſon about one or two of the Clock in the night, to the Glory of God, and the Confuſion of his Adverſaries, Anno 1561.

Simon Harm Martyr, who had Sentence of death pronounced two ſeveral times upon him in the City of Liſle in Flanders.

THis Simon was accuſed to have uttered ſome ſpeeches long ſince againſt the Church of Rome. Witneſs being produced againſt him in the Town-houſe, the Magiſtrate condemned him to be, beheaded. Now according to their cuſtom in that place, his Hat being taken from him after Sentence pronounced, he was returned back again to Priſon, expecting the hour of his Execution. Then were ſent unto him certain Friers to confeſs, or rather to vex and torment him. But this godly man being throughly fenced with the Sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God, made them know to their ſhame that they were greatly miſtaken: for the Friers returning back to thoſe who had imployed them in this buſineſs, reported that this Simon was a moſt notorious Heretick; which the Magiſtrates of the City hearing, cauſed him by and by to be called to judgment, ſending him his Hat again which they took from him, in token that they had revoked the Sentence firſt pronounced, to enter a new Proceſs againſt him. Thus got Simon ſome leaſure the better to diſpoſe of his affairs, alſo to comfort and counſel his Friends by Letters, not weighing the torments of death which he was to endure. Three days before he ſuffered, Sentence was pronounced touching another kind of death, namely to be burned, and his Body to be conſumed to Aſhes. which kind of Martyrdom did manifeſt to all the People of the ſaid City the admirable power of the Lord, by how much more the pains were exceeding great, beholding how this his Servant ſweetly gave up the Ghoſt in peace in the midſt of the fiery Flames.

The Martyr had his hat ſent him which was taken from him.

A Note of one John Martin, who bragged he would cut off a Miniſters Noſe.

THe Church of God increaſing ſo far in the Valleys of Angrongne in France, that they were fain to build a Church wherein to preach the Word publickly, in regard of concourſe of People reſorting thither, it happened that the forenamed John Martin, boaſting every where that he would cut off the Miniſters Noſe of Angrongne, was ſoon after ſet upon by a mad Wolf who did indeed eat his Noſe from his face, dying mad thereof himſelf, and yet it was never obſerved that this Wolf had ever hurt any before. Which terrible Judgment was ſo manifeſt, that it was noyſed among all the Neighbour Villages thereabouts, Anno 1561.

A remarkable judgment of God.

A miſchief mercifully prevented by the means of Prayer and calling upon the name of God.

A Certain Preſident being come into the City of Pigneroll, ſent for one of Saint John's (very near unto Angrongne) who at that time dwelt there, asking him if he had not cauſed a Child of his to be baptized at Angrongne, and why he had done ſo? The poor ſilly man anſwered, he had done it becauſe Baptiſm was there adminiſtred according to Chriſts Inſtitution. The Preſident hearing him ſay ſo, in great fury, commanded him in the Kings name, upon pain of being burned, to get it re-baptized, The Father of the Child beſought him that he would permit him to pray unto God before he gave him his anſwer. Which being done in the Hall before all the Company, he further intreated him under his hand and Seal to cauſe it to be ſet down, how he could diſcharge him of committing ſo great a ſin; and that if he would take the guilt thereof upon himſelf and his, then he he would anſwer him. The preſident hearing how he can e about him, was ſo confounded in himſelf for a while, that he could not ſpeak. But by and by he bad take away the Villain, and ſo he was never called before him again.

Papiſts committed their Children to Proteſtants, to be preſerved from being deflowred.

AMong other things (ſaith my Author) this is to be obſerved, that during theſe troubles in the Valleys of Angrongne from the year 1555. unto the year 1561. The Papiſts which dwelt in the Country conveyed their daughters away into the Mountains, and committed the cuſtody of them to theſe poor perſecuted Chriſtians of Vandois, for fear leſt their chaſtities ſhould be violated by the common Souldiers, according as they had been threatned by them, who were given over to all villany & cruelty.

An Aſſembly of the Faithful, deſcried nigh to Antwerp, was by the enemies of the Goſpel put to flight, of which three being apprehended, two eſcaped, and one named Barthelemi de Hoy was executed, Anno 1561.

THe third day of the Month of Auguſt in the year 1561. when great triumphs were uſually made in the City of Antwerp about the plays and prizes of Rhetorick (as they call them) to the ſight and hearing whereof there commonly came great multitudes from many places: thoſe of the Religion being willing to take all opportunities to meet together in the fear of God, whilſt others were buſied in ſeeing and beholding thoſe vanities: a great number withdrew themſelves out of the City, and entered into a Wood, nigh unto Markſem, that there they might hear the Word of God preached with lively voice by the Preachers thereof.

The Dorſart of Markſem, being adverтiſed thereof, reſorted thither with his Officers, being conducted to the place by certain poor youths, being Nete-heards, whom he promiſed to apparel, if they could bring him to any place of the wood where the Aſſembly was; Whilſt himſelf ſtaying without, with two or three other on Horſeback, ſent the reſt of his Officers with the Boys into the Wood. At the appearing of theſe Wolves the poor Sheep of Chriſt began to be affrighted, and to flie. The Miniſters and others ſeeing this diſorder admoniſhed the Aſſembly not to ſtir, ſhewing how great inconveniences would follow upon ſuch an inconſiderate flight. The Perſecutors were not above five or ſix, but the perſecuted were about four or five hundred perſons; ſo as without any great difficulty they might have had the better hand of them. The principal aim which the Officers had, was to apprehend the Miniſter. For having caught one of the Aſſembly, thinking he had been the Man. they cryed one to another, Hold the Prieſt faſt, ſtriking him with their Piſtols and ſtaves, and ſo brought him out of the wood. The Dorſart, perceiving that this was not the Miniſter, kept him notwithſtanding as his prey, and left not purſuing this ſcattered flock until night. After this he took two other in the Lordſhip of Akeram.

Thus having apprehended theſe three Priſoners, and withal having taken up many Cloaks, Hats, and Vails, Foreparts, and other Accoutrements, which the poor diſperſed had loſt and let fall, theſe hey took away as a ſpoyl, and returned to Markeſem. This Dorſart lay hold on two others by the way, whom he ſuppoſed to be of that number, one of which was Barthelemi de Hoye, a Joyner of the age of twenty four years. Theſe five were committed to Priſon one from another, ſome at Markſem, and others at Damme. Soon after the firſt three which had been taken in: the Juriſdiction of Akeram had the means to eſcape without any danger or detriment, by the aſſiſtance of their friends. Barthelemi only remained in the cuſtody of the Dorſart, before whom he endured many baitings through the Parſon of that place, being ſet on by him: Beſides many others who daily by way of ſcorn queſtioned with him; asking, Why ſuch a young Man as he could not content himſelf with their Religion and glorious Church, adorned with Silver, Gold, and precious ſtones, in which there was ſuch melodious muſick, both of Voices and Inſtruments, but muſt needs joyn himſelf to that Church which was hated, deſpiſed, and expoſed to all inconveniences whatſoever. But Barthelemi overcame all theſe temptations by the grace and power of the Almighty, manifeſting it to all, that that which is greatly eſteemed amongſt Men is altogether an abomination in the ſight of God. Having then often juſtified the cauſe of God, and reproved the Roman Church of falſe Doctrine, known by the fruits thereof, viz. the hateful lives of the Prieſts, &c. he was after a few days brought out of Priſon, and at laſt beheaded the nine and twentieth of Auguſt, between four and five of the Clock, in the morning, Anno 1561.

Anno 1561.

Luk. 16.45.

A relation touching the Maſſacre at Vaſſy in the Country of Champaigne in France.

THe Duke of Guiſe being arrived at Joinville, asked of ſuch as he was familiar withal, whether thoſe of Vaſſy uſed to have Sermons preached conſtantly by their Miniſter. It was anſwered they had, and that they encreaſed daily more and more. At the hearing of which report falling into a grievous chafe, upon Saturday the laſt of February 1562. that he might the more covertly execute his conceived wrath againſt the Religious ſort in Vaſſy, he departed from Joinville, accompanied with the Cardinal of Guiſe his Brother, and thoſe of their train, and lodged in the village of Dammartin the free, which is diſtant from Joinville about two French miles and a half.

The next day being Sunday, which was the firſt of March, after he had heard Maſs very early in the morning, being attended with about two hundred Men armed with Harquebuſes, Piſtols, and Coutelaxes, he left Dammartin, paſſing along to Vaſſy. As he went by the Village of Bronzevall, which is diſtant from Vaſſy but a ſmall quarter of a mile, the Bell (after the uſual manner) rang to the Sermon. The Duke hearing it, asked ſuch as he met with by the way, why the Bell rang ſo loud at Vaſſy. They told him it was to give the people warning of the Sermon which was to be made there. Then one called La Montague ſaid, it is for the aſſembling of the Huguenots: adding moreover, that there were many in the ſaid Bronzevall who frequented the Sermons preached at Vaſſy; and therefore that the Duke ſhould do well to begin there, and offer them violence. But the Duke anſwered, March on, march on, we ſhall take them among the reſt of the Aſſembly. Many who followed the Duke, to wit, Pages and Footmen, rejoyced not a little concerning this bloody enterpriſe; not ſticking to ſay, that the booty and pillage would fall to their ſhares; ſwearing by Blood and Wounds, that there would be good ſtore of Huguenots there.

Now there were certain Souldiers and Archers accompanying the Duke, who compaſſed about Vaſſy; for having been muſtered at Monthierender, in ſtead of returning home, as they were wont to do after the muſter was ended, they took their way thence to Vaſſy, moſt of them being lodged in the Houſes of Papiſts. The Saturday before the ſlaughter they were ſeen to make ready their Weapons, Harquebuſes, and Piſtols: but the Faithful not dreaming of ſuch a conſpiracy, thought the Duke would offer them no hard meaſure, being the Kings Subjects; alſo, that not above two Months before the Duke and his Brethren paſſing by nigh unto the ſaid Vaſſy, gave no ſign of their diſpleaſure.

The Duke of Guiſe being arrived at Vaſſy with all his Troops, a young Man a Shoomaker ſtepping out of his Houſe not far from the door where the Aſſembly was, Montague pointing to him with his finger ſaid he was one of the Miniſters. Whereupon the Duke called this Shoomaker to him, and asked of him whether he were a Miniſter, and of what Univerſity he was. He anſwered, that he was not of that Calling, neither was he a Scholar. Notwithſtanding he hardly eſcaped from this Troop, which had invironed him round about: only one of the company told him, That if he had been a Miniſter he had taken upon him a very baſe Calling.

So it is deemed in the eye of the world.

From thence the Duke, La Boſſe, and La Mountague paſſed on in the ſaid City with their Souldiers, as if they minded to take their way towards the Village of Eſclairon, where it was given out he meant to dine. But paſſing Anno 1561. paſſing by the Market-houſe of Vaſſy, which is right over againſt and nigh unto the Monaſtery in the way leading to Eſclairon, he turned and went directly toward the Common Hall or Market-houſe, and then entred into the Monaſtery; where having called to him one named Deſſalles, the Prior of Vaſſy, and another whoſe name was Claude le Sain, being the Provoſt of the ſaid Vaſſy, he talked awhile with them, and iſſuing haſtily out of the Monaſtery was attended by many of his Followers. Then commandment was given to ſuch as were Papiſts, to retire into the Monaſtery, and not to be ſeen in the ſtreets, unleſs they would venture the loſs of their lives. The Duke perceiving others of his Retinue to be walking to and fro under the Town Hall and about the Church-yard commanded them to march on towards the place where the Sermon was, being in a Barn diſtant from the Monaſtery, about ſome hundred paces, quite oppoſite to that way whith the Duke ſhould take to Eſclairon. This command was by and by put in execution by ſuch of the company as went on foot, going directly thither. Hee that marched formoſt of this Rabble was La-Broſs, and on the ſide of theſe marched the Horſemen, after whom followed the Duke with another company, as of his own followers, ſo likewiſe of thoſe of the Cardinal of Guiſe his Brother.

By this time Maſter Leonard Morel the Miniſter, after the firſt prayer ended, and having begun his Sermon before his Auditors, which might amount to about 1200 perſons, conſiſting of Men, Women, and Children: The Horſemen firſt approching to the Barn within a matter of twenty five paces, ſhot off two Harquebuſſes right upon thoſe who were placed in the Galleries joyning to the Windows. The people within perceiving that, they who were nigh to the Dore uſed means to ſhut it, but were diſappointed, becauſe this diſordered company preſſed in upon them: who forthwith unſheathing their ſwords, cried furiouſly out, Death of God, kill, kill theſe Huguenots.

The firſt they ſeized on was a poor Cryer of Wine, who ſtood next the door, asking him, if he were not a Huguenot, and in whom he believed? Having anſwered that he believed in Jeſus Chriſt, they ſmote him twice with a ſword upon his Body, which felled him to the ground. Being got up again thinking to recover himſelf, they ſtruck him the third time, whereby being overcharged with wounds he fell down and dyed inſtantly. Two other men at the ſame time were ſlain at the entry of the ſaid Dore as they were preſſing out to eſcape.

Then did the Guiſe with his company violently enter in among them, ſtriking down main blows upon the poor people with Swords, Daggers, and Coutelaxes, not ſparing any Age or Sex. Beſides, they within were ſo aſtonied that they knew not which way to turn them, but running hither and thither fell one upon another, flying as poor ſheep before a company of ravening Wolves entring in among the flock.

Some of the Murtherers ſhot off their Pieces againſt them that were in the Galleries; others cut in pieces ſuch as they lighted upon; others had their heads cleft in twain, their Arms and Hands cut off, and did what they could to hew them all to pieces; ſo as many of them gave up the ghoſt even in the place. The Walls and Galleries of the ſaid Barn were Dyed with the Blood of thoſe who were every where Murthered: yea, ſo great was the fury of the Murtherers, that part of the people within were forced to break open the Roof of the Houſe, if peradventure that way they might ſave themſelves upon the top thereof.

Being got thither, and then fearing to fall again into the hands of theſe cruel Tygers, ſome of them leaped over the Walls of the City, which were very high, flying into the Woods and amongſt the Vines, which with moſt expedition they could ſooneſt attain unto; ſome hurt in their Arms, others in their Heads and other parts of their Bodies. The Duke preſented himſelf in the houſe with his ſword drawn in his hand, charging his men to kill, eſpecially the young men. Onely in the end Women with Child were ſpared. But purſuing thoſe who preſſed to get upon the houſe top, they cryed, Come down ye dogs, come down, uſing many cruel threatning ſpeeches unto them.

The cauſe why Women with Child eſcaped, was, as the report went, for the Dutcheſs ſake his Wife, who paſſing along by the Walls of the City, hearing ſo hideous out-cries which were made amongſt theſe poor creatures with the noyſe of the pieces and piſtols continually diſcharged; ſent in all haſte to the Duke her Husband with much intreaties to ceaſe this perſecution, for frighting Women with Child.

The dutcheſs intreats for a Pacification; that thoſe of her Sex being with Child might not be affrighted.

During this ſlaughter the Cardinal of Guiſe remained before the Church of the ſaid City of Vaſſi, leaning upon the Walls of the Church-yard, looking towards the place where his followers were buſied in killing and ſlaying whom they could. Many of this aſſembly being thus hotly purſued, did in the firſt brunt ſave themſelves upon the roof of the houſe, not being diſcerned of thoſe which ſtood without: but at length ſome of this bloody crue eſpying where they lay hid, ſhot at them with long pieces, wherewith many of them were hurt and ſlain. The Houſhold Servants of Deſſalles Prior of Vaſſi, ſhooting at the roof people, cauſed them to fall down from the roof like pigeons: one of that wretched company was not aſhamed to boaſt after the Maſſacre was ended, That he for his part had cauſed ſix at the leaſt to tumble down in that pitiful plight, ſaying, that if others had done the like, not many of them could poſſibly have eſcaped.

A lamentable ſpectacle

The Miniſter in the beginning of the Maſſacre ceaſed not to preach ſtill, till, one diſcharged his piece againſt the Pulpit where he ſtood, after which falling down upon his knees, he entreated the Lord not onely to have mercy upon himſelf, but alſo upon his poor perſecuted flock. Having ended his prayer, he left his gown behind him, thinking thereby to keep himſelf, as unknown: but whileſt he approached towards the Dore, in his fear he ſtumbled upon a dead Body, where he received a blow with a ſword upon his right Shoulder. Getting up again, and then thinking to get forth, he was immediately laid hold on and grievouſly hurt on the head with a ſword, whereupon being felled to the ground, and feeling himſelf mortally wounded, he cryed, Lord into thy hand I commend my Spirit, for thou haſt redeemed me, thou God of Truth. Pſal. 31. 5.

Whileſt he thus prayed, one of this Bloody crue ran upon him to have houghed him, but it pleaſed God his ſword brake in the hilts. Now to let you underſtand by what means he was delivered from ſo imminent a death, two Gentlemen taking knowledge of him, as the reſt were about to kill him, ſaid, it is the Miniſter, let him be conveyed to my Lord Duke. Theſe leading him away by both the Arms, brought him before the gate of the Monaſtery, from whence the Duke and the Cardinal his Brother coming forth ſaid, come hither, and asked him, ſaying, Art thou the Miniſter of this place? who made thee ſo bold to ſeduce this people thus? Sir, ſaid the Miniſter, I am no Seducer, for I have preached to them the Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt. The Duke perceiving that this ſhort and pithy anſwer condemned his cruel fact, began to curſe and ſwear, ſaying, Death of God, doth the Goſpel preach Sedition? Provoſt, go and let a Gibbet be ſet up, and hang this Bougrer.

At which words the Miniſter was delivered into the hands of two Pages, who miſuſed him vilely. The Women of the City being ignorant Papiſts caught up dirt to throw in his face, and with extended outcries ſaid, Kill him, kill this varlet, who hath been the cauſe of the ſlaughter of ſo many. Much ado there was to hold off the Women from being revenged upon the poor Miniſter.

Whilſt the Pages had him thus in their handling, the Duke went into the Barn, to whom they preſented a great Bible, which they uſed for the ſervice of God. The Duke taking it into his hands, calling his Brother the Cardinal ſaid, Lo here the Title of the Huguenot Books. The Cardinal viewing it, ſaid, There is nothing but good in this Book, for it is the Bible, to wit, the holy Scriptures. The Duke being offended for that his anſwer ſuited not to his humor, grew into a greater rage than before, ſaying, Blood of God how now? what? the holy Scripture. It is a thouſand and 500 year ago ſince Jeſus Chriſt ſuffered his Death and paſſion, and it is but a year ſince theſe Books were imprinted, how then ſay you that this is the Goſpel? by the death of God you ſay you know not what. This unbridled fury of the Duke diſpleaſed the Cardinal, ſo as he was heard ſecretly to mutter; An unworthy Brother.

This Maſſacre continued a full hour, the Dukes Trumpeters ſounding the whilſt two ſeveral times. When any of theſe deſired to have mercy ſhewed them for the love of Jeſus Chriſt, the Murtherers in ſcorn would ſay unto them, you uſe the Name of Chriſt, but where is your Chriſt now become? And when they ſaid Lord God, they blaſphemingly would ſay, Lord Devil.

A grievous ſcorn.

There died in this Maſſacre within a few days fifty or threeſcore perſons; beſides theſe, there were about two hundred and fifty others, as well Men as Women, who were wounded and ſpoiled, whereof ſome died, ſome were maimed, loſing ſome a Leg, ſome an Arm; ſome their Fingers cut off from their Hands and carried away. The Poors Box, which was faſtened to the Door of the Church with two Iron-hooks, was wreſted thence, with twelve pounds therein, and never reſtored again. Nothing was to be ſeen in the Streets but Women with their hair hanging about their ears, faces beſmeared with blood, being wounded in many places with Swords and Daggers, with weepings and lamentations. Barbers and Chirurgeons were ſo ſet on work, that he that had leaſt had threeſcore under his hand to be dreſſed, and many periſhed for want thereof.

The Poors Mony violently taken away, and never after reſtored.

The Miniſter was kept cloſe Priſoner, ſo as for four and twenty hours none were permitted to ſupply him with any neceſſaries at all, nor any ſuffered to ſee him or ſpeak with him, and was oft threatned by his Keepers to be ſowed up in a Sack and drowned. Fain would they have drawn him to have kept his Eaſter after the Popiſh guiſe, under fair promiſes of his inlargment; but he would by no means conſent thereto. Thus continued he Priſoner until the eighth day of May 1563. at which time he was ſet free by the ſuit of the moſt Illuſtrious Prince of Portien.

Whilſt the Duke was at Eſclairon, the Lackeys and other of their ſort put to ſale, unto ſuch as would give moſt, Cloaks, Hats, Girdles, Coifs, Kerchiefs, with other things which they had ſpoiled the maſſacred of; Crying them with a loud voice, as if a common Crier had cried Houſhold-ſtuff to be ſold.

A memorable Deliverance.

ONe called John of the Gardens, having lived a long time with his Wife and Child (in regard of the preſent Troubles) abroad in the fields nigh to a City called Seulis in France, at length determining to go back again into the City, caſting himſelf and his upon the Providence of God, were met in the Suburbs by two of the City, who willed the Souldiers to put them to the Sword. The Mother of the Child kneeling down asked not her own life, but requeſted that if they muſt needs die, they would firſt kill her Child, becauſe ſeeing it die before her, ſhe might die with the leſs ſorrow, fearing leſt the poor Babe ſhould otherwiſe (in ſuch a time of trouble) be left to ſhift for it ſelf; which ſpeech of hers ſo wrought upon the Souldiers, that they ſaved all their lives.

The ſtrange deliverance of a godly Miniſter of the Church of Chaalons in Champaign called J.* Fournier, after he had indured many hard uſages.

* He at the firſt was Doctor of the Sorbonniſts; a man well learned and of an unblameable life.

FIrſt, being apprehended and ſpoiled of all that he had, they ſtripped him of his good Apparel, and then put an old thred-bare Cloak upon him, and carried him away in a Cart, in regard of a hurt which he had formerly gotten in one of his feet; by reaſon whereof he was diſabled to go, and ſo was conducted with infinite Jeſts broken upon him, and at every moment in danger of his life for ſix miles together, till he came to Manehon, where he had like to have been pulled in pieces by the rude multitude, but was preſerved notwithſtanding even by thoſe who had already determined to be his death; the Priſon alſo being nigh unto the Gate of the City.

The 13th of September, a Captain called Fraiſne came to the Priſon where he was detained, accompanied with many Souldiers, who with mocks and threats mingled together ſware that within three hours he ſhould be hacked and hewed to pieces, and ſo ſhould be made a Maygame to all the City, with which words he left him. Godet the Kings Lieutenant with other of the Juſtices came in after him, demanding wherefore he was brought to S. Manehon, and forthwith commanded the Gaoler to load him with Irons, telling him in ſcorn, you are no better than St. Peter I am ſure, whom they laid in Iron. But if you have as much faith as he, God will then deliver you, as he did him, by ſending an Angel unto you. I will not, ſaid the Priſoner, compare my ſelf with St. Peter: yet it is not 12 years ago ſince (for preaching the ſame Doctrine that St. Peter did) I was impriſoned at Toulouſe, and yet admirably delivered: and though St. Peter was delivered out of Priſon, yet in the end he glorified God by his death. And if I ſhould be counted worthy to ſuffer with him for the Truth, may it not be ſaid that I have the like precious Faith as St. Peter had? but for that time he eſcaped thoſe bolts, having hurt his foot and leg very ſore at his apprehenſion: his Shackles at that time were turned into a far more ſtraight Priſon. Anno 1559.

The Duke of Nevers was a good Friend unto this Fournier, by whoſe mediation he was the rather ſpared. But the ſaid Duke receiving an hurt at Dreux whereof he died, and the Duke of Guiſe ſucceeding him in the government of Champaign, his Enemies began to renew their former grudge againſt him, who brought him to be examined by torture.

Where firſt they ſtrained both his Thumbs ſo hard with a ſmall Cord, that the blood came forth. Then turning his Arms behind his Back, they hoiſed him with a Rope put between his Thumbs ſo tied; twitching him up five or ſix times thereby, ſometimes letting him down, and then letting him hang again till his ſpirits and ſpeech failed him. But not content therewith they tied a great Stone to both the great Toes of his Feet, and then examined him; firſt if he had not a purpoſe to preach at Verdun, if the Company who conducted him thither came together; his anſwer was, That he could not determine to do that which he had no hope to perform, nor came it into his thought.

Then they asked him where he had thoſe Cloaths he wore, ſeeing he was but barely cloathed when he came into Priſon? He anſwered, That the Marqueſs d'Ile when ſhe ſent from Chaalons, ſent them unto him by her Taylor. Being further asked who taught him to refuſe his Judge; his anſwer was, That his own reaſon counſelled him ſo to do, and none elſe. This was the effect of that for which he was ſo miſerably tortured, and ſo in concluſion they let him fall with ſuch violence on his face, that he was grievouſly hurt thereon.

Being from thence removed to another Priſon according to their cuſtom for two or three hours, and then returned to that he was in before, he could not be permitted to have ſo much as a Chirurgion to cure him of the gaſhes the Cords had made in his Fleſh, even to the bare Bones: by reaſon whereof he continued in exceeding torment and anguiſh, not being able to bring his hands to his mouth, which were alſo ſo wrung, that he thought if God ſhould grant him life, yet he ſhould yet be deprived of the uſe of his Limbs.

His Indictment being framed, and his condemnation ſubſcribed by ſundry Judges thereunto appointed, ſome other being of another opinion diſappointed that determination. The News alſo of the Duke of Guiſes death coming in the neck of it, changed theſe Foxes into another ſhape. The Names of the principal whereof were Cocot and Buſſi. Some that had been his Judges coming into the Priſon, demanded of him if he bare them not ill-will: He anſwered that men of his Profeſſion and Religion ought not to malice any, no not their Enemies, being rather enjoyned by God to love and pray for thoſe that perſecuted them; ſhewing furthermore, that whatſoever troubles had befallen him were none other but ſuch as God had before ordained for the ſetting forth of his own glory; for which he eſteemed himſelf moſt happy: only he warned them to bethink themſelves well what wrong they had offered him, leſt the vengeance of God might ſometime or other overtake them.

This Buſſi was a Governor of Champaigne, a covetous Wretch, and an Enemy to Religion.

The next day, being the twelfth of April, Buſſi, having received Letters from the Conſtable for the enlargement of Fournier, being ſolicited thereto by the Captain of la Tournelle; inſtead of obeying the Conſtables command ſware that he ſhould be delivered indeed, that is to ſay, into the hands of the Multitude: and thus ſtiffly

Anno 1562. ſtiffly refuſing either the publication of the Letters, or to obſerve the Edict, cauſed three of his Priſoners of the Religion to be put into the Dungeon, becauſe he heard them ſing Pſalms.

In the mean while the Prince of Portien bringing back the German Souldiers, and paſſing by Chaalons, the cheif men of that City, fearing to be over-run, met him; whom he threatned to leave neither Village nor houſe ſtanding, unleſs they reſtored him the ſaid Fournier in ſafety. Which they promiſing to do at their return they ſo far prevailed with Buſſi, that he conſented to what they had ſo promiſed. And thus on the laſt of April (which was eight Months ſince Fournier was firſt impriſoned) the Leiutenant Godet, and the Abbot of All-Saints, with ſome others reſorted to him, declaring that they were willing now to ſet him at liberty? entreating him now to forgive and forget that which was paſt, that the Prince might ſee how forward they were to gratifie him herein. Fournier was brought into a Cathedral Church not far from the Priſon, where he found the Captain of the City with a great Company of armed men ready to conduct him out of the Town. But the place was forthwith beſet with People whom Buſſi to that purpoſe had ſtirred up, ſo that had it not been for thoſe who defended him within, and an extraordinary ſhower of Rain coming between of long continuance, which cauſed the greater part of the Seditious to depart, Fournier had hardly eſcaped their hands, if a means had not been found to let him out by a back door.

It is here to be noted, that upon the eighth day of October the Biſhop of Chaalons calling Fournier into his Garden, endeavoring to turn him from the faith, ſaid, I marvel how you, being an ancient Doctor in Divinity, of the age of fifty eight years, and ſo well learned in the Tongues, ſhould thus be led aſide with theſe Opinions, giving credit ſo ſuddenly to the writings of Calvin and others. To Calvin? ſaid Fournier, you ſhould rather have ſaid, by believing and giving credit to the Word of God.

Godet beſtirring him, and being now far more willing to ſave the ſaid Fourniers life, than he had been formerly to deprive him of it, in the evening bringing him to his own houſe, and Lodging him in his own Bed, did what he could the next day very early to ſend for the Keys of the City Gates. Which when he could not obtain of Buſſi, who kept the Gates faſt ſhut for fear of the Swart Ruttors, he then endeavoured to bring the ſaid Fournier ſecretly by a back way, to an houſe near to the Gate of the ſaid City; ſo as at eleven of the Clock, certain Coaches going out, he was ſhuffled out amidſt them, and himſelf brought him on the way about a quarter of a mile; where he was by and by received by thoſe who attended there for him, with a charge to bring him to their Prince, who at that time was in the Caſtle of Songz; Where he was kindly welcomed of the ſaid Lord, and of all his Friends beſides, having compaſſion on him, in regard that now being fifty eight years old, he had ſuffered ſo many hard encounters. And within two days after he preached before the Prince and all his Followers, and the day following, at the inſtant requeſt of thoſe of Vitri, went thither to preach and baptize Children, the Prince being preſent there in his own Perſon. At length Fournier, gathering a Church together at a place called Ver, ſpent ſome ſmall portion of time among his Flock there, with wonderful fruit: being ſore weakned when he was in Priſon, (what with ſtrait dyet, and the extremity of the torture) he ſoon after finiſhed his courſe, leaving to Poſterity a rare memory of his conſtancy and piety.

Savage cruelties committed upon the Perſons of the godly at Bar upon Seine.

SUch was the cruelty of the Executioners after they had ſlain thoſe of the Religion, that cleaving their bodies in twain, they ſtuck not to pluck their hearts thence, as they lay upon the ground, gnawing them between their Teeth, and ſo reaching them from one to another, ſaying, now they knew they had eaten the heart of an Huguenot before they died.

The violent rage of the Souldiers at Iſſondon, who proceeded ſo far as to re-baptize the young Children of Proteſtants after the Popiſh manner.

THe Souldiers in this City of Iſſondon took little Children who had been baptized by the Miniſters of the Church there, and cauſed them to be re-baptized by their Prieſts, impoſing upon them other names; yea, they re-baptized a Girl of thirteen years old, whom they preſented ſtark naked to the Font. Yet the young Infants which began only to ſpeak declared both by evident ſigns and words that they would not be re-baptized, ſo as a Girl of two years old, being brought naked to the Font, with much ſtruggling cryed with a loud voice, that their doings were too ſhameful; ſaying that ſhe would not be baptized again, and therewithal ſtrook the Prieſt with all the Power ſhe had. Alſo the Son of Jean Haies, of the ſame age, took the Prieſt by the Beard, and defended it ſelf as well as it could. But for all this the Prieſts would not give over.

Another barbarous cruelty committed by the Peſants of Freſnay in the County of Main.

IN the Village of Freſnay, diſtant about ſome ten miles from the City of Mans, a little after that thoſe of the Religion had forſaken the City, a certain Weaver called Hagannot, who was wont to read the prayers in the Aſſembly among ſome few of the godly in that place, was haled in the night out of his houſe by the Peſants there, who having cut his throat afterward filled his mouth with the Leaves of a New Teſtament which they found about him.

Execrable blaſphemies and outrages committed in the City of Angiers.

A Company of Rake-hels breaking into a Merchants houſe, found there many Bibles, which they burned in the City; but chooſing out a great Bible amongſt the reſt, gilt and fair ruled, they faſtned it upon the Point of an Halberd, and going thence, went in Proceſſion therewith through the High ſtreets of the City, with a great cry, ſaying, Lo, here the Truth hangeth, the verity of the Huguenots, the Truth of all the Devils; lo, here the God, the mighty God hath ſpoken. And in this manner they paſſed along until they came to the Bridge, where they threw it into the River, ſaying, Behold the Truth of all the Devils drowned.

Voila la verité pendue, la verité des Huguenots, la verité de tous les Diables: voila la Dieu le fort, l'eternel parlara, &c.

A ſtrange courſe to make Victuals Cheap.

IN the City of Bloys, whilſt thoſe of the Religion were cruelly handled, it ſo fell out, that in ſuch a diſorder even the Roman Catholicks themſelves drank with them of the ſame Cup; in regard whereof complaint was made on both parts, to the Duke of Guiſe, in hope of ſome redreſs. His anſwer was, that the Kingdom was but too much repleniſhed with People, and therefore his purpoſe was to cut off as many as he could, that ſo all kind of Victuals might be ſold better cheap.

An outrage done to poor Women, who met together to comfort one another.

THere was an honeſt Woman of the City of Blois, whoſe name was Nichole, the Wife of one John le Manchet, a maker of Sun-Dials, in whoſe houſe certain Neighbours meeting together to comfort and edifie one another, and to pray one with and for another, to the number of 9 or thereabouts, with their Daughters, theſe Murtherers hearing of it ran violently in among them, thinking to have found a Miniſter preaching to them; but when they ſaw how they were miſtaken, they dragged them out by the hair of the head into the midſt of the ſtreet; where loading them with abundance of ſtripes they caſt them into the River: in which calamity God endued them with ſuch ſtrength and skill, being unbound, that endeavouring to ſwim, at length they arrived at an Iſle: where being ſeiſed upon again by certain Ferrimen they were ſtripped naked, and then thrown again into the River: and thinking yet to ſave themſelves, they were in the end knocked down by the Seditious in the Suburbs of Vienna.

A pitiful and Tragical Spectacle.

A Certain poor Woman of Tours, whoſe Husband they had not long before drowned, having an Infant about ſix or ſeven weeks old ſucking at her breaſts, and holding by the hand a Daughter of hers, very beautiful to look upon, of the Age of 15. or 16. years, was by many inſolencies haled to the River ſide, where having made her Prayer upon her knees, the Child ſucking at her breaſt, ſhe ſhifted it there in the Sun, and after laid it upon the graſs, then kneeling down again, commended it to God. Mean while this Iliſh-rabble uſed many words to turn the young Maiden from her Religion, ſome uſing ſore threats, others making her many fair promiſes. One of the Souldiers, being a braver gallant than the reſt, promiſed her marriage, ſo as the poor wench ſtood in a mammering, not knowing what to do. Her Mother ſeeing her wavering, earneſtly exhorted her to perſiſt in the Truth, her ſelf being at that inſtant ready to be plunged into the Water. The Daughter beholding ſuch an outrage, crying out uſed theſe words (all which was afterwards teſtified by thoſe who were conſenting to this murther, being alſo converted themſelves by ſuch a rare example of conſtancy) I will, ſaid ſhe, live and die with my Mother, whom I know to be a vertuous Woman: as for your threats and promiſes I regard them not, do with me as you pleaſe. The Mother was not yet dead when theſe mercileſs wretches threw in the Daughter after her, who making towards her Mother and they both embracing each other, yielded up their Souls into the hands of God. The poor Infant was taken up by a Souldier, who, having kept it a day and a night from the Breaſt, laid it the next day in a Church-porch, whence being taken up, and given to a Nurſe to keep, it would never take the Breaſt after, but within two days it died.

An Hiſtory containing the ſingular conſtancy of a Chriſtian Woman, together with her gracious Anſwers to her adverſaries.

IN the ſame City of Tours, the death of an honeſt Matron called Glee is very remarkable. This Woman having much profited in the knowledge of Gods Word, was preſented before Chavigny, before whom ſhe gave a reaſon of her Faith, confirmed by Teſtimonies of Scripture, with ſuch conſtancy in the preſence of certain Friers and Prieſts, that in the end they gave her no other anſwer but this, that ſhe was in a dammable eſtate. It ſeems ſo indeed, ſaid ſhe, being now in your hands; but I have a God that will neither leave nor forſake me for all that. Thou haſt, ſaid they, renounced the Faith. It is true ſaid ſhe, I have renounced your Faith; which I am able to ſhew is rejected and accurſed of God, and therefore deſerves not ſo much as to be called Faith. Upon this they committed her to Priſon, where ſhe was again ſolicited to recant; to which purpoſe they ſent certain Women unto her into the Priſon; but all in vain: for on the contrary ſhe ſpake her mind freely, and comforted the Priſoners which were in the ſame Priſon with her for Religion.

Now it happened one morning, as ſhe was about to take ſome bodily refreſhing, News was brought her that ſhe was condemned to be hanged with three men alſo. Which News ſhe received with ſuch joy and rejoycing, that the Officer had no ſooner ended his meſſage, but forthwith ſhe kneeling on her knees began to praiſe and magnifie the name of God, in that he had ſhewed her ſo much mercy, as to deliver her by ſuch a kind of death out of the troubles of this wretched world; as alſo for that it pleaſed the Lord to honour her ſo far as to die for his Truth, and to wear his Livery, meaning the Halter which the Hangman had now put about her neck. Then ſitting down at Table to break her faſt with the reſt of the Company, giving thanks to God, ſhe exhorted them to be of good courage, and to truſt unto the end in his free and only mercy. Laſtly, having ſent her Children ſome ſuch ſmall trifles as ſhe then had about her, Anno 1562 ſhe called for a clean Linnen Waſtecote, making her ſelf ready, as if ſhe had been going to a Wedding.

Being conducted thus with the reſt of the Priſoners about two of the Clock in the afternoon, and paſſing by St. Martins Church, ſhe was commanded to receive a Torch into her hand, and to acknowledge ſhe had offended God and the King, Away, away ſaid ſhe, with it; I have neither offended God nor the King, according to your meaning, nor in reſpect of the cauſe for which I ſuffer. I am, I confeſs, a ſinful Woman; but I need no ſuch light, forwhelping me to ask forgiveneſs of God for my ſins paſt or preſent: uſe ſuch things your ſelves, who ſit and walk in the darkneſs of ignorance and error.

Then one of her kinsfolks met her in the way, and preſented unto her view her little Children, praying her to have compaſſion on them, ſeeing that by renouncing her Religion ſhe might yet preſerve her life, and ſee them provided for. Upon this meeting her motherly affection cauſed her to ſhed plenty of Tears: but by and by taking unto her new courage, I muſt needs tell you, ſaid ſhe, that I love my Children dearly: but yet neither for love I bear to them or any thing elſe in this world, will I renounce the Truth, or my God, who is and will be a Father unto them, to provide better for them than I could have done; and therefore to his providence and protection I commend and leave them; and ſo paſſed on chearfully without being any further daunted.

Drawing nigh to the place of execution, ſhe called upon God without ceaſing, lifting her hands up to Heaven. Now the men which came with her being ready to ſuffer, when ſhe ſaw them about to die ſilent, and not to call on God, ſhe exhorted them thereto, and began aloud to rehearſe the Confeſſion of ſins, which begins thus, Lord God Almighty and everlaſting Father, &c. and ſo continuing forth the ordinary prayers, reciting alſo the Lords Prayer, and the Articles of the Creed, ſhe with much peace and joy in the holy Ghoſt finiſhed her life.

A Note touching the King of Navarre that then was.

DUring the ſiege of Rovan, Anthony ſo Bourbon King of Navarre, being forſaken of his faithful Friends and Servants for conniving with the Camp of Triumvirat, was ſhot into the right ſhoulder with an Harquebuſs, the fifteenth day of October, whereof he died the ſeventeenth day following. Not many hours before his death, with Tears in his eyes, he asked pardon of God, making confeſſion of his Faith, according to the form then uſed amongſt thoſe of the Religion; proteſting that if he might be cured of his wound he would cauſe the Goſpel to be preached throughout all the Kingdom of France. He was a Prince endowed with many good gifts of God, naturally of a gentle diſpoſition, and yet a valorous and couragious Wariour, but ſo addicted to follow his pleaſures and delights, that to enjoy them, he eaſily abandoned the care of his more weighty affairs, and ſo was ſubject to no ſmall inconvenience, namely to be ill ſerved and obeyed; in the mean while neglecting the Services of ſuch as had been his loyal and affectionate Subjects: An inperfection which hath coſt France a million of mens lives, with innumerable ruines beſides; an end whereof is not ſuddenly to be expected.

And yet but eight days before, through ill counſel and the ſolicitation of the Biſhop of Mande (one of them that betrayed him) he was coſeſſed in the ear of the official of Revan, and communicated after the Popiſh manner.

The death and Martyrdom of Auguſtine Marlorat, one of the Miniſters of the reformed Church in Rovane as alſo of three other Perſonages, who ſuffered with him at the ſame time, Anno, 1562.

AMongſt the garboyls which by the Seditious were moved at Rovan, Captain Saint Eſtevo ſeized upon the bodies of Auguſtine Marlorat, of Du-Boſck, Sieur de Mandreville, Cruchet, Sieur de Soquence, and Noel Cotton. Mandreville perceiving this Captain to be no well willer of theirs, yet promiſed him a thouſand Crowns, if he would ſave his life and the life of Marlorat, one of their Miniſters: weich he having promiſed to do, by and by he ſhewed him the place whereinto Marlorat, was retired, namely a Tower into which himſelf, his Wife and Children were put, with ſome others. Thus being both brought together, the door was preſently faſt ſhut upn them.

The

Anno 1562. The ſeven and twentieth of October the Conſtable (accompanied with the Duke of Guiſe) coming to view the place, deſired to ſee Marlorat, to whom he ſaid, you are he who have ſeduced the People. To which he replyed, That if he had ſeduced them, it was God that had been the doer of it rather than he; for, ſaid he, I have preached nothing unto them but his Divine Truth. The Conſtable told him, that he was a Seditious perſon, and the cauſe of the ruine of that City. To which he anſwered, As for that imputation, I refer my ſelf to all that have heard me preach, be they Papiſts or Proteſtants, whether I ever medled with matters of Politick State or no: but contrariwiſe have according to my ability, labored to inſtruct them out of the holy Scriptures. The Conſtable with an Oath replyed, That he and his abettors plotted together to make the Prince of Conde, King, the Admiral Duke of Normandy, and Andelot Duke of Britain. To which Marlorat anſwering and teſtifying the innocency of thoſe Noble Perſonages, gat only this for his labour, the Conſtable told him (confirming it with a ſolemn Oath, that within a few days he ſhould ſee whether his God could deliver him out of his hands or no; and ſo departed in great rage.

Not long after, theſe four, to wit, Marlorat, Mandreville, Soquence and Cotton, and other chief men of the Church were brought into the Palace. But the names of the four above ſpecified were only taken, and forthwith their Indictment drawn; whence preſently ſucceeded the Sentence at the inſtance of Bigot Advocate for the King: which Sentence here followeth.

The Court having been informed by the Interrogatories and confeſſions of the Seditious in the City of Rovan, and other parts of the Country, namely by Mr. Jo. Boſc of Mandreville, Preſident of the Court of Requeſts in Rovan, Vincent Gruchet Seignior of Soquence, an antient Counſellor in the ſaid City, Noel Cotton Seignior of Barthonville, the Kings Notary and Secretary, and Counſellor alſo of the ſaid City with Auguſtine Marlorat Preacher and Miniſter in the ſaid City, Monk and Prieſt, having a wife, being all Priſoners in the * Conſciergery of the ſaid Court; concluſions againſt them being taken by the Kings Attorny General, all and every thing and circumſtance conſidered, the Court hath and doth declare the four Perſons aforeſaid guilty and convicted of high Treaſon in every particular: for the puniſhment and ſatisfaction whereof the Court hath adjudged and doth adjudge the ſaid Boſc to be drawn naked, only a ſhirt upon him, on a Sled or Hurdle, into the old Market place, and there to be beheaded upon the Scaffold of the City; which done, his head to be ſet upon a Pole and placed upon the Bridge of the ſaid City; and his Body divided into four parts to be ſet upon four Gibbets, for a Spectacle to the beholders.

And as touching Gruchet and Cotton it is decreed, that they ſhall alſo be drawn in like manner upon a Sled before the Town-houſe of the City, there to be hanged upon a Gibbet, and afterwards their heads, being ſeperated from their bodies, to be affixed and ſet upon the Bridg of the ſaid City, and afterwards to be carried to the Gibbet.

And as touching the ſaid Morlorat, the Court teſtifies that he is attainted and guilty of being one of the Authors of the great aſſemblies, which have been the cauſe of Rebellion and Civil Wars. And therefore as a puniſhment, to ſatisfie the Law for theſe Crimes, the Court hath condemned and doth condemn the ſaid Marlorat otherwiſe called Paſquier, to be drawn upon a Sled, and to be hanged upon a Gibbet before our Ladies Church in Rovan: this done, his head to be ſtriken off from his Body, and ſet upon a Pole upon a Bridge of the ſaid City. All their Goods and heritages to be confiſcate to the Kings uſe, &c.

And underneath it was written;

This preſent Sentence was pronounced and executed in the preſence of the Lords and Commiſſaries, Alexander Moyſi, Morterule, and Sirend Meſſengers, the laſt of October, Anno 1562.

Mandreville at his death ſhewed a wonderful conſtancy, expecting the ſtroke without being bound, calling earneſtly upon God, ſpeaking in the juſt defence of the reformed Churches, in the Faith of which Doctrine he proteſted he was now preſt to yield up his Soul into the hands of God. The death of Mandrevil.

As touching Auguſtine Marlorat, a man excellently learned, and of an unblamable life, who had the Teſtimony even of the Papiſts themſelves, that in his Sermons he never uttered ought that tended to Sedition or Rebellion: they were not content to ſee him drawn upon a Hurdle with ſhame and contempt, but alſo the Conſtable loaded him with a thouſand diſgraces and outrages; as alſo a Son of his called Nombron ſlain ſoon after in the Battle of Dreux. Beſides, Villebon gave him a ſwitch with a Wand, not without reproachful ſpeeches alſo. But he notwithſtanding bare all indignities very meekly and patiently. Marlorat uſed diſgracefully as he went to be executed.

When he was come to the place where he ſhould ſuffer, he made an excellent ſpeech, according as the time there permitted him; exhorting Gruchet and Cotton, who were to ſuffer with him, to ſtand faſt in the Faith unto the end: which they alſo did. And yet the rage of the People not being herewith ſatisfied, a Soldier with his Sword ſtrook at Marlorats Leg, being already dead. Upon which inſolencies God within a while after executed his juſt vengeance; for the Captain who ſurpriſed Marlorat was ſlain within the ſpace of three weeks by one of the baſeſt Soldiers in all the band. And as concerning his Judges, two of them died ſoon after ſtrangely; namely one of them, to wit the Preſident, by a flux of Blood, which they could by no means ſtanch: the other (which was a Councellor) making Water at his Fundament, with ſuch ſtinch, that none could endure to come nigh him. His behaviour at his death. Strange judgments of God befalling ſuch as had an hand in perſecuting of him.

As for Villebon, he eſcaped at no better rate; for the 16th day of February the Marſhal Vieille of Ville, coming to Rovan to take order about the affairs of Diepe, having invited him to Dinner, among other talk between them, ſitting together after they had dined, the Marſhal lamenting the miſerable eſtate of that City, exhorted Villebon to uſe ſome means for the redreſs of ſuch diſorders, being the Kings Leiutenant there. Which words Villebon took very harſhly, ſaying, That if any would dare to tax him for not carrying himſelf as he ought in his place, he would again tell him to his face he lyed. Which words (with often repetitions) he uſed after ſuch a manner, as the Marſhal being therewith very much urged, was forced for ſaving of his honour to draw his Sword; wherewith he let drive with ſuch violence at Villebon, that if he had not received the blow with his hand, he had cleft his head down to his Teeth. So Villebon eſcaped at that time with the loſs of his hand, wherewith he had diſhonorably ſmitten Marlorat at the place of execution. Which hand he cauſed to be buried with greater ſolemnity than himſelf could attain unto afterwards.

A relation of ſuch troubles and perſecutions as happened to thoſe of the Religion in the City of Caen and other Cities of France, as hereafter follow in the year 1562.

Caen.

Such and ſo long continued the Troubles in the City of Rovan, that many were driven to eſcape for their lives into this City of Caen; For albeit the King had commanded, that the pillaging and ſacking of Rovan ſhould not laſt above twenty four hours, the Seditious there continued it above twenty four weeks; and albeit they were forbidden to carry any goods out of that City, yet the Merchants of Paris, of Amiens, Beauvais, and others beſides, ceaſed not to load Carts by Land, and Veſſels by Water: which ſome of them notwithſtanding enjoyed not long; for ſuch as were the receivers of theſe ſpoils were ſpoyled thereof by Thieves which met them upon the way.

Valougnes.

THe Body of Coqueville being ſtripped naked, was dragged by the Murtherers (of this Town, being in Low Normandy) up and down his houſe with all deriſion into a Chamber of his, where the Exhortations were wont to be made; and there ſpurning the dead Body with their feet, they bade him now pray to his God, and preach if he could; Yea, the Prieſts who were then preſent ſtuck not with the points of their Halbards to ſtuff the mouths and wounds of the Dead with the Leaves of Bibles, ſaying to the poor dead Corps, Preach the truth of your God, and call upon him now to help you.

Thalouſe.

A Trumpeter and the Common Cryer in the City called Nicholas Boſche, being commanded by the Seditious to ſay Ave Maria, anſwered with a ſtedfaſt countenance, Ah, the bleſſed Virgin! where is ſhe that I might ſalute her? Then looking about him this way, and that way, he ſaid, I ſee ſhe is not here, ſhe is in Heaven, and thither will I go to find her; and ſo being brought to the place of Execution, he died conſtantly.

Gaillac.

THe Murthers which were committed in this place were cruel and horrible; inſomuch as ſome were forced to go up to the top of an high and great Rock, whereon the Abbey of St. Michael was built, having underneath it the River of Tar very deep, into which they were thrown down headlong, meeting in the paſſage with another Rock, on which ſome were burſt and daſhed all to pieces; and if any fell into the River eſcaping with life, he was knocked down immediately by the Murtherers, who attended waiting in Boats upon ſuch occaſions.

Among the reſt Peter Domo, the Servant of an Apothecary, requeſted he might have leave to caſt himſelf from a place higher than that from which others were thrown down; on condition that if God ſhould in the fall preſerve him from being hurt he might then eſcape with life. He was carried up upon the top of the Abbey, where having made his Prayers unto God, fetching his leap, he flew ſo right forth, that miſſing the Rock, he fell ſafely into the River, whence endeavouring to ſwim out he alſo was knocked down, notwithſtanding their Promiſe made to him as touching the contrary.

Souraize.

A Poor Woman called Caſtille Roques being a Widow, aged about ſixty years, being in her poor Cottage in the City of Souraize, was ſet upon by Captain Durre, having at his command three hundred men. He cauſed this Widow to be faſt bound with Cords, with another faſtened about her neck all night. The next day having half ſtrangled her here and there, he asked how oft ſhe had played the Whore with thoſe of her Religion: to whom ſhe boldly anſwered, That in their Chriſtian meeting no ſuch Villanies were committed. Durre, fretting and fuming at this her anſwer, took her by both the Cheeks, forcing her Head againſt a Wall with ſuch violence, and ſo often therewithal, that he had almoſt beaten out her Brains, and then willed her to give him ſeven hundred pieces of Gold, which ſhe ſaid ſhe had hidden: to which ſhe replying told him, ſhe was a poor Woman, and had only a French Penny; Un Tournois. he chafing thereat drew her again by the Neck with the Cord, and then applied roaſted Eggs even as they came hot out of the fire under her Arm-holes, ſo as they were much bliſtered therewith, and afterwards in deriſion bade her cry to her Father which is in Heaven. She anſwered, I will not cry aloud for thee, and yet he can hear me well enough, and when his will is, he will alſo deliver me out of thy hands; being more afflicted with the Blaſphemies which this Varlet uttered, than with all the torments which ſhe endured on her Body. He having bemauled her Shins with the Pattens ſhe wore upon her Feet, ſhe told him his cruelty far exceeded that of the Turks and Infidels.

Whereupon he calling her Huguenot Whore, told her, That theſe were but the beginnings of her ſorrows, ſo as if ſhe did not diſcloſe unto him ſeven hundred pieces of Gold, he would draw her Cheeks and Breaſts with Lard, and then faſten her to a Form and burn her quick, and after mount her up to the higheſt Steeple in the City, and caſt her thence down headlong. Well, ſaid ſhe, though my Body fall never ſo low, that ſhall not let my Soul from being carried up into Heaven. This Captain being herewith more inflamed with ire than before, ſeeing that none of theſe Cruelties could ſhake the faith and conſtancy of this poor Woman, he ſaid unto her, Eat this Sugar, taking Loam or Mortar from off the Wall, cauſing her to open her mouth with his Dagger, and to ſwallow it down. But not contenting himſelf therewith, the Villain forced her to drink a glaſs of Urine, which himſelf had made in her preſence, and then threw the Glaſs, with what remained therein, in her face. Laſtly, he cauſed her to paſs along through the Troops of Souldiers, with intention to have had her ſlain among them: yet compaſſion moving them to ſpare her, he brought her into his Lodging, where this inraged Wolf by ſtrange Cruelties would have cauſed her to loſe her life, had not ſome of the Inhabitants by giving him ten Crowns redeemed her, and ſo conveyed her to her own houſe, where within a ſhort time after ſhe finiſhed her days. Anno 1562.

One buried alive.

PEter Roch, Servant to the Lieutenant of Dignes, being met withal in the Country, was buried alive; they conſtrained him to dig his own Grave himſelf, and ſo tried whether it were large enough or no; unto which he was compelled by Bartholomew Chauſe-groſſe and his Complices.

Provence.

Two Women Crowned with Thorns.

THe Wife of Andrew Renaud being brought through St. Martins of Caſtillon was ſtripped ſtark naked; and reſiſting ſuch as would have violated her Chaſtity, ſhe was whipped outragiouſly, then wounded with Swords, crowned with Thorns, then caſt into the River, and laſtly ſhot to death with Harquebuſſes.

Jannenta Calvin, of the place of Cella, being of the age of Eighty years, brought into the City of Brignole with a crown of Thorns platted upon her head, being whipped till the blood came exceedingly, was firſt ſtoned and then burned alive.

Maſcon.

THe Murtherers in this City having ſeiſed upon the Body of Bonnet Bor in Maſcon, one of the moſt noble Houſes of the ſame, a man of great Learning and of an unblameable life, who in other places had ſerved in the Miniſtry 20 years, having been ranſomed three ſeveral times, was carried along with a thouſand Scoffs and ſtumps; ſmitten with fiſts through the Corners of the Streets, with crying, That whoſoever would hear this devout and holy man preach, ſhould come to the Slaughter-houſe. Whither having brought him, they buffeted him and mocked him two full hours.

He only requeſted before he died, that they would permit him to make his Prayers to God. Whereupon cutting off the one half of his Noſe, and one of his Ears, they ſaid, Now pray as long as thou wilt, and then we will ſend thee to all the Devils. Then he kneeled down, and lifting up his eyes to heaven prayed with ſuch fervency of Spirit, that he cauſed ſome of his Murtherers to ſigh within themſelves.

Then directing his Speech to him who had cut off his Noſe, he ſaid, Friend, I am here ready to ſuffer what thou haſt yet further to inflict upon me. But this I intreat of thee and thy Companions, to bethink you well of the outrages committed by you againſt this poor City; for know there is a God before whoſe Tribunal you muſt give an account of theſe your Cruelties. At theſe words the blood iſſued ſo faſt out of his Noſe, that it hindred him from proceeding on in that he was about to have ſaid.

A

Anno 1565.

A Captain paſſing by cryed to the Souldiers, Send this wretched man to the Devil. Which one of them hearing, took him by the hand, and brought him to the brim of the River Saone, ſomewhat above the Slaughter houſe, pretending to waſh and cleanſe him from the Blood wherewith his viſage was beſmeared, conducting him to a Boat for this purpoſe; into which he was no ſooner entred, but he there preſently turned him over into the River; wherein he ſtriving for life, and crying to God for mercy, theſe Tyrants battered him with ſtones till he ſunk under the water and ſo died.

See here in part (ſaith the Hiſtoriographer) the lamentable eſtate of the Poor Churches of France, during the firſt troubles, which ended with the end of the Duke of Guiſe, the principal actor therein; who was ſlain at the Siege of Orleance, not without the immediate Hand of God, in the year 1562. by a poor gentleman whoſe name was John Poltrot, a man very deſperat, but of ſmal ſtature, and therefore commonly called the little Spaniard; who ſhooting the Duke into the Shoulder with a Piſtol, as he was riding to his Tent in an evening upon a little Nagg, was for the ſame fact adjudged to be drawn in pieces by four horſes, his head to be cut off, and his torn Body to be burnt to aſhes.

A very comfortable Letter written by Wouter Oom Priſoner and Martyr in the City of Antwerpe, and full of Conſolation againſt the fear of perſecution: directed to a Brother and Sister of his.

Grace and Peace from God the Father, and from his Son Jeſus Chriſt our Lord Amen.

WElbeloved Brother and Siſter, whom I love dearly for the truths ſake and for your Faith in Chriſt Jeſus. Theſe are to certifie you that I am in Bodily health, and enjoy the comfort of a good Conſcience, I praiſe my Lord God therefore, who is able to increaſe the ſame more and more, by the powerful operation of his holy Spirit. Whoſoever they be that will forſake this preſent evil world, and become followers of their Captain Chriſt, muſt make account to meet with many perſecutions and afflictions: for Chriſt hath told us aforehand, that we ſhould be hated, perſecuted, and baniſhed out of the world, for his names ſake. And this they will do, ſaith he, becauſe they have neither known the Father, nor me. But be not afraid, ſaith he, for I have overcome the world. St. Paul alſo witneſſeth the ſame thing, ſaying, all that will live godly in Chriſt Jeſus muſt ſuffer perſecution. And again, to you it is given for Jeſus Chriſt not onely to believe in him, but alſo to ſuffer for his ſake. And doth not our Lord Jeſus Chriſt ſay, bleſſed are you when men perſecute you and ſpeak all manner of evil falſely againſt you for my name ſake? Rejoyce therefore and be glad, for great is your reward in Heaven. Now whereto ſerveth all this, my beloved, but to bring us into a conformity with our Lord and Maſter Jeſus Chriſt? For Chriſt hath ſuffered for us, ſaith the Apoſtle Saint Peter, leaving us an example, that we ſhould walk in his ſteps: who alſo endured the Croſs, and deſpiſed the ſhame, for the obtaining of that joy which was ſet before him, and became poor to make us rich, 2 Cor. 8. 9.

Mat. 10. 12. John 16. 3. 2 Tim. 3. 12. Phil. 1. 24. Mat. 5. 11. 12. 1 Pet. 2. 21. Heb. 12. 2.

By him alſo are we brought by Faith into that ſtate of Grace wherein we ſtand, rejoycing in the hope of the glory of God, knowing that tribulation worketh patience, &c. Wherefore dear Brother and Siſter, be not afrayd of the fiery tryal which is now ſent amongſt us to prove us. For what Father loving his Child doth not correct it? Even ſo doth the Lord chaſtiſe thoſe whom he loveth: for if we ſhould be without correction, whereof all True Chriſtians are partakers, then were we Baſtards and not Sons. And therefore Salomon ſaith, my Son, deſpiſe not the chaſtening of the Lord, neither faint when thou are corrected of him; for whom the Lord loveth, the ſame he correcteth, even as a Father the Son in whom he delighteth. Fear not then to follow the footſteps of Chriſt; for he is the head and we are his members. Even as Chriſt then hath obtained full joy and glory by ſufferings of anguiſhes and ſorrows; ſo we alſo according to his example muſt through many tribulations enter into the heavenly places, even into the new Jeruſalem. Let us then ſay with Saint Paul, Chriſt unto me is in life and in death advantage. Let us cry out with him, O wretched creatures that we are, who ſhall deliver us from this Body of death? See here how the faithful have deſired to be with Chriſt: for with Abraham they had an eye to that holy City, whoſe builder and maker is God. Let us then, my beloved, cheerfully and willingly follow the Lord, poſſeſſing our Souls by patience. For it is a good thing, as ſaith the Prophet Jeremiah, both to hope and quietly to wait for the Salvation of the Lord; and good alſo it is for a man to bear the yoke in his youth, for ſuch the Lord will comfort in the end, and reſtore unto them the joy of his Salvation.

Rom. 5. 2. Heb. 12. Prov. 3. 11. 12. Acts 14. 22. Phil. 1. 21. Rom. 7. 24. Heb. 11. 10. Lam. 3. 26.

Loe here dear Brother and Siſter, what Conſolations our God hath treaſured up for us in his holy Word; for us I ſay, whoſe deſire it is to fear the Lord, and to truſt in his grace and mercy. For the Salvation of the Righteous is of the Lord: he is their ſtrength in the time of trouble. Wherefore (q) giving all diligence, let us add to Faith vertue, and to vertue knowledge, and to knowledge temperance, and to temperance patience, and to patience godlineſs, and to godlineſs Brotherly kindneſs, and to Brotherly kindneſs love; for if theſe things be in us and abound, they will cauſe us neither to be idle nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt: The which God our Father grant us for his Sons ſake our Lord, Amen.

Pſal. 37. 39. (q) 2 Pet. 1. 5, 6, 7, 8.

Out of my hole, December the eleventh, 1562.

Wouter Oom Priſoner for the Truth.

Now becauſe ye may ſee that this Letter was not without its effect, hearken to the Relation of the Hiſtory following.

THere was one John Wolfe of the City of Audenard, who becauſe he could no longer inhabit there, without either the danger of his life, or wounding of Conſcience, his Wife being great with Child, and as yet but weak in the knowledge of the Goſpel, he was forced for theſe reſpects to joyn himſelf to the aſſembly of the Church in Antwerp, where thinking himſelf in ſafety, a Neighbour of his owing him ill will accuſed him to the Margrave about the Baptiſing of his Child. Whereupon being then committed, and examined where and in whoſe preſence his Child was Baptized, he without ſtraggering anſwered, that he had it Baptiſed according to the inſtitution of Chriſt, by a Miniſter ſet apart to that Office. The Margrave, not content with this anſwer, often preſſed him with ſundry threats of the Torture to accuſe ſuch as he knew. But the ſharpeſt combat he endured was from his own Fleſh, Counſelling him during his Impriſonment, for the ſafegard of his life, to diſſemble and halt between two opinions. The cauſe was from the inward affection he bore towards his Wife and Child, being yet but young and of ſingular beauty; in regard whereof many of the Congregation expected no other but that he would ſink under this Tryal.

But in the midſt of theſe Aſſaults hee was heard, with Prayers and ſighs, to cry nightily to God to bee delivered from the temptation. Which Prayers of his were heard in due ſeaſon, even then when in the judgment of man he was ſuppoſed to be overcome thereof, means was made of bringing to his hands conſolatory Letters: as alſo the ſaid Wouter Oom then Priſoner with him, comforted him not a little by his Letters. Whereby in the end he contiued ſo ſtrong in the Lord, as alſo conſtant in the Confeſſion of the truth, that in concluſion he received the ſentence of Death with the aforeſaid Wouter. After which his Wife came unto him, and they were permitted to talk together, burſting out each of them inin ſuch abundance of tears, that it would have moved the moſt ſtony heart that ever was. At parting, with a bitter cry hee commended her to Gods mighty protection, and his Child to be trained up in the True Religion. Soon after, hee was drowned in the Tub or Fat of the Priſon, and and the next hanged upon one of the Gibbets near unto the City.

A Relation of the troubles and Martyrdom of Chriſtian Quekere, Jaques Dionſſart, and Jean de Salomez of Steenwerk in Flanders.

To whom God gave ſuch ability to anſwer their enemies demands, as if they had come from perſons much more learned. Which ſhewes, that God meaſures out to all the gifts and Graces of his Holy Spirit, according to his good will and pleaſure.

WHileſt the perſecution continued at this time in ſundry places of Flanders; under Philip King of Spain, and that many fled into England under the protection of Queen Elizabeth; theſe three above mentioned were of the ſame number, who joyned themſelves to the Dutch Church in London, having given publique Teſtimony of their Faith before all the Congregation. In which place they continued not long, but they were conſtrained upon ſome ſpecial occaſions to return into their own Countrey again taking boat about the end of June, Anno 1560.

They were no ſooner arrived at Neiuport, but two of them, to wit, James and Jean, endeavored to paſs on to Honſcot, leaving Chriſtian to come at his leiſure, becauſe he was not well at eaſe, having alſo a fardel of ſmall Books of Religion.

The Bailif with ſome others meeting him upon the way, asked him whence he came and whither he was going, as alſo what he was. Chriſtian framed them ſuch an anſwer that they could take no advantage againſt him (travelling as he did upon the way) only they ſpied about him that fardel of Books, by occaſion whereof they brought him back into the City: and having learned that he came over with two others, the Bailif forthwith ſent his lieutenant towards Honſcot; who ſo wilily handled the matter, that in the end he caught them, and brought them bound to the City of Furn. Where for a few days they were Priſoners together with the foreſaid Chriſtian; in which condition they mutually comforted and encouraged one another: but their Adverſaries ſoon ſeparated them, thinking thereby to weaken their ſtrength, conſtancy, and fortitude.

Upon the firſt of their interrogatories (which was about the third and fourth of July) they asked James why he ſeparated from the Church of Rome.

Anſ. Becauſe it is not the Church of Chriſt.

Queſt. How know you that?

Anſwer. Becauſe it hath neither the Word of God ſoundly preached, the Sacraments duly adminiſtred, nor the Eccleſiaſtical Diſciplin after a right manner executed. James gave good and ſolid reaſons hereof; ſhewing, that in their Church was taught, that Souls muſt be ſaved by ſaying of Maſs, long prayers, Invocation of Saints, Pilgrimages, with other ſuch vain and deceivable hopes; yea, ſaid the Prieſt, do you thus judge of thoſe who give to Jeſus Chriſt Bread when he is hungry, and drink when he is thirſty, and cloath him being naked, &c. And ſo went on with multiplying many words, not ſuffering the ſaid James to finiſh what he was about to have ſaid. Others asked him if he could prove that they had not the true adminiſtration of Baptiſm.

Anſwer. You have ſo obſcured it with your own additions, that a man can ſcarce diſcern it to be Baptiſm.

Queſt. What think you then of your own Baptiſm.

Anſw. Were I now to be Baptiſed, I would not receive it from your Church, ſo well it likes me that I have received it from you. Being demanded what he ſaid to the Sacrament of the Altar, he proved evidently how farr off it was from the firſt inſtitution of the Lords Supper. And as concerning the Eccleſiaſtical diſcipline, he uttered more of their corrupting of it, then they were willing to hear.

After this, they were examined by two Friers, who were choſen out for the purpoſe; one of them was John Campo, ſuperintendent of the Gray Friers of Dixmude, the other was called Peter Pennet Prior of the Carmelites in Ypre. Theſe two examined the three Priſoners firſt upon the Articles of the Faith; and then, if they believed that Chriſt was made of the ſeed of the Woman? James anſwered, we are all perſwaded that Jeſus Chriſt was made of the ſeed of the Woman, according as God hath promiſed, Gen. 3. 15. Moreover, of the ſeed of Abraham, Gal. 4. and of David; and that he was in all things made like Rom. 1. 3. Heb. 4. 15. unto his Brethren, Sin only excepted.

Anno 1566.

After many other queſtions upon divers points, they were asked, whether in the Conſecration of the Maſs the Body of Chriſt was preſent there or no? No, ſaid James, It is nothing like the Lords Supper which Chriſt gave to them that ſate at Table with him: According to which inſtitution the faithful being aſſembled together, Acts 2. 42. brake Bread, &c. Nor ſhall ye find in the Scriptures, that one alone receiveth, and that the reſt ſtood and looked on. And if Saint Paul juſtly challenged the Corinthians, becauſe every one was forward to eat his own ſupper apart, much more are ye worthy of their Reprehenſion. I do therefore rank you amongſt thoſe falſe Prophets which our Lord Jeſus Chriſt hath warned us of, who will ſay thus unto us, Lo, here is Chriſt, and there he is. 1 Cor. 11. 20. Mat. 24. 23.

Hereunto the Adverſaries replyed, Doth not Chriſt in expreſs words ſay, This is my Body, This is my Blood?

Anſwer. The words muſt not be taken as they ſound in a literal ſence, for ſo they ſhall have no agreement with other like places of Scripture. You know the words belonging to the antient Sacraments were expounded by the Holy Ghoſt himſelf; Circumciſion is called the Covenant, and the Lamb is called the Paſſeover, albeit they were but the ſigns thereof.

They asked if God were not omnipotent.

Yes, ſaid James, but yet he will do nothing againſt his Word.

Queſt. If the Bread be not changed, why doth Saint Paul affirm, That whoſoever eats of this Bread unworthily, eats judgment to himſelf, not diſcerning the Lords Body. 1 Cor. 11. 29.

We acknowledge all this, ſaid they, becauſe a man ought to examin himſelf, before he preſume to come to that Holy Banquet; for in the Supper we receive not only Bread and Wine, but do alſo truly partake of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, as Saint Paul teacheth us.

In the fourth place, they were asked if mariage were not a Sacrament? No, ſaid James, for Sacraments are not things indifferent to Chriſtians, as mariage is; for Saint Paul ſaith, he that gives his Virgin in mariage doth well, but he that gives her not in mariage doth better. We hold wedlock to be an holy Ordinance of God, inſtituted in Paradiſe from the beginning of the world, honoured by Jeſus Chriſt with his firſt miracle, yea we add further, that as mariage is honourable among all, and the bed undefiled, ſo Whoremongers and Adulterers God will judge. 1 Cor. 10. 16. Matrimony. 1 Cor. 7. 8. 29. 38. John 2. Heb. 13. 4.

Queſt. But Saint Paul ſaith, it is a great Sacrament.

Anſwer. Why do you forbid it then? But that place of Paul by you alledged is not to be underſtood of mariage, but is meant of that ſpeciall myſtical union and Communion which is between Chriſt and his Church. Ephes. 5. 32.

Queſt. They asked him if confeſſion were a Sacrament. Confeſſion.

Anſwer. I find but two Sacraments mentioned in the New Teſtament. If you can find out any more, you ſhall do well to ſhew them. But as touching Confeſſion, it is to God, to whom we muſt confeſs our ſins, according to Davids example, and of the Prodigal Son, and ſundry other, who with true repentance acknowledged their offences to God, who is faithful and juſt to pardon and forgive them. But to confeſs them to a Prieſt, it is ſo farr off from being neceſſary, that I hold it altogether unlawful. Theſe Fathers had their refuge to their wonted place of Saint James, Confeſs your faults one to another. Pſal 32. 5. Luke 15. 18. 1 John 1. 9. James. 5. 16.

Anſwer. The Apoſtle would have us to confeſs our faults to ſuch as we have wronged by word or deed. Alſo God enjoyns us to reconcile our ſelves one with another by ſuch a confeſſion, if we would obtain pardon of him. Mat. 6. 12. Mar. 16. 19.

Then

Anno 1566.

Then they alledged that place of Saint Matthew, That whatſoever they bound on earth was bound in heaven.

Anſwer. Chriſt ſpeaks there of Eccleſiaſtical diſcipline, which ought to be obſerved amongſt Chriſtians, by admonitions, and then by applying the Cenſures, according to the Doctrine of the Goſpel, that ſo obſtinate Sinners may be caſt out of the Church. But all the world may ſee that you know not what this true diſcipline of Chriſt meaneth, nor what a right Miniſtry is in your Churches:

Extreme unction. Queſt. At leaſt you acknowledge Extreme Unction to be a Sacrament, ſeeing Saint James ſpeaks ſo cleerly of it.

James 5. 14. Mark 6. 13. Anſwer. The anointing that Saint James ſpeaks of is nothing like to your anointings. For that was a miraculous anointing for healing of the Body, and that, whilſt the gift of healing was uſual in the Church. But you anoint ſuch as lye drawing on, and do it for the Salvation of their Souls. It is needful, I grant, to ſend for the Miniſter, to comfort the ſick, and to pray with them and for them, but not to beſmear and greaſe them.

Confirmation Queſt. Well, what ſay you to Confirmation? is not that a Sacrament?

Anſwer. In all the Scripture (ſaid James) do I not find ſuch a thing as your confirmation, as you now uſe it, and therefore I know not what it is. Here they cauſed the Regiſter to write, Non credit.

Then came they to the order of Prieſthood, and asked if that were not a Sacrament.

1 Pet 2. 9. Anſwer. No, no more than the reſt. I am not ignorant that St. Peter calls the faithful a choſen Generation, a Royal Prieſthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; nor yet where Saint John ſaith, that Chriſt hath made us Kings and Prieſts; but what is all this to your Biſhops and Prieſts?

Rev. 1. 6. Queſt. What thinkeſt thou of the Pope.

2 Theſſ. 2. 9. 10. 1 Tim. 4. 3. Anſwer. I think him to be the ſame that Daniel and St. Paul foretold he ſhould be. For he ſhews himſelf ſuch a one as they have deſcribed him to be, coming with falſe ſigns, and lying wonders, ſitting in the Temple of God, and exalting himſelf above all that is called God forbidding mariage, which God hath ordained, and meat which God hath commanded to be received with giving of thanks.

Purgatory. Queſtion. What ſay you then unto Pargatory?

1 John 1. 7. Anſwer. We acknowledge none other Purgatory, but the Blood of Chriſt, which only cleanſeth us from all our ſins.

Queſt. Do not the Saints pray for us, and ought we not to pray to them?

Prayer to Saints. Anſwer. God alone is to be worſhipped, and prayed unto. Whileſt the Saints were on earth they would not endure to be adored. Acts. 10. 25. 26. Which they then would rather have permitted (being clothed with corruption, and with natural deſires of being honoured) then now when they have put off all carnal and human affections. The Angels themſelves would not accept of Divine worſhip, Revelat. 19. 10. and 22. 9. They had many other diſputes, which James could not write for want of paper, as he intimated to them of the Church.

The fourteenth of Auguſt they were examined the third time by Peter Titleman Dean of Renay, Inquiſitor general of Flanders, whoſe cruelties and extortions were exerciſed upon all the faithful, in all the perſecutions and deaths which they ſuffered in the ſaid Country. This morning was brought before him Jane Solomez, of whom he diligently enquired of thoſe of the City of Steenewerke where ſhe was born; but eſpecially if ſhe knew one Charles Vanderkaw, a man renowned among the faithful there. She anſwered ſhe knew him, but he was now dead. After he had asked her name, he queſtioned with her, eſpecially about the Sacraments, yea ſomewhat concerning the Lords Supper, holding her in theſe diſcourſes about two hours before him.

To James Dienſart he propounded no queſtions, but came about him with theſe flattering ſpeeches; My Son, you are young and in the prime of your youth: Therefore the Magiſtrate of this City is very deſirous you ſhould be withdrawn from holding this new Doctrine, that ſo you might be brought again into the right way; but as I underſtand, you ſo perſiſt therein, that there is no removing of you. James anſwered that it could not be called a new Doctrine, which was built upon the Prophets and Apoſtles.

To whom the Inquiſitor replyed, That Martin Luther was the firſt that broached it.

Anſwer. And what ſay you then to ſo many learned men which lived before him, as John Wickliffe, John Hus, &c. and ſome after him, as Calvin, John Aläſco, Martin Micron, and others in England, France, and Frieſland? And though neither you nor I knew them, God knows them as well as he did the ſeven thouſand of the godly, whom Elias in his days was ignorant of. The Inquiſitor, perſiſting in his old ſong, preſſed him with the ſucceſſion of his Prelates and Biſhops. James put him in mind of another mark of the True Church, namely that it was always under perſecution; and thence inferred that himſelf was a true member thereof. 1 Kin. 19. 18.

The Inquiſitor ſaid, we are now perſecuted in England: for now they begin to impriſon ſome of our Prieſts there.

Anſwer. It is true that Boner late Biſhop of London was committed to Priſon, but not for his good deeds. The reſt of them have their liberty.

Now this Inquiſitor among other matters willing him to ſhew what ſervice was due to the Virgin Mary, ſaid, Is it not written, Honour all men? And what honour owe we then to the Mother of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt? 1 Pet 2. 17.

You give her (ſaid James) a goodly honour in bowing the knee before an Image of wood or ſtone, praying thereto as to your God. You may be aſhamed of ſuch abhominable practiſes and Blaſphemies. Much other reaſonings they had, which the ſaid James, for lack of paper and leiſure, could not commit to writing.

The ſame day in the afternoon Chriſtian Luckere, who was put into Priſon apart, was alſo preſented before this Inquiſitor, and examined upon many Articles. In all his anſwers he ſhewed much courage; and when the other went about to prove that Jeſus Chriſt was corporally preſent in the Sacraments, Chriſtian uſed ſix or ſeven ſtrong reaſons to the contrary drawn out of the holy Scriptures, That it could by no means be granted, being repugnant to the truth. The Adverſary perceiving the conſtancy of theſe three Priſoners, ſought by all means to vex and weaken them. Firſt they ſevered them one from another to deprive them of mutual comfort and Conſolation. Secondly, gave charge, that in viſiting them none ſhould be ſo bold as to bring them ought to eat or drink. Thirdly, They were ſolicited by wicked ones to yield, and not wilfully to hazard their lives. Moreover, they had many other great provocations, and therefore by their Letters inſtantly requeſted the continual prayers of the Churches to God for them.

When the godly ſtrangers in England were adverti-ſed of theſe their aſſaults, they ſolicited their Superintendent Edmund Biſhop of London, at the requeſt of the Archbiſh. of Canterbury, and others, to ſend Letters to the Magiſtrates of Furne, intreating that they would releaſe theſe three Priſoners, whom they had apprehended as they paſſed along by the high ways ſide, without any misbehaving of themſelves, or holding any diſpute with any, and were innocent in regard of committing ought againſt the Laws of the Countrey. As touching their Faith which ſome called into queſtion, they ſhould not for that be moleſted; becauſe in like manner her Majeſty hath given free power and leave in caſe of Religion hitherto, that none of the Subjects of the Low-Countries, coming into England, and carrying themſelves modeſtly, ſhould be medled withal. But if they ſhall deal ſo hardly with thoſe of the Religion, who have ſubmitted themſelves as her Majeſtys ſubjects under her protection, then ſhall ſhe be conſtrained, though to her great ſorrow, to mete out the ſame meaſure to thoſe of other Nations; but ſhe hoped and expected the Contrary, both from the wisdom and equity of the Magiſtrates of Furne.

Theſe Letters were dated the 26. of July 1560. and ſubſcribed.

THe Magiſtrates of Furne having received theſe Letters ſent them to Bruxels, where they were read before the Kings privy Counſel. But to extenuate the Authority thereof, it was noiſed that they were forged by ſome Lutherans; ſo as in the end they reſolved (notwithſtanding) to proceed againſt the ſaid Priſoners, according to extremity of the Laws eſtabliſhed by the King. Now theſe of Furne having in vain by all means aſſayed to turn the Priſoners from their Faith, they reſolved to execute them. Many of the City, and others not dwelling far off, hearing the report of their purpoſed diſpatch, prepared to come to the ſight thereof, thinking it would have been on Wedneſday which was Market-day. But the Magiſtrates taking notice of the multitude were ſomewhat amazed, and cauſed him that was to do execution to ride through the midſt of the Market at high noon, as if he had been taking his journey out of the City, and ſo to make the people believe that they intended not their execution as yet. But on Wedneſday towards the evening, the chief Bailiff accompanied with ſome of the Magiſtrates, came ſecretly into the Priſon, ſoliciting each of the ſaid Priſoners with many intreaties and inticing perſwaſions to recant; promiſing to ſet them free forthwith, if they would ſpeak but one word to that purpoſe. But the Lord ſtrengthned them ſo, that they overcame this dangerous aſſault. The Adverſaries, ſeeing their expectations fruſtrated, cauſed all things the ſame night to be made ready for their execution the next day; to wit, chains, ſtakes, fagots, &c. Now the Lord, who hath the diſpoſing of the Moments of time in his own hands, diſappointed this project by a vehement ſhower of rain, which he ſent, continuing all the forenoon.

The two Friers formerly mentioned were called for; each of them accompanied with one of their own coat. Theſe began to aſſail the Priſoners from morning till eight of the clock, either to weaken, or elſe to turn them from their Faith. Which becauſe they could effect neither upon James nor Chriſtian, they dealt with Jane, thinking to have prevailed with her; but to as little purpoſe as with the two others. Being thus diſappointed of their hopes, then they fled to their accuſtomed lies, which they term Fraudes pieuſes, pious beguilings, ſaying thus unto her; Will you only ſhew your ſelf ſingular in cleaving to this opinion, whereas your priſon-fellows have renounced it?

The holy Virgin was nothing abaſhed thereat, but gave them this anſwer, That ſhe could not believe it; and albeit it were ſo, yet would ſhee never go back from ſo certain a truth, grounded not upon man, but upon Jeſus Chriſt?

Theſe lying Friers, nothing prevailing with her neither, went their way. Then the Priſoners encouraging one another, and preparing themſelves for death, ſang the ſeventy fourth Pſalm. The Magiſtrates of Furne, that they might with the more ſecurity execute their ſentence, cauſed the Gates of the City to be ſhut; and yet many got in, leaving their ſwords and ſtaves at the gate. Now as they brought the Priſoners along to the Town-houſe. Every one as they went reached forth their hand to them, and bad them that they ſhould be of good courage.

Appearing before the Magiſtrates they were denounced Hereticks. To which Chriſtian, in the name of the reſt, ſaid, Not one of your Doctors can prove us Hereticks, nor can they convince us by Scripture. It was replyed that they ſleighted the Sacraments. To which they freely anſwered: We hold and allow thoſe Sacraments, inſtituted by God, in much more reverence than you. Upon this the Magiſtrates conſulted together apart; and after a while came to their ſeats again, pronouncing ſentence againſt theſe three, viz. to be ſtrangled, and then burned or ſcorched, and the remainder of the Bodies to be hanged on the Gibbet. They thanked the Judges for their ſentence; yet advertiſing them well to bethink themſelves of what they had done. As they were paſſing forth of the houſe to be led to the ſlaughter, many of the godly bad them farewel, comforting, incouraging, and exhorting them to continue conſtant. Whereat the head Bailiff being much vexed puſhed Jane ſo violently with his foot, that ſhe fell down the ſtairs, at which the people were much moved. Chriſtian went foremoſt, Jane next, and James followed. In beholding of which ſpectacle few there were which brake not forth into ſighings, cryings, and tears, whileſt they gave the people ſo holy and godly exhortations. One of the Monks called John Bels, being by, gave to Jane (many of good credit hearing it) this counſel in his Language, Fight valiantly, the Crown of immortality is ready for you. Whileſt the executioner began to faſten their neck and feet with chains to the Stake, they ſung the hundred and thirtieth Pſalm, Out of the deep.

Anno 1566.

Frier John Compone, being impatient of ſuch an harmony, yelled out like a mad man, ſaying, This ſhews you are not Chriſtians; for Chriſt went to his death weeping. One in the middle of the aſſembly cryed as faſt on the other ſide, Thou lieſt thou falſe Prophet. Having finiſhed the two firſt ſtaves of the Pſalm, the hangman being about to ſtrangle Chriſtian, the other two ceaſed, crying to their Brother; Be of good cheer and play the man. And Chriſtian, lifting up his eyes to Heaven, ſaid twice or thrice, Lord God heavenly Father into thy hands I commend my Spirit. And then again, Lord forgive their Sin who have put us to death. James and the Maid made the like prayer. But becauſe James was laſt ſtrangled, and the people moved with compaſſion began to ſtir, the Hangman kindled the fire upon James being but half ſtrangled. The people ſeeing him to die in the midſt of the fire, were yet more moved, ſo as the Tormentor being in a maze got a ſtaff out of a Boat headed with Iron, and ſmote the Martyr twice or thrice on the right ſide, to make an end of him. Theſe three having a while lien in the fire, they were carried thence in a Cart to the gibbet, where being put apart upon 3 poles they were afterward taken down and buried.

Nicaiſe of Tombe born in Tournay, Martyr.

Whoſe conſtancy is to be imitated and followed of every good Chriſtian, in ſuffering for the Truth of the Goſpel.

NIcaiſe dwelling in Tournay, and following the trade of Say-making, towards the end of his life, was then by the mercy of God brought to the knowledge of True Religion. Now that he might be the more throughly inſtructed therein, he went with his wife and family into the City of Weſell in baſe Almaine. In which City there was at that time an aſſembly of ſtrangers, and eſpecially of thoſe who are called Wallons, exerciſing themſelves in hearing the Word of God purely preached, and in receiving the holy Sacraments. But Satan the mortal enemy of Gods Children, envying their happineſs, ſoon after troubled this Aſſembly in ſuch wiſe with ſundry queſtions, that ſome retired to Frankfort, others to Strausburg, and ſome to other places. Nicaiſe returned to Tournay whence he came, not to communicate there with the ſuperſtitions and abominations in which he had formerly been inwrapped, but to joyn himſelf to the Chriſtian Aſſembly which met together in that place; to manifeſt the truth of that heavenly knowledge, which he had received out of the word of God.

Where notice being taken of him, they received him into their ſociety, amongſt whom he carried himſelf in ſo Chriſtian a ſort, as they well perceived him to be a man of an holy converſation, joyned with an earneſt deſire to advance the glory of God, and the kingdom of Chriſt, in the edification of his Church. Now foraſmuch as affliction is the true touchſtone whereby the faithful are diſcerned from Hypocrites; Nicaiſe then ſhewed outwardly what he was within. For being importuned to take an Oath from thoſe who were deputed thereunto by the King of Spaine, to live according to the cuſtome of the Romiſh Church, and to obſerve the traditions invented by her; he, notwithſtanding the threats and injuries done unto him, conſtantly held out againſt the ſaid Oath, not caſting how dear it might coſt him in the end. Some of his kindred wiſhed him at leaſtwiſe to withdraw himſelf aſide for awhile into another City, till the urging of this this Oath was over, as alſo that his Wife ſhould change her Lodging in his abſence.

To this counſel he conſented; but the Lord, who governs all our intentions and purpoſes, had otherwiſe determined of him, namely to ſet him forth as an example of conſtancy unto others, and to bear witneſs ſo far to the Truth of the Goſpel, as to ſeal the ſame with his Blood, by ſtaying him at that time in the City. For being ready to take his Journey, a near Neighbour of his, being an Enemy of the Goſpel, accuſed him to the Commiſſioners for one that neither had nor would take the Oath according to the form appointed. Nicaiſe requiring to hear the tenour of the Oath, before he would make them anſwer, they told him that he muſt ſwear to keep and obſerve all ancient Cuſtoms; to receive in the Sacrament of the Altar his Creatour thrice in the year, and on Sundays and Holydays to hear Maſs, morning and evening. As ſoon as he had underſtood their meaning, he told them, he intended not at all to take any ſuch Oath, nor to wound his Conſcience in conſenting to things ſo manifeſtly contradicting the Word of God; therewithal yielding them the reaſons of this his reſolution; accuſing as well them for urging ſuch an Oath, as thoſe alſo who gave their conſents thereto. Upon this he was committed and laid amongſt Felons, in the Gaol called Pipegne, until Friday the 12*th* of November, on which day he received Sentence of death; namely to be bound and ſo led into the Market-place of the City, and there upon a Scaffold to be burned and conſumed to aſhes.

Having heard this Sentence, as he roſe up, he ſaid, now praiſed be God; and as he was about to have ſpoken more at large, the Procurer Fiſcal being preſent prevented him, and thruſting him forward bid him march on. By and by they brought him to the place of Execution; and as it well fell out, having no Prieſt accompanying him, when he was come down to the Market-place, a near Friend of his coming to him commended him to God, and ſo they kiſſed each other.

* Which is a Watch-Tower ſtanding before the City-Hall where the Clock is.

Being now come nigh to the * Befroy of the City, ſeeing there a great multitude of People, who were aſſembled together to ſee him paſs by, lifting up his voice, he ſpake thus, O ye Men of Tournay open your eyes; awake ye that ſleep, and ſtand up from the dead, and Chriſt ſhall give you light.

He alſo prayed all whom he had any way offended to forgive him, as he for his part was ready to forgive all the World. The People hearing him ſay ſo, began to be moved and to make a great muttering. The multitude alſo that were come together were ſo many, that the Souldiers who incompaſſed the Patient (being now ready to ſuffer) could neither march nor keep rank; ſo as they were about to ſhoot. Which the People perceiving began to be moved ſo much the more, ſo as there had like to have been a great tumult. But going on they drew nigh to the place where the Scaffold was.

Nicaiſe all the while ſpent the time in prayer unto God, and being at the place of Execution he uttered theſe words, Lord, they have hated me without a cauſe, and aſcended up joyfully to the Scaffold: where the Tormentors readily received him, and led him to the Stake; and as they were faſtening him to it, he ſaid, Eternal Father, have pity and compaſſion upon me, according as thou haſt promiſed to all that ask the ſame of thee in thy Sons Name. Other Prayers he made there to his God, and ſo continued to his laſt gaſp. And albeit the multitude made ſuch a noiſe, and the beating of the Drums hindred his words from being all fully heard; yet he ſo often pronounced, and that with ſuch vehemency, the word Jeſus, that it, notwithſtanding, might plainly be underſtood as long as the breath was in his Body. And thus ye have heard the godly life and bleſſed end of this conſtant Martyr.

Martin Bayart, Claude du Flot, with Jo. Dantricourt, born in the Country of Artois and Noel Tournemine, of Hering near Seclin, Martyrs 1566.

YOu may eaſily diſcern by the former Hiſtories, that the Cruelties exerciſed againſt the Faithful in Flanders nothing diminiſhed the increaſing of them; or the innocent Blood thus ſhed was a means to bring many ignorant Souls to the knowledge of the Truth. Theſe four above-named, dwelling in the City of Liſle, walked in the fear of the Lord, with zeal according to knowledge, as the event well manifeſted.

There was a Jeſuit in the ſaid City who had a Servant that was Couſin to one of the Martyrs, with whom they laboured, not without ſome peril, firſt to ſhew him the odiouſneſs of that Sect, and then to inſtruct him in the Doctrine of the Goſpel. To which purpoſe they lent him a Book containing good Inſtructions drawn out of the holy Scriptures. The ſilly Fellow, not conſidering the hurt that might follow, ſhewed it ſoon after to his Maſter. The falſe Prophet by and by knew that this Book was not forged upon his Anvil, and therefore diligently enquired of his man where he had it. Now that he might with the more expedition attain his deſire, he gave him a piece of ſeven Stivers, telling him he ſhould do well to bring him to the knowledge of them from whom he had received it; which was not hard to do, in regard they all four wrought upon their Trade (which was to dreſs Sayes) in an honeſt Widows houſe, who profeſſed the ſame Religion with them.

The Jeſuit coming to the knowledge hereof failed not, according to their guiſe, to reveal it to the Magiſtrate. Now leſt he might be ſuſpected to be the betrayer of them, the Fox withdrew himſelf the ſame time out of the City, whilſt on a Saturday morning about two of the Clock theſe four were apprehended and impriſoned by the Magiſtrate. It fell out the ſame day, that certain Writings were ſet up upon the Town-houſe againſt the horrible tyranny of the Spaniſh Inquiſition, which was then intended to be brought in and executed throughout the Low-Countries, which no doubt were the means whereby the Magiſtrates were the rather incenſed againſt the Priſoners. But foraſmuch as they were not found guilty of having any hand in this buſineſs, they were only examined about matters concerning their Faith. To which they anſwered with ſuch courage and conſtancy, without varying or wavering, that the Gaoler wondred how they could anſwer the Judges ſo directly and pertinently (as it were with one conſent) being notwithſtanding ſevered one from another in the Priſon.

The ſecond of March 1566. they were condemned for Hereticks by the Provoſt of the City, to the which they replied, that if they were Hereticks then Gods Word muſt needs be Hereſie, which could not be; and therefore they freely proteſted before all, that they were Chriſtians, and held nothing but that which was agreeable to the Word of God. They were asked if they would ſubmit themſelves to the will of the Magiſtrates. They anſwered they would ſubmit themſelves to the will of God. Then was Sentence of death forthwith pronounced upon them, which was, that they ſhould be burned alive before the Town-houſe. When they were brought out of Priſon to be Executed, Noels Father came and embraced him, and kiſſing him ſaid, Art thou led my Son in this ſort unto death? This is nothing, Father, ſaid he, for now am I going to life. And howſoever Noel wept in going up to the Scaffold, ſeeing his Father ſo diſſolved into Tears; yet recovering himſelf, and being armed with new courage, he cried, O ye Prieſts, if we would have gone to your Maſs, we needed not to have been here: but Jeſus Chriſt never commanded nor inſtituted any ſuch thing.

The Prieſts ſtanding at the foot of the Scaffold, laboured to make the People believe they were Hereticks, and that their Faith was the Faith of Devils, becauſe they rejected the Sacraments. But to that one of them anſwered, that their Faith was nothing like to that of Devils; and as touching the Sacraments, they held ſo many as Chriſt ordained. Then ſaid Martin, ſuffer us to die in peace, for we are in the right way and are going to Jeſus Chriſt, hinder us not in this our Journey; with theſe and the like ſpeeches the Prieſts mouths were ſtopped; not daring to come upon the Scaffold, as they were wont to do.

John Dauticourt coming up recited the Articles of the Creed, adding ſomewhat by way of expoſition upon every Article. Thoſe who knew him before his Impriſonment marvelled to hear him ſpeak ſo judiciouſly. The Executioner thinking to pleaſe his Maſters offered to gag him: but the Patient promiſed to hold his peace.

Yet

Yet being ſtriatly faſtned to the Stake by the neck, he ſaid to the People; O my Friends, were it for ſpeaking wickedly that they commanded me to be ſilent, it were ſomewhat, but I cannot be permitted to ſpeak unto you the Word of God, and with a loud voice ſaid, Who ſhall ſeparate us from the love of Chriſt? ſhall Tribulation, or anguiſh? O Lord, we are delivered to death for thy ſake, and are appointed as ſheep to the ſlaughter. But let us be of good chear my Brethren, for we ſhall be more than Conquerours, through him that loved us.

Mat. 7. 14. The other three on their parts cryed and ſaid, This, this is the way that leads to life; this is the ſtrait way by which we muſt enter thereinto, as Chriſt our Lord hath taught us, Noel likewiſe ſaid, Enter you my Brethren, and whileſt I am alive pray for me; for after death prayers prevail not. When all of them were faſtned to their ſtakes, and covered with fagots, with fire ready to ſet thereto, they began with one voice to ſing the firſt part of the ſeven and twentieth Pſalm, and after that the Song of Simeon to the end: after which the fire began to be kindled, in the midſt whereof they were heard to cry ten or twelve times to the Lord, eſpecially John and Noel, with loud voices calling and ſaying, Lord receive us this day unto mercy, and unto thy Kingdom. And thus ceaſing to cry any more, they yielded up their Souls into the hands of God. This conſtancy of theirs, proceeding from the work of Gods Spirit, was not without ſingular fruit, for the inlarging of the Church; for many being touched therewith went home thence, as if they had gone from a powerful Sermon.

Francis d'Aloſt in Flanders, Martyr, in the Year 1566.

THis young man, being by his Trade a Cutler, during the time of his ignorance frequented the Court much, and took great delight in the vanity of this world, which gat him much reſpect of many, but chiefly among thoſe of the Romiſh Religion, namely Prieſts and Monks, who willingly converſed with him, taking much contentment in his carriage and courſe of life. But as ſoon as God of his goodneſs by the means of his word had revealed unto him his Son Jeſus Chriſt, he by and by altered and changed his former converſation: for having before lived in great diſſoluteneſs, he now ſharply reproved ſuch as he knew to follow ſinful ways: yea, he often taxed the Prieſts as well for their ſcandalous living as for their falſe Doctrine, wherewith they abuſed the People; but principally for making them to fall down to ſuch a god as could not defend nor keep himſelf from Rats and Mice, and, which is worſe, to offer it up for the ſins of the quick and the dead.

For theſe with other ſuch like ſpeeches, thoſe who erewhiles loved him began now to turn their love into hatred, inſomuch as he was fain to fly from them yea, and out of the Country alſo, being baniſhed thence; threatning him, that if he were taken there again, he ſhould be put to death, not as an Heretick, but as one having offended the penal Laws. But not long after the Lord wrought ſuch an alteration not only in the Political but in the Eccleſiaſtical State alſo, that not the Laws concerning Hereſie alone were diſanulled, but free liberty was granted to the Faithful of the Low-countries, to return home into their houſes again, and to have the exerciſes of Religion, publickly and openly. Among theſe Francis returned at that time unto the City in which he was born. But this freedom ſo ſuddenly granted laſted not long. For the Devil, not enduring the light ſo to ſhine out, ſtirred up Imps afreſh to oppreſs the godly. Francis then apprehending the danger, was minded one morning to depart out of the City; but God had another work for him to do. For as he was paſſing along, he was apprehended in the ſtreet by one of the City, who with the Bayliff met him. The Bayliff would fain have baulked him, as if he had not ſeen him; but ſaid the other, here he is, hold him faſt; ſo they took him. Being conducted to Priſon, among other ſpeeches he ſaid, now ye have taken me, you think to deprive me of my life, and ſo have your will of me, purpoſing my great dammage and hurt; but you are deceived, for it is all one, as if you took Counters from me, to fill my hand with a great ſum of Gold.

In Priſon he had many diſputes with Prieſts and Cloiſter-men. But the Jaylour of all other dealt harſhly with him, who could not endure to hear him ſpeak of God. But if at any time he heard him ſing Pſalms and ſpiritual Songs, he would rage like a Bedlam. Once being very drunk, he ſet open the Priſon-doors, and ſitting on a bench he called to Francis, ſaying come out thou naughty and wicked Heretick, I will now ſee, if thy God can deliver thee out of my hands. Francis ſaid, as the caſe ſtands it might eaſily be effected: If I were minded to eſcape away now, as I was heretofore, I could eaſily do it, but I will not; for God hath called me to ſuffer, and not to flie away, and therefore I will not reſiſt, but rather obey his will. Anno 1566.

The drunkard hearing him ſpeak with ſuch mildneſs, and moderation, and ſeeing that he would not come forth, being provoked thereto by him, in his fury he took up his ſtool on which he ſate, and laid at him therewith, ſo as he had felled him to the ground, if the Servant had not ſtepped between, who took it out of his Maſters hands by force: yet was the poor Priſoner very ſorely hurt, and lay long in the Chirurgions hands before his Head could be healed. But to make him amends, this cruel Jaylor dieted him ſo ſtrictly both for meat and drink, that he had died with hunger, had not God inclined the heart of his Servant now and then, to relieve him, by conveying meat to him in ſecret.

After the Lord had thus by ſundry trials proved the patience and conſtancy of this his good Servant, the Magiſtrates of the City of Aloſt conſulted how to put him to death, having oft called the Executioner to this their conſultation; but they could not agree in the manner how to effect it. Some were of Opinion it were beſt to have him put to death ſecretly in the Priſon; others adviſed to execute him openly, leſt they ſhould incur the Blot of being murderers. In the end waxing more hardy, having long detained him in Bonds, they called him forth into judgment, and pronounced Sentence upon him, which was, that becauſe he had done contrary to the Kings Laws, in returning again to the City from which he was baniſhed, he had therefore deſerved to die, ſeeing alſo he held certain Opinions directly oppoſite to the Church of Rome.

Francis hearing his Sentence read, without any ſhew of diſtemper, ſaid, Now ſeeing you are ſo thirſty after Blood, I willingly yield it into your hands, and my Soul into the hands of my merciful Lord God Almighty. Francis, ſaid they, we command you to hold your peace; for if you will not, we will take order to bridle your Tongue. He then promiſed them to obey their command. As he went to ſuffer he uſed that ſpeech of the Apoſtle Saint Peter, I muſt now ſhortly put off this my earthly Tabernacle, which the love of Chriſt Jeſus my Lord conſtrains me to do. Being come into the Market place where he was to be offered up a Sacrifice, he kneeled down; and having ended his Prayer, he ſaid to the Executioner, do now what you are commanded, the will of God be done: and ſo preſenting himſelf chearfully to the ſtroke of death, he was beheaded the firſt of May, in the year 1566. his Body being afterwards expoſed to the Fouls of the Air for a prey.

John Tuſcaen of Audenard in Flaunders, Martyr, June the eighth, Anno 1566.

Behold here how God meant to awaken the men of this time out of their Britiſh ſecurity, as it were with a Thunder Clap from Heaven.

THis young man a maker of Tapiſtry about the age of two and twenty years, the Son of one called Simeon Tuſcaen dwelling in the Suburbs of Audenard, was trained up from his youth in all godly Nurtriture. He hearing News that things went more aukly to paſs in Bruxels then he could have wiſhed, determined in himſelf to make it known by the effect, that the adoring of a breaden God, which the Roman Church ſo much worſhipped, was nothing elſe but an abominable and execrable ſacriledge. Having caſt to and fro in his mind, and thoughts, the weightineſs of the buſineſs he was to undertake, at length he determined to demonſtrate the ſame more Anno 1566. more fully and apparently in a publick aſſembly, which was the thirtieth day of May in the ſaid year 1566. (which after the cuſtom of the Romaniſts is called the feaſt of God, or Corpus Chriſti day.) Now by reaſon that two Cities of Audenard and Pamelle are joyned as it were in one, there were two Temples dedicated there, not to the Lord, but the one to Saint Walburgne, called the Church of Audenard, and the other to their Lady, which is within the juriſdiction of the Lord of Pamelle.

John Tuſcaen directed his courſe towards this Church, to perform that which long before he had in his own thoughts projected. Being come into the Quire of the Church in Pamelle, beholding there a multitude of People utterly eſtranged from the true Worſhip of God ready to fall down and proſtitute themſelves before a breaden Cake, forthwith (not caſting what ſhould be the iſſue) being urged thereto through a zeal of Gods glory, drew towards the Prieſt, while he was elevating and ſhewing that which they call the Hoſt; and with great vehemency ſnatched it out of his Hands, caſt it to the ground, and brake it all to pieces, ſpeaking with a loud voice; See here, my Maſters, your goodly God, who you ſee is not able to help himſelf, but is here broken all to pieces. How long. How long, O ye ſenſeleſs Prieſts, will you thus defile the holy Supper of the Lord? ſhall we never ſee an end of your filthy Idolatries? If the Authority of the holy Scripture can nothing move you, yet at length be warned and admoniſhed by this preſent example, that their is not a jot of Divinity in this Bread, ſeeing it is ſubject to be thus handled: will ye worſhip a dead Idol, your ſelves being living Men?

At this ſo vehement and bold an exhortation, accompanied with ſuch conſtancy, all the people there preſent ſtood amazed and in ſuch an extaſie, (but yet withal ſuch a noiſe and buſtling throughout the Church) that the Curate of the Pariſh, who before was in ſome by-corner there, coming towards the Quire, met Tuſcaen, as he was paſſing through towards Preale without any fear or let. The Curate ſaluted him, not knowing what he had done, much leſs ſuſpecting that he was the cauſe of all that tumult and ſtirr; for he was his couſin. Howbeit John would take no knowledge of this Salutation, but began to reprove him for deluding and abuſing the poor ſilly people, being their overſeer; for a day will come, ſaid he, in which you ſhall render an account to God for them. In the hearing of this, the Curate called upon the people to lay hold upon the ſaid John Tuſcaen, as hee was going out of the Church fair and ſoftly. So that it had been eaſie for him to have quit himſelf out of their fingers, if he had but haſtned his pace a little, becauſe none offered to touch or apprehend him. The Curate ſeeing that, delaied not, but with all ſpeed got him to the under Bailiff of Pamelle, by whoſe outcries and importunities the Bailiff could do no leſs but go with him to apprehend the great Heretick. As they were making towards him, he ſhewed no more ſemblance of eſcaping, than before.

Then they took and impriſoned him without any reſiſtance. Dinner being ended, he was preſented before the Magiſtrates of Pamelle to be examined in the preſence of the Curate: after they had enquired of him who they were that incited and ſet him on to do ſuch an outragious act unto the Hoſt, they asked him what he held the bread in the Maſs to be, and whether he did not believe it was the Body of Chriſt: If, ſaith he, you conſider well what the Angel ſaid to the Apoſtles at his aſſumption viz. Act. 1.11. this ſame Jeſus, which is taken up from you into Heaven, ſhall ſo come in like manner as ye have ſeen him go into Heaven; You may plainly diſcern that we are not to ſeek him here below.

After many other queſtions and anſwers, beeing ſent again to Priſon, he was the ſecond time examined: and being asked whether he was himſelf when he did it, or diſtracted? Hee anſwered, That he had done it, not raſhly, but upon mature deliberation. Being further demanded what ſhould move him to commit ſo hanious an act? If this, ſaith he, ſeemeth ſo ſtrange unto you, then I pray you tell me who moved Moſes to break the Tables of Stone written with the finger of God? They perceiving that he ſecretly aimed at their Idolatry, ſent him to Priſon again.

The eighth of June he was brought betimes in the morning into the Judgment Hall, to receive their Sentence which was to be pronounced againſt him; where two Friers Minorites were purpoſely ſent to ſee if they could turn him from his conſtancy: to which purpoſe asking him, if he did not believe that God was included in the bread which is lifted up in the Maſs? He anſwered them by another queſtion, namely, whether the Potter could make a Pot? They ſaid yes, but what was that to the purpoſe? He asked them again, if the pot could make a Potter? The good Fathers, ſeeing whereabout he went, forthwith left him. When he ſaw he had thus ſtopped their Mouths, he thanked God.

Then the Magiſtrates of the City went up into the Judgment Seat, and gave Sentence againſt him; which was, firſt to have that hand ſtricken off, with which he had taken the Hoſt out of the Prieſts Hands, and his Body to bee burned to aſhes, which afterward was to be ſcattered into the River.

Hearing this Sentence hee was very joyful, thanking his Judges, and the Lord of Pamelle. But the Bailiff of Audenard wiſhed him rather to ask forgiveneſs of God and of the people, for the offence he had committed. If I have offended any (ſaid hee) I ask them forgiveneſs. Then was he led forth to be executed; and as he went, he ſung in his own Mother Tongue the Lords Praier with ſuch confidence, as argued the inward peace of his Conſcience, in dying in ſo good a quarrel.

The Tormentor willed him to ſtretch forth his Arm that this Hand might be cut off; which he did, ſuffering the ſame with ſuch a patience, as if hee had felt no pain. And then with his eyes lifted up to Heaven, he ſaid, O Lord God, it is for the glory of thy name that I endure theſe things: inable me now with ſtrength from above, that I may finiſh this Sacrifice. Forthwith the fire was kindled, which made him at the firſt to ſhrink a little; but by continual and ardent prayer to God the Violence of the Toment was abated and aſſwaged. Now ſtanding in the midſt of the flames, his Body being in a manner half conſumed, hee ſhewed apparent ſigns unto the beholders of his invincible courage, by holding up as well as hee could, his Arms on a light fire.

Thus was this valiant Martyr handled in the preſence of Multitudes; which cauſed many to cleave the rather to the Doctrine of the Goſpel, ſeeing him dye ſo conſtantly. The River of Eſcant received his aſhes, that the Sentence given upon him might be fully accompliſhed, Martin Smetius Martyr, Anno 1567.

MArtin Smetius being Priſoner in the Caſtle of Vilvourd, there came to him a Frier to examine him, and with a purpoſe to turn him from the Faith. But Smetius being a man learned, and of a quick underſtanding, remained conſtant, which ſo confounded his oppoſite, that hee went away with ſhame. The Frier invented a Recantation, to which it was reported that Smetius had ſubſcribed. But an Elder of the Church, whoſe name was Cornelius Specox, coming to the knowledge thereof (by the helpe of Friends) got a ſight of the ſaid Recantation. Who in the preſence of divers Friends conferring a certain Letter (which Smetius had put his name unto) with that writing, found it in nothing to agree therewith, and therefore the Recantation to bee meerly counterfeited, The eighth of February being Saturday, Smetius having his feet tied under an Horſes belly, on which he was ſet, was thus brought to Vilvourd to the Provoſt (who himſelf was afterwards hanged for his villanies.) His Sergeants paſſing immediatly along with him through Malives, went towards Malladery of Wallen, where finding a ladder ſet up to an Oak, they hanged him thereon. Smetius being on the Ladder uſed theſe words; Lord forgive them, for they know not what they do.

And then ſinging certain verſes of a Pſalm, he yeilded up his Soul into the Hands of the Lord.

* Hee was apprehended by this Provoſt with 20 Horſemen as he was preaching at Malives. When Smetius ſaw them, he exhorted the Congregation to bequiet, for they are come, ſaid he, to take me: but the Aſſembly was by and by ſcattered.

Maſter John Goris and Joris of Aſſchen, Martyrs, Anno 1567.

John Goris Chirurgion, born in Audenard, travelling towards Gaud, was betrayed by two Spies, who ſignified the ſame to the Bayliff; himſelf alſo going the ſame way whither Goris was travelling before him. The Bayliff, thirſting after the blood of this poor Innocent, rid on till he had overtaken him, asking him whither he went. I am going, ſaid Goris, to the Pariſh of Nazaret. And I purpoſe alſo, ſaid the Bayliff, to go thither, we will bear you company. Having paſſed on thus a little way, the Bayliff thinking himſelf ſure of Goris, began to lay hands upon him. Goris ſeeing that leaped over a Ditch, and got into a little Wood. The Wood was preſently beſet with Country People; and being there apprehended, he was carried to Audenard as a Sheep to the ſlaughter, where he was committed to Priſon. They laid many things to his charge, which they were not able to prove. Being examined the ſecond time upon divers Articles, he anſwered thereunto with ſuch wiſdom, that the Council admired how a man of ſo mean account could defend his cauſe in ſo good a manner. But after they came to queſtion with him concerning matters of Religion, now I ſee, ſaith he, that you ſeek my blood.

By this we ſee that man ſtands not by his own ſtrength.

The Night following he was overtaken with ſuch an apprehenſion of the fear of death, that for ſaving his life he was almoſt reſolved to deny the Truth. But by the aſſiſtance of Gods holy Spirit calling his thoughts together, he inſtantly and orderly beſought the Lord to deliver him out of this temptation, that by the power of his Grace he might overcome the infirmity of his Fleſh: which prayer of Faith the Lord had ſuch reſpect unto, that from that time he manfully reſiſted all Satans aſſaults, and maintained the Truth unto his laſt breath.

Though I fall, ſaith the Church, yet I ſhall ariſe. Mich 7.8. Acts 7.60.

Having received Sentence he was nothing appalled thereat, but like the holy Martyr S. Stephen, prayed God that he would not lay his death to their charge. Coming to the place where he was to be Executed, caſting himſelf down proſtate, he made his prayer to God; in which Prayer albeit he ſought the Lord to forgive his Enemies, yet added he this withal, I am perſwaded, that God being a juſt Judge will not leave their ſin unpuniſhed. Which prediction fell out not long after; for the Bayliff who apprehended him, and rejoyced in ſtanding by whilſt the Martyr was executed, was not long after ſhot with a Harquebuſs, whereof he preſently died like a Wretch.

After Goris was thus executed, they brought forth his Fellow-Priſoner, called Joris of Aſſchen; who the ſame day ſuffered the ſame kind of death, that is to ſay, he was hanged upon a Gibbet, which death he endured for the Name of Chriſt with like conſtancy as did the former. Which courage of his he thus manifeſted to his Parents and Friends, in a Letter written to them a little before his death.

A Letter written by Joris of Aſſchen, to his Parents and Friends, a little before the time of his Martyrdom.

Moſt dear Father and Mother, Siſter and Brother, I write here unto you comfortable News, namely, that in all my life I never ſaw any day ſo pleaſing to me as this is; in which the Lord hath counted me worthy to be one of his Champions, and to ſuffer for his holy Name: for which I give him moſt humble and hearty thanks, I alſo thank you much, good Father and Mother, that in all my diſtreſſes you have been beneficial and helpful unto me, and careful for me; for which the Lord abundantly reward you in his Kingdom. Rejoyce with me, I pray you, that God hath now called me to ſuch a glorious and welcom Marriage-day. Oh, how precious in the ſight of the Lord our God is the death of his Martyrs.

Dear Friends, two Prieſts, yea, and ſome of the Magiſtrates alſo have ſought to terrifie me with many threats, thinking to turn me aſide from my holy Profeſſion; but the Lord of his great mercy hath given me his Grace to withſtand them all: for I plainly told them I was not aſhamed of the Goſpel of Chriſt, but would be willing and ready to die in the defence thereof; following my Lord and Maſter Jeſus Chriſt thorow all afflictions, to be made partaker with him at the laſt of his eternal Joys in his celeſtial Tabernacle. Wherefore if God ſhall call any of you forth to ſuffer ought for his Names ſake, bear the ſame, I beſeech you, with meekneſs and patience, not declining from the Truth for fear or favour, to the right hand or to the left; but fear him rather who is able to caſt Soul and Body into Hell. Anno 1567

The time which God hath lent us to converſe in this World is but ſhort, and therefore let us begin to abandon the love thereof, with all things that are therein, betimes, that ſo we may be ready to follow the call of God.

Dear Father and Mother, I do take my laſt farewel of you, until we meet together again in the Kingdom of Heaven, where we ſhall partake of that joy which ſhall laſt for ever, all ſorrows, tears and griefs being wiped away. Be ye not therefore grieved I pray you, but be patient; for the affliction which is befaln me is moſt acceptable unto me, for which alſo I bleſs and praiſe the Lord.

The Lord proſper you in all your ways, to his glory and your good. Thank all my Friends for their love expreſſed toward me, and ſalute them kindly with an holy kiſs in the Lord.

Your humble and obedient Son,
John Joris of Aſſchen.

Thus were theſe two Witneſſes of Jeſus Chriſt executed the 14*th* of April 1567.

A worthy Anſwer of a conſtant Martyr called Guy de Brez, Anno Dom. 1567.

Guy de Brez, a Miniſter of the Goſpel, being committed Priſoner into the Caſtle of Tournay, was viſited by many Ladies and Gentlemen, only out of a deſire to ſee him, in regard he was a man ſo highly eſteemed. Some at the firſt view ſcoffed, others railed on him; but others were moved to take pity and compaſſion on him. Among the reſt, the Counteſs of Ren, accompanied with certain Gentlewomen, coming into the Priſon, and at the firſt entrance beholding the Iron-chain to which he was faſtned, Mr. Guy, ſaid ſhe, I wonder how you can either eat, drink, or ſleep in quiet; for were I in your caſe, the very terror thereof would go nigh to kill me.

O Madam, ſaid he, the good cauſe for which I ſuffer, and that inward peace of Conſcience wherewith God hath endued me, makes me eat and drink with greater contentment than my Enemies can which ſeek my life: yea, ſo far off is it that my bonds or chain do any way terrifie me, or break off my ſleep, that on the contrary I glory and take delight therein, eſteeming them at an higher rate than Chains and Rings of Gold, or any other Jewels of price whatſoever; for they yield me much more profit. Yea, when I hear the ratling of my Chain, methinks I hear as it were ſome ſweet Inſtrument of Muſick ſounding in mine ears: not that ſuch an effect comes meerly from my Chains, but in regard I am bound therewith for maintaining the truth of the Goſpel.

The ſame Martyr in a Letter to his Wife acquaints her with Gods gracions dealing with him in all his Aſſaults.

Speaking of his Apprehenſion, he ſhews how carnal Reaſon began to play its part againſt the Providence of God; for, ſaith he, theſe thoughts came thronging into my head; What meant we to go ſo many in company together as we did? had it not been for ſuch and ſuch we had never been diſcovered nor taken. Under ſuch like cogitations I lay for a while, ſaith he, even in a manner overwhelmed, till by the aſſiſtance of Gods holy Spirit my mind was raiſed up to meditate on Gods Providence. After which my heart began to feel wonderful reſt and contentment; ſaying thus in my ſelf, O my God, the day and hour of my birth was before ordained by thee. and ever ſince thou haſt preſerved and kept me in great perils and dangers, and hitherto delivered me out of them all. And if now the hour be come

come wherein I muſt paſs out of this life into thy Kingdom, thy holy will be done; I cannot eſcape out of thy hands; yea, though I could, yet Lord thou knoweſt I would not, ſeeing all my felicity depends upon conforming my will unto thine.

From theſe conſiderations I received no ſmall conſolation; and therefore, dear Wife, rejoyce with me, I pray you, and bleſs our good God for theſe his mercies towards me; for he doth nothing but that which is equal and right. You have been privy to, and acquainted with all the Travels, Croſſes, and Perſecutions which have befallen me, yea, and have your ſelf been partaker with me therein, when you accompanied me in my voyages during the time of my Exile: and now after all theſe you ſee, my welbeloved in the Lord, how he holdeth forth unto me his hand of Providence, to drive me home to himſelf into his bleſſed Kingdom. I now lead you the way, and when his will is you ſhall follow me thither. Our ſeparation ſhall not be for ever: it will not be long ere we be gathered under one head Jeſus Chriſt. This world is not the place of our reſt: no, Heaven is our home, this is but the place of our baniſhment.

Let us therefore aſpire after our true Country, namely Heaven, and long to be received into the Manſions of our Heavenly Father, where we ſhall ſee our Head and Brother, our Husband and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, with the noble triumphant aſſemblies of the Patriarchs, Prophets, Apoſtles, and ſo many millions of Martyrs; to whom I hope ſhortly to be gathered, having finiſhed the courſe of that adminiſtration which I have received of the Lord Jeſus. Wherefore, dear Wife, be you comforted in the meditation of theſe things. Take into your conſideration the honour the Lord doth you, in giving you a Husband who is not only called to be a Miniſter of Chriſts Goſpel, but alſo ſo highly advanced of God, as to be accounted worthy to partake of the Crown of Martyrdom. It is an honour which the Angels in Heaven are not capable of. I now rejoyce in my ſufferings, my heart leapeth within me; in my afflictions, I find nothing wanting unto me; I am filled with the abundant riches of my God; yea, ſo far am I comforted therewith, that I have ſufficient ſtore not only for my ſelf, but to impart thereof alſo to as many as I have opportunity to ſpeak unto. Which bounty and favour I beſeech my Eternal Lord God to continue to me his poor Priſoner: yea, I am perſwaded that he will perform it unto the end; for by good experience I feel, that he never forſakes them that truſt in him. I could never have imagined that God would have been ſo gracious as he hath been to me his poor Creature.

Angels not capable of being Martyrs.

Gods goodneſs to his afflicted Children is oft above and beyond their expectation.

I now taſte of the fidelity and bounty of Chriſt my Saviour; I am here taught to practiſe what I have preached unto others. Yea, let me not be aſhamed to confeſs, that when I heretofore preached I ſpake but as a Parrot, in regard of that which I have now better learned by proof and experience. I have profited more in the School-houſe of this Priſon, than ever I did in all my life before: for I have the Holy Ghoſt, who is my conſtant Inſtructor and Schoolmaſter, teaching me how to handel my Weapons in this fight of afflictions. Satan on the other ſide, who is the ſworn Enemy of all Gods Elect, compaſſeth me about on every ſide, as a roaring Lyon thinking to devour me. But he who hath ſaid, Fear not, I have overcome the World, puts as it were new courage into me; and then I ſee the Lord, bruiſing Satan under my feet; feeling the power of God perfected in my weakneſs, And thus the Lord cauſeth me one while to feel my infirmity and weakneſs, that ſo I might take knowledge how I am but a poor earthen Veſſel (even weakneſs it ſelf) to humble me, that God may have all the glory; and then by and by he fortifies and comforts me, (I may truly ſay) incredibly above all I could ask or think.

Priſons prove Gods School-houſes to the faithful.

John 16.33. Rom. 16.20. 2 Cor. 12.9.

It is poſſible for the godly ſometimes to feel their infirmities.

For I would not change my condition with theirs who perſecute me; I take my reſt, eat and drink, with more hearts-eaſe then they. I am indeed lodged in the ſtrongeſt and vileſt Priſon they have, dark and obſcure, which for the darkneſs thereof is called Brunain; where I have no Air to breath at, but a little ſtinking hole, where they lay all their rubbiſh, and where the drunkards commonly vent their urine. I am laden with Irons both on my hands and feet, which are a continual torment unto me, the Irons eaten through the Fleſh even to the bare bones. The Provoſt Marſhal comes to view my Fetters twice or thrice a day, fearing leſt I ſhould make an eſcape: for preventing whereof he hath placed three guards of forty men before the Priſon door, &c.

Brunain a Priſon of the Valentinians.

By reaſon whereof he complains he wrote with much difficulty, and therefore could not write as otherwiſe he would have done.

And thus having given unto his Wife his advice, how to behave her ſelf during her Widowhood, and how to train up her Children, with his loving Salutation, remembred to her ſelf and other his ſpecial Friends, he cloſeth up the Letter.

In the end of a Letter written to his Mother, the rather to encourage her willingly to offer him up to God, he puts her in mind of two memorable examples of Women who were Mothers of Children, in this manner following.

I remember, ſaith he, that I have read in the Eccleſiaſtical Stories, how that in the hot perſecutions of the Church in times paſt, the poor Chriſtians were aſſembled together without a certain City, to hear the Word of God. Now a great Commander was ſent of purpoſe to ſee theſe poor Innocents put to the Sword. And being on his way ready to put his bloody Commiſſion into execution, the report thereof came to the ears of a true Chriſtian Woman, who haſted with all the ſpeed ſhe could, to be at this meeting, carying her little Child in her Arms. As ſhe drew nigh to the Troop of Horſemen, ſhe ruſhed in, to get through, expecting that they would make way for her. The Governour ſeeing her make ſuch haſte, called her to him, and examined her whither ſhe poſted ſo faſt? ſhe gave him this ſhort anſwer, I am going, ſaid ſhe, to the aſſembly of the Chriſtians. What to do? ſaid he; haſt thou not heard that I am commanded to put them all to death? Yes, I know it well, ſaid ſhe, And therefore am I in ſuch haſte, that I may be counted worthy to loſe my life with them. But what wilt thou do with thy little Child, ſaith he? I am carrying it thither, that even it alſo may partake of the Crown of Martyrdom with the reſt.

The firſt example.

The Tyrants heart was ſo wounded with theſe prompt and plain anſwers of this ſilly Woman, that he retired back to the Emperor who had committed the execution of this buſineſs unto him, and told him the whole diſcourſe; by means whereof the Emperors wrath was appeaſed, and the execution ſtayed. Here was an heart inflamed indeed with the fiery Zeal of Gods love. Here is a pattern fit to be preſented before all Women and Mothers to imitate the ſame.

I call to mind one other Example of another and her Son in the times when Romanus ſuffered Martyrdom. He was commanded to worſhip Idols. His anſwer was, as he ſtood in the place of judgment, that he worſhipped one God only, in Jeſus Chriſt, his only Son. And this, ſaith he, is an Article ſo well known, that if any Child, though but of 7. years old, ſhould be examined concerning it, he would eaſily make a direct anſwer to it. Then a Child about thoſe years being preſented publickly, Romanus ſaid, come hither my pretty Boy, anſwer me; ought we to worſhip many Gods, or but one God in Jeſus Chriſt? The little Child anſwered, That there be many Gods we Children cannot believe; ſeeing to us there is but one God.

The ſecond Example.

Then the Tyrant apprehending the Mother cauſed her Child to be ſcourged with Rods before her eyes. The Babe intreated her to give him ſome drink: to whom ſhe ſaid, Alas poor Child, I have no drink to give thee; but now my Son go and drink of the Cup of Martyrdom, which Herod the King gave the young Children to drink of.

Hitherto may be referred the invincible conſtancy of that pious Mother mentioned in the 2. Book of the Maccabees, with her ſeven Children. 2 Mac. chap. 7. Read the whole Chapter.

Then was the Childs head ſtriken off. Such Examples are left upon record for our uſe, that in ſuch and the like Mirrors we might behold how the mighty power of God being made perfect in the infirmity of weak Fleſh, all of us, with one heart and voyce, ſhould render unto him the Sacrifices of praiſe and thankſgiving for the ſame; ſhewing forth to our Brethren and Siſters his Triumphs and Victories with new Songs of rejoycing. The which ſounding throughout the whole world, we may thereby incite all Creatures, yea, the very Angels of Heaven to magnifie and glorifie the name of our Lord eternally. So be it.

With this godly Perſonage Guy de Brez, was one Peregrine de la Grange joyned as his Priſon-fellow and Fellow-labourer in the work of the Miniſtry.

THe Biſhop at his coming into the Priſon being informed of the Priſoners name, and of his gentle diſpoſition, began thus with him.

Biſhop. I am much grieved Monſieur de la Grange to ſee you in this mean condition, and could wiſh it were far otherwiſe with you then now I ſee it is.

La Grange. Sir I humbly thank you for your love and kindneſs ſhewed towards me, altogether I confeſs without any deſert of mine: and as for the baſe eſtate in which you now ſee me, God hath ſo comforted me therein with his grace, that I do without any great difficulty patiently ſuffer what he hath pleaſed to lay upon me; yea, I praiſe and bleſs his name, that he hath ballanced the weight of my afflictions according to the ſtrength which he hath given me, ſo as I ſink not under the burthen: for as my ſufferings in Chriſt abound, he
2. Cor. 1. 3. cauſeth his conſolations by Chriſt to abound in me alſo.

Biſhop. It is uſual with ſuch as you are to glory in this kind of ſpeech: for as ſoon as any afflictions befal you, you by and by ſtile them the ſufferings of Chriſt. And if any of you be put to death, then ye boaſt that it is for Gods Truth: but when things are laid to the Touchſtone, the matter is nothing ſo nor ſo.

La Grange. Sir, if your meaning be of ſuch as have died for the Doctrine for which I am bound with this Chain, and thus fettered with Irons: I doubt not but they have given ſuch a reaſon of their Faith, that whoſoever ſhall read their anſwers, and weigh the ſame without partiality, muſt needs judge thereof even as we 1 Tim. 6. 3. Deut. 12. 32. do. And for my own part I am ready to make it good before any whom it concerns, that the Doctrine I now hold and teach is according to Godlineſs, taken out of the pure Fountains of the holy Scriptures, without adding, diminiſhing, or varying any way therefrom.

Biſhop. We read that in all times men have been wont to ſhelter themſelves under the Title of Gods Word, in ſo much that all the old Hereſies maintained by Hereticks have run to this covert; ſo as great heed is to be taken, leſt under this pretence men ruſh into errors.

La Grange. I am not ignorant, Sir, hereof, in regard that Satan knows how to transform himſelf into an Angel
2. Cor. 11. 14. John 14. 17. of light, thereby to eſtabliſh his deluſions, cauſing darkneſs thereby to be taken for light. But the Holy Ghoſt, who is the Spirit of Truth, hath in ſuch wiſe diſcovered his Jugglings, that none are deluded thereby, but thoſe who at noon day cloſe their eyes that they may not be-
2 Cor. 4. 4. hold the light.

Biſhop. Do you think that the holy Ghoſt hath given you ſuch an Illumination, that the Truth ſhould only be revealed to you, and to none other.

La Grange. God forbid, Sir, I ſhould have any ſuch thought. I am not of the mind of thoſe dreamers, who
He means the Anabaptiſts and their like. at this day bragg of their having particular Revelations of the holy Spirit. But I ſpeak of an ordinary and general Revelation, ſuch as is taught us out of the Bible,
Eph. 2. 20. which we call the holy Scriptures, according as it is therein declared unto us by the Prophets and Apoſtles.

This was the effect of the Biſhops firſt communication with de la Grange; after which he was heard to ſay twice or thrice to the Kings Commiſſioners, that he had no will to meddle any further with him. Being called for to be examined elſe-where before the ſaid Commiſſioners, Peregrine took his leave of the Biſhop, entreating him to intercede for him, that he might be eaſed of his Irons, alledging that the Priſon was ſtrong enough and ſufficiently guarded.

The ſecond time they met together, the Biſhop having a prompt memory, made a rehearſal of what paſſed between them the day before, and after began thus with the ſaid Peregrine.

Biſhop. Seeing that which I hold as touching the Sacrament of the Altar is agreeable to the Scriptures, confirmed ſo long ſince by the conſent of all the ancient Fathers, wherefore do you not agree with us therein? Had you rather hold with theſe Noveliſts, as with Calvin and with the confeſſion of Auſpourge. Anno 1560.

Grange. Sir, I am neither Calviniſt nor Papiſt; I am a Chriſtian, and what I hold concerning Religion is taken out of Chriſts Doctrine, who is the only Doctor of his Church. What Calvin hath taught conformable to the Word of God, I am of the ſame mind with him: and whereas you call your Religion, the old Religion, and ours the new, it troubles me not at all, ſince the Father of Lies hath long ſince forged the ſame, to diſgrace the Truth, and to eſtabliſh and maintain the multitudes of falſhoods and abſurdities of your Tenents which you hold. For example, becauſe Chriſt, in giving his Diſciples Bread in the Sacrament, ſaid, This is my Body, thence they would make us believe that the Bread is become the Body of Chriſt, as if the Verb eſt ſignified a change of the Bread into another Subſtance, which is found in no Language whatſoever.

Biſhop. We maintain not the Tranſubſtantiation of the Bread from this Verb eſt, knowing that the Hebrews uſe the Participle of the preſent tenſe in ſtead of a Verb; but rather from hence, becauſe Chriſt ſaid, This is my Body.

La Grange. I told you that Jeſus Chriſt in his Supper gives us that body which was conceived by the holy Ghoſt in the Womb of the Virgin Mary; which was crucified, dead and buried, raiſed again the third day, and is aſcended into Heaven; yet we utterly deny that there is any change made of the Bread. Therefore if you would have us believe it, let us have ſome proof of Scripture for it.

For they had many diſputes touching this point, which are not here inſerted.

Biſhop. To ſpeak properly, the Tranſubſtantiation of the Bread cannot be proved by the word of God, and yet we muſt believe it for the reaſons above ſaid.

La Grange. Your glorying then that you have the Word of God on your ſide is (as you ſee) come to nothing. And why have you then burned ſo many of Gods Saints for denying that which you cannot maintain by the Scriptures? For our parts, we ſhould bluſh to affirm, that the Subſtance of Bread remains after the words of Conſecration, if we could not prove the ſame from the very form of the Inſtitution of the Sacrament, wherein Chriſt took Bread, and having giving thanks he brake Bread, and gave to his Diſciples Bread, and they took and did eat Bread: yea, Saint Paul rehearſing the Inſti-
1 Cor 11. 23, 26. 27. tution calls it Bread thrice.

Biſh. You know that in the Hebrew-Tongue Bread is taken for the remainders of what was eaten; Paul therefore in that place ſpeaks of thoſe viands which the Corinthians did eat in their Love-feaſts, reproving their abuſe. So alſo, howſoever Paul calls it Bread there, and that in the ſecond of the Acts of the Apoſtles
Act. 42. mention is made of the breaking of Bread, all this ſerves non your turn.

La Grange. I grant that Bread is taken in the Scripture in this ſence; but be it that Bread be taken for the meat that was left, yet you read not that the Subſtance was changed into the Subſtance of other meat, or loſt the property thereof. It is certain that the Scripture uſeth not this Phraſe, of breaking of Bread in the uſe of the Lords Supper, for nothing; for thereby we are given to underſtand, that it is not a ſign only in appearance or ſhew, but the true Subſtance of Bread.

Biſh. Let it be what it will; we hold cloſe to the words of Jeſus Chriſt, where he ſaith, This is my Body; and therefore alſo believe what we ſpeak. I care not if I be deceived in this matter, nor for bearing reproof for the ſame, either before God or men; for before God himſelf I will plead thus, Lord, thou haſt ſaid it, and I believe it.

Underſtand the words, ſacramentally, and all is well.

La Grange. We reſt in the ſame thing alſo; but withal we have an eye unto Chriſts meaning and intent, which was to eſtabliſh a Sacrament: we alſo receive from his mouth the ſame words as well as you, but ſacramentally, where the outward ſign bears the name of the thing ſignified.

Biſh.

Anno 1566

Biſh. As touching the Sacraments in the Old Teſtament (which had their extent only to the coming of Chriſt, and no further) we indeed do hold, that the ſign bears the name of the thing ſignified thereby; and thus the Paſchal Lamb was called the Paſſover, and Circumciſion was called Gods Covenant, being but a ſign thereof: but it is otherwiſe now in the Sacraments of the New Teſtament, which have their continuance unto the end of the world, containing in them the thing ſignified. Exod. 12.43. Ge. 71.10.

La Grange. Your diſtinction will be but idle if we come to the Sacraments of the New Teſtament, which are only two, (howſoever the Church of Rome holds ſeven) to wit, Baptiſm and the Lords Supper. The Scripture calls Baptiſm the waſhing of Regeneration, becauſe it is a ſign thereof, yet bearing the name of that whereof it is but a ſign. Nor among your own Writers do we find, that the Water in Baptiſm is changed into the Blood of Chriſt; which is notwithſtanding the true Laver of Regeneration. Alſo the Cup is called the New Teſtament, becauſe it is a ſign thereof.

Dare you now affirm that the Cup is the New Teſtament? But becauſe you ſeem to bring in for confirmation of your Opinion the ancient Fathers, we are content to be tried herein by them, even in our cauſe alſo, and it ſhall appear that they are not ſo contrary to us as you ſuppoſe; and this will clear our Doctrine from the crime of Novelty, wherewith ye ſlander it. Afterwards we will come to touch ſuch inconveniences and abſurdities as flow from your Doctrine.

The Biſhop anſwering that he was content, La Grange began as followeth.

Gelaſius a Pope of Rome.

La Grange. Gelaſius, who was an ancient Doctor, yea, and a Pope alſo, ſaid in a Council held at Rome, That the ſubſtance and nature of Bread and Wine remained in the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, even as the humane Nature of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt was united unto his divine Eſſence. Chryſoſtom an ancient Dr. in his imperfect work upon St. Matthew, denies that the Body of Chriſt is incloſed under the Bread in the Sacrament, but holds that it is only an outward ſign thereof. Chryſoſtom.

Biſh. I have, as you know, before anſwered that Sentence of Gelaſius, and then I told you that he was not ſeen in Philoſophy, and therefore could not diſpute ſubſtantially of the ſubſtance of the Bread; yea, I verily think he underſtood not what this word Subſtance meant, but took it for that which we call Accidents; as ſometimes by this word Accident we underſtand Subſtance; witneſs Julian, who takes it in this ſence.

La Grange. Sir, I cannot conceive that ſuch a learned Father could be ſo ignorant, as to know what the ſubſtance of Bread ſhould mean, or at leaſt the nature thereof, ſeeing he eat of it daily. St. Auguſtine hath this ſaying on the third Pſalm, That Chriſt ſhewed admirable patience in receiving Judas to that Banquet, in which he inſtituted and gave to his Diſciples the ſign of his Body and Blood. Auguſtine.

Biſh. I doubt not but many ſuch Sentences are to be found in St. Auguſtine which ſeem to favour your Opinion; as where he ſaith to Adimantus the Manichee, That Jeſus Chriſt did not ſhun to call it his Body, albeit he gave but the ſign thereof. But ſuch kind of ſpeeches muſt be expounded by conferring one place with another.

La Grange. Nay Sir, we have not only St. Auguſtine, but alſo the moſt part of the ancient Fathers (all which you ſay are againſt us) on our ſide.

Biſh. Well, but come now to the abſurdities and inconveniences of our Doctrine, whereof you ſpake.

1. Abſurdity.

La Grange. Amongſt other, I will inſtance in this one; By the Doctrine which you teach you ſever and disjoyn that which in it ſelf is joyned and united together. In the Supper of the Lord the Son of God gives us his Fleſh for our meat and his Blood for our drink; which are coupled together by outward Sacramental ſigns, Bread and Wine: now according to your Doctrine the Bread is converted into fleſh and the Wine into blood, and ye ſeparate the Fleſh from the Blood of Chriſt.

Biſh. We ſeparate not the Fleſh from the Blood, ſeeing that by concomitancy the fleſh is never without blood, nor blood without fleſh.

La Grange. If this be ſo, we ſhould in one and the ſame action receive the Fleſh and Blood of Chriſt twice; for taking the Bread, which you ſay hath Blood accompanying it by your Concomitance, you receive whole Chriſt in fleſh, and then again in blood: and thus we receive the Fleſh twice and the Blood twice.

Biſh. What inconvenience cometh of receiving the ſame twice in one action?

La Grange. Chriſt did not inſtitute his Supper to be received twice in one action, but ſaith in the ſingular number, Take, eat, this is my Body; he ſaid not in the plural, Theſe are my Bodies. This only abſurdity, if there were no more, overturns the Lords Inſtitution.

To this the Biſhop made no anſwer.

La Grange. If we mark Chriſts words, it will appear that the abſurdities in your Doctrine do croſs this Commandment, Eat; for what eat you Sir, I pray you, in this Sacrament?

Biſh. The Accidents of Bread.

La Grange. Eat you nothing but the Accidents? It is ſaid, Eat, this is my Body.

Biſh. We receive the Body and Blood.

La Grange. When you eat the Body, do you not bruiſe it with your Teeth?

Biſh. No, for Chriſts Body is inſenſible; ſo as when we eat or bruiſe the Cake, the Body is not bruiſed therewithal, but the Form; the Body is not diſmembred, but every bit is the Body of Chriſt.

La Grange. Sir, you ſtill fall into the former Abſurdities; for making three pieces of your Cake in the Maſs, and every piece thereof the whole Body of Chriſt, it thereupon follows, that in taking three pieces you ſwallow down three Bodies of Chriſt together. 2. Abſurdity Biſh. We muſt not be led thus by humane ſenſe.

La Grange. Sir, that which I ſay is manifeſt enough, and ſo that which you affirm of your Forms cannot ſtand; for Chriſt ſaith not, Eat the Forms, but Eat, this is my Body. Now we cannot eat, unleſs we gnaw with our Teeth, in bruiſing that we eat. If you ſay that the Bread, which is Fleſh as you hold, is conveyed under the Tongue and gently ſwallowed; then I anſwer, This is not eating but ſwallowing: for, can he be ſaid to eat, who being half pined with hunger ſwallows his Bread and Meat without chewing? Nay, he may rather be ſaid to devour it. Moreover, if the Bread, which as you affirm is Fleſh, be put into a mans Mouth and ſwallowed, then how will you anſwer that which Chriſt ſaid in St. Matthew, That whatſoever enters into the mouth goeth into the belly, and is caſt out into the Draught, or Back-chamber, as we call it. Mat. 15.17.

Biſh. Theſe words muſt be taken of our ordinary eating, which is caſt (ſaving your preſence) after it is eaten into the Draught.

La Grange. What becomes then of this ſwallowed Fleſh?

Biſh. The Forms are turned into it, and the Fleſh of Jeſus Chriſt is gone; but theſe things muſt not be too curiouſly examined.

La Grange. This Anſwer cannot ſtand: the Accidents, which you call kinds, cannot be changed thereinto, it is the Subſtance which is changed. But let us come to a more ſubſtantial Argument: you teach, That whoſoever receives this Bread, which you call Fleſh, receives Jeſus Chriſt. How is it then that St. Paul ſaith, He that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eats and drinks damnation to himſelf, &c. 1 Cor. 11. 27, 29.

Biſh. This Argument hath ſome weight in it; for thus you reaſon, he that receives Chriſt doth therewithal receive eternal life; but by our Doctrine all receive Chriſt in the Sacrament, therefore they muſt needs have eternal life.

I confeſs it is true according to your Minor Propoſition, that they receive him: But I deny that all receive him unto life everlaſting; for if they receive not the Fleſh by the Holy Ghoſt, it profits them nothing.

La Grange. I have taken the firſt part of my Propoſition out of St. John, where Chriſt ſaith, He is the life; but ſeeing we cannot receive ſo much as a common Herb without the vertue of it, much leſs can we receive Chriſt without that life which is comprehended in him; otherwiſe we ſhould receive a dead Body without efficacy, and not Jeſus Chriſt, who cauſeth thoſe that eat him to live eternally. For this Sacrament was inſtituted John 11.25. Simile.

We partake of Chriſt in the Sacrament, by the effectual working of the Holy Ghoſt. his Blood, conjoyning by his powerful working thoſe things together which by diſtance of place are ſevered far off one from another, cauſing all that is in Chriſt to become ours, and as by a Conduit-pipe conveying unto us the true partaking of Chriſts Fleſh and Blood; ſo as whoſoever receives Chriſt hath eternal life.

Biſhop. That is, if he receive him by the Holy Spirit;
John 6.63. for otherwiſe the fleſh profiteth nothing, as Saint John ſaith.

La Grange. Sir, the place you alledge makes againſt you; for Chriſt there reproves his Diſciples for thinking they ſhould eat his Fleſh after a carnal manner, as it appears by the words following, For the words, ſaid he, which I ſpeak unto you are ſpirit and life. If then we Simile. are ſo wiſe as to obſerve that the Sun, ſending down its ſubſtance on Earth by the beams thereof, doth after a ſort cauſe the Herbs to ſpring forth and grow, ſhall not the influence of the Spirit of Chriſt be of much more efficacy to bring us to the true participation of his Fleſh and Blood?

Biſhop. Then the Biſhop was deſirous to be gone, ſaying it grew late, and ſo for want of time our conference ended. The Biſhop commended me to God, and then took his leave of the Company. This is the ſum of our Communication, ſo far as I can remember.

By this brief recital we may obſerve what holy boldneſs, mixed with meekneſs, the Lord had indued this his worthy Servant with, even in the flower of his Age, being drawn from his ſtudies and from the place of his birth to preach the Goſpel to the Valencians, and at length to ſeal up the ſame with his Blood.

A ſhort Narration of the life and death of theſe two valiant Champions of Chriſt, Guy de Brez, and Peregrin de la Grange, Miniſters and Martyrs.

NExt to the pure preaching of the Word, nothing ſo much commends thoſe whom the Lord culls out to give their lives for the ſame, as doth an holy and blameleſs converſation, continued unto their happy departure out of this World. It remains then in few words, that we ſet forth the converſations of theſe two holy Perſonages, that thereby the Mercies and Graces of the Lord beſtowed upon them may have the greater luſtre.

Guy de Brez born in Mons in Hainault, being in his younger years much addicted to Popiſh Superſtitions, came by continually reading of the Scriptures to taſte the ſweetneſs of Chriſtian Religion; which knowledge brought forth no ſmall fruit in him in due ſeaſon: Yet ſo, as it could by no means be reliſhed or received by them of his Nation. Whereupon he departed from Mons, and having learned the Art of painting Glaſs, came to London whilſt good King Edward the Sixth reigned, who gave perſecuted Strangers leave to have harbour within his Realm of England. After his abode there a while, and underſtanding that the preaching of the Goſpel obtained ſome entertainment in the Low-Countries, he went over to give his aſſiſtance to thoſe of his own Country.

The firſt-fruits of his labours were moſt an end in beſtowing ſome Exhortations in ſuch places where he found any willing to give him audience, though never ſo few in number.

But above all he clave to them of the City of Liſle, becauſe he found there a great number of Believers who deſired nothing more than to hear the Goſpel publickly preached unto them. At that time alſo began an holy
* Againſt which this godly Man publiſhed a learned Confutation in French, which Book I have in my hands. conflict *againſt the peſtilent Sect of the Anabaptiſts, which as Cockle mingled it ſelf amongſt the good Corn. In this City he continued until the Flock of Chriſt were diſperſed by reaſon of Perſecution, and then went to Gaud, where he wrote his Book called the Staff of Faith, extracted out of the ancient Fathers. After that being deſirous to profit more and more in the knowledge of ſuch things as were requiſite to be in a Miniſter of the Goſpel, he travelled towards Lauſanna, and thence to Geneva, to furniſh himſelf with the Tongues; and thence withdrawing himſelf into the Low-Countries, he there eſtabliſhed the Churches of Liſle, Tournay, and of the Valencians; in which Cities God ſo proſpered his labours, that he was preſerved by his divine Providence, as it were in the midſt of the fiery flames, from falling into the hands of his Enemies. And not to ſtand longer in relating the pains and travels of this faithful Servant of Chriſt, not only the Reformed Churches of the ſaid Country can teſtifie, but alſo theſe of Diex, Mondidier, and Amiens alſo, which he was an happy Inſtrument to ſupport, whilſt the cruel Perſecutions in his own Land would not permit him to continue his Office of teaching them. Anno 1559

The Duke of Bovillon obtaining him drew him to his City of Sedan, where he alſo continued a while in publiſhing the glad-tidings of ſalvation, until the Church of Antwerp began in the month of Auguſt 1576. to call him to be their Paſtor. But he could not obtain leave of thoſe of Sedan to depart from among them without a great deal of difficulty, becauſe they evidently foreſaw by the beginning of the Perſecutions in the Low-Countries, into what a Sea of troublous Tempeſts he ſhould be caſt: and yet perceiving how the heart of this holy Man longed to be gone, to yield his aſſiſtance to thoſe of his own Nation: at length they conſented to let him go with them that requeſted to have his help. Now having ſtayed but a while there, the Brethren determined to ſend him to his ancient Church of the Valencians, who received him with no little joy, in regard the Lord had formerly ordained him to erect a Church there peculiarly.

Peregrin de la Grange. To come now to Peregrin de la Grange, he was born in Chute nigh to St. Marcellin in Daulphin. In the Month of June in the year 1565. he was ſent from the Schools of Geneva, at the requeſt and inſtance of the Valencians, to ſerve in the Miniſtry among them. Such was his meek and mild diſpoſition, that it won him much love and reſpect, and made his Miniſtry to be ſo much
His meek diſpoſition won him much reſpect. the more acceptable in the eyes of all men. After the demoliſhing of Images in the City of the Valencians, two Churches were employed by thoſe of the Reformed Religion for the uſe of Prayer, preaching the Word, and adminiſtration of the Sacraments. Now the detaining of theſe Churches, the one of them being uſed by a Stranger, namely by the ſaid la Grange, who was none of K. Philips Subjects, being alſo againſt the Decree of Margaret then Regent of the Low-Countries, gave occaſion to Noicurin, as then principal Bayliff of Hainault and Valence, not only to fruſtrate and break all accords with the ſaid Valencians, but moreover to afflict and beſiege them extreamly. During which ſiege, becauſe the Supper of the Lord was adminiſtred in both the ſaid Churches, it did ſo much the more enkindle the rage of the Enemy againſt them, ſo as when the City was taken, La Grange was the more cruelly uſed, as you ſhall read when we come to ſpeak of his death.

The ſame Adverſaries, who encountred Guy de Brez his Companion, aſſailed him alſo; but he overcame them by the help of Gods Holy Spirit, who gave them both ſuch power, as their Enemies were not able to reſiſt.

They were impriſoned the 11 of April, and on Saturday the laſt of May, the Provoſt of the Bands came into the Priſon about three of the Clock in the Morning, to give theſe two Priſoners warning to prepare themſelves for death; for they were to die at ſix or thereabouts. Whereupon both of them began highly to magnifie God for his goodneſs, and gave the Provoſt thanks for the good news which he had brought them. Aſſoon as they were up and ready, Mr. Guy entred into the fore-Court, bidding the reſt of the Priſoners good morrow; and then teſtifying to them his joy, ſpake after this manner; Brethren, I am this day to die for the Doctrine of the Goſpel; and now, bleſſed be God, I joy and rejoyce therein; I had not thought that God would ever have done me this honour. I feel my ſelf repleniſhed with joy more and more, from minute to minute, my God addeth new courage unto me, and my heart leaps for joy within me.

Then

Anno 1566.

Then exhorting the Priſoners to be of good cheer, he told them it was no hard matter to die, and ſo by way of acclamation alledged that place out of the Apocalyps, O how happy are the dead that die in the Lord; for they reſt from their labours, and their works follow them! He further beſought the Priſoners to ſtand faſt in the Doctrine of the Son of God, which he had taught them, avowing it to be the undoubted Truth, which was maintained, by him before the Biſhop of Arres and many others.

Which diſputes were formerly omitted in regard that in a manner they were the ſame with thoſe of Peregrin de la Grange.

Beware you do nothing, ſaid he, againſt a good Conſcience; for I foreſee that the enemies of the Goſpel will execute the utmoſt of their rage againſt us; thinking thereby to weaken our Faith, that ſo they might turn you from the Truth, and ſo cauſing you to do ſuch things as ſhould bring diſhonour to the cauſe for which you are in Bonds. Take heed therefore ye ſhrink not; for if ye do, you ſhall certainly feel ſuch an Hell in your Conſciences, as will never ceaſe to vex and torment you. O my Brethren, how good a thing is it to nouriſh a good Conſcience.

One of the Priſoners asking him whether he had finiſhed a certain work which he had begun, he anſwered, No; For now I muſt ceaſe to labour, becauſe I am paſſing along towards the Heavenly reſt: the time of my departing is at hand, I go to reap that in Heaven which I have ſown on earth, I have fought a good fight, I am at the point of finiſhing up my courſe: from henceforth the Crown of Glory is laid up for me, which the Lord the righteous Judge ſhall give unto me. Me thinks (ſaid he with a joyful and ſmiling countenance) that my Spirit hath obtained Wings to ſoar aloft into Heaven, being invited this day to the Mariage Supper of the Lamb.

As he was ſpeaking, the Provoſt came in with Bands into the Court, and putting off his Hat ſaluted him. Mr. Guy bade him welcome, and gave him thanks again for his good News. The Provoſt replied, It grieveth me much that things ſhould be carried thus. To which Guy joyfully anſwered, I accept of you as of my good Friend, I love you with all mine heart. Then taking his leave of the Priſoners he went into the little Hall of the Priſon.

Soon after Peregrine de la Grange entred into the ſame Court, who as he carried himſelf comfortably during all the time of his impriſonment, ſo then after his accuſtomed manner he began with an amiable countenance to chear the Priſoners, with bidding them good morrow; and then ſaid thus unto them; I am this day to die for the Truth, and then the Heavenly Inheritance is prepared for me: my name is written in the Book of life never to be blotted out, becauſe the gifts and calling of God are without repentance.

Phil 4.3. Rom. 11. 29.

He proteſted alſo, That for his part he never taught ought there but the pure Word of God; as for the Doctrine of the Papiſts, it led Souls, he ſaid, to perdition and deſtruction: and thence took occaſion to exhort the Priſoners to ſeparate themſelves from it, and to cleave wholly to the Doctrine of the Goſpel. Then leaving them he went into another room, and called for a Bruſh to Bruſh his Hat and Cloak, cauſing his ſhoos to be blacked; For now, ſaid he, I am bidden to the Mariage of the Lamb, where I am to feaſt with him for ever and ever.

Going thence, ſome of the Priſoners came to him, and finding him ſitting in the entry of the Priſon upon a Bench, with Bread and Wine ſet before him, which was brought him for his breakfaſt, they asked him if he went to ſuffer with thoſe ſhackels on his heels? I would I might (ſaid he) yea, and that they would bury them with me too, that they might manifeſt the inhumanity of my adverſaries. And as thoſe Brethren comforted him, he replied, that he felt ſuch joy of the holy Ghoſt in his heart, that he could neither with mouth nor Tongue expreſs it; adding, That God ſhewed him a thouſand times more favour to take him after this manner out of this Tranſitory life, than if he had let him die in his bed by ſickneſs: for now (ſaith he) I ſhall die with enjoying the benefit of all the powers of my Soul, praying the Lord to have mercy upon me.

Then every one taking his leave of him they retired, and forthwith Guy and La Grange were led to the Town-hall to receive Sentence of death, namely to be hanged for tranſgreſſing the Kings comandment given at the Court of Bruxels. And ſo not medling at all with any of the points of Doctrine which they had preached, they eſpecially inſiſted upon the adminiſtration of the Lords Supper, againſt an expreſs charge given them to the contrary.

To be ſhort, La Grange being brought to the place of execution, and now upon the Ladder, he proteſted with a loud voice (notwithſtanding the noiſe which the Soldiers kept about the Gibbet) that he died only for preaching to the People the pure Truth of God; taking Heaven and Earth to witneſs the ſame with him.

Then was Mr. Guy brought thither; who kneeling down to have made his Prayer at the foot of the Ladder, was not ſuffered to make an end; for lifting him up they made him by and by to aſcend the Ladder. Being thereon he faſtned his feet in the rundles, exhorting the People to carry themſelves with all due reſpect towards the Magiſtrates, ſhewing how ſome had overſhot themſelves in that behalf.

Then Mr. Guy exhorted them to ſtand ſtedfaſt in the Doctrine which he had taught them, avouching that it was the undoubted Truth of God. He could not finiſh his ſpeech fully, becauſe the Commiſſioners gave a ſign to the Executioner to haſten and make an end.

He was no ſooner turned off the Ladder, but there fell out ſuch a Tumult among the Souldiers, being in Arms in the Market place, that they ran up and down the City, ſhooting off their Pieces againſt ſuch as they met, as well Papiſts as others, yea killing one another in a grievous manner, ſo as ſome fell down dead among many others that were wounded and hurt. And thus were they ſmitten with great fear without any ground thereof at all.

Notes touching the eſtate of the Faithful in the City of Venice, and of ſome executed there for the Truth, in the year 1566.

IT pleaſed God for a long ſpace to free this noble City from being ſubjected to the cruel Inquiſition of the Pope, by reaſon whereof the face of a Church was to be diſcerned there, from the year 1530, to the year 1542. They enjoyed ſuch freedom of conferring and ſcanning of the Points of Religion there, that they came in a manner to make profeſſion thereof publickly; ſo as many ſtrange Nations came to take notice thereof. But the Father of lies obſerving this began to beſtirr himſelf, by ſetting his Lieutenant on work, who hath his ſeat at Rome, to diſturb theſe good beginnings: for it came to paſs, that whilſt Multitudes of good Chriſtians flocked thither from other parts, in proceſs of time ſuch a courſe was taken by Antichriſts ſupporters, that many of them were impriſoned, and afterward ſent thence to Rome.

The reſt by a new found execution, never till then heard of, were caſt into the Sea, and drowned in the bottom of the ſame. The manner of it was thus: After they had received Sentence, an Iron Chain was faſtned about their middle with a Stone of great weight tyed thereto; and then were they laid upon a Plank between two Wherries, which being come to the Place appointed the Wherries parting aſunder, the Martyrs were forthwith drowned. Yet for all this many ceaſed not ſtill to aſſemble together in a place appointed for that purpoſe, to talk and diſcourſe of Heavenly matters, yea, and to make ſome collections for relief of the poor; ſo as in the year 1566, they called to them a miniſter of the Goſpel, to eſtabliſh and conſtitute a Church among them; having alſo the Supper of the Lord adminiſtred to them. But ſome falſe Brethren creeping in, under pretence of making the ſame profeſſion with them, betrayed them.

Then began the Popiſh Inquiſition to be erected there with the greateſt cruelty that might be, towards the maintenance whereof the Pope ſent every year a certain ſum of mony to thoſe holy Fathers, to be diſtributed among ſuch as were appointed to be ſpies and revealers of ſuch ſecrets as they could come to the knowledge of. Thus were many caſt into the Sea and drowned; ſome were ſent to Rome; others were detained ſo long in Priſons (which were like graves) that they rotted there.

Maſter

Mr. Anthony Ricetto, Martyr.

AMongſt others who were condemned to bee drowned, there was one Maſter Anthony Ricetto of Vincence having a Son about twelve yeares old, who coming to viſit his Father, according to the diſcretion of Children, beſought him with teares to yeild to thoſe who had condemned him, and to ſave his life, that he might not be left Fatherleſs.

A True Chriſtian (ſaid his Father) is bound to forgoe goods, Children, yea, and life it ſelf, for the Maintenance of Gods Honour and Glory: For which cauſe he was now ready and reſolved to lay it down, the Lord aſſiſting him.

The Lords of Venice offered to reſtore unto him his Patrimony, which was partly morgaged and ſold, if he would ſubmit himſelf to the Church of Rome. But he refuſed whatſoever conditions they this way tendred unto him. Some that were Priſoners with him, namely one Mr. Julius Ferlan hath reported much of the abſtinence, patience, and holineſs of this excellent man, ſo farr as to paralel him to another John Baptiſt. On the fifteenth day of February 1565. which according to our computation is, 1566. Captain Clairmont came unto him, and told him, that Francis Sega was reſolved to recant. To which Ricetto by and by replyed, What tell you me of Sega? I will perform my Vows unto the Lord my God; and ſo he was led bound faſt to they whereby. A Certain Prieſt who accompanied him, preſentented unto him a wooden Crucifix, exhorting him to return and to die in the favour of God, reconciling himſelf unto the Church of Rome, the holy Spouſe of Chriſt. But Ricetto, rejecting that Crucifix, beſought the Prieſt and thoſe that followed them to come out of the ſnare of the Devil, to cleave to Jeſus Chriſt; and to live, not according to the Fleſh, but after the Spirit; for if you do otherwiſe, ſaid he, aſſure your ſelves your unbelief will bring you into that lake of fire that ſhall never be quenched. For though you confeſs with your mouth that you knew Jeſus Chriſt, yet you not only deny him by your works, but you perſecute him in his members, being ſeduced, and bewitched by the Pope, who is the open enemy of the Son of God.

* This Sega was his fellow Priſoner, of whom ſee more hereafter.

When they were come nigh to the two Caſtles, the Captain bound his hands; now, becauſe it was very cold, he called for his cloak which they had taken from him. Then ſaid the Wherry-man, feareſt thou a little cold? What wilt thou do when thou art caſt into the Sea? Why art thou not careful to ſave thy ſelf from drowning? Doeſt thou not ſee that the poor flea skips hither and thither to ſave her life? To whom hee anſwered, And I am now flying to eſcape eternal death.

Being arrived at the place where he was to ſuffer, the Captain put a Chain of Iron about his middle with a very heavy ſtone faſtened thereto. Then Ricetto, lifting his eyes to Heaven, ſaid, Father forgive them, for they know not what they do. And being laid on the plank, hee ſaid, Lord Jeſus into thy Hands I commend my Spirit: and then pulling this weighty ſtone towards him, not waiting till the Boats were ſundred one from another, as in ſuch kind of executions they were wont to do, this holy man ſlept in the Lord; which was no ſmall terrour to the Magiſtrate, in that there was never any that died this kind of death before, with ſo much conſtancy and reſolution.

Mr. Francis Spinola, Martyr.

THe Sunday following, Maſter Francis Spinola of Milaine, being about the age of ſix and forty years, was apprehended and brought into the Priſon, called Des cleſs de dix, That oft en keyes; where he found poor Francis Sega. Two days after (which was the eight and twentieth day of February) Spinola was brought before his Judges, where they delivered into his hands a little Treatiſe of the Lords Supper, of which he freely confeſſed he was the Author; ſhewing that the opinion which he there maintained was this, That the Bread and Wine were the ſigns, and not the things ſignified, and therefore muſt not bee adored. He was queſtioned with as touching the power of the Pope, prayer to Saints, and about Purgatory. He anſwered that the Popes power was from man, which the Roman Conſiſtory and certain Princes had given him: but that God the Father had given Jeſus Chriſt to be the head of the Church, and to have all power in Heaven and Earth. What is Peter then, or what is Paul? He further added, that he would not worſhip nor pray to any other but to God only, as it is written. The memorial of the Saints he well approved, as of thoſe who were the true Branches ingrafted into the Vine Chriſt.

Francis Sega, Martyr.

Anno 1567. Mat. 28. 18.

Luke 4. 8. John 15. 5.

Alſo for his part he acknowledgeth none other Purgatory, but the Blood of Chriſt, as it is manifeſt in the Epiſtle to the Hebrews, and in the firſt Epiſtle of John. Heb 1. 3.

Then as Spinola was returned into his Priſon Francis Sega (whom he was ignorant of) waited his coming, holding a Candle in his hand and paſſing by with his Keeper, ſaluted him by his name; whence it came to paſs, that they two conferred together about the Doctrine of the Goſpel. Now howſoever Sega differed from Spinola, touching the number of Sacraments, yet he referred himſelf to the judgment of the True Church of Chriſt in that behalf. But after that he had learned that Spinola had conſtantly ſtood to the defence of the Truth, he was very joyful and much comforted, ſaying, That God had reſerved him for ſuch a time as this, to make him partaker with him of ſo great conſolation. 1 John 1. 7.

The conſtancy of one Martyr puts life into another.

He wrote conſolatory Letters to Spinola, committing his writings into his hands, whereof ſome were preſerved, and the reſt loſt by the careleſneſs of a falſe Brother. Upon the three and twentieth day of February, 1567. the Keepers of the Priſon told Sega that he was to die within one hour after the ſhutting in of the evening. At the hearing of which news hee intreated Spinola, to pray with him. After prayer, Sega telling him that his Soul was heavy to the death; Spinola gave him this anſwer, Fear not, for it will not be long before it ſhall feel thoſe joyes which ſhall endure for ever.

Being brought out of his dark Dungeon, according to the time limited, hee took his leave of Spinola and the reſt of the Priſoners. As hee was entred into the Boat, a certain Frier began to perſwade him to return into the right way. Sega anſwered, that he was already in the way of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and paſſing on he called upon the name of God. He ſeemed not to be much moved at the binding of his Hands, but was a little amazed at the faſtening of his Body to the Chain. Yet by and by taking unto him a Chriſtian reſolution, he took whatſoever they did unto him patiently. Being laid upon the boord or plank, hee commended his Soul into the Hands of God, and being left of the two Boats (upon the edges whereof the plank was ſtayed) the one declining this way, and the other that way, he fell into his Sepulchre the Sea, and died patiently.

Spinola ſoon after was preſented the ſecond time before his Judges, namely the tenth of March, where he reproved the Popes Legate with his Clergy there preſent, as alſo the Lords of Venice who ſat in judgment upon him, becauſe contrary to their Conſciences they ſo perſecuted the Truth of God, calling them the offſpring of the Phariſees, Caiphas, and the Gentiles, who now, ſaid he, kill Jeſus Chriſt in his members. The nine and twentieth of March following, hee was the third time brought before them, where they asked him if he would not recant his Errors. He anſwered that the Doctrine he maintained was not Erroneous, but the very ſame Truth which Jeſus Chriſt and his holy Apoſtles taught and preached, and for which all the Martyrs, as well of old time as now have willingly layd down their lives, and endured the pains of death.

As he did the firſt time hee was convented before them.

After all this, Spinola became ſo weak, that he determined to ſtrike Sail (as they ſay) and to apply himſelf to the time; being brought hereinto by the advice of ſome, namely that he ſhould fain a giving of his conſent to what the Magiſtrate required of him, by means whereof he might eſcape their Hands. But about the tenth of September, coming again to himſelf, and eſpying whereunto this determination tended, hee proteſted before all, that he would ſtand in the confeſſion he had made from the firſt of April laſt paſt. Wherefore on the ninth of Auguſt hee was brought again before the ſame Judges, where he openly confirmed the ſame.

Spinola begins to waver.

But ſoon after recovers himſelf.

His

Anno 1566.

His Judges ſaid, that he ſhould either be drowned or burned alive. Then on the thirteenth of January 1566. (according to the Venetian account, which accordiug to ours was 1567.) on Tueſday morning being come before the Tribunal, Sentence was pronounced upon him that hee ſhould be drowned as an Heretick. To which he gave them this anſwer, I am no Heretick, but the Servant of Jeſus Chriſt. At which words the Popes Legate commanded him to hold his peace, telling him that he lied. The next day in the morning (which was the laſt of January) he was brought into St. Peters Chappel, where he was degraded, becauſe he had been a Prieſt; and the night following he was conducted unto the Sea, and there drowned in the place appointed; who died prayſing and bleſſing God with invincible conſtancy.

A Relation of ſuch things as fell out under the Government of the Duke of Alva, and of many men put to death, 1567.

THe afflictions of the Proteſtants in the Low-Countries were multiplied this year under the dominion of Ferdinando of Toledo Duke of Alva. It is well known that the Spaniards, uſing all their endeavours to rule over this Countrey at their pleaſures, had no better opportunity to accompliſh their deſign, than to eſtabliſh among them their Inquiſition, thereby to domineer over the goods, honors, and lives of every one. The Nobles, Citizens, and Commons did what they could to oppoſe the ſame: to which purpoſe they had inſtantly beſought the King, to afford them his Royal preſence, that hearing once their complaints, his Majeſty might take ſome order for matters of ſo great importance; alledging to this end the example of the Emperour Charles his Father: who upon a buſineſs farr inferiour to this, adventured himſelf with much diligence to paſs through the Enemies Country, who were but a while before reconciled; onely to ſtay ſome mutinies begun in the City of Gand. Theſe things had ſo moved his Majeſty, that he made them a promiſe by Letters of his coming. But his intention was broken off by ſuch as were the upholders of the Inquiſition, that ſo they might with the more facility attain the end of their deſires. In ſtead of their King then, they had ſent unto them the Duke of Alva, who at his entrance found the Priſons repleniſhed with Gentlemen and other perſonages of note, whom the Dutcheſs of Parma had left in bonds after her death.

Long did they languiſh in this Captivity, whilſt the Duke of Alva by fair promiſes diſſembled a kind of meek and gentle carriage of mind towards them, giving them ſome hope of a general pardon, proceeding from the Kings clemency; that thus he might catch the Lords and Governors the more cunningly into his nets, whereof the Lord Lemoral Earle of Egmond, Prince of Gand, Governor of Flanders and Artois, and others of quality gave but too lamentable experience; who being fed with vain hopes were at length inhumanely put to death.

The ſixteen Provinces alſo ſubjecting themſelves under this new government, loſt their antient liberties and priviledges; which evidently appeared by the exploits done from the year 1567. hitherto by a new Councel of twelve, elect and ſetled there by the Duke; the principal of which were Vergas and Delrio, the Fathers of the Inquiſition, which Councel was commonly called the Councel of Blood.

To wit Brabant, Lamburg, Luxemburg, Guerldeland, Flanders, Artois, Haynaut, Holland, Zealand, Namur, Zutphein, Friſeland, Malines, Utrecht, Over-Yſſel and Groaningue.

* Le Conſeil d'eſang.

The death of two Barons of Battembourg, the one called Gysbrecht, and the other Thierri, Brethren, with certain other Gentlemen executed the ſame day at Bruxells, 1568.

AMong many Gentlemen and Captains who were apprehended after the diſcomfiture of the Aſſembly in Holland, whom the Dutcheſs of Parma had impriſoned in the Caſtle of Villford, the two Brothers of Battembourg a moſt antient Barony ſcituated upon Menſe, about two miles off from Nieumegne, did manifeſt above others how much they had profited by being inſtructed in the Church of Geneva. The elder of them was Gysbrecht, and the other Dietrich or Thierri; who from the flower of their youth had conſtantly profeſſed and confeſſed the pure Doctrine of the Goſpel.

On Tueſday the firſt of June, Anno 1568. the Duke of Alva began to declare to the world his fained meekneſs, putting to death the ſame day theſe two Brethren, beſides the Lords, Heter Dandelet, Philip Wingle, &c. They were firſt brought into Provoſt Spellans houſe, neer the Horſe fair, in the City of Bruxels, compaſſed about with a ſtrong guard, and many Drums beating, that none might hear what were their laſt ſpeeches. As they went to their death, Battembourg the elder ſeemed to be ſomewhat penſive, whereas Dietrich his Brother was very chearful, comforting the other with his gracious words, ſaying, Ah Brother, is not this the day we have ſo much deſired? Be not ſorrowful now; for it is the higheſt honor that can befal us here to ſuffer for the Doctrine of the Son of God. It may be for the love you bear me, you grieve to ſee me dye firſt: I am content that you ſhould drink of that cup before me, in regard you are the elder; if not, all is one, ſeeing we are going to our God.

Gysbrecht by and by replied, Think not, dear Brother, that the joy of the holy Ghoſt is taken from me now I am drawing nigh to the Lord, being ready to dye for his holy name.

Then aſcending the ſcaffold, after he had made his fervent Prayers to God, the Executioner taking off his head, he ſlept happily and ſweetly in the Lord. His Brother following him next with ſuch alacrity, as much aſtoniſhed the ſpectators.

He deſired, as ſome ſay, to ſee his Brother and when he had eſpied his head, he cried, I ſhall by and by be with thee, my Brother. So after he had ended his prayer, he was by a quick diſpatch united unto him.

Thoſe who teſtifie theſe things report, That the other Gentleman had ſo much favour as to bee buried; but theſe two Brethren were made a ſpectacle, being hanged up: the cauſe was, for that in the very ſame morning they ſuffered, as alſo before, they directly ſet themſelves againſt the Idolatries which were propoſed unto them.

The Saturday after, the fifth of June, the Earls of Egmond and Horne were beheaded, and there made a publique gazing ſtock. Of which two, the Earl of Horne, who died laſt, gave an evident proof of that true knowledge of God wherewith he was indued, and in which hee had more eſpecially increaſed in the time of his troubles and afflictions.

An extract of a complaint with a proteſtation of the Prince of Orange and the Gentlemen of the Low Countries, touching their oppreſſions.

THis year in the Month of July, the Prince of Orange, William of Naſſau, accompanied with many Lords and Gentlemen of the Low-Countries, all profeſſors of the Goſpel, for prevention of the ſlanders and pretences of Rebellion put upon them by the enemies thereof, publiſhed in writing a Declaration; that it might appear to all, that they were ſo farr off from plotting any Treaſon againſt the Kings Majeſty, that on the contrary, they did by all the means they could acknowledge him to be their natural Prince and Soveraign. The true cauſes indeed for which they took up Arms under the Authority of their Prince, for their own defence, as alſo of thoſe who profeſſed the Proteſtant Religion, were the extortions, the confiſcations of Body and Goods, with the continual condemnations and putting to death even of the moſt Noble perſonages of the Countrey,

And that the Prince of Orange might make known to all, what injuſtice and cruelties were exerciſed upon thoſe of the Religion, he diſcovered the notorious ſubtilties of the Cardinal of Gravella and others, who under the cloaks of the pretended Catholick Religion, ſought nothing elſe thereby but the diminiſhing of Gods glory, the Kings Authority, and the welfare of the common wealth, ſhedding the Blood of many a True Chriſtian, by whoſe death followed the loſs of their temporal eſtates; and all, forſooth, under pretence of Juſtice.

And

And foraſmuch as tortures, vexations, baniſhments, executions both by fire and fire and water, by ſtrait impriſonments, Sword and Gibbets did ſtill increaſe more and more; that for theſe conſiderations the cauſe was lawful and good, in taking upon them the defence of ſo miſerable a People; to whom the Dutcheſs of Parma, Governeſs under his Majeſty, had expreſly permitted the preaching of the Goſpel, for preventing of the perils and dangers which threatned the ruine of the ſaid Countries.

And as the ſaid Prince had been a faithful and loyal Servant to his Majeſty, in doing him many acceptable Services, without either ſparing his perſon or goods, ſo was he alſo ready preſt to be imployed ſtill in the like, more than at any time heretofore. And thus proceeding on further, he made it apparent to every one whoſe Judgment was not foreſtalled, that the Duke of Alva, who in reſpect of the dignities conferred upon him ought himſelf to be a pattern and a protector of the Nobility and Gentry, had notwithſtanding put to death threeſcore Gentlemen, with others of Quality, rich Burgemaſters of Bruxels, and of other Cities beſides; that this his ambition, being riſen to a notable height of cruelty, durſt put to death the Illuſtrious Earls of Egmond and Horne, without any ſhew of Law or equity, who had ſo faithfully ſerved the Emperour Charles of famous memory in his Wars.

Yea, that he might yet further debaſe the Nobility of the Country, which is as it were the principal ſupport of his Majeſty; he cauſed the Heads of the ſaid Earls to be ſet upon Poles and Forks; By ſuch Spectacles charging upon their Parents and Friends much obloquy and diſgrace. Yea, this horrible Execution did ſtrike ſuch a fear and terrour into many, that to avoid theſe oppreſſions they fled the Country. For a concluſion he added, that all theſe things laid together, the iſſue thereof tended to the extirpation of all true Religion, and conſequently the depriving of the Faithful, not only of their ſpiritual, but corporal good alſo. And therefore as a Prince, being a Native member of the Empire, he held himſelf obliged, in having compaſſion over the wrecks made among ſo many poor Chriſtians, to lend them his beſt help and furtherance for the free paſſage of the Goſpel, and the conſolation of ſuch of his Majeſties good Subjects, as were perſecuted, impriſoned and oppreſſed.

Before we ſhut up the Hiſtory of the year 1568, we will add to the former Martyrs ſome that were executed in the Low-Countries at divers times in the ſaid year, without tying our ſelves to any ſtrict order touching their death.

Schoblant the Son of Barthel, John de Hues, Joris Coomans, Martyrs.

THe eleventh of February there were taken and impriſoned in Antwerp, Schoblant the Son of Barthel, John de Hues, and Joris Coomans. After which they were all joyful and glad in the Lord, confeſſing that nothing fell out in this regard, but by his Divine Providence; as it appears by Letters written to their Brethren the ſeventeenth of March, containing that which followeth.

Seeing that it is the will of God that we ſhould ſuffer for his holy Name, and in the quarrel of his Goſpel, we certifie you Brethren, that we are of good courage hitherto, howſoever the Fleſh continually rebels againſt the Spirit, counſelling it ever and anon according to the advice of the old Serpent. But we are well aſſured that Chriſt who hath bruiſed, will alſo ſtill bruiſe the Serpents head, and not leave us comfortleſs. True it is, we are now and then pricked in the heel, but that is all the Serpent can do: nor are we diſcouraged, but keep our Faith cloſe to the Promiſes of God, who is the Lord of Heaven and Earth, having created all things of nothing.

He forſook not Joſeph in Egypt, nor left the three young Men in the fiery Furnace: no, nor Daniel in the Lions Den. This is the God of Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob, and of their righteous poſterity; ſo that without fear we can ſay with the Prophet David, The Lord is my help, tower, ſtrength and refuge. By ſuch and the like Scriptures, dear Brethren, we comfort our ſelves in our bands, rejecting all confidence in any man whatſoever. Be not di, maid then, good Brethren and Siſters, for our bands and impriſonment. For ſo is the good will of God now towards us. And therefore pray rather that he will give us grace to perſevere conſtantly unto the end. So be it. Anno 1568

Pſal. 18.

The Examination of Schoblant, taken the 24. of March, in the preſence of the Marqueſs, of the Bayliff, of the Secretary and many others, 1568.

Marq. WHere were you born?

Schob. In Sommerſwall.

Marq. Where did you marry your Wife?

Schob. At Middleborough in Zealand.

Marq. Where were your Children baptized?

Schob. In the Church of Chriſt, in which true Chriſtians are bound to baptize their Children.

Marq. Though you ſhould ſay no more, we have ſufficient teſtimony even from your own mouth.

Have you received the Lords Supper?

Schob. Yea, Sir.

Marq. Are ye not a Miniſter?

Schob. No, Sir.

Marq. Ought not you to ſubmit your Judgment to that which hath been decreed in a General Council, where ſo many Learned men were aſſembled, Biſhops and Cardinals, ſwaying the ſame?

Schob. I have read of ſome Councils where the Spirit of God was not preſent.

Marq. Would you not now willingly return into the boſom of the holy Roman Church?

Schob. I will cleave to whatſoever God ſhall teach me out of his holy Word. And thus for this time they parted.

On the ſeven and twentieth of March, Schoblant received Sentence of death; whereat he was nothing terrified, but began to ſing the Song of Simeon, and the fortieth Pſalm.

The night following he wrote his laſt farewel to his Brethren, and excuſeth Joris for not being condemned with him, although they were both preſented at the ſame time before the Judges. I pray you dear Friends be not offended, ſaith he, that Joris my Fellow-priſoner is not offered a Sacrifice with me. It is not, I aſſure you, for denying his Saviour. But let us meditate on that which the Lord ſaid to S. Peter; If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? follow thou me. This I apply to my ſelf at this time, for which I render humble and hearty thanks to God, who hath accounted me worthy, not only to confeſs the Lord Jeſus with my mouth, but alſo to ſeal the ſame confeſſion with my blood. I now Brethren bid you farewel, waiting with a joyful heart the call and cry of my Husband, who now invites me to come unto him. John 21.

Out of Priſon the ſame night before the day wherein I muſt be offered up a Sacrifice. Written with mine own hand.

Schoblant the Son of Barthel.

THe next day he entreated the Gaoler with a great deal of earneſtneſs that he would not ſuffer the Friers and Monks to come in to trouble him: for, ſaid he, ſuch kind of People can do me no good, ſeeing the Lord hath already ſealed up the aſſurance of my ſalvation in my heart by his holy Spirit. I am now going to my Spouſe, putting off this earthly Mantle, to enter into the celeſtial glory, where I ſhall be freed from all Superſtitions. And then he added further, Would to God I might be the laſt that theſe Tyrants ſhould put to death, and that their thirſt after blood might be ſo quenched with mine, that the poor Church of God from henceforth might enjoy her reſt and quiet.

Having ſung the fortieth Pſalm with his Fellow-priſoner, concluding the ſame with ſaying the Lords Prayer, they kiſſed one another, and commended one another unto God with many tears.

After which the Executioner came in, and when he had bound him, he led him away. In going out of the Priſon he ſaid, farewel Joris, I go before thee, follow thou me. Joris anſwered, ſo will I Brother, I will follow thee. In his paſſage towards the place

Anno 1566. place of Execution, he forgot not his Brethren, but manifeſted his love to them by ſuch ſigns as he could. Being tyed to the Stake he was burned alive, calling upon the Name of the Lord, in the year 1568. the tenth day of July.

John Hues finiſhed his courſe in Priſon.

Here followeth a Letter written by Joris Coomans, out of Priſon, to the Church of God in Antwerp.

BRethren I write unto you being left alone, whereas we were three in number; John Hues is now dead in the Lord. I did my beſt to comfort him whilſt he breathed. So as now I am alone, and yet not altogether alone, ſeeing the God of Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob is with
Gen. 15. 1. me. He is my exceeding great reward, and will not fail to reward me as ſoon as I ſhall have laid down this earthly Tabernacle: pray unto God that he will ſtrengthen me to the end; for from hour to hour I expect the diſſolution of this houſe of Clay.

Not long after, Joris was examined by the Magiſtrates, who queſtioning with him of his Faith, he anſwered freely thereto, proving what he ſaid by the holy Scriptures.

The Marqueſs asked him, if he were reſolved to dye for the Faith he profeſſed.

Yes, ſaith Joris, I will not only venture to give my Body, but my Soul alſo for the confirmation of it.

Marqueſs. How came you to underſtand the Scripture, ſeeing you have not the Latin Tongue?

Joris. Call in hither your Doctors, and I will let them ſee that I have learning ſufficient to confute them.
Mat. 11. 25. You greatly admire them, but Chriſt gives thanks to his heavenly Father for hiding his ſecrets from the wiſe and prudent, and revealing them to Babes.

Marq. I hitherto ſpared you in hope to ſee you recant, but you grow ſtill worſe and worſe.

Joris. Sir, during the time of my Impriſonment I have ſhed many a ſalt Tear, and by the Grace of God I am become much more reſolute and better. But to faſhion my ſelf according to your appetite I have no ſtomach at all; no, although you burn me, as you have done my Brother Scoblant.

Marq. And I can tell you that it will coſt you but little better cheap.

Joris. I am ready if it be to morrow.

Then ſaid one of the ſtanders by. Sir, he hath neither Wife, Child nor Goods to loſe, and that makes him ſo willing to die.

Joris. Be it that I have none of all theſe, yet muſt I ſuffer death for Conſcience ſake. But what care you for that? I would you could be ſilent and bethink your ſelves well what you do; you ſhall anſwer theſe your doings at the laſt day, where you muſt all appear, and then there will be no reſpect of perſons.

Marq. If you uſe this kind of language I will commit you to the Hole; where you ſhall be fed only with Bread and Water, and that I think will tame your Tongue. Therefore be quiet and ſing me no more of theſe Pſalms.

Joris. Well Sir, I may well reſtrain my outward voice, but neither you nor all the world beſides, ſhall ever be able to let me from praiſing God in my heart; nor ſhall you ſit as Lords over my Conſcience.

Marq. We have heard you preach but too long. Then he ſaid, Gaoler, take him and caſt him into the Hole. Then was he put among Thieves, as a Lamb among ſo many Wolves. Thus this conſtant Witneſs of Chriſt remained firm (ſcorning both their threats and torments) till they had burned him as they did Scoblant. Auguſt 14. the year 1568.

Giles Annik, John Annik his Son, and Lovis Meulen, Martyrs 1568.

Perſecution grew ſtill hot in Flanders.

GIles Annik, with John Annik his Son, were driven from Renay in Flanders, and retired unto Emden in Eaſt Frieſland. But by reaſon of their ſo ſudden departure, they could not take their Wives with them; and therefore returned thither again in the year 1568 to convey them thence. The tyranny of the Duke of Alva and hi Spaniards was then in the height; by reaſon whereof they durſt not enter the Town openly, but took up their lodging in the Evening at an honeſt mans houſe, called Lovis Meulin. Now it was this night in which the Enemies had fore-appointed to make a ſecret ſearch in the Town for ſuch as profeſſed the Goſpel, knowing nothing of theſe two who were but now come thither. So paſſing by this houſe, and ſeeing the light of a Candle in it, they imagined to meet with their prey there; wherefore forcing the door open, they took theſe two Priſoners, together with their Hoſt; God having appointed them to be the Witneſſes of Chriſt.

So after they had been detained in bands, they were all three condemned by the Magiſtrates to death, as Hereticks. Giles was the firſt that they brought to the place of Execution, and when the Prieſts offered to put their Idol into his hands, he refuſed it: whereat his Adverſaries being moved cauſed him to be gagged, that the people might not hear him ſpeak ought to their edification. Then was he burned, dying conſtantly and bleſſedly in the Lord.

Forthwith the Serjeants were ſent to fetch his Son out of Priſon; who, being endued with a ſingular fortitude and conſtancy, called to him one whoſe name was John Camber, being the firſt man that laid hold on him at his apprehenſion, ſaying, I forgive thee my death: then preparing himſelf to die in the Lord, the Hangman cut of his Head. Likewiſe Lovis Meulen, who having lodged theſe Strangers, according to the Rule of the Apoſtle, was executed by the Sword, which death he willingly endured for the Name of Chriſt in the year 1568.

Louyes de Kiken-Pooſt, Martyr, 1658.

THis Woman was the Widow of one Huges Moyvert born in Renay, about the age of ſixty years, one that truly feared God. The Magiſtrate of Renay impriſoned her in the year 1568. becauſe two years before ſhe with her Children had conſented that a Miniſter ſhould preach in an Out-houſe on the backſide of her dwelling; ſhe was alſo very charitable in relieving the Poor, every way ſhewing forth the fruits of a true ſaving Faith. Having been kept in Priſon ſeven months, ſhe was condemned to die the nine and twentieth of July. After her condemnation the Curate of St. Martins came into the Priſon, purpoſing to have heard her confeſſion. But the Woman ſpake unto him with ſuch a Divine grace, and with a Spirit ſo repleniſhed with zeal, that the tears trickled down his Cheeks, and going his way he ſaid, I came to comfort you, but I have need rather to be comforted of you.

Then being brought by the Serjeants to the place of Execution ſhe was beheaded; unto which ſhe yielded her ſelf with much boldneſs and joy of heart, July the ninth.

A ſtrange accident fell out upon the death of this Woman; for a Couſin of hers being with Child, and ready to lye down at the ſame time when this Martyr was going to be executed, hearing the ſound of the Bell (which uſually touls when any are to ſuffer) ſhe fell into a trembling, and remained ſo three weeks, beyond her reckoning, her Fruit ſtirring to and fro in her Womb, as if a Weaver had moved his Shuttle from one end of his Web to another; the neck of it bowing down as if it had been broken with ſome blow. By which it appeared that theſe cruel Tyrants were the cauſe of this poor Innocents death. The Woman viewing this ſtrange ſight ſent for the foreſaid Curate; who being come in, and beholding this ſpectacle, ſuddenly ſwounded, and was never well after to his dying day.

Notes touching Chriſtopher Gauderin, Martyr, and others.

THis Chriſtopher was bred up under the Abbot of Æname; who dying, the ſaid Chriſtopher addicted himſelf to the making of Linnen Cloth, which he quickly grew expert in. But having been trained up in a bad School, as ſoon as the Sunday was come, he ſpent and conſumed all his weeks earnings. Now by reaſon of a Friend of his that wrought with him, called Louis Stallens, God brought him into the right way. For the ſaid Louis would often tell him, that he ought rather to diſtribute of his gettings to the Poor, than to ſpend them ſo waſtfully; for if he continued ſo, God would ſurely call him to an account for it. Theſe and the like exhortations ſo wrought upon this ſpendthrift, that he began to alter and change his courſe; ſo as inſtead of frequenting Taverns, he became a diligent hearer of Sermons, and alſo gave himſelf much to the ſtudy of the holy Scriptures: inſomuch that not long after he was called by the Church to the Office of a Deacon, the which he diſcharged carefully and faithfully.

and

The fruit of good counſel.

Having occaſion to go to a place called Audenard, in the month of March, 1567. to make diſtribution of certain Alms to the poor there, he was arreſted and ſent Priſoner to the Caſtle by the Bayliff, who had formerly ſeen him in the ſaid Abbots houſe. The Bayliff asked him how he came now to turn Heretick; for you learned not this (ſaid he) of your Maſter the Abbot. Nay Sir, ſaid Chriſtopher, I am no Heretick, but a right believing Chriſtian; which he taught me not indeed, but rather other vile qualities, the which I am aſhamed now to rehearſe.

In Priſon he had many diſputes touching matters of Faith, which he ſo defended and maintained by the Word of God, that he put his Adverſaries to ſilence.

Some objecting againſt him his youth, being about the age of thirty years, he would tell them, that mans life conſiſted but of two days, viz. the day of his birth, and the day of his death, and therefore he muſt needs die once; for my part therefore (ſaid he) I am now willing by death to paſs into eternal life.

Perceiving in the evening that he was certainly to die the nxt day, the ſtriking off of his Bolts being a ſign thereof, he ceaſed not to pour out his Soul to God in prayer, until ten of the Clock, doing the like in the morning very early. His Prayer being ended, he put on a clean ſhirt, and waſhed himſelf, ſaying to his fellow Priſoners, Brethren, I am now going to be married, I hope before noon to drink of the Wine of the Kingdom of heaven. When he came down he found three Priſoners who were prepared to ſuffer with him; namely John Liebert, W. Spiere, and a Woman called Jannekin Bearts.

Theſe four exhorted one another, and encouraged each other to ſuffer death conſtantly. Which done, a Frier forthwith preſented himſelf before them, coming as he ſaid to convert them. But Chriſtopher ſaid unto him, Away from us thou Seducer of Souls, for we have nothing to do with thee. Whereupon he by and by departed. Then came in the Hangman; who as he was buſie about them to put into every one of their mouths a Gag, they bade one another farewel. John Liebert ſaid, What, ſhall we not have liberty in this our laſt hour to praiſe God with our voice and Tongue? Chriſtopher anſwered, Brother, let not this diſcourage us; for the greater wrong our Enemies think to do unto us, the more aſſiſtance we ſhall find from God: and ſo never ceaſed to comfort them till himſelf was gagged alſo.

A confident ſpeech.

Then the Executioner brought them to the Town-houſe to hear their Sentence read; which in ſum was this, That they ſhould be hanged becauſe they had been preſent at the hearing of Sermons. Thus theſe three men yielded up their Souls to God with admirable conſtancy, at the Gallows.

The Woman, being every way vertuouſly given, was condemned to be beheaded, becauſe ſhe had ſung Pſalms, and made a certain exhortation out of the Word of God to her Neighbours, at a womans up-ſitting. She was beheaded on the back ſide of the Town-houſe. Now becauſe her Body was much enfeebled, ſhe was cauſed to ſit upon a ſtool, receiving three blows with the Sword overthwart the Teeth. Yet ſhe conſtantly ſate ſtill till ſhe obtained the Crown of Martyrdom, the ſame day in which the forementioned Martyrs died, which was the ſecond of June. Anno 1568.

Anno 1566.

Piere Coulogue, and Betken his Maid-Servant, Martyrs, Anno 1568.

THis Peter Coulogue, by his Trade being a Goldſmith dwelling in Breda, had long ſerved the Church there in the office of a Deacon; wherin he carried himſelf with the good approbation of all. His houſe alſo was free for the Aſſembly to meet in, as oft as the exerciſes of Chriſtian Religion were performed amongſt them.

But the Enemies of the Truth not enduring the ſweet ſavour hereof impriſoned him, and laid him in Irons: which the faithful there took very heavily, uſing all the means they could to have acceſs to viſit him. But the Enemies taking knowledge thereof cauſed him to be conveyed into the Caſtle; whence both his and the Churches ſorrow was yet further encreaſed, becauſe they could not now come to be a comfort one to another.

His Servant Betken, being very zealous and well read in the Scriptures, brought him his ordinary dyet from day to day, never ceaſing to comfort and confirm him out of the Word of God. All which ſhe had liberty to do nine months together. At length they impriſoned her alſo; whereof ſhe was right glad, thinking her ſelf happy to ſuffer ought for righteouſneſs ſake. Not long after Peter was put to the Torture; which after he had endured, they came in like manner to his Maid-ſervant Betken: who ſpake unto them after this manner, My Maſters, wherefore will you put me to this Torture, ſeeing I have no way offended you? Is it for my faiths ſake? You need not torment me for that; for as I was never aſhamed to make a confeſſion thereof, no more will I be now at this preſent before you; I will freely ſhew you my mind therein. But for all this they proceeded on with that which they intended. Which ſhe perceiving ſaid, Alas my Maſters, if it be ſo that I muſt ſuffer this pain, then give me leave firſt to call upon God. To which her requeſt they yielded. Now whileſt ſhe was making her Prayer, one of the Commiſſioners was ſo ſurpriſed with fear and Terror that by and by he ſwounded, and could not be fetched again. And thus the poor Maid eſcaped the Torture.

Soon after being examined touching her Faith, they condemned theſe two Innocents to be burned. Now as they were led to be executed, great ſorrowings and complaints were heard among the People. But as for Peter and his Maid, they prayed to God with ardent affection, that he would perfect the good work which he had begun in them, and aſſiſt them with the Power of his holy Spirit, until they had finiſhed their courſe.

The courage and conſtancy of the ſaid Betken did ſo move many of the godly, both Men and Women, that not caſting what peril or danger might enſue thereof, they brake through the Multitude, embracing the Priſoners, and praiſing God for their conſtancy; ſaying, Fight manfully, for the Crown is ready prepared for you.

After they were come where they ſhould ſuffer, Betken began to ſpeak unto the People with an amiable countenance, ſaying thus unto them, Brethren and Siſters, be you always obedient to the Word of God, and fear not thoſe that can kill the Body, for on the Soul they can have no power: as for me, I am now going to meet my glorious Spouſe the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. And then falling both down upon their knees, they prayed to the Lord with great devotion. Being riſen up from prayer, the Executioner laying hold of them bound them with Chains to the Stake, and then ſtrangled Peter, but would not ſtrangle the other, who encouraged her Maſter till he had yielded up the Ghoſt, and till the fire had taken hold of her ſelf. Then was ſhe heard and ſeen to magnifie the Lord out of the midſt of the flames; ſo as many among the Multitude were raviſhed at her invincible conſtancy. Thus did theſe two Martyrs of the Lord give up their laſt breath in the fire. May the 29 Anno 1568.

Anno 1568.

Giles Meyere Martyr, Anno 1568.

IN Flanders, at a place called Vinderhout, distant from Gand about a mile, there was a certain Curate called Giles de Meyere, whom it pleased God to illuminate with the true knowledge of his Gospel. Now having received a Talent from God, he would not hide it with Mat.25.18. the Evil servant; but sought all means how to imploy the same. He had the fear of God always before his eyes, manifesting the same as well in his Doctrine as in his Conversation, being careful to instruct those whom God
Acts 20.20. had committed to his charge. Yea, he went from House to House comforting and exhorting every one, as occasion served, out of the Word of God; above all, labouring with them to beware of the abominable Superstitions of the Papacy.

He taught them, that Forgiveness of Sins, the Grace of God, and Eternal Life, was not to be obtained by our own Merits, but by the free and only Grace of God in Jesus Christ.

The Clergy of Gand having notice given them hereof, namely, that their Doctrine and Authority would come to be little set by, if this Curate should proceed on thus in his course without let, they never rested until they had pursued him to the death. They imprisoned him then, in the Month of March, Anno 1567. casting him into a deep and dark Hole, where for a certain space he remained, bearing this his affliction patiently and constantly, calling upon God night and day, praising him for esteeming him worthy to suffer for his sake. In which his afflictions many good people, who came often to visit him, received such instruction and consolation from him, that they were hardly drawn to leave him, till of necessity they must; their departure was always accompanied with abundance of tears.

The Priests and others of that Rabble, ceased not likewise to ply him with Disputations, thinking by that means to make him renounce his Faith; but to no purpose: for he remained still firm and constant, keeping himself close to the Word of God written, which so vexed them, that they procured him to be laid in the Castle, where his Sentence was to be hanged: The Spaniards being then at Gand, took him thence, bound him, girding and straining him strangely with cords, and would needs have him burned. As he was led thither, they abused him shamefully with mocks, thrusting him forward, and striking him cruelly. The Captain of the Band gave him a blow over the face with his Gantlet, which much disfigured him. Finally, these Tyrants handled him worse than any Dog, only because his patient and constant carriage of himself tormented and enraged them.

Being come to the place, they thrust him into his little Cabbin, piled up with Fagots and Wood, and then set fire unto him; where he was heard distinctly and plainly to use these words, (albeit they had gagged him) Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit. Thus this faithful Witness of Jesus Christ died quietly and constantly in the Lord, April the fourth, Anno 1568.

Among these sad Relations, a little to quicken and refresh the spirit of the Reader, I will here insert a Letter full of Consolations, written out of Prison to the Faithful, by one William Touart Merchant, who had his dwelling in the City of Lisle in Flanders.

THis honourable Personage, being come to the Age of Eighty years, or thereabouts, used his House for the space of fourteen or fifteen years as a Church, wherein the Assembly in the City of Lisle commonly met. Being chased and banished thence in the year 1561. he withdrew himself for a while to Tournay, whence he was constrained to fly, and to go to Amiens and Moundedier, Cities of Picardy, that there he might enjoy the pure preaching of the Gospel. Afterward returning into his own Country, he came to reside in the City of Antwerp, where after he had continued many years, he was at length imprisoned and condemned to be burned with two others, who suffered for the same cause. But it pleased God so to dispose of him, that he died another kind of death, to shew that his chosen Servants have to triumph over the same, some one way, and some another. For being plunged into a Cistern or Tub full of water, he was drowned in Prison, and then they carried his Body out of the City to a place called Berken, where the dead bodies of the Condemned are laid upon the Wheels or Crutch. Among many Letters which he wrote during the time of his Imprisonment, my Author hath selected out this one, which here followeth.

DEar Brethren and Sisters in Jesus Christ, I most humbly thank my good God that he hath so fortified and comforted me by his Grace, that I feel my self more cheared by lying in this dark Prison, than if I were walking in the open Streets or Fields. I say, this I feel according to the spirit; for as touching the flesh, what doth it apprehend here but stinking vapors and smoke?

Wherefore, my Beloved, if it so fall out that you be apprehended for the Name of Jesus Christ, fear not the Prison, nor those that have power to kill the Body; for having done that, they can go no further. Be ye not afraid then, seeing it is the reward which our good Captain Jesus Christ hath promised to all his faithful Soldiers and Servants. He who turns his back in this Conflict goes by the loss; but whosoever fights manfully, obtains in the end the Crown, not a Crown of Gold, but of Glory immortal. We here lay down a fading life, filled with griefs and Rev.2.10. troubles, to change the same for a life everlasting; we put off the rags of this mortal flesh, to be clothed with robes immortal; we forsake a loathsom life for joy and felicity eternal; ought any gain or exchange to be compared with this? O sweet and happy Martyrdom, how dost thou dignifie and enrich us, in despite of the World, Devil, and our own Flesh! And which of us now can complain, seeing our Soveraign Lord and Master hath so expresly foretold it to all his followers? Will any man come after me, saith he? Let him then take up his Cross Mat.26.24. and follow me. Let us bear, oh let us then bear the Cross cheerfully and with joyfulness, that we may be received in the presence of his heavenly Father: for it is not only given us to believe in Christ, but also to suffer for his sake; Phil.1.21. and if we suffer with him, then we shall also reign with 1 Tim.2.12. him.

O that we could admire his bounty, who no sooner imploys us in his work, but hath the wages ready in his hand wherewith to recompence us. Your sorrow, saith he, shall John 16.20. be turned into joy. Let us then cast off every weight that Heb.12.1. presseth down, and whatsoever else that stands in our way to Heaven-ward; be it Father, Mother, Brother, Sisters, Mat 19.29. Husband, Child, yea, and our own Life also. Let us with Matth. 13. the wise Merchant-man sell all, that with him we may 45,46. purchase that precious Pearl. How happy do I esteem them who are called to suffer, and leave their life for confessing the Name of Jesus Christ? For the eternal Son of God will confess their Names before his heavenly Father, and his holy Angels. They shall be clad with white Mat.10.27. Luke 12.8. Robes, and shine as the Sun in the Kingdom of Heaven, filled with gladness in the presence of the Lamb. They shall eat of the fruit of the Tree of Life, which is in the Rev.2.7. midst of the Paradise of God.

Let us fix the eyes of our minds upon these so great and precious promises of Jesus Christ, which he hath made to all those which persevere in well doing unto the end. O how happy shall we be, when we are delivered from these bodies of death, to live for ever with our God! Let us continually pray then with the Disciples, Lord, increase our faith. O dear Brethren! remember me always in Luke 17.5. your Prayers, who am bound here in the bonds of Antichrist. Remember those also who are in bonds, as if you Heb.13.3. were bound with them; pray, I say, without ceasing; for our Adversary the Devil is always compassing us about Pet.4.5. with his fetches, to cause our hearts to faint. And you are not ignorant what a potent Enemy our own Flesh is Gal. 5.17. unto us. But I confidently believe that our good God, Phil.1.6. who hath begun this good work in me, will perfect the same even unto the day of Christ.

Fare ye well.

It was strange to see what spectacles of dead Bodies, slain by the Bloody Inquisition, were to be gazed on in a manner in every place: especially in the Cities of Tournay, and of the Valencians, in regard of the Multitudes of Believers, both of men and women, who had long languiſhed in ſundry Priſons, in great miſery and neceſſities. Now that we may not forget what fell out in the beginning of this year 1569. thus it happened.

In the City of Valence were executed ſeven and fifty perſons, whereof the greater part were Burgeſſes of the City; only becauſe they clave to the true Faith of Jeſus Chriſt.

This ſlaughter was diſtributed into three ſeveral days. Ten were beheaded on Munday the four and twentieth day of January; twenty on Tueſday following; and the other twenty the day after that; and ſo the ſeven in their order after the reſt, not without much aſtoniſhment and lamentations of the poor people, with the remainder of the Burgeſſes of that City.

A notable Cruelty executed upon a good woman, called Perrette Curtet, in the year 1569.

AS ſhe was travelling from Orleance to a place called Moutagris, where ſhe intended to meet her Husband, called Mr. Anthony Chanoriner des Meringes, who had eſcaped the fury of his Enemies: ſhe being in her Inn at ſupper, two or three deſperate Villains knocked at the door, and coming in, asked of the ſaid Curtet, Art thou not Meringes Wife? She anſwered, Yes. Then rapping forth execrable Blaſphemies, they ſaid, Thou art ſhe we looked for. This done, they ſtripped her into her Smock, took away her moneys and rings from her, and brought her to the River ſide; where after great Blaſphemies, they ſaid, Confeſs thee. The woman anſwered, Seeing I muſt dye, give me leave to call upon God firſt. They deriding her, ſaid, Pray then, let us hear what kind of Prayer thou wilt make. She having in her prayers commended her Soul to God; one of them ſware, Gods death, is this all? Wilt thou ſay nothing elſe? Then ſaid one of them to another, Let us caſt her into the River: which they agreed to do; ſome taking her by the head, and others by the heels, and ſo throwing her in, heaped great pieces of Ice upon her to cauſe her to ſink, and then went their way. But underſtanding that the poor woman had got upon a great flake of Ice, to ſave her ſelf thereon. Peter Gouge returned, who was one of the murtherers, and had betrayed her into the hands of the reſt, notwithſtanding her Husband had covenanted with him to convey her to him in ſafety: This Gouge, I ſay, finding her there, gave her a deaths wound, the which had never come to light, had not the ſaid Gouge confeſſed the ſame, being impriſoned by the Dutcheſs of Ferrare for that very fact; yet eſcaped he unpuniſhed (contrary to the Law of Provoſts) albeit he was ſent to the Provoſt Marſhal of Montagris to that end, and was ſet at liberty, for the hatred which theſe bare againſt the Doctrine of the Goſpel, whereof the ſaid des Meringes was a Miniſter.

Now the dead body floating to and fro upon the water, reſted no where, until it came over againſt the Lodging where the ſaid des Meringes lay (as if it had there demanded execution of Juſtice upon the Offenders) where being known, and conveyed thence, was buried by ſome of the Aſſembly who yet remained in the City.

Another Cruelty committed in Orleance about the ſame time.

A Woman in the City of Orleance was conſtrained by the Murtherers (who broke in upon her Husband in the night) to ſtand and hold the Candle to them, whilſt they murthered him.

Of the coming of the Queen of Navarre to the City of Paris in France, with the manner of her ſickneſs and death there.

BEfore I come to mention the bloody Maſſacres of France, eſpecially that of Paris, Anno 1572. which made way to all the reſt, I cannot omit to place here, as an entrance thereunto, the Hiſtory of that noble and vertuous Lady Jane de Albert, Queen of Navarre, becauſe it contains much matter worthy of due obſervation.

This good Queen, before ſhe could be drawn to come to Paris to ſolemnize the Marriage of her Son, the Prince of Navarre, with the Siſter of Charles the Ninth, then King of France, received Letters upon Letters from the ſaid King, to accompany the Prince her Son in that Solemnity: now, whereas ſhe caſt ſome doubts touching her Sons marriage with one of another Religion, the King aſſured her that all things ſhould be ſo wrought, as ſhould give her good ſatisfaction and content; promiſing that he would get a diſpenſation from the Pope to that end. But when the Queen underſtood that the King was minded to have this Marriage ſolemnized at Paris, ſhe would by no means hear of it: For I will not, ſaid ſhe, put any confidence in that ſo mutinous a people, being the ſworn Enemies both of my ſelf and mine.

Still the King perſiſted in his ſute for the obtaining of the ſame at her hands. Alſo having intelligence by ſome of his Agents, that the Queen of Navarre began a little to waver, he ſolicited her yet once again to come, aſſuring her that all things ſhould be carried in ſuch a peaceable ſort, that ſhe ſhould have no cauſe to complain. At length the Queen came from Rochel to Bloys in the Month of March, 1572. with great attendance, where it is incredible to think what welcome ſhe had on all ſides, eſpecially from the King and his Brethren, &c. who yet, when all was done, could ſay to his Mother, Now Madam, have I not quit my ſelf well? Let me alone, and I will bring them all into the Net.

Anno 1572.

Pope Pius 5. whilſt he lived, could by no means endure to hear of, or give his conſent to this marriage: but he died, and then way was made for this marriage to be concluded.

In April following were the Articles concluded concerning the Marriage of the Prince of Navarre with the Kings Siſter. In the beginning of May the King wooes the Queen of Navarre again to come to Paris for preparing of things fitting for this Marriage; which ſhe accordingly yielded unto, and parting from Bloys on the ſixth of the ſaid Month, came to Paris on the fifteenth of the ſame. After which ſhe went from place to place in the City into ſundry Houſes and Shops, to find out ſuch things as might tend to the adorning of the day of ſo great a Solemnity.

The Queen-mother could by no means brook this good Queen; and therefore not finding with what colour ſhe could diſpatch her with the reſt, and yet fearing the height of her ſpirit if ſhe ſhould ſurvive, as alſo that ſhe could not then ſo work upon the flexibility of the Prince her Son as ſhe intended, ſhe conſulted with one Rene, whoſe practiſe it was to impoyſon things; who by ſuch means adventured to poyſon the Prince of Conde by the ſcent of a poyſoned Apple, which upon ſome ſuſpicion was firſt tried upon a Dog; and it had almoſt coſt the Princes Chyrurgion his life, by ſmelling too nigh thereto. This Rene, ſelling to the Queen of Navarre his perfumed Drugs, found the way how to poyſon her therewith, although others thought the contrary. But the ſaid Rene was heard afterwards to make his brags, that he had the like in ſtore for two or three more, who ſuſpected no ſuch matter.

On Wedneſday the fourth of June, the Queen fell ſick of a continual Fever, and kept her bed; which proceeded, as it was given out, from the grief ſhe had in her Lights, wherein by long continuance was bred an Impoſthume, ſhe being alſo diſtempered with the heat of the Seaſon and her extraordinary Journeys. This burning Fever grew ſo ſtrong upon her, that within five days after ſhe died, to the great grief of the better ſort, but to the joy of the ſecret Councel.

The Malady indeed was in her Brain, which was not ſearched: in which the Queen-mother had an hand, though ſhe ſeemed much to mourn for the affliction of her good Friend. Now foraſmuch as in the time of her ſickneſs ſhe manifeſted with what Spirit ſhe was guided, we will here ſet down the true narration of her behavior, both in the ſame her ſickneſs, and alſo at her death.

Perceiving in her ſelf by the ſtrength of the Diſeaſe (howſoever others ſlighted it) that ſhe could not long continue, ſhe made her ſelf ready to receive from the hand of God that which he had appointed concerning her; and to that end requeſted ſhe might have ſuch nigh about her, as might comfort her in this caſe out of the Word of God, as alſo to pray with her and for her, according to that which S. James ſaith, Is any ſick among you, Let him call for the Elders of the Church, and let them pray over ſuch a one, knowing that the fervent Prayer of a righteous man availeth much with God. John 5. 14, 16.

Thus

Anno 1566.

Thus, according to her desire, a Minister resorting unto her, shewed out of the Scriptures, That Christians ought in all things to submit themselves to the will of God, as to the Father of Spirits, that they might live. And albeit the rigor of his chastisements doth sometimes seem to our flesh, as if they were sent to none other end but for our ruin and destruction; yet ought we to consider, that because he is just, he can do nothing but justly, and being a Father, he cannot but therein seek the welfare of his afflicted Children. Heb. 12.

To which she replyed, I take all this, saith she, as sent from the hand of God my most merciful Father; nor have I, during this extremity, feared to dye, much less murmured against him for inflicting the same upon me; knowing that whatsoever he doth, he doth the same so, as all in the end shall turn to my everlasting good.

The Minister continuing in his speech, added, That the causes of sicknesses and diseases must be sought beyond the course of Physick, which always looks to the corruption of the humours, or to the more noble parts of the Body any way distempered: for howsoever it was not amiss to have respect to these things, as to second causes, yet ought we to ascend higher, namely to the first, even to God himself, who disposeth of all his Creatures as it pleaseth him. Deut. 32. 39. He it is that makes the wound and heals, that kills and makes alive. And therefore to him we ought to direct our Prayers for comfort in all our griefs and sufferings, and in the end for full deliverance; seeing it is no hard matter with him to restore health unto us, if his good pleasure be such.

To this she answered, That she depended wholly upon Gods providence, knowing that all things are wisely disposed by him, and therefore besought him to furnish her with all such graces as he saw to be necessary for her salvation. As for this life, said she, I am in a manner weaned from the love of it, in regard of the afflictions which have followed me from my youth hitherto, but especially because I cannot live without daily offending my good God, with whom I desire to be with all my heart.

The Minister told her, That long life, how full of troubles soever it were, was notwithstanding to be esteemed among the blessings of God, seeing his promise implyes so much; Deut. 5. 16. and not only so, but because our life may many ways serve to his glory, and is both an honour and a pledge of his favour; even as it is to him whom his Prince imploys long in his service, having had experience of his fidelity for many years together. In which respect she was earnestly requested to pray, That if it were the will of God to imploy her yet longer in his service, for the further inlargement of his Gospel, that he would grant unto her such recovery of health and good disposition of body, that with renued strength she might be encouraged to finish her course much more nobly than heretofore.

Whereupon she protested, That in regard of her own particular, her life was not dear unto her, seeing so long as she lived in this frail flesh, she was still prone and apt to sin against God: only, said she, her care was somewhat for her Children (which God had given her) in respect they should be so soon deprived of her now in their young years; yet not doubting, said she, but although it should please God to take me from them, that himself will be a Father and a Protector over them, as he hath been to me in my greatest afflictions; and therefore I commit them wholly to his government and fatherly care. These were her very words.

The Minister said, That he blessed God to see in her Majesty this assurance of Faith, and so to cast her care upon the Providence of God; praying her still to persevere therein, which would sufficiently seal unto her the truth of her Faith. And thus, said he, did the Patriarchs in times past commit the care of their Posterity over into the hands of God; Gen. 24. 1. & Gen. 27. & 48. 15. & 49. as may appear by Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, touching their several blessings.

But yet it was very requisite, as he said, that she should make choice of such, who, for their sincerity both in Life and Doctrine, might continue to water in these young Princely Plants the Seeds of Piety, which had been sown in them by her so great pain and industry; seeing it was to be hoped, that the example of her Faith and Constancy in the Service of God, which she had set before them, would serve as a perpetual inducement to imitate her so noble Vertues.

Now whereas she had again declared, That death was not terrible unto her, because it was the way by which we pass hence to our eternal rest: The Minister told her, That Christians had little cause to fear death, in regard they should not dye at all, according to Christs words in the Gospel of John, He that liveth and believeth in me shall never dye. For death (to speak properly) is no death to them, but a sleep; being often so called in Scriptures; and therefore Christ for their sakes hath overcome and triumphed over it in his own person. So as now we may cry out with S. Paul, O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? Because by death we pass to life. Joh. 8. 51, 52 Joh. 11. 26. John 11 25, 26. Acts 7. 60. 1 Cor. 15. 55

She was often admonished by him to make Confession of her Sins before God, shewing, That bodily Diseases tended to the dissolution of Nature, and that death was the was the wages of sin; declaring moreover, that by this her chastisement she might discern what she had deserved, if God should now enter into judgment with her, not only in regard of the fall of our first Parents, in which guilt she was enwrapped, as well as others, but also by her own personal sins, seeing the best of men or women in the world are in themselves but poor, miserable and wretched offendors: yea, if the Lord should punish us according to our demerits, we could expect nothing at his hands but eternal death and condemnation. Rom 6. 23. Rom 5. 12.

At these words she began, with her hands and eyes lifted up to Heaven, to acknowledge, That her sins which she had committed against the Lord were innumerable, and therefore more than she was able to reckon up: But ye she hoped that God for Christs sake, in whom she put her whole affiance, would be merciful unto her. Psal. 19. 12.

From the later clause of her speech the Minister took occasion to declare at large upon what ground she was to expect the fruit of this mercy of God in Christ; seeing the whole have no need of a Physician, but they that are sick: and therefore Christ saith in that place, He came not to call the righteous, but sinners unto repentance: And that he is ready to fill the hungry with good things, whereas in the mean while he sends the rich empty away. Of all which, said he, you ought so much the rather to be perswaded in your Conscience, by how much the more the holy Spirit witnesseth to your spirit that you are the Child of God, Crying in you, Abba, Father. For what is Faith else, but a firm trust and assurance of the good will of God, manifested towards us in his blessed Son. Mark 2. 17. Luke 1. 53. Rom. 8. 15. What faith is.

Now the Minister, fearing he might some way offend her by his over-long Discourse, held his peace; the rather because the Physicians thought that a long continued speech might be hurtful unto her; but she on the contrary earnestly requested him not to forbear speaking unto her about these matters of life and eternal salvation; adding, that she now felt the want of it, in regard that since her coming to Paris, she had been somewhat remiss in hearing such Exhortations out of the Word of God: And therefore I am now the more glad, saith she, to receive comfort out of it in this my so great extremity.

The Minister then endeavoured to set before her the happiness of Heaven, and what those joys were which the faithful there possess in the presence of God: which when the Scriptures intend to discover unto us, they only tell us that the eye hath not seen; nor hath the ear heard, nor hath it entred into the heart of man; to conceive what those things are, which God hath prepared for them that love him. To which purpose he used this Similitude; As if a King, minding greatly to honour some noble Personage, should bring him to his Court, and there shew him his state and attendance, his Treasures, with all his most precious Jewels: even so, saith he, will the Lord one day reveal to all his elect and faithful people, his magnificence and glory, with all the Treasures of his Kingdom, after he hath gathered them home to himself, decking and adorning them with light, incorruption and immortality. Psal. 16. 11. 1 Cor. 2. 9. Simile.

This happiness therefore being so great, her Highness, he said, ought to be the less careful about the leaving of this transitory life, seeing that for an earthly Kingdom, which she was now to forego, she should inherit an heavenly; and for temporal good things, which vanish and come to nothing in the using, she should for ever enjoy those that were eternal and everlasting: For her faith being now firmly setled upon our Lord Jesus Christ, she might be suffered to obtain eternal Salvation by him. On which words he took occaſion to direct his ſpeech in more particular manner unto her, ſaying:

Madam, do you verily believe that Jeſus Chriſt came into the world to ſave you? And do you expect the full forgiveneſs of all your ſins, by the ſhedding of his Blood for you?

To the which ſhe readily anſwered ſhe did; believing that he was her only Saviour and Mediator, looking for ſalvation from none other, knowing that he hath abundantly ſatisfied for the ſins of the whole World, and therefore was aſſured that God for his ſake, according to his gracious promiſes in him, would have mercy upon her.

Thus you have in part the godly ſpeeches which paſſed from this religious Lady in the beginning of her ſickneſs; all which was within the ſpace of three or four days. Howſoever before that, and ſince alſo, ſhe ceaſed not to continue the ſame her fruitful and comfortable communications, now and then ſending forth moſt affectionate ſighings to God, as a teſtimony of that hope and deſire ſhe had in enjoying his Preſence; often uttering theſe words, O my God, in thy good time deliver me from this body of death, and from the miſeries of this preſent life, that I may no more offend thee, and that I may attain to that felicity which thou in thy Word haſt promiſed me.

Neither did ſhe manifeſt her pious affection by theſe her words only, but therewithal ſhewed a joyful and reſolute countenance, as the vehemency of her ſickneſs could bear; which gave ſufficient proof to all that beheld her, that the fear of death could not drive her from the ſtedfaſtneſs of her Faith.

When ſhe had finiſhed theſe her conſolatory ſpeeches, they uſually went to prayer; intreating the Lord that he would arm her with conſtant patience, and have mercy upon her. Which Prayer it ſhall not be altogether impertinent to inſert in this place, ſerving as a Form of Prayer upon the like occaſion.

The Prayer.

O Lord our God, we confeſs here before thy Divine Majeſty, that we are altogether unworthy of thy infinite mercies, by reaſon of our manifold iniquities; and that we are ſo far off from deſerving to be heard of thee in our requeſts, that we are rather worthy thou ſhouldeſt reject both our perſons and our ſutes; but ſeeing it hath pleaſed thee to make us a gracious promiſe of hearing and granting our requeſts, we humbly beſeech thee freely to forgive all our offences, and to cover them under the obedience and righteouſneſs of thy dear Son, that through him our ſelves and poor ſervices may be well pleaſing before thee. For, Lord, we acknowledge that all our afflictions are meaſured out to us by thine hand, who art a moſt Juſt Judge, in regard we have every way provoked thee to wrath by our infinite ſinnings againſt thee; yea, by our rebellions, which now teſtifie againſt us. For alas, Lord; our life hath no way been anſwerable to that perfect obedience which thou in thy holy Law juſtly requireſt at our hands, which we from day to day do tranſgreſs; and therefore do here caſt down our ſelves at this time before thy glorious preſence, unfeignedly acknowledging our miſery and wretchedneſs from the very bottom of our hearts.

Yet, Lord, mercy is with thee, and becauſe thou art our Father, therefore thou deſireſt not the death of ſinners, but rather that they ſhould convert and live. For this cauſe we now fall down before the Throne of thy Grace, with confidence of obtaining thy wonted mercy, which thou haſt promiſed to ſuch as call upon thee in truth: beſeeching thee, which art the Father of Mercies, to have compaſſion on all ſuch whom thou haſt humbled under thy mighty Hand, by any of thy Rods and Chaſtiſements; but more eſpecially this thy ſervant the Queen, who lieth here before thee ſick of a dangerous Diſeaſe, that as thou haſt righteouſly afflicted her for her ſins (which ſhe alſo doth with us acknowledge) ſo it would pleaſe thee in pardoning them all unto her, for thy beloved Sons ſake, to grant that ſhe may profit by this thy correcting hand for the time to come. Above all, give her a ſweet ſenſe, yea a full aſſurance of thy eternal joyes, that ſo ſhe may with the greater patience take down this bitter potion miniſtred unto her from thy hand, and that the ſole deſire of enjoying thy preſence may cauſe her to forget all worldly greatneſs and magnificence; knowing that they are nothing in reſpect of the glory which is now ſet before her.

Endue her alſo with meekneſs of mind to bear the tedioufneſs of her affliction; for howſoever the ſpirit be willing, yet the fleſh is weak, yea full of reſiſting and unbelief; that ſo receiving all things from thee, as from a Father, ſhe may the more willingly ſubmit her will unto thine.

And becauſe, O good God, thou haſt made her hitherto an happy Inſtrument for the advancement of thy glory, and the defence of thy poor afflicted people, we pray thee, if it may ſtand with thy good pleaſure, reſtore her to health again, that ſo the excellent work which thou haſt by her means begun, may not be left unperfect, but by virtue of this her deliverance, ſhe may with renewed forces undertake the ſame in better ſort than ever heretofore, eſpecially for the well educating and training up the children which thou haſt given her.

But Lord, if thou have a purpoſe now to call her home to thy ſelf, who are we that we ſhould contradict thy holy will? only we pray thee that thou wouldſt confirm her more and more in the knowledge of thy bleſſed Goſpel, and thereby alſo in the certainty of her ſalvation, which thou haſt given her by faith in thy Son Jeſus Chriſt, that thus ſhe may not ceaſe to ſanctifie and call upon thy holy Name unto her laſt breath.

And as touching our ſelves, who are here by thy good Providence gathered together about her, being in bodily health, give us to know the uncertainty and brevity of our life; that ſo, according to our duty, we may behold the ſame in this mirrour which thou haſt ſet before us; as knowing that even the greateſt in the world are ſubject to the ſame calamities, as well as the ſmall; that ſo our chief care may be to imploy the remainder of our time to thy honour and ſervice: all which we crave of thee in the Name of Jeſus Chriſt thy Son, our only Mediator and Advocate. Amen.

Anno 1567.

Thus we have, as near as we could, gathered the ſum of the Prayer. During which ſhe ceaſed not, with hands and eyes ſtedfaſtly lifted up to Heaven, to fetch many deep ſighs, eſpecially when mention was made of that mercy of God in Chriſt which he extendeth towards poor ſinners. So as there was at any there preſent that might not evidently perceive, that her heart and affections were joyned to the Prayer which we pronounced in her preſence.

And while ſhe thus lay, ſhe ſtill continued in her godly reſolution to depart hence, that ſhe might be with Chriſt, taking great delight in the holy and chriſtian Exhortations which were uſually made unto her by many godly and learned men, who came in to viſit her, to whom ſhe alſo manifeſted no ſmall teſtimony of that Faith, and Hope, which ſhe had in God, touching the ſalvation of her Soul, by her holy and chriſtian ſpeeches, which for brevities ſake are here omitted.

Yea, albeit the Lord exerciſed her much with the ſenſe of her inward Diſeaſe, yet could you not at any time diſcern any ſpeech ſavouring of diſcontentment or impatience, to proceed out of her mouh; nay, ſcarcely a groan, which not only thoſe of her own Family, but many others can teſtifie, even the Queen-mother, with others alſo, who now and then came in to ſee her.

But if at any time ſhe felt any refreſhings from the violence of her Diſeaſe (there being no Malady ſo vehement which hath not ſome intermiſſion and breathing time) ſhe manifeſted to all her willingneſs to obtain the recovery of her former health, refuſing to that end no good means preſcribed for her by the learned Phyſicians. Again, when ſhe perceived her ſickneſs to encreaſe upon her, and that ſhe grew worſe and worſe, ſhe was no whit appalled thereat, but ſhewed her ſelf to be armed with an invincible conſtancy, to undergo the utmoſt that death could do againſt her, preparing her ſelf willingly for that laſt Conflict.

Moreover, ſeeing her Ladies and Gentlewomen weeping about her bed, ſhe would forthwith rebuke them, ſaying, I pray you weep not for me, foraſmuch as you ſee God doth now by this ſickneſs call me hence, to enjoy a better life, and to enter in at the deſired haven, towards which

this frail Veſſel of mine hath for a long time been ſteering; only ſhe ſhewed her ſelf ſomewhat grieved, that ſhe lacked opportunity to reward them, and many more of her Family and Train which had done her faithful ſervice, as ſhe could have wiſhed; excuſing her ſelf with theſe words unto them, That it was not for want of good will, but by being overtaken, and ſo prevented, by this her unexpected ſickneſs. But, ſaith ſhe, I will not fail to give order concerning the ſame to my uttermoſt ability.

In the end, feeling her ſtrength to decay more and more, ſhe gave order to have her laſt Will and Teſtament made, wherein ſhe above all wiſhed, that her Children might have but the grace to honour and fear the Lord, exhorting them conſtantly to continue in the profeſſion of the Goſpel, in which they had been trained up from their youth; ordaining eſpecially that her Daughter, the Princeſs, ſhould be educated and inſtructed therein, by the four Ladies which ſhe had appointed and brought with her out of Bearne for that end and purpoſe. And being come to age, her deſire was that ſhe might be joyned in marriage to ſome Prince of the ſame Religion, by the counſel and advice of the Cardinal of Bourbon and Gaſper Count of Colligny Admiral of France, whom ſhe made Executors and Overſeers of her ſaid Teſtament. But here it may not be omitted briefly to relate another Conference which ſhe had with a Miniſter of the Goſpel before her departure.

The eighth of June, which was the day before her death, ſhe cauſed a Miniſter of the Goſpel to be called for, and finding that ſhe was drawing nigher unto her end than before, ſhe willed him to ſpeak ſomewhat largely of ſuch temptations as Satan is wont to aſſail Gods Elect withal in their laſt Conflict.

To which the Miniſter anſwered, That then was the hour indeed wherein that ſworn Enemy of all the Faithful did moſt buſily beſtir himſelf, if he could, to deprive them of the comfort of their Salvation; not ſparing at that time eſpecially to ſet upon them with might and main: but yet even then the Lord is not, nor will be wanting to his, filling their hearts with ſuch joy and comfort of the Holy Ghoſt, as ſhall make them, through the ſame, more than Conquerours.

The firſt Engine then which Satan uſeth againſt the Saints to cauſe them to deſpair, is to preſent before their eyes the innumerable heaps of their ſins and pollutions, wherewith they have any way been defiled in their whole life; and then preſents unto them Gods Juſtice, before which no fleſh can be able to ſubſiſt, unleſs it be pure and ſpotleſs: whence he infers, that miſerable ſinners can expect and look for nothing, but an horrible deſolation and condemnation. But againſt theſe aſſaults, in the firſt place, muſt be oppoſed (as David doth in the One and fiftieth Pſalm) the infinite multitudes of Gods compaſſions, which do infinitely ſurpaſs the multitudes of our ſins. And as touching the Juſtice of God, we confeſs that no Creature that is defiled with ſin, can in any ſort abide to be ſtrictly examined by it, if it ſhall ſtand the ſame to a ſevere account: but we alſo know that God will never enter into judgment with thoſe that believe in his Son, but allows unto them that righteouſneſs & obedience which was accompliſhed in him, which is only ſufficient for us, being imputed unto us, to oppoſe againſt the judgment of God: therefore in it alone they expect to ſtand before his face, and not by their own dignity or worthineſs. Indeed if they were to appear before the Throne of Juſtice, to receive thence what they have deſerved, they had good reaſon to be overwhelmed in utter deſpair, as oft as they think upon, or look on the ſame: but turning their eyes upon him, who being the eternal Son of God, hath clothed himſelf with our Human Nature, to bear in the ſame the puniſhment due to our ſins, and therein acquitted us, then Gods Juſtice doth no way affright us, but rather yields us aſſured comfort, becauſe they make this their full reſolution, that foraſmuch as God is juſt, he cannot require the ſame debt twice. Having therefore received full and perfect ſatisfaction of him, whom he hath ordained to be our Surety, and paid our debts for us, thence we gather aſſurance that he will no more require them of us.

To which purpoſe theſe Sentences are to be well obſerved. It is Chriſt who hath borne our griefs, and carried our ſorrows. That the chaſtiſement of our peace was upon him, and with his ſtripes we are healed. That we all like Sheep have gone aſtray, and have turned every one to his own way, and the Lord hath laid upon him the iniquity of us all. Chriſt is our peace, and the propitiation for our ſins. The Lamb of God which taketh away the ſins of the world. Theſe, with many the like Sentences, the Miniſter propounded by way of anſwer to this vertuous Ladies demand: concluding the ſame thus, that Gods Juſtice ought not to terrifie thoſe that believe in Chriſt, of whoſe righteouſneſs and redemption they are partakers, knowing that Jeſus Chriſt who knew no ſin, was made ſin (that is to ſay, an Oblation for ſin) for us, that we might be made the righteouſneſs of God in him.

Eph 2.14. 1 John 2. 2. John 1.29. 1 Cor. 1.30. 2 Cor. 5 21.

I grant, ſaith he, that theſe things belong not to all indifferently, but only to ſuch, as believing in the Son of God, do wholly reſt themſelves ſatisfied in the merit of his Death and Paſſion; which merit of his, as S. Peter witneſſeth, ſufficeth for their ſalvation. Acts 4.12.

After theſe matters premiſed, he asked her whether ſhe placed her whole confidence on Chriſt crucified, who died for her ſins, and roſe again for her juſtification? Rom. 4 25.

To which the Noble Princeſs anſwered, That ſhe neither expected ſalvation, righteouſneſs, nor life from any elſe, then from her only Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, being aſſured that his only merit abundantly ſufficed for the full ſatisfaction of all her ſins, albeit they were innumerable.

This being your Faith, Madam, (ſaid the Miniſter) you cannot come into condemnation, but are paſſed from death to life. Then taking an occaſion again to reſume her former ſpeech, That ſhe had no cauſe to be afraid of Gods Throne of Juſtice, ſeeing it was turned into a Throne of Grace and Mercy unto her; and that the hour of death ſhould now be exceedingly welcome to her, ſeeing it could be nothing elſe but a ſweet paſſage into a far better life; as alſo the time in which all tears ſhould be wiped away from her eyes: He likewiſe ſhewed, that ſhe would do well continually to be thinking on that excellent Sentence, Bleſſed are the dead which dye in the Lord, because from thenceforth they reſt from their labours, and their works follow them. John 5.24. Heb. 4.16. Phil. 1.23. Rev. 21.4. 14.13.

For then, ſaid he, the time approacheth wherein ſhe ſhould enjoy the viſible preſence and ſociety of her huſband Chriſt, and have fellowſhip with the bleſſed Angels and Celeſtial Spirits, with the holy Patriarchs, Prophets, Apoſtles, and Martyrs of the Son of God, to partake with them of the ſame felicity and glory.

The Miniſter minding yet further to ſound her, whether ſhe were loth to leave this life, uſed theſe words; And now, good Madam, (ſaid he) if it ſhould pleaſe God by this your ſickneſs to put an end to this weariſome pilgrimage of yours, where yet you remain with us, and to call you home to himſelf, whereof he gives us to ſee ſome evident ſigns and tokens, are you willing, I beſeech you, to go unto him? To which this excellent Princeſs, with great magnanimity and courage, without any aſtoniſhment, replyed, Yes, I aſſure you.

Then he once again added; Good Madam, open the eyes of your Faith, and behold Jeſus your great Redeemer ſitting at the right hand of his Father, reaching out his hand to receive you unto him. Are you, are you willing to go unto him? Yes, I aſſure you, ſaith ſhe, moſt willing, and much more deſiring than to linger here below in this world, where I ſee nothing but vanity.

The Miniſter, not willing to continue longer in this kind of diſcourſe, asked if ſhe were pleaſed that they ſhould go to prayer, declaring that godly perſonages there preſent would willingly joyn their deſires with hers. To which ſhe conſenting, the ſaid Miniſter prayed by her a good ſpace, whilſt this pious Lady manifeſted her ardent affection to call upon God.

When prayer was ended, the Miniſter diſcerning in her the undoubted teſtimonies of her repentance, and of the ſorrow ſhe conceived for the offences which ſhe had committed againſt God, together with the aſſured confidence which ſhe had in his mercies, as a Miniſter of the Goſpel, and Ambaſſador of the Son of God, by the Authority diſpenſed to him, having committed to him the Word of Reconciliation, he aſſured her in his Name, that all her ſins were forgiven her of God, and that they ſhould never come into account before his Judgment-ſeat: yea, that ſhe ſhould no more doubt thereof, than if the Son of God from Heaven ſhould ſay unto her, Daughter, thy ſins are forgiven thee. And to the end that troubled Conſciences might the better be quieted, Chriſt hath uſed theſe words, ſpeaking to his Miniſters, ſaying, Whoſe ſoever ſins ye remit, they are remitted; and whoſe ſins ye unlooſe, they are unlooſed. The reaſon is, becauſe the word which they pronounce is not the word of a mortal man, but of the immortal God, being of no leſs weight, than if himſelf uttered the ſame.

Mat 16.14.

Then he asked of her Majeſty, if ſhe accepted of ſo gracious a Meſſage which aſſured her of the free pardon of all her ſins. Yea, I do, ſaith ſhe, and make no doubt thereof.

Not long after theſe Exhortations, the Admiral coming in, and with him another Miniſter, ſhe alſo gave ear to him for a good ſpace together; whoſe diſcourſe tended to prepare her for death, as he had done who had ſpoken to her immediately before; who having finiſhed his ſpeech, prayed alſo with her, and for her, which ſhe heard with great attention and affection. Then ſhe requeſted that theſe two Miniſters might ſtay with her all night in her Chamber, and that they would in no wiſe leave her.

The greater part of this night was ſpent in holy Admonitions which theſe two Miniſters gave to this gracious Lady and Princeſs one after another. Beſides theſe Admonitions, ſhe commanding that ſome Chapters of the holy Scripture, which were pertinent for her condition, ſhould be read unto her; one of the Miniſters read in her hearing certain Chapters out of the Goſpel of S. John, namely, from the fourteenth to the ſeventeenth. After he had read to her theſe Chapters, he went to Prayer, which being ended, the Queen deſired to take ſome reſt; but it was not long ere ſhe commanded them to read again: whereupon the other Miniſter having made choice of certain Pſalms of David, full of ardent and affectionate prayers, ſuiting to this Princeſſes preſent Affliction, he read them unto her, and for a Concluſion read the One and thirtieth Pſalm, where the Prophet, among other things, doth there commend his Spirit into the hands of God; becauſe, ſaith he, thou haſt redeemed me, O Lord God of truth.

Pſal. 31.5.

The Queen willed them to pray with her again: and thus, as I have ſaid, was the moſt part of the night ſpent in ſuch vertuous Exerciſes, namely, in Exhortation, in Reading the holy Scripture, and in Prayer: during all which time the Miniſters never diſcerned in any of her ſpeeches or behaviour the leaſt impatiency. Nay, whereas ſome days before ſhe fell ſick, ſhe ſhewed how affectionately ſhe was bent to provide things moſt magnificent for the day of her Sons Marriage, according as the ſtate of ſo great an Alliance required; it was admirable to obſerve, that after this ſickneſs had ſeized upon her, God wrought in her ſuch a forgetfulneſs and neglect of all ſuch matters, that ſhe never made ſhew of having ſo much as a thought thereof.

This night being thus paſſed and ſpent by this noble Queen, ſhe perſevering in the expreſſions of like pious actions and ardency of Faith, the next day in the morning, between eight and nine of the clock, ſhe departed this life, to take poſſeſſion of a far better life, ſweetly yielding up her Spirit into the hands of God, the ninth of June 1572. the ſixth day after ſhe fell ſick, in the 44. year of her age.

She had her perfect ſpeech always even to the hour of her death: ſhewing not only the ſtayedneſs and ſoundneſs of her judgment (which ever in times paſt ſhe had) in her care about the ſalvation of her Soul, but in her other worldly affairs alſo.

Now to avoid all jealouſies and ſuſpitions of her being wronged by Poyſon, or otherwiſe, in this matter of her ſo ſudden ſickneſs, her Body was opened by ſundry expert and learned Doctors of Phyſick and Chyrurgery, with all exquiſite diligence, who found her heart and liver very ſound and untouched, her lungs only excepted, which long before on the right ſide had been very ill affected, by reaſon of an extraordinary hardneſs which they had contracted, and withal a great Impoſthume, which, ſo far as man could judge, they concluded was the cauſe of her death. But they had no command given them to open the Brain, and therefore finding ſomewhat out of frame in her Body, they delivered their Opinions only concerning the ſame.

Thus you have with as much brevity as I could, and as the merit of the thing required, the true report of the manner of this vertuous Princeſſes ſickneſs and death, thus far related unto you; only my requeſt is (ſaith my Author) that if any have a more perfect and particular knowledge of the excellent parts wherewith the Lord had adorned and beautified her, they would not ſuffer the ſame to be buried in ſilence, but to cauſe it to ſee the light; that on the one ſide it may ſerve as an example to Poſterity; and on the other ſide, that we may learn to bleſs God for her Piety and Conſtancy.

Anno 1572.

An Introduction; firſt into that which leads to the death of the Admiral of France; Then, to the Maſſacre at Paris, and ſo in ſome other Cities.

And firſt, what moved the Admiral to come to Paris.

AFter the death of the Queen, certain Princes were ſolicited by the King to give their attendance at Paris for the ſolemnizing the Marriage of the Prince of Navarre (now made King by the death of his Mother) according to the Ceremonies which were thereto appertaining. Among the reſt, Letters were directed to the Admiral by the King himſelf, to come to this Marriage; which were delivered unto him by Cavagues: wherein the King aſſured him he would not tarry long after him; willing him not to be afraid of the fury of the Pariſians, nor of their threats which they had formerly uttered againſt him. For he was not ignorant of the deadly hatred they bare him, and therefore wrote unto the Maior of the City, to look unto it at his peril, that the Admiral had no wrong offered him by the Citizens, either at his entrance or continuance in the City. For of all the Cities in that Kingdom, it is the moſt ſuperſtitious, and eaſily moved to Sedition; and therefore the Admiral, being of a contrary Religion, could expect but ill welcome at his coming thither; eſpecially becauſe at his ſolicitation the Croſs of Gaſtines was removed out of the Street of S. Dennis.

The Queen-mother and the Duke of Anjou wrote unto the Maior alſo, and likewiſe to the reſt of the Magiſtrates, to the ſame effect; but eſpecially to their Servants, ſome whereof had a little light given them touching that device. To be ſhort, they endeavoured to take all rubs out of his way, that he might with the leſs miſtruſt fall into the ſame.

The Admiral, not caſting any perils, reſolved to take his journey to Paris. Albeit he lacked not ſundry adverti-ſements from his own Followers, and others his well-willers in the Kingdom; who honoured him much, deſiring him, that howſoever he had no ſiniſter opinion of the King, of his Mother, or any of theirs, yet at the leaſt he was to take into his conſideration the place whither he went, and amongſt what Enemies he was now to venture himſelf. But he always leaning upon the teſtimony of a good Conſcience, and being confident in Gods Providence, not moved by theſe Advertiſements, took his Journey to Paris with very few Attendants. Being come thither, he was honourably received of the King, and of his Brethren, and of the Queen-mother, with others alſo.

* He gave his teſtimony in his anſwer to theſe Adviſements, that ſince France came to be a Kingdom, it never enjoyed a better King than Charles the ninth.

The Marriage of the King of Navarre with the Kings Siſter being ſolemnized on the ſeventeenth and eighteenth of Auguſt, 1572. and all the Triumphs and Feaſtings accompanying the ſame being finiſhed, the Admiral determining to take his leave at Court, and ſo to return homewards, the Deputies of the Reformed Churches brought him their Requeſts on a ſudden, to preſent the ſame to the King, in regard of many wrongs the ſaid Churches had ſuſtained; and therefore they inſtantly beſought him, that he would not leave the Court till ſome order might be taken for redreſs thereof.

This, with other Impediments, were the occaſions of detaining him ſtill there.

Mauravell coming to Paris whilſt theſe Feaſts laſted, having preſented his Service firſt to the King and his Mother, the Duke of Anjou, with thoſe of the Guiſe; after ſome ſpeech had with the King and Queen-mother, one called Chaill had a command to direct him to the houſe whence

This Mauravell was he that ſhot the Admiral.

Anno 1572.

whence the blow ſhould be given: who left him with a Woman in the ſaid Houſe, which Woman was forbidden not only to ask his Name, but alſo ſo much as to enquire for what cauſe he was lodged there.

On Friday, the two and twentieth of Auguſt, in the morning he trimmed up his Harquebuſe, watching ſecretly the Admirals coming.

The Admiral at his going forth out of the Louure meeting the King coming out of a Chappel which is before the ſame, paſſing thence to play at Tenniſe, he ſcarcely had gone an hundred paces from the place, but as he returned to his lodging on foot to dine there, attended on by ſome twelve or fifteen Gentlemen, reading a petition; out of the Window of a lodging (where Villemur Tutor to the Duke of Guiſe uſually lay) he was ſhot with an Harquebuſe charged with three braſs bullets, one of which took off the fore finger on his right hand, and he was hurt with another in his left arm. Feeling himſelf thus wounded, he willed ſome of his Followers to enter that Houſe, and to enquire who it was that had done that or who ſet him on work to do it: and then to advertiſe the King thereof, giving him to underſtand how well his Commandment was obſerved.

Mauravel hurts the Admiral.

Now whilſt they were buſie to force open the door, the Murtherer fled out by a back way, eſcaping thence out of the gate of Saint Anthony; where one attended him, holding a Spaniſh gennet brought out of the Duke of Guiſes Stable; whereon he galloped away, yet not without ſome difficulty: for flying thus in ſome fear, he fell off his Horſe twice or thrice.

A Gentleman ſeeing the Admiral hurt came to ſupport his left arm, binding up the hurt thereon with his handkerchief. And thus was he conducted to his lodging, which was diſtant from thence about ſome twenty paces. In his paſſing a Gentleman ſaid it was to be feared the bullets were poiſoned: to which the Admiral replyed, All muſt be as it pleaſeth God.

The King hearing of the Admirals hurt left his game, where he was playing till then with the Duke of Guiſe, and throwing away his Racket as it ſeemed in an anger, with a ſad and heavy countenance withdrew himſelf into his Chamber; the Duke of Guiſe following him within a little while after.

The King of Navarre and the Prince Conde complain to the King.

The King of Navarre, the Prince of Conde, with many other of the Religion, having notice of the Admirals hurt, complained to the King of this untimely accident; entreating they might have leave to depart out of the City, ſeeing they could expect little ſafety there. The King made his moan to them of the miſchance that hapned, ſwearing and proteſting that he would execute ſuch impartial juſtice upon the offendor, and on all the complotters, as ſhould give the Admiral and all his friends content; only he willed them to ſtay, promiſing them ere long to provide for their ſecurity.

The Chirurgions and Phyſitians were preſently ſent for, amongſt whom was Ambroſe Pare the Kings Chirurgian, a Man very expert. He began firſt with the Admirals finger, which put him to much pain, in regard the ſciſſers were not ſharp enough to cut it off at once; beſides he was fain to ſtop and open the wound thrice. Then he came to the left arm, making inciſions in two places into which the bullet had pierced. The Admiral endured all this with an undaunted countenance, and wonderful patience, whilſt thoſe which ſtood by and ſaw him ſo mangled could not refrain from tears. Captain Monins held him with both his arms about the middle, and Cornaton held his hands. He ſeeing them aſtoniſhed, my friends, ſaid he, why weep you? I think my ſelf happy to be thus handled in the cauſe of God. And anon caſting his eyes upon a Miniſter called Merlin, he ſaid, Here ye ſee, my friends, Gods bleſſings. I am hurt indeed; but I know it is come to paſs by the will of my Heavenly Father, humbly thanking his Majeſty in that he is pleaſed to honor me ſo far, as to ſuffer any thing for his holy Name. Let us pray unto him, that he would grant unto me the gift of perſeverance.

The Admirals ſpeech while he was in the Surgeons hands.

This Merlin was miraculouſly delivered in the maſſacre of Paris.

Then looking upon the ſaid Miniſter who wept over him. Oh Maſter Merlin, ſaith he, what will not you comfort me? Yes Sir, ſaith he; for wherein may you take greater comfort, than in calling to mind how greatly God hath always honored you in eſteeming you worthy to ſuffer rebuke for his Names ſake, and true Religion? The Admiral replied; alas, if God ſhould deal with me according to my deſerts, he might have put me to worſe torments then theſe. But bleſſed be his holy Name, in that he is pleaſed to take pity on me his poor and unworthy Servant. Be of good chear, Sir, then ſaid another unto him; for ſeeing God hath ſpared your more Noble part whole, you have cauſe therein to magnifie his goodneſs. In theſe wounds you have received from God a teſtimony of his love; rather then of his diſpleaſure, ſeeing he hath preſerved your head and underſtanding ſafe.

Then ſaid, Merlin, Sir, you do well in turning your thoughts away from him who hath committed this outrage upon you, in looking only unto God; for no doubt it is his hand that hath ſmitten you: therefore for the preſent, ceaſe to think on the malefactor. I aſſure you, ſaid the Admiral, I do freely forgive him from the bottom of my heart, and thoſe alſo that are his abettors; being fully perſwaded, that none of them all could have done me the leaſt hurt, no, though with violent hands they had put me to death. For what is death it ſelf to Gods Children but an aſſured paſſage to an eternal reſt and life?

Now as the ſaid Miniſter declared how the evils which happen to the Children of God in this preſent life, do often incite and quicken them up to pour out their Prayers into the boſom of the Almighty, the Admiral preſently with a loud voice and ardent affection prayed thus.

The Admirals Godly and devout Prayer.

The Admirals Godly and devout Prayer.

LOrd God and Heavenly Father, have pity upon me for thy goodneſs and mercies ſake; remember not Lord the ſins of my life paſt, nor the offences which I have committed againſt thee; for if thou narrowly mark our ſins, the looſeneſs of our behaviour and diſloyalties, in tranſgreſſing thy holy commandments; Lord, who ſhall ſtand? who is able to bear the weight of thy diſpleaſure? I renounce all Idol Gods; I acknowledge thee to be the only true God, and worſhip thee alone O Eternal Father, in thine Eternal ſon Jeſus Chriſt. I beſeech thee for his ſake, that thou wouldſt give unto me thy holy Spirit, and therewithal the gift of patience. I put my truſt in thy free mercy; for therein conſiſts the ſtay and prop of all my hope, whether I dye now at this preſent, or live for the time to come. Behold Lord, here I am, do with me as it pleaſeth thee; having this confidence in thee, that if I now depart hence, thou wilt receive me into the bleſſed reſt of thy Kingdom. If it pleaſe thee to lengthen out my days here on earth. O heavenly Father give me Grace that I may ſpend the reſidue thereof in ſetting forth the Glory of thy holy Name, and in maintaining, to the utmoſt of my power, thy pure worſhip and Service. Amen.

The Miniſters pray with him.

Having ended this Prayer, Merlin asked him, if it pleaſed him that the Miniſter of Chriſt ſhould now pray with him and for him. To whom he ſaid, yes, with all my heart; I pray you begin. Whilſt Merlin pronounced the Prayer, applying the ſame to the preſent occaſion, the Admiral with his eyes looking up to Heaven expreſſed the ardency of his affection, in conſenting thereunto. Prayer being ended, Merlin began to propound unto the Admiral the examples of the Martyrs, ſhewing that from Abel to Abraham, and conſequently hitherto, whoſoever carried themſelves in any degree of faithfulneſs in the Houſe of God, felt at one time or other the ſmart of afflictions in divers kinds. The Admiral anſwered, that when he called to mind the ſufferings of the Patriarchs and Martyrs, it much comforted him, and helped him ſomwhat to allay the tartneſs of his afflicted eſtate.

The King & Queen Mother came to viſit the Admiral.

The King of Navarre and the Prince of Conde having bitterly bewayled this outrage committed upon the Admiral (as you heard before) about two of the Clock in the afternoon, the King, accompanied with the Queen Mother, his Brother, and other of the Lords, went to viſit the Admiral.

The King with tears ſeemed to be exceeding ſorry for that which was come to paſs, promiſing him, with one Blaſphemous Oath upon another, to revenge the fact, no leſs than if it had been committed upon his own perſon: praying him to come and take up his lodging with him, in the Louvre, for his greater ſecurity and ſafety. Whereupon, the Admiral, after ſome diſcourſe made to the King in ſecret, gave him moſt humble thanks for ſo great a favour, as to viſit him in his own perſon.

Upon the Motion made by the King, Mazilles his chief Phyſitian was called, demanding of him, whether the Admiral might ſafely be removed thence into the Louvre, or no? His Anſwer to the King was, that it could not be done without danger. Some of the Admirals friends thought it fitting to requeſt a guard of Souldiers to be aſſigned by the King unto him for his better ſecurity. The King anſwered, he liked well of that device, being fully determined to provide for the Admirals ſafety as his own, and would preſerve him no leſs then the apple of his Eye. After the King called for the bullet of braſs wherewith the Admiral was hurt, that he might ſee it, asking whether he was not put to great pain when his finger was cut off, as likewiſe touching the dreſſing of his arm? Now as Cornaton ſhewed the bullet, having his ſleeve all bloody (becauſe he was appointed to hold the Admirals arm, while it was in dreſſing) the King asked if that were of the Admirals Blood? and whither ſo much Blood iſſued out of his wounds? adding (after Carnatons Anſwer) he never ſaw Man in his life ſhew greater conſtancy and magnanimity of Spirit then the Admiral did.

Then was the Queen Mother deſirous to ſee the bullet, ſaying, I am glad the bullet is taken out; for I remember when the Duke of Guiſe was killed before Orleance, the Phyſitian told me, that if the bullet was gotten out, there was no danger of death, though it were poyſoned.

Then Cornaton anſwered, we have foreſeen that, Madam; for being careful to prevent that danger, the Admiral had a medicine given him to expel the poiſon, if peradventure any ſuch thing ſhould be.

Some good hopes of the Admirals recovery.

The Saturday before the Admiral was ſlain he began to be ſomwhat cheered, ſo as the Chirurgions and Phyſitians gave out, that they would warrant the Admirals Life: becauſe his arm, having loſt but little of its ſtrength, would ſoon be healed. This news was brought to the King, who ſeemed to entertain the ſame joyfully. The new married Wife came alſo to viſit the Admiral. But all this was but a lightning before death. For that night there was heard a great clattering of Armour in the City, and many Torches lighted every where, born by many of the people. Some Gentlemen, whoſe lodgings were nigh to the Admirals, roſe, and went out, asking ſome of their acquaintance the reaſon why there were ſo many up in Arms at that hour of the night: They anſwered; That the King much deſired to ſee a Caſtle aſſayled and defended, deviſed only in ſport to give him content. They paſſing yet further came to the Louvre, where they likewiſe ſaw many Torches lighted, and Troops of armed Men.

The Guard there could no longer contain themſelves, but began to pick a quarrel with them; and as one of the ſaid Gentlemen was about to ſpeak, a Gaſcoine Soldier ſtruck at him with a Partizan, and then they fell upon the reſt. The noiſe hereof ſpreading, the Queen Mother ſaid, ſeeing it is not poſſible to retain the fury of the Soldiers any longer from breaking out, * Let the Bell of the Church of S. German be touled, ſaid ſhe.

* That was the watch-word, as you would ſay, when the Maſſacre was to begin. The mark or ſign by which the Murtherers were to be diſtinguiſhed from the reſt, was a white hand-kerchief knit about the left arm, and a white Croſs in their Hats. Proverb.

The Admiral coming to the knowledge of this uprore (though he had but few of his followers about him, was not much moved thereat; truſting, as he often uſed to ſay) upon the Kings favor, whereof he had large experience. Alſo he knew that when the Pariſians ſhould underſtand how much the King diſliked their folly, though they had an intention of doing him ſome miſchief, yet would they be quieted as ſoon as they ſaw Coſſeins and his Guard.

This Coſſeins was appointed by the Duke of Anjou to defend the Admirals Lodging, wherein the old Proverb was verified, That the Wolf was ſet to keep the ſheep.

About break of day, Auguſt the four and twentieth, 1572. being ſaint Bartholomews day, they began to knock at the door where the Admiral lay. La Bonne, who lay not far from him, having the keyes, perceiving that there were ſome who came on a meſſage from the King to the Admiral, came down quickly and opened the door; preſently Coſſeins fell upon him and ſtabbed him with his dagger, ſo that he dyed. Then with his Harquebuſiers ruſhing into the Houſe, killing ſuch as they met, others fled. Cornaton awaking with the noiſe that he heard at the door (for he lay in the next Chamber by) ran thither, cauſing the Switzers and other Officers to fortifie it. Coſſeins hearing that cryed to him to open it in the Kings Name, and he ſo handled the matter, that with the help he had, he forced the door open, and after gained the ſtairs. The Admiral and thoſe that were with him, taking notice how they ſhot off Piſtols and Guns, finding themſelves incloſed in their enemies hands, fell to prayer, begging pardon of God for their Sins.

Anno 1572.

The Admiral riſing out of his Bed, and putting on his night gown, commanded Merlin the Miniſter to make the prayer. He alſo, calling earneſtly upon Jeſus Chriſt his God and Saviour, commended his Spirit into his hands. He that teſtified theſe things and made report thereof, coming into the Chamber, and being asked by the Admiral what that Tumult meant; Sir, ſaith he, God is now ſummoning us to look to our end. The Admiral ſeeing what would be the iſſue, anſwered, I have long ſince expected death: ſave your ſelves if it be poſſible, for you cannot ſecure me; I commend my Soul into the hands of the merciful God. Thoſe who were preſent and eſcaped have affirmed, that the Admiral was no more affrighted at death, which he ſaw preſent before his eyes, than if there had been no likelihood thereof at all.

The Admirals Chriſtian and conſtant carriage of himſelf in theſe broils.

Forthwith every one in the Chamber getting up to the top of the Houſe, and having found a window near the Roof, ſaved themſelves there; but the greater part, who were beneath in the next room to the Admiral were ſlain, others miraculouſly eſcaped. In the mean while Coſſeins having made his way cauſed certain Switzers of the D. of Anjous guard to enter into the Houſe.

Beſine, Coſſeins, and Sarlabour, with their Targets in one hand, and their naked Swords in the other, broke open the Admirals Chamber door, and Beſine (which was afterwards ſlain himſelf by one Bertoville upon the way, after he had eſcaped out of Priſon) coming towards the Admiral, holding the point of his Sword to his Breaſt, ſaid thus, Art not thou the Admiral? I am the Man, ſaid he, with an undaunted courage, as the Murtherers afterwards confeſſed. Then beholding the naked Sword, Young Man, ſaid the Admiral, thou oughteſt ſomwhat to reſpect my years, and my infirmity of Body, but it is not thou that canſt ſhorten my days. Beſine deſperately thruſt the Admiral into the Body with his Sword, and then ſmote him therewith on the head the reſt had every one a blow at him; ſo as he preſently fell down wounded to death.

The Admiral wounded to death.

Whilſt this miſchief was in acting, the Duke of Guiſe being below in the baſe Court, with other Romiſh Catholick Lords, cryed to the Murtherer above, Beſine haſt thou done? It is done, ſaith he. Then the Duke replyed, Monſieur, our Knight (meaning King Henries Baſtard) will not believe it unleſs he ſee it with his eyes; throw him down out of the Window.

Then Beſine and Sarlabour, lifting up the Body of the Admiral, caſt him down unto them, where he lay naked on the ground, expoſed to all ſort of ſcorn and mocks of the Multitude, ſome trampling on him with their feet. Now becauſe the blow which Beſine had given the Admiral on his head, had ſo covered his face with Blood iſſuing thence, that his viſage could not be diſcerned, the Duke of Guiſe ſtooping down took his handkerchief, and wiping his face therewith ſaid, It is he, I know him well enough; and giving this poor dead Body a ſpurn on the Head with his foot (whom all the Murtherers in France feared whilſt he lived) he paſſed thence, encouraging his Soldiers ſaying, We have made a good beginning; now let us go on to the reſt, for the King hath ſo commanded, the King hath ſo commanded, repeating it over twice.

An Italian of the Duke of Nevers Guard cut off the Admirals Head, and brought it to the King and Queen Mother; which being embalmed was ſent to Rome to the Pope, and to the Cardinal of Lorrain, being there at that time. The common people on the Monday following cut off his Hands and privy Members, and then in this woful plight being dragged up and down three days in the Channels throughout the Streets, he was at the laſt carried out of the City to a Gibbet in Mount Faucon, where they hanged him by the feet; from whence ſome that were well diſpoſed, going

The Admirals Head ſent to Rome.

Anno 1572. going together in the night to this gibbet, took down the Body of the Admiral; the which they interred ſo ſecretly, that do the Papiſts what they could, they could never find it out, but it lay buried ſtill, ſo as they were fain to make a Body of ſtraw, and hung that up in ſtead of the Body it ſelf, rather than none at all.

Here, as in fitteſt place is briefly related the Sentence which the Court of Parliament in Paris denounced againſt Gaſper Coligni Admiral of France, after he was maſſacred as you have formerly heard, viz.

1. FIrſt, That for his conſpiracy practiſed againſt the King and State in the year 1572. the ſaid Court hath condemned him of high Treaſon.

2. That his memory ſhall be utterly raſed out.

3. If his Body or any figure thereof ſhall be taken, that the ſame ſhall be firſt drawn upon a hurdle to the place called Le Grene, and there hanged upon a Gibbet by the Executioner.

4. After which, a Gibbet ſhall be ſet up at Mountfaucon, and he there to be hanged up in the moſt eminent place thereof.

5. His Arms and Armor to be drawn at an horſe tail through the Streets of the ſaid City of Paris, and other Cities where they ſhould be found, and there by the Miniſter of Juſtice to be broken and battered in pieces, in ſign of his perpetual ignominy.

6. All his goods and poſſeſſions to be forfeited to the Kings uſe.

7. All his Children to be pronounced ignoble: as alſo held unworthy and uncapable of any honor or dignities whatſoever.

8. His Houſe and Caſtle of Chaſtillon upon the Loin, the Baſe Court and all appurtenances thereunto appertaining to be defaced and demoliſhed to the ground.

9. Then in the ſaid place this Sentence ſhall be ſet up engraven in Braſs.

10. Laſtly, that on the four and twentieth of Auguſt, 1572, general Proceſſions be made through the City of Paris, by way of thankſgiving to God for this puniſhment inflicted upon the Conſpirator.

Pronounced and Executed in Paris, the ſeven and twentieth, and nine and twentieth of October, Anno 1572.

Signed,

Malon.

Great joy at Rome for thoſe ſorrowful events.

At Rome ſolemn Maſſes were ſung, and thanks rendred to God for the good ſucceſs which the Roman Catholicks had obtained in maſſacring the Huguenots At night, in token of joy and gladneſs, were made many great bonfires in ſundry places: And, as the report went, the Cardinal of Lorraign gave a thouſand Crowns to him that brought this deſired news unto him. Touching whoſe death I will here inſert that which I find written of it.

A note touching the manner of the Cardinal of Lorrains death.

The Cardinal of Lorrain, a principal pillar in the Houſe of Guiſe, a crafty and cruel perſecutor of the Reformed Churches, ſoon after the Reign of Henry the third, Brother of Charles the ninth, in the year 1574, died at Avignon frantique, at the hour of whoſe death there hapned ſuch a horrible Tempeſt in the Air, that all ſtood amaſed at it. The people obſerving how it fell out in one of the chief Cities where Popery bare the ſway, thought it the more remarkable; not ſticking to ſay, that this wiſe worldling, who had enriched himſelf beyond meaſure by execrable practiſes, received now in the prime of his youth and in the top of his hopes, the juſt reward of all his wicked proceedings; it being not poſſible, that a Soul ſo repleniſhed with iniquity could depart quietly.

But thoſe of the Religion added, That in this his ſo ſudden departure ſhined the wonderful providence of God, in that one of the Popes great ſupporters, coming to Avignon with a purpoſe to arm the King of France and Polonia againſt the Chriſtian Aſſemblies (out of a vain confidence thinking, that at his only word and threat the Prince would be perſwaded to overthrow all) it ſhould fall out ſo contrary to his expectation, that the Maſter-builder and upholder of violent and bloody Counſels muſt now in the midſt of his Triumphs come to ſo fearful and miſerable an end: That he, who bent all his wits to croſs the Counſel and Wiſdom of God, ſhould at an inſtant in this City be ſmitten with frenſie. To give warning to all, that there is no Wiſdom or Counſel againſt the Lord; who blaſteth the ripeſt wits when they dare to oppoſe him therewith. But now to return again to the matter where we left.

The ſame day that the Admiral was hurt, the King adviſed the King of Navarre, his Brother in Law, to lodg in his Chamber, with ten or twelve of his truſtieſt Servants, to protect him from the deſigns of the Duke of Guiſe, whom he called an unhappy Boy.

The Admiral as it ſeemeth ſomwhat before his death made his will, in which he gave the King Counſel, that he ſhould not give his Brethren over great portions. The Queen Mother hearing this, and reading the ſame to the Duke of Alencon the Kings Brother; Now you ſee, ſaith ſhe, the heart of your friend the Admiral, whom you ſo much loved and reſpected.

The Duke anſwered, I know not how much he loved me, but I well perceive by this how much he loved the King.

The Engliſh Embaſſador made almoſt the like anſwer when the ſaid Queen told him, How the Admiral had adviſed the King not to truſt the Engliſh too far. The Admiral a loving and loyal Servant to his Prince and Country

Indeed Madam, ſaith he, hereby it appeared that though he bare but little good will to the Engliſh, yet he manifeſted himſelf a loyal Servant to the Crown of France.

The Sieur de Brion, Governor of the little Marqueſs Conde, Son to the late Prince of Conde, hearing theſe ſtirs, taking his little Maſter even in his ſhirt, thinking to convey him ſomewhere out of the way, met theſe Murtherers, who plucking from him the ſaid young Prince, Maſſacred the old Man in his preſence, whilſt the Prince with tears intreated them to ſpare his Governour. But they dyed his white hairs in his own Blood, and then barbarouſly dragged him through the mire. Brion Governour to the Prince of Conde. Son maſſacred.

This Sunday morning all that were Popiſhly affected took liberty to kill and ſpoyl; it being credibly reported, That the number of the ſlain that day and two other days following, in the City of Paris, and in the Suburbs, did amount to above ten thouſand, counting Lords, Gentlemen, Preſidents, Counſellors, Advocates, Lawyers, Scholars, Phyſitians, Merchants, Tradeſmen, Women, Maids, and Children. The Streets were covered with dead Bodies, the River was dyed with Blood, the Gates and entrance into the Kings Palace painted with the ſame colour: but the blood-thirſty were not yet ſatisfied. Ten thouſand maſſacred within three days in the City of Paris, &c

But going from Houſe to Houſe with their Aſſociates where they thought to find any Huguenots, they brake open the doors, then cruelly murthered whomſoever they met, ſparing neither Sex nor Age. Carts were laden with dead Bodies of young Maidens, Women, Men & Children, which were diſcharged into the River, covered in a maner all over with the ſlain, and dyed red with their Blood, which alſo ſtreamed down the ſtreets from ſundry parts thereof, whereat the Courtezans laughed their fill, ſaying, That the Wars were now ended, and that hereafter they ſhould live in peace, &c. But it would take up too much time to recite all the lamentable paſſages of this ſo ſad and rueful a tragedy. The pretence was this: Report was raiſed there that a Treaſon of the Huguenots was diſcovered, who had conſpired to kill the King, his Mother, and his Brethren, having already killed fifteen of the guard.

This with ſome others which follow, belonging to this Hiſtory, becauſe they could not be omitted, are here under inſerted.

TO begin then with Monſieur Pierre de la Place Preſident of the Court of Requeſts, whoſe ſtory we will relate ſome what at large, becauſe his ſingular piety requires the ſame. On Sunday morning about ſix of the Clock, one called Captain Michael, Harquebuſier of the King, came into his lodging, into which he had the more eaſie acceſs for divers private reſpects.

This

Anno 1569.

This Captain being armed, having a Harquebuſe on his ſhoulder, a Piſtol at his Girdle, and his Hankerchief tyed about his left Arm, preſenting himſelf before the ſaid De la Place, the firſt words he ſpake were, that the Duke of Guiſe had ſlain the Admiral by the Kings appointment, with many Huguenots beſides: and becauſe the reſt of them of what quality ſoever were deſtinated to death, he was come to his lodging to exempt him from the common deſtruction: only he deſired to have a ſight of that Gold and Silver which was in the Houſe. The Lord De la Place ſomwhat amaſed at the audacious malapartneſs of the Man, who, in the midſt of ten or twelve perſons which were there preſent in the room, durſt preſume to utter ſuch Language, askt him if he knew where he was, or whether he thought there was a King or no?

This was a token by which the Murtherers were diſtinguiſhed from others.

To this the Captain Blaſpheming anſwered, that he willed him to go with him to know the Kings pleaſure. The ſaid Lord De la Place hearing this, fearing alſo ſome danger to be towards, by Sedition in the City, ſlipped forth at a back door behind his lodging, purpoſing to get into a Neighbours Houſe. In the mean while moſt of his Servants vaniſhed out of ſight, and this Captain having ſtored himſelf with a thouſand Crowns, was intreated by the Lady Marets, Daughter to the ſaid Lord, to convey her Father with the Lord Marets her Husband into the Houſe of ſome Roman Catholick, which he conſented to do, and alſo performed it.

After this, De la Place, being refuſed at three ſeveral Houſes was conſtrained to retire back again into his own, where he found his Wife very penſive and grieved beyond meaſure, fearing leſt this Captain in the end would caſt her Son in Law and Daughter into the River, as alſo for the eminent danger wherein her dear husband and all his family were.

But the ſaid Lord De la Place, being ſtrengthned by the Spirit of God with incredible conſtancy in the inner Man, ſharply rebuked her; and afterwards mildly demonſtrated unto her, that we muſt receive theſe and the like afflictions from the hand of God; and ſo having diſcourſed a while upon the promiſes of God comforted her.

Then he commanded ſuch Servants and Maids as remained in the Houſe to be called together; who being come into his Chamber, according to his cuſtome on the Lords days, he made a form of exhortation to his Family: then went to prayer, and began to read a Chapter out of the Book of Job, with the expoſition or Sermon of Maſter John Calvin upon it. So having ſpoken ſomwhat of Gods mercy and juſtice, which as a good and wiſe Father uſeth to exerciſe his elect with ſundry Chaſtiſements, leſt they ſhould be intangled here below with the things of this World, he ſhewed how needful afflictions were for Chriſtians, and that it was beyond the power of Satan or Men to hurt or wrong them, unleſs the Lord of his good pleaſure gave them leave. What need have we then, ſaid he, to dread their Authority, which at the moſt can but prevail over our Bodies? Then he went to prayer again, preparing himſelf and his whole Family rather to endure all ſorts of Torments, yea death itſelf, than to ſpeak or do ought that might tend to the diſhonour of God.

Having finiſhed his Prayer, word was brought him, that Seneca the Provoſt Marſhal with many Archers were at the door of his Lodging, commanding the ſame to be opened in the Kings Name, ſaying that he came to ſecure the perſon of the Lord De la Place, and to preſerve his Houſe from being pillaged by the common ſort. The Lord De la Place having intelligence of this ſpeech commanded the door to be opened to him, who entring in declared the great ſlaughter that was made upon the Huguenots every where in the City by the Kings command; adding this withal in Latin, that he would not ſuffer one to live, Qui mingat ad Parietem. Yet have I expreſs charge from his Majeſty, ſaith he, to ſee that you ſhall ſuſtain no wrong, but only conduct you to the Louvre, becauſe the King is deſirous to be informed touching many things about the affairs of thoſe of the Religion, which he hath now in hand, and therefore willed him to make himſelf ready to go to his Majeſty. The Lord De la Place anſwered, that he always thought himſelf happy before he left this Life, to gain any opportunity by which he might render an account to his Majeſty of his behaviour and actions.

But in regard ſuch horrible Maſſacres were every where committed, it was impoſſible for him to paſs to the Louvre, without the certain danger of his perſon; praying him to aſſure his Majeſty of his willingneſs to come, the whilſt leaving in his Lodging as many Archers as he thought fitting, until the fury of the people was ſomwhat pacified. The Provoſt agreed to his requeſt, and left with him one of his Lieutenants called Toute Voye, with ſome four of his Archers.

Not long after comes into his Lodging Preſident Charron, then Provoſt of the Merchants, with whom conferring a little in ſecret, going his way he left with the four Archers which were there before, four more of the City Archers. The whole night following was ſpent in ſtopping up and fortifying of all paſſages from entring the Houſe, with logs and proviſion of Flint-ſtones, damming up the windows, ſo as it ſeemed by this ſo exact and diligent a defence, the Archers were left in the Houſe, to free the ſaid De la Place and all his Family from the common calamity, till Seneca, returning the next day after two of the Clock in the afternoon, declared that he had expreſs charge from the King to bring him to his Majeſty without delay. He replyed as before, that it was dangerous as yet to paſs through the City, in regard that even the ſame morning there was an Houſe pillaged next to his.

Seneca on the contrary inſiſted, ſaying, it was the common ſpeech of theſe Huguenots to proteſt that they were the Kings moſt loyal and obedient Subjects and Servants; but when they were to manifeſt their obedience to his commands, then they came off but ſlowly, ſeeming rather much to abhor and deteſt it. And whereas he pretended danger, Seneca anſwered, that he ſhould have a Captain of Paris who was well known to the people, to accompany him. As Seneca continued this ſpeech, the Captain of Paris ſurnamed Pazon, a principal actor in this Sedition, entred the Chamber of the ſaid Lord of Place, offering his Service to conduct him through the City to the King; which De la Place would by no means yield unto, telling Seneca, that he was one of the moſt cruel and bloody minded Men that was in all the City; and therefore ſeeing he muſt needs go to the King, he intreated that the ſaid Seneca would be his guard. To whom Seneca anſwered, that having now other affairs to look unto, he could not conduct him above fifty paces.

Then his Wife (though otherwiſe a very gracious and good Lady) out of that entire love which ſhe bare to her Husband, proſtrated her ſelf at the feet of the ſaid Seneca, beſeeching and intreating him to accompany her Husband to the King, But the ſaid De la Place, who never ſhewed any ſign of a dejected Spirit, came to his Wife, took her up from the ground, rebuked her, and told her, that it is not the Arm of Fleſh that we muſt ſtoop unto, but unto God only. Then turning himſelf about, he perceived in his Sons Hat a white Croſs, which through infirmity he had placed there, thinking thereby to ſave himſelf, for which his Father ſharply chid him, commanding him to pluck that mark of Sedition thence; telling him that we muſt now ſubmit our ſelves to bear the true Croſs of Chriſt, namely, thoſe afflictions and tribulations which it ſhall pleaſe our good God to lay upon us, as ſure pledges of that eternal happineſs, which he hath treaſured up for all his elect Servants. Thus ſeeing himſelf preſſed by the ſaid Seneca, to go with him to the King, reſolving upon death, which he ſaw he could not avoid, he took his Cloak, embracing his Wife, earneſtly wiſhing her above all things to have the fear of God and his honour in precious eſteem, and then went on his way boldly. Coming into the Street where the glaſs-houſe is, over againſt Cocks-ſtreet, certain Murtherers who attended there for his coming, with their daggers in a readineſs, killed him, about three of the Clock in the afternoon, as an innocent lamb in the midſt of ten or twelve of Senecas Archers, who led him into that butchery: and then pillaged and embezzled away what they found in his Lodging for the ſpace of five or ſix days together. His Body (whoſe Soul was now received into Heaven) being carried into a Stable, and covering his face over with dung, the next day they threw him into the River.

De la Place addreſſeth himſelf to go to the King.

He is firſt Murthered and then thrown into the River.

Peter Ramus the Kings profeſſor in Logick, a Man renowned among the learned, was not forgotten. He had many enemies; among other, one called James Carpenter, who Peter Ramus maſſacred and afterwards gracefully handled.

Anno 1572. who ſent the Murtherers to the College of Prieſts, where the ſaid Ramus was hidden. But being diſcovered, he offered a good Sum of Money to ſave his life; yet was he maſſacred, and caſt down out of an high Chamber window to the ground, ſo as his Bowels iſſuing out of the Stones, were afterwards trailed through the Streets; the Carcaſs was whipped by certain Scholars, being ſet on by their Tutors, to the great diſgrace of good Letters which Ramus profeſſed.

I do here, ſaith the Hiſtorian, forbear to write what cruelties were exerciſed in this foreſaid City of Paris, on Sunday, Munday, Tueſday, and the days following; becauſe in ſuch confuſions, thoſe that ſurvived had little leaſure to think upon the Murthers committed in their preſence, to obſerve every particular; I content my ſelf therefore to ſay in a word, that no Man living in Paris taking notice what was done there this Saint Bartholomews day, &c. but will aver that there was never ſeen, heard nor read of ſuch perfidious diſloyalties, ſtrange raviſhments, more than brutiſh cruelties, audacious robberies, execrable blaſphemies, as thoſe that were committed in theſe few days; wherein it was ſafe for one to be any thing, rather than an honeſt Man.

Of a young Man who preferred his Mothers ſafety in theſe broyls before his own.

A Young Man about the Age of two and thirty years, a ſincere Chriſtian, and excellently well learned above many of his Age and time, going early abroad this Sunday morning upon ſome ſpecial occaſion, returning home, and perceiving what a ſtrange rumour there was concerning the death of the Admiral throughout the City of Paris, he out of his ſingular and Child-like affection to his Mother, haſtened to her with all poſſible ſpeed, informing her what had happened and ſo wrought for her, without delay, and not regarding his own ſafety, that he ſecured her in a place, as you would ſay, fitted for the purpoſe. After which himſelf being found alone ſhut up in his ſtudy at prayer, to which exerciſe he had long before devoted himſelf. The furious Maſſacrers on that part of the City asked him if he would obey the King, he anſwered, yes, but I muſt alſo obey God.

Then they began preſently with battle axes and ſtaves to load him with blows on the head, that he received his own Blood into his hands; and then making an end of him, they threw him into the River.

Two Miniſters maſſacred.

TWo Miniſters appertaining to the King of Navarre, the one called More, the other Deſgoris, fell alſo into the hand of theſe Murtherers, who killing them, caſt them into the Water. I cannot learn, ſaith the Hiſtoriographer, by report, that any more Miniſters were ſlain at this time, than theſe two. At the writing hereof many were living, who laboured in the work of the Lord, in the Church of Paris, as were alſo miraculouſly preſerved.

An inhumane Cruelty.

PHilip le Doux a greater Jeweller, at his return home from Guybray Fair, being gone to bed, his Wife at that time had the Midwife attending upon her, being ready to be delivered: ſhe hearing theſe furies below bouncing at the door, commanding it to be opened to them in the Kings name, as ill as ſhe was, adventured to go down, and opened the ſame to theſe Tygers, who preſently ſtabbed her Husband in his Bed. The Midwife ſeeing them bent to Murther the Woman alſo, now ready to lye down, inſtantly intreated them to tarry at leaſt ſo long till the Infant (which would be the 20. Child that God had given her) was born. Having conteſted ſome while with them, they took this poor Woman half dead with fear, and thruſt her into the fundment with a dagger to the very hilts. She finding her ſelf mortally wounded, and yet deſirous to bring forth her fruit, fled into a corn-loft; whither they purſued her, giving her another ſtab into the Belly with a Dagger, and then caſt her out of a Window next to the Street: upon which fall the Child came forth of her Body, the Head formoſt, gaping or yawning, to the great aſtoniſhment and confuſion of the Papiſts, who were conſtrained often with deteſtation to acknowledge and confeſs the cruelties of their Butchers.

A barbarous cruelty.

Behold here another.

ONE of the Maſſacrers having ſnatched up a little Child in his Arms, the poor Babe began to play with his Beard, and to ſmile upon him; but in ſtead of being moved to compaſſion therewith, this barbarous wretch wounded it with his dagger, and ſo caſt it all on a gore-blood into the River, ſo as it was a good while ere it could recover the own colour again.

What Iron heart would not have been moved to compaſſion herewith?

To proceed on further and fully to relate all the Tragical acts committed in this Maſſacre at Paris, to ſet down the thundrings of Guns and Piſtols, the lamentable voices and outcries of the ſlain, the roarings and horrible blaſphemies belched forth by theſe Maſſacrers and Devils incarnate, were enough to cauſe the Paper whereon they ſhould be deſcribed either to bluſh, or weep.

Not to ſtay the Reader therefore any longer in this, having many things of the like nature to preſent unto thy view, we will paſs from the dolorous City of Paris to other Cities in France, and ſet before thee as in a glaſs a company of horrible and rueful ſpectacles.

Maſſacres committed upon thoſe of the Religion, at Meaux in Brie.

LEt us begin then with thoſe of Meaux in Brie, which is not above a days journey from Paris.

The poor Proteſtants in this City were deſtinated to drink off this Cup of Martyrdom after their Brethren and Siſters in the foreſaid City of Paris. Therefore on the ſame Sunday the four and twentieth of Auguſt, about four of the Clock in the Afternoon, a Poſt was ſent to Meaux with Letters, accompanied with a Seditious fellow called Le Froid. Being come thither, the Packet was preſented to Monſieur Lovis Coſſet, the Kings Attourney there. Upon the receit whereof, this Attourney haſted hither and thither in his own perſon to advertiſe ſuch cut-throats (as had had their hands in pillaging and robbing thoſe of the Religion in the firſt, ſecond, and third troubles) with command, that they ſhould be ready to come forth of their Houſes Armed, at the ſtroke of ſeven of the clock, and then cauſe the Gates inſtantly to be ſhut.

There was a roul drawn where the maſſacre ſhould begin, continue, and end. This Coſſet was then branded for notorious villanies, and a miſ-ſhapen fellow.

The time prefixed being come, which was about Supper time, the gates were ſhut, and then they began to execute their cruelties in ſundry parts of the City. Thus was that night paſſed, not without uprores and ſtrange events.

On the next day, which was Munday, about three of the Clock in the morning, theſe good Catholicks began to pillage the Houſes of the Proteſtants, of the beſt things they had, which continued till eight of the Clock, their trading liked them ſo well. But the principal of all the ſpoils were conveyed into the Court and Houſe of this Noble Attourney Coſſet; yet theſe were only the beginnings of ſorrows.

For after robbing and ſpoiling they fell to ſhut them up in Priſons: which being filled, the Maſſacrers having Coſſet for their Captain (who uſually carried in each hand a Piſtol ready to diſcharge) went into the ſaid Priſon on Tueſday the ſix and twentieth of Auguſt. about five or ſix of the Clock at night, with Swords, Daggers, and Butchers knives.

Nigh to this Priſon there was a great Court encloſed on every ſide with walls and a very ſtrong Gate. In a corner whereof is a large pair of winding Stairs, containing five and twenty, or thirty ſteps, by which they go up to the Judgment-Hall to the Seat of Juſtice. Into this Court were the Murderers aſſembled; which done, Coſſet went up into his Seat. Then they had a roul or bill containing the Names of the Priſoners there impriſoned, who were called over one by one to the number of two hundred and upwards, as ſome of the Murderers themſelves have ſince reported, when as they impudently made their brags of theſe their horrible impieties and injuſtices.

Then

Then the Attourney laughing began to call for the firſt Man named in the Bill; who being brought forth, and ſeeing naked Swords before him, falling down and craving forgiveneſs of his Sins at the hands of God, was ſuddenly butchered by five or ſix.

One Quintin Croyer, an Elder of the Reformed Church, being called forth, and ſeeing many of his Companions maſſacred before his eyes, kneeled down, praying God to pardon theſe murderers; at which prayer they fell a laughing, and not being able with their Daggers to pierce a Jerkin of double Buff which he ware, and which they were loth to ſpoil, (for it was a good booty) they cut aſunder the points, and then gave him five, or ſix ſtabs with a Dagger into his Body; and ſo this good Man wounded to death, calling upon God, rendered up his Spirit into the hands of him that gave it.

Faron Haren, a man zealouſly affected to Religion, who had been Sheriff of the City in the firſt troubles, having by his endeavours chaſed the Maſs out of Meaux, for a time was mortally hated of theſe Seditious Papiſts; and therefore they were not contented ſimply to kill him, but firſt cut off his Noſe, Ears; and ſecret parts, then giving him many ſmall thruſts into divers parts of the Body, they conſtrained him to and fro among them, as if he had gone thorow the pikes. But being weakned, and not able any longer to hold out, in regard of the Blood that iſſued from all the parts of his Body, he fell with his face to the ground, and inſtantly calling upon the name of the Lord, received infinite gaſhes and wounds after he was dead.

By this time it grew late; therefore theſe Bloodſuckers, having almoſt wearied themſelves in worrying theſe poor lambs and ſheep of Chriſt, deferred the execution of the reſt till after ſupper, as well to take ſome breathing and refection, as alſo to murther the reſidue with the greater alacrity. For in as much as the Blood of the ſlain ſhined yet upon the Swords and Arms of the murtherers (their ſleeves being tucked up) which ſomething hindred their proceeding; after they had drunk wine their fill, they meant to return and make themſelves drunk with Blood alſo; which that they might ſhed the more freely they took with them Butchers great Axes wherewith they ſmite down their Oxen, and in the preſence of this honeſt Attourney felled theſe poor Priſoners one after another; who called upon God, and crying ſo loud for mercy, that all the City in a manner rung thereof. This Maſſacre laſted from nine of the Clock at night till it was midnight. And for as much as there yet remained many Priſoners alive, they deferred this their Bloody buſineſs till the next day.

But this may ſuffice to have been ſaid as touching this maſſacre at Meaux in Brie; paſs we on now to the City of Troys in Champaign, and there take notice, as it were by the way, what cruelties were executed in that place.

Perſecution of the Faithful at Troys in Champaign.

NEws coming to Troys of the Maſſacre executed at Paris, the greater part of the Judges and Officers of the King were ſent to the Bailiff of Troys, with commandment diligently to make ſearch for all thoſe of the Religion, from Houſe to Houſe, and to impriſon as many as they could meet withal.

In this City there was a Merchant called Peter Belin, a Man of a turbulent nature. This Belin was at the Maſſacre in Paris on S. Bartholomews day; from whence he was ſent with Letters from the King dated the eight and twentieth of Auguſt, to the Major and Sheriffs of Troys, to cauſe all theſe perſecutions to ceaſe, and the Priſoners to be ſet at liberty. On the third of September he came to Troys with theſe two Letters (which had been firſt publiſhed in Paris) with commandment to deliver them to the foreſaid Magiſtrates to be proclaimed there alſo.

But at the firſt entrance into the City, he began to enquire, that all might hear him, whether they had not executed the Huguenots there as they had done in Paris; which was his language thorow the Streets till he came home. But even ſome of the Papiſts, who were not ſo cruelly minded, demanded of Belin the contents of the Kings Letters, whereof they had ſome inkling before. But he, like a Bedlam ſwelling with choler, ſware that whoſoever ſaid they contained any thing tending to pacification, lyed. Haſtning therefore to the Bailiffs Houſe at Troys, after he had delivered him the packet, and buzzed ſomwhat in his ear, he put him on to ſee this execution done. Now that the ſame might paſs the better for currant, the help of the Executioner of Troys was requeſted, whoſe Name was Charles. Anno 1572.

Yet he ſhewing himſelf more juſt and humane than the reſt, peremptorily refuſed to have his hand in an act tending to ſo great cruelty; anſwering, that it was contrary to his Office to execute any Man before Sentence of death had firſt been pronounced by the Magiſtrates. If they had ſuch Sentence to ſhew againſt any of the Priſoners, he was ready to do juſtice; otherwiſe he would not preſume, without a warrant, to bereave any Man of his life: and ſo with theſe words he returned home to his Houſe.

Now albeit this anſwer, proceeding from ſuch a kind of Perſon whoſe Office and cuſtom it was to ſhed Blood, might ſomwhat have aſſwaged and taken off the edge of the moſt barbarous Tyger in the World; yet the Bailiff ſleighting it, was the further enraged. Upon this he ſent for one of the Jaylors of the Priſon who kept thoſe of the Religion; but he being ſick of a Tertain Ague, Martin de Bures was ſent to know his pleaſure.

The Bailiff telling him at large what Belin had ſignified to him in private; as alſo, that on a ſudden all the Priſoners of the Religion muſt be put to death, that ſo the place might be purged of them: This (he ſaid) you muſt not fail to do. But (ſaid the Bailiff) that the Blood may not run into the Streets, you ſhall cauſe a trench to be digged in the midſt of the Priſon, and at the two ends thereof ſet certain veſſels to receive the ſame.

But this de Bures for ſome conſiderations, as namely thinking the Kings Letters (whereof he had had ſome intelligence) might be proclaimed, made no haſt to perform his charge, acquainting no Man with ought that had paſſed between the Bailiff and him; no not Perennet the Keeper, who then lay ſick in his Bed.

The next day, being Tueſday, which was the fourth of September, the Bailiff came into the Priſon about ſeven or eight of the Clock, and calling for Perennet asked of him with a ſmile, Perennet, is it done? Perennet, knowing nothing more or leſs, asked of him what? Then ſaith the Bailiff, Why, are not the Priſoners diſpatched? and thereupon was ready with his Dagger to have ſtabbed him. But coming a little better to himſelf, he told Perennet what his purpoſe was, and how he was to behave himſelf concerning the execution thereof; willing him by all means not to forget to make the ſaid Trench. At which words this Perennet ſtanding amazed, though otherwiſe he was a fellow forward enough of himſelf to commit any Outrages againſt the Proteſtants, certified the Bailiff, that ſuch an inhumane act could not be committed over to him, fearing leaſt in time to come Juſtice might be followed againſt him by the Parents or Allyes of the Priſoners. No no, ſaid the Bailiff, fear not, I will ſtand between you and all harms. Others of the Juſtices have conſented thereto beſides my ſelf, and would you have better ſecurity than that?

Within a while after, the Jaylor coming into the Court of the Priſon, where the priſoners were abroad recreating themſelves, cauſed every one to reſort to his Cabbin or Hole, Becauſe, ſaid he, the Bailiff will come by and by, to ſee whether the Keepers have done as he commanded them: which they did. Then began theſe poor ſheep to fear they were deſtinated to the ſlaughter, and therefore went preſently to prayer. Perennet inſtantly called his Companions about him, reporting to them what the Bailiff had given him in charge. Then they all took an Oath, to execute the ſame; but approaching nigh to the Priſoners, they were ſo ſurpriſed with fear, and their hearts ſo failed them, that they ſtood gazing one upon another, having no courage to act ſuch a barbarous cruelty, and ſo returned to the Jaylors lodge, whence they came, without doing any thing.

But in ſtead of laying this to heart, as an advertiſement and warning-piece ſent them from above; as if of ſet purpoſe they meant to reſiſt againſt the checks of their own Conſciences, and ſo kick againſt the pricks, they ſent to the Tavern for ſixteen Pints of the beſt Wine,

Troys

Anno 1569.

Troys meaſure, with Sheeps Tongues and other viands, and intoxicating their Brains with Wine, they drew a liſt or Catalogue of all the Priſoners, which they delivered to Nicholas Martin, one of their Confederates, who was to call them forth as he ſaw their names ſet down in the ſcroul; and thus as they came forth they Maſſacred them.

Ludot one of the Priſoners, being called forth as his turn came, preſented himſelf before them with a chearful countenance, calling upon the Name of the Lord. Now as he was to receive the ſtroke of death from theſe deſperate blood-ſpillers, he prayed them to forbear a little, till he had put off his doublet, being oiletted, which he was wont to put on when any Tumult grew in the City: and having himſelf unlaced it, preſenting his naked breaſt unto them, he received the blow, and fell down dead.

But poor Meurs eſcaped not ſo good cheap; for his turn being come, he was no ſooner in their ſight, but one of them let drive at him with the point of his Halbert, redoubling the ſame oft to have killed him, yet could not. The poor Man ſeeing himſelf thus dealt withal by the Caitiff, and no end made, took hold with his hands on the point of the halbert, and himſelf pointing him to the Seat of the Heart, cryed to the Murderer with ſtedfaſt voice, Here, Souldier, here, right at the heart, right at the Heart, and ſo finiſhed this life.

Howſoever in this Maſſacre theſe two formerly mentioned are for brevities ſake only named, yet by that which immediately follows you may perceive they were not a few who ſuffered in this tragedy.

The Maſſacre (ſaith my Author) being ended the Murtherers made a great pit on the back ſide of the Chappel of the Priſon, whereinto they caſt the Bodies one upon another, ſome of them yet breathing. So as one called Maufere lying in the midſt of them, was eſpied to raiſe up himſelf above his fellow Martyrs in this pit, upon whom they forthwith throwing Earth (as was reported) ſtifled him being but half dead. But becauſe the order which the Bailiff ſet down was not obſerved, namely the making of a Trench in the Priſon to receive the Blood which was ſhed, it ran in ſuch abundance out at the Priſon door, and thence through a Channel into a River nigh thereto, that it was turned into the colour of Blood. Which ſome of the Papiſts themſelves taking notice of, being ignorant of the fact, were ſo terrified therewith, that they ran along the Street, crying and pointing at every one they met withal to behold this ſo horrible and lamentable a ſpectacle. Whereupon many haſting to the Priſon by this occaſion, could conjecture no other but that the Priſoners had ſlain one another.

This waas preſently noiſed through the City, inſomuch as ſome went to inform the Lieutenant and Bailiff thereof. But what? it was as if they had run to the Wolves to tell them the Sheep were devoured.

Whilſt this ſo ſavage a cruelty was committed in the Priſon, one Bartholmew Carlet a Cooper, Priſoner there for debt (who of all the Troop of the Murtherers in Troys was one of the principal) having in the former troubles exerciſed moſt notorious cruelties againſt thoſe of the Religion, was called in by theſe Maſſacrers to be one of their Aſſociates; who executed his part in ſo bloody a manner, that (as himſelf afterwards often acknowledged) he with his own hands ſlaughtered thirty of theſe poor Innocents: So far was he grown paſt ſhame or common honeſty. But this his fact was ſo pleaſing to certain of the Popiſh Religion at Troys, that for a recompence thereof they payed his debt, and ſet him free out of Priſon; which was done (as the report went) by making a Collection for him in certain Pariſhes.

The next day after, which was the fifth of September, this Worſhipful Bailiff of Troys, that he might apply the plaiſter when the parties were dead, cauſes the Kings Letters, which he had received the thirtieth of the Month of Auguſt before going, to be publiſhed in all the corners of the City with ſound of Trumpet. The Bailiff (as we have been credibly informed) was preſent in perſon at the publication, and as the Notary read the contents thereof to him, he pronounced the ſame jeeringly and not with a full and Audible Voice, as matters of ſuch Conſequence ought to be read.

Of the Maſſacre at Orleance.

IT now remains that we proceed unto the City of Orleance, and to take notice whether the Papiſts there were leſs cruel than thoſe of Paris. But, ſaith the Hiſtorian, when I call to mind what hath been the report of thoſe that were preſent at that time in Orleance, it cauſeth the Hair to ſtand upright on my Head: Yet for as much as it is convenient that poſterities to come may be acquainted with the fury of theſe monſters in nature, we will commit that to writing whereof we have credibly been informed.

On Saturday, the three and twentieth of Auguſt, Letters were ſent from the King to Orleance, unto Sieur de la Renic Preſident of Dijon, to prevent all diſorders, murthers &c. With command, that he ſhould advertiſe the Citizens, how the Admiral was hurt, as alſo to aſſure thoſe of the Religion, that ere long ſuch Juſtice ſhould be executed on the Actors, as all France ſhould take warning thereby not to enterpriſe the like.

This was carefully performed by the ſaid Sieur de la Renic the ſame day; who cauſed thoſe of the beſt rank of both Religions to be preſent at the publiſhing of the Kings mind. The Faithful thinking themſelves ſecure, were quiet, and on the Sabbath day aſſembled in the place appointed for their meeting, to the number of 300. Perſons, Men, Women, and Children:

But on the ſame day towards night came a new Order to the Juſtice, Major, and Sheriffs of the ſaid City, by which they were injoyned to be up in Arms, and to gather to them what ſtrength they could; with expreſs charge to make havock of thoſe of the Religion. To this purpoſe the Captains of twelve Companies were appointed to be the leaders to the reſt, divided into eight and forty ſquadrons.

The cruel Maſſacre of Dechampeaux a worthy Counſellor in the City of Orleance, by a wretched Villain his Neighbour.

ONe of theſe blood-ſuckers called Texier came with a ſmall Troop to a Counſellors Houſe of Orleance, whoſe Name was Dechampeaux Lord of Bonilli, bidding himſelf and his company to Supper with him. Dechampeaux bid them all kindly welcom, making them good chear, being ignorant of that which had hapned at Paris. But Supper being ended, and all of them being riſen from the Table, Texier bad him deliver his purſe. Dechampeaux laughing thereat, thinking that he had been but in jeſt, this cruel and unthankful gueſt with Blaſphemous Oaths told him in few words what had hapned in the City of Paris, and what preparation there was among the Roman Catholicks of Orleance, to cut off and root out the Proteſtants there. Dechampeaux ſeeing there was no time now to conteſt with him, gave mony to this thief: who, to requite the courteſie and good entertainment he had had, embrued his hands in the Blood of his hoſt and neighbour, a Man of as good and upright a carriage as was in all the City, and afterwards himſelf with his Troop pillaged the whole Houſe.

A cruel and unthankful gueſt.

The ſix and twentieth day of Auguſt following the Maſſacrers began the Execution about the Ramparts, after ſuch a ſtrange manner; as he that had but a ſpark of humanity left in him, out of compaſſion would be moved to abhor and deteſt it. In theſe quarters there inhabited many of the Religion. All the night long was heard nothing but ſhooting off of Guns and Piſtols, forcing open of Doors and Windows, fearful outcryes of the Maſſacred, both of Men, Women, and little Children, trampling of Horſes, and rumbling of carts, hurrying of Dead Bodies to and fro; the Street ſwarming with unwonted exclamations of thoſe of the common ſort, with horrible Blaſphemies of the Murderers, laughing their fill at their furious exploits; Some crying kill them all, and then take the ſpoil; others, ſpoil not, but kill all.

So all muſt go to wreck.

On Wedneſday the Maſſacre began more fiercely, and ſo continued to the end of the week, not ſparing to break theſe and the like jeſts upon the poor Maſſacred: Where is now your God? What is become of all your Prayers, and Pſalms now? Let your God, whom you called upon,

These were miſerable comforters.

ſave you if he can. Yea ſome of them, who in times paſt had been profeſſors of the ſame Religion, whilſt they were maſſacring the poor Innocents, durſt ſing unto them in ſcorn the beginning of the three and fortieth Pſalm: Which in the French meeter runs, Revenge moy pren le quarelle de moy, Judge me O God, and plead my cauſe. Others ſtriking them ſaid, ſing now, Miſerecorde aupaure vicieux, Have mercy on me O God, which Language they uſed to this poor people in Paris and elſewhere. But theſe execrable outrages no way daunted the courage of the Faithful from dying ſtedfaſt in the Faith.

Touching the multitude of the ſlain, the Murtherers did not ſtick to vaunt that in this City they cauſed more than twelve thouſand Men to periſh: Alſo an hundred and fifty Women, with a great number of Children of nine years old and upward. But as ſome of themſelves have ſince reported, there were eighteen thouſand murdered, beſides Women and Children. The manner of their death was, firſt to ſhoot them with Piſtols, then to ſtrip them of their Clothes, and either drowning or elſe burying the dead Bodies in pits, namely ſuch as dwelt about the Walls. They were armed alſo with knives and ponyards: in like manner manner with Javelins and Partizans, wherewith they Murthered theſe poor, meek, and harmleſs Creatures.

The force of fervent prayer.

On Tueſday at night certain of this bloody Crue came and knocked at the door of one that was a Doctor of the Civil Law, called Taillebous; who opening a Caſement, and underſtanding that they had ſomewhat to ſay to him, came down immediately, and opened the ſame unto them. At the firſt greeting they told him he muſt dye. Whereupon he fell to prayer, and that with ſuch conſtancy and affection, that the Maſſacrers being aſtoniſhed, and by a ſecret celeſtial power reſtrained, contented themſelves only with taking his purſe, in which there were fifteen Crowns, and ſo left him, offering him no more violence.

The day following certain Scholars reſorting to his lodging, requeſted of him that they might ſee his Library, into which having brought them, one asked this Book of him, and another another, the which he willingly gave them. At length they told him they were not as yet ſatisfied, their purpoſe being to kill him. He proſtrating himſelf upon the ground, and having ended his prayer, willed them to kill him there. But they forced him out of his own Houſe, whence he went on with an undaunted courage, till in the way he lighted on the Body of a certain Shoomaker, newly wounded, lying gaſping for breath. At which ſight ſtarting back as one ſomwhat appaled, he prayed them to kill him there; yet they would not, but conſtrained him to paſs on forward. Being come to the Schools of the Civil Law, at leaſt, ſaid he, let me dye before this place, where I have taught ſo long; But they furiouſly repulſing him, more than before, made him go further with them, where at length they knocked him down.

A rich Burgeſs of the City called Nicholas Bougars Sieur de Nove, a Man of ſingular worth, and highly eſteemed of all, was at that time deadly ſick. Some of the Murtherers came into his Chamber with a purpoſe to kill him; but ſeeing him in that caſe ſpared him: yet finding there Noel Chaperon, an Apothecary who brought him Phyſick, they cut off one of his Arms, then drew him into the open Market-place, where they made an end of him.

The next day there came one to the lodging of him that was ſick, who was wont heretofore to viſit him. Now as he was entring in, he met the Mother of the ſick party at the door going unto Maſs, and coming up into the Chamber he ſtabbed the ſaid ſick Man with a Dagger in many places, and ſo killed a dying Man. Then with all ſilence, as if he had done no ſuch act, wiping his Dagger, he went down the ſtairs again, and meeting one at the door who came to viſit him that was ſick, this fellow ſaluting him paſſed along by him, without any change either in his behaviour or countenance.

A Cook, having hid himſelf three whole days, was inforced for hunger to come forth, for lack of meat. But whilſt he went about to eſcape one death, he fell into the talons of theſe Lions, who devoured him, and that forthwith.

Francis Stample a rich Merchant was threatned to have his throat cut preſently, if he gave not the Murderers money: but having none about him, being taken by them out of his Houſe, calling for pen and ink he wrote a Letter to his Wife, willing her forthwith to ſend him his ranſom: he had no ſooner ſealed the Letter, but the Murderers deprived him thereof and his life together, laughing at that they had done. And though they got from his Widow a round ſum of Money, yet could ſhe not obtain at their hands the Body of her dead Husband. Anno 1572.

But to fill up the meaſure of the popelings cruelty, that thoſe of the Religion might taſte thereof to the utmoſt, the Papiſts were not content to be Maſſacrers themſelves, but conſtrained ſuch of the Proteſtants as through fear had revolted, to play the Murderers alſo. Thus placing theſe wicked revolters into the forefront of their companies, and arming them with Weapons fit for the purpoſe, they preſſed them to march on before, and to give the firſt onſet, crying to them, Smite them, ſmite them; are they not of your Brethren and holy Siſters? And if they refuſed to do as they were commanded, their turns were like to be next.

The Maſſacres committed at Bourges and la Chanite, are the rather paſſed over in ſilence, becauſe the Hiſtory requires at this time to touch only upon ſuch things as are moſt remarkable, and ſhall after follow.

YEt one thing ought not to be forgotten which fell out in the City laſt mentioned. There was one John Sarrazin of the Age of ſeventy years and above, who for a long time had exerciſed the office of a Deacon in the Reformed Church; the which he ſo faithfully performed, that he was eſteemed a Father of the poor. This good old Father was ſet upon on Tueſday night in his own Houſe the fourth of September, 1572. and laid at with ſwords by theſe furious Murtherers: who with a venerable and ſmiling countenance looking upon them, ſaid, my friends, what will ye do with me? have I ever offended any of you? And if I have let him ſpeak. But nothing could any whit prevail with theſe ſavage monſters to mollifie their ſtony Hearts. For with a more than brutiſh rage they fell upon this gray Head and poor withered Carkaſs, who to fence of the blows crept under his Beſs, where one of theſe rakehels, his next neighbour and Godſon, gave him ſuch a thruſt in with his Sword into the Belly, that his Bowels iſſued out.

The poor Man ſeeing himſelf thus wounded, and perceiving who had done it, ſaid, Ah Godſon, do you uſe me thus? I never hurt you, but have done you good. He languiſhed of this hurt two days and two nights: during which time, as we have learned from his Wife, who gave her attendance on him all the while, he ceaſed not with great zeal to call upon God, thinking himſelf happy to have ſuffered that outrage for his name, and ſo not long after yielded up his Spirit into the hands of God that gave it.

The Horrible Maſſacre of the Faithful at Lyons in France.

ON Wedneſday the ſeven and twentieth of Auguſt in the year 1572. about ſix of the Clock in the morning, Sieur Mandolet Governor of Lyons was advertiſed of the Maſſacre at Paris; and within an hour and half after, a Souldier paſſing through the Streets made it known to the people, that the Admiral, and all the Proteſtant Princes were ſlain. By and by the gates of the City were ſhut, and guards of Souldiers placed here and there.

But leſt thoſe of the Religion ſhould be moved with ſuch an unwonted and an unexpected ſhutting in of the Gates (as in the time of open War) the Roman Catholicks cauſed it to be bruited that all was done to ſecure the Proteſtants. To which report ſome gave too much credit (for beſides the ordinary guard of the Governor, and that of the Citadel, with the three hundred Harquebuſiers of the City, which amounted to about a thouſand) there were gathered to them many beſides of the City with Arms likewiſe; with command that if they deſcried any troop of thoſe of the Religion coming abroad, though but with their Swords girt unto them, forthwith to cut them off with the reſt alſo. But they, having enured themſelves to an incredible modeſty and patience, gave them not the leaſt appearance of defending themſelves, ſeeing a tempeſt now nigh nigh at hand which they knew could not ariſe without a ſpecial providence of God.

The day following, notwithſtanding all theſe fair ſhews, they evidently perceived that their lives were at the mercy of the Papiſts, who had ſucked the blood of many of them in the firſt troubles. For albeit they found no more paſſage for them out of the City than they did the day precedent, they might not now either freely go out or come in upon their neceſſary occaſions: if they preſented themſelves in the Streets, they were clapt up in Priſon; for which cauſe they were faine to keep their Houſes. Night being come, they made a privy ſearch in their dwelling Houſes; ſome they rifled, others were ranſomed, and the reſt impriſoned. Many of them never coming thither, were either killed in the corners of the Streets with Daggers, or elſe caſt into the River; whereof ſome (who were living when this Hiſtory was in writing) were ſaved by ſwimming, being carried down with the Current of the Stream, half a mile beneath the City.

On Friday after there was a Proclamation with ſound of Trumpets in all the chief places of the City, the ſum of which was this, that thoſe of the Religion were to appear before the Governour at his Houſe, there to be informed what the Kings pleaſure was concerning them. The greater part, being but too credulous, feared not to make their appearance at the place aſſigned, whence ſoon after they were committed to ſundry Priſons. The night following there were heard from all parts of the City lamentable cries and ſhreekings, not only of ſuch as were maſſacred in their Houſes, but of others half wounded to death, whom they haled to the River.

From that time forwards there were ſuch Murthers and Outrages committed, throughout the City, that it ſeemed Hell was ſet open, and that Devils in the likeneſs of men coming from thence, ran roring to and fro in the Streets.

On Sunday, which was the laſt of this Month of Auguſt, about eight of the Clock in the morning, the reſt, who were left unmaſſacred the Friday before, were made an end of then.

About one of the Clock the ſame day, commandment was given, that under every Ancient twenty five armed men, with twelve Porters, ſhould be gathered to conduct them to S. Georges Gate, which is by the Archbiſhops Houſe, in which were more then three hundred and fifty Priſoners; in which place the great Maſſacre was to be executed. The Keys of the Archbiſhops Houſe, wherein ſo many Priſoners were incloſed, were delivered unto this bloody Crue; who joyfully offered themſelves to perform ſo horrible a buſineſs; the which the ordinary Executioner refuſed, and common Souldiers abhorred to undertake, when the ſame was firſt propounded unto them; they anſwering peremptorily they would never do it.

The firſt alledged, That if according to the courſe of Juſtice Sentence of death had been denounced againſt them, he knew what he had to do; but for this their purpoſe, he told them, he thought they might have but too many Executioners in the City to ſatisfie their deſire. The Souldiers anſwered, They thought it more then inhuman, to cut the throats of ſuch as never offended them. But if the Priſoners had made any Inſurrection or Sedition in the City, they then might have ſome colour of reaſon to do it; otherwiſe they meant not to ſtain the honour of their Profeſſion (which is accompanied with nobleneſs of ſpirit) with ſo villainous an act, more befitting Butchers then Souldiers.

But Mandelot and his Accomplices were not ſo ſcrupulous; for within three hours after, Clou Captain of the Harquebuſiers of the City, came with an enraged Troop, &c. the greater part whereof were furniſhed with ſhort Swords and Hangers.

As ſoon as Le Clou entred into the great Court, he gave the Priſoners to underſtand with a loud voice, That they muſt dye: and turning him towards his Slaughtermen, he ſaid, On, on, go in, and to your work: but firſt he forgat not to demand the Priſoners Purſes for his Boot-hire, which when he pocketted up, he gat him into a Gallery, there to ſatisfie his helliſh luſt in taking a view of this rueful ſpectacle.

The Murtherers began to fall upon the poor Priſoners with ſuch barbarous cruelty, hacking and hewing them in ſo furious a manner, that within leſs than an hour they were all cut in pieces, not ſo much as one eſcaped their hands. All theſe for the moſt part were maſſacred kneeling on their knees, and lifting up their eyes and hands to God for mercy, whilſt they had their hands and fingers cut off.

The death and martyrdom of Francis le Boſſu, a Merchant, together with his Sons.

AMong all thoſe that confeſſed the Name of Jeſus Chriſt, and gave their lives for his Truth, a certain Merchant of Hats and Caps, called Francis le Boſſu, well deſerves to be ſet in the fore rank, with his two Sons; for while he trampled in the Blood of his Brethren, being beſmeared therewith, and ſpirting as it were in his face, he encouraged his Children to take their death willingly & patiently: uſing this ſpeech, Children, we are not to learn now that it hath always been the portion of Believers, to be hated, cruelly uſed, and devoured by Unbelievers; as Chriſts ſilly Sheep of ravening Wolves: if we ſuffer with Chriſt, we ſhall alſo reign with him. Let not theſe drawn Swords terrifie us, they will be but as a Bridge whereby we ſhall paſs over out of a miſerable life, into immortal bleſſedneſs. We have breathed and lived long enough among the wicked, let us now go and live with our God; let us joyfully march after this great Company which is here gone before us, and let us make way for them that ſhall follow after.

When he ſaw the Murtherers come, he claſped his arms about his two Sons, and they likewiſe embraced their Father; as if the Father meant to be a Buckler to his Children, and the Children as if by the Bond of Nature (which binds them to defend his life from whence they received it) they meant to ward off the blows which were coming towards their Father, though with the loſs of their own lives; who when the Maſſacre was ended, were all three found dead, thus embracing one another.

Now after this furious aſſault, theſe impudent Creatures went up and down the City, ſhewing their white Doublets all beſprinkled with Blood; boaſting, that ſome had killed an hundred, ſome more, ſome leſs. Forthwith the great Gates of the Archbiſhops Houſe were ſet wide open for all comers; of whom ſurely there was none (were they of the devouteſt Romaniſts) but muſt needs have their hearts wounded and pierced within them, to ſee ſo hideous a ſlaughter. And indeed ſome of them were heard to ſay, when they beheld this ſo inhuman and cruel an act, That certainly they were not men, but devils in the habit of men, that had done this.

The Papiſts abhor their own Cruelties.

The next morning, which was Munday, the firſt of September, the remainder of Corpſes, which were caſt into the water, were put into great Boats, which being rowed over to the other ſide of the River of Saon, were all caſt on ſhore there; the Corpſes being alſo ſpread upon the ground nigh to the Abbey of Eſnay, like dung upon the Earth. The Monks would at no hand yield to have them buried in their Church-yard, eſteeming them unworthy of burial; fearing alſo, that ſo many put together would be a means to infect the Air, and therefore gave them a ſign to have them thrown into the River.

Now as the Multitude were dragging them in thither, an Apothecary came and informed them, that money might be made of the Greaſe that was taken out of their bodies. Then were the moſt corpulent Bodies preſently ſought ought, which when they had ripped up, a great quantity of that Commodity being gotten thence, was ſold by theſe Merchants for three ſhillings the pound. And then not knowing how to wreck their malice any further upon them, after many deriſions and ſcorns which the ſtanders by, but eſpecially the Italians, had done to theſe poor deſpiſed Carkaſſes, they were tumbled into a great Pit, and the reſt, thrown into the River.

Thoſe of Daulphine, of Languedoc, and Provence were amazed to ſee ſo many bodies floating upon the water, ſome diſmembred, others faſtned together with long Poles, others lying on the ſhore, ſome having their eyes put out, others their noſes, ears, and hands cut off, ſtabbed in with Daggers in every part of their Bodies, ſo as ſome among them had no human ſhape remaining. Yea, ſo great a number of theſe mangled Corpſes preſented themſelves on the Port of Tournon, that the men and women of the place began to make an Outcry, as if the Enemies had been at their Gates.

Not many Months after, when all theſe bloody Tragedies were ended, the Pope ſent a Legate to the King, called Cardinal Urſin. This Legate was received with great Solemnity at Lyons, and the Streets hung with Tapeſtry. Now having heard Maſs at S. Johns Church, and returning by the ſame door which he went in at, the greateſt number of the Maſſacrers attended his coming there, and as he paſſed by, they all kneeled down for his Abſolution. But the Legate not knowing the reaſon why they kneeled ſo before him, one of the principal Agents kneeling there amongſt them, told the Legate that they were thoſe who had been the Actors in the Maſſacre. When the Legate perceived that to be the cauſe, he abſolved them all with making the ſign of the Croſs.

The Maſſacrers abſolved by the Popes Legate.

Perſecution at Angiers in France.

Mr. John Maſon, a learned Miniſter, together with his wife and ſome others, Martyrs.

A Proteſtant Miniſter murthered in his Garden.

AS ſoon as the Maſſacre was begun at Paris, a Gentleman of Paris, called Monſoreau, obtained a Paſport with Letters to maſſacre thoſe of the Religion at Angiers. Who, being diſappointed of his Prey in one place, came to the lodging of a reverend and learned Miniſter, called Mr. John Maſon, ſirnamed de Launay, Sieur of Riviere. Meeting his Wife at his entrance into the Houſe, he ſaluted her and kiſt her, as it is the manner in France, eſpecially among the Courtiers, and asked her where her Husband was? She anſwered him, that he was walking in his Garden; and then directed him the way unto him.

Monſoreau having lovingly embraced La Riviere, ſaid unto him, Do you know wherefore I am come? the King hath commanded me to kill you forthwith, and hath given me expreſs charge to do it, as you ſhall know by his Letters. After which words he ſhewed him a Piſtol ready charged. Riviere replyed, That he knew not wherein he had offended the King; but ſeeing, ſaith he, you ſeek my life, give me a little leave to cry to God for mercy, and to recommend my ſpirit into his hands.

Having made a ſhort Prayer, he willingly preſented his Body to the Murtherer, who ſhot him in with his Piſtol, and ſo he died by and by.

Not long after the King ſent Puygaillard, who drowned nine or ten, and amongſt other, the Wife of this Miniſter de la Riviere above named, who expreſſed a ſingular conſtancy of Faith even to her laſt breath.

This Miniſter and Martyr formerly mentioned, ſirnamed Launay, was the eldeſt Son of Sieur de Launay, a man exceeding rich and wealthy, but an obſtinate Papiſt. When as the old man obſerved how his Son was inclined to be a Profeſſor of the Goſpel, he threatned to diſinherit him unleſs he would abjure, promiſing on the contrary to beſtow great matters upon him, and to marry him honourably, if he would be ruled by him. All which his Son refuſing, his Fathers love began to be turned into hatred; inſomuch that the young man was forced to fly to Paris, where in time he was called to be a Miniſter of the firſt Reformed Church planted in that City, under the Reign of King Henry the Second; from which Reformed Church other Churches in divers Cities in France fetched their Light.

Perſecution at Rovan.

WHen the Maſſacrers began to play their parts in this City, they counſelled thoſe of the Religion to get themſelves into the Priſons, as into places of greateſt ſecurity from the fury and rage of the People. But ſuch as followed this advice, were there even ready to be devoured, as poor Sheep, by theſe greedy Wolves at their pleaſure.

Six thouſand maſſacred in few days at the City of Rovan.

Thoſe who were murthered in the City in a few days, ſome in their Houſes, and others in the Priſons, amounted to ſix thouſand, beſides more than fifty women, upon whom they exerciſed no leſs cruelty than upon men.

Their Names for brevities ſake are here omitted. The dead Bodies being piled together, were conveyed in Tumbrils out of the City, and thrown by heaps one upon another into great Pits digged for that purpoſe. Their Garments being waſhed in the River from their Blood, by certain poor women, were afterwards diſtributed here and there to the poor by the Papiſts, that they might ſeem with their unjuſt cruelty to mingle ſome works of Juſtice and Charity. Anno 1572.

A Note touching the ſhameful revolt of a Miniſter called Du Roſier, with the event of it.

WIthin a mile of Paris there is a place where thoſe of the Religion, which dwelt thereabouts, were wont to aſſemble to hear Sermons, and to participate of the Sacraments. Over this Flock was Huges Sureau (called Du Roſier) placed as Overſeer.

Being in times paſt Miniſter at Orleance, he was diſcharged from thence, as one of a contentious ſpirit, and given to affect Novelties.

In proceſs of time he came to be eſtabliſhed the Miniſter of this foreſaid Church nigh unto Paris.

Hearing the News of the Maſſacre, he fled with the reſt for company. Being apprehended, he began to waver, perſwading many Priſoners to revolt as he had done; which cauſed him afterwards, if his repentance was found, to utter theſe words in a Book which I have, wherein he bitterly lamented his woful fall. The Murtherers ſaith he, by their cruel hands murthered mens Bodies, whilſt their Souls eſcaped ſafe; but I by my perſwaſions have been a killer of Souls, in turning them from the Truth which before they profeſſed.

The Judge who had him in Bonds ſent Letters preſently to Paris, to give notice of his apprehenſion, as alſo of ſome apparent ſigns which gave him hope of the Miniſters Converſion.

The King by and by ſent for him; who being brought into his preſence, ſubſcribed inſtantly to an Abjuration with deteſtation of the Huguenots Profeſſion, before the King of Navarre and the Prince of Conde, maintained the Romiſh Religion, conſented thereto with the Sorboniſts at that time there preſent; againſt whom a few years before he had learnedly defended the Truth.

In this Abjuration he endeavoured to confute many Articles which were maintained by Calvin and Beza againſt the Romiſh Religion. In theſe diſputes, this Miniſter being of a prompt wit, and having ability to expreſs himſelf well, handled the matter ſo cunningly, that the King of Navarre, the Princeſs his Siſter, and the Princeſs of Conde ſo far yielded, that within five or ſix days after they went to Maſs, and received Abſolution of the Cardinal of Bourbon.

The Points about which this Roſier diſputed, were theſe: Firſt, Concerning the Marks of the Church; Secondly, Of the Trinity of Perſons; Thirdly, Of the Incarnation of Jeſus Chriſt; Fourthly, Of Chriſts deſcent into Hell; Fifthly, Of Original Sin; Sixthly, Of the Providence of God; Seventhly, Of Predeſtination and Reprobation; Eighthly, Of mans Freewill; Ninthly, Of Juſtification; Tenthly, Of Succeſſion; Eleventhly, Of Interceſſion of Saints; Twelfthly, Of the Sacrifice of the Maſs; And, Laſtly, of Tranſubſtantiation. The Sorboniſts cauſed this Confeſſion to be printed; to which the Miniſters of the Reformed Religion would not vouchſafe an Anſwer, knowing that he who made it did it contrary to his own Conſcience, adding nothing thereto which had not been confuted a thouſand times.

All this upon his Repentance he afterwards revoked, as is to be ſeen by his Book printed here in London in the French Tongue, in the year 1573. which Confeſſion of his, contrary to his Abjuration, I have in my Cuſtody.

Now touching the Prince of Conde, the King propounded to him three things; Either to go to Maſs, to dye, or elſe perpetual Priſon; and therefore to bethink himſelf well which of the three he liked beſt. The Prince anſwered, as it is reported, That by Gods grace he would never chooſe the firſt; as for the two latter, he referred himſelf to the Kings pleaſure.

Anno 1527.

A Maſſacre at Tholouſe in France.

ON Sunday, which was the eighth day after the Maſſacre of Paris, about eight of the Clock in the morning, the chief of the Papiſts received advertiſement of that which had paſſed, with Letters directing them what they were to do. Then a Councel was called, at the breaking up whereof the great Gates of the City were ſhut, only the Wickets left open, at which there was ſet ſuch to watch as they thought fitting. Soon after it was noiſed through all the City, that the Lords and Gentlemen of the Religion were maſſacred at Paris. Which the Proteſtants at Tholouſe noting, being gone forth about five of the Clock in the morning to hear the Sermon at Caſtanet, ſome thought it fit not to return, but to reſort to ſome other place: others reſolved to go back again, that they might take order about their affairs. Theſe, being ill adviſed, were ſuffered to enter in peaceably, leaving their Swords and Daggers at the Gate. At Evening Souldiers were placed here and there; but in regard many Counſellors of the Religion were abroad (that they might the better entrap them) the next day the Gates were not ſo carefully looked unto, but who would might come in, and go out at their leiſure, without being queſtioned at all. This was done to draw in the ſimple people who wandred up and down the fields. The firſt preſident called Daſis, a ſubtle headed man, ſent to the Counſellors abroad to come in, promiſing them their ſafety upon his word, ſhewing that their abſence did but incenſe the Inhabitants of Tholouſe the more againſt them. It was granted indeed, that there had been a Maſſacre at Paris, but that was upon ſome private quarrel, ſo as the King was not minded for that to break his Edict of Pacification.

Some of them were perſwaded and returned; others caſting ſome peril reſolved to retire to Mountauban, Realmont, and elſewhere. On Tueſday following, that they might hold them whom they had gotten within the Walls, and draw in ſuch as yet kept themſelves without, they cauſed it to be publiſhed with ſound of Trumpets; That the Kings will was that none of the Religion ſhould be moleſted, but reſpectively uſed. The Preſidents with ſundry others were preſent at this Proclamation, accompanied with a guard of Souldiers, which cauſed many of the Religion, eſpecially the Counſellors, to ſuſpect ſome treachery; who therefore haſtened to the firſt Preſident to know what theſe things meant. He anſwered, it was only to reſtrain the people from making a tumult. But perceiving that they could not by their cunning catch the Birds who kept aloof off, they wrecked their malice upon thoſe they had in their hands.

On Wedneſday next then, about ten of the Clock in the Morning, having ſeparated their Troops into divers quarters, they cauſed them to enter into the Houſes of thoſe of the Religion, whom they impriſoned in ſundry Priſons of the City. This buſineſs held them all that Wedneſday. The Guard was doubled at the Gates, and one of the Parliament, with a Merchant that was a Papiſt, deputed as Commanders at the ſaid Gates, to examin all ſuch as went out, and to put back ſuch as meant to eſcape. There was alſo a charge given, that none ſhould dare to conceal any of the ſaid Religion, as they would anſwer to the contrary. By means whereof many being diſcovered, were impriſoned. Among which were five or ſix Counſellors, men excellently learned, who comforted the reſt. Thus were they detained three weeks. In the mean while the Maſſacrers ſet upon the Neighbour Cities.

The three weeks being expired, they put all theſe Priſoners together into the Conſciergery, which is a ſpecial Priſon. After which they began to manifeſt themſelves: for the reaſon why they had deferred the ſlaughter of them ſo long, was, that they might obtain Authority from Paris; the which was brought them by their Deputies, whoſe names were Delpech and Madron, rich Merchants of the City. Theſe came with a Warrant from the King, that if the Maſſacre was not finiſhed, then they ſhould not defer any longer to put his will in execution. To which they ſhewed themſelves but too forward and ready.

On Saturday morning before the Sun was up, certain Scholars who were Night-walkers, with other lewd Fellows to the number of ſeven or eight, armed with Axes and Butchers Knives, entred into the ſaid Conſciergery, and cauſing the Priſoners to be called down one after another, they maſſacred them beneath at the ſtairs-foot of the Conſciergery, not permitting them ſo much leiſure as to ſpeak, much leſs to pray. It was thought that they maſſacred to the number of three hundred; afterwards ſpoiling them of all they had, ſtripping them out of their cloaths and ſhirts, and leaving them naked; their ſecret parts being only covered with a piece of Paper. They were expoſed to the view of all for the ſpace of two days; whilſt they digged great pits, whereinto the Corpſes thus cruelly maſſacred were caſt naked one upon another. The Counſellors whom they had impriſoned, after they were maſſacred, were hanged in their long Gowns upon a great Elm which was in the Court of the Palace; and in the mean while the Houſes of thoſe of the Religion were ſacked and pillaged.

Three hundred maſſacred in the City of Tholouſe in France.

Many among theſe, by reaſon of the barbarous cruelties uſed againſt their Brethren, abjured daily. Now becauſe the Sorboniſts provided a form of Abjuration to that purpoſe, for ſaving the lives of ſuch as recanted, it ſhall not be impertinent to inſert the ſame in this place; it being imprinted at Paris by Nicholas Roffet.

The Abjured minding to return into the lap of our holy Mother the Roman Church, muſt preſent themſelves firſt to their Parſons or Curats, to be directed by them what they ought to do. Afterward to be ſent thence to their Reverend Biſhop and Dioceſan, or his Official, to pronounce the ſaid Abjuration in manner and form following.

The Form of their Abjuration.

1. I Such a one of ſuch a Dioceſs, and dwelling in ſuch a place, acknowledge by the Grace of God the true Catholick and Apoſtolick Faith, from which I have wilfully gone aſtray and ſeparated my ſelf; and now deſiring to return into the true Sheepfold, which is the Catholick, Apoſtolick, and Roman Church; I do profeſs to have abjured, and here before you my Superiour, do abjure and deteſt all the Huguenot Errors of Luther, Calvin, and all Hereſies whatſoever, wherewith heretofore I have been infected and defamed, conſenting now to the Doctrine of our holy Mother the Church, beſeeching you in the Name of God, and of his Son Jeſus Chriſt, and of the glorious Virgin Mary his Mother, with all the he Saints and ſhe Saints in Paradiſe, that it will pleaſe you to receive me into the Fold of the Chriſtian Flock and People of God, who live under the obedience of the Pope, ordained Chriſts Vicar in the ſaid Church, ſubmitting my ſelf patiently to hear, and willingly to perform the penance you ſhall think fit to impoſe upon me, abſolving me from all Offences committed whilſt I lived in ſuch Errors, for which I hear ask pardon of God, of the ſaid Church, and of you my Paſtor (ſet over me by God the Creator) to abſolve me with ſuch Penance as you ſhall judge to be available for the ſatisfaction of my ſins and offences. And that it may be ſeen that from the heart I have made, and do make this Abjuration.

2. I further confeſs, before God and you, that I believe all that is contained in the Apoſtles, Athanaſius and Nicene Creeds, with all the Confeſſions of Faith beſides, allowed and approved by the Councels of the Catholick, Apoſtolick, and Roman Church, and ſo forth as it followeth in thoſe Creeds.

3. I alſo believe, acknowledge and confeſs whatſoever is contained in the Old and New Teſtament, approved by the ſaid holy Catholick Apoſtolick Roman Church, according to the ſenſe and interpretation of the holy Doctors, and by them received, rejecting wholly all other Interpretations as falſe and erroneous.

4. I acknowledge the ſeven Sacraments of the ſaid Church to have been inſtituted by our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, as neceſſary for the ſalvation of mankind, although all of them are not of neceſſity to be conferred upon all; namely, I acknowledge that the ſeven Sacraments be, Baptiſm, Confirmation, the Euchariſt, which is the holy Sacrament of the Altar, Penance, extream Unction, Orders, and Marriage; and that of them Baptiſm, Con- firmation, and Orders cannot be reiterated without Sacriledge. That the ſaid Sacraments confer Grace, and have thoſe effects which the Church hath taught, and that the form and uſe according to which they are adminiſtred to Chriſtians is holy and neceſſary.

5. I further acknowledge, That the holy Maſs is a Sacrifice and Oblation of the true Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, under the forms of Bread and Wine mingled with water; which Bread and Wine under the foreſaid forms are in the Maſs, by the words of Conſecration there pronounced by the Prieſt, tranſubſtantiated and changed into the ſaid Body and Blood of Chriſt; albeit the Qualities and Accidents remain in the ſaid forms after Conſecration; and that the Maſs is profitable and available both for the living and for the dead.

6. I acknowledge and confeſs the concomitance, namely, that in receiving the Body of Chriſt under the form of Bread only, I then likewiſe receive the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt.

7. I confeſs that prayer to, and interceſſion of Saints for the living and for the dead, is holy, good, and profitable for Chriſtians, and in no ſort contrary to the honour of God.

8. That Prayers made in the Church for the faithful departed are beneficial for them, for the remiſſion of ſins, and mitigating of their pains deſerved for the ſame.

9. That there is a Purgatory, where the Souls of ſuch as are detained there are relieved by the prayers of the faithful.

10. I confeſs that honour ought to be given to the Saints reigning with Chriſt in Heaven, that they ought to be prayed to, and that they make interceſſion for us to God, and that their Reliques ought to be worſhipped.

11. That the Commandments and Traditions of the ſaid Church, conſiſting in Divine Ceremonies, are holy and good, as Faſtings, Abſtinence from Meats, Obſervation of Feaſts, and other Eccleſiaſtical Rites, and ought to be obſerved according to the Traditions of the Apoſtles and ancient Fathers, continued from the Primitive times, and ſince brought into the Church by the Decrees of Councels, received thence long ago or lately: Alſo that I will and ought to obey them as preſcribed and authorized by the holy Ghoſt, the ordainer of thoſe things which ſerve to the upholding of Chriſtian Religion, and of the holy Catholick and Apoſtolick Roman Church.

12. I likewiſe believe and conſent to all the Articles concerning Original Sin and Juſtification.

13. I alſo ſtedfaſtly believe that the Pictures of Chriſt, of his holy Mother, and of all the Saints, ought to be retained in the Church, that the uſes of them are very profitable, and that they ought to be worſhipped.

14. I confeſs that the power of Indulgences and Pardons is left to the Church by Jeſus Chriſt, and the uſe of them is greatly available; as alſo I acknowledge the Church of Rome to be the chief Mother of all Churches, and that ſhe hath the holy Ghoſt for her guide: and that all private and pretended Inſpirations contradicting the ſame, are of the Devil the Prince of Diſſention, who would rent in ſunder the ſeamleſs Coat of Jeſus Chriſt.

15. Laſtly, I ſtrictly promiſe to obſerve and keep whatſoever was decreed and ordained by the laſt Councel of Trent, and do promiſe before God and you, never to depart from the Catholick and Apoſtolick Roman Church. And if I ſhall (which God forbid) I ſubmit me to the Correction and Canons of the ſaid Church, made, decreed, and ordained againſt them which fall into Apoſtaſie.

To which Abjuration and Confeſſion I have ſubſcribed with my hand, &c.

Some of thoſe who for fear abjured, afterwards relented; others grew more and more hardened; inſomuch that in going oft to Maſs they took part with the Prieſts and Murtherers, as if they had never made any Profeſſion at all of the Truth.

Perſecution at Bourdeaux the third of October, 1572.

SOon after the Maſſacre at Paris, tidings thereof came to Bourdeaux. Where it happened on a morning as the Proteſtants were taking Boat to hear a Sermon in a Meadow where they were wont to meet, being about three miles from Bourdeaux, between the River of Garonna and the Brook of la Jalla, that the Governour Mcuntferrand commanded them to come back again. He had the skill to cloke the ſame under a plauſible pretence, namely, that they ſhould not be ſet upon there by the Multitude. Anno 1572.

After their return they began to ſet a ſtrong watch and ward at the Gates, ſo as none of the Religion could have leave to paſs forth, unleſs he had a Paſſport from the Governour: yet means was made for their Miniſters eſcape without being perceived; who went to Medoc, expecting what the event of this buſineſs at Bourdeaux would be. Having intelligence of what was executed there, they ſtaid certain days and nights, hiding themſelves in the Rocks and Marſhes, until they had opportunity to take ſhipping, and ſo ſail into England.

Inſtantly thereupon there arrived at Bourdeaux the Lord of Montpeſſat from the King, who at his firſt coming feigned as if he meant to ſettle all things in peace. Yet he wrought under hand in ſuch wiſe with the Governour, that the Maſſacre was reſolved of, to which he was ſolicited by a Jeſuite called Edmund Angier, who out of the Pulpit uſed horribly and bitterly to thunder and inveigh againſt the remiſsneſs and fainthartedneſs of the ſaid Governour. Inſomuch as on S. Michaels day (as they called it) ſpeaking of the Angels by whom God executes his Judgments, he cryed out by the way of interrogation, who executed Gods Judgments upon the Huguenots in Paris? The Angel of God. Who hath executed the like upon other Cities in this Kingdom? The Angel of God. In a word, he never ceaſed in publick and private to ſolicite the Papiſts of Bourdeaux to follow the example of the Pariſians. And then as a croking Raven, day by day he menaced thoſe of the Religion with the approaching of an utter ruin and deſolation, if they did not betimes return into the boſome of the Roman Church, which offer if they now refuſed, they ſhould not be received in when they would.

Many being terrified with theſe threats, as alſo by the intreaties of their Kindred, who ſet before them the imminent danger which hung over their heads, revolted and abjured. The ſaid Sieur of Montpeſſat cauſed Maſter William Blanck, an Advocate in the Court of Parliament, to be called before him, who was Counſellor to him and to his Father in Law; exhorting and perſwading him to return to the Unity of the Roman Church.

Le Blanck anſwered, That he had ſufficiently weighed and compared all things together, before he took upon him the Profeſſion of that Religion which he now profeſſed; which he ſaid was the true Religion, acknowledging the ſame in every reſpect far to exceed the other.

Montpeſſat hearing this, rebuked him ſharply, ſaying, That then he thought himſelf wiſer than the King, and all thoſe that profeſſed as his Majeſty did. Inſomuch as they who ſtood about Le Blanck began to handle him roughly; ſo that he had much ado to eſcape with his life, had not Montpeſſat reſcued him from that danger, becauſe he was come thither upon his word. The Governour ſaid, If he had been there, he would have ſlain him.

The Governour, being preſſed to diſpatch this Maſſacre at Bourdeaux, wiſt not well what to do. For on the one ſide La Sieur de Veſins, with ſundry others, coming from the Court, aſſured him from the King, that he wondred why the buſineſs was deferred ſo long; ſhewing that he could not perform a more acceptable Service unto him than it. On the other ſide Stroſſi, who hovered about Rochel to take it, wiſhed him to be well adviſed what he did, what Command ſoever he had to the contrary: Foreſeeing belike, that if he went forward with his Execution, the Rochellers would have had the ſaid Stroſſi in ſuch a jealouſie, that his Project would have been defeated, and ſo would be no ſmall prejudice to the Kings Affairs; putting him in hope, that he would ſtand between him and all perils.

For the truth is, the Army by Sea, which was prepared againſt Rochel, lying for a time at Bourdeaux, under pretence of conquering Florida, would have been ready enough to have made a general Maſſacre there, but that they Anno 1572. they were afraid the Rochellers would be incenſed thereat.

Yet in concluſion the Governor, having ballanced things on both parts, was perſwaded by the Sieur Montpeſſat to put the maſſacre in execution. To which purpoſe an Oath being taken, a Catalogue was made of ſuch as they meant to ſpoil.

On Saturday then, which was the third of October, 1572. the Governor having aſſembled together all the ſcum of the City to aid and aſſiſt him in ſo barbarous an act, commanded them with other Souldiers to be ready preſently after dinner to put the Kings command into execution. To which they were very forward, coming in their Liveries, attended on by Captains of Tens, to direct them touching that they had to do. The greater part of the Maſſacrers had red Hats given them by Peter Eſtounach, and for the Blood wherewith they dyed their Arms, they were called the Red Band: others called them the Cardinals Band. The Governor commanded them to kill all thoſe of the Religion, eſpecially ſuch as had taken Arms, and not to ſpare one. And himſelf intending to ſhew them the way, went to the Houſe of Maſter John Guilloch, Lord of Obiere, Counſellor in the Court of Parliament to execute the hatred he had long ſince conceived againſt him: who being about to eſcape away out at a back Door, they caught and brought him into the outer Court before his Houſe, in the preſence of the Governor, who with a Sword maſſacred him; which done, his Houſe was wholly pillaged.

At that time they brought a certain Miniſter out of the Conſciergery, who a few days before coming from the Country Saintong to Bourdeaux (for his better ſafety as he thought) was there apprehended and impriſoned: and as ſoon as he was come out of the Priſon they maſſacred him before the Gates of the Palace.

Maſter William Savins Houſe (a Counſellor of the ſaid Parliament, who was one of the Religion) was forced open, pillaged and ſpoiled, and himſelf cruelly murthered. His Clark called Simonet, ſeeing his Maſter about to be maſſacred, embraced and comforted him: and being asked whether he were of the Religion, he anſwered yea, and would dye with his Maſter for the ſame.

Thus they were ſlain one in anothers Arms.

The cruel Martyrdom of Du Tour, a Deacon of the Proteſtant Church.

A Deacon of the Reformed Church called Du Tour, an old Man, who in the days of his ignorance had been a Prieſt in the Popiſh Church, being ſick in his Bed, was haled forth into the open Street; of whom it being demanded, whether he would go to Maſs, and thereby ſave his Life; he freely anſwered, No, eſpecially now drawing ſo neer his end, both in regard of his years and grievous ſickneſs: I hope (ſaith he) I ſhall not ſo far forget the eternal Salvation of my Soul, as for fear of death to prolong this life for a few days; for ſo I ſhould buy a ſhort term of life at too dear a rate. They hearing him ſay ſo, maſſacred him inſtantly.

It was lamentable to ſee the poor Proteſtants wandring up and down, not knowing where to ſave their lives: ſome were rejected of their own Parents and Kinſfolks, who ſhut their Doors againſt them, pretending as if they knew them not; others were betrayed and delivered up by thoſe to whoſe truſt they had committed themſelves: many were ſaved even by Prieſts and others, from whom a Man would have expected no ſuch ſecurity. Some were ſaved by their very Enemies, whoſe hearts abhorred ſuch deteſtable outrages.

All the City was full of terrors and horrible threats againſt thoſe of the Religion, ſaying, that the Kings commandment was, that he would not have ſo much as one of them left in his Kingdom. And if any refuſed to go to Maſs, that an Hole ſhould be digged for him in the Earth, in which he ſhould forthwith be buried without any more ado.

Scoffing Ballads ſung in contempt of the Admiral of Chaſtillon and other Proteſtants.

NEar the Palace and thorowout the City were deſamatory Libels ſung againſt the Admiral of Chaſtillon and the Huguenots. In which regard, ſuch in whoſe Hearts God had reſerved but any ſparkle of Piety, were ſo terrified and vexed with their Blaſphemies, that the condition of the maſſacred ſeemed to be much better than theirs who were left alive; who heard and ſaw thoſe things without ceaſing, which to an honeſt mind was more bitter than death it ſelf.

The Governor was very careful after the Maſſacre was ended, to advertiſe the Sieur Montpeſſat, by a Gentleman, of all things which had paſſed, according to the promiſe he had made unto him. Which Montpeſſat was ſuddenly ſurpriſed with a diſeaſe; wherein feeling Gods hand heavy upon him, he uttered ſuch lamentable outcries, that his Blood and Soul were poured out at once, a Judgment juſtly inflicted upon him, for all the innocent Blood which he had ſhed without a cauſe.

Montpeſſat ſuddenly ſurpriſed with a ſtrange diſeaſe.

The Judgment of God upon one Vincent.

THe like Judgment of God fell not long after upon another of theſe Maſſacrers called Vincent, Advocate of the Court, one who had had his hand deeply dyed in this Bloody enterpriſe, not ſticking to boaſt that with his own hands he had murthered Agraulet door-keeper of the Court. This Man alſo fell dangerouſly ſick, but in the end recovering again, and as he thought being in good health, he told ſome of his friends that he felt his Arms ſtrong enough to handle his Coutlax or ſhort Sword as well as ever he had done. But within a while after he was overtaken by the hand of God, with ſuch a flux of bleeding at his noſe, as could not be reſtrained nor diverted by any of the remedies that were then uſed. It was an hideous ſight to ſee him ſtill bowing his head over a baſon full of Blood, which without ceaſing iſſued out of his noſe and mouth.

This Bloody wretch then, who breathed forth nothing but Blood in the time of his health, nor could have his eyes ſatisfied with ſeeing the Blood of Innocents poured out, was forced whilſt he lived to ſee himſelf drenched in his own Blood, even until his laſt gaſp.

Vincent dyes drenched in his own Blood.

Another of them, thirſting after Blood as much as any of the reſt, was taken with ſuch a ſwelling in all the parts of his Body, that there was ſcarcely to be diſcerned in him the form of a Man, and ſo continued ſwelling more and more, till at the length he burſt in ſunder.

Another of this wretched crew ſwelled ſo long that he burſt in ſunder.

The Governor himſelf who was the chief Actor in this Maſſacre, about two years after gathering all the Forces he could to beſiege Genſes, with an intention to do wonders there, preſenting himſelf ready for the purpoſe, was choſen to go in the rank of five and twenty or thirty brave Gentlemen, and he only ſhot with an Harquebuſe dyed. The reſt by and by retiring came off ſafe, without doing any further exploit.

God meets with the Governor himſelf at length.

Thus we have taken a view of the extream afflictions and oppreſſions of the Reformed Churches in many parts of France, wherein within a few weeks well nigh thirty thouſand were put to death.

Thirty thouſand Maſſacred within a few weeks in the Cities of France

Now in the year 1573. many places whither the faithful were fled for refuge, were aſſayled by open war; namely, in the firſt place that of Sancerre, the Hiſtory whereof you have here in a ſhort view preſented before you in that which followeth.

A Relation of the extream famine which happened in the City of Sancerre in France, being beſieged with five hundred Horſmen and about five thouſand Footmen the ninth of January, 1573. with their deliverance.

BEing (ſaith the Story) compaſſed about with irreconcileable Enemies, from about the beginning of April; the want of victuals having cauſed them to gather together all the Aſſes and Mules they had in the City, they were eaten up in leſs than a month.

The Sieur of Chaſtre was then General of the Kings Army.

Then they came to Horſes, Cats, Rats, Mouls, Mice and Dogs. After theſe were ſpent, they fell to eat Oxe and Cow-hides, Sheep-skins, parchment, old ſhooes, Bullocks, and horſe-hoofs, horns, and lanthorns, ropes, and horſe-harneſs, leather girdles, &c.

and

In the end of June the third part of the beſieged had not Bread to eat. Such as could get hemp-ſeed, ground it, or ſtamped it in Mortars, and made Bread of it, the like they did with all ſorts of herbs, mingling the ſame with bran if they had it. There they eat meal of chaff, nut-ſhels, and of ſlate, excrements of horſes, and men, yea, the offal which lay in the Streets was not ſpared.

The nine and twentieth of July, a poor Man and his Wife were executed for having eaten the Head, Brains, and Entrails of a young Child about three years old which dyed of hunger; having made ready the other parts to eat at another meal. An old Woman lodging in their Houſe, eating a part of this mournful dyet, dyed in Priſon, within a few hours after her impriſonment.

They were found guilty of other offences; but this aggravated the ſame the more. All Children under twelve years of age dyed. It was lamentable to hear the pittiful voices uttered by poor Parents for the miſery wherein their eyes beheld their languiſhing and dying Infants.

To which purpoſe you may take notice here of a memorable accident. A boy of ten years old, being ready to yield up the Ghoſt, ſeeing his Father and Mother weeping over him (whoſe Arms and Leggs when they handled, felt as if they had been dryed ſticks) ſaid unto them, wherefore weep ye thus, in ſeeing me famiſhed to death? Mother, ſaith he, I ask you no bread, I know you have none: but ſeeing it is Gods will I muſt dye this death, let us be thankful for it. Did not the holy Man Lazarus dye of Famine? Have I not read it in my Bible? In uttering theſe with the like ſpeeches he yielded up the ghoſt the thirtieth day of July.

That all the People dyed not of famine in the end of this Month, it was by reaſon of certain Horſes which were reſerved for ſervice if need ſhould be, and ſix Kine which were left to give milk for the ſuſtenance of young Infants. Theſe Beaſts were killed, and their fleſh ſold for the relief of ſuch as were living, with a little Corn, which by ſtealth ſome brought into the City; ſo that a pound of Wheat was ſold for half a Crown.

There dyed by ſight in Sancerre but eighty four perſons, but of the Famine more than five hundred. Many Souldiers getting forth as they could out of the City, flying from the Famine, choſe rather to dye by the Sword of the Enemy; whereof ſome were ſlain, others impriſoned, and the reſt put to death by the Executioner.

But when all help of Man failed, the King having ſworn that he would make them eat up one another, the King of Kings delivered them by his wonderful providence. For at this inſtant the Embaſſadors from Poland came into France to accept the Duke of Anjou for their King, at whoſe intreaty (which could not well be denied) poor Sancerre, more than half famiſhed, was now ſet at liberty by raiſing the ſiege, who otherwiſe were determined to leave their Bones there, rather than to yield themſelves into their Enemies hands, in regard they had oft threatned them with a general Maſſacre. Whereas now by the Kings appointment they were permitted to paſs out of the City armed; if any would tarry, that they ſhould not be moleſted: having liberty granted them to diſpoſe of their affairs, as they pleaſed, with promiſe of conſerving the honour and chaſtities as well of Virgins, as Women, &c.

Of this ſiege Marſhal Montluc ſaid, that it was great, long, and fightly: but though well aſſailed yet better defended.

Now let us come to the City of Rochel, which being at this inſtant ſtrongly beſieged by the forces of France, both by Sea and Land, with about forty and fifty Thouſand Men, was yet in the end alſo delivered, though not without many hot conflicts, by the immediate hand of God; namely thus: The Embaſſador of Poland arriving in France the ſeventeenth day of June, a truce was made on the ſudden, Articles of peace drawn, and ſent to the King, who conſented to them, and returned anſwer in form of an Edict, granting to thoſe of Rochel, Montauban, Niſmes, and others which ſtood upon their defence, liberty for the exerciſes of Religion; the reſt to live peaceably in their Houſes, and therein to miniſter the Sacrament of Baptiſm, and Marriage as they had wont to do, ſo as their Aſſemblies exceeded not the number of ten, beſides the Parents.

He reſtored to the Rochellers and others their Rights and Priviledges, letting fall all the Decrees given out againſt them, approving of their defenſive War; giving them leave, according to their ancient cuſtom, to retain in their Cities, Towers, and Fortreſſes, Men and Munition, yea, to receive in Governors among them, provided that they were ſuch as they had no cauſe to ſuſpect or except againſt.

By vertue of this Edict, upon the tenth day of July, about ten of the Clock in the forenoon, the Sieur of Biron entred into the City at the gate called de Coigne, with an Herald of Arms, and four of the Kings Trumpeters (at which hour peace was proclaimed in the moſt eminent places thereof) accompanied with the Lieutenant of the City, and with the Lord of Villiers. After which, dining at the Majors Houſe, he ſoon after retired, being conducted along till he came without the City.

The ſame day many ſmall Veſſels laden with Biskets, Corn, Meal, Fiſh, and other proviſion entred into the Haven. At this ſiege the Duke D. Amaule loſt his life, with Coſſeins, who had broken into the Admirals Lodging, and began the Maſſacre at Paris: beſides many great Lords, Gentlemen, Captains, Lieutenants, and Antients, to the number of threeſcore, the greater part of which, having their hands embrued in thoſe other bloody Maſſacres, being come thither received their reward, namely, either preſent death, or wounds ſo incurable that they eſcaped not with life.

A certain Gentleman Nephew to Puygaillard Governour of Angiers, bragging that he had been one who murthered the Admiral, ſhewing a ſhort Sword which he had uſed in that ſlaughter, threatned the Rochellers, but God cut him ſhort alſo, the ſiege of Sancerre.

One thing ought not here to be paſſed over in ſilence, to wit, the proviſion of victuals which God furniſhed this beſieged people withal, when all other proviſions began to fail them, namely, an infinite number of ſmall Fiſhes never ſeen before in that Haven, which every day yielded themſelves to the mercie of the neceſſitous Inhabitants. But as ſoon as the Edict was publiſhed, and the Rochellers ſet at liberty by the arriving of the Poliſh Embaſſadors, theſe Sea fiſhes withdrew themſelves.

Although this relation following, touching another ſiege of this City of Rochel, ſutes nothing at all with the order of time, happening as it did in the year 1628. yet foraſmuch as it ſeems to have ſome affinity with the terrible famine wherewith both the City of Sancerre and it were afflicted; let not the Reader be offended for placing the ſame here ſomwhat out of place, being a thing ſo worthy of note.

An extract of a Letter written on board the Saint George his Majeſties Ship in Saint Georges Iſland.

THere dyed in this ſiege of Rochel, the thirtieth of October, 1628, ſixteen thouſand perſons, the reſt enduring a world of miſeries; moſt of all their food being hides, leather, and old gloves: other proviſions being very ſcarce were at an exceſſive rate; viz.

A Buſhel of Wheat	xx. li.
A pound of Bread	xx. s.
A quarter of Mutton	vi.li.odd Money.
A pound of Butter	xx. s.
An Egge	viii.s.
An ounce of Sugar	ii.s. vi. d.
A dryed Fiſh	xx.s.
A pint of Wine	xx. s.
A pound of Grapes	iii.s.
A pint of Milk.	xxx.s.

Alſo it is reported, that through the famine, young Maids of fourteen or ſixteen years of age did look like old Women of an hundred years old, The famine was ſuch, that the poor people would cut off the buttocks of the dead as they lay in the Churchyard unburied. All the Engliſh that came out looked like Anatomies. They lived two Months with nothing but Cow-hides and Goats-skins boiled; the Dogs, Cats, Mice, and Frogs being all ſpent. And this with a world of other miſeries did they ſuffer, in hope of being relieved by others. Thus much I thought good to let you underſtand.

Anno 1588.

A Deſcription of the manner of the death of Charles the ninth, King of France.

IN the year 1574. Charles the ninth, King of France (in the time of whoſe Reign theſe forenamed execrable Maſſacres were executed) fell ſick; which ſickneſs ſeiſed upon him before his Brother the Duke of Anjou took his voyage into Poland: from which during the Winter ſeaſon he obtained ſome recovery. But that which then ſeemed to lye hidden brake forth again afreſh in the Spring; ſo as this Prince, after he had languiſhed three whole Months, viz. February, March, and April, drew his Phyſitians to a conſultation about the ſtate of his Body; who in the end concluded to purge and let him blood. But theſe remedies took not ſuch an effect as the King and they expected; for he ſtill waſted and conſumed away, being in the flower of his Age, to the wonder of many. Some gueſſed he had taken a ſurfet either in eating or drinking; others, that he was enchanted.

The thirteenth of May he dyed, in the preſence of his Mother, and of the Cardinals of Bourbon and Ferrare, &c.

He was born on the twenty ſeventh day of June, 1550. He began his Reign the firſt of December, 1560. and ſo Reigned, as that it gives to Poſterity juſt cauſe both of admiration and deteſtation. Thus this Prince lived not forty years fully compleat. Now if any deſire to be further ſatisfied as touching the manner of his death, I refer them to that which Maſter John Fox hath written thereof not many lines before the concluſion of this Book, commonly called the Book of Martyrs.

A Note touching a Bull of Pope Sixtus the fifth, wherein the King of Navarre, and the Prince of Conde were declared Hereticks, &c. with the Cenſure thereof by the Parliament of Paris.

IN September 1585. Pope Sixtus the fifth, by a Bull ſent from Rome, cundemned the King of Navarre, and the Prince of Conde for Hereticks, excommunicated them, degrading them and their Succeſſors fom their dignities, eſpecially laying claim to the Crown of France, abſolving their Subjects from their Oath of Allegiance, and expoſing their Countries for a prey to them that could firſt ſubdue them.

The Court of Parliament of Paris made a notable Remonſtrance to the King concerning theſe Bulls, in the which they ſought to maintain the priviledges of the Gallicane Church. Among other things, theſe words that follow are very remarkable. The Court thinks that theſe Buls are ſet forth in a ſtile altogether of a new ſtamp, and ſo contrary to the modeſty of former Popes, that they can in no ſore diſcern therein the ſpirit of a Succeſſor of the Apoſtles. And therefore (as the Deputies of the ſaid Court added) we can neither find by our Regiſters, nor by any Antiquity, that the Princes of France ever ſubjected themſelves ſo far to the Authority of the Pope, nor that the Subjects have taken ſuch knowledge of the Religion of their Princes. The Court therefore cannot determine ought thereupon, unleſs firſt of all the Pope can cauſe his pretended right in tranſlation of Kingdoms, to appear, which Kingdoms were eſtabliſhed and ordained of God, before the name of a Pope was heard of in the World: that he manifeſts not to us what Title he hath to intermeddle with the matter of the Succeſſion of a young and vigorous Prince, who, for ought the Pope knows, may have his ſucceſſion yet in his loyns: that he ſhews not with what appearance of juſtice or equity he ſhould deny that priviledge which is allowed to ſuch as are accuſed of Hereſie againſt the Decrees of antient Canons, namely that no Man ought to be held as an Heretick, until his defence be fully and freely heard, till he have received often admonitions from many Synods, and thereupon ſentenced by a Counce, lawfully aſſembled.

Further they added, that ſeeing the Pope in ſtead of inſtruction, breaths forth nothing in his Buls but deſtruction, changing his Shepherds crook into a terrible Thunderbolt, rather to ſcatter then ſweetly to call the erring flock into the Boſom of the Catholick Church, the Court cannot ſafely admit of, or entertain a Bull ſo pernitious and oppoſite to the general good of all the Chriſtian World, and to the Soveraignty of the Crown of France; yea, they further were of opinion, that this Bull deſerved to be thrown into the Fire and burned, and the Sollicitors or upholders thereof for examples ſake to be ſeverely chaſtiſed; humbly beſeeching the King to maintain his Edicts in his own Kingdom in peace.

This Remonſtrance took ſmall effect; for not long after, the King being ſolicited by the Principal of the League, ſet forth a Declaration the ſeventh of October, upon the Edict publiſhed in July next before going; wherein having confiſcated the Body and Goods of thoſe of the Religion with their Aſſociates, who in any Province had taken Arms againſt the fury of the League, it was ordained, that thoſe of the Religion within ſix Months were to depart out of the Kingdom, unleſs within fifteen days fully accompliſhed after the ſaid Declaration they ſhould abjure.

The Parliament, ſuffering themſelves to be carried down by the violence of this ſtream, accepted and admitted of this Edict. The Princes framed an oppoſition againſt the Popes Bull, appealing therefrom, as a wrong done unto them, offering to make it appear in a free and lawful Councel, that the Pope had malitiouſly belied them, in calling them Hereticks; ſo as if he refuſed this fair and lawful courſe by them propounded, they would hold and eſteem him for that great Antichriſt, and would proclaim an open irreconcileable War againſt him. This oppoſition was affixed and ſet up at Rome the ſeventh day of November.

Not long after, among thoſe of the Religion which were impriſoned, others were more ſeverely handled. Among many, take notice here of two Honourable Women, whoſe memory ought to be celebrated in this Hiſtory of the Martyrs; namely, Radagonde Daughter of Maſter John Foucoult, Attourney in the Parliament of Paris, Widow, of the Age of fourty years, and Claude Foucoult her Siſter, a Virgin about thirty ſix, who were apprehended the nine and twentieth of October 1585. the one of the Village of Pierrepit near Paris, and the other in the Suburbs of Saint German, and brought Priſoners into Chaſtelet becauſe they denied to go to Maſs, and would not abjure and forſake the true Religion. Being ſevered one from the other in Priſon, they were examined upon ſundry Articles * to which they made their direct anſwer according to the Word of God.

Then being put together, they were accuſed for diſabeying the Kings commandment, which was, that thoſe of the Religion were either to depart the Kingdom by ſuch a time, or elſe abjure; They anſwered, that they were willing to leave the Kingdom, if they might obtain a convenient time to take order about that little which they had there; but refuſing to yield to their requeſt, they were ſhut up again, and the ſeventh of November in the preſence of the Lieutenant, as alſo of the Advocate for the King, and a Sorboniſt, they pleaded their Innocency. Theſe Men getting no advantage againſt them, but being rather confounded by the Wiſdom of Gods Spirit, ſpeaking by theſe two Siſters, went and complained to the King, that they were obſtinate Hereticks. This was in the beginning of the year, 1588.

* To wit, touching the ſupper of the Lord, Prayer to Saints, Prayer for the dead, & about abſtaining from meats.

They continued in Priſon many weeks, being cumbred with many diſputes, yet remained unſhaken. The Friday before Eaſter the King himſelf was to ſee them, aſking them whether they would conform themſelves to the Catholick Apoſtolick Roman Church (as he called it.) They with ſuch reverence and obeiſance, as became them, gave him their Reaſons why they could not ſo do, confirming the ſame by texts of Holy Scripture. His ſecond queſtion was, why they had not obeyed his laſt Edict. The Widow anſwered, Sir, ſaith ſhe, I have three ſmall Children to care for; and whereas your Majeſty allotted thoſe of the Religion the tearm of fifteen days after ſix Months ended to depart the Kingdom; I have done my utmoſt to take up ſuch Monies as were due unto me, but thoſe who were indebted unto me, neglected to pay me. Beſides, he that kept my Vineyards of Pierrepit, to quit himſelf of me, accuſed me of Hereſie, cauſing my Siſter and my ſelf to be here impriſoned, where we have lien ſix Months, and if ſo be our Petition preſented by us find no acceptance in your Majeſties ſight, we Henry the third.

moſt humbly beſeech you to grant that we may be freed out of Priſon, and we will be gone inſtantly out of the Kingdom according to your Majeſties Edict.

The date is paſt, ſaid the King, nor will I ſhew you any favour, unleſs you will promiſe to go to Maſs. He was much diſpleaſed in ſeeing their conſtancy. Now at the ſame time there was preſented before him one ſirnamed Richelot, who had been apprehended that very day in which the Women were taken for the cauſe of Religion, unto whom the King uſed not many words: only, in concluſion he ſaid, there wanted nothing but fagots to burn him. This Richelot abjured, that day in which theſe two Siſters were executed. The King had five or ſix Sorboniſts, which attended on him there, who offered to reaſon with the Priſoners by occaſion of a word ſpoken by the Widow. But the King preventing it, ſaid, we are not come hither to diſpute, let them be laid waſt, and none ſuffered to come to them.

Within half an hour after, the Duke of Longueville came to viſit them, ſaying, he was ſorry for their affliction, counſelling them to go to Maſs, alledging, it is written, Thou ſhalt obey thy Prince, and if he therein force you to it againſt your Conſcience, he ſhall anſwer for it; adding, that they were to remember their Sex, and therefore to be teachable upon the point of obedience. They anſwered, that no earthly Potentate had any warrant to command Chriſtians to ſin againſt their Conſciences.

They further beſought him to be a means for them to the King, that they might be delivered: but all the anſwer he gave them was this, That if they would not return, the King would not deliver them: alſo there was great likelihood, after their long detenſion in Priſon, that they muſt be executed in the end.

The next day being Eaſter Even, the Queen with the Dutcheſs of Joyeuſe came into Chaſtelet to viſit the Priſoners. But in ſtead of ſpeaking to the two Siſters her ſelf, ſhe ſent unto them a wicked Apoſtata, called Mathew de Launy, who being a Miniſter turned Popiſh Prieſt, and one whom the League made no ſmall uſe of; who loading theſe honourable Siſters with injuries and reproachful ſpeeches, calling them Dogs and Devils incarnate, and worthy to be burned, ſo left them and never came any more unto them. Soon after the day of the Barricadoes, which is a defence made of Earth and Stones heaped up, ſerving to ſtop a Street or any paſſage, the Judges of Chaſtellot adjudged them to be hanged, and their Bodies to be burned to aſhes. From which Sentence they appealed to the Court, and were brought into the Conſciergery, which is the name of a common Goal belonging to Paris or any other Priſon.

Queen Elizabeths picture burned in Paris.

On the Even before Saint John Baptiſts day in the Month of June, the common people in Paris making Fires as they were wont to do, amongſt other inſolencies, burnt in divers parts of the City a picture repreſenting the Queen of England.

The next day the Curates and Preachers began in their Sermons to thunder, ſaying, That it was not enough to burn the pictures of Hereticks, but to burn the bodies of the obſtinate Priſoners: which ſo inraged the tumultuous ſort of people, that the day following, flocking together into the Court of the Palace, they threatned the Preſidents and the Counſel, that ſome miſchief ſhould follow unleſs they condemned theſe two Priſoners to dye. A gentle anſwer was returned to this factious crue, with promiſe alſo that the buſineſs ſhould not long be delayed.

The next day the eldeſt Son of Radegonde preſented a Petition to the Dutcheſs of Nemours, Daughter to the late Lady of Ferrara. Her Grace ſolicited the Duke of Guiſe her Son, for the Priſoners: whoſe anſwer was, That his coming to Paris was not to petition the King in favour of thoſe of the Religion; and if he would do ſo (in regard of the Services which the Priſoners had done his Grandfather) yet he could not, fearing leſt the mad multitude might ſet upon him.

The eight and twentieth day of the ſame Month of June, the Court having confirmed the Sentence given at Chaſtellot, ſent them back thither to be executed, ſo as about noon they were gagged, becauſe the Maid profeſſed, that if they brought her into any Idols Temple, ſhe would extend her Voice ſo loud againſt the ſame, that every one ſhould hear it. About three of the Clock they were led as ſheep to the ſlaughter, where they conſtantly perſiſted in the profeſſion of the true Religion. Anno 1588.

The Widow being aſcended the Ladder ſhook out of her hands a woodden Croſs, which they had by force affixed thereto, whereat the multitude were ſo provoked, that they began to throw ſtones and ſtaves at her, ſo as the Hangman having turned her off the Ladder cut the Rope by and by, letting her fall half dead into the Fire, wherein ſhe yielded up her Soul into the hands of God, as alſo her Siſter did.

Being now come to the year 1588. it gives us juſt occaſion to call to mind that miraculous deliverance of our noble Queen and Country, from the intended invaſion of the Spaniards the ſame year. The memorial whereof, that it might the rather be continued to the Ages ſucceeding, deſerves by way of Hiſtory here to be inſerted as in its due and proper place. Of which deliverance it may truly be ſaid (all things conſidered) that it was the Lords doing, and it is marvellous in our eyes. The true relation whereof here followeth.

A brief diſcourſe touching the great preparations made by the Spaniards, and other Romiſh Catholicks, for that invincible Navy, intended for the invading and ſurpriſing of the Realm of England, together with their utter overthrow.

HEr Majeſty of England having had intelligence from ſundry places of the great and diligent preparation of the King of Spain in divers parts both by Sea and Land, not only of the ſtrongeſt Ships in all places within his Dominions, but of all ſorts of proviſion neceſſary for ſo mighty a Fleet, as he intended to ſet forth; and theſe rumours of War, which before were but ſleight, daily increaſing, at laſt it was certainly confirmed by the news on all ſides, that in Spain there was an invincible Navy preparing againſt England; that the moſt famous Captains in Military knowledge, and the beſt Souldiers were ſent for into Spain, from Italy, Sicily, yea from America. For the Pope and ſome religious Spaniards, and Engliſh fugitives, now recalled the Spaniard to the cogitation of ſurpriſing of England, which purpoſe was interrupted by the Portugal Wars. They exhorted him earneſtly to do God this ſervice, that had done ſo much for him; now that he enjoyed Portugal with the Weſt-Indies, and many rich Iſlands, to add England to all were an eſpecial ſervice of God, fit for his Catholick Majeſty. By this means he might add theſe flouriſhing Kingdoms to his Empire, and ſo keep the Lowcountries in peace, and ſecure the Navigations to both Indies. That the preparations of Spain were ſo great that no power was able to reſiſt it. They made him believe that it was an eaſier matter to overcome England, than to overcome the Dutchland, becauſe the Navigation from Spain to England was much ſhorter, than to the Netherlands. And by ſurprizing of England the other would eaſily follow.

The Spaniſh Navy prepared to invade England.

Conſultation about the beſt way and means how to oppreſs England.

Hereupon the Conſultation began to be had, of the beſt way and means to oppreſs England. Alvarus Baſſanus, the Marqueſs of S. Croſs, who was chief commander in the Navy, adviſed firſt to make ſure ſome part of Holland or Zealand, by the Land forces of the Duke of Parma, and by ſending before him ſome Spaniſh Ships, ſo to take ſome place on a ſudden, where the Spaniſh Navy might have a receptable, and from whence the Invaſion might with convenience begin. For in the Engliſh Sea, which is troubleſome, the Winds oft changing, and the Tides unknown, the Navy could not be in ſafety. With him agreed Parma who much urged this Expedition. Yet others diſliked this Counſel, as a matter of great difficulty and danger, of long time, of much labour, of great expence and uncertain ſucceſs. And that neither ſecretly nor openly it could be performed, and eaſily hindred by the Engliſh. Theſe thought that with the ſame labour and expences England might be won: and the Victory would be ſure, if a well prepared Army from Spain might, with a ſtrong Navy, be landed on Thames ſide, and of a ſudden, ſurpriſe London the chief City, by an unexpected aſſault. This ſeemed a thing moſt eaſie to be effected.

The

Anno 1588.

The Duke of Parma alſo in Flanders, by the commandment of the Spaniard, built Ships, and a great company of ſmall broad Veſſels, each one able to tranſport thirty horſe, with bridges fitted for them ſeverally; And hired mariners from the Eaſt part of Germany. And provided long pieces of Wood, ſharpned at the end, and covered with Iron, with hooks on the one ſide; And twenty thouſand Veſſels, with an huge number of fagots, and placed an Army ready in Flanders, of 103. companies of Foot, and four thouſand Horſmen. Among theſe ſeven hundred Engliſh fugitives, which were had of all other in moſt contempt. Neither was Stanley reſpected or heard, who was ſet over the Engliſh, nor Weſtmerland, nor any other who offered their help: but for their impiety towards their own Country were ſhut out from all conſultations, and as Men unominous rejected, not without deteſtation. And Pope Sixtus the fifth, that in ſuch a purpoſe would not be wanting, ſent Cardinal Alan into Flanders, and renewed the Buls declaratory of Pius 5. and Gregory the thirteenth. He excommunicateth the Queen, depoſeth her, abſolveth her Subjects from all allegiance and as if it had been againſt the Turks and Infidels, he ſet forth in print a Conceit, wherein he beſtowed plenary indulgences, out of the treaſure of the Church (beſides a Million of Gold, or ten hundred thouſand Ducats, to be diſtributed, (the one half in hand, the other half when either England or ſome famous Haven therein ſhould be won) upon all them that would joyn their help againſt England. By which means the Marqueſs of Burgow, of the Houſe of Auſtria, the Duke of Paſtrana, Armady Duke of Savoy, Veſpaſian, Gonzaga, John Medices, and divers other Noblemen were drawn into theſe wars.

The Duke of Parma plays his part.

The Pope excommunicates the Queen, &c.

Queen Elizabeth, that ſhe might not be ſurpriſed at unawares, prepared as great a Navy as ſhe could, and with ſingular care and providence maketh ready all things neceſſary for War. And ſhe her ſelf, which was ever moſt judicious in diſcerning of Mens wits and aptneſs, and moſt happy in making choice, when ſhe made it out of her own Judgment, and not at the commandment of others, deſigned the beſt and moſt ſerviceable to each ſeveral imployment. Over the whole Navy ſhe appointed the Lord Admiral Charles Howard, in whom ſhe repoſed much truſt; and ſent him to the Weſt parts of England, where Captain Drake, whom ſhe made Viceadmiral, joyned with him. She commanded Henry Seimor, the ſecond Son to the Duke of Somerſet, to watch upon the Belgicke Shore with forty Engliſh and Dutch Ships, that the Duke of Parma might not come out with his forces. Albeit ſome were of opinion, that the enemy was to be expected, and ſet upon by land forces, according as it was upon deliberation reſolved, in the time of Henry the eighth, when the French brought a great Navy upon the Engliſh Shore.

The Queen ſelects out ſuch able & ſerviceable Men as were fitteſt to undertake ſo great imployment.

For the land fight, there were placed on the South Shores twenty thouſand: And two armies beſides were muſtered of the choiceſt Men for War. The one of theſe which conſiſted of 1000. horſe, twenty two thouſand foot, was the Earl of Leiceſter ſet over, and camped at Tilbury on the ſide of Thames. For the enemy was reſolved firſt to ſet upon London. The other Army was governed by the Lord Hunſdon, conſiſting of thirty four thouſand foot, and two thouſand horſe, to guard the Queen.

Order taken about the land fight.

The Lord Grey, Sir Francis Knolls, Sir John Norrice, Sir Richard Bingham, Sir Roger Williams, Men famouſly known for military experience, were choſen to confer of the land fight. Theſe thought fit that all thoſe places ſhould be fortified, with Men and Munition, which were commodious to land in, either out of Spain, or out of Flanders, as Milford Haven, Falmouth, Plimouth, Portland, the Iſle of Wight, Portſmouth, the open ſide of Kent called the Downs, the mouth of Thames, Harwich, Yarmouth, Hull, &c. That trained ſouldiers through all the maritime Provinces ſhould meet upon warning given, to defend theſe places: that they ſhould, by their beſt means and power, hinder the Enemy to take land; if he ſhould take land, then ſhould they waſt the Country all about, and ſpoil every thing that might be of any uſe to the enemy, that ſo he might find no more victuals then what he brought upon his Shoulders with him. And that by continual Alarums the Enemy ſhould find no reſt day day or night. But they ſhould not try any Battel, until divers Captains were met together with their companies. That one Captain might be named in every Shire which might command.

A Counſel about peace pretended on the Adverſaries part, whilſt they intended to make war.

Two years before, the Duke of Parma conſidering how hard a matter it was to end the Belgick War, ſo long as it was continually nouriſhed and ſupported with ayd from the Queen, he moved for a treaty of peace, by the means of Sir James Croft one of the Privy Counſel, a Man deſirous of peace, and Andrew Loe a Dutchman, and profeſſed that the Spaniard had delegated Authority to him for this purpoſe. But the Queen fearing that there was ſome cunning in this ſeeking of peace, that the friendſhip between her and the confederate Princes might be diſſolved, and that ſo they might ſecretly be drawn to the Spaniard; ſhe deferred that treaty for ſome time. But now, that the wars on both ſides prepared might be turned away; ſhe was content to treat of peace; but ſo, as ſtill holding the Weapons in her hand.

It is the honor of a King, ſaith Solomon, to ſearch out a thing. Delegates ſent into Flanders about a treaty of peace.

For this purpoſe in February, Delegates were ſent into Flanders, the Earl of Darby, the Lord Cobham, Sir James Croft, Doctor Dale, and Doctor Rogers. Theſe were received with all humanity on the Dukes behalf, and they preſently ſent Dr. Dale to him, that a place might be appointed for their treating, and that they might ſee the Authority delegated to him by the Spaniſh King. He appointed the place near to Oſtend, not in Oſtend, which then was holden of Engliſh againſt the King. His Authority delegated he promiſed then to ſhew, when they were once met together. He wiſhed them to make good ſpeed in the buſineſs, leſt ſomwhat might fall out in the mean time which might trouble the motions of peace. Richardotus ſpake ſomwhat more plainly, That he knew not what in this interim ſhould be done againſt England.

Not long after, Doctor Rogers was ſent to the Prince, by an expreſs commandment from the Queen, to know the truth, whether the Spaniard had reſolved to invade England, which he and Richardotus ſeemed to ſignifie. He affirmed, that he did not ſo much as think of the invaſion of England, when he wiſhed that the buſineſs might proceed with ſpeed: and was in a manner offended with Richardotus, who denied that ſuch words fell from him.

The twelfth of April the Count Aremberg, Champigny, Richardotus, D. Maeſius, and Garnier, delegated from the Prince of Parma, met with the Engliſh, and yielded to them the honour both in walking and ſitting. And when they affirmed that the Duke had full Authority to treat of peace, the Engliſh moved, that firſt a truce might be made. Which they denied; alledging that that thing muſt needs be hurtful to the Spaniard, who had for ſix Months maintained a great Army, which might not be diſmiſſed upon a truce, but upon an abſolute peace. The Engliſh urged, That a Truce was promiſed before they came into Flanders. The Spaniard againſt that held, That ſix Months ſince a Truce was promiſed; which they granted, but was not admitted. Neither was it in the Queens power to undertake a Truce for Holland and Zealand, who dayly attempted Hoſtility. The Engliſh moved inſtantly, that the Truce might be general for all the Queens Territories, and for the Kingdom of Scotland: but they would have it but for four Dutch Towns which were in the Queens hands; that is, Oſtend, Fluſhing, Bergen up Zom, and the Briel; and theſe only during the Treating, and twenty days after; and that in the mean time it might be lawful for the Queen to invade Spain, or for the Spaniard to invade England, either from Spain or Flanders. At laſt, when the Engliſh could not obtain an abſtinence from arms, and could by no means ſee the Charter by which the Duke of Parma was authoriſed to treat of peace; they propoſed theſe things, That the antient leagues between the Kings of England and the Dukes of Burgondy might be renewed and confirmed; That all the Dutch might fully enjoy their own priviledges; That with freedom of Conſcience they might ſerve God; That the Spaniſh and foreign Souldiers might be put out of Dutchland, that neither the Dutch nor their neighbouring nations might fear them. If theſe things might be granted, the Queen would come to equal conditions concerning the Towns which now ſhe held (that all might know, that ſhe took up arms not for her own gain, but for the neceſſary defence both of her ſelf and of the Dutch) ſo that the Money which is owing therefore be repayed. To the which they anſwered, that for renewing the old Leagues there ſhould be no difficulty, when they might have a friendly conference of that thing. That concerning the priviledges of the Dutch, there was no cauſe why forraign Princes ſhould take care, which priviledges were moſt favourably granted not only to Provinces and Towns reconciled, but even to ſuch as by force of Arms are brought into Subjection. That forreign Souldiers were held upon urgent neceſſity, when as Holland, England, and France were all in Arms.

her

Touching thoſe Towns taken from the King of Spain, and the repaying of the money, they anſwered, That the Spaniard might demand as many Myriads of Crowns to be from the Queen repayed him, as the Belgicke War hath coſt him ſince the time that ſhe hath favoured and protected the Dutch againſt him.

At this time Doctor Dale by the Queens command, going to the Duke of Parma, did gently expoſtulate with him touching a Book printed there, ſet out lately by Cardinal Allen, wherein he exhorts the Nobles and People of England and Ireland to joyn themſelves to the King of Spains forces, under the conduct of the Prince of Parma, for the Execution of the Sentence of Pope Sixtus the fifth againſt the Queen, declared by his Bull; in the which ſhe is declared an Heretick, illegitimate, cruel againſt Mary Queen of Scots, and her Subjects were commanded to help Parma againſt her: for at that time a great number of thoſe Bulls and Books were printed at Antwerp to be diſperſed through England. The Duke denied that he had ſeen ſuch a Bull or Book, neither would he do any thing by the Popes Authority; as for his own King, him he muſt obey. Yet he ſaid, he ſo obſerved the Queen for her princely vertues, that after the King of Spain he offered all ſervice to her. That he had perſwaded the King of Spain to yield to this treaty of peace, which is more profitable for Engliſh than Spaniſh: for if they ſhould be overcome they would eaſily repair their loſs, but if you be overcome the Kingdom is loſt.

To whom Dale replyed, That our Queen was ſufficiently furniſhed with forces to defend the Kingdom. That a Kingdom will not eaſily be gotten by the fortune of one Battel, ſeeing the King of Spain in ſo long a War is not yet able to recover his antient Patrimony in the Netherlands.

Well, quoth the Duke, be it ſo, theſe things are in Gods Hands.

After this the Delegates contended among themſelves by mutual replications, weaving and unweaving the ſame web. The Engliſh were earneſt in this, that freedom of Religion might be granted at leaſt for two years to the confederate Provinces. They anſwered, That as the King of Spain had not intreated that for Engliſh Catholicks; ſo they hoped the Queen in her wiſdom would not intreat any thing of the King of Spain which might ſtand againſt his Honor, his Oath, and his Conſcience.

Then they demanded the money due from the States of Brabant; it was anſwered, That the money was lent without the Kings Authority or privity: but let the account be taken, how much the money was, and how much the King hath ſpent in theſe Wars, and then it may appear who ſhould look for repayment.

Thus the Engliſh of ſet purpoſe were from time to time driven off, until the Spaniſh Fleet was come near the Engliſh ſhore, and the noiſe of Guns were heard from Sea. Then had they leave to depart, and were by the Delegates honourably brought to the Borders near to Calis. The Duke of Parma had in the mean time brought all his forces to the Sea Shore.

Thus this Conference came to nothing; undertaken by the Queen, as the wiſer then thought, to avert the Spaniſh Fleet; continued by the Spaniard, that he might oppreſs the Queen, being as he ſuppoſed unprovided, and not expecting the danger. So both of them tryed to uſe time to their beſt advantages.

Preparation for ſetting forth of the Spaniſh Fleet.

In fine the Spaniſh Fleet well furniſhed with Men, Munition, Engines, and all warlike preparation, the beſt indeed that was ever ſeen upon the Ocean, called by that arrogant title the Invincible Navy, conſiſting of a hundred and thirty Ships, wherein there were nineteen thouſand two hundred ninety Mariners Eight thouſand three hundred and fifty; chained rowers eleven thouſand and eighty; great Ordnance Eleven thouſand ſix hundred and thirty. The chief commander was Perezius Guſmannus, Duke of Medina Sidonia; (for Antonius Columna Duke of Palian and Marqueſs of Saint Croſs, unto whom the chief Government was allotted, dyed whilſt things were preparing.) And under him alſo Joannes Martinus Ricaldus, a Man of great experience in Sea Affairs. Anno 1588.

The 30. of May they looſed out of the River Tagus, and purpoſing to hold their courſe to the Groin, in Gallitia, they were beaten and ſcattered by a tempeſt: three Gallies by the help of David Gwin an Engliſh Servant, and by the perfidiouſneſs of Turks which rowed, were carried away into France. The Fleet with much adoe after ſome days came to the Groin and other Harbours near adjoyning. The report was, that the Fleet was ſo ſhaken with this Tempeſt, that the Queen was perſwaded, that ſhe was not to expect that Fleet this year. And Sir Francis Walſhingham, Secretary, wrote to the Lord Admiral, that he might ſend back four of the greateſt Ships, as if the War had been ended. But the Lord Admiral did not eaſily give credit to that report; yet with a gentle anſwer entreated him to believe nothing haſtily in ſo important a matter: As alſo that he might be permitted to keep thoſe Ships with him which he had, though it were upon his own charges. And finding a favourable Wind turned Sails towards Spain, to ſurpriſe the enemies ſhaken Ships in their Harbours. When he was not far from the Shore of Spain, the Wind turning, and he being charged to defend the Engliſh Shore, fearing that the enemies unſeen might by the ſame Wind be driven to England, he returned unto Plimmouth.

The time when the Navy ſet out.

The great Fleet more ſhaken with a Tempeſt.

Now with the ſame Wind, the twelfth of July the Duke of Medina with his Fleet departed from the Groin. And after a few days he ſent Rodericus Telius into Flanders, to advertiſe the Duke of Parma, giving him warning that the Fleet was approaching, and therefore he was to make himſelf ready. For Medina his Commiſſion was to joyn himſelf with the Ships and Souldiers of Parma; and under the protection of his Fleet, to bring them into England, and to land his land forces upon Thames ſide.

The ſixteenth day (ſaith the relator) there was a great calm, and a thick cloud was upon the Sea till noon: then the North-Wind blowing roughly, and again the Weſt-Wind till midnight, and after that the Eaſt; the Spaniſh Navy was ſcattered, and hardly gathered together until they came within the ſight of England the nineteenth day of July. Upon which day the Lord Admiral was certified by Flemming (who had been a Pyrate) that the Spaniſh Fleet was entred into the Engliſh Sea, which the Mariners call the Channel, and was deſcryed near to the Lizard. The Lord Admiral brought forth the Engliſh Fleet into the Sea, but not without great difficulty, by the skill, labour, and alacrity of the Souldiers and Mariners, every one labouring: yea the Lord Admiral himſelf put his hand to this work.

The Spaniſh Navy the ſecond time ſcattered.

Flemming a Pyrate diſcovers the Spaniſh Fleet to the Engliſh.

The next day the Engliſh Fleet viewed the Spaniſh Fleet coming along with Towers like Caſtles in height, her front crooked like the faſhion of the Moon, the horns of the Front were extended one from the other about ſeven miles, or as ſome ſay eight miles aſunder, ſailing with the labour of the Winds, the Ocean as it were groaning under it; their Sail was but ſlow, and yet at full Sail before the Wind. The Engliſh were willing to let them hold on their courſe, and when they were paſſed by, got behind them, and ſo got the help of the Wind.

The faſhion of the Spaniſh Fleet deſcribed.

Upon the one and twentieth of July, the Lord Admiral of England ſent a Pinace before, called the Defiance, to denounce the battel by ſhooting off ſome pieces. And being himſelf in the Arch-Royal (the Engliſh Pretorian Ship or Admiral) he ſet upon a Ship which he took to be the Spaniſh Admiral, but it was the Ship of Alfonſus Leva. Upon that he beſtowed much Shot. Preſently Drake, Hawkins, and Forbiſher came in upon the Spaniſh hindmoſt Ships, which Ricaldus governed. Upon theſe they thundred. Ricaldus laboured as much as lay in him to ſtay his Men, who fled away in their Navy, until his Ship beaten and much battered with many Shot hardly recovered

The fight

Anno 1588. recovered the Fleet. Then the Duke Medina gathered together his diſſipated Fleet, and ſetting up more Sail, held on their courſe. Indeed they could do no other, for the Engliſh had gotten the advantage of the wind, and their Ships were much more nimble, and ready with incredible celerity to come upon the enemy with a full courſe, and then to turn and return, and be on every ſide at their pleaſure. After a long fight, and that each of them had taken ſome trial, as of their own courage, ſo of the Spaniards alſo, the Lord Admiral thought good not to continue the ſame any longer, in regard that forty Ships were then abſent, which at that inſtant were ſcarce drawn out of Plimouth Haven.

The night following, St. Katherine a Spaniſh Ship, being ſore torn with the fight, was received into the midſt of the Navy to be mended. Here a great Cantabrian Ship of Oquenda, wherein was the Treaſurer of the Camp, by force of Gun-powder that had taked fire, was fired: yet it was quenched in time by the Ships that came to help her. Of theſe that came to help the fired ſhip, one was a Galeon, in which was Petrus Valdez; the Foremaſt of the Galeon was caught in the tackling of another ſhip, and broken. This was taken by Drake, who ſent Valdez to Dartmouth, and a great ſum of mony, viz. fifty five thouſand Duckets, which he diſtributed amongſt the Souldiers. This Valdez coming into Drakes preſence, kiſſed his hand, and told him they had all reſolved to die, if they had not been ſo happy as to fall into his hands, whom he knew to be Noble. That night he was appointed to ſet forth light, but neglected it; and ſome German Merchant Ships coming by that night, he thinking them to be enemies followed them ſo far, that the Engliſh Navy reſted all night when they could ſee no light ſet forth. Neither did he nor the reſt of the Navy find the Admiral until the next day at Even. The Admiral all the night proceeding with the Bear and the Mary Roſe did carefully follow the Spaniards with watchfulneſs. The Duke was buſied in ordering his Navy. Alfonſus Leva was commanded to joyn the firſt and laſt Companies. Every ſhip had his ſtation aſſigned according to that preſcribed form which was appointed in Spain; it was preſent death to forſake his ſtation. This done, he ſent Gliclius an Anceani to Parma, which might declare to him in what caſe they were, and left that Cantabrian ſhip of Oquenda to the wind and Sea, having taken out the Money and Mariners, and put them in other ſhips. Yet it ſeemeth that he had not care of all: for that Ship the ſame day with fifty Mariners and Souldiers lamed, and half burnt, fell into the Hands of the Engliſh, and was carried to Weymouth.

The three and twentieth of the ſame Month, the Spaniards having a favourable North wind turned Sails upon the Engliſh; the Engliſh being much readier in the uſe of their ſhips, ſet about a compaſs for the wind, and having gotten advantage of the wind, they came to the fight on both ſides. They fought a while confuſedly with variable ſucceſs: whileſt on the one ſide the Engliſh with great courage delivered the London ſhips with were incloſed about by the Spaniards: on the other ſide the Spaniards by valour freed Ricaldus from the extreme danger he was in: great were the effulminations which by beating of Ordnances were heard this day. But the loſs (by the good providence of God) fell upon the Spaniſh ſide, their ſhips being ſo high that the ſhot went over our Engliſh ſhips; and the Engliſh having ſuch a fair mark at their taller ſhips never ſhot in vain. Amidſt which encounters, Cock an Engliſhman, being caught indeed in the midſt of the Spaniſh ſhips, could not be recovered, but periſhed, howbeit with great honor he revenged himſelf. Thus a long time the Engliſh ſhips with great agility were ſometimes upon the Spaniards, giving them the one ſide, and then the other, and preſently were off again, and ſtill took the Sea, to make themſelves ready to come in again. Whereas the Spaniſh ſhips being of great burthen were troubled and hindred, and ſtood to bee marks for the Engliſh Bullets. For all that the Admiral would not admit the Engliſh to come to boord their ſhips, becauſe they had a full army in their ſhips, which he had not; their ſhips were many in number, and greater, and higher, that if they had come to grapple, as ſome would have had it, the Engliſh being much lower then the Spaniſh ſhips muſt needs have had the worſt of them that fought from the higher ſhips. And if the Engliſh had been overcome, the loſs would have been greater than the victory could have been; for ours being overcome would have put the Kingdom in hazard.

The Admiral would not ſuffer his ſhips to come to grapple with the Spaniſh.

The four and twentieth day of July they gave over fighting on both ſides. The Admiral ſent ſome ſmall Barks to the next Engliſh ſhore, to ſupply the proviſion; And divided all his Navy into four Squadrons; The firſt whereof was under his own government; the next Drake governed; the third Hawkins; the laſt Forbiſher. And he appointed out of ever Squadron certain little ſhips, which on divers ſides might ſet upon the Spaniards in the night, but a ſudden calm took them, and ſo that advice was without effect. The third Fight.

The five and twentieth day, being S. James day, S. Anne the Galeon of Portugal, not being able to hold courſe with the reſt, was ſet upon by ſome ſmall Engliſh ſhips. To whoſe aid came in Leva, and Didacus Telles Enriques with three Galeaſſes: which the Admiral and the Lord Thomas Howard eſpying, made in againſt the Galeaſſes (the calm was ſo great that they were drawn in by Boats with cords) and did ſo beat upon the Galeaſſes with great ſhot, that with much ado, and not without great loſs, they hardly recovered the Galeon. The Spaniards reported that the Admiral of Spain was that day in the hindmoſt company, and being come nearer the Engliſh ſhips then before, was ſore beaten with the Engliſh great Ordnance, many men ſlain in her, her great maſt overthrown. And after that the Admiral of Spain, accompanied with Ricaldus and others, did ſet upon the Engliſh Admiral, who by the benefit of the wind ſuddenly turning eſcaped. The Spaniards hold on their courſe again, and ſend to the Duke of Parma, that with all ſpeed he ſhould joyn his ſhips with the Kings Fleet. Theſe things the Engliſh knew not, who write that they had ſtricken the Lanthorn from one of the Spaniſh ſhips, the Stemm from another, and had ſore beaten a third, doing much harm to her. That the Non-Parigly, and the Mary Roſe fought a while with the Spaniards; and the Triumph being in danger, other ſhips came in good time to help her.

The next day the Lord Admiral knighted the Lord Thomas Howard, The Lord Sheffield. Roger Townſend, John Hawkins, and Martin Forbiſher, for their valour well imployed in the laſt fight. After this they reſolved not to ſet upon the Enemy until they came into the ſtraight of Calis, where Henry Seimor, and William Winter ſtaid for their coming. Thus with the fair gale the Spaniſh Fleet goeth forward, and the Engliſh followed. This great Spaniſh Armadoe was ſo far from being eſteemed Invincible in the opinions of the Engliſh, that many young men, and Gentlemen, in hope to be partakers of a famous victory againſt the Spaniards, provided Ships of their own charges, and joyned themſelves to the Engliſh Fleet; among whom were the Earls of Eſſex, of Northumberland, of Cumberland, Thomas and Robert Cecilles, Henry Brooks, William Hatton, Robert Cary, Ambroſe Willoughby, Thomas Gerard, Arthur Gorge, and other Gentlemen of good note and quality. Knights made. Noblemen and Gentlemen joyn with the Fleet.

The ſeven and twentieth day at Even, the Spaniards caſt anchor neer to Calis, being admoniſhed of their skiful Sea-men, that if they went any further, they might be indangered by force of that Tide to be driven into the North Ocean. Near to them ſtood the Engliſh Admiral with his Fleet within a great Guns ſhot. To the Admiral, Seimor and Winter now joyn their ſhips; ſo that now there were an hundred and forty ſhips in the Engliſh Fleet, able and well furniſhed for fight, for Sail, and to turn which way was needful: and yet there were but fifteen of theſe which bore the burden of battel and repulſed the enemy. The Spaniard, as often he had done before, ſo now with great earneſtneſs ſent to the Duke of Parma to ſend forty flie Boats, without the which they could not fight with the Engliſh, becauſe of the greatneſs and ſlowneſs of their own ſhips, and the agility of the Engliſh ſhips: And intreating him by all means now to come to Sea with his Army, which Army was now to be protected as it were under the wings of the Spaniſh Armado, until they took land in England. Purpoſing to execute their deſign on Friday the 12. of Auguſt, the night being dark, but how happily the ſame was prevented, read the next Section following.

But the Duke was unprovided, and could not come out at an inſtant. The broad Ships with flat bottoms being then full of chinks muſt bee mended. Victuals wanted and muſt be provided. The Mariners being long kept againſt their wills began to ſhrink away. The Ports of Dunkirk and Nieuport, by which he muſt bring his Army to the Sea, were now ſo beſet with the ſtrong ſhips of Holland and Zealand, which were furniſhed with great and ſmall munition, that he was not able to come to Sea, unleſs he would come upon his own apparent deſtruction, and caſt himſelf and his men wilfully into a headlong danger. Yet he omitted nothing that might be done, being a man eager and induſtrious, and inflamed with a deſire of overcoming England.

A notable ſtratagem of the Engliſh.

But Queen Elizabeth her providence and care prevented both the diligence of this man, and the credulous hope of the Spaniard: for by her commandment the next day the Admiral took eight of their worſt ſhips, charging the Ordnance therein up to the mouth with ſmall ſhot, nails, and ſtones, and dreſſed them with wildfire, pitch and roſin, and filled them full of brimſton and ſome other matter fit for fire, and theſe being ſet on fire by the miniſtery and guiding of Young and Prowſe, were ſecretly in the night by the help of the wind ſet full upon the Spaniſh Fleet, which on Sunday the ſeventh of Auguſt they ſent in among them as they lay at anchor.

When the Spaniards ſaw them come near, the flame ſhining and giving light all over the Sea; they ſuppoſing thoſe ſhips, beſides the danger of fire, to have been alſo furniſhed with deadly Engines, to make horrible deſtruction among them; lifting up a moſt hideous woful cry, ſome pull up anchors, ſome for haſt cut their Cables, they ſet up their Sails, they apply their Oars, and ſtriken with a Pannick terror, in great haſt they fled moſt confuſedly. Among them the Pretorian Galleaſs floating upon the Seas, her Rudder being broken, in great danger and fear drew towards Calis, and ſticking in the Sand was taken by Amias Preſton, Thomas Gerard, and Harvey; Hugh Moncada the Governor was ſlain, the Soldiers and Mariners were either killed or drowned; In her there was found great ſtore of Gold, which fell to be the prey of the Engliſh. The ſhip and Ordnance fell to the ſhare of the Governour of Calis.

The Spaniards report, that the Duke when he ſaw the fiery ſhips coming commanded all the fleet to pull up their anchors, but ſo as the danger being paſt, every ſhip might return again to his ſtation: and he himſelf returned, giving a ſign to the reſt by ſhooting off a Gun; which was heard but of a few, for they were far off ſcattered, ſome into the open Ocean, ſome through fear were driven upon the Shallows of the coaſt of Flanders.

The 4 Fight before Graveling, Aug. 8.

Over againſt Graveling the Spaniſh fleet began to gather themſelves together. But upon them came Drake and Fenner, and battered them with great Ordnance: to theſe Fenton, Southwel, Beeſton, Croſs, Riman, and preſently after the Lord Admiral, Thomas Howard, and Sheffield came in and all joyned together. The Duke Medina, Leva, Oquenda, Ricaldus, and others with much ado getting themſelves out of the ſhallows ſuſtained the Engliſh force as well as they might, until moſt of their ſhips were pierced and torn; the Galleon St. Matthew, governed by Diego Pimentellus, coming to aid Francis Toletan, being in the St. Philip, was pierced and ſhaken with the reiterated ſhots of Seimor and Winter, and driven to Oſtend, and was at laſt taken by the Fluſhingers. The S. Philip came to the like end; ſo did the Galleon of Biſcay and divers others.

The laſt day of this Month, the Spaniſh Fleet ſtriving to recover the Straights again, were driven toward Zealand. The Engliſh left off purſuing them, as the Spaniards thought, becauſe they ſaw them in a manner caſt away; for they could not avoid the ſhallows of Zealand. But the wind turning, they gat them out of the ſhallows, and then began to conſult what were beſt for them to do. By common conſent they reſolved to return into Spain by the Northern Seas, for they wanted many neceſſaries, eſpecially ſhot, their ſhips were torn, and they had no hope that the Duke of Parma could bring forth his Forces. And ſo they took the Sea, and followed the courſe toward the North. The Engliſh Navy followed, and ſometimes the Spaniſh turned upon the Engliſh, inſomuch that it was thought by many that they would turn back again.

Anno 1588.

A deſcription of the Queens coming to the Camp at Tilbury, with the manner of her behaviour there, as it is related by a Popiſh Spy, in a Letter written here in England to Mendea. The Copy of which Letter by good hap was found in the Chamber of one Richard Leigh a Seminary Prieſt, as well in French as Engliſh: which Prieſt was executed for high Treaſon whileſt the Spaniſh Armado was on the Sea.

The Queen comes to the Camp at Tilbury.

SHe cauſed alſo, ſaith he, an Army to incamp near the Sea ſide upon the River of Thames. After the Army was come thither, ſhe would not by any advice be ſtayed, but for comfort of her people, and to ſhew her own magnanimity of heart, ſhe went thereunto, lying at that time between the City of London and the Sea, under the charge of the Earl of Leiceſter, placing her ſelf between the Enemy and her City; and there ſhe viewed her Army, paſſing through it divers times, and lodging in the borders of it, returned again and dined in the Army. Firſt viewing from place to place the people as they were by their Countries lodged and quartered by their ſeveral Camps. Afterwards when they were all reduced into battel, prepared as it were for fight, ſhe rode round about with a Leaders ſtaff in her hand, only accompanied with the General and three or four others attending upon her: but yet to ſhew her State (I well marked it) ſhe had the ſword carried before her by the Earl of Ormond. There ſhe was generally ſaluted with cryes, with ſhouts, with all tokens of love, of obedience, of readineſs, and willingneſs to fight for her, as ſeldom hath the like been ſeen in an Army, conſidering ſhe was a Queen. All which tended to ſhew a marvellous concord in a mutual love between a Queen and her Subjects, and of reverence and obedience of Subjects to their Soveraign; all which ſhe requited with very princely thanks and a good ſpeech.

I could enlarge the deſcription hereof with many more particulars of mine own ſight; for thither I went as many others did, and all that day wandring from place to place, I never heard any word ſpoken of her, but in praiſing her for her ſtately perſon and princely behaviour, and in praying for her life and ſafety, with curſing of all her Enemies, both Traitors and all Papiſts, with earneſt deſire to venture their lives for her ſafety. And beſides ſuch particular acclamations, the whole Army in every quarter did ſo devoutly at certain times ſing in her hearing, in very tunable manner, divers Pſalms put in form of prayers, in praiſe to Almighty God, no ways to be miſliked, that ſhe greatly commended them, and with very earneſt ſpeech thanked God with them. This that I write you may be ſure I do not with any comfort, but to give you theſe manifeſt arguments, that neither this Queen doth diſcontent her people, nor her people do ſhew any diſcontent in any thing they be commanded to do for her ſervice, as heretofore hath been imagined.

The ſame day wherein the laſt fight was, the Duke of Parma, after his Vows offered to the Lady of Halla, came ſomewhat late to Dunkirk and was received with ſome opprobrious words of the Spaniards, as if in favour of Queen Elizabeth he had ſlipped the faireſt opportunity that could be to do the ſervice. He to make ſome ſatisfaction, puniſhed the Purveiours that had not made proviſion of beer, bread, and victuals which was not yet ready nor imbarked, ſecretly ſmiling at the inſolency of the Spaniards, when he heard them glorying, that what way ſoever they came upon England, they would have an undoubted victory; that the Engliſh were not able to endure the ſight of them. Bernardinus Mendoza did indeed by Books in France ſing a fooliſh and lying triumphant ſong before the victory. The Engliſh Admiral appointed Seimor and the Hollanders to watch upon the coaſt of Flanders, that the Duke of Parma ſhould not come out; himſelf followed the Spaniards upon their Backs, until they were paſt Edenborough Frith.

For which a Papiſt ſticks not to tax him, writing upon this ſubject to Mendoza.

The

Anno 1588.

The Spaniards diſmayed flied away for fear.

And all their preparations blaſted: the Engliſh receiving ſmall loſs, viz. not one hundred men in all, nor one ſhip but that of Cocks.

The Spaniards ſeeing all hopes fail, and finding no other help for themſelves but by flight, fled amain and never made ſtay. And ſo this great Navy, being three years preparing with great coſt, was within a Month overthrown, and after many were killed, being chaſed away (of Engliſh there were not one hundred loſt, nor one Ship loſt, ſaving that of Cocks) was driven about al Britain by Scotland, Orcades, Ireland, toſſed and ſhaken with Tempeſts, and much leſſened, and came home without glory. Whereupon ſome Mony was coyned with a Navy fleeing away at full ſail, and this Inſcription, Venit, Vidit, Fugit. Other were coyned with the Ships fired, the Navy confounded, in honour of the Queen, inſcribed, Dux fœmina facti. As they fled, it is certain that many of their Ships were caſt away upon the ſhoars of Scotland and Ireland. More than ſeven hundred Souldiers and Mariners were caſt up upon the Scotiſh ſhoar, who at the Duke of Parma his interceſſion with the Scots King, the Queen of England conſenting, were after a year ſent into Flanders. But they that were caſt up upon the Iriſh ſhoar by Tempeſt came to more miſerable fortunes; for ſome were killed by the wild Iriſh, others by the Deputies command; for he fearing that they might joyn themſelves to the wild Iriſh (and Bingham the Governour of Connaught being once or twice commanded to ſlay them having yielded, but refuſing to do it) Fowke the Under-Marſhal was ſent and killed them; which cruelty the Queen much condemned; whereupon the reſt being afraid, ſick and hungry, with their torn Ships committed themſelves to the Sea, and many were drowned.

Q. Elizabeth giveth thanks to God for ſo unexpected a Deliverance.

Queen Elizabeth came in publick Thankſgiving to St. Pauls Church, in a Chariot drawn with two Horſes, her Nobles accompanying her with a very gallant Train through the Streets of London which were hung with blew Cloth: the Companies ſtanding on both ſides, were in their Liveries; the Banners that were taken from the Enemies were ſpred; She heard the Sermon, and publick Thanks were rendred unto God with great joy. This publick Joy was augmented when Sir Robert Sidney, returning out of Scotland, brought from the King aſſurance of his noble mind and affection to the Queen, and to Religion; which as in ſincerity he had eſtabliſhed, ſo he purpoſed to maintain with all his power. Sir Robert Sidney was ſent to him when the Spaniſh Fleet was coming, to congratulate and to give him thanks for his propenſe affection towards the maintenance of the common cauſe; and to declare how ready ſhe would be to help him if the Spaniard ſhould land in Scotland; and that he might recal to memory with what ſtrange ambition the Spaniard had gaped for all Britain, urging the Pope to excommunicate him, to the end that he might be thruſt from the Kingdom of Scotland, and from the Succeſſion in England: and to give him notice of the threatning of Mendoza and the Popes Nuncio, who threatned his ruine if they could work it; and therefore warned him to take eſpecial heed to the Scotiſh Papiſts.

The King pleaſantly anſwered, That he looked for no other benefit from the Spaniard, than that which Polyphemus promiſed to Ulyſſes, to devour him laſt after his Fellows were devoured.

To cloſe up this whole relation, hear what Theodore Beza writes in his certain gratulatory Verſes written in Latin, and ſent unto her Majeſty: the effect of which Verſes is this in Engliſh.

With Navy huge the Spaniard proud
The Engliſh Seas had ſpread,
And all to ſet the Engliſh Crown
Upon the Spaniſh Head.

And would you gladly underſtand
The cauſe of all this rout,
Ambition firſt did lay the Plot,
And Lucre brought them out.

How well this Pride thus puffed up
A puff did overthrow:
And ſwelling wave ſuch ſwelling Wights
How well did overflow.

How well that Warrier of Mankind,
That Spaniſh cruel Wolf,
Was toſt and tumbled up and down
Within the Ocean Gulf.

And you for whom both all the Winds
And all the Waters fight;
O Noble Queen, of all the World
The only true delight.

Go forward ſtill to rule for God,
Ambition laid aſide;
Go forward ſtill for Chriſt his Flock
In bounty to provide.

That thou maiſt England govern long,
Long England thee enjoy,
As well a love unto the good,
As to the bad annoy.

From Geneva, beſieged by the Duke of Savoy, the twelfth day of Auguſt, Anno 1589.

Your Majeſties moſt humble Oratour,

Theodore Beza.

The death of the Duke of Guiſe, and Henry the third King of France.

IT was not long after that the Duke of Guiſe, who was ſlain by the Lord Lougna at the Kings Chamber Door, and King Henry the third were taken away; he being the laſt of the Houſe of Vallois, and dying without any lawful Heirs of his Body begotten.

The manner of whoſe death was thus. A Frier of the Order of St. Dominick, called James Clement, pretended he had matters of great conſequence to impart to the King: who being admitted into his preſence, upon his knees preſented the King with a Letter which he drew out of one ſleeve; which whilſt the King attentively read, the Frier pulled forth a poyſoned Knife out of his other ſleeve, wherewith he ſtabbed the King into the lower part of his Belly. The King feeling himſelf hurt therewith, ſnatching it out of the wound, ſtruck the ſame into the Friers eye, who haſting to get away, the King crying out. His Lords and Gentlemen perceiving what the Frier had done, ſlew him preſently with Rapiers and Swords. The King before he died, having reigned fourteen years and ſeven months, called for the King of Navarre, all the Princes, Lords and Noblemen, that were in his Camp, and declared that the King of Navarre was the true lawful Heir to the Crown of France; willing them all to acknowledge him for their King, and that notice ſhould likewiſe be given throughout all his Camp and Kingdom alſo.

The Reign of Henry the Fourth over the Kingdom of France.

Thus the Soveraign Judge of the World made way for the entrance of Henry the Fourth to have Dominion over the Kingdom of France. Now howſoever from the year 1589 to this preſent year 1598, the Churches of Chriſt have ſeen marvellous changes, and how the League for a time made many furious Onſets: yet it pleaſed God ſo to moderate things, that the faithful were preſerved from being perſecuted; yea, they obtained of their Prince many priviledges and favours. For the King in the firſt years of his Reign continuing in the profeſſion of the true Religion, wherein he had been bred and brought up, did manfully reſiſt both thoſe of the League, and the Spaniards, the great God of Battels bleſſing the right and juſt Wars undertaken by this Prince, to the confuſion of all his Enemies, till he fell to ſide with Popery; though the affairs of his Kingdom gained but little thereby.

A Note touching the Popes Bull.

THe Leaguers ſeeing what proſperous ſucceſs God gave King Henry the Fourth in his Wars undertaken againſt them, fearing that in the end all would yield unto him, they procured a new Excommunication from Rome, againſt him and all his faithful Subjects, cauſing the ſame to be publiſhed at Pontde l'Arch in Normandy by, Marcellus Luudrianus a malapert Jeſuit. The King, being advertiſed thereof, cammanded his Court of Parliament holden at Cane, to proceed again Pope Gregory the fourteenth who ſent it, and his Nuncio that brought it, as againſt Tyrants, Conſpirators with Rebels, perturbers of the State, ſowers of ſeditions, and the common and Notorious Enemies of God and all goodneſs.

Then taking the Popes Bull, he cauſed it to be faſtened to a Gibbet at Tours, by the common Hangman of the Town, and there to be conſumed to aſhes, to the great rejoycing of all the behoders.

The Hiſtory of one Margaret Pierrone, who choſe rather to be burned her ſelf, than willingly to burn her Bible, Anno 1593.

THere was one Margaret Pierrone born in a Village of Cambray called Sanſay, who with her Husband retired into the City of the Valincians. Now becauſe ſhe could not endure the bad qualities of a Maid Servant of hers, ſhe was by her ſaid Maid accuſed to the new Sect-Maſters ſirnamed the Jeſuites, for that ſhe had not been in many years at the Maſs, as alſo for keeping in her houſe a Bible, in reading whereof was her whole delight. They acquainting the Magiſtrates herewith, ſhe was by and by apprehended: ſome Friends ſent her an inckling thereof beforehand once or twice, that ſhe ſhould get her ſomewhere out of the way, but the errand was not done, God having a purpoſe that ſhe ſhould bear witneſs of his truth, to fill up the number of thoſe that were to die for the name of Jeſus.

Being in Priſon, the Judges calling her before them, ſaid Margaret, are you not willing to return home unto your houſe, and there live with your Husband and Children? Yes ſaith ſhe, if it may ſtand with the good will of God. They added further, that they had ſo wrought with their Fathers the Jeſuites, that in doing a ſmal matter ſhe might be ſet at liberty: If, ſaith ſhe, it be not a thing contrary to Gods glory and mine own Salvation, you ſhall hear what I will ſay, No ſuch thing, Margaret, ſaid they: for a ſcaffold ſhall be erected in the chief place of the City, upon which you are to preſent your ſelf, and there to crave pardon for offending the Law; then a fire being kindled, you muſt caſt your Bible therein to be conſumed, without ſpeaking any word at all,

I pray you my Maſters tell me, ſaith ſhe, Is my Bible a good Book, or no? Yes, we confeſs it is, ſaid they; If you allow it to be good, ſaid the Woman, why would you have me caſt it into the fire? Only ſaid they, to give the Jeſuits content. Imagin it to be but paper that you burn, and then all is well enough, do ſo much for ſaving your life, and we will meddle no more with you; you may buy you another when you will.

They ſpent about two hours in perſwading her hereunto, ſhewing how ſhe might do a leſs evil, that a greater good might come of it. By the help of God, ſaith ſhe, I will never conſent to do it. What would the people ſay, when they ſee me burn my Bible? will they not exclaim and ſay, yonder is a wretched Woman indeed, that will burn the Bible wherein are contained all the Articles of our Chriſtian Faith? I will burn my Body ſure, before that I will burn my Bible.

Then ſeeing ſhe would in no ſort conform her ſelf either to the will of the Jeſuites, or to theirs, they cauſed her to be committed cloſe Priſoner, and to be fed only with Bread and Water, none to be permitted ſo much as to ſpeak unto her, thinking by this hard uſage to overcome her: but all was to no purpoſe. Being thus long ſhut up, and no news heard of her one way or other, every one imagined that they had put her to death privily. Her Judges were willing to have ſaved her life, ſending often a Doctor unto her called N. of Vivenoyne to turn her from her Reſolution; but he found it too hard a task for him to effect, often confeſſing to them that ſent him, that he found no cauſe at all in her why they ſhould put her to death.

But on Wedneſday the two and twentieth of January 1593. ſhe was condemned to be brought upon a ſtage ſet up in the Market place before the Town-Houſe, there to ſee her Books burnt; then her ſelf to be ſtrangled at a Poſt, and her Body dragged to the Dunghil without the City. She coming to the place, and aſcending the Scaffold, diſtinctly pronounced the Lords Prayer. Then ſeeing her Books burned in her preſence, ſhe uttered theſe words with and audible Voice; you burn there the Word of God, which your ſelves have acknowledged to be good and holy. Having again repeated the Lords Prayer, ſhe was ſtrangled and died peaceably in the Lord, ſo as ſhe was nothing altered in her Colour after ſhe was dead, leaving to the Valencians the truth of this Sentence, Pretius in the ſight of the Lord is the Martyrdom of his Saints; and to the Judges, and her Hangmen the Jeſuites, a perpetual corraſive to their Conſciencs. Anno 1593. Pſal. 116. 15.

An Engliſh man burned at Rome.

IN the year 1595. about the end of May there was executed a Young Man at Rome about the age of five and twenty years, who went into the Church of Magdalen, where beholding their behaviour, being pricked forward with Religious Zeal and conſtant Reſolution, not being able to endure the ſight of thoſe horrible impieties which were there committed amongſt them: As the Biſhop was ſetting forward to go on Proceſſion, this Young Man directed his way towards the Church Porch: and as the Proceſſion began to paſs forward he waited till the Bp. came that bare the Hoſt, and in his going forth ſtepped to the Pixe, plucking it out of his Hands, threw it to the ground, ſaying aloud, ye wretched Idolaters, do ye fall down to a Morſel of Bread? The people preſently fell upon the Young Man; yet without touching his Perſon, notwithſtanding the great ſtirr they made, he was from thence ſent to Priſon to the Capitol. Complaint being made thereof to Pope Clement the eighth touching all that which had happened; He preſently ordained that he which had done it ſhould be burned the ſame day, for an example and terrour to all his Companions. But ſome of the Popes Cardinals being then at hand, adviſed that he ſhould be detained rather a while in Priſon, to be examined by all exquiſite Tortures, to make him confeſs his fellows, and who had ſet him on. Having kept him eight days in Priſon, nothing could be drawn from him, but this ſpeech, Such was the will of God.

When they ſaw they could not prevail, his Inditement was framed, and his Sentence regiſtred, namely that he was to paſs from the Capitol, Naked unto his middle, and to wear on his head the form of a Devil, or Dragon, his Breeches painted all over with flames of fire, and thus being bound in a Cart, to be burned alive, being firſt carried in this manner about the City.

The Patient underſtanding how he was to be handled, lifting up his eyes, implored help from the Almighty; and ſeeing how he was derided of all, continued in his devotion and Prayers. He could not refrain from uttering ſowewhat againſt the life of the Cardinals and their Aſſociates, who hearing it, began to be in a rage, and that he might no longer bewray their wickedneſs, they cauſed a great Gagg to be forced into his mouth, which vexed him more then all the reſt, when he teſtified, ſaying, How ſhall I call upon my God? But he patiently ſubmitted himſelf to endure all their cruelties.

In this plight he was brought to Magdalens, where he had caſt down the Idol, and there one of the Hangmen cut off his hand before the door: at which the Patient being not much moved, his hand being ſet on a pole in the Cart, the two Tormentors made him feel the force of the fire, taking each of them a great torch in his hand flaming with which they ſcortched and burned his fleſh through all the City of Rome.

At length they arrived at the place called Campio de Fior, by which time the Young Man was brought into a pitiful caſe, being ſcortched all over his Body, all bliſtered and bloody, having nothing whole but his Head, which he now and then lifted up.

Being taken down out of the Cart, and ſeeing the Poſt whereunto he was to be faſtened with three Chains of Iron; he went of himſelf to the Poſt, and falling on his Knees kiſſed the Chains with which he was there to be bound till the Sacrifice ſhould be ended.

But

Anno 1601.

But before the Fire was put to him, he was urged by Friers and Prieſts to worſhip an Idol which they preſented there before him. From which turning away his face, he ſhewed unto them his conſtant reſolution to the contrary, holding on his Chriſtian courſe unto the end: which he truly teſtified; for as ſoon as the flames of Fire ſeiſed on him, bowing his head he quietly yielded up his Soul into the hands of God.

The death and Martyrdom of an old Man of Millan, who was burned at Rome.

THe ſame year they burned an old Man who for a long time had lien in the Inquiſitors Caves. He dyed with great conſtancy and reſolution. Before his death he was exhorted and importuned by the Monks to kiſs a Crucifix. He ſeeing their impudency, ſaid, If ye take not this Idol out of my ſight, you will conſtrain me to ſpit upon it, which when they heard, he was ſent away to the Fire, and conſumed to Aſhes.

The Troubles and Perſecution of Bartholomew Copin, a godly and Religious Martyr of Chriſt.

IN the year 1601. Bartholomew Copin of the Valley of Luſerne reſorted unto a place called Aſt in Piemont, with certain Merchandiſe, purpoſing to vent the ſame at a Fair there, which was to be kept the day following. It ſo fell out, that ſitting at Supper in the evening with ſundry other Merchants, one amongſt the reſt began to uſe ſome ſpeech about the diverſities of Religions, and therewithal ſpake ſomething tending to the diſgrace of thoſe of the Vallies of Angrougne and the Neighbour Villages.

Copin hearing ſuch ſpeeches caſt forth againſt his Brethren, as he little expected from men of that ſort, and alſo againſt their Religion, all which tended to the diſhonour of God; he feared leſt it ſhould be offenſively taken, if he ſhould not make ſome reply unto thoſe blaſphemies which he heard with his ears, and ſo anſwer him who held ſuch a diſcourſe againſt the Religion which himſelf profeſſed. He who reproved Copin asked, Are you one of Vandois? He anſwered, yes I am. And what, ſaid the other, believe you not that God is in the Hoſt? No, ſaid Copin. Oh, ſaid the other, ſee how falſe your Religion is? My Religion, ſaid Copin, is no leſs true than God is God, and as certain as I am ſure to die.

The next day Copin was called before the Biſhop of Aſt, who told him that report had been made to him of ſome offenſive ſpeeches which he had uſed the night paſt in his Lodging: and therefore it behoved him now to acknowledge his fault, if he meant to obtain pardon for the ſame, otherwiſe he muſt look to be chaſtiſed according to his demerits.

Copin anſwered, he had uttered nothing, but that which he was firſt provided to ſpeak; nor had he ſaid ought, but what he was reſolved to maintain to the hazard of his life. He affirmed that God had beſtowed upon him ſome worldly goods, as alſo a Wife and Children, but that he was not ſo glued in his affection to any of them, but he could be content to forgo them all, rather than the peace of a good Conſcience.

As touching his carriage and behaviour, if it pleaſed him, he ſaid, to make enquiry thereof among the Merchants of Aſt, they could all reſolve him as touching his honeſt dealing: who alſo he knew would witneſs with him, that he had wronged none in all that time he had converſed among them. And inaſmuch as he was a Merchant traffiquing in and about his lawful calling, he ought to be diſmiſſed and to be no further moleſted. For if it were lawful for Jews and Turks to trade in Fairs and Markets, and to uſe Commerce throughout Piemont; that favor ought much more to be permitted unto him who was a Chriſtian. And as touching the matter of Religion, whereabout he was accuſed, he meddled not at all therewith for his own particular, but had queſtions propounded to him concerning the ſame by others: in which regard leave was granted him to anſwer and to yield a reaſon of his Faith in any place, to any whomſoever they were that ſhould ask what he thought of the ſame: yea a liberty was granted even by his Excellency to thoſe of the Valleys of Vandoys to anſwer any man to a queſtion demanded; provided that he proceeded not to teach and inſtruct others.

The Biſhop regarded none of theſe allegations, but commanded he ſhould be put into Priſon. The next day the Biſhops Secretary came to viſit Copin, teſtifying how much good will he bore him; adviſing him as a Friend, that if he acknowledged not his fault, he was in great danger of his life.

Copin anſwered, that his life was in the hands of God, and that he would never ſeek to ſave it to the prejudice of Gods glory: alſo, that he had not above two or three turns to fetch here in this world, before he arrived in Heaven; and therefore prayed God ſo to aſſiſt him by his grace, that he might never leave the ſtrait way which leadeth thereto. Pſal. 89. 47. 48.

A few days after he was examined by a Monk, who was an Inquiſitor, in the preſence of the Biſhop, who vexed him a long while with his ſugred diſcourſe, and by fair words endeavoured to draw him to abjure his Religion. But Copin reſiſted him ſtill by the holy Scriptures; ſhewing that if he ſhould now be aſhamed of Chriſt and deny him, Chriſt might juſtly be aſhamed of him, and utterly deny him before his Heavenly Father. Matth. 10.

The Monk finiſhed his diſpute with this dogged farewel, Away thou curſed Lutheran, thou ſhalt go to all the Devils in Hell; and when thou comeſt to be tormented amongſt thoſe unclean Spirits, then wilt thou remember theſe holy admonitions which we have tendred unto thee for the ſaving of thy Soul, but thou hadſt rather go to Hell, than to reconcile thy ſelf to thy holy Mother the Church. It is not long ſince, ſaid Copin, that I was reconciled to the true Church.

After many violent aſſaults they gave way for his Wife to come unto him, and with her one of his Sons promiſing them to ſet him at liberty to go home with them, if he would make amends for his fault committed, by acknowledging the ſame. They gave his Son and Wife leave, to this purpoſe, to ſtay Supper with him in Priſon: during which time he uſed many exhortations tending to patience; albeit the Wife ſhould depart to her houſe without an Husband, or the Child without his Father: for be you well aſſured, ſaid he, that God will be a better Husband and a Father unto you than ever I was or can be. For his own part, he ſaid, he was not bound to love Wife or Children more than Chriſt: beſides, they had cauſe to rejoyce, and to think him happy, that God would honour him ſo far as to bear witneſs to his Truth with the loſs of his life, and hoped, he ſaid, that God would be ſo favorable to him, as to ſupport him under any torments he was to endure for his glories ſake.

In concluſion he commended his Son and one Daughter to his Wives care, which God had given them in the married eſtate, charging her again and again to ſee them brought up vertuouſly and in the fear of God. He charged his Son to obey his Mother, ſo ſhould he be made partaker of the promiſed bleſſing. He intreated them both to pray for him, that God would fortifie him againſt all temptations. And thus having bleſſed his Son, and taken leave of his Wife, they were conducted out of the Priſon, and he ſhut up as he was before.

The Woman and her Son were diſſolved into Teares, ſighing and crying out, that it would have moved the ſtonieſt heart to Compaſſion: but this holy man, not contenting himſelf with that he had ſaid to them by word of mouth, writ unto his Wife this Letter enſuing, the original whereof ſhe hath exhibited to us, written and ſigned with the hand of the ſaid Copin, the inſcription thus following.

To my wel-beloved Wife, Suſanna Copin, from the Tower of Luſerna.

DEar yoke-fellow, I received much conſolation by your coming to this place, and by ſo much the more as it was beyond my expectation; and I ſuppoſe you alſo were not a little comforted that you had ſuch an opportunity offered you, as to ſup with me the laſt night, being Saturday the 15. of September 1601. I know not well what they aimed at in permitting you ſo to do. But God ordereth all theſe things. But as far as I can gheſs, it ſhall be the laſt time that ever we ſhall ſup together in this life; and therefore pray to God that he will not ceaſe to be a comfort unto you. Truſt you ſtill in him, for he hath promiſed never to leave nor forſake thoſe that put their truſt in him. God hath endued you with wiſedom, govern your own family in ſuch ſort, that our Children Samuel and Martha may be obedient unto you: whom in the name and authority of God, I command that they obey you, for ſo the bleſſing of Almighty God ſhall light upon them.

Dear Wife, be not over penſive for me, for if God hath ordained me now to attain unto the end of my race, and that I muſt render into the hands of the Almighty my Soul, which ſo long time he hath lent me; my hope is, that of his holy and Divine mercy he will receive it into his Kingdom, for his own beloved Sons ſake Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, through whom I believe that my ſins are forgiven, for the only merit of his holy death and Paſſion. Alſo my prayer is, that he will aſſiſt me by the power of his holy Spirit unto my laſt breath.

Be fervent in Prayer, and in all other parts of Gods worſhip and ſervice, for this is the way to true bleſſedneſs. Take no care about ſending any thing unto me for theſe three weeks, and then I pray you ſend me ſome mony, if you think good, to give the Jaylor, and ſome what more for mine own neceſſaries, if it pleaſe God I live ſo long.

Iſa. 38. 5. Alſo I pray you call to mind what I have often told you, namely how God prolonged King Hezechias life for fifteen years. But he hath preſerved my life much longer; for it is many years ago ſince you ſaw me at the point of death, and through Gods goodneſs I am alive; and I hope, yea I am aſſured, that he will ſo long preſerve me as ſhall be for his glory and my eternal good, through his only free-Grace.

From the Priſon of Aſt, the ſixteenth of September, 1601.

The Biſhop of Aſt was ſomewhat troubled about this his Priſoner; for if he had let him go, he feared it would breed ſome ſcandal, and many might thereby be emboldned to open their mouths wide againſt the Roman Religion. Beſides, there was a Clauſe in the Contract made between his Excellency and the People of Vandois, which exempted thoſe of the Religion from offence, in theſe words; And if it ſhall fall out that they be asked or queſtioned withal in Piemont, about the cauſe of Religion, by any of his Excellencies Subjects, it ſhall be lawful for thoſe of the ſaid Religion to anſwer without ſuffering any penal or perſonal puniſhment for the ſame.

Now Copin had a queſtion put to him, in which reſpect he ought to have been cleared. But the Biſhop would by no means hear that he had unjuſtly impriſoned him; and therefore that his death ſhould not be laid to his charge, nor yet that he ſhould be ſent away abſolved, he ſent the cauſe of his Endictment to Pope Clement the eighth, to know what ſhould be done with him. We cannot learn what anſwer the Pope returned to the Biſhop; but not long after this good man was found dead in Priſon, not without ſome apparent ſuſpition of his being ſtrangled there; leſt if they had executed him in publick, the People ſhould have been edified by his conſtancy.

Being dead, he was condemned to be burned, and therefore having cauſed him to be brought out of Priſon, they read his Sentence openly, and the Body was caſt into the fire.

Thus have you the laſt among the Vandois, which is come to our knowledge, that were perſecuted to death for the cauſe of Religion.

Mention hath heretofore been often made of ſundry bloody Maſſacres in forein parts; but we are now come to fall upon the report of a buſineſs near home, which if the moſt wiſe and watchful providence of God had not timely and graciouſly prevented, it would have (to the ruine of our Church and State) proved ſuch a Maſſacre, the like whereof the Heart of man never conceived, the Ear of man never heard of, nor the Tongue or Peſt of man could ſcarſe ever have uttered; namely, at one blow to have blown up not only the King, Queen, and Royal poſterity, but the whole body of the State in general. Now as the Church and State had each of them a ſhare in this ſo admirable a deliverance from God upon the fifth day of November, Anno 1605. ſo each of them ſhewed their care, if it might be, for ever to perpetuate the praiſe of God for the ſame on the ſaid day; the one by ſtabliſhing an Act of Parliament for it; the other by publiſhing a form of thanksgiving the better to effect it; ſome expreſſion whereof the Reader may hap to meet with at the end of the diſcourſe following. Anno 1605.

A diſcourſe touching the manner of the diſcovery of the Powder-Treaſon, with the Examination of ſome of the Priſoners.

WHile this Land and whole Monarchy flouriſhed in a moſt happy and plentiful peace, as well at home as abroad, ſuſtained and conducted by theſe two main Pillars of all good government, Piety and Juſtice, no forain grudge, nor inward whiſpering of diſcontentment any way appearing; the King being upon his return from his hunting exerciſe at Royſton, upon occaſion of the drawing near of the Parliament time, which had been twice porogued already; partly in regard of the ſeaſon of the year, and partly of the Term; as the winds are ever ſtilleſt immediately before a ſtorm; and as the Sun blenks often hotteſt to foretel a following ſhowr; ſo at that time of greateſt calm did that ſecretly hatched Thunder begin to caſt forth the firſt flaſhes and flaming Lightnings of the approaching Tempeſt. For the Saturday of the week immediately preceding the Kings return, which was upon a Thurſday (being but ten days before the Parliament) the Lord Mountegle Son and heir to the Lord Morley, being in his own Lodging ready to go to Supper at ſeven of the Clock at night, one of his Footmen (whom he had ſent of an Errand over the ſtreet) was met by an unknown man of a reaſonable tall perſonage, who delivered him a Letter, charging him to put it in my Lord his Maſters hands. Which my Lord no ſooner received, but that having broken it up, and perceiving the ſame to be of an unknown and ſomewhat unlegible hand, and without either date or ſubſcription, did call one of his men unto him for helping him to read it. But no ſooner did he conceive the ſtrange contents thereof, although he was ſomewhat perplexed what conſtruction to make of it (as whether of a matter of conſequence, as indeed it was, or whether ſome fooliſh deviſed Paſquil by ſome of his Enemies to skare him from his attendance at the Parliament) yet did he as a moſt dutiful and loyal Subject conclude, not to conceal it, what ever might come of it. Whereupon, notwithſtanding the lateneſs and darkneſs of the night in that ſeaſon of the year, he preſently repaired to his Majeſties Palace at White-Hall, and there delivered the ſame to the Earl of Salisbury his Majeſties principal Secretary. Whereupon the ſaid Earl of Salisbury having read the Letter, and heard the manner of the coming of it to his hands, did greatly encourage and commend my Lord for his diſcretion; telling him plainly, that whatſoever the purpoſe of the Letter might prove hereafter, yet did this accident put him in mind of divers advertiſements he had received from beyond the Seas, wherewith he had acquainted as well the King himſelf, as divers of his privy Counſellors, concerning ſome buſineſs the Papiſts were in both at home and abroad, making preparation for ſome combination among them againſt this Parliament time, for enabling them to deliver at that time to the King ſome Petition for toleration of Religion: which ſhould be delivered in ſome ſuch order, and ſo well backed, as the King ſhould be loth to refuſe their requeſt. Like the ſturdy Beggars, craving Alms with one open hand, but carrying a ſtone in the other, in caſe of refuſal. And therefore did the Earl of Salisbury conclude with the Lord Mountegle, that he would in regard of the Kings abſence impart the ſame Letter to ſome more of his Majeſties Councel; whereof my Lord Mountegle liked well; only adding this requeſt by way of proteſtation, that whatſoever the event hereof might prove, it ſhould not be imputed to him, as proceeding from too light and too ſuddain an apprehenſion, that he delivered this Letter, being only moved thereunto for demonſtration of his ready devotion and care for preſervation of his Majeſty and the State. And thus did the Earl of Salisbury preſently acquaint the Lord Chamberlain with the ſaid Letter. Whereupon they two in the preſence of the Lord Mountele,

A Letter delivered to the Lord Mountegle.

Revealed to the Earl of Salisbury.

Purpoſe of the Papiſts for delivering petition to his Majeſty to crave toleration of Religion.

The Lord Chamberlain made privy to the Letter by the Earl of Salisbury.

Anno 1605.

Mountegle, calling to mind the former intelligence already mentioned, which ſeemed to have ſome relation with this Letter: The tender care which they ever carried to the preſervation of his Majeſties Perſon, made them apprehend, that ſome perillous attempt did thereby appear to be intended againſt the ſame; which did the more nearly concern the ſaid Lord Chamberlain to have a care of, in regard that it doth belong to the charge of his Office to overſee as well all places of Aſſembly where his Majeſty is to repair, as his Highneſs own private Houſes. And therefore did the ſaid two Counſellors conclude, that they ſhould joyn unto themſelves three more of the Councel, to wit, the Lord Admiral, the Earls of Worceſter and Northampton, to be alſo particularly acquainted with this accident: who having all of them concurred together to the re-examination of the Contents of the ſaid Letter, they did conclude, that how ſlight a matter it might at the firſt appear to be, yet was it not abſolutely to be contemned, in reſpect of the care which it behooved them to have of the preſervation of his Majeſties Perſon:

Thought meet by the Counſellors to acquaint the King with the Letter.

Wherefore they reſolved for two reaſons, firſt to acquaint the King himſelf with the ſame before they proceeded to any further inquiſition in the matter, as well for the expectation and experience they had of his Majeſties fortunate Judgment in clearing of obſcure Riddles and doubtful Myſteries; as alſo becauſe the more time would in the mean while be given for the Practiſe to ripen, if any was, whereby the diſcovery might be the more clear and evident, and the ground of proceeding thereupon more ſafe, juſt, and eaſie. And ſo according to their determination did the ſaid Earl of Salisbury repair to the King in his Gallery on Friday, being Alhallow-day, in the afternoon, which was the day after his Majeſties arrival, and none but himſelf being preſent with his Highneſs at that time, where without any other ſpeech or judgment given of the Letter, but only relating ſimply the form of the delivery thereof, he preſented it to his Majeſty, the Contents whereof follow.

Upon Alhallow-day the Earl of Salisbury, ſhewed the Letter to the King.

MY Lord, out of the love I bear ſome of your Friends, I have a care of your preſervation. Therefore, I would adviſe you as you tender your life, to deviſe ſome excuſe to ſhift off your attendance at this Parliament. For God and man have concurred to puniſh the wickedneſs of this time. And think not ſlightly of this advertiſement, but retire your ſelf into your Country, where you may expect the event in ſafety. For though there be no appearance of any ſtir, yet I ſay, they ſhall receive a terrible blow this Parliament, and yet they ſhall not ſee who hurts them. This counſel is not to be contemned, becauſe it may do you good, and can do you no harm, for the danger is paſt ſo ſoon as you have burnt the Letter. And I hope God will give you the grace to make good uſe of it: To whoſe holy Protection I commend you.

His Majeſties judgment of the Letter.

The King no ſooner read the Letter, but after a little pauſe, and then reading it over again, he delivered his judgment of it in ſuch ſort, as he thought it was not to be contemned, for that the ſtile of it ſeemed to be more quick, and pithy, then is uſual to be in any Paſquil, or Libel (the ſuperfluities of idle Brains.) But the Earl of Salisbury perceiving the King to apprehend it deeplier then he looked for, knowing his nature, told him that he thought by one Sentence in it, that it was like to be written by ſome fool or mad man, reading to him this Sentence in it, For the danger is paſt ſo ſoon as you have burnt the Letter, which he ſaid was like to be the ſaying of a fool: for if the danger was paſt ſo ſoon as the Letter was burnt, then the warning behooved to be of little avail, when the burning of the Letter might make the danger to be eſchewed. But the King on the contrary conſidering the former Sentence in the Letter, That they ſhould receive a terrible blow at this Parliament, and yet ſhould not ſee who hurt them, joyning it to the Sentence immediately following, already alledged, did thereupon conjecture, That the danger mentioned ſhould be ſome ſuddain danger by blowing up of Powder: For no other Inſurrection, Rebellion, or whatſoever other private and deſperate Attempt could be committed or attempted in time of Parliament, and the Authors thereof unſeen, except only it were by a blowing up of Powder, which might be performed by one baſe Knave in a dark Corner; whereupon he was moved to interpret and conſtrue the latter Sentence in the Letter (alledged by the Earl of Salisbury) againſt all ordinary ſence and conſtruction in Grammar, as if by theſe words, For the danger is paſt ſo ſoon as you have burnt the Letter, ſhould be cloſely underſtood the ſuddainty and quickneſs of the danger, which ſhould be as quickly performed and at an end, as that Paper ſhould be blazing up in the fire; turning that word of As ſoon, to the ſence of, As quickly: and therefore wiſhed, that before his going to the Parliament, the under Rooms of the Parliament-houſe might be well and narrowly ſearched. But the Earl of Saoisbury wondering at this his Majeſties commentary, which he knew to be ſo far contrary to his ordinary and natural diſpoſition, who did rather even ſin upon the other ſide, in not apprehending, nor truſting due advertiſement of practiſes and Perils when he was truly informed of them, whereby he had many times drawn himſelf into many deſperate dangers: and interpreting rightly this extraordinary Caution at this time to proceed from the Vigilant care he had of the whole State, more than of his own Perſon, which could not but have all periſhed together, if this deſignment had ſucceeded: He thought good to diſſemble ſtill unto the King, that there had been any juſt cauſe of ſuch apprehenſion; and ending the purpoſe with ſome merry jeſt on this Subject, as his cuſtome is, took his leave for that time. But though he ſeemed ſo to neglect it ſo his Majeſty, yet his cuſtomable and watchful care of the King and the State ſtill boyling within him; And having with the bleſſed Virgin Mary laid up in his heart the Kings ſo ſtrange judgment and conſtruction of it; he could not be at reſt till he acquainted the foreſaid Lords what had paſſed between the King and him in private.

His Majeſties Opinion for ſearching of the under Rooms of the Parliament houſe.

Whereupon they were all ſo earneſt to renew again the memory of the ſame purpoſe unto his Majeſty, as it was agreed that he ſhould the next day, being Saturday, repair to his Highneſs which he did in the ſaid privy Gallery, and renewed the memory thereof, the Lord Chamberlain then being preſent with the King. At what time it was determined, that the ſaid L. Chamberlain ſhould, according to his cuſtome and Office, view all the Parliament Houſes, both above and below, and conſider what likelihood or appearance of any ſuch danger might poſſible be gathered by the ſight of them: but yet as well for ſtaying of idle Rumors, as for being the more able to diſcern any myſtery, the nearer that things were in readineſs, his Journey thither was ordained to be deferred till the afternoon before the ſitting down of the Parliament, which was upon the Monday following. At wha time he (according to this concluſion) went to the Parliament houſe, accompanied with my Lord Mountegle, being in Zeal to the Kings Service earneſt and curious to ſee the event of that accident whereof he had the fortune to be the firſt diſcoverer: where, having viewed all the lower Rooms, he found in the vault under the upper Houſe great ſtore and proviſion of Billets, Faggots, and Coals: and inquiring of Whyneard Keeper of the Wardrobe, to what uſe he had put thoſe lower Rooms and Cellars; he told him that Thomas Percy had hired both the Houſe and part of the Cellar or Vault under the ſame, and that the Wood and Coal, under which were hidden thirty ſix Barrels of Powder great and ſmall, beſides great Bars of Iron, pieces of Timber, and maſſie Stones covered over with Fagots therein, was the ſaid Gentlemans own proviſion. Whereupon the Lord Chamberlain, caſting his eye aſide, perceived a fellow ſtanding in a Corner there, calling himſelf the ſaid Percies man and Keeper of that Houſe for him, but indeed was Guido Fawkes, the owner of that hand which ſhould have acted that monſtrous and helliſh Tragedy.

The determination to ſearch the Parliament houſe and the Rooms under it.

Wood and Coal found by the L. Chamberlain in the Vault.

A terrible blow indeed at once to have wracked. King, Queen, Prince, and Progeny, Religion, State, and all.

The Lord Chamberlain looking upon all things with a heedful indeed, yet, in outward appearance, with but a careleſs and reckleſs eye, (as became ſo wiſe and diligent a Miniſter) he preſently addreſſed himſelf to the King in the privy Gallery, where in the preſence of the Lord Treaſurer, the Lord Admiral, the Earls of Worceſter, Northampton, and Salisbury he made his report, what he had ſeen and obſerved there; noting that Monteagle had told him, That he no ſooner heard Tho. Percy named named to be the poſſeſſor of that Houſe; but conſidering both his backwardneſs in Religion, and the old dearneſs in friendſhip between himſelf and the ſaid Percy, he did greatly ſuſpect the matter, and that the Letter ſhould come from him. The ſaid Lord Chamberlain alſo told, That he did not wonder a little at the extraordinary great proviſion of Wood and Coal in that Houſe, where Thomas Percy had ſo ſeldom occaſion to remain; as likewiſe it gave him in his mind, that this man looked like a very tall and deſperate Fellow.

The Lord Chamberlains report and judgment of what he had obſerved in the ſearch.

This could not but increaſe the Kings former apprehenſion and jealouſie: whereupon he inſiſted (as before) that the Houſe was narrowly to be ſearched, and that thoſe Billets and Coals would be ſearched to the bottom, it being moſt ſuſpicious that they were laid there only for covering of the Powder. Of this ſame mind alſo were all the Counſellors then preſent. But upon the faſhion of making of the ſearch was it long debated: for upon the one ſide they were all ſo jealous of the Kings ſafety, that they all agreed, that there could not be too much caution uſed for preventing his danger. And yet upon the other part they were all extream loath and dainty, that in caſe this Letter ſhould prove to be nothing but the evaporation of an idle Brain; then a curious ſearch being made, and nothing found, ſhould not only turn to the general ſcandal of the King and the State, as being ſo ſuſpicious of every light and frivolous toy, but likewiſe lay an ill-ſavoured imputation upon the Earl of Northumberland, one of his Majeſties greateſt Subjects and Counſellors, this Thomas Percy being his Kinſman and moſt confident Familiar. And the rather were they curious upon this point, knowing how far the King deteſted to be thought ſuſpicious or jealous of any his good Subjects, though of the meaneſt degree. And therefore though they all agreed upon the main ground, which was to provide for the ſecurity of the Kings perſon, yet did they much differ in the circumſtances, by which this action might be beſt carried with leaſt din and occaſion of ſlander. But the King himſelf ſtill perſiſting that there were divers ſhrewd appearances, and that a narrow ſearch of thoſe places could prejudge no man that was innocent, he at laſt plainly reſolved them, that either muſt all the parts of thoſe Rooms be narrowly ſearched, and no poſſibility of danger left unexamined, or elſe he and they all muſt reſolve not to meddle in it at all, but plainly to go the next day to the Parliament, and leave the ſucceſs to Fortune; which he believed they would be loth to take upon their Conſciences: for in ſuch a caſe as this, an half doing was worſe than no doing at all. Whereupon it was at laſt concluded, That nothing ſhould be left unſearched in thoſe Houſes: and yet for the better colour and ſtay of rumor, in caſe nothing were found, it was thought meet, that upon a pretence of Whyneards miſſing ſome of the Kings Stuff or Hangings which he had in keeping, all theſe Rooms ſhould be narrowly ripped for them. And to this purpoſe was Sir Thomas Knevet (a Gentleman of his Majeſties privy Chamber) imployed, being a Juſtice of Peace in Weſtminſter, and one, of whoſe ancient fidelity both the late Queen and our now Soveraign have had large proof: who, according to the truſt committed unto him, went about the Midnight next after to the Parliament-Houſe, accompanied with a ſmall number as was fit for that Errand. But before his entry into the Houſe, finding Thomas Percies alleadged Man ſtanding without the doors, his Cloaths and Boots on at ſo dead a time of the Night, he reſolved to apprehend him, as he did, and afterward went forward to the ſearching of the Houſe, where after he had cauſed to be overturned ſome of the Billets and Coals, he firſt found one of the ſmall Barrels of Powder, and after all the reſt, to the number of thirty ſix Barrels, great and ſmall. And thereafter ſearching the Fellow whom he had taken, found three Matches, and all other Inſtruments fit for blowing up the Powder ready upon him, which made him inſtantly confeſs his own guiltineſs, declaring alſo unto him, That if he had happened to be within the Houſe when he took him, as he was immediately before (at the ending of his work) he would not have failed to have blown him up, Houſe and all.

Diſputation about the manner of the further ſearch.

Agreed that the ſearch, ſhould be under colour of ſeeking for Ward-rob eStuff miſſed by Whyneard.

Fawx found at Midnight without the Houſe.

Thus after Sir Thomas had cauſed the Wretch to be ſurely bound, and well guarded by the Company he had brought with him, he himſelf returned back to the Kings Palace, and gave warning of his ſucceſs to the Lord Chamberlain and Earl of Salisbury; who immediately warning the reſt of the Council that lay in the Houſe, as ſoon as they could get themſelves ready, came with their fellow Counſellors to the Kings Bedchamber, being at that time near four of the Clock in the Morning. And at the firſt entry at the Kings Chamber-door, the Lord Chamberlain, being not any longer able to conceal his joy for the preventing of ſo great a danger, told the King in a confuſed haſte, that all was found and diſcovered, and the Traytor in hands and faſt bound.

Anno 1605.

Then, order being firſt taken for ſending for the reſt of the Council that lay in the Town, the Priſoner himſelf was brought into the Houſe, where in reſpect of the ſtrangeneſs of the Accident, no man was ſtaid from the ſight or ſpeaking with him. And within a while after the Council did examine him; who ſeeming to put on a Roman Reſolution, did both to the Council and to every other perſon that ſpake with him that day, appear ſo conſtant and ſetled upon his grounds, as we had all thought we had found ſome new Mutius Scævola born in England; for notwithſtanding the horrour of the Fact, the guilt of his Conſcience, his ſudden ſurpriſing, the terror which ſhould have been ſtricken in him by coming into the preſence of ſo grave a Council, and the reſtleſs and confuſed queſtions that every man all that day did vex him with; yet was his countenance ſo far from being dejected, as he often ſmiled in ſcornful manner, not only avowing the Fact, but repenting only, with the ſaid Scævola, his failing in the exeuution thereof, whereof he ſaid the Devil and not God was the diſcoverer; anſwering quickly to every mans objection, ſcoffing at any idle queſtions which were propounded to him, and jeſting at ſuch as he thought had no authority to examine him.

All that day could the Council get nothing out of him touching his Complices, refuſing to anſwer to any ſuch queſtions as he thought might diſcover the Plot, and laying all the blame upon himſelf; whereunto he ſaid he was moved only for Religion and Conſcience ſake, denying the King to be his lawful Soveraign, or the Anointed of God, in reſpect he was an Heretick; and giving himſelf no other name than John Johnſon, Servant to Thomas Percy. But the next Morning being carried to the Tower of London, he did not there remain above two or three days, being twice or thrice in that ſpace re-examined, and the Rack only offered and ſhewed unto him, when the Mask of his Roman fortitude did viſibly begin to wear and ſlide off his Face; and then did he begin to confeſs part of the truth, and thereafter to open the whole matter, as doth appear by his Depoſitions immediately following.

The true Copy of the declaration of Guido Fawkes, taken in the preſence of the Counſellors whoſe Names are underwritten.

I Confeſs that a practice in general was firſt broken unto me againſt his Majeſty, for relief of the Catholick Cauſe, and not invented or propounded by my ſelf. And this was firſt propounded unto me about Eaſter laſt was Twelve-month, beyond the Seas, in the Low-Countries of the Archdukes obeiſance, by Thomas Winter, who came thereupon with me into England, and there we imparted our purpoſe to three other Gentlemen more, namely, Robert Catesby, Thomas Percy, and John Wright: who all five conſulting together of the means how to execute the ſame, and taking a Vow among our ſelves for ſecrecy (which Vow was this, You ſhall ſwear by the bleſſed Trinity, and by the Sacrament you now purpoſe to receive, never to diſcloſe directly or indirectly, by word or circumſtance, the matter that ſhall be propoſed to you to keep ſecret; nor deſiſt from the execution thereof until the reſt ſhall give you leave: After which, being confeſſed and receiving Abſolution, the forementioned received the Sacrament thereupon, by the hands of Gerrard the Jeſuit there preſent) Catesby propounded to have it performed by Gunpowder, and by making a Mine under the upper Houſe of Parliament: which place we made choice of the rather, becauſe Religion having been unjuſtly ſuppreſſed there, it was fitteſt that juſtice and puniſhment ſhould be executed there.

This

Anno 1605.

This being reſolved amongſt us, Thomas Percy hired a Houſe at Weſtminſter for that purpoſe, near adjoyning to the Parliament-Houſe, and there we begun to make our Mine about the 11. of December 1604.

The five that firſt entred into the work were Thomas Percy, Robert Catesby, Thomas Winter, John Wright, and my ſelf: and ſoon after we took unto us Chriſtopher Wright, having ſworn him alſo, and taken the Sacrament for ſecrecy.

When we came to the very foundation of the Wall of the Houſe, which was about three yards thick, and found it a matter of great difficulty, we took unto us another Gentleman, Robert Winter, in like manner with Oath and Sacrament as aforeſaid.

It was about Chriſtmas when we brought our Mine to the Wall, and about Candlemas we had wrought the Wall half through; and whilſt they were in working I ſtood as Sentinel to deſcry any man that came near, whereof I gave them warning, and ſo they ceaſed until I gave notice again to proceed.

All we ſeven lay in the Houſe, having Shot and Powder, being reſolved to die in that place, before we ſhould yield or be taken.

As they were working upon the Wall, they heard a ruſhing in the Cellar of removing of Coals, whereupon we feared we had been diſcovered, and they ſent me to go to the Cellar; who finding the Coals were a ſelling, and that the Cellar was to be lett, viewing the commodity thereof for our purpoſe, Percy went and hired the ſame for yearly Rent.

We had before this provided and brought into the Houſe twenty Barrels of Powder, which we removed into the Cellar, and covered the ſame with Billets and Faggots, which were provided for that purpoſe.

About Eaſter, the Parliament being prorogued till October next, we diſperſed our ſelves, and I retired into the Low-Countries, by advice and direction of the reſt, as well to acquaint Owen with the particulars of the Plot, as alſo leſt by my longer ſtay I might have grown ſuſpicious and ſo have come in queſtion.

In the mean time Percy having the Key of the Cellar, laid in more Powder and Wood into it. I returned about the beginning of September next, and then receiving the Key again of Mr. Percy, we brought in more Powder and Billets to cover the ſame again; and ſo I went for a time into the Country till the 30*th* of October.

It was further reſolved amongſt us, that the ſame day that this act ſhould have been performed, ſome other of our Confederates ſhould have ſurprized the perſon of the Lady Elizabeth the Kings eldeſt Daughter, who was kept in Warwickſhire at the Lord Harringtons Houſe, and preſently have proclaimed her Queen, having a project of a Proclamation ready for that purpoſe; wherein we made no mention of altering Religion, or would have avowed the deed to be ours, until we ſhould have had power enough to make our party good, and then we would have avowed both.

Concerning Duke Charles the Kings ſecond Son, we had ſundry conſultations how to ſeize on his Perſon. But becauſe we found no means how to compaſs it (the Duke being kept near London, where we had not forces enough) we reſolved to ſerve our turn with the Lady Elizabeth.

And in regard that before this Diſcourſe could be ready to go to the Preſs, Thomas Winter being apprehended and brought to the Tower, made a Confeſſion in ſubſtance agreeing with this former of Fawkes, only larger in ſome circumſtances: I have thought good to inſert the ſame likewiſe in this place, for the further clearing of the matter and greater benefit of the Reader.

Thomas Winters Confeſſion, taken the three and twentieth of November, in the year 1605, in the preſence of the Counſellors, whoſe Names are under-written.

My moſt Honourable Lords,

NOt out of hope to obtain pardon; for ſpeaking of my temporal part, I may ſay, The fault is greater than can be forgiven; nor affecting here the title of a good Subject; for I muſt redeem my Country from as great a danger, as I have hazarded the bringing of her into, before I can purchaſe any ſuch opinion: only at your Honours command I will briefly ſet down mine Accuſation, and how far I have proceeded in this buſineſs, which I ſhall the faithfuller do, ſince I ſee ſuch courſes are not pleaſing to Almighty God, and that all or the moſt material parts have been already confeſſed.

I remained with my Brother in the Country from Alhallontide until the beginning of Lent, in the year of our Lord 1603. the firſt year of the Kings Reign; about which time Mr. Catesby ſent thither, intreating me to come to London, where he and other my Friends would be glad to ſee me. I deſired him to excuſe me: for I found my ſelf not very well diſpoſed; and (which had happened never to me before) returned the Meſſenger without my company. Shortly I received another Letter, in any wiſe to come. At the ſecond Summons I preſently came up, and found him with Mr. John Wright at Lambeth, where he brake with me, how neceſſary it was not to forſake our Country (for he knew then I had a reſolution to go over) but to deliver her from the ſervitude in which ſhe remained, or at leaſt to aſſiſt her with our uttermoſt endeavours. I anſwered, that I had often hazarded my life upon far lighter terms, and now would not refuſe any good occaſion, wherein I might do ſervice to the Catholick Cauſe; but for my ſelf I knew no mean probable to ſucceed. He ſaid, that he had bethought him of a way at one inſtant to deliver us from all our bonds, and without any foreign help to replant again the Catholick Religion; and withal told me in a word, It was to blow up the Parliament-Houſe with Gunpowder; for, ſaid he, in that place have they done us all the miſchief, and perchance God hath deſigned that place for their puniſhment. I wondered at the ſtrangeneſs of the conceit, and told him, that true it was this ſtrake at the root, and would breed a confuſion fit to beget new alterations: but if it ſhould not take effect, (as moſt of this nature miſcarried) the ſcandal would be ſo great which the Catholick Religion might hereby ſuſtain, as not only our Enemies, but our Friends alſo would with good reaſon condemn us. He told me, The nature of the diſeaſe required ſo ſharp a remedy, and asked me if would give conſent. I told him, yes, in this or what elſe ſoever, if he reſolved upon it, I would venture my life. But I propoſed many difficulties, as want of an Houſe, and of one to carry the Mine, noiſe in the working, and ſuch like. His anſwer was, Let us give an attempt, and where it faileth paſs no further. But firſt, quoth he, becauſe we will leave no peaceable and quiet way untried, you ſhall go over and inform the Conſtable of the ſtate of the Catholicks here in England, intreating him to ſolicite his Majeſty at his coming hither, that the penal Laws may be recalled, and we admitted into the rank of his other Subjects; withal, you may bring over ſome confident Gentle-

Gentleman, ſuch as you ſhall underſtand beſt able for this buſineſs, and named unto me Maſter Fawkes. Shortly after I paſſed the Sea, and found the Conſtable at Bergben near Dunkirk, where by help of Maſter Owen I delivered my meſſage. Whoſe anſwer was, that he had ſtrict command from his Maſter, to do all good offices for the Catholicks, and for his own part he thought himſelf bound in Conſcience ſo to do, and that no good occaſion ſhould be omitted, but ſpake to him nothing of this matter.

Returning to Dunkirk with Maſter Owen, we had ſpeech whether he thought the Conſtable would faithfully help us, or no. He ſaid, he believed nothing leſs, and that they ſought only their own ends, holding ſmall account of Catholicks, I told him that there were many Gentlemen in England, who would not forſake their Countrey until they had tryed their uttermoſt, and rather venture their lives, then forſake her in this miſery. And to add one more to our number as a fit man both for Counſel and execution of whatſoever we ſhould reſolve, we wiſhed for Mr. Fawkes, whom I had heard good commendations of; hee told me the Gentleman deſerved no leſs, but was at Bruſſels, and that if he came not, as happily he might, before my departure, he would ſend him ſhortly after into England. I went ſoon after to Oſtend, where Sir William Stanley as then was not, but came two days after. I remained with him three or four days, in which time I asked him if the Catholicks in England ſhould do any thing to help themſelves, whether hee thought the Archduke would ſecond them? He anſwered, no: for all thoſe parts were ſo deſirous of peace with England, as they would endure no ſpeech of other enterpriſe; neither were it fit, ſaid he, to ſet any project afoot now the peace is upon concluding. I told him there was no ſuch reſolution, and ſo fell to diſcourſe of other matters, until I came to ſpeak of Maſter Fawkes, whoſe company I wiſhed over into England. I asked of his ſufficiency in the Wars, and told him we ſhould need ſuch as he if occaſion required; he gave very good Commendations of him. And as we were thus diſcourſing, and I ready to depart from Newport, and taking my leave of Sir William, Maſter Fawkes came into our company, newly returned, and ſaluted us. This is the Gentleman, ſaid Sir William, that we wiſhed for, and ſo we embraced again. I told him, ſome good friends of his wiſhed his company in England, and that if he pleaſed to come to Dunkirk, we would have further conference, whither I was then going: ſo taking my leave of them both, I departed. About two days after came Maſter Fawkes to Dunkirk, where I told him that we were upon a reſolution to do ſomewhat with England, if the peace with Spain helped us not, but had as yet reſolved upon nothing; ſuch or the like talk we paſſed at Graveling, where I lay for a wind, and when it ſerved we came both in one paſſage to Greenwich, near which place we took a pair of Oars, and ſo came up to London, and came to Maſter Catesby whom we found in his lodging; hee welcomed us into England, and asked me what news from the Conſtable. I told him, good words, but I feared the deeds would not anſwer. This was the beginning of Eaſter Term, and about the midſt of the Term (whether ſent for by Maſter Catesby, or upon ſome buſineſs of his own) up came Maſter Thomas Percy. The firſt word he ſpoke (after he came into our company) was, ſhall we always (Gentlemen) talk, and never do any thing? Maſter Catesby took him aſide, and had ſpeech about ſomewhat to be done, ſo as firſt we might all take an Oath of Secrecy, which we reſolved within two or three days to do; ſo as there we met behind St. Clements, Mr. Catesby, Mr. Percy, Maſter Wright, Maſter Guy Fawkes, and my ſelf; and having upon a Primer given each other the Oath of Secrecy, in a Chamber where no other body was, wee went after into the next Room, and heard Maſs, and received the bleſſed Sacrament upon the ſame. Then did Maſter Catesby diſcloſe to Maſter Percy, and I together with John Wright tell to Maſter Fawkes the buſineſs for which we took this Oath, which they both approved. And then was Maſter Percy ſent to take the Houſe which Maſter Catesby in mine abſence had learned did belong to one Ferris, which with ſome difficulty in the end he obtained, and became as Ferris before was, Tenant to Whynniard. Maſter Fawkes underwent the name of Maſter Percies man, calling him Johnſon, becauſe is name was the moſt unknown, and received the keyes of the Houſe, until we heard that the Parliament was adjorned to the ſeventh of February. At which time we all departed ſeveral ways into the Countrey, to meet again at the beginning at Michaelmas Term. Before this time alſo it was thought convenient to have a Houſe that might anſwer to Maſter Percies, where we might make proviſion of Powder and Wood for the Mine, which being there in a night made ready, ſhould in a night be conveied by Boat to the houſe by the Parliament, becauſe we were loth to foyl that with often going in and out. There was none that we could deviſe ſo fit as Lambeth, where Maſter Catesby often lay; and to be keeper thereof (by Maſter Catesbys choiſe) we received into the number, Keyes, as a truſty honeſt man: this was about a Month before Michaelmas.

Anno 1605.

Some fortnight after towards the beginning of the Term, Maſter Fawkes and I came to Maſter Catesby at Moorecrofts, where we agreed that now was time to begin and ſet things in order for the Mine. So Maſter Fawkes went to London, and the next day ſent for mee to come over to him; when I came, the cauſe was, for that the Scotiſh Lords were appointed to ſit in conference of the Union in Maſter Percies Houſe. This hindred our beginning until a fortnight before Chriſtmas, by which time both Mr. Percy and maſter Wright were come to London, and we againſt their coming had provided a good part of the powder; ſo as we all five entred with Tools fit to begin our work, having provided our ſelves of Baked meats, the leſs to need ſending abroad. We entred late in the night, and were never ſeen, ſave onely Maſter Percies man, until Chriſtmas Eve. In which time we wrought under a little Entry to the wall of the Parliament houſe, and underpropped it, as we went, with wood.

Whileſt we were together, we began to faſhion our buſineſs, and diſcourſed what we ſhould do after this deed was done. The firſt queſtion was how we might ſurpriſe the next Heir a the Prince happily would be at the Parliament with the King his Father, how ſhould we then be able to ſeize on the Duke? This Burthen Mr. Percy undertook, that by his acquaintance, he, with another Gentleman, would enter the Chamber without ſuſpition, and having ſome dozen others at ſeveral Doors to expect his coming, and two or three on Horsback at the Court Gate to receive him, he would undertake (the blow being given, until which he would attend in the Dukes Chamber) to carry him ſafe away: for he ſuppoſed moſt of the Court would be abſent, and ſuch as were there, not ſuſpecting, or unprovided for any ſuch matter. For the Lady Elizabeth, it were eaſie to ſurpriſe her in the Country by drawing Friends together at an hunting near the Lord Harringtons, and Aſhby Mr. Catebys houſe, being not farr off, was a fit place for preparation.

The next was for Mony and Horſes, which if we could provide in any reaſonable meaſure (having the Heir apparent, and the firſt knowledge by four or five days) was odds ſufficient.

Then what Lords we ſhould ſave from the Parliament; which was firſt agreed in general, as many as we could that were Catholicks, or ſo diſpoſed; But after we deſcended to ſpeak of particulars.

Next what forrain Princes we ſhould acquaint with this before, or joyn with after. For this point we agreed, that firſt we could not enjoyn Princes to that ſecrecy, nor oblige them by Oath; ſo to be ſecure of their promiſes: beſides we knew not whether they will approve the project or diſlike it. And if they do allow thereof, to prepare before might beget ſuſpition, and not to provid until the buſineſs were acted, the ſame letter that carried news of the thing done, might aſwel intreat their help and furtherance. Spain is too ſlow in his preparations to hope any good from in the firſt extremities, and France too near and too dangerous; who with the Shipping of Holland, we feared, of all the world might make away with us.

But

Sir Edward Cooke knight at the araignment of Garnet adds further, that Catesby and Thomas Percy meeting together complained one to another of the Kings proceedings and therefore the only way was to kill the King, which Percy himſelf would undertake to do. No. Thom, ſaid Catesby, thou ſhalt not ſo adventure thy ſelf, there is a plot to our greater advantage, and then diſcovered to him the Powder Treaſon.

Anno 1605.

But while we were in the middle of theſe diſcourſes, we heard that the Parliament ſhould be anew adjourned until after Michaelmas; upon which tidings we broke off both diſcourſe and working until after Chriſtm.as. About Candlemas we brought over in a Boat the Powder, which we had provided at Lambeth, and laid it in Mr. Percies Houſe, becauſe we were willing to have all our dangers in one place.

We wrought alſo another fortnight in the Mine againſt the Stone-wall, which was very hard to break through; at which time we called in Kit Wright; and near to Eaſter, as we wrought the third time, opportunity was given to hire the Cellar, in which we reſolved to lay the Powder and leave the Mine.

Now by reaſon that the charge of maintaining us all ſo long together, beſides the number of ſeveral houſes, which for ſeveral uſes had been hired, and buying of Powder, &c. had lain heavy upon Mr. Catesby alone to ſupport; it was neceſſary for him to call in ſome others to eaſe his charge, and to that end deſired leave, that he, with Mr. Percy, and a third, whom they ſhould call, might acquaint whom they thought fit and willing to the buſineſs; For many, ſaid he, may be content that I ſhould know, who would not therefore that all the Company ſhould be acquainted with their names: to this we all agreed.

After this Mr. Fawkes laid into the Cellar (which he had newly taken) a thouſand of Billets, and five hundred of Fagots, and with that covered the Powder, becauſe we might have the houſe free, to ſuffer any one to enter that would. Mr. Catesby wiſhed us to conſider, whether it were not now neceſſary to ſend Mr. Fawkes over, both to abſent himſelf for a time, as alſo to acquaint Sir William Stanley and Mr. Owen with this matter. We agreed that he ſhould (provided that he gave it them with the ſame Oath that we had taken it before) viz. to keep it ſecret from all the world. The reaſon why we deſired Sir William Stanley ſhould be acquainted herewith, was to have him with us as ſoon as we could; And for Mr. Owen, he might hold good correſpondency after with foreign Princes. So Mr. Fawkes departed about Eaſter for Flanders, and returned the later end of Auguſt. He told me that when he arrived at Bruſſels, Sir William Stanley was not returned from Spain, ſo as he uttered the matter only to Owen, who ſeemed well pleaſed with the buſineſs, but told him that ſurely Sir William would not be acquainted with any Plot, as having buſineſs now a foot in the Court of England: but he himſelf would be always ready to tell it him, and ſend him away ſo ſoon as it were done.

About this time did Mr. Percy and Mr. Catesby meet at the Bathe, where they agreed, that the Company being yet but few, Mr. Catesby ſhould have the others authority to call in whom he thought beſt; by which Authority he called in after Sir Everard Digby, though at what time I know not, and laſt of all Mr. Francis Treſham. The firſt promiſed, as I heard Mr. Catesby ſay, fifteen hundred pounds; the ſecond two thouſand pounds; Mr. Percy himſelf promiſed all that he could get of the Earl of Northumberlands Rents, which was about four thouſand pounds, and to provide many galloping Horſes to the number of ten.

Mean while Mr. Fawkes and my ſelf alone bought ſome new Powder, as ſuſpecting the firſt to be dank, and conveyed it into the Cellar, and ſet it in order as we reſolved it ſhould ſtand.

Then was the Parliament anew prorogued until the fifth of November, ſo as we all went down until ſome ten days before, when Mr. Catesby came up with Mr. Fawkes to an houſe by Enfield-Chace called White-Webs, whither I came to them, and Mr. Catesby wiſhed me to enquire whither the young Prince came to the Parliament: I told him, that I heard that his Grace would not be there. Then muſt we have our Horſes, ſaid Mr. Catesby, beyond the Water, and proviſion of more company to ſurprize the Prince and leave the Duke alone.

Two days after, being Sunday at Night, in came one to my Chamber, and told me that a Letter had been given to my Lord Mountegle to this effect, That he wiſhed his Lordſhips abſence from the Parliament, becauſe a blow would there be given; which Letter he preſently carried to my Lord of Salisbury.

On the Morrow I went to White-Webs, and told it Mr. Catesby, aſſuring him withal that the matter was diſcloſed, and wiſhing him in any caſe to forſake his Country. He told me he would ſee further as yet, and reſolved to ſend Mr. Fawkes to try the uttermoſt, proteſting that if it were his caſe, he would try the ſame adventure.

On Wedneſday Mr. Fawkes went and returned at Night, of which we were very glad.

On Thurſday I came to London, and on Friday Mr. Catesby, Mr. Treſham and I met at Barnet, where we queſtioned how this Letter ſhould be ſent to my Lord Mountegle, but could not conceive; for Mr. Treſham forſware it, whom we ſuſpected.

On Saturday Night I met Mr. Treſham again in Lincolns-Inn-Walks. Where he told ſuch ſpeeches, that my Lord of Salisbury ſhould uſe to the King, as I gave it loſt the ſecond time, and repeated the ſame to Mr. Catesby, who hereupon was reſolved to be gone, but ſtayed to have Mr. Percy come up, whoſe conſent herein we wanted. On Sunday Mr. Percy being dealt with to that end would needs abide the uttermoſt trial.

This ſuſpicion of all hands put us into ſuch confuſion, as Mr. Catesby reſolved to go down into the Country the Monday that Mr. Percy went to Sion, and Mr. Percy reſolved to follow the ſame Night, or early the next Morning. About five of the Clock, being Tueſday, came the younger Wright to my Chamber, and told me that a Nobleman called the Lord Mountegle, ſaying, Ariſe and come to Eſſex-Houſe, for I am going to call up my Lord of Northumberland; ſaying withal, The matter is diſcovered. Go back Mr. Wright (quoth I) and learn what you can about Eſſex-Gate. Shortly he returned and ſaid, Surely all is loſt: for Lepton is got on Horſeback at Eſſex-Door: and as he parted, he asked if their Lordſhips would have any more with him; and being anſwered no, he is rode as faſt up Fleetſtreet as he can ride. Go you then (quoth I) to Mr. Percy, for ſure it is for him they ſeek, and bid him be gone, I will ſtay and ſee the uttermoſt. Then I went to the Court-Gates and found them ſtraightly guarded, ſo as no body could enter. From thence I went down towards the Parliament-Houſe, and in the middle of Kingſtreet found the Guard ſtanding, that would not let me paſs. And as I returned I heard one ſay, There is a Treaſon diſcovered, in which the King and the Lords ſhould have been blown up. So then I was fully ſatisfied that all was known, and went to the Stable where my Gelding ſtood, and rode into the Country. Mr. Catesby had appointed our meeting at Dunchurch, but I could not overtake them until I came to my Brothers, which was Wedneſday Night. On Thurſday we took the Armour at my Lord Windſors, and went that Night to one Stephen Littletons Houſe, where the next day (being Friday) as I was early abroad to diſcover, my Man came unto me and ſaid, that an heavy miſchance had ſevered all the Company; for that Mr. Catesby, Mr. Rookwood and Mr. Grant were burned with Gunpowder, upon which ſight the reſt diſperſed. Mr. Littleton wiſhed me to fly, and ſo would he. I told him I would firſt ſee the Body of my Friend and bury him, whatſoever befel me. When I came, I found Mr. Catesby reaſonable well, Mr. Percy, both the Wrights, Mr. Rookewood and Mr. Grant. I asked them what they reſolved to do: they anſwered, we mean here to die. I ſaid again, I would take ſuch part as they did. About eleven of the Clock came the Company to beſet the Houſe, and as I walked into the Court, I was ſhot into the Shoulder, which loſt me the uſe of mine Arm: the next ſhot was the elder Wright ſtricken dead; after him the younger Mr. Wright, and fourthly Ambroſe Rookewood ſhot. Then ſaid Mr. Catesby to me (ſtanding before the Door they were to enter) ſtand by me Tom, and we will die together. Sir, quoth I, I have loſt the uſe of my right Arm, and I fear that will cauſe me to be taken. So as we ſtood cloſe together, Mr. Catesby, Mr. Percy, and my ſelf, they two were ſhot (as far as I could gueſs, with one Bullet) and then the Company entred upon me, hurt me in the Belly with a Pike, and gave me other wounds, until one came behind and caught hold of both mine Arms.

And ſo remain yours, &c.

BUt here let us leave Fawkes in a lodging fit for ſuch a Gueſt, and taking time to adviſe upon his Conſcience, and turn our ſelves to that part of the Hiſtory which concerns the fortune of the reſt of his partakers in that abominable Treaſon. The News was no ſooner ſpread abroad that morning, which was upon a Tueſday, the fifth of November, and the firſt day deſigned for that Seſſion of Parliament; The News, I ſay, of this ſo ſtrange and unlooked for Accident was no ſooner divulged, but ſome of theſe Conſpirators, namely, Winter and the two Brothers the Wrights, thought it high time for them to haſten out of the Town, (for Catesby was gone the Night before, and Percy at four of the Clock in the Morning the ſame day of the diſcovery) and all of them held their courſe with more haſt than good ſpeed, to Warwickſhire toward Coventry, where the next day Morning, being Wedneſday, and about the ſame hour that Fawkes was taken in Weſtminſter, one Grant a Gentleman having aſſociated unto him ſome others of his Opinion, all violent Papiſts and ſtrong Recuſants, came to a Stable of one Benock a Rider of great Horſes, and having violently broken up the ſame, carried along with them all the great Horſes that were therein, to the number of ſeven or eight, belonging to divers Noblemen and Gentlemen of that Country, who had put them into the Riders hands to be made fit for their ſervice. And ſo both that company of them which fled out of London, As alſo Grant and his Complices met all together at Dunchurch at Sir Everard Digby his Lodging the Tueſday at Night, after the diſcovery of this treacherous attempt: the which Digby had likewiſe for his part appointed a match of Hunting to have been hunted the next day, which was Wedneſday, though his mind was Nimrod-like upon a far other manner of hunting, more bent upon the blood of reaſonable Men than brute Beaſts.

The taking of the Horſes out of the Stable at Warwick by Grant and others.

The Hunting Match appointed by Sir Everard Digby.

This company and helliſh Society thus convened, finding their purpoſe diſcovered and their treachery prevented, did reſolve to run a deſperate courſe, and ſince they could not prevail by ſo private a Blow, to practiſe by a publick Rebellion either to attain to their intents, or at leaſt to ſave themſelves in the throng of others. And therefore gathering all the Company they could unto them, and pretending the quarrel of Religion, having intercepted ſuch proviſion of Armour, Horſes and Powder, as the time could permit, thought by running up and down the Country, both to augment piece and piece their number (dreaming to themſelves that they had the virtue of a Snow-ball, which being little at the firſt, and tumbling down from a great Hill, groweth to a great quantity, by increaſing it ſelf with the Snow that it meeteth by the way) and alſo that they beginning firſt this brave ſhew in one part of the Country, ſhould by their ſympathy and example ſtir up and encourage the reſt of their Religion in other parts of England to riſe, as they had done there. But when they had gathered their force to the greateſt, they came not to the number of Fourſcore, and yet were they troubled all the hours of the day to keep and contain their own Servants from ſtealing from them; (who notwithſtanding all their care) daily left them, being far inferiour to Gideons Hoſt in number, but far more in faith or juſtneſs of quarrel.

Anno 1605.

Their going into Arms after the Plot diſcovered.

Their number never above Fourſcore.

And ſo after this Catholick Troop had wandred a while through Warwickſhire to Worceſterſhire, and from thence to the edge and borders of Staffordſhire, this gallantly armed Band had not the honour at the laſt to be beaten with the Kings Lieutenant or extraordinary Commiſſioners ſent down for the purpoſe, but only by the ordinary Sheriff of Worceſterſhire were they all beaten, killed, taken & diſperſed. Wherein ye have to note this following circumſtance ſo admirable, and ſo lively diſplaying the greatneſs of Gods Juſtice, as it could not be concealed without betraying in a manner the glory due to the Almighty for the ſame.

Their flight.

Although divers of the Kings Proclamations were poſted down after theſe Traytors with all the ſpeed poſſible, declaring the odioúſneſs of that bloody attempt, the neceſſity to have had Percy preſerved alive, if it had been poſſible, and the aſſembly together of that damned Crew, now no more ſecret Conſpirators, but open and avowed Rebels; yet the far diſtance of the way (which was above an hundred miles) together with the extream deepneſs thereof, joyned alſo with the ſhortneſs of the day, was the cauſe that the hearty and loving affections of the Kings good Subjects in thoſe parts prevented the ſpeed of his Proclamations. For on the third day after the flying down of theſe Rebels, which was on the Friday next after the diſcovery of the Plot, they were moſt of them all ſurprized by the Sheriff of Worceſterſhire at Holbeach, about the Noon of the day, and that in manner following.

Overtaken at Holbeach in Staffordſhire, in Stephen Littletons Houſe.

Grant, of whom I have made mention before, for taking the great Horſes, who had not all the preceding time ſtirred from his own houſe till the next Morning after the Attempt ſhould have been put in execution, he then laying his account without his Hoſt (as the Proverb is) that their Plot had, without failing, received the day before their hoped for ſucceſs, took, or rather ſtole out their Horſes (as I ſaid before) for enabling him, and ſo many of that Soul-leſs Society that had ſtill remained in the Country near about him, to make a ſudden ſurprize upon the Kings elder Daughter, the Lady Elizabeth, having her reſidence near to that place, at the Lord Harringtons Houſe; whom they thought to have uſed for the colour of their treacherous deſign (his Majeſty, her Father, her Mother and Male Children being all deſtroyed above.) And to this purpoſe alſo had that Nimrod, Digby, provided his hunting match againſt the ſame time, that numbers of People being flocked together upon the pretence thereof, they might the eaſilier have brought to paſs the ſudden ſurprize of her perſon.

Grant attempt to ſurprize the Lady Elizabeth.

Now the violent taking away of thoſe Horſes long before day, did ſeem to be ſo great a Riot in the eyes of the common People, that knew of no greater myſtery: And the bold attempting thereof did engender ſuch a ſuſpicion of ſome following Rebellion in the hearts of the wiſer ſort, as both great and ſmall began to ſtir and arm themſelves, upon this unlooked for Accident. Among mong whom Sir Fulke Grevill the Elder, Knight, as became one both ſo ancient in years and good reputation, and by his Office being Deputy Lieutenant of Warwickſhire, though unable in his Body, yet by the zeal and true fervency of his mind, did firſt apprehend this foreſaid Riot to be nothing but the ſparkles and ſure Indices of a following Rebellion; whereupon both ſtoutly and honeſtly he took order to get into his own hands the Munition and Armour of all ſuch Gentlemen about him, as were either abſent from their own Houſes, or in doubtful ward; And alſo ſent forth direction to the Towns about him, as thereupon did follow the ſtriking of Winter by a poor Smith, who had likewiſe been taken by theſe vulgar People, but that he was reſcued by the reſt of his Company; who perceiving that the Country before them had notice of them, haſtened away with loſs in their own ſight, 16 of their Followers being taken by the Townſmen, and ſent preſently to the Sheriff at Warwick, and from thence to London.

But before 12 or 16 hours paſt, Catesby, Percy, the Winters, Wrights, Rookwood, and the reſt bringing then the aſſurance that their main Plot was failed and bewrayed, whereupon they had builded the golden Mountains of their glorious hopes: They then took their laſt deſperate reſolution to flock together in a Troop and wander, as they did for the Reaſons aforetold. But as upon the one part, the zealous duty to their God and their Soveraign was ſo deeply imprinted in the hearts of all the meaneſt and pooreſt ſort of the People (although then knowing of no further myſtery than ſuch publick miſbehaviours as their own eyes taught them) as notwithſtanding all their fair ſhews and pretence of their Catholick cauſe, no Creature, Man or Woman, through all the Country, would once ſo much as give them willingly a Cup of Drink, or any ſort of comfort or ſupport, but with Execrations deteſted them: So on the other part, the Sheriffs of the Shires where-through they wandred, convening their People with all ſpeed poſſible, hunted as hotly after them, as the evilneſs of the way and the unprovidedneſs of their People upon that ſudden could permit them. And ſo at laſt after Sir Richard Verney, Sheriff of Warwickſhire, had carefully and ſtraitly been in chaſe of them to the confines of his County, part of the meaner ſort being alſo apprehended by him; Sir Richard Walſh Sheriff of Worceſterſhire did likewiſe dutifully and hotly purſue them through his Shire; And having gotten ſure trial of their taking harbour at the Houſe above-named, he did ſend Trumpeters and Meſſengers to them, commanding them in the Kings Name to render unto him his Majeſties Miniſter; and knowing no more at that time of their guilt than was publickly viſible, did promiſe upon their dutiful and obedient rendring unto him, to intercede at the Kings hand for the ſparing of their lives: Who received only from them this ſcornful Anſwer (they being better witneſſes to themſelves of their inward evil Conſciences.) That he had need of better aſſiſtance, than of thoſe few numbers that were with him, before he could be able to command or controll them.

The preparation to aſſault the Houſe.

But here fell the wondrous work of Gods Juſtice, that while this Meſſage paſſed between the Sheriff and them, the Sheriffs and his Peoples zeal being juſtly kindled and augmented by their arrogant Anſwer, and ſo they preparing themſelves to give a furious aſſault; and the other Party making themſelves ready within the Houſe to perform their promiſe by a defence as reſolute; It pleaſed God that in the mending of the Fire in their Chamber, one ſmall ſpark ſhould flee out and light among leſs than two pound weight of Powder, which was drying a little from the Chimney; which being thereby blown up, ſo maimed the Faces of ſome of the principal Rebels, and the Hands and Sides of others of them (blowing up with it alſo a great Bag full of Powder, which notwithſtanding never took fire) as they were not only diſabled and diſcouraged hereby from any further reſiſtance, in reſpect Catesby himſelf, Rookwood, Grant, and divers others of greateſt account among them were thereby made unable for defence; but alſo wonderfully ſtrucken with amazement in their guilty Conſciences, calling to memory how God had juſtly puniſhed them with that ſame Inſtrument which they ſhould have uſed for the effectuating of ſo great a ſin, according to the old Latin ſaying, In quo peccamus, in eodem plectimur: as they preſently (ſee the wonderful power of Gods Juſtice upon guilty Conſciences) did all fall down upon their knees, praying God to pardon them for their bloody enterprize: and thereafter giving over any further debate, opened the Gate, ſuffered the Sheriffs People to ruſh in furiouſly among them, and deſperately ſought their own preſent deſtruction; the three Specials of them joyning Backs together, Catesby, Percy and Winter, whereof two with one ſhot, Catesby and Percy were ſlain, and the third, Winter, taken and ſaved alive.

Catesby who was the firſt Inventer of this Treaſon in general, and of the manner of working the ſame by powder in ſpecial, himſelf now firſt maimed with the blowing up of Powder, and next he and Percy both killed with one ſhot proceeding from Powder.

And thus theſe reſolute and high aſpiring Catholicks, who dreamed of no leſs than the deſtruction of King and Kingdoms, promiſed to themſelves no lower eſtate than the government of great and ancient Monarchies, were miſerably defeated and quite overthrown in an inſtant; falling in the Pit which they had prepared for others, and ſo fulfilling that Sentence which his Majeſty did in a manner prophecy of them in his Oration to the Parliament; ſome preſently ſlain, others deadly wounded, ſtripped of their Cloaths, left lying miſerably naked, and ſo dying rather of cold than of the danger of their wounds; and the reſt that either were whole, or but lightly hurt, taken and led Priſoners by the Sheriff, the ordinary Miniſter of Juſtice, to the Gaol, the ordinary place even of the baſeſt Malefactors, where they remained till their ſending up to London, being met with a huge confluence of People of all ſorts, deſirous to ſee them as the rareſt ſort of Monſters; fools to laugh at them, Women and Children to wonder, all the common People to gaze, the wiſer ſort to ſatisfie their curioſity in ſeeing the outward caſes of ſo unheard of a Villany; and generally all ſorts of People to ſatiate and fill their Eyes with the ſight of them, whom in their hearts they ſo far admired and deteſted: ſerving ſo for a fearful and publick ſpectacle of Gods fierce wrath and juſt indignation.

Anno III. JACOBI Regis.

An Act for a publick Thankſgiving to Almighty God, every Year, on the fifth day of November.

Forasmuch as Almighty God hath in all Ages ſhewed his power and mercy, in the miraculous and gracious deliverance of his Church, and in the protection of Religious Kings and States, and that no Nation of the Earth hath been bleſſed with greater benefits than this Kingdom now enjoyeth, having the true and free profeſſion of the Goſpel under our moſt Soveraign Lord King JAMES, the moſt great, learned and religious King that ever reigned therein, enriched with a moſt hopeful and plentiful Progeny, proceeding out of his Royal loyns, promiſing continuance of this happineſs and profeſſion to all Poſterity: the which many malignant and deviliſh Papiſts, Jeſuites and Seminary Prieſts, much envying and fearing, conſpired moſt horribly, when the Kings moſt excellent Majeſty, the Queen, the Prince, and all the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons ſhould have been aſſembled in the Upper-houſe of Parliament, upon the fifth day of November, in the Year of our Lord 1605. ſuddenly to have blown up the ſaid whole Houſe with Gunpowder; an invention ſo inhumane, barbarous and cruel, as the like was never before heard of, as was (as ſome of the principal Conſpirators confeſs) purpoſely deviſed and concluded to be done in the ſaid Houſe, that where ſundry neceſſary and religious Laws for preſervation of the Church and State were made, which they falſly and ſlanderouſly term cruel Laws enacted againſt them and their Religion, both place and perſons ſhould be all deſtroyed and blown up at once; which would have turned to the utter ruine of this whole Kingdom, had it not pleaſed Almighty God, by inſpiring the Kings moſt Excellent Majeſty with a divine Spirit, to interpret ſome dark phraſes of a Letter ſhewed to his Majeſty, above and beyond all ordinary conſtruction, thereby miraculouſly diſcovering this hidden Treaſon, not many hours before the appointed time for the execution thereof: Therefore the Kings moſt excellent Majeſty, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and all his Majeſties faithful and loving Subjects do moſt juſtly acknowledge this great and infinite bleſſing to have proceeded merely from God his great mercy, and to his moſt holy Name do aſcribe all honour, glory and praiſe. And to the end this unfeigned thankfulneſs may never be forgotten, but be had in a perpetual remembrance, that all Ages to come may yield praiſes to his Divine Majeſty for the ſame, and have in memory this joyful Day of deliverance.

Be it therefore enacted by the Kings moſt Excellent Majeſty, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and the Commons in this preſent Parliament aſſembled, and by the Authority of the ſame, That all and ſingular Miniſters in every Cathedral or Pariſh Church, or other uſual place for Common-Prayer within this Realm of England and the Dominions of the ſame, ſhall always upon the fifth day of November ſay Morning-Prayer, and give unto Almighty God thanks for this moſt happy Deliverance: and that all and every perſon and perſons inhabiting within this Realm of England and the Dominions of the ſame, ſhall always upon that day diligently and faithfully reſort to the Pariſh Church or Chappel where the ſaid Morning-Prayer, Preaching, or other Service of God ſhall be uſed and miniſtred.

And becauſe all and every perſon may be put in mind of this duty, and be the better prepared to the ſaid Holy Service, Be it enacted by Authority aforeſaid, that every Miniſter ſhall give warning to his Pariſhioners publickly in the Church at Morning-Prayer, the Sunday before every ſuch fifth day of November, for the due obſervation of the ſaid Day. And that after Morning-Prayer, or preaching on the ſaid fifth day of November, they read diſtinctly and plainly this preſent Act.

God ſave the King.

A Prayer and Thankſgiving for the happy deliverance of his Majeſty, the Queen, the Prince, and the States of Parliament, &c.

ALmighty God, who haſt in all Ages ſhewed thy Power and mercy, in the miraculous and Gracious deliverances of thy Church, and in the protection of Righteous and Religious Kings, and States profeſſing thy holy and eternal Truth, againſt the wicked Conſpiracies, and malicious practiſes of all the Enemies thereof: we yield unto thee from the very ground of our hearts all poſſible praiſe and thanks for thy wonderful and mighty deliverance of our gracious Soveraign K. James, the Queen, the Prince, and all the Royal Branches, with the Nobility, Clergy, and Commons of this Realm, aſſembled together at this preſent in Parliament, by Popiſh Treachery appointed as ſheep to the ſlaughter, and that in moſt barbarous and ſavage manner, no age yielding example of the like cruelty intended towards the Lords annointed and his People. Can this thy goodneſs, O Lord, be forgotten, worthy to be written in a Pillar of Marble, that we may ever remember to praiſe thee for the ſame, as the fact is worthy a laſting Monument, that all poſterity may learn to deteſt it? From their unnatural Conſpiracy, not our merit, but thy mercy, not our foreſight, but thy providence hath delivered us, not our love to thee, but thy love to thine annointed Servant, and thy poor Church, with whom thou haſt promiſed to be preſent to the end of the world. And therefore not unto us, not unto us, Lord, but to thy name be aſcribed all honour, and glory in all Churches of the Saints, throughout all generations: for thou Lord haſt diſcovered the ſnares of death, Thou haſt broken them and we are delivered. Be thou ſtill our mighty Protector, and ſcatter our cruel Enemies which delight in Blood: infatuate their counſel, and root out that Babiloniſh and Antichriſtian Sect, which ſay with Jeruſalem, Down with it, down with it, even to the ground. And to that end ſtrengthen the hands of our gracious King, the Nobles and Magiſtrates of the Land with Judgment und Juſtice to cut off thoſe workers of iniquity (whoſe Religion is Rebellion, whoſe Faith is Faction, whoſe praſtiſe is murthering of Souls and Bodies) and to root them out of the confines and limits of this Kingdom, that they may never prevail againſt us, and triumph in the ruine of thy Church; and give us grace by true aud ſerious repentance to avert theſe and the like Judgments from us. This, Lord, we earneſtly crave at thy merciful hand, together with the continuance of thy powerful protection over our dread Soveraign, the whole Church, and theſe Realms, and the ſpeedy confuſion of our implacable Enemies, and that for thy dear Sons ſake, our only Mediator and Advocate. Amen.

Anno 1611.

Franco di Franco, an Italian, made away in ſecret in the City of Vilne.

IN the year 1611. on the day which the Papiſts call the Feaſt of God, a young man of ſix and twenty years old, being miraculouſly called unto the knewledge of the Goſpel, was by certain Italians led through a Church where Maſs was to be ſung, and being urged to ſhew how he liked it, began to refute their Idolatry with great zeal, admoniſhing the People there preſent, not to ſuffer themſelves to be ſo ſeduced by the pompous ſplendor of ſuch vain Superſtitions: Telling them, That that God which the Prieſt held up was no God, as thoſe ſeducers made them believe, but a mear Idol, ſeeing it was not able to remove it ſelf from one place to another unleſs it were born. Jeſus Chriſt the Son of God our Saviour is to be ſought, ſaith he, at the right hand of God the Father Almighty. This young man was forthwith compaſſed about with an innumerable Company of People, who buffeting him often on the face, and ſpurning him with their feet, haled him thence into the common Gaol of the City.

After many days the Biſhop with ſundry other Lords, calling him before them, asked him if the Hereticks had not perſwaded him to uſe ſuch words as he had ſpoken: alſo whether he had not a reſolution to kill the Queen, or her Son the King, or the Biſhop of Vilne? The Priſoner wiſely and reſolutely anſwered, That no man had ſet him awork to do it, but only the zeal he had of Gods Glory, his Conſcience provoking him thereto; holding it impoſſible for him any longer to ſuffer that men ſhould attribute that honour to a dead Idol, which is only due to Jeſus Chriſt his Saviour.

As touching their other demand, his anſwer was, that Chriſtian Religion teacheth us not to murther men, as Papiſts have hitherto done in France, England, in the Low-Countries and elſewhere, as Hiſtories do daily ſhew. The Priſoner alſo admoniſhed the Biſhop of Vilne to forſake all Idolatry, to preach Gods Truth and Verity, and ceaſe to bewitch the poor People with Humane Inventions: moreover this faithful witneſs did with much vehemency and conſtancy maintain the Truth of God, ſo that the Biſhop of Vilne drove out of his Hall his Servants and ſuch as came in there to hear him, But he got little by it, for as they went here and there in the City, they told it abroad, how in all their lives they never heard man ſpeak with that courage and boldneſs of Divine things to ſo good purpoſe, as this young man had done.

Not long after he was again brought before the ſame Judges, and queſtioned as before: but inſtead of yielding, he hardened his face againſt the impudency of his Adverſaries. They purpoſing to quail this his magnanimity, cauſed him to feel the Torture. When he had ſuffered the utmoſt of their cruelty, he was ſo far off from abjuring the Truth, that on the contrary his confeſſion diſcovered in him a greater reſolution than ever before, being deſirous and ſhewing himſelf ready preſt to receive the Crown of Martyrdom.

To be ſhort, the laſt of June 1611. which was the ſame day twelve-month 1610. where in the City of Vilne, being the Capital City of the great Ducheſs of Lithuany, at eight of the clock in the mornig there happened as terrible a fireas hath been heard of, at the hour in which the Biſhops and a great Company of Jeſuits were going on Proceſſion: the fire was ſo vehement, that within the ſpace of ſeven hours it devoured 6. thouſand five hundred and fourteen houſes; which fell out as the Jeſuits ſuppoſed, becauſe they ſpared the Hereticks there. Whereupon the Martyr of Chriſt was cruelly butchered there by the Enemies of the Goſpel, not in a publick place, nor by day, though he inſtantly requeſted the ſame at the hands of his Judges; but privatly in the night, in a place walled about nigh to the Governours Houſe

Before

Anno 1595. Before they put him to death, he was cruelly tortured, and then bound by the Executioner to a Poſt, where they drew out his Tongue under his Chin; which done, cutting off his Head, his Body being divided into four quarters, was carried the next day through the City upon ſo many Poles.

An Hiſtory of three Engliſhmen put to death at Rome.

THree Engliſh-men meeting together entred into a conference concerning the ſtate of the Church at that time, complaining that the zeal of Gods glory was wonderfully cooled among men, yea, and that even thoſe of the Religion were grown but too worldly wiſe; that Satan by little was ſowing the ſeeds of Atheiſm every where, by rocking Men aſleep in the Cradle of Security: whereupon having in humble manner commended themſelves into the hands of God, they determined to take their voyage to Rome, and there to encounter with the Adverſary of Chriſt. Thither they came, and after a few days two of them behaving themſelves modeſtly, did in ſecret manifeſt to ſome there the Truth of the Goſpel, who being betrayed were impriſoned and put to death without any further ado.

The third, having reſolved to act his part in publick, gav. over himſelf to ſuffer all the extremities the wit of Man could invent. It came to paſs one day that this man, eſpying the Pope in the midſt of his Maſſing devotion, ſtept quickly unto him, plucked the conſecrated Hoſt out of his hands, caſt it to the ground, trod it under foot, uttering invective ſpeeches againſt the Maſs and Antichriſt. The People in a rage fell upon the Engliſhman; who, being altogether bruiſed with their fiſts and feet, ſaid, You Hangman, find out as many torments as you can, the hand of the Almighty will ſhew it ſelf the more glorioufly. My Soul is reſolved to vanquiſh death valiantly. He was forthwith bound and ſet upon an Aſs, ſix Torches were lighted, and from Street to Street the Executioners bare them by him, burning therewith his Face, Mouth and Tongue firſt; for he had ſaid before to one of the Tormentors, Thou haſt no power over my Soul, thou Wretch, knoweſt thou not that God underſtands the voice of my ſecret thought and complaint. When the flames came overthwart his Cheeks, he was heard to cry, Lord forgive theſe men, for they know not what they do. After they had burned all his Face, put out his eyes, ſcorched and roaſted his Body; in the end they conſumed it wholly to aſhes.

The learned Author, who ſet forth this Hiſtory in a notable Work of his, notes neither the Year nor the Names of theſe Engliſh-men. It ſhould ſeem to be about the time of Pope Clement the Eighth, in Anno 1595. for in his ample diſcourſe he mentions an old wiſe man le ſage veillard burned at Rome (after theſe Engliſh-men) who before he went to the Fire, ſpake with ſuch efficacy to his Confeſſor ſent unto him (who alſo left him not till he yielded up his Spirit in the midſt of the flames into the hands of Chriſt) that this Confeſſor going the next day into the Pulpit, maintained the cauſe of the old Wiſe man with ſuch boldneſs and zeal, that all the Audience hearing him attentively, without any reſiſtance, underſtood his meaning, and never accuſed the Preacher.

But in Lent following, a Capuchin Frier preaching before Pope Clement the Eighth called him Antichriſt, and during that Lent ceaſed not to preach the Truth of the Goſpel, in the Chair of Peſtilence, under the Robe and habit of a Liar, &c. In the ſame Work my Author (ſaith our Hiſtorian) mentions another Italian Preacher called N. Montalchin, who in deſcribing his Hiſtory hath theſe words: The Pope perceiving that by executing the Martyrs thus openly in the ſight of the People, inſtead of terrifying them, thereby many were the more encouraged, he reſolved with himſelf thence-forward to conceal his open violence out of the ſight of the Sun, and to exerciſe it rather in the dark and in the night ſeaſon. The Inquiſitors, who had Montalchin in their hands were preparing a way to murther him privily, according to the Popes intention.

It ſo fell out, that the Jaylor ſmelling the injuſtice which theſe Reverend Fathers were deviſing againſt the poor Priſoner, adventured to give him notice of it, to the end he making his peace with God, might fit himſelf for death. This experienced Souldier of Jeſus Chriſt plotted a way under-hand, by a Spiritual wile, to catch the wiſe in their craftineſs: faining therefore a Repentance, he called for his Judges, telling them he was now minded to revoke his Errors, after they had pronounced Sentence againſt him, and would in the hearing of all recant what he had in publick maintained againſt the Truth.

His Judges, believing he had ſpoken in good earneſt, promiſed him his life upon thoſe terms. Now that they might the rather ſatisfie their pride, they made known to every one the time and place appointed for his Abjuration. All the City aſſembled together to take knowledge of this ſo unexpected a novelty. Montalchin was brought and placed on a Scaffold for that purpoſe. He ſtood there in his Shirt, holding in his hands two Torches lighted: then ſilence being obtained, he began to ſpeak to the People as followeth.

Dear Brethren and Children, I have a long time taught you ſuch a Doctrine as hath troubled you. I am now brought hither to open my mind unto you, Montalchin is a ſinful man and therefore may err. But lend me your attention a while, and I will let you ſee the difference between both Opinions: Three words (ſeule, ſeule, ſeulement) will ſerve to diſtinguiſh between falſhood and truth.

1. I have taught you that Chriſt is our only Sacrifice, our only Prieſt, who only was once offered for us. But the Doctors teach the contrary, to wit, that the true Body of Chriſt without Bread is offered up for the living and for the dead, that the Prieſts ought daily to offer up the natural Body of Chriſt really in the Maſs.

2. I have taught that in taking the viſible ſigns in the Sacrament, we do therein by Faith only take the ſpiritual and heavenly Bread of our Souls.
The Doctors ſay, that Chriſts Body is taken Fleſh and Blood into the mouth and belly of the Communicant.

3. I have preached that Jeſus Chriſt is our only Mediator, and that by him alone we have acceſs unto the Father.
But the Doctors go further, and will have us to come to the Virgin Mary, making her and all the Saints departed our Mediators and Interceſſors.

4. I have declared that we are juſtified only by Faith in Jeſus Chriſt, and that the free Mercy of God is the foundation of our ſalvation.
The Doctors would have us to help out Faith and Grace by good Works, as meritorious cauſes of ſalvation.

5. You have heard me preach that Chriſt only gives grace; and that he alone pardons ſins.
They affirm that the Church hath a Coffer or Cheſt, of which the Pope keeps the Keys, whereinto are put the Merits of Saints, which he largely diſtributes abroad to ſuch as will buy his Pardons with Mony.

6. I have told you, that the Canonical Books of the Old and New Teſtament are the only ground of our faith and ſalvation.
The Doctors add thereto their unwritten Verities.

7. I have taught you that after this life ended, there are only two places prepared for them to go unto who die and depart out of this World; One, the place of joy and comfort, the other of torment.
The Doctors ſay, there are four, viz. Paradiſe, Hell, Limbus and Purgatory.

8. I have preached, that the Pope is not a god on Earth, but only a Biſhop, and that only of one place, if he therein behave himſelf as a good Biſhop ought to do.
The Doctors make him Lord of the World, and the Head of the viſible Church.

9. Now, O Chriſtian Brethren, Judge you of that which I have ſaid, and ſee if you can diſcern Truth from Error; (Truth leads you to life, honour and bleſſedneſs; Error and Lies to death and deſtruction.
Be now either Servants of Truth, or the Slaves of Error. For my part I will cleave to the truth of the Goſpel, and do condemn all Errors and Lies: let Montalchin live, and live thou, O Lord Jeſus.

Then threw he down his two burning Torches, one this way and another that way, offering his hands to be tied and bound, which cauſed a great tumult among the People. Montalchin was returned back again to Priſon.

Now Reader, it will not be hard for thee to imagine what entertainment he found there: whether or no the Popes * Decree was executed to the full upon this worthy Confeſſor, who in the face of the world did ſo nobly triumph over Satan and Antichriſt his Lieutenant.

*Which was to put the Martyrs to death privily, as was noted in the beginning of this Hiſtory.

Concluſion.

Anno 1620.

The invincible Conſtancy of the Martyrs tried the Perſecutors; their fiery burning Zeal dried up the Rivers; the ſlaughter of mens Swords ſeemed to be blunted; the Hangmens Halters to be utterly ſpent and waſted, &c.

A True Narration of a Bloody Maſſacre committed upon the Proteſtants by the Papiſts in the greater part of the Valtoline, in the Year 1620. after the New Stile: Publiſhed for a neceſſary Admonition to all Eſtates, wherein the Goſpel is profeſſed amongſt the Papiſts, and for Example to all true Chriſtians of conſtancy in the Profeſſion of the Holy Goſpel.

Matt. 5. 10.

Bleſſed are they that are perſecuted for righteouſneſs ſake, for theirs is the Kingdom of Heaven.

The true declaration of the Maſſacres of the Valtoline.

ALbeit that the Griſon Lords, being as it were the Sovereign Magiſtrates, had by ſundry Decrees, according to the common liberty of the two Religions in thoſe Countries granted, that in the Country of Boalez, a place belonging to the Territory of Tell, there ſhould be eſtabliſhed a Church for the Religion, which ſhould receive the ordinary ſtipend which at that preſent was allowed to other Churches of the Valtoline, An. 1619. in the month of May. The Miniſter of the Church of Tell with the Miniſters of Irian and Bruſe, together with the aſſiſtance of the principal Lords of Tyrane and Tegly, did meet together in the ſaid place of Boalez, to preach in the Church of that place. But ſo great was the multitude and concourſe of the Papiſts in that place in Arms, that they were of neceſſity inforced to give over their purpoſe; and at that time was Mr. Gaudentius Taches the Paſtor of Bruſe almoſt beaten to death with Staves, a young man of Tyrane was ſlain outright, and others very cruelly handled by ſome of theſe Villains, who by that occaſion may worthily be called the firſt Martyrs of the Country of Tyrane.

Within a ſhort time after was murdered a Servant of the Governour of that place, where the rage and fury of thoſe murderers grew unto that height, that they did not only contemn the Proclamations publiſhed by the Governour, but in ſcorn or deſpite thereof they paſſed up and down before the Palace, threatning to kill the ſaid Governour, and other principal perſons of the Church of France.

Now for that the ordinary Magiſtrate of that place was not ſtrong enough to ſuppreſs the outrages and inſolencies of thoſe Villains, from whom none could be ſecure either in their Houſes or abroad, by reaſon of the frequent attempts which they made upon the Proteſtants, the rather for that they bordered near upon a foraign Juriſdiction, to which they had recourſe when they had committed any miſchief, the Governour was conſtrained to make his addreſs for juſtice to the Soveraign Dabe of the Country, who about the midſt of February, Anno 1620. granted a Commiſſion, wherein were named theſe Commiſſioners, viz. the Lords Joachinus Montalta, at this time Vicar of the Valtoline, John Baptiſta of Salichi, a Doctor of Law, Ja. Rumel a Captain, Salomon Candeamma Buoli, Landlaine of Tavos, in the ten Juriſdictions, Dieteganus Fertmannus, Captain of the Lordſhip of Meienfield, and John Andrea Mindardino for the Chancellorſhip, &c.

By theſe perſons, beſides the Proceſſes framed already by the Lords, John of Cappaul, Governour of Tyrane, and Andreo Enderlino of Tegli, there were again divers Proceſſes framed anew, and upon the impriſonment and revealing of certain perſons it was diſcovered and confeſſed, there was a reſolution made in the ſame place of Boalty, to put to the Sword not only the Preacher if he had preached, but alſo all the People, as many as profeſſed the Goſpel, as they could light upon, yea even the Magiſtrate himſelf; beſides there were divers perſons diſcovered, and thoſe of principal rank, who were the Authors of thoſe wicked and barbarous practices, and had promiſed all poſſible aid and aſſiſtance unto them.

And therefore, the importance of the buſineſs being of great conſequence, it was thought expedient that thoſe Lords Commiſſioners ſhould return to Tavos, and report to the Court of Juſtice, which there reſided, all the buſineſs which reſulted of theſe Proceſſes; which they accordingly did about the midſt of April laſt paſt. Moreover, they were intreated by divers Noble perſons of the Proteſtant Church of the Valtoline, that they would with all poſſible ſpeed provide a Garriſon of Griſons for the defence of the Valley, in regard that by the foreſaid diſcovery they had great reaſon to fear a general Rebellion, in caſe they ſhould proceed to chaſtiſe the Authors of thoſe tumults and diſorders, and that ſuch a buſineſs could not be, without intelligence with the Spaniard, and that ſo much the more likely, that ſome certain years ago ſuch another practice had been diſcovered and attempted to be put in practice, as it came to paſs 1584. and ſince of late.

All theſe buſineſſes were conſidered, but it was not poſſible to put the ſame in effect for many reaſons, had it not been that they received intelligence that a number of Spaniards approached near to the three Pleves, which were places adjoyning to the Valtoline, by which occaſion the Magiſtrate and Governours of the Valtoline were conſtrained to put a Guard near the Trenches of Trahona and Morben, about the Kalends of July 1620. thinking to ſecure the Valley from the forain Enemy: and that Guard conſiſted of the Countrymen and dwellers in the Valtoline: and this courſe wrought no other effect, but that the Proteſtants by this means were incloſed in of all ſides, that they could not flee away on that ſide by the way already concluded, but anticipated within eight days which was the Sabboth-day. The ninth of July 1620. followed the Maſſacre in the Country of Tyrane and Teglio, as now ſince in Bondres, a principal Country of this Valley.

The

Anno 1620

The Maſſacre of Tyrane, wherein were murthered about threeſcore Perſons.

THe beginning of their murthers was made at Tyrane, wherein thoſe barbarous and wicked fellows were aſſiſted by certain Villains who lived near in a forain Juriſdiction, of whom the Principal Captains and Ringleaders, were Jacopo Robuſtello of Groſſot, Marco Anthonio de Venoſta, a Doctor of Phyſick of Mazzio, and Francis Venoſta of Tyrane, a Doctor of the Civil Law. Theſe together with their confederates and dependants, both ſuch as were domeſtique, and came from forain places, that were the moſt cruel and bloody Villains which could be picked out thereabouts, before any enterpriſe covertly made, gave order, that all the ways and Paſſages of every ſide ſhould be well guarded, to the end that their cruel enterpriſe upon the Proteſtants of the Country ſhould not ſo readily be diſcovered, and they the Attempters themſelves ſhould be the leſs troubled in the Execution.

Then about ſix of the Clock in the night, they entred into the Country of Tyrane, like ſo many foming wild Bores, making their rendevous of Doctor Franceſco Venoſta. They cauſed four Muskets to be diſcharged before the Palace of the Seignior Podeſta the principal Magiſtrate of the place, and rung the great Bell of Tyrane, Upon which ſignal all the Inhabitants in that Vicinity took the Alarm, and made head toward the ſaid houſe. They gave order to break the Bridges which lay towards Bruſe, and on the place they planted a ſtrong guard, and this was done before day. Suddenly upon the dawning of the day, the Bells began to ring another peal at Matello, and then theſe Traitors began to bandy andto range themſelves together. The Proteſtants, who without fear or ſuſpition of any practiſe againſt them, came out of their houſes into the ſtreets to ſee what the matter was, were ſuddenly ſhot and moſt cruelly murthered in the place. Others by force entred into the houſes of the Proteſtants, drew them out of their beds, and without any compaſſion ſlew all they could meet withal.

John Andrea Cataneo was by his Wife delivered from the hands of thoſe Murtherers, but was again by force recovered by them. And although this Gentlewoman was a near Kinſwoman of Robuſtello, and of Dr. Venoſta, as Couſins once removed, and this Cataneo had ever eſteemed them among his better Friends, yet could not he obtain the favour to have his life ſpared. He prayed them that firſt he might have leave to ſpeak with the ſaid Doctor, which could not be obtained. In the mean time he eſcaped into another houſe adjoyning, and hid himſelf in a Garret in the top thereof, hoping to eſcape the hand of thoſe his furious Perſecutors: but all in vain, for they nevertheleſs purſued him into the houſe, where he poor Gentleman hid himſelf, they took him, and caſt him down out of the houſe into the ſtreet; and when they found there was yet life in him, they with a moſt inhumane and unſpeakable cruelty diſpatched him with a piece of Timber.

Antonio de Salva, a Chancellor in that Valley being appointed Judge upon criminal cauſes, a man of the greateſt authority in the Pregella, and other places, who at that inſtant was reſident at Sondres, being deſirous to ſave himſelf together with his Deputy, Marco Antonio Venoſta a Doctor of Law in the houſe of Jacobo Homedeo was drawn out of the houſe into the ſtreet, with Venoſta and his Servant Antonio Keller of Soglio in the ſaid Pregella, and ſlain with a ſhot of Musket, being of the age of forty two years.

Seignior Andrea Enderline of Kublis in Prettigonia, a Gentleman of great worth, very ſingularly learned, and skilful in many Languages, being at that time Governor of Teglie, in the name of the three Leagues, being in this hurlyburly by chance in Tyrane in the houſe of Battiſta Baruſſino, was alſo with his Servant George Petterlin ſtrangled to death in the Chamber where he was found: and this noble Gentleman, being firſt caſt out of the Chamber Window, was all his Body over ſo beaten and bruiſed, that you could not know him; and yet after, their fury not ceaſing, they knitting a Cord about his neck threw him into the River of Adda: notwithſtanding he was afterward found and buried.

In the mean time, with this Governour alſo was ſlain John the Son of Senior Michael Montio of Bruiſe, a Gentleman of ſingular goodneſs and Wiſdom, who before time had been Deputy to his Father in the Goverment of Trahona, and in the ſame demeaned himſelf with great commendation. Who being deſirous to withdraw himſelf from Tyrane to his own houſe, was intreated by Ambroſio Baruſſino, Son of the foreſaid Battiſta, for his greater ſecurity to lodge with him in his houſe. Which courteſy when he had accepted, ſuſpecting no Trechery in his new Hoſt, he was by him ſhot with a Musket, and caſt into the Flood of Adda, being of the age of forty years.

The reverend Gentleman Senior Antonio Baſſo, Paſtor of the Proteſtant Church of Tyrane, a man of great Sanctity and Wiſdom, and a lover of the peace of the Country, hearing the noyſe of theſe uprores, he and Maſter Samuel Andreoſcha the Paſtor of Mello in the lower Terzier, whom he had viſited that day, withdrew themſelves into a Hall, where having recommended their Souls to God, they were moſt cruelly ſlain.

Neither did thoſe furious Perſecutors reſt here, but beſides they cut off Baſſos' head, and carried it into the Church, and fixed it upon a Pole in the Pulpit where before time he was wont to preach, ſaying with all diſgrace and ſcorn, Come down Baſſo, thou haſt preached long enough already.

In like manner at the ſame time the Palace of the Chequer of Tyrane was beſieged by thoſe Helhounds; wherein dwelt Senior John de Cappaul being at that time Governor. To which place Michael Lazarone, a man of good account and Chancellor of that Office, had retired himſelf early in the morning to ſave his life. But becauſe he was extreamly hated of the Papiſts, by reaſon of his ſingular Piety, Religion, and ſincerity, he was eſpecially purſued by them; inſomuch as thoſe Rebels followed him even to the Palace, threatning to ſet fire on the ſame, if he were not delivered into their hands. Lazarone ſeeing that, notwithſtanding the Palace was well furniſhed with great ordnance, faulcons, muskets munition, and other neceſſary proviſion, he was like to fall into the hands of his Enemies, for that the ſaid Governor was reſolved in his judgment to overcome thoſe miſcreants rather by fair and courteous dealing than by force, was inforced that evening to fly out of the houſe, and to hide himſelf about the Banks of the River Adda, wherein he covered himſelf, and lay cloſe three whole hours all naked, poor Gentleman, to ſave himſelf. But his Enemies, and principally Doctor Vincentio followed him hotly, accompanied with many ſhot, and at the laſt they found him, and drew him out of the Water. And albeit he did with Tears in his eyes beſeech them that they would give him his life, in compaſſion of his dear ſmall Children, yet could not he obtain that favour at their hands, but they anſwered him, That this was no time for pity, and favour: but if he would ſwear by the Popes Bull, and abjure his Faith, in that caſe they would ſhew him favour, and grant him his life. but he, with a great couragious reſolution, anſwered, God forbid and defend that I for love of this temporal life ſhould deny my Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who with his precious Blood upon the Wood of the Croſs did at ſo dear a rate redeem me, and after that I have ſo long time through his grace freely and publickly confeſſed him, ſhould now hazard the loſs of eternal life, to which I was elected before the foundation of the World; I ſay God forbid. Upon this ſpeech he was in moſt barbarous and ſavage manner murthered by them.

The very ſame evening was the Gate of the Palace burnt to the ground by thoſe Rebels, who the next morning entred into the ſame, raging with fury, and took the Governour Priſoner with his young Son; ſpoyling and ranſacking Wives, and Maidens, and carrying away all they could lay hands on. The Governour of the Palace was carried away Priſoner to the houſe of the foreſaid Dort Franceſco, and at laſt, after he had long time been rugged to and fro, he was miſerably ſlain with a ſhot.

John Antonio Mazano endeavouring to make reſiſtance againſt thoſe Rebels, and his Wife defending him, was with her ſelf and two young Children miſerably killed.

Another called John Antonio Schloſſer, a Gardoneſe, having made long reſiſtance, and killed one of the Rebels, was at the laſt taken, and tyed to a Tree, and ſo ſhot to death.

To be ſhort, theſe Villains had no regard of any Perſon, neither young, nor old, nor weak, nor ſtrong, but all of all ſorts were either ſhot unto death, or cut in pieces, or in one manner or other deſtroyed; and the number of thoſe Perſons in eſtimation, who in Tyrane received the Crown of Martyrdom for the profeſſion of the Goſpel, was about ſixty.

Of thoſe who by the grace of God, although with great danger, eſcaped through the horrid and vaſt Alpes into Retia and other parts, were only three Perſons, that is, Doctor Jacobo Albertino, Jacobo Nevio de Coyra, and Egido Venoſta, who left behind them Wealth, Wives, Children, and whatſoever goods they had.

The Ladies who were not ſlain were conſtained to change their Religion, and at this day go to Maſs, ſaving the Wife of the ſaid Lazarone and her Daughters, and her Niece, being the Wife of the ſaid Egido, who by the aſſiſtance of Almighty God continued in ſafety. And there alſo the eighth of Auguſt, the ſaid Ladies were releaſed, who retired themſelves into Retia, viz. the Wife of this Lazarone, and her two Daughters, leaving behind them in the Valtoline one Daughter and two youg Sons who cannot obtain leave to depart the Country.

CHAP. 2.

The Maſſacre of Teglio, wherein were murthered about ſixty Perſons.

THeſe wicked Traitors having in this manner committed the foreſaid excrable Maſſacre in Tyrane, ſuddenly the ſtrangers and the outlaws of the Mountains, apparelled in red Caſſocks, and well mounted on horſback, marcked in the morning to Tellat the hour when the Sermon was, and ran like ravening Wolves to the Volta Church, being guided by two Friers, Azzo and Carolo Beſta, and by Antonio Beſta their Couſin German. The Proteſtants who were in the Church, obſerving the evil intention of thoſe Villains, aroſe ſuddenly from their ſeats, and endeavored to ſhut the Church Door, and to barricado the place with the Benches. They without laboured with all their power to enter the Church: but not being able ſo ſpeedily to do it, ſome of them climbed up unto the Windows, and diſcharged their Muskets among the People without reſpect of any Perſon, and killed very many of them. At laſt they forced the door, entred, and ſlew all they found, ſaving a few who promiſed to go to Maſs. Some of the men and Ladies with their Children fled into the Belfrey to ſave themſelves; but they ſet fire to the place, and moſt miſerably burnt all that were within.

Amongſt thoſe who were ſlain in the Church, the chiefeſt of note was the reverend Lord John Piere Dante of Rozu of the higher Engaden, a Miniſter of the Proteſtant Church of Tell, a man rarely endued with learning and the fear of God, and in thoſe reſpects honoured even of his Enemies themſelves; who after he had with lively reaſons exhorted that afflicted Church of his conſtantly to perſevere unto death in the known and confeſſed Truth, to the honour of his Saviour, even ſo long as the brevity of the time would permit him, was to the grief of very many miſerably ſhot to death, being of the age of 42. years.

Amongſt theſe was one Joſui Gatti a Doctor of the Law, Lieutennant to the Podeſta of Tell, and principal Juſtice, an honorable Gentleman, and of excellent vertues, about 43 years of age, together with Daniel Gugelberge.

Gaudenzo Guizziardi a Gentleman of like worth and honour, Couſin German to the Father of the forenamed Azzo Beſta, of the age of ſixty four years; Margaritta his Daughter of the age of fourteen years, or thereabouts, was wounded with a Musket ſhot in the head, going about to bow her ſelf by giving a laſt kiſs to her dear Father who was yielding up the Ghoſt.

Antonio the Son of Scipion Beſta, a Gentleman very rich and of excellent parts, although he was the near Kinſman of Azzo Beſta, was ſhot to death, and died in the Arms of his Wife, being of the age of thirty ſeven. Anno 1620.

Aſcanio Gatti an Apothecary of Tell, being ſeven and twenty years of age, George his Brother eighteen years old, Jonata Piatti ſixty five years old, Maximilian Piatti four and twenty years, Vincenzo Frigerio, Notary and Procurator of Tell, age 39. Marſſilio Piatti, age 38. Filiberto his Brother age, 19. Virginio Piatti, age 28. Lorenzo Piatti of Boaltie, age 23. ſlain with a Musket ſhot at the Window of the Steeple. Philippo Nova likewiſe of Boaltie, age 45, Bartolomeo his Brother, age 42. Petro Marcioninno Maſter of the School of Tell, age 35. Thomas de Boruno, age, 64. together with his Son Claudio Gatti a Notary, age 43. Andrea Tempino a Gardoneſe, age 41. Anna Gala di Zozio of the upper Agnadma Wife of Bartolomeo Nova a Roman Catholick, age, 42. Benedetto Cattaneo, age 17. Giovanni Pietio, and John Martin Cattaneo his Sons, Lucius Federicke, age 60. Andruno Morello age 50. Joſepho his Brother, age 35. Alberto Marcumni, 45. Federico Valentino of Zernezo, of Agnadma the lower, dwelling at Gura, of the hundred of Chiure, age 64. Joanni Menghino of Poſvavo, dwelling in Gura, 40. years of age.

In the Steeple of the Church were burnt theſe which follow; Horatio Gatti, Son of the above ſaid Joſue Gatti, age 6. Dr. Lelio Paravicino of Berbenno, a Phyſitian of great worth, and excellently practiſed in his profeſſion, dwelling in Tell, age 43. Azzo Guizziardi Nephew of the above named Gaudenzo, a young courteous Gentleman, and of rare hope, age 22., Friderico Guizziardi, age 34, Horatio Paravicino Son of Franciſco, age 6. Margareta Marlianica Wife of Raphael Nova a Doctor of the Law, a Gentleman of great worth, age 43: Madalena her Daughter, Wife of Daniel Gatti age 18. Aſhelmo Gatti Chancellor of the State of Tell, age 67. Giovan Pauli Piatti Son of Jonata, age 48. Claudia Piatti Daughter of Maſſimiliano, age 7. Violante late Wife of Theodore Gatti, age 64. Giovanninna Widow of Vincentio Nova, age 34. Pietro Regenzano Chancellor of the above named Podeſta of Tell, age 46. Joſue Meda, age, 50. Martua of Borum, age 53. Madalena Girardona Wife of Claudio Gatti, age 33. Auguſto Gatti Son of Abraham, age 22.

Abroad without the Church and Steeple were ſlain Vincentio Gatti, Brother of Aſhelmo, age 73. Andrea his Son, age. 32. who was murthered in the ſtreet called Lagone. Claudio Gatti Son of Theodoro, Jonatan Meda Son of Joſue, Daniel Lazeroto, Vincentio Cattaneo, and Giovan Pietro Regenzano, who, coming from Morbegno from the Garriſon, were ſlain in a certain place called Buffetto, age 18. or thereabouts. Thomazo Regenzano Brother of Giovan Pietro, age 38. Melchior Marcionino wounded in the head, but after five days being found in his Bed, was ſolicited with great promiſes to renounce his Religion: but he with great earneſtneſs and reſolution refuſing was murthered in his bed age 65. Giovanni Antonio Federici, Doctor of Law in Sonico, in Valeamenica, age 38. was very near to be murthered in Priſon, from whence at the inſtance of Antonio Piatti Curate of Tell he was ſet free.

In this place it is worth the noting, that Giovan Abondio Nova Son of Doctor Raffaele, a very learned young man, albeit out of humane infirmity to ſave his life he had promiſed in the Church of Tell to go to Maſs, yet in ſhort time recovering himſelf, and acknowledging his overſight with much grief and repentance for his fault, he with all ſpeed departed from Tell towards Sondres, ſuppoſing that he ſhould be ſafely protected by his dear Kinſman Nudar Marliemico; but being required by the Souldiers who kept the paſſage of Triſiria, to deny his Religion, for refuſing the ſame, he was ſlain in the way, being 22. years of age. This young man is a ſingular example for them who fall merely through infirmity and danger of death, not in other reſpect but yet after their fall, through the grace of God and the crowing voice of the word do return to repentance, confeſſing their fault, and with unfained ſorrow of heart bewailing the ſame; which even befel the bleſſed Apoſtle Peter himſelf.

CHAP. 3.

THeſe wicked and ſavage wretches, having in this manner executed and finiſhed this their impious and execrable enterpriſe at Tyrane and Tell, aſſembled themſelves in the midſt of the Valley of Sondres, where the principal and chief Juſtice of the Country made his reſidence, having before placed ſecure Guards upon every paſſage of the Country about. They came principally by the conduct of Giovani Guizziardi, Proſpero Swadino, and Guilio Pozalis, being all three of Ponte, with an entire Company of Souldiers from Ponte, Chiur, and ſome few from Porti, who the very ſame Sunday marched to the Gate of Alboſagia: in which place they found Lorenco Paribello a Dr. Giovan, Jacomo, and Floratio his Sons, with another Company of Souldiers attending the coming of the aboveſaid J. Guizziardi with his Company.

This buſineſs was freely divulged all abroad in Sondres by the Roman Catholicks themſelves, that theſe baniſhed came towards Sondres to execute the ſame deſign which they before had practiſed at Tyrane and Tell, who offered their aid to the chief Juſtice to defend him againſt the invaſion, proteſting that they would no more endure any ſuch villanous attempts. Wherefore they took Arms, under pretence and ſhew of defence, beating up the Drums, and ringing the Bells for the Alarm: by which means not only great multitudes aſſembled in Arms out of the Countries adjoyning, but alſo with one purpoſe and conſent to do miſchief, and to execute their malitious intentions againſt the Proteſtants who ſuſpected nothing leſs. In the mean time the Proteſtants, truſting to the great promiſes which the Papiſts made them, mixed themſelves amongſt them.

Theſe Perſons, concealing their miſchievous intent, killed at times ſometimes one, ſometimes another of the Proteſtants, in ſuch manner, as although divers of them were ſlain, yet they did not underſtand the ſecret thepractiſe.

Some of them endeavouring to flee towards the Valley of Malenco, which lies againſt Poſchiaro, Agnedma, and Pregalia, were murthered by certain villains of Ponchiero, a place about Sondres: and amongſt other Gentlewomen, were wounded and run through in many parts Frances Marliamio, Giovanni Andrea Chiſſa, and others, particularly Dr. Bartholomeo Paravicino, Doctor of the Law in Berbenno, called the Fatt, who was cruelly murthered, being of age 53. years.

The day after was ſlain in the morning Nicholo Marlianco, Son of Fellofio, a man ſingularly affected to the publick good, and to the advancement of the Goſpel. He was ſhot by his Couſin German Emilio Luvizaro meeting him in the ſtreet, the ſaid Marlianco going in the Company of Lucio Orſchletta of Zornezo Agnadina the lower, to viſit the Court of Guard in the Quartevoy of Sondres, age 46.

At this time it was delivered for certain, that the day before was murthered Ceſar the Son of Proſpero Paravicino, and of Hortenſia Marteninga, Counteſs of Barco, a Gentleman of moſt rare Abilities, travelling about his buſineſs towards Treſiar, age 50. Beſides Proſpero his Son was ſlain, of age 27. alſo Battiſta Girrardo with his Son George, and many others: by which means, theſe Proteſtants were ſo ſcattered and left deſtitute of any head for their conduct, that they could not poſſibly unite themſelves to make defence againſt their Enemies.

Only the Chancellor Giovan Andrea Migardino, calling to remembrance the matters contained in the aboveſaid proceſſes, the ſame Sabbath day the ninth of July, with his Brother Gregory, and others of the Church of Sondres, withdrew themſelves to the number of eighteen together, with certain Ladies and their young Children into their own houſe, which is adjoyning to the Palace, and there they fortified themſelves with reſolution to defend themſelves even to the death, ſeeing that in the ſtreet wherein they dwelt none duſt come out of the doors, nor enter into the Church which ſtood over againſt them. Nevertheleſs, the enemy reſolved to ſet upon the houſe with a thouſand armed men, threatning alſo the Magiſtrate to kill him, in caſe any of them ſhould take any harm by thoſe who were retired into the houſe. Whereupon the Magiſtrate commanded them in the houſe to depart; who being well armed took their way on the ſudden by Sondres towards the Bridge, where for a time they fortified themſelves, then returning again, they drew unto them certain others, and marched towards the Church of the Mountain of Sondres. In which place being gathered together with the Paſtor, they made their Prayers to God, and afterwards to the number of threeſcore and thirteen Perſons in all they paſſed the Valley of Malenco, which was beſet by the Enemy on two ſides: but thoſe that kept thoſe places were by the providence of God ſo aſtoniſhed, that they fled away, and the Proteſtants, although they were purſued to the tops of the Hills did miraculouſly eſcape with ſafety.

The Enemy, that is to ſay, the proper Inhabitants of the Valley, with their Ringleaders James Robuſtello, Azzo Beſta, John Guizziardi, Lorenzo Parribello, and others entred into the Palace, they deprived the Magiſtrate of his Office, that is to ſay, Giovanni, Andrea Traveſio of Scants, of the upper Agnadua Captain and Governour of the Valtoline, who with his family had retired himſelf into the houſe of Paul Clamar until Wedneſday the eleventh of July; on which day, under proteſtation to ſecure them, they were conducted to Malenco, where in the Village of Chiſſa, againſt their Faith given, they were made Priſoners, and detained for eight days following. They who by the commandment of the ſaid Captain found themſelves to be made Priſoners were delivered, putting in their Room certain of the Religion. They immediately changed the Callender, and gave for a Prey the goods of the Proteſtants: by which occaſion great multitudes of Perſons aſſembled from all the parts of the Valtoline to rob and ſpoyl; and by reaſon of the ſweetneſs which they found in pillaging the goods they met with in divers noble houſes excellently well furniſhed, grew an intolerable heat and outrage to ſpoyl, inſomuch as Brother robbed Brother, and the neareſt of Kindred purſued and robbed one another, and followed one another to the death. The Peaſants, hoping by means hereof to be exempted from paying their yearly Rents, ran with all fury and madneſs about the Woods, Buſhes, and Mountains, ſearching after the poor Proteſtants, who were ſcattered by fear, whom they murthered as they found them with extreme cruelty.

Amongſt theſe were theſe Gentlemen of greateſt worth and reſolution, Dr. Bartolomeo Paravicino of Sondres, from whom they took about two thouſand Crowns; Dr. Nicolas his Brother, whoſe Brother Doctor Lelio had before been ſlain in the Church of Tell; Petronio Paravicino, Doctor, and Giovan Battiſta Mallerio of Antwerpe in the Low-Countries, a man endued with excellent rare qualities of mind and Body; for he was both a good Philoſopher and a learned Divine, and very fit to inſtruct youth; He was ſurpriſed in the houſe of Morone, and when they had ſtoned him to death, they cut off his Head, ripped his Belly, and took out his Entrails. His Children, Giovan, Andrea, and Catharine were carried to Millane.

Annaidi Lita, Wife of Anthony Grotti of Chio in the Territory of Vincentine, of an honorable and ancient houſe, was come out of Italy but ſome few years before for the liberty of her Conſcience. This Anna was firſt by them exhorted with fair words to change her Religion; but ſhe conſtantly perſevering therein, was admoniſhed that ſhe would at the leaſt have a care of her young Infant which ſhe held in her Arms, being about two months old; otherwiſe ſhe would make reckoning that in the twinkling of an eye both ſhe and her Babe ſhould die: but ſhe with a bold and undaunted courage anſwered, That ſhe had not departed out of Italy her native Country, neither had ſhe forſaken all the eſtate ſhe had, to renounce at laſt that Faith which had been inſpired unto her by the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; yea, that ſhe would rather ſuffer, if it were poſſible, a thouſand deaths. And how, ſaith ſhe, ſhould I have regard in this cauſe of my Infant ſince God our Heavenly Father ſpared not his onely Son, my Lord Jeſus, but delivered him up to death death for the love of me and of all ſinners? Then giving them the Child, ſhe ſaid, behold the Child; the Lord God, who hath care of the Birds of the air, will much more be able to ſave this poor Creature although by you it were abandoned and left in thoſe wild Mountains. So unlacing her gown ſhe opened her Breaſt, and ſaid, Here is the Body which you have power to kill; but my Soul, on which you have no power to lay hand, that I commend to my God, and preſently ſhe was ſlain, and afterwards cut in pieces, being thirty five years old. The Infant, becauſe it was a lovely and a ſweet babe to look on was ſuffered to live. God reſtraining the cruelty of thoſe Butchers, and was delivered to a popiſh Woman to nurſe up. And here is to be obſerved, that this bleſſed Martyr imitated the commendable example of her dear Brother Giovanni Antonio, who for the Profeſſion of the Truth of the Goſpel having continued in the ſaid Chio, and endured a grievous Impriſonment two years together, was at laſt condemned to the Galley, where he died within two Months after. When he was bound in Chains, being carried from Chio, he ſaid, You may indeed bind my perſon, but the word of God ſhall never the more be bound in the hearts of the elect, that it do not ſhew manifeſtly it ſelf, and bring forth fruit, &c.

Behold here the power of faith.

Gods Word and Goſpel can never be bound in the heart of Gods Elect.

According to this moſt Chriſtian example John Steeven Meron and Rodulfo Rivello, being both of them of the Vally of Sondres, did not onely in their proper perſons Seal with their Blood the Truth of the Goſpel, but moreover exhorted their Children, John Andrea, and John Antonio, the one of them being fifteen years of age, the other ten, that they ſhould do the like, following the honourable example of the ſeven Brethren in the Maccabees and of their Mother, who choſe rather to die, than to obey the King, and to tranſgreſs the Law of the Lord.

And yet by reaſon of the Mony and Jewels found in the Houſes and Cheſts of the Proteſtants, the eagerneſs and fury of each of thoſe miſcreants increaſed daily more and more; inſomuch as that there were neither Noble nor Ignoble, nor Lady, no neither Man, Woman, Young nor Old, of what condition ſoever, who were not ranſacked and ſpoiled, ſome twice, and others oftimes thrice over. Some honourable Matrons had their Rings pulled off their Fingers, inſomuch as they would cut off their Hands and Fingers, if they would not preſently draw them off. Some Women were by force dragged up to the tops of high and craggy Mountains, and thereatened to be thrown down headlong with their Children, unleſs they would go to Maſs. And although Lucretia the Wife of Antonio Lavizaro, and Katherina Wife of Giulio Merlianico, being moved and terrified with the horror of death, had conſented to change their Religion, yet were they murthered for all that without any pity at all.

The ſame befel to D. Jo. Battiſta Salici of Soglio in the Preguglia; for although that his life was promiſed him, nevertheleſs he was brought into the Market Place of the ſaid Campello pinioned with a cord, and miſerably ſlain with two Musketiers, being of the age of 72. after he had bin robbed of his Gold and Silver, whereof great ſtore was found in his Houſe, according to the common and too much practiſed Rule of the Roman Catholicks, Hæreticis non eſt ſervanda fides.

Dominico Berto, an aged man of 67 years, was ſet upon an Aſſe, his Face turned to the Tail, which he held in his Hand in ſtead of a Bridle, and in his other Hand a Book, whom in this manner they carried through Sondres ſaying, Aleſſio, Aleſſio, &c. they cut off his Ears, his Noſe, his Cheeks, boring holes in divers parts of his Body with a ſtrange and unheard of barbarouſneſs, until they had quite killed him; but he for the love of Chriſt his Saviour with great and incredible courage and cheerfulneſs endured all thoſe varieties of Torments and Martyrdom. And by this it may be gathered what they would have don with Seignior Aleſſio, a faithful Paſtor of the Church of Sondres, if he had faln into the Hands of theſe raging Beaſts. But he by the great mercy of Gods was preſerved with his Wife and Children, in the company of Seignor Georgio Ienatro Miniſter of Berbenno, and Charles Salice Son of Cavaliere Hercole of happy memory, and others, not without great travel, danger and difficulties, among the craggy and dangerous Mountains, whereon they travelled, it ſo pleaſing the gracious God by the vertue of his Spirit graciouſly to aſſiſt him, although he was in the midſt of his Perſecutors. Anno 1620.

Anthony de Prati of the Hils was with many words exhorted to abjure his Religion; but he conſtantly perſevered, and with a generous courage replyed in theſe words, My Soul ſhall be taken up into Abrahams Boſome, and after my death my Enemies ſhall ſee the Angel of God hard by me, &c.& accordingly an Angel appeared over his Body in a white garment, being beheld of the by-ſtanders, who of their own accord have publikely confeſſed the ſame.

Theophilo Meſſino received into his Body a ſhot with a Musket: but before he was dead a Gag was put in his Mouth, which being filled with Gunpouder, fire was given to it, and in that manner he paſſed miſerably out of this life; Giovanni his Son was ſlain with ſeven wounds.

Seignior Salvetto, being delivered out of Priſon, was inſtantly exhorted to embrace the Catholick Roman Religion. But notwithſtanding he conſtantly perſiſted, although he was both young in years, and a lover of worldly vanities: and having received a ſhot of a Musket was carried by a ladder out of the Palace to the ground, from whence he raiſed himſelf, and beſought them to finiſh the work they had to do about his Body, that he might render his Soul to his Creator, being 28 years of age.

Jo. Battiſta Mingardino, having received many wounds, and being ſtripped of his garments, and left naked in the Woods, nevertheleſs after this ſo evil intreaty returned to his Houſe: and although the Prieſts of Sondres did with all diligence poſſible exhort him to change his Religion, promiſing him, in caſe he would do ſo, Mountains of Gold; nevertheleſs he conſtantly perſevered in the Truth of the Goſpel even to the end.

Chriſtina Ambria the Wife of Vincenzo Bruno of Prada, Mudalena Merli of Montagna, and John Garato of Fruxagiola, were thrown down headlong into the River Adda, from divers Bridges of Boffetto, St. Petro and others, and ſo drowned, becauſe they had refuſed to embrace the Catholick Roman Religion, and that with ſo manly and conſtant a Reſolution, as did work an admiration in the perſecutors themſelves.

In this mean time notwithſtanding the reverend Seignior Bartholomew Marlianico received the Crown of Martyrdom, who ſometimes had preached at Sondres, a true Servant of God, and for his life and manners unreprovable. Others had their mouths ſlit up to the ears; others received other ſlaſhes in the Face, others were in other manner moſt cruelly mangled to the death, Battiſta of Grilio, called of the Bajacca, an aged man of ſeventy five years, being found in the Houſe of the Heirs of Seignor Conte Vliſs Martinengo of moſt happy memory, being ſet upon by thoſe murthering caitifes, leaped out of a Window and paſſed the River Maleto, and having gotten to his Houſe, and ſhifted his clothes, he was aſſailed again, taken priſoner, and carried to the Palace, put often to the Strapado, and laſtly was in ſuch ſort ſliced and hewn with a ſword, that he had nothing left him but the Arms which were faſtened to the cord.

Paulo Baretta of Chio in the Country of Vicence, a Virgin of the age of ſeventy five years, of an honourable, noble, and antient family, who twenty ſeven years came before to Sondres to embrace the Goſpel, was by theſe Villains carried through Sondres, with all diſgrace, ſhame, and ſcorn, having a Mytre of paper put upon her head, her Face beſmeared with dirt, and many buffets given in her cheeks, and in many other faſhions abuſed. Being required to call upon the holy Virgin Mary and the Saints, and to place her truſting in them: ſhe finiſhing did with great readineſs anſwer them, My truſt and my Salvation is in my only Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, and in him only will I reſt. And it is alſo true, That I acknowledg the Virgin Mary for the moſt holy Virgin above all others, which ever was, or ever will be, who was a Virgin before the birth, a Virgin in the birth, and after birth, and ſo ſhall remain. Who although ſhe be favoured and beloved of God, above all Women in the world, to be made the Mother of my Lord Jeſus the Saviour of the world: nevertheleſs, becauſe ſhe is not able to know our neceſſities, as not being omnipotent (for otherwiſe ſhe would be God herſelf) and beſides hath had need of the merits of her Son, it was not lawful for her to call upon any other then the eternal God, who knoweth all things, and upon no creature of any quality whatſoever, &c. In this ſort ſhe endured the Scorns and Outrages with an incredible conſtancy and cheerfulneſs, ſaying continually, I do willingly endure as becometh mee to do, deſiring no better uſage, ſince the very ſame hath been done to my Lord and Saviour Jeſus, and to his Apoſtles, and to thouſands of the holy Martyrs. Laſtly, ſhe was carried away to be ſent to Milaine; but ſhe, rather then that ſhould be, deſired earneſtly that ſhe might be killed, ſeeing ſhe was reſolved to die in the Faith of the Lord Jeſus, both there and at Milaine: but ſhe could not obtain the favour to be killed there, but was carried along as hath been ſaid. On Wednesday being the eighteenth of July was found in the plain of St. Gregory in the Valtoline in the high way the dead Body of an old Woman, which by the conjecture of ſome was the Body of this Woman Paulo, who in concluſion had been murthered by the Aſſaſinate in that place.

There were divers other good Chriſtians, honeſt Men, and fearing God, both of rich and of mean eſtate of Sondres from the Mountain of Sondres, and from the Valley and Commonalty of Malenco, that were in greater numbers cruelly murthered; who in regard they were ready to ſeal the truth with their Blood, our deſire was for this reaſon, that mention ſhould be made of them.

And theſe were the reverend Gentlemen, Marco Antonio Alba of Caſale, of Montferrato, Paſtor of the Church of Malenco, a man full of zeal, of the age of ſixty three years; John Piedro Mingardino, Anaſtaſia his Siſter, Lorenzo Hicke ſlain above the Bridge of Sondres, and thrown down into the water; Andrea his Son, who had his Noſe cut off, and Cheeks even to the furtheſt part thereof, that they might afterwards put him to the more cruel death; Andrea the Son of Peter, called Luther near to the Butchery of Sondres; John Oſwaldo a Carpenter of di Cyra near to the Palace of Sondres, Daniel Newbecher near to the Flood of Sondres, whereinto hee was caſt, being half dead before, John Lorence near unto the Church at the Mount of Sondres, Gaudenzoin di Moſſini, John in Bonginono, Battiſta and Andrea his Sons, John Antonio Son in Law of Vicenzo Bruno, Steffano Pagano of Poſchiavo. Antonio Son in Law of Vicenzo Bruno, Stephano Pagano of Poſchiavo, Antonio Samadeno Paolo, and Jacobo Demonegoni, Andrea Son of Pietro Duchenó, Domenico his Brother, Pietro his Son, Nicolo Feacaiolo ſometime Deacon of Sondres, Eugenio Chieſa, Giovanni Chieſa, Barnardo his Son. Radolpho his Brother dwelling in Malenco had promiſed to go to Maſs, for which cauſe his Life was given him: but becauſe hee had furniſhed with victuals Signior Aleſſio, and his Company, when they paſſed the Mountains, he was ſhot to death.

John Vientius Andreone Cani was hewed into many pieces, of age 84. Zacharia Ventura of Breſdiano, a poor, lame, dumb beggar, yet made he a ſign with his Finger, how ſmall accompt hee made of the Maſs.

Moreover John Patara a Member of the Church of Sondres, being diſcovered to be one of the Religion, was on the ſuddain ſhot with a Musket in the Back and ſo died.

Many hid themſelves in Holes, and Caves, and in Woods, out of which they durſt not come but by night onely to get ſome food, and that with great fear and terrour of the watching Enemy; others for want of convenient food to eat, and others that fed onely upon roots, leaves, and graſs, made an end of their lives; and many were murthered in divers places, who had no burial at all; ſo as many Carkaſſes were to be ſeen in Groves and Woods in the Mountains, and in waters in many places.

CHAP. 4.

The Maſſacre of Berbenno, wherein were ſlain about eleven Perſon.

IN what manner alſo buſineſſes paſſed in the Noble Countrey of Berbenno it doth likewiſe plainly appear; for in that place alſo the Rebels played their part of killing and ſpoyling the profeſſors of the Goſpel. For after they had executed their cruelties and outrages, as hath bin delivered before in Tyrane, Bruſe, Tell, Sondres, in the Mountain of Sondres, Malenco and other places, they alſo received ſpecial commandment, as may appear by a Letter written to them by John Guizziardi of the twelfth of July of the preſent year, that they ſhould with all their power and courage, murther, ſtrangle, Maſſacre, and in ſum ſhould uſe all diligence, without favour or mercy. to deſtroy all Lutherans whereſoever: by vertue of which Commiſſion they have not for their parts omitted any manner of outrage and villany againſt the Proteſtants. And firſt there were preſently murthered certain perſons of good rank and quality, and that with great cruelty, againſt faith and promiſe given them. The which was with ſo much the more rage and fury put in execution: for that thoſe Catholick Romans themſelves, who upon the firſt Propoſition refuſing to give their Conſents on the ſudden to thoſe murders, were without reſpect or favour on the ſudden murdered themſelves as happened to Bartolomeo Porretto, and other Roman Catholicks.

The Proteſtants that were Maſſacred were theſe that follow, Theophilus de Piſcatory of Ognano in Romagna, who had dwelt in Berbenno twenty years paſt, was ſlain in a place above Berbenno called Luſcione, the tenth of July, of the age of ſixty five years.

Anna di Caſſavia of Pregaglia, Wife of the above ſaid Theophilus, was before murdered at a Houſe called the Chanons of Berbenno the day aboveſaid, aged fifty years.

Concordia Crotta of Tyrane, the Wife of Giovan Gugelman of the Territory of Zuriz, who had dwelt in Berbenno as many years, was Maſſacred in the place and on the day abovenamed, being of the age of forty three.

Aurelio the Son of Nicolas Paravicino, going from Berbenno to Sondres, was ſlain in the plain of Caſtione, the eighteenth of July, aged fifty ſeven.

Bartolomeo the Son of David Paravicino, was wounded to death in the Head with the ſhot of a Musket, who, quite againſt the hope and expectation of the Chirurgions, lived five days after, and then died, being eighteen years of age.

Ottavio of Capelli, an honourable Gentleman, was together with two others underwritten, John Battiſta and Horatio Paravicino detained as Priſoners in the Chanons of Berbenno, from the eleventh unto the ſix and twentieth day of July, on which day they were requeſted and accompanied to Sondres by the commandment of Robuſtello, who pretended with all kindneſs and courteſie to entertain them; cauſing them to drink, and to be accompanied even unto Saſſella: But there, by order of the ſaid Robuſtello, they were murdered; who replyed, being demanded why he did ſo, That they muſt never keep Faith with Hereticks. This Ottavio was thirty eight years of age.

John Battiſta Paravicino of Capelli a Gentleman alſo of great honour, who was kept Priſoner as aforeſaid, and conducted to Sondres, in his return unto Saſſella, there with Ottavio was ſlain, being of the age of four and thirty years.

Horatio, Brother of the ſaid John Battiſta, was wholly and in all things his faithful companion, and in like manner rendred his life the day aboveſaid, being thirty two years of age.

Anna de Beveri of Gineura, Wife of the abovenamed Ottavio, a Gentlewoman of an honourable eſtimation, being deſirous for the ſafety of her life to follow a company of Griſon Souldiers, amongſt whom was a Couſin of hers, and other Kinſmen of hers, not being able to travel by reaſon of the ſharpneſs and ſteepneſs of the way being a Gentlewoman grave and tender, was ſhot in the back with a Musket, and left for dead the third of Auguſt, being forty years of age.

Theoſina Paravicina of Capelli, Mother of the above ſaid John Battiſta, and Horatio, a Gentlewoman of great worth, was ſlain in her own houſe, being of the age of fifty five years.

Adamo Scarumveio of Tyrane was at the time of the Barbarous Maſſacre of Tyrane in the Garriſon of Morbenno, from whence notwithſtanding he eſcaped and came to Clavenno, afterwards meaning to return with the Band of Griſons to the Valtoline, and to accompany the

ſaid

ſaid Theoſina to Sondres, was murdered, being twenty years of age. He was a Young Man of ſingular expectation.

CHAP. 5.

The Maſſacre of Caſpano and Trahon, wherein there were murdered eleven perſons or thereabouts.

But for all this the Trahoneſs could not paſs in the lower Valtoline, but that he received his part in this perſecution with the perſecution of divers perſons, which the Reader may ſee by the Catalogue inſuing.

Joſhua the Son of Hortenſio Malacrida, coming from Gaſpano, in his Journey to Bulio, being encountred at the Bridge of Maſino, and being demanded if he would go to Maſs, anſwering that he would not, was forthwith ſlain and caſt into the River of Maſino, being of the age of thirty years.

The like befel to his Brother Plinit, he was ſought for in Bulio by 25. perſons, and not being found there, was met in his return betwixt Arden and Bulio, and killed, being 26. years of age.

Andrea Paravicino of Bugo, of Caſpano Sarto, by his Trade a Tailor, ſtayed there from the 9. of July, until the coming olf the Griſon Band into the Valtoline: but after the ſudden departure of the ſaid Band, being diſcovered by his Countrimen and Kinsfolks, was taken and carried to Morbegnio, and being ſolicited to forſake the True Religion, and to embrace the Roman, and ſtanding with great manfulneſs thereto, was condemned to the fire, and was placed between two Heaps of Wood, to make him to recant. But all was in vain; for being aſked if he were a Catholick, he anſwered, That he was. Then, if he were a Roman Catholick; he alſo affirmed likewiſe, that he was ſo. But being demanded if he held the Roman Faith as it is at this day, he anſwered, no. It is true, ſaid he, that I hold the ancient Catholick Roman Faith, which was preached by St. Paul, That a Man is ſaved by grace by the means of Faith, and not by works, leſt any Man ſhould boaſt. Being demanded, if he believed the Pope to be Head of the Church, he anſwered, No; becauſe Chriſt only is the Head of the Church, according to the promiſe, I will be with you unto the end of the world.

And although the fire was firſt kindled, and then put out, of purpoſe to draw him to a recantation, nevertheleſs he perſevered and endured that cruel death with admirable conſtancy, the 15. of Auguſt, being ſixty years old.

Giovan Pietro Malacrida, although he were little of ſtature, yet was he great and mighty in the Confeſſion of the Truth, inſomuch that for the love of his Saviour he ſufferd death with ſingular cheerfulneſs, being forty years of age.

His example was devoutly and conſtantly imitated by Elizabeth his Wife, who was killed in the eight and thirtieth year of her age: and moreover theſe Herodian Murderers not therewith content, but joyning one Barbarous Inhumanity to another, obſerving a Daughter of hers, being an Infant of three years old, to lie in the Cradle, although it was a Child of a ſweet Countenance and theſe Wretches ſeeing that the Babe did look lovingly and cheerfully on them, which would have been enough to have moved any Adamantine Heart to compaſſion, notwithſtanding they took the poor Babe by the feet, daſhed her againſt the Wall, and in this manner moſt barbarouſly murdered the ſame.

Thomaſo Maeſtreilla Carpenter, and a principal Engineer, excellent in Building of Mills and other Buildings, was murdered in one of his Mills at Melle, being eighty years of age.

Dominico of Paguno, called Luther of Scermele of the hundred of Canvicke in Trahoneſs, being at his work at Morbegno, was killed the fourteenth of Auguſt, age forty eight; he was followed by his Son Jacomo, age eighteen, and Peter his Son, of age fifteen: alſo of Maria his Siſter: all which in one day, being the fourteenth day of Auguſt, were for the Faith of the Goſpel profeſſed by them Sacrificed to God their Creator and Saviour.

CHAP. 6.

Anno 1620.

The Maſſacre of Bruſe, in which were Murdered to the number of 27. Perſons.

These wretched Murderers were not contented in the place abovenamed, which were ſubjects to the Lords Griſons at Tyrane, Tell, Sondres, Monte di Sondrio, Berbenno and Malenco, to have Maſſacred ſo many perſons who feared God, honorable, noble, learned, wiſe, and ſober, of Authority and Reverence, Young and Old, Men, Women, yea even their next Alliance, ſtraiteſt Friends and Kinſfolks, by ſhooting them, by throwing them headlong from Mountains, by ſtoning them, by hewing them in pieces, by caſting them in Rivers, by burning, by mangling them, and by all cruel means making them away: but they alſo executed the like cruelty in Retia it ſelfe, the Countrey of their natural Lords and Commanders.

For example, on Sunday the ninth of July, a Young Man called John the Son of Dominico of Ada a Roman Catholick, early in the morning travelled to the Bridge of the Caſtle of Bruſe, being the way to Tyrane, to buy Corn for his Houſe; there he met Ambroſio the Son of Baruffino his Hoſt in Tyrane, with a Company of people, who were at the time endeavouring to break down the Bridge, not ſuffering any paſſage to the ſaid John, but commanded him to return back again. At which the man wondering, and asking the reaſon, they anſwered, That they meant not only to ſtop the paſſage of the Lutherans of Bruſe, but alſo at once utterly to root them out. This Young Man ſuddenly returned to Bruſe, and reported unto Martaine Martino, the Son of Dominico, this which he had ſeen and heard. Udillo being then his Servant, who was a Proteſtant, runs with great ſpeed to give warning to the Proteſtants, not thinking that they were in the Church; but although they were diligently attending the Sermon, he was bold to publiſh the notice thereof to them all. The people were much aſtoniſhed at the news, and were about to depart out of the Church: but they were earneſtly deſired by the Paſtor to ſtay ſtill, proteſting, that he would not forſake them, but would live and die with them. So they continued ſtill, until the Sermon and Prayers were ended. Then they armed themſelves, and aſſembled in the Houſe of Michael Montio. Soon after they marched in their Arms towards another Bridg, which was near to the Countrey of Bruſe, and there they deſcryed ſome of their Enemies, who then were coming to cut off that Bridg. But perceiving the Proteſtants ready to reſiſt them, they returned back without any further attempt. On Sunday and Monday the Proteſtants ſtood upon their guard: on the Tuesday following in the evening came the Enemies with a multitude of people, being accompanied with with a great company of the Roman Catholicks of Bruſe. They ſet fire on the Houſe of Anthonio Montino, and Pietro Ageſtino, and other Houſes adjoyning. The Proteſtants ſeeing ſo great a multitude of Enemies, finding themſelves fewer in number, and weaker in ſtrength, ſome of them took themſelves to their heels, the reſt were ſlain between that evening and the next day.

There were ſlain at that conflict twenty ſeven Perſons, and among them theſe which follow.

Bettino of Azzala, Son of Pietro, of age fourty five years; Perrotta his Wife, being of the age of fourty; Pietro their Son, being of age twelve years; Andreino Zopo, Son of Janotto, age fourty; James Son of John Domenico Quadernetto, age thirty. John Monegatti, age fifty eight; Michaele della Koſa, age 38. Jachomena de Burieo, age thirty years; Jean Moneta age eighty. This Woman was oftentimes adviſed to become a Roman Catholick, and in favour her age, telling her that if ſhe would, ſhe ſhould have her life given her: but ſhe with great Reſolution replied, God forbid that I, who now of long time have had one foot in the Grave, ſhould come to forſake my Lord Jeſus, who hath ſo long time preſerved me in the knowledge and Confeſſion of his Truth, and to put my truſt in Creatures, and to receive in ſtead of his holy word the Traditions of Men. Upon which words this worthy Matron was inſtantly ſlain.

Now

Anno 1620.

Now there is no doubt but in this furious perſecution at Bruſe and in other places, there have been murdered many good Men for the foreſaid cauſe, whoſe Names have not been mentioned in this diſcourſe: but whoſoevr they were, they have departed with this comfort, that they have not ſuffered as murderers or robbers, or malefactors, or as buſie bodies in thoſe things which belong not to them, but as holy Chriſtians, who at no hand would worſhip Images, they believed that the Blood of Chriſt hath purged them from all ſin; That Chriſt hath offered one onely Sacrifice once for ſins; that we ought to worſhip the Lord God alone, and onely ſerve him; That we are ſaved by Grace, by the means of Faith, and that not of our ſelves, the ſame being the gift of God, not by works, to the intent none might boaſt; That we ought to worſhip God in all places, holding up clear Hands unto him; That every Creature of God is good, and none to be rejected, being uſed with thankſgiving; That Marriage is honourable in every ſort and condition of perſons, according to the expreſs words of the Holy Apoſtolick Scripture: and by reaſon of this very Confeſſion were the Inhabitants of Tyrano, Teglio, Sondro, Maleno, Berbenno, Trahono, Morbegno, Dabino, Caſpano, and Bruſo, ſo cruelly perſecuted and maſſacred.

There was of late time a Book Printed in Italy, how the Proteſtants of the aboveſaid places ſhould practiſe to execute upon the Catholicks, about the 15. day of Auguſt, the like, which ſince hath befaln themſelves: but how dewilliſh a ſlander and calumny this is, may clearly be gathered by this, that where the Proteſtants of thoſe places are ten, the Popiſh Catholicks are a thouſand. Who then would believe that ſo ſmall a number ſhould be able to make reſiſtance againſt ſo great a multitude? and eſpecially againſt thoſe deſperat Rebels, and Outlawd Villains, who for their murders formerly committed, for their corruptions of the Commſſaries, and tranſgreſſions of the commandment of the Magiſtrate had before been baniſhed out of the Country, being alſo ſuſpected of Sodomy, of Falſification of Money, and like ravening wolves, being throughly Armed, entred like a moſt furious Torrent on the ſudden, ſlaughtering the poor Naked Proteſtants, who ſuſpected no ſuch wrong, even in thoſe Churches which before had been priviledged even among the Barbarous Pagans, to the intent that they might put in execution that bloody deſign which had been reſolved on about 17. years before, according to a Letter intercepted of a principal Rebel in this action, who is neither afraid nor aſhamed to term the ſame a holy reſolution, and an honourable enterpriſe: which it is indeed, if to ſpoil, to rob, to ſtrangle, to maſſacre, to burn, to hew in pieces Children and Women, to caſt them into fire and water, to falſifie Faith, ought to be accounted an attempt of holineſs: if it ought to be eſteemed a thing honourable and pleaſing to God: Not to ſuffer the Bodies of the dead, being buried in the earth and in the Church, to reſt quietly but to take them up again, and being taken up to handle them in the moſt barbarous manner (as very lately had been done in the Countries of Caſpano and Trahone and in others places, where the Bodies digged out of the ground, which before were entire and whole, were thrown into Rivers and water, to be meat for the Fiſhes) and having bruiſed and ground their bones to powder, moſt barbarouſly to caſt them into the fire. But here, if ever, the old tale of Aeſop is verified, where the poor ſilly Sheep was accuſed to have troubled the water of a malitious Wolf, although the ſaid Sheep drank below at the foot of the River.

Therefore it appeareth moſt clearly every way, that the aforeſaid perſons underwent thoſe ſufferings for no other cauſe, but only for the Truth of the Goſpel! even as by the eternal decree of God, the Holy Prophets Saint John Baptiſta, the Holy Apoſtles, yea even our Lord and Head Jeſus Chriſt himſelf, and after him thoſe many millions of the elected Martyrs in all ages have done before, and eſpecially in theſe miſerable laſt times, in Germany, France, England, Scotland, Low Countries, Bohemia, Italie, Spain, Portugal, &c.

Which Martyrdom they endured willingly, rejoycing that they were counted worthy to ſuffer blame for the Name of Chriſts Jeſus, remembring the promiſe of this our Lord, Bleſſed are they who are perſecuted for righteouſneſs ſake, becauſe the Kingdom of Heaven is theirs. Bleſſed are you when others ſhall revile and perſecute you, and ſhall falſely ſpeak all evil of you for my ſake: Rejoice and triumph, for your reward is great in Heaven, for ſo have they perſecuted the Prophets who where before you. Read to this purpoſe. 1 Pet. 4. Verſes, 12, 13, 14. 15, 16. which words, of all good Chriſtians are to bee well pondered and weighed: For firſt by ſuch trial we periſh not. Secondly, we are thereby made conformable to Chriſt our Head. Thirdly, ſuch ſufferings cauſe unto us greater joy than ſorrow. Fourthly, they are infallible marks that the Spirit of God reſts upon us. Fifthly, they manifeſt to all our unfained love to Chriſt and his Goſpel.

Sixthly, hereby we have good proof that the Lord doth correct us, not as a ſevere Judge, but as a moſt loving and tender hearted Father: to whom therefore with his bleſſed Son, and holy Spirit, be all glory and honour aſcribed in all the Churches of the Saints, world without end, Amen.

Signs and Prodigies, which happened before the Maſſacre in the Valtoline.

THe Proteſtants having appointed Guards and Sentinels in the ſteeples of the Churches of the Valtoline, beſides others with were commanded to watch in certain places, to give the ſign by fire, to the intent that the whole Valley being warned partly by the Becons, partly by the ſound of the Bells, might together be ready on the ſuddain to take Arms for their defence againſt the Spaniard, if he ſhould make any Incurſion upon the Valley: abut the Calends of May, 1620. in Sondres, the foreſaid Sentinels reported, that in a night as they watched, they heard in the Church of Gervaſe a murmuring as it were of many perſons, with great earneſtneſs and vehemency of arguing and conteſting among themſelves: and from the Church there ſhined upwards through the Steeple a great brightneſs, in ſo much as the Sentinels lighted their Torches, and aſſembled themſelves to go down into the Church to ſee what the matter might be. But as they were deſcending down the ſtairs, their lights were put out, and returning afreſh to light thir Torches they were put out again with greater ſtrength, and with much aſtoniſhment and trembling; and the brightneſs which filled the Church ſuddenly vaniſhed, the weights alſo of the great Clock fell down, and they heard about ten knells of a Bell, in ſuch manner as it uſeth to ring to give the Alarm, the which was heard by very many.

Likewiſe in Tyrane, there were heard the like knells by the great Bell; and the Magiſtrate commanded them ſuddenly to go and know the cauſe, but he found that it was not done by the act of men, and inſtantly the Servants running from the Belfery, and diligently attending to ſee this buſineſs, they diſcerned a thing like a Cat to deſcend down into the place.

Signs and prodigies heard and ſeen in the Valtoline after the Maſſacre, as hath been affirmed by divers perſons of credit, being departed from the ſaid Valley, and living in the Valtoline after the Maſſacre. In the Evangelick Proteſtant Church, and principally from Teglio and Tyrane a voice hath been heard to cry, woe, woe to you, The Vengeance of God is upon you for the Blood of the innocent.

Moreover there was heard the Bell of the Evangelik Church of Tyrane, to ring even at the ſame time that the Sermon was uſed to be: and in that Church a voice was heard, like the voice of Senior Anthonio Baſſo, who ſometimes had been there a Miniſter, and was murdered in the ſaid place, as if himſelf had been preaching in the ſame place.

In Sondres there was ſeen to deſcend an Army from the Mountains every way furniſhed; which ſight was the cauſe that many took their flight, and departed out of Sondres; but ſuddenly this Apparition vaniſhed like a cloud. The which ſtruck a great terror into the minds of the people, inſomuch as many departed out of the Valley, as men that feared a caſtigation and puniſhment from Heaven.
